LESKEARD, a town of Cornwall, gradually improved to be one of the largeſt and beſt built in the county. It contains a handſome town-hall, built on ſtone pillars, a large church, an eminent free-ſchool, and about 1000 inhabitants. Mr. Norden, however, who ſurveyed and deſcribed this county, in the reign of James I. ſays, "it is a poor town, whoſe ruins argue it's priſtine glory to be great." It has ſome conſiderable manufactures of leather and yarn, which laſt is chiefly ſold at Exeter. It is 49 miles W. by S. of Exeter, and 221 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Leſnes, Kent, between Plumſted and Erith. Leſnewth, Cornwall, near Tintagel Caſtle.

LESPARRE, a town in the dept. of Gironde, in the environs of which are found tranſparent pebbles, reſembling the falſe diamonds of Alençon, and known by the name of the cailloux de medoc, medoc ſtones. It is 11 miles NNW. of Bourdeaux.

Leſſingham, Norfolk, between Walpole and the ſea. Leſſington, Northamptonſhire, near Oundle.

LESSINES, a town of the late Auſtrian Hainault, famous for it's linen manufacture. It is ſeated on the Dender, 22 miles SW. of Bruſſels.

Leſtingham, Yorkſhire, NE. of Kirby Moorſide.

*LESTOFF, LAYSTOFF, or LEOSTOFF, a town of Suffolk, conſiſting of about 500 houſes, indifferently built: the ſtreets, ſtreets, though pretty well paved, are narrow, and it contains about 2250 inhabitants. It is ſeated on the ſea ſhore, and concerned in the fiſheries of the North Sea, catching and curing of cod, herring, mackerel, ſoals, and ſprats, in which buſineſs upwards of 30 boats are employed, and 70,000 barrels have been ſold to foreign markets, and for home conſumption. Here is alſo a manufactory of coarſe china. It is 8 miles S. of Yarmouth, and 117 NE. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Leſtormal Caſtle, Cornw. near Leſtwithiel, formerly the reſidence of the earls of Cornwall. It is ſituated on the edge of a hill, overlooking a deep valley, ſurrounded by a ditch, very deep and wide. The chapel appears to be as ancient as Richard, king of the Romans, who kept his court here; and the noble and very magnificent keep ſtill holds up the ſhell of it's turreted head.

LESTWITHIEL, a well-built town of Cornwall, with a trade in the woollen manufactory. Formerly ſhips came as far as the town; but the channel is now ſtopped up. They keep the county courts here, with weights and meaſures for the whole ſtannary; and the gaol is likewiſe here. It is ſeated on the river Foy, near it's fall into Foy Haven, 10 miles WNW. of Plymouth, and 230 W. by S. of London. Market on Friday.

Letcomb Baſſet, and Letcomb Kings, Berks, near Wantage. Leteber, Northumberland, near Alnwick. Leth Place, Surry, between Dorking and Suſſex. Letheringſet, Norfolk, near Holt. Letheringham, Suffolk, S. of Framlingham.

LETTERE, a town of Principato Citra.

*LETTERKENNY, a town of Donegal, in Ulſter, ſeated on the river Swilly, 15 miles SW. of Londonderry, and 113 NW. of Dublin.

Letton, Heref. near Brampton Brian. Letton, Hereford. E. of Weobly. Letton, Heref. SW. of Weobly. Letton, Norfolk, NE. of Watton. Letwell, Yorkſhire, between Rotherham and Nottinghamſhire. Levan, St. Cornwall, at the SW. point of the Land's End; has a little cove for ſiher's boats, and many tin-mines in the neighbourhood.

LEVANT, properly ſignifies RISING, or the EAST, from the ſun's riſing in the eaſt; but it is generally uſed, when ſpeaking of trade, for the coaſts of ASIATIC TURKEY; comprehending Natolia, Syria, Paleſtine, Egypt, Barca, Candia, and the adjacent parts. The LEVANT SEA means the eaſtern part of the Mediterranean.

LEVANTINA, VAL, or the LEVANTINE VALLEY, a valley, or bailiwick, of Swiſſerland, on the confines of Italy, lying between Mount St. Gothard and the Lago Maggiore. It is about 8 leagues long, but it's breadth is inconſiderable, and is ſubject to the canton of Uri.

Levat, E. Linc. in the Iſle of Axholm.

LEUCATE, a town in the dept. of Aude, ſituated on the N. ſide of a lake of the ſame name, 20 miles NE. of Perpignan.

LEUCHTENBERG, a town, capital of a landgraviate of Bavaria, 36 miles E. of Nuremburg.

Levedale, Staff. near Penridge. Leveland, Kent, S. of Feverſham. Leven, a river in Lanc. ſee Feſſe. Leven, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, W. of Hornſey Meer. Leven, White and Black, rivulets in Cumb. which, united, fall into the Kirkſup.

LEVEN, LOCH, a beautiful lake, of Kinroſsſhire, about 12 miles in circumference, ſomewhat of a circular form, and irregularly indented. In it are ſeveral ſmall iſlands; it produces trout of peculiar excellence; of which great quantities, at certain ſeaſons, are ſent to the Edinburgh markets. In autumn, a ſingular ſpecies, called the gully trout, is here ſalted and dried for winter proviſion.

LEVEN, a river of Dumbartonſhire, in Scotland, which iſſues from Loch Lomond; and, after a meandering courſe through a beautiful vale, adorned with farms, ſeats, woods, and plantations, empties itſelf into the eſtuary of the Clyde, below Dumbarton.

Levenant, a river in Cardiganſ. which runs into the Dowy, at Tenalt, a mile below Machynleth. Levenny, or Leonny, a river in Carnarvonſ. which runs into the Iriſh Channel at Caer Jerienrade. Levenny, a river in Denbighſ. which runs into the Clwyd, a little above Ruthin. Levening, Yorkſhire, S. of New Malton. Levens, Weſtmoreland, S. of Kendal, has a bridge over the Can or Ken, and near it a water fall. Leventhorp, Yorkſ. on the Tees, NE. of Yarum. Leventhorpe, Yorkſ. near Bradford. Lever, Linc. near Bolton. Leverington, Camb. near Wiſbeach. Levermine, Northumberl. in Wark barony. Leverſall, Yorkſ. near Doncaſter. Leverſdale, Cumberl. in Irthington pariſh. Leverſedge, Yorkſ. between Halifax and Wakefield. Leverton, N. and S. Linc. near Boſton. Leverton, Yorkſhire, E. of Giſborough. Leverton, N. and S. Nott. near Retford. Leveſden, Herts, in Watford pariſh. Leveſham, Yorkſ. SW. of Blackenmore. Leveſton, Dorſetſ. S. of Sherborn. Levetham, Cornwall, in Bliſland, NE. of Bodmin.

LEUGNE, a village in the dept. of Upper Saone, lying to the E. of Veſoul.

Here

Here is a cavern, 35 paces deep, and 60 wide, which ſerves as a barometer to all the country people. A fog, at the entrance of this glacier, is an infallible ſign of rain the next day. From the roof, which is 50 feet high, deſcend maſſes, or rather columns of ice, of a prodigious ſize. The brook, which runs through a part of this grotto, is frozen in ſummer, yet flows in winter.

Leugnerſh, Suſſex, N. of Pagham. Levington, Linc. SW. of Fokingham. Levington, Suff. on the Stour, SE. of Ipſwich. Levins, Weſtmorl. in Heverſham pariſh. Levins Hall, is a venerable old building, near a fall, or force, in the river Ken. In the park are the ruins of a Roman temple, dedicated to Diana, and other ruins.

LEUK, a town of Swiſſerland, in the Upper Valais, containing 2 churches, and a large palace of the biſhop of Sion. It is one of the independent dixains of the Upper Valais, and is remarkable for it's ſprings, whoſe water is ſo hot, that it will boil an egg. Leuk is much frequented in the ſummer, on account of theſe ſprings. The patients either bathe or drink the waters, which are beneficial in rheumatiſms, diſeaſes of the ſkin, &c. and ſeem nearly to reſemble thoſe of Bath. In 1719, an avalanche (a vaſt body of ſnow) fell with ſuch impetuoſity from a neighbouring glacier, upon the village, as to overwhelm the greateſt part of the houſes and the baths, and to deſtroy many of the inhabitants. It is ſituated on an eminence, about a mile from the Rhone, and 20 miles E. of Sion.

LEVROUX, a town in the dept. of Indre, 11 miles N. of Chateauroux.

LEUSE, a town in the late Auſtrian Hainault, ſituated on a brook near the Dender, 8 miles E. of Tournay.

LEUTKIRCH, an imperial town of Suabia, ſituated on, or near, the Eſchach, 28 miles S. of Ulm.

Lew, Oxfordſhire, N. of Bampton.

LEWARDEN, a large, rich, and populous city of the Dutch United Provinces, capital of W. Frieſland. It's buildings, as well private as public, are magnificent; and it has ſeveral canals in the ſtreets, which are a great aſſiſtance to their trade; eſpecially as they are continued not only to the ſea, but to the moſt conſiderable towns in the province. It is ſituated in the quarter called Oſtergow, 27 miles W. of Groningen, and 65 N. by E. of Amſterdam. Lat. 53. 11. N. lon. 5. 42. E.

Lewcomb, Dorſetſhire, NW. of Everſhot. Lewall, Dorſetſhire, between Staſford and Woodford.

LEWEN, a town of Leitmeritz, in Bohemia.

LEWES, the principal town of Suſſex, is a well-built, populous, and ancient place, and is ſeated on the river Ouſe, which is navigable here for barges, 30 miles E. of Chicheſter and 49 S. of London. It is finely ſituated on the declivity of a hill, on which are the remains of an ancient caſtle, the environs of which command a beautiful view of a richly-varied country, ſcarcely to be matched in Europe. It takes in the ſea for 30 miles W. and an uninterrupted view of Banſtead Downs, which is full 40 miles. On the river are ſeveral iron-works, where cannon are caſt for merchant ſhips, beſides other uſeful works of that kind. The timber hereabouts is prodigiouſly large, and the ſoil is the richeſt in this part of England. Market on Saturday.

LEWIS, one of the moſt conſiderable of the Weſtern Iſlands of Scotland, which being connected by a narrow iſthmus with HARRIS, forms but one iſland, which is about 40 miles in length, and 13 in it's mean breadth. Like moſt of the Scottiſh iſles, it is greatly interſected by arms of the ſea. By theſe it may be ſaid to be divided into five peninſulas. The country, in general, is wild, bleak, barren of wood, and little fitted for cultivation; the hills are covered with heath, which affords ſhelter for various ſorts of game. The lakes and ſtreams abound with ſalmon, large red trout, &c. The land animals here are ſimilar to thoſe found in the northern iſles, and the fiſheries on the coaſt are not inferior. Stornaway is the only town in Lewis. The iſland belongs to Roſsſhire. There are ſeveral inferior iſles and rocks, which are comprehended under Inverneſsſhire. The whole lie 20 miles NW. of the Iſle of Skye.

LEWIS, a town of Delaware; and two towns of Virginia.

LEWISBURG, a county of S. Carolina; and a town of Pennſylvania.

LEWISTOWN, a town of Pennſylvania.

Lewknor, Oxf. NW. of Stokenchurch. Lew North, Devonſ. SW. of Hatherleigh. Leworth, Devonſ. near Parkham. Lewſon Hill, Dorſetſhire, SW. of Beminſter. Lewſton, Dorſetſhire, a mile SW. of Long Burton. Lewtrenchard, Devonſhire, NE. of Taviſtock. Lexden, Eſſex, near Colcheſter. Lexham, E. and W. Norfolk, NE. of Swaffham. Lewiſham, a large village in Kent, in the road to Sevenoaks, 5 miles SE. by S. of London.

LEXINGTON, a county of S. Carolina.

LEXINGTON, a town of N. America, capital capital of the ſtate of Kentucky and county of Fayette. It ſtands on the head of the river Elkhorn, about 480 miles WSW. of Philadelphia. Lat. 37. 57. N. lon. 84. 43. W.

LEXINGTON, a town of Maſſachuſets, in N. America, celebrated for being the firſt place where hoſtilities commenced between the Britiſh troops and the Americans, 12 miles NW. of Boſton.

Ley, Devonſhire, in Bear Ferris pariſh.

Leyburn, a conſiderable village of Yorkſ. a mile and a half N. of Middleham.

LEYDEN, a city of Holland, ſuppoſed to be the ſame which Ptolemy calls Lugdunum Batavorum, ſeated in a country full of gardens and meadows, ſurrounded by ditches and canals, near the ancient bed of the Rhine, which now looks like a canal. It is about four miles and a half in circumference; and it's ditches are bordered with rows of trees. It has 8 gates, and contains 50 iſlands, and 145 bridges, the greateſt part of which are mace with freeſtone. The public buildings are very handſome. There are ſeveral large hoſpitals, and a univerſity, which has generally about 200 ſtudents, though there are but two colleges; for theſe ſcholars board in the town, and have no dreſs to diſtinguiſh them. The ſchool conſiſts of a large pile of brick building, three ſtories high. Adjoining to the ſchool is the phyſic-garden, where the profeſſor reads lectures in botany. The library contains curious manuſcripts; and the theatre for anatomy is the fineſt in Europe. Here are manufactures of the beſt cloths and ſtuffs in Holland, there being no leſs than 1600 workmen employed in them. It is 4 miles E. of the ſea, 15 SSE. of Haarlem, and 20 SW. of Amſterdam.

LEYTE, one of the Philippine Iſlands, in Aſia, about 80 leagues in circumference. It's ſoil on the E. ſide is very fertile, yielding two hundred for one; but there are very nigh mountains that cut it almoſt through the middle, and occaſion a great alteration in the air, which, however, in general, is pure and healthy, and more temperate than at Lucon. Theſe mountains abound in deer, cows, wild hogs, and fowls; and cocoas grow without culture. They have two plentiful harveſts in the year, to which the numerous rivers, deſcending from the mountains, not a little contribute. The iſland contains about 9000 inhabitants, who pay tribute to the Spaniards in rice, wax, and cloth. Lat. 11. 0. N. lon. 125. 0. E.

LEZAMO, a town of Alava, in Spain.

Lhan Dhewi Brevi, Cardiganſ. a village 3 miles S. of Tregaron. In it's church is preſerved a horn of ſo extraordinary a ſize, that, at the root, it is 17 inches in circumference. It is as heavy as ſtone, and is apparently petrified.

LHON, or LHAN, a river of Germany, which riſes in Siegen, and paſſing by Marburg, Wetzlar, Naſſau, &c. falls into the Rhine near Lohnſtein.

LIANCOURT, a town in the dept. of the Oiſe, 4 miles S. of Clermont.

LIBANUS, the name of mountains of Turkey, in Aſia, which lie between Proper Syria and Paleſtine, extending from the Mediterranean Sea as far as Arabia. It is compoſed of 4 incloſures of mountains, which riſe one upon the other. The firſt is very fruitful; the ſecond very barren; the third enjoys a perpetual ſpring; and the fourth is always covered with ſnow. They were formerly famous for cedar-trees, but now there are ſcarce any remaining. Geographers diſtinguiſh them into Libanus and Anti-Libanus: the latter lies on the S. ſide of the valley, riſing near the ruins of Sidon, and terminates in Arabia, in lat. 34. They are ſeparated from each other at an equal diſtance throughout, and form a country, called by the ancients Cœlo Syria.

LIBAU, a ſea-port of Courland, built originally by the Lettonians. It is ſituated on the Baltic, with a very commodious harbour for light veſſels, above 150 of which uſually arrive here in a twelvemonth, to load with hemp, linſeed, &c. 66 miles W. of Mittau.

LIBOURNE, a populous town in the dept. of Gironde. It is one of the ſtaples of the commerce of Bourdeaux, and is ſeated on the river Dordogne, 20 miles NE. of Bourdeaux. and 205 S. by W. of Paris.

LICH, a town of Hohen Solms, circle of Upper Rhine.

*LICHFIELD, a pretty large, neat, and well-built city of Staffordſhire, containing 3 pariſh churches, beſides a cathedral, a free-ſchool, and 2 hoſpitals. It is ſeated in a fine champaign country, on a little river, that divides it into two parts, called the City and the Cloſe, and which falls into the Trent 3 miles below; communicating, however, with all the late inland navigations, 14 miles SE. of Stafford, and 119 NW. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Friday.

LICHFIELD, a town of Connecticut.

Lichfield, Hants, between Pamber and Chute Foreſt.

LICHTENAU, a town of Nuremburg, in Franconia; a towns in the archduchy of of Auſtria; a town of Paderborn; a town of Heſſe Caſſel; and a town of Hanau Lichtenburg, Upper Rhine.

LICHTENBERG, a caſtle in the dept. of Lower Rhine, ſeated on a rock, near the Voſges mountains, 12 miles from Higuenau.

LICHTENBERG, a town of Franconia.

LICHTENFELS, a town of Auſtria; and town of Bamberg, in Franconia.

LICHSTALL, a town of Baſle, circle of Upper Rhine.

Lickey Bacon, Worc. N. of Bromſgrove.

Licky, a river of Waterford, in Munſter, which runs into the Blackwater, 4 miles N. of Youghall.

LICOLA, or LAGO DI LICOLA, a lake of Naples, formerly famous for plenty of excellent fiſh; but, in 1538, an earthquake happened, which changed one part of it into a mountain of aſhes, and the other into a moraſs. It was anciently known by name of the Lucrine Lake.

LIDA, a town of Wilna, in Lithuania.

Lidbury, Shropſ. near Biſhop's Caſtle.

LIDD, a populous town of Kent, ſeated in Romney Marſh, 26 miles S of Canterbury, and 71 SE. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Liddel, Cumberland, at the conflux of the Lid and Eſk.

LIDDEL, a river of Roxburghſhire, which falls into Solway Frith, near the mouth of the Eſk.

LIDDEN, or LADEN, a river of Herefordſhire and Glouceſterſhire, which runs into the Severn oppoſite Glouceſter.

LIDDISDALE, a diſtrict of Roxburghſhire, comprehending the whole ſouthern angle of that county. It admits of little cultivation, and is chiefly employed in paſture.

Lidaway, Wilts, 4 miles S. of Devizes.

Lidford, Berks, near Puſey. Lidford, a village of Devonſ. ſituated 2 or 3 miles E. of Brent Torr, the whole Foreſt of Dartmoor being in the verge of it. The bridge is thrown over a part of the river Lid, that is pent between two rocks; and the water is at ſuch a depth below, that paſſengers can only hear the noiſe of the water without ſeeing it. Near this is a fine cataract. Lidford, E and W. Somerſetſ. on the oppoſite banks of a river that runs from Bruton to Glaſtonbury. Lidgate, Suffolk, near Bury. Lidiard, Biſhops, Somerſ. between Stokegomer and Taunton. Lidiard Laurence, Somerſ. between Biſhop's Lidiard and Stokegomer In the year 1666, a pitcher full of Roman medals was dug up here, of not leſs than 80 pounds weight.

LIDKIOPING, a town of W. Gothland, ſituated on the S. ſide of the Wennar Lake, at the mouth of the Lida, 42 miles ENE. of Uddevalla.

Lidlynch, Dorſetſ. W. of Stourminſter.

LIDNEY, a town of Glouceſterſhire, noted for the remains of a large Roman encampment, with the ruins of a Roman hypocauſt, or bath, of an oval form, and the foundations of many ancient buildings. It is ſeated on the W. bank of the Severn, 8 miles NE. of Chepſtow, and 20 SW. of Glouceſter. Market on Wednesday.

Lidlow, Devonſ. on the Lid, near Holdſworthy. Lidyard, Millicent and North, Wilts, NW. of Wotton Baſſet. Lidyard Tregoze, Wilts, near Wotton Baſſet.

LIEFKENSHOEK, a fortreſs of Dutch Flanders, on the W. ſide of the Scheld, oppoſite Fort Lillo.

LIEGE, a large, populous, and rich city of Germany, in the circle of Weſtphalia, and capital of a biſhopric of the ſame name. Here the river Maeſe is divided into three branches, the Looſe, Oorte, and Ambleve, which, after having paſſed through the ſtreets under ſeveral bridges, unite again. Here is a famous univerſity; the public ſtructures are very numerous; and on the ſides of the river are fine walks. The place is about 4 miles in circumference and has 150 ſtreets, 16 gates, and 12 large ſuburbs. It is ſeated on the river Maeſe, in a valley ſurrounded by hills with agreeable and fertile meadows between 15 miles SW. of Maeſtricht, and 62 SW. of Cologne. Lat. 50. 37. N. lon. 5. 40. E.

LIEGE, a biſhopric of Germany, in the circle of Weſtphalia, bounded on the N by Brabant and Guelderland; on the E by Limburg, Juliers, and Luxemburg; on the S. by Luxemburg and the dept. of the Ardennes; and on the W. by Brabant and Namur. It is fruitful in corn and fruits, and contains mines of iron, lead and coal, beſide quarries of marble. The biſhop, who is elected by the canons, has an abſolute and conſiderable eccleſiaſtical Prince, having in his dioceſe 52 baronies, 18 walled towns, and 400 villages. Liege was taken by Dumourier in November 1792; but the French were compelled to retire in the March following. In 1794 they again entered it, after a ſhort reſiſtance, and Liege and Brabant are at preſent occupied by French troops.

LIERRE. See LIRE.

LIERS, a town of Liege, where the allies, commanded by Prince Charles of Lorraine, were defeated by the French under Count Saxe, Oct. 1, 1746. It is 5 miles N. of Liege.

Lin

Lies, Cumb. near Wulfty Caſtle.

LIESINA, a ſea port and iſland of Dalmatia, in the Adriatic, about 48 miles long and 8 broad. It abounds in corn, olives, ſaffron, and wine; and was lately ſubject to the Venetians. Lat. 43. 30. N. lon. 17. 25. E.

LIESSE, a town in the dept. of Aiſne, famous for an image of the Virgin Mary, to which a great number of pilgrims uſed to reſort. It is 6 miles ENE. of Laon.

LIFFEY. See ANNA LIFFEY.

LIFFORD, a town of Donegal, in Ulſter, ſeated on the river Foyle, 24 miles NE. of Donegal, and 102 NNW. of Dublin.

Liſton, Devonſ. 4 miles E. of Launceſton, in Cornwall. Ligh, Wilts, near Weſtbury. Ligh Abbots, or Ligh upon Mendip, Somerſ. near Bedminſter. Ligh under Mendip, Somerſ. W. of Wharley and Frome. Lightbirk, Northumb. in Langley manor. Lightcliff, Yorkſ. in the pariſh of Halifax. Lightborn, Warw. near Waſperton.

LIGNE, a town in the late Auſtrian Hainault.

LIGNIERES, a town in the dept. of Cher, 22 miles SSW. of Bourges.

LIGNITZ, an ancient and conſiderable town of Sileſia, capital of a principality of the ſame name. It carries on a reſpectable trade in cloth and madder, and is ſituated on the Karzbach, 32 miles W. of Breſlaw.

LIGNY, a town in the dept. of Meuſe, ſeated on the river Orny, 8 miles SE. of Bar le Duc, and 125 SE. of Paris.

LIGOR, a ſea-port and territory in the peninſula of Malacca, with a magazine, lately ſubject to the Dutch E. India Company. It is ſeated on the eaſtern coaſt, and is now in the kingdom of Siam. Lat. 7. 40. N. lon. 100. 5. E.

Ligrave, Bedfordſhire, near Hockley.

LIGUEIL, a town in the dept. of India and Loire, 23 miles SSE. of Tours.

Lilburn, E. and W. Northumb. near Woller. Lilford, Northamp. near Oundle.

LILLERS, a town in the dept. of the Straits of Calais, ſeated on the river Nave, 6 miles WNW. of Bethune.

Lilling, Yorkſ. near Bulmer. Lillingſton, on the Ouſe, and Lillingſton Dairell, Bucks, near Luffield. Lillingſton Lovel, Oxf. W. of Stony Stratford. Lillington, Dorſetſ. S. of Sherborn. Lillington, NE. of Warwick. Lilliput Caſtle, Somerſetſ. near the Brow of Launſdon.

LILLO, FORT, a fortreſs in the late Auſtrian Brabant, on the E. ſide of the Scheldt, 8 miles NW. of Antwerp. It was built by the Dutch in 1584, to prevent veſſels of too large a ſize going up to Antwerp. It was taken by the French in 1794.

Lilly, Dorſetſhire, a hamlet to Wottonfitzpain.

LIMA, a city of S. America, capital of Peru, founded by Francis Pizarro, in the beginning of the year 1535. It has a univerſity, and gives it's name to the principal audience of Peru. The ſtreets are handſome and ſtraight, but the houſes are generally only one ſtory high, on account of the earthquakes. However, they are pretty, and much adorned, having long galleries on the front. One part of the roofs is covered with coarſe linen cloth, and the others only with reeds, which is not inconvenient, becauſe violent rains are not known here; but the rich inhabitants cover theirs with fine mats, or beautiful cotton cloths. There are trees planted all round their houſes, to keep off the heat of the ſun. What the houſes want in height, they have in length and depth; for ſome of them are 200 feet long, and proportionably broad, ſo that they have 10 or 12 large apartments on the ground floor. The royal ſquare is very handſome; and in the middle is a fountain of bronze, adorned with the image of Fame, which ſpouts out water. On the E. and W. ſides are the public ſtructures, which are well built. The river which croſſes Lima forms canals or ſtreams, which run to moiſt of the houſes, and ſerve to water their gardens, &c. The city is about 4 miles in length, and 2 in breadth, and is divided into 5 pariſhes. They make uſe of mules to draw their coaches, and of theſe there are about 5000. The churches and convents are extremely rich, and divine ſervice is performed in them with a magnificence ſcarcely to be imagined. The ornaments, even on common days, exceed, in quantity and richneſs, thoſe which many cities of Europe diſplay on the moſt extraordinary occaſions. Lima is the ſeat of the viceroy, whoſe office is generally triennial, and contains ſeveral courts, as that of the viceroy, of the archbiſhop, of the inquiſition, of the conſulada, or commerce, and of the wills. Earthquakes are here very frequent, and ſome have done this city a great deal of damage, particularly that in 1746, by which it was almoſt deſtroyed. The inhabitants are ſo rich, that when the viceroy, ſent from Spain, in 1682, made his public entrance into this city, they paved the ſtreets he was to paſs through with ingots of ſilver. It is ſaid, that the inhabitants are very debauched, but, at the ſame time, extremely ſuperſtitious, having a ſtrong belief in the power of charms; that about a fourth part of the city conſiſts of monks and nuns, who are not more chaſte than the reſt; that if any one happen to rival a monk, he is in danger of his life, for they always carry a dagger under their frocks; that the moſt profligate of them think they can atone for all their crimes, by hearing a maſs, or kiſſing the robe of St. Francis or St. Dominic; and that then they return to their former practices Lima is advantageouſly ſeated in the centre of the ſpacious, fertile, and delightful valley of Rimac, or Lima, the whole of which it commands without any difficulty, on a ſmall river of the ſame name, near the ſea. Lat. 12. 1. S. lon. 76. 44. W.

ſame

LIMA, THE AUDIENCE OF, a large province of S. America, in Peru, lying on the S. Sea, with an extenſive valley, and a river of the ſame name. It contains 1 archbiſhopric, viz. Lima; and 4 biſhoprics, viz Truxillo, Guamanga, Cuſco, and Arequipa. The archbiſhopric contains 15 juriſdictions; the dioceſe of Truxillo 7; Guamanga 9; Cuſco 14; and Arequipa 6. There are ſeveral animals in this province, which are very fierce and dangerous, eſpecially near the mountains; but that which they call a lion is not one, for it is more like a wolf, and never attacks mankind. However, there are very large tawny tigers, or panthers, which are as wild and fierce as thoſe of Africa.

LIMAVADY. See NEWTON LIMAVADY.

LIMALE, a town in the late Auſtrian Brabant, ſeated on the river Dyle, 13 miles SE. of Bruſſels.

Limbey, Nott. near the river Lime, W. of Sherwood Foreſt. Limbrey, Bedf. in Luton pariſh. Limbrook, Heref. between Preſtayne and Wigmore Caſtle. Limburgh, Dorſetſ. SW. of Todhere.

LIMBURG, a town of the Netherlands, capital of a duchy of the ſame name. Here is a manufacture of woollen cloths, and it is famous for it's excellent cheeſe. Near it are many quarries of different kinds of marble; the precipices, mountains, and rocks round about are romantic; the air is wholeſome; and the inhabitants have hardly any diſeaſe, except old age. It is ſeated on an agreeable mountain, near the river Weſe, 20 miles ESE. of Leige, Lat 50. 38. N lon. 6. 5. E.

LIMBURG, THE DUCHY OF, a province of the Netherlands, bounded on the N. by the duchy of Juliers; on the E. by the electorate of Cologne and duchy of Juliers; and on the S. and W. by the territory of Liege. It is about 30 miles in length and 24 in breadth. It contains ſome of the beſt iron mines in the Netherlands; the ſoil is fertile for corn, and it abounds in a fine breed of cattle.

LIMBURG, a lordſhip in Suabia, ſurrounded by the territories of Wurtemburg, Elwangen, Anſpach, and the imperial city of Hall, or Suabian Hall; about 19 miles long and 18 broad. It has been ſubject, ſince 1742, to the houſe of Brandenburg Anſpach.

LIMBURG, a town of Juliers; a town and county of Mark, in Weſtphalia; and a town of Treves, ſituated on the Lahn, 76 miles ENE. of Treves.

LIME, a town of Connecticut.

Lime, Cheſhire, near Stockport. Limehouſe, Middleſex, E. of London, adjoining Poplar and the Iſle of Dogs.

LIMERICK, a city of Ireland, in the county of Limerick, and province of Munſter, about 3 miles in circumference. Within a century it was reckoned the ſecond city in the kingdom: at preſent it has loſt it's rank; not becauſe it flouriſhes leſs, but becauſe Cork flouriſhes more. It is divided into the Iriſh and Engliſh Town; the latter, which is the moſt ancient, is ſituated on an iſland, formed by the river Shannon, and called King's Iſland. It has been diſmantled about 50 years, and has increaſed prodigiouſly within that period by the addition of handſome ſtreets and quays: and it's commerce has kept pace with it's ſize. The linen, woollen, and paper manufactures are carried on here to a great extent; and the export of beef and other proviſions is conſiderable. It contains many hoſpitals, ſome handſome public ſtructures, and about 5000 houſes. The inhabitants are eſtimated at upwards of 40,000. The country around it is fertile and pleaſant, but the air is rather moiſt. It is 50 miles SSE. of Galway, 50 N. of Cork, and 94 SW. of Dublin.

LIMERICK, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munſter, about 40 miles in length, and 23 in breadth, bounded on the N. and NW. by Tipperary and Clare; on the W. by Kerry; on the S. by Cork; and on the E. by Tipperary. It contains 125 pariſhes, and about 170,000 inhabitants, and is a fertile and well inhabited country, through the SE. and SW. parts are mountainous. The ſoil is particularly rich in paſture, the beſt cattle ſlaughtered at Cork being ſent from this county. Several rivers water it, the principal of which are the Shannon and the Maig.

Limerick

Limerick, in Wexford, Leinſter.

Limerſdale, Cumb. W. of Brampton, Limerſton, Iſle of Wight, in the W. Medina.

LIMMAT, a river of Swiſſerland, firſt named Linth, till it joins the Mat, when it changes it's name to Limmat; it paſſes through the Lake of Zurich, and joins the Aar, about 3 miles N. of Baden.

Limne, Kent, near Hythe, 4 miles from Romney, was formerly a port, till choked up by the ſands. The Roman road from Canterbury, called Stane Street, ended here. It's caſtle, which bears great marks of antiquity, as does alſo the adjoining church, is converted into a farm houſe. Limmingtom, Somerſetſhire, near Ilcheſter.

LIMOGES, a town in the dept. of Upper Vienne, containing about 13,000 inhabitants. It was taken from the Viſigoths by the Franks, under Clovis; after whoſe death it came to the dukes of Aquitaine. It is ſeated on the river Vienne, 50 miles NNE. of Perigeux, and 110 NE. of Bourdeaux.

LIMOSIN, a ci-devant province of France, divided into the Upper and Lower, the former of which is very cold, but the latter more temperate. It is covered with foreſts of cheſnut trees, and contains mines of lead, copper, tin, and iron; but the principal trade conſiſts in cattle and horſes. It is now the dept. of Upper Vienne, of which Limoges is the capital.

LIMOUX, a commercial town in the dept. of Aude. It has a manufacture of cloth; and it's environs produce an excellent white wine, called La Blanquette de Limoux. It is ſeated on the river Aude, 37 miles W. by S. of Narbonne.

Limpenhow, Norf. near Redham. Limpſde, Nott. in Hartworth manor. Limpſfield, Surry, near Croydon. Limpſham, Somerſetſhire, W. of Axbridge. Limpſton, Devonſhire, near Powderham Caſtle.

Lin, Staff. SW. of Lichfield. Linam, Devonſ. near Plympton. Linan, a river in Carnarvonſ. which runs into the Iriſh Channel a little N. of Levenny, about 5 miles S. of Carnarvon.

LINANGE. See LEININGEN.

Linby, Nottingh. near Codnor Caſtle. Linch, Suſſex, NW. of Penſhurſt. Linch, E. and W. Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle, near Kingſton. Lincham, Wilts, SW. of Wotton Baſſet.

LINCHE, a town in the dept. of the North, 10 miles SW. of Dunkirk.

Linches, Glouceſ. near Biſley: different branches of the woollen manufacture are carried on here. Linchford, Hants, SE. of Bramſhot. Linchlade, Bucks, E. of Winſlow. Linchmere, Suſſex, SW. of Haſlemere.

*LINCOLN, formerly called NICOL, a city, the capital of Lincolnſhire, is pleaſantly ſeated on the ſide of a hill, on the Witham, which here divides itſelf into 3 ſmall channels. It is much reduced from it's former extent and ſplendor, (when it contained 52 pariſh churches, and was one of the moſt populous cities of England, according to Malmſbury, and a mart for all goods coming by land or water;) and now conſiſts principally of 1 ſtreet, above 2 miles long, well paved, and ſeveral croſs and parallel ſtreets, well peopled. Here are ſome handſome modern buildings, but more antique ones. The Roman's north-gate ſtill remains under the name of Newport Gate. It is a vaſt ſemicircle of ſtones, of very large dimenſions, laid without mortar, and connected only by their uniform ſhape. Upon the whole, this city has an air of ancient greatneſs, ariſing, in a great meaſure, from the number of monaſtic ruins; moſt of which are now converted into ſtables, out-houſes, &c. The cathedral, a ſtately Gothic pile, one of the largeſt in England, is it's glory: it ſtands on ſo lofty a hill, that it may be ſeen 50 miles to the N. and 30 to the S. and is particularly admired for it's interior architecture, which is in the richeſt and lighteſt Gothic ſtyle. The famous great bell, called Tom of Lincoln, requires, at leaſt, 15 able men to ring it. The chief trade here is in coals brought by the Trent and Foſſdyke; and oats and wool, which are ſent by the river Witham. Here is a ſmall manufacture of camlets. It is 32 miles NE. of Nottingham, and 133 N. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Friday.

LINCOLN, a county in the reſpective ſtates of Virginia, Maſſachuſets, and Kentucky.

LINCOLNSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the N. by the Humber, which divides it from Yorkſhire; on the E. by the German Ocean; on the SE. by the Waſh and part of Norfolk; on the S. by Cambridgeſhire and Northamptonſhire; on the SW. by Rutland; on the W. by the counties of Leiceſter and Nottingham; and on the NW. by Yorkſhire. It is about 77 miles from N. to S. and 48 in breadth, where wideſt. It is divided into three parts, namely, Holland on the SE. Keſteven on the SW. and Lindſey on the N. It contains 30 hundreds, 1 city, 33 market towns, 630 pariſhes, and 260,000 inhabitants. It's principal rivers are the Trent, Humber, Witham, Welland, Ancam, Nen, and Dun. The air is various, according to it's 3 grand diviſions. The ſoil, in many places, is very rich, the inland part producing corn in great plenty, and the fens, cole ſeed, and very rich paſtures; whence their breed of cattle is larger than that of any other county in England, except Somerſetſhire; their horſes are alſo excellent and very large; their hunting hounds and hares are particularly noted for their extreme ſwiftneſs; and their ſheep are not only of the largeſt breed, but are clothed with a long thick wool, peculiarly fitted for the worſted and coarſe woollen manufactures.

to

Linecomb, Devonſ. in Ilfracomb pariſh. Lincorn's Stone, Somerſ. near Bath. Lincton, Wilts, NE. of Bradford and Trowbridge.

LINDAU, an imperial town, with an abbey, of Suabia, ſituated on an iſland in the Lake of Conſtance, 19 miles E. of the city of Conſtance. The caſtle, and the Heyden Maur, or Heathen Wall, are reckoned Roman works. It's territory comprehends 14 villages.

LINDAU, a town of Eichfeld, Lower Rhine, ſituated on the river Rhine; and a town of Anhalt Zerbſt, Upper Saxony.

LINDENFELLS, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine.

Lindfield, Sardelph and D'Arches, Suſſex, E. of Cuckfield. Lindford, Norfolk, between Mindford and Buckenham Parva, on the river Ielsburgh. Lindly, Leic. near Fenny Drayton. Lindley, Shropſ. near Wenlock. Lindridge, Worceſterſ. W. of Aberly. Lindſey, Suffolk, near Hadley.

LINDSEY, the largeſt of the principal diviſions of Lincolnſhire, including all the county that lies N. of the Witham and the Foſſdyke. It is the moſt elevated part of the county; and the air is generally eſteemed healthy, eſpecially on the weſtern ſide. Toward the NE. part is a large tract of heathy land, called the Wolds, the S. part of which is well inhabited; but the N. is very thin of people. Great flocks of ſheep are bred throughout this tract.

Linham, Oxf. near Chadlington; between this place and Puddlicot, a ſubterraneous paſſage leads down to Evenlode river. Liner, or Liver, a river in Cornw. which runs into the Tamar oppoſite Tovey. Ling, Norf. S. of Foulſham. Ling, Somerſ. near Petherton Park and the river Tone. Lingan, Herefordſhire, S. of Pedwardin.

LINGEN, a ſmall town, capital of a county of Weſtphalia, ſurrounded by Munſter, Oſnaburg, Tecklenburg, and Bentheim, and ſubject to the king of Pruſſia. It is ſituated on, or near, the river Ems, 27 miles ESE. of Covorden.

Lingfield, Surry, S. of Crowhurſt. Lingfield Street, Surry, E. of Ryegate. Lingorill, or Llyngcrill, a river in Merionethſh. which runs into the Iriſh Channel above Llangylynin. Lingwell Gate, York. between Wakefield and Thorp on the Hill. Lingwood, Norf. W. of Accle. Lingwood Grange, Linc. between Lincoln and Tatterſhall Chaſe. Linhope Spout, North umb. a cataract near Rodham, which falls 56 feet perpendicular, over ſeveral points rocks, makes a fine, white ſheet of foam Linkenham, Cornw. SW. of Launceſton LINKIOPING, a town of Oſtro Gothland, ſituated near the Lake Roxen, 9 miles SW. of Stockholm.

LINLITHGOW, the county-town Linlithgowſhire, is an ancient, large, regular, and well-built place, and ſtands a riſing ground, near a lake, remarkable for bleaching. It is 16 miles W. Edinburgh.

LINLITHGOWSHIRE, or WEST LOTHIAN, a county of Scotland, bounded the W. by Stirlingſhire; on the N. by the Frith of Forth; on the E. by Edinburgſhire; and on the S. and SW. by Lanerſhire. It is about 17 miles long, and 8 it's mean breadth. It abounds with co and paſture, and has alſo plenty of co lime-ſtone, lead ore, ſalt, and river fiſh LINOSA, a ſmall iſland in the Mediterranean, on the coaſt of Tunis, near La pedoſa.

Linon, or Llynon, a river in Angleſea which runs into the Allow, at Llanvorc

Linſtead, Kent, 4 miles from Feverſha

Linſtead, Great and Little, Suffolk, of Haleſworth.

*LINTON, a town of Cambridgeſhi 12 miles SE. of Cambridge, and 46 N. E. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Linton, Peebleſ. at the conflux of Lynne and the Tweed, 13 miles SSW. Edinburgh.

Linten, Derbyſ. near Griſley Caſ

Linton, near Glouceſter. Linton, Nor umb. in Whalton barony. Linton, I vonſ. E. of Comb Martin. Linton, H reford. NE. of Roſs. Linton, Kent, n Coxheath, 4 miles S. of Maidſtone. L ton, Yorkſ W. Riding, on the Whar N. of Barden Tower.

LINTZ, a well built and populous to of Germany, capital of Upper Auſtr Here is a hall, in which the ſtates aſſemb and it has ſeveral manufactories. It ſituated on the Danube, over which it h a bridge, 30 miles SE. of Paſſau, and W. of Vienna.

LINTZ, a town of Cologne, ſituated on the E. ſide of the Rhine, 10 miles SSE. of Bonn.

Linwood, Linc. S. of Market Raiſin.

LIPARI, the common name of 12 iſlands in the Mediterranean, which lie to the N. of Sicily, between lon. 14. 1. and 15. 12. E. and lat. 38. 20. and 38. 40. N. They were formerly called Æolian, and are nearly as follows, in the order of their ſize; namely, Lipari, Strombolo, Volcano, Salini, Felicudi, Alicudi, Panaria, Volcanello, Vacheluſe, Liſca, Dattolo, Tila, Navi, and Baſiluzzo. Theſe iſlands are ſubject to the king of Naples, to whom they bring in a conſiderable revenue. They produce great quantites of alum, ſulphur, nitre, cinnabar, and moſt kinds of fruits, particularly raiſins, currants, and figs, in great perfection. Some of their wines are likewiſe much eſteemed, particularly the Malvaſia, well known all over Europe. Theſe iſlands are of volcanic origin. See STROMBOLO, VOLCANO, &c.

LIPARI, the largeſt, moſt fertile, and populous of the Lipari Iſlands, about 15 miles in circumference. It was celebrated among the ancients; and, by the deſcription of Ariſtotle, it appears to have been conſidered by the ſailors in his time, what Strombolo is in ours, as a light-houſe, as it's fires were never extinguiſhed. It has not ſuffered from ſubterraneous fires for many ages paſt, though it every where bears the marks of it's former ſtate. The form of this iſland is very irregular; and in this volcanic ſpot, ſuch a number of ſpiracles have been opened, that the greateſt part of them are confounded with each other. It abounds with the currant grape; cotton alſo grows here; and great quantities of pumice are gathered. It's capital, an ancient town of the ſame name, ſtands on the S. ſide of the iſland. The principal trade of the inhabitants is in the exportation of the products of the iſland; but the chief neceſſaries of life they import from Sicily. Lat. 38. 35. N. lon. 15. 30. E.

LIPPA, a town of Temeſwar, in Hungary, ſituated on the river Maros, 22 miles N. of Temeſwar.

Lippard, NE. of Worceſter.

LIPPE, a county of Weſtphalia, W. of Paderborn. It is mountainous, but contains ſome good arable land. The principal towns are Detmold and Lemgow.

LIPPE, a river of Weſtphalia, which runs into the Rhine, near Weſal.

Lippeck, Hants, in Bramſhot pariſh.

LIPSO, an iſland in the Grecian Archipelago, about 6 miles SSE. of Patmos.

LIPSTADT, a town of Weſtphalia, capital of the county of Lippe. It carries on a conſiderable trade in preparing timber for building veſſels on the Rhine, with which it has a communication by the river Lippe. It is ſubject in common to the count of Lippe and the king of Pruſſia, as count of Mark, and is ſeated in an unhealthy moraſs, 14 miles WSW. of Paderborn.

Lipwood, Northumb. in Langley manor.

LIQUE, a town in the dept. of the Straits of Calais, 12 miles W. of St. Omer.

LIRE, a town of the late Auſtrian Brabant, ſeated on the river Nethe, 10 miles SE. of Antwerp.

LIS, a river of the Netherlands, which paſſes by Bire, St. Venant, Courtray, &c. and falls into the Scheldt, at Ghent.

Liſane, in Derry, Ulſter. Liſbellaw, in Fermanagh, Ulſter.

LISBON, anciently called OLISIPPO, and by the Moors OLISIBONA, the capital of Portugal, a large, rich, celebrated city, one of the principal of Europe, with a univerſity. The ſquares, public buildings, and palaces were magnificent, but it was almoſt totally deſtroyed by an earthquake, November 1, 1755. The new town is much more handſome than the former: the plan is regular, the ſtreets, ſome of which are more than 3 miles in length, and ſquares are ſpacious, and the buildings are elegant. The harbour will contain 10,000 ſail of ſhips, which ride in the greateſt ſafety; and the city, being viewed from the ſouthern ſhore of the river, affords a beautiful proſpect, as the buildings gradually riſe above each other, in the form of an amphitheatre. The number of inhabitants is eſtimated at 270,000, of which the negroes and mulattoes make a ſixth part. They reckon here more than 20,000 houſes, 40 pariſh churches, and 50 convents of both ſexes. The patriarch, who is generally a cardinal, officiates here, in greater pomp than the pope himſelf; and the rich ornaments of his church, ſeem to have abſorbed ſeveral years revenue of the Braſils. It is remarkable, that the pipes of the organ, in the patriarchal church, are placed horizontally. Both the entrances to the harbour, cloſe by the ſea, are defended by two forts. Liſbon is ſeated on the river Tajo, 10 miles from the mouth of it, 178 W. by N. of Seville, and 255 S. by W. of Madrid. Lat. 38. 42. N. lon. 9. 5. W.

*LISBURN, a neat, handſome town of Antrim, in Ulſter. It has a large manufacture for linen cloth, and is ſeated on the river Laggan, 8 miles SSW. of Belfaſt, and 73 N. by E. of Dublin.

Liſcard, Cheſhire, in Wire Hill.

Liſcarrol, in Cork, Munſter. Liſgenan, in Waterford, Munſter. Liſgold, and Liſgriffen, in Cork, Munſter.

LISIEUX, ST. a town in the dept. of Arriege, ſituated on the river Satat, 30 miles S. of Toulouſe, and 390 S. by W. of Paris.

LISIEUX, an ancient town in the dept. of Calvados. The public buildings are handſome ſtructures; it is a place of good trade, particularly in linen cloth, and is ſituated at the confluence of the rivers Touque and Orbec, 12 miles from the ſea, and 40 SW. of Rouen.

Liſmiſky, in Tipperary, Munſter. L'Iſle, or Little Iſle, in Cork, Munſter. It is ſituated in the river Lee, and is 3 miles long and 1 broad.

Liſſe, or Liſſe, iſlands, N. of Peterſfield.

LISLE, a large and handſome city in the dept. of the North, one of the richeſt and moſt commercial in France, and before the revolution, the capital of French Flanders. It is ſituated in a rich, marſhy ſoil, ſurrounded with walls, and ſtrongly fortified. The citadel is one of the beſt works of Vauban. They reckon 170 ſtreets, 30 public places, about 8000 houſes, and 56,000 inhabitants. The public ſtructures are the exchange, a general hoſpital, and, before the revolution, 3 colleges. Here are various ſorts of manufactures, but the principal trade is in camlets. It is ſeated on the river Deule, 24 miles W. of Tournay, and 130 N. of Paris.

LISLE, a town in the dept. of the Dordogne, 9 miles NW. of Perigueux; and a town in the dept. of the Yonne, 7 miles NNE. of Auxallon.

LISMORE, one of the Weſtern Iſlands of Scotland, in a ſpacious bay, between Mull and the coaſt of Argyleſhire. It is fertile, and about 9 miles long and 2 broad.

*LISMORE, a town of Waterford, in Munſter, formerly a conſiderable city, but now a ſmall, mean place. It has, however, a ſpacious and handſome cathedral, and is ſituated on the S. ſide of the river Blackwater, over which it has a fine bridge, the ſpan of the principal arch being 102 feet, 31 miles WSW. of Waterford, and 100 SSW. of Dublin. Below the town is a rich fiſhery for ſalmon, which is the greateſt branch of trade here.

Liſmullane, in Limerick, Munſter. Liſmoy, in King's County, Leinſter. Liſnacen, in Cork, Munſter. Liſnarick, in Fermanagh, Ulſter.

*LISNASKEA, a town of Fermanag in Ulſter, 70 miles NW. of Dublin.

Liſnegat, in Cork, Munſter. Liſnek or Liſtide, in Waterford, Munſter. L wood, in Cavan, Ulſter.

LISONZO, a river of Carniola, wh paſſes by Goritz, Grandiſca, &c. and r into the Gulf of Trieſte, at the bay, harbour, of the ſame name.

Liſpole, in Kerry, Munſter.

LISSA, an iſland in the Adriatic, on coaſt of Dalmatia, lately ſubject to the netians, where they had a fiſhery of ſtines and anchovies. It's valleys prod excellent vines, olives, mulberries, almo and figs; and it's mountains, which contain marble, are richly furniſhed w odoriferous plants, from which the collect excellent honey. It is 70 m W. of Ragoſa. Lat. 43. 30. N.

LISSA, or LECHNO, a conſidera town of Poſnania, in Poland; 50 miles of Kaliſh.

LISSA, a town of Breſlau, in Sileſia, ſituated on the Weiſtritz, 7 miles WN of Breſlau.

Liſſet, York. in Holderneſs, near B meſton. Liſſington, Linc. S. of Mar Raiſin. Liſſon Green, Midd. a pleaſ village near Paddington. Liſtly, Devo near Moreton Hamſted. Liſtock, Som on the Briſtol Channel, between the St Point and Watchet.

*LISTOWEL, a town of Kerry, in M ſter, 131 miles from Dublin.

Liſtowry, Hants, near Biſhop's W tham.

Liſtrenagh, in Waterford, Munſter. Litcher, Malſtow, Dorſet. near W born Munſter. Litchet Maltſe, Dor in Cogdean hundred, on the Bay of P of which 3 prodigiouſly large tumuli the S. ſide of it, commands a very e ſive proſpect. Litchfield, near Berk the Derwent. Litherland, Lancaſ Liverpool Haven. Litherhall, Bu near Bernwood Foreſt.

LITHUANIA, or LITWA, a large t try of Europe, between Poland and R It is about 300 miles in length, and in breadth, and is watered by ſeveral rivers; the principal of which are Dnieper, Dwina, Nieman, Pripec Bog. It is a flat country, like Po and the lands are very proper for ti The ſoil is not only fertile in corn, produces honey, wood, pitch, and quantities of wood. They have lit cellent little horſes, which they never because their hoofs are very hard. are vaſt foreſts, in which are b wolves, elks, wild oxen, lynxes, bea glut gluttons, wild cats, &c. and eagles and vultures are very common. In thoſe forests, large pieces of yellow amber are frequently dug up. The country abounds with Jews, who, though numerous in every other part of Poland, ſeem to have fixed their head quarters in this duchy. "If you aſk for an interpreter," ſays Mr. Coxe, "they bring you a Jew; if you come to an inn, the landlord is a Jew; if you want poſt horſes, a Jew procures them, and a Jew drives them; if you wiſh to purchaſe, a Jew is your agent; and, this, perhaps, is the only country in Europe, where Jews cultivate the ground: in paſſing through Lithuania, we frequently ſaw them engaged in ſowing, reaping, mowing, and other works of huſbandry." The peaſants of this country, are in a ſtate of the moſt abject vaſſalage. The eſtabliſhment of religion has heretofore been the Romiſh, but there were Lutherans, Calviniſts, Socinians, Greeks, and even Turks, as well as Jews. It was formerly governed by it's own dukes, but afterwards united with the kingdom of Poland; this union was ratified at the diet at Wilna, by a formal inſtrument, in the year 1401; and, in 1569, the two countries were ſo united as to form but one ſtate, under one prince. It was formerly divided into 9 palatinates, viz. Wilna, Troki, Polotſk, Novogorodeck, Witepſk, Brzeſk, Miſciſlaw, Minſk, and Livonia. In 1772, the empreſs of Ruſſia, forcibly, compelled the Poles to cede to her all that part of Lithuania bordering on Ruſſia, including about one-third of the country. This ſhe erected into the governments of Polotſk and Mohilef; and, in 1795, in conjunction with the king of Pruſſia, ſhe extended her dominion over almoſt the whole of Lithuania. What is called Pruſſian, or Little Lithuania, about 100 miles in length, and 50 in breadth, was ſettled, in 1730, by Frederick William, with French, Franconian, and Swiſs Proteſtants, by whoſe ſkill and induſtry this once deſolate country has been extremely well cultivated. At preſent it is under Ruſſia.

LITZ, a town of Pennſylvania. Here is a flouriſhing ſettlement of the Moravians, begun in 1757. There is now, beſides an elegant church, and the houſes of the ſingle brethren and ſingle ſiſters, which form a large ſquare, a number of houſes for private families, with a ſtore and tavern, all in one ſtreet. It is 8 miles from Lancaſter, and 70 W. of Philadelphia.

LITTRAMORE, an iſland on the coaſt of Galway, in Connaught, about 4 miles long and 2 wide. Lat. 53. 27. N.

Littleborough, Line. lies in what was formerly a Roman Way, but is now the great road for the pack-horſes that travel from the W. of Yorkſhire to Lincoln, Lynn, and Norwich. Littleborough, Nott. on the Trent, over which it has an ancient ferry, 3 miles S. of Gainſborough. It is ſuppoſed to have been the Agelocum of the Romans, from the urns and other antiquities that have been found here; beſides which, many little coins, like flatted peas, called mites, have been ploughed up; and great numbers of coins, called ſwine-pennies, becauſe they have been rooted up by thoſe creatures. Two altars, that were dug up in 1718, are now ſet as piers in the wall, on the ſide of the ſteps that lead from the river to the inn. Littleborough, Lanc. NE. of Rochdale. Littlebourn, Kent, E. of Canterbury. Littlebourn, Durh. near Brandſpeth. Littlebury, Eſſex, 1 mile from Saffron Walden. Littlebury, Eſſex, on the Roden, near Chipping Ongar. Littlecot, Bucks, SE. of Winſlow. Littlecot, Wilts, on the Kennet, near Hungerford.

LITTLE ISLAND, an iſland of Cork, in Munſter, about 3 miles in circumference. It is ſituated in the river Lee, 6 miles E. of Cork.

Littleham, Devonſ. near Otterton. Littleham, Devonſ. near Portlidge. Littlemore, E. of Oxford. Little Moores, Dorſet, near Hamperſton. Littleport, Camb. near Brancreek, in the Iſle of Ely, 22 miles from Cambridge. Littlethorp, Leic. E. of Hinckley. Littleton, Glouc. N. of Marſhfield. Littleton, Hants, between Stockbridge and Itchingſtoke. Littleton, Midd. on the river Aſh, near Lalam. Littleton, Wilts, in Biſhop's Lavington pariſh. Littleton, N. S. and Middle, Worc. near Eveſham. Littleton, Somerſ. between Midſummer Norton and Penſford. Littleton, Surry, near Guildford. Littleton, Suſſex, NW. of Midhurſt. Littleton, Wilts, 3 miles from Trowbridge. Littleton Drew, Wilts, near Caſtlecomb. Littleton upon Severn, Glouc. near Thornbury. Littleton Wick Green, Berks, 3 miles from Maidenhead. Little Wear, Devonſ. near Wear Giffard. Little Witcombe, Glouc. in Badgworth pariſh. Littleworth, Berks, near Radcot Bridge. Littlington, near Glouceſter. Littleworth, Camb. W. of Royſton. Littlington and Park, Bedf. near Ampthill. Litton, Derbſ. near Tiddeſwall. Litton, Dorſetſ. SE. of Bridport, had formerly a market, now diſuſed. Litton, Somerſetſhire, near Stone Aſton.

LIVADIA, formerly ACHAIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by Janna and Albania; on the E. by the Archipelago; on the S. by the Morea; and on the W. by the Mediterranean; about 180 miles in length, and 35 in its mean breadth. This province comprehends ancient Greece, properly so called, which included the provinces of Acarnania, Etolia, Ozolœa, Locris, Phocis, Doris, Epicnemidis, Bœotia, Megara, and Attica. In this country were the celebrated mountains, Parnassus, Helicon, and Cythæron. The most considerable places at present, are Athens, Lepanto, and Livadia.

LIVADIA, an ancient, large and populous town of Turkey, in the province of the same name. It carries on a considerable trade in wool, corn, and rice, with which it furnishes all Greece: and is built round a mountain, which terminates in a peak, having on it a castle. It is situated on the Gulf of Lepanto, 28 miles N. of Corinth, and 72 SW. of Larissa. Lat. 38. 40. N. lon. 23. 26. E.

LIVAROT, a town in the dept. of the Calvados, 9 miles SSW. of Lisieux.

LIVENZA, a river of Italy, in the territory lately subject to Venice. It rises near Polcenigo, and after having received the Celino, runs into the Gulf of Venice, about 17 miles E. of Trevigio.

LIVERDUN, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, seated on a mountain, near the river Moselle, 8 miles NE. of Toul.

Levemare, Great and Little, Suffolk, SW. of Great and Little Fakenham. Livermere Hall, Suff. 3 miles from Ixworth.

LIVERMON, a town in the dept. of the Lot, 21 miles ENE. of Cahors.

LIVERPOOL, a large, flourishing, and populous sea-port of Lancashire, consisting of, at least, 10,000 houses and 60,000 inhabitants, with 10 churches, besides chapels, although, in the year 1565, it contained only 138 householders and cottagers. So lately as the commencement of the last century, it was only a small village, a hamlet to the parish of Walton, about 3 miles off; but it has now become, with respect to extent of commerce, the third, if not the second port in the kingdom. It is seated on the river Mersey, and has an excellent harbour, formed with great labour and expence; here being 8 wet docks, secured by large flood-gates, bound by quays a mile and a half in length, where 1000 vessels, or 20,000 tons of shipping, may lie in the greatest safety. The warehouses here are built upon a most extensive scale, some of them having 11 or more stories, or different floors. Since the completion of the Duke of Bridgewater's canals, the last of which was that at Runcorn, a new dock has been formed by the duke above the town. One very considerable branch of trade carried on from this port, is that inhuman one of procuring slaves on the coast of Africa, and disposing of them in the W. Indies and N. America. It is unpleasant to observe, that the merchants seem as if they wished to perpetuate the infamy that must attach to such iniquitous exertions, by giving African names to the new and improved parts of the town. The trade to Ireland is very considerable; many ships are sent to the Greenland whale fishery; and the coasting trade hence to London, employs a great number of ships; the cargoes with which they are freighted consisting chiefly of corn and cheese; and many good ships are built here. Liverpool communicates, by the Mersey, with Warrington, and with a canal, called the Sankey Canal, running to some coal pits and other works, a little way up the country; by the Irwell and the Duke of Bridgewater's Canal, with Manchester; by the Weever, with the Cheshire salt works; and, by the Duke of Bridgewater's Canal, with the Staffordshire Grand Trunk and all its various ramifications. The exchange is a handsome modern edifice of stone, with piazzas for the merchants, and over it is the town hall. The houses, in general, are new, and built of brick. The stone used here is obtained from quarries in the neighbourhood: it is of a yellow colour, and extremely soft when hewn in the quarry, but hardens by being exposed to the air. Here are several manufactories for china ware and pottery, besides glass-houses, salt-works, and upwards of 50 breweries which send abroad large quantities of malt liquor. Liverpool is 18 miles W. of Warrington, and 203 NW. of London. Lat. 53. 23. N. lon. 2. 54. W. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

LIVONIA, a province of the Russian empire, situated to the E. of the Gulf of Riga, which, with that of Esthonia, has been reciprocally claimed and possessed by the three bordering powers of Russia, Sweden, and Poland, and for more than two centuries, has been a constant source and perpetual scene of the most bloody wars. It was finally wrested from the Swedes by Peter the Great, and confirmed to the Russians by the peace of Nystadt, in 1721. It now forms the Russian government of Riga; or Livonia, of which the town of Riga is the capital. It is about 250 miles from N. to S. and 200 from E. to W.

The

The land is ſo fertile in corn, rye, and barley, that it is called the granary of the North; and it would produce a great deal more, if it were not ſo full of woods and moraſſes. The fiſh that abound here are ſalmon, carp, pike, flat fiſh, and many others. In the foreſts are wolves, bears, elks, fein deers, ſtags, and hares. The domeſtic animals are very numerous; but the ſheep bear a bad ſort of wool, reſembling dog's hair. Here are a great number of foreſts, which conſiſt of birch-trees, pines, and oaks; and all the houſes of the inhabitants are built with wood. They export vaſt quantities of flax, hemp, honey, wax, leather, linſeed, ſkins, and potaſh. The Czar, Peter the Great, perceiving the inhabitants did not like the change of ſovereigns, compelled them to abandon their country, and drove many of them as far as the Caſpian Sea; but being perſuaded to recal them, moſt of them periſhed before the edict was publiſhed, ſo that he was obliged to re-people their country with other nations.

Lixnaw, in Kerry, Munſter.

LIZARE, the moſt ſouthern promontory of England, whence ſhips uſually take their departure, when bound to the weſtward. Lat. 49. 57. N. lon. 5, 19. W.

Llamamon, in Yale, Denbighſ. Llanamach, Shropſ. S. of Oſwaſtry. Llanarth, Cardiganſhire. Llanarth, Monm. E. of Abergavenny. Llanbadock, Monm. near Uſk.

LLANBEDER, a poor town of Cardiganſhire, conſiſting of only about fifty houſes, but with one good inn. It is ſeated on the river Tyvy, over which it has a bridge into Carmarthenſhire, nearly 24 miles E. of Cardigan, and 197 WNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Llanbeder, a river of Cardiganſhire, which runs into the Arth, near the town of Llanbeder. Llanbeder, Monm. NE. of Caerleon.

LLANBADARN VAWR, an ancient, but much decayed ſea-port of Cardiganſhire, ſituated on the river Rheidal, with a ſmall harbour, 2 miles E. of Aberyſtwith, and 197 WNW. of London.

Llanbadarwell, Shropſ. 2 miles from the Severn, and 4 from Oſweſtry. Llandeilo, Monm. W. of Strogle Caſtle. Llandegla, Denbighſ. 7 miles W. of Wrexham. Llandenny, Monm. near Ragland Caſtle. Landertel, Merionethſhire. Llandewaigo, Monm. NE. of Caerleon. Llandewy, 14 miles NE. of Pembroke. Llandilo, Carmarthenſ. Llandilo-Houſe, Monm. N. of Abergavenny.

*LLANDILOVAWR, a town of Carmarthenſhire, with a conſiderable manufacture of flannel. It is pleaſantly ſeated on an aſcent, on the river Towy, over which it has a good ſtone bridge, 16 miles NNE. of Carmarthen, and 196 WNW. of London. About a mile SW. of it ſtands Dynavour Caſtle, on a remarkably fine elevation, with the river Towy beautifully meandering at the bottom. It has been occupied by the Rices for ſeveral centuries, and is now the ſeat of Rice, Lord Dynavour. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday, and a fair on Wedneſday in Whitſun Week.

Llandwog, Carmarthenſ. Llandinabo, Heref. W. of Roſs. Llandogo, Monm. E. of Ragland Caſtle. Llanavney Caſtle, Monm. among the Hatterel Hills. Llandyſſil, Cardiganſ. Llanedy, Carmarthenſ. Llanelian, Denbighſ. Llanellyehyd, Carnarvonſ. Llanelhen, Monm. S. of Abergavenny.

LLANELLY, a town of Carmarthenſhire, trading much in pitcoal. It is ſeated on a creek, or ſmall ſea river, 13 miles S. by E. of Carmarthen, and 206 WNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Llanevan, Shropſh. SW. of Biſhop's Caſtle. Llanfaiver, Merionethſ. Llanfoiſt, Monm. near Abergavenny.

LLANGADOCK, and indifferent town of Carmarthenſhire, ſeated between the rivers Brane and Sawthy, which ſoon after empty themſelves into the Towy, 18 miles NE. of Carmarthen, and 185 WNW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Llangarran, Heref. between Michael Church and Goodrich Caſtle. Llangattock, Monm. near Uſk. Llangattock, Monm. on the borders of Heref. Llangattock Vibonavel, NW. of Monmouth. Llangevy, Monm. SE. of Pontypool. Llangerniew, Denbighſh. Llangoview, Monm. near Uſk. Llangeva, Monm. on the Mynwy. Llangibby Caſtle, Monm. between Uſk and Caerleon. Llangindairn, Carmarthenſhire.

LLANGOLLEN, a town of Denbighſhire, in N. Wales, ſeated on the river Dee, over which it has a beautiful bridge of four arches, 7 miles S. of Wrexham, and 184 NW. of London. The ſcenes in the vicinity of this place are very romantic and ſublime, eſpecially in approaching the lofty Berwyn Mountains, which ſeparate the two counties of Denbigh and Merioneth.

Llangoven, Monm. SE. of Ragland Caſtle. Llangſton, Monm. near Caerleon. Llangum, Monm. near Uſk.

LLANHARN. See LLAUGHARN.

Llanhenock, Monm. N of Carmarthen.

Llanhilleth,

Llanhilleth, Monm. N. of Tumberlow Hill.

*LLANIMDOVERY, a town of Carmarthenshire, consisting of about 100 meanly-built houses. It had formerly a castle, now in ruins, and is seated near the river Towy, 26 miles NE. of Carmarthen, and 181 WNW. of London. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

Llanishen, Monm. SE. of Ragland Castle. Llantowel, Monm. near Usk. Llanmerton, Monm. E. of Caerleon.

LLANNERCHYMEADD, a small town in the Isle of Anglesea. Market on Wednesday.

Llannerillo, Merionethf. 5 miles E. of Bala. Llannoyth, Monm. SE. of Grismond Castle. Llanover, Monm. E. of Abergavenny. Llanpyl, Monm. W. of Tintern Abbey. Llanrheider, Denbighs. near which there is a natural cascade of Rheidhr River. Llanrothal, Heref. on the Munnow, NE. of Monmouth.

LLANRWST, a town of Denbighshire, seated on the river Conway, 15 miles SW. of Denbigh, and 222 NW. of London. Though but a small place, it has a good market-house, a good bridge, and a free-school. Market on Tuesday.

Llanrusted, Cardigans. near Aberystwith. It is remarkable for two Druidical sepulchres in it's neighbourhood, consisting of two upright stones, one of which, when perfect, measured 11 feet in height, and 5 feet 6 inches in breadth. Llansadwin, Carmarthens. Llansannan, Denbighs. Llansanfraid, Monm. between Hardwick Chapel and Ragland Castle. Llanstephen, Pembrokes. a small fishing village, at the mouth of the Towy. It's castle (formerly walled) rises from the summit of a high, verdant promontory, sloping regularly toward the land as well as towards the sea. Llansoy, Monm. SE. of Ragland Castle. Llantherwel Chapel, Monm. NW. of Caerleon. Llanthraid Dyffen Alwyd, Denbighs. Llantillio Grosseny, Monm. NE. of Abergavenny. Llantrishen, Monm. near Strogle Castle.

LLANTRISSENT, an ancient town of Glamorganshire, seated in a hilly part of the country, 10 miles NW. of Landaff, and 166 W. of London. It's portrieve, or governing officer, is sworn by the deputy constable of the castle, that stands near it. Market on Friday.

Llantwerdine, Heref. above the conflux of the Bardfield and Teme, has two Roman camps near it. Llanufidd, 5 miles W. of Denbigh. Llanvages, Monm. NE. of Caerleon. Llanvaice Waterden, Shrops. SW. of Clun Castle. Llanvair, Llanvair Kilgedin, Llanvainer Chapel, and Llanvapley, Monm. Llanveder and Llanvern, rivers in Merionethshire, the former of which runs into the Irish Channel below Llandarog, and the latter runs into the Pemble Meer. Llanveyno and Llanvibangel, Heref. Llanvibangel, W. of Monmouth. Llanvibangel, Monm. SE. of Abergavenny. Llanvibangel, SW. of Chepstow. Llanvibangel Crucerney, Monm. N. of Abergavenny. Llanvibanbel Eskes, Heref. on the river Esk. Llanvibangel Lanternam, Llanvibangel Pontymoil, Llanvibangel Tonnygrais, and Llanvibangel Veddow, Monmouthshire.

LLANVILLING, a neat, little town of Montgomeryshire, seated on a flat, among hills, near the river Cane, 15 miles N. of Montgomery, and 179 NW. of London. Market on Thursday.

Llanwerda, Shropshire, near Oswestry. Llanvreeken, Upper and Lower, Monm. N. of Caerleon. Llanwanen, Monmouths. SE. of Caerleon. Llanwaren, Herefords. near Michael Church. Llanwenarth, Monm. near Usk. Llanwhen, Cardigans. Llanwyneck, Shropshire, 6 miles from Oswestry. Llanwyntyd Well, Brecon, not far from Llandovery and Bullth, and 6 miles from Garth. It is reckoned a most efficacious relief in all scorbutic cases.

LLANYDLOS, a town of Montgomeryshire, 18 miles SW. of Montgomery, and 180 WNW. of London. A great market for woollen yarn on Saturday.

Llattons, Herefordshire, E. of Weobly.

LLAUGHARN, a small trading town of Carmarthenshire, seated on the W. side of the river Towy, at it's mouth, 7 miles SW. of Carmarthen, and 233 WNW. of London. Market on Friday.

Lledding, a river in Montgomeryshire which runs into the Severn, at or near Welshpool. Lledwich, a river in Shropshire, which runs into the Teme at Great Chapel. Lleggy, a river in Carnarvonshire, which runs into the Conway above Bettus. Llemnwchllyn, Merionethshire. Llenony, a river of Carnarvonshire, which runs into the Irish Channel, about 5 miles SSW. of Carnarvon. Lleveny, a river of Brecknockshire, which runs into the Wye, about 3 miles S. from Hay. Lloger, Lougher, or Oger, a river in Carmarthenshire, which runs into the Bristol Channel, below Llogher Castle, near Llanelly. Lloyd, a river in Montgomeryshire, which runs into the Severn above Llanydlos. Llue, or Thlue, a river in Carmarthenshire which runs into the Llogher near Llogher Castle. Llue, a river in Merionethshire which runs into the Dee, where it passes into into Pemble Meer. Lynigo, Shropſ. near Knocking. Llyngeryl, a river in Merionethſhire, which runs into the Iriſh Channel, about 3 miles S. from Barmouth.

LO, ST. a town in the dept. of the Channel. Here are conſiderable manufactories of ſerges, ſhalloons, ribbons, and gold and ſilver lace. It is defended by fortifications, in the ancient manner, dug in a ſteep rock, and is ſeated in a fertile country, on the river Vire, 12 miles NNE. of Coutances, and 125 NNW. of Paris.

LOANDA, a town of Africa, capital of a fertile province, called Loanda, in the kingdom of Angola, with a good harbour. It is large and handſome, conſidering the country, containing ſeveral churches, convents, and about 5000 inhabitants, of which only 1000 are whites. The houſes are moſtly built of ſtone, and covered with tiles. There is alſo a vaſt number of negroes' huts made of ſtraw and earth. The Jeſuits had a college here. The country abounds in cattle and ſheep, Indian corn, millet, manioc, and fruits. It is ſubject to the Portugueſe. Lat. 8. 45. S. lon. 13. 25. E.

LOANDA, or ST. PAUL DE LOANDA, an iſland in the Atlantic, near the coaſt of Angola, about 18 miles long and 8 broad. It contains 7 or 8 villages, and abounds in oranges, figs, citrons, and other fruits, but the ſoil is not proper for grain. On the coaſt are found zimbi, a ſpecies of ſhell-fiſh, uſed for money by the natives, like cowries in the Indies.

LOANGO, a town, capital of a kingdom, of Africa, formerly a part of Congo, but now independent, and lying on the ſea ſide; about 240 miles in length and 188 in breadth. The climate is nearly as hot as any under the torrid zone, and much hotter than thoſe of Congo and Angola, yet it is healthy and pleaſant. The land is ſo fruitful, that they have three crops of large and ſmall millet a year; beſides which they have ſeveral ſorts of peas and beans, with fruits, greens, roots, herbs, and vegetables; and there is a great number of trees, ſuch as palm, banana, &c. of the excellent fruits of which they make agreeable wine; while others afford them materials for clothing, as alſo for building, covering their houſes, making ſhips, &c. They have but few cattle of any ſort, except goats. They have hogs in great plenty; and poultry are ſo extremely cheap, that ſix-pennyworth of beads will purchaſe 30 of them. Pheaſants, partridges, and other wild fowl, are in ſtill greater abundance; and hardly bear any price. Among wild beaſts, they have the zebra, and multitudes of elephants, whoſe teeth they exchange with the Europeans for iron. Their principal trade conſiſts in ſlaves, elephants' teeth, copper, tin, lead, and iron. The women cultivate the ground, ſow, and get in the harveſt. There is a great number of towns and villages in this country, of which little is known but their names. The inhabitants are black, and of mild and agreeable manners, but indolent. They are governed by an abſolute prince, or chief, who is in ſome meaſure worſhipped as a god by his ſubjects. The town of Loango, in the centre of which is the royal palace, a great ſquare, a mile and a half in compaſs, is ſituated on a river, about 6 miles from the Atlantic, in lat. 4. 40. S. This country lies between 11 and 19 deg. E. lon. and 1 and 5 S. lat.

LORNUO, a town of Culm, in Pruſſia; and a town of Luſatia.

LOBOA, a town in Spaniſh Eſtramadura, ſituated on the river Guadiana, 22 miles E. of Bajadoz.

LOCARNO, a town of Switzerland, capital of a populous diſtrict of the ſame name, which is one of the four tranſalpine bailiwicks. It contains about 1500 inhabitants. Part of the town is built on piazzas, in the form of a creſcent, with two wings; and in the front, is a row of trees, and the public walk. It contains three convents, and a ſmall Franciſcan monaſtery, perched on a rock overhanging the valley, and commanding a ſuperb view of the Lake of Locarno and it's boundaries. Locarno was once ſituated on the lake, and had a port capable of receiving large barks: at preſent, it ſtands at the diſtance of a quarter of a mile, which is owing to the accumulation of ſand brought down by the torrent Maggia. It is 23 miles SW. of Chiavenna.

LOCARNO, LAKE. See MAGGIORE.

LOCHABER, a bleak, barren, mountainous, and rugged diſtrict, of Inverneſſhire, in the ſouthern part of the county.

LOCHEM, a town in Dutch Guelderland, ſituated on the Berkel, 10 miles E. of Zutphen.

LOCHER Moss, a moraſs of Dumfrieſſhire, about 10 miles in length and 3 in breadth. From the vaſt oak trees that have been dug up here, it is evident that this moraſs has been, at ſome diſtant period, a great foreſt. Canoes and anchors have been frequently found here; and as the preſent moraſs is but little elevated above flood-mark, it is ſuppoſed to have been once covered by the ſea.

LOCHES,

LOCHES, a town in the dept. of Indre and Loire, chiefly noted for it's caſtle, ſtanding on a rock, formerly a very important fortification. In a large tower in it, are two cages, or moveable rooms, with very ſtrong oak grates, covered with iron, and built by the cruel Louis XI. In this caſtle alſo are, or lately were, four ranges of ſubterraneous paſſages, running over each other, in the uppermoſt of which Lewis Sforza, Duke of Milan, taken in battle under Lewis XII. was kept priſoner for 10 years, and where he died. It is ſeated on the river Indre, 15 miles S. of Amboiſe.

LOCHMABEN, a town of Dumfriesſhire, containing about 700 inhabitants. There is a conſiderable manufacture of linen in the town and neighbourhood. It is ſituated on the W. ſide of the river Annan, 7 miles NE. of Dumfries.

LOCHRIDA, or OCRIDA, a large town of Albania, in Turkey, ſeated on a hill, near a lake of the ſame name, 62 miles SE. of Durazzo.

LOCHSTETT, a town of Samland, in Pruſſia, 4 miles N. of Pillau. Near it are the remains of a caſtle, in which is to be ſeen a dreadful dungeon, that formerly ſerved as a priſon.

LOCHWINNOCH, a town of Renfrewſhire, the inhabitants of which are chiefly employed in manufactures. It is ſeated on the W. ſide of a lake of the ſame name, called alſo Caſtle Semple Loch, which is 3 or 3 miles in length, and of conſiderable breadth. On an iſland in this lake is ſeen an old fortreſs, called the Peel; a name frequently given to old fortreſſes in Scotland.

LOCHY, LOCH, a lake of Inverneſsſhire, about 10 miles long and from one to two broad, communicating with Loch Eil, Loch Linnhe, and Loch Arkeig.

Lockerby, Yorkſhire, between Barnaby Moor and the Mouth of the Tees. Lockering, Wilts, SW. of Marlborough. Lockerley, Hants, NW. of Rumſey.

LOCKHART, a town of N. Carolina.

LOCKHARTSBURG, a town of Pennſylvania, ſituated on the river Suſquehana, 135 miles, NNW. of Philadelphia.

Locking, Somerſ. near Briſtol Channel, oppoſite Steepholm Iſland. Locking E. and W. Berks, near Wantage. Lockington, Leic. NE. of Stanton Harold. Lockington, Yorkſ. NW. of Beverley. Lockſfield, Suſſex, near E. Grinſtead. Lockton, Yorkſhire, N. of Pickering. Lockwood, Yorkſ. near Huthersfield. Locuſt, Herts, near Hempel Hemſtead. Lodan, a river in Herefordſhire, which runs into the Frome, about 5 miles N. from Hereford. Lodbrook Park, Warw. W. of Umberſlade. Loddeſwell, Devonſhire, near Modbury. Loddeſworth, Suſſex, near Eaſtbourn and Petworth. Loddington, Leiceſ. NE. of Hallaton. Loddington, Northamptonſhire, near Kettering.

LODDON, a town in Norfolk, 8 miles SE. of Norwich, and 113 NE. of London. Market on Friday.

Loddon, a river of Berks and Hants, which runs into the Thames near Twyford, about 5 miles below Reading. Loddon Bridge, Berks, between Reading and Oakingham. Loder, a river in Weſtmorland, which runs into the Eymot near Penrith. Loder, Dorſetſ. near Bridport.

LODESAN, a ſmall diſtrict of Italy, in Milan, N. of the Placentine and Paveſe. It lies along the river Adda, and is very fertile and populous. It's cheeſes are in very high eſteem. Lodi is the capital.

LODEVE, a town in the dept. of Herault. It has a manufacture of hats and of cloth, and is ſeated in a dry, barren country, at the foot of the Cevennes, on the river Legue, 27 miles NW. of Montpelier, and 40 NE. of Narbonne.

Lodge, Dorſetſ. near Winbourn Miniſter. Lodge, Dorſetſ. W. of Corfe Caſtle. Lodge, Herts, between Watford and North Mims. Lodge, Herts, near Sopwell. Lodge, Lanc. between Preſton and Garſtang. Lodge, Lancaſ. in Loyndale. Lodge Hill, Kent, N. of Rocheſter. Lodge Houſe, Yorkſ. W. Riding, NW. of Middlemore, bordering on the N. Riding. Lodge in the Would, Nottingh. N. of Nether and Over Broughton.

LODI, a well-built town of Italy, capital of the Lodeſan, with little trade or manufactures, except in the article of cheeſe, and a beautiful kind of earthen ware, reſembling china. It contains upwards of 10,000 inhabitants, and is ſituated on the Adda, 18 miles SE. of Milan.

LODOMERIA. See GALICIA.

LODRONE, a town of Italy, in Trent, ſeated on the ſmall Lake Idro, where it receives the Chieſe, 31 miles SW. of Trent.

Loftbouſe, Yorkſ. NE. of Giſborough.

Logbil, in Limerick, Munſter.

LOGRONO, a town of Old Caſtile, ſituated on the river Ebro, in a country abounding with excellent fruits, good wines, and all the neceſſaries of life, 20 miles NW. of Calahorra, and 115 N. by E. of Madrid.

LOHEIA, a town of Yemen, in Arabia, ſituated on the coaſt of the Red Sea, with an indifferent harbour, in lat. 15. 42. N.

It has a conſiderable trade in coffee and mineral fairs, obtained from a ſmall hill, within 2 leagues of the city.

LOHN, or ISERLOHN, a town of Mark, a Weſtphalia, containing 3 Lutheran and 1 Calviniſt church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. It has conſiderable manufactures in iron, tin, ribbons, velvets, ſilks, ſtuffs, &c. and is 32 miles NE. of Cologne.

LOIR AND CHER, a department of France, bounded on the NE. by the Loiret, and on the S. by the Indre. It takes it's name from the rivers Loir and Cher; the laſt of which paſſes by Bonneval, Chateaudun, Vendoſme, Chartres, &c. and falls into the Sarte, about 3 miles above Le Mans; and the laſt, paſſing by Chateauroux, St. Aignan, Mont Richard, &c. empties itſelf into the Loire, a few miles below Tours. Blois is the capital.

LOIRE, UPPER, a depart. of France, 9 of the depts. of Puy de Dome and E. of the Cantal. It takes it's name from the principal river in France, which riſes in the mountains of the Cevennes, in Languedoc, begins to be navigable at Roanne, and, watering Nevers, Chatillon, Orleans, Blois, Amboiſe, Tours, Saumur, Nantes, &c. falls into the Bay of Biſcay below Paimbeuf. Le Puy is the capital.

LOIRE, LOWER, a dept. of France, N. of La Vendée, and E. of the Bay of Biſcay. Nantes is the capital.

LOIRET, a dept. of France, W. of the dept. of the Yonne, and E. of that of Loir and Cher. It takes it's name from a ſmall river that falls into the Loire, about 3 miles below Orleans, the capital.

Lolham Bridge, Northamp. on the Welland, between Stamford and Market Deeping.

Lollington, Suſſex, W. of Pevenſey.

LOMBARDY, a part of Italy, which comprehends almoſt all the ancient Ciſalpine Gaul, and is ſo named from the Longſtardi, or Lombards, who founded the kingdom in the middle of the 6th century. It lies toward the N. and is divided into the Upper and Lower. Upper Lombardy is the weſtern part, and comprehends Piedmont, with it's dependencies, and the duchies of Monferrat and Milan. Lower Lombardy, which is the eaſtern part, comprehends Parma, Modena, Milan, Mantua, (which two are called Auſtrian Lombardy) Ferrara, the Bolognese, the Paduan, Vicentin, Veroneſe, Breſſan, Cremaſco, Bergamete, and ſome ſmaller principalities and ſtates.

LOMEZ, a ſmall town in the dept. of Gers, ſeated on the river Save, 16 miles SE. of Auch.

LOMOND, BEN, a great mountain in the N. of Stirlingſhire, in Scotland, about 3200 feet above the level of the lake, at it's bottom. It ſtretches along the E. ſide of Loch Lomond ſeveral miles; and it's broad baſe extends ſo far into the country, that the aſcent of this mountain, though ſteep, is computed to be 6 miles. In this long aſcent, we meet with a diverſity of climates, and a variety of inhabitants, Ptarmigans, and other heath fowls, frequent it's upper regions; it's lower are the haunts of the roeback; and herds of cattle feed in the irriguous valleys and ſheltered paſtures at it's baſe. From this lofty mountain are ſeen Loch Lomond, the Clyde, the Forth, Edinburgh, the eaſtern coaſt as far as the Cheviot Fells, the Iſles of Bute and Arran, the rock of Ailſa, Ireland, the mountain of Plinlimmon in Wales, and the Skiddaw in Cumberland, and the hills far beyond it.

LOMOND HILLS, in the weſtern part of Fifeſhire, are beautiful and verdant.

LOMOND, LOCH, a beautiful and extenſive lake of Dumbartonſhire, which deſcends from the northern point of that country, expanding as it advances ſouthward. It is 28 miles long; it's breadth from 7 miles, decreaſing three quarters of a mile; and, were it's windings followed, it's circuit would be upwards of 100 miles. There are 33 iſlands in this lake, ſeveral of which are inhabited, and contain antique ruins, concealed among ancient yews. Others riſe into high, rocky cliffs, the habitation of the oſprey, or ſea-eagle. In 1755, when Liſbon was deſtroyed by an earthquake, this lake was exceedingly agitated: on the SE. corner of it, terminate the Grampian Mountains.

LON, LUNE, or LOYNE, a river which riſes in Weſtmorland, and flowing by Kirby Lonſdale in that county, falls into the Iriſh ſea a few miles below Lancaſter. The banks of this river are beautiful and romantic.

LONDINIERES, a town in the dept. of the Lower Seine, 15 miles ESE. of Dieppe.

LONDON, the metropolis of Great Britain, one of the largeſt and moſt opulent cities in the world, is mentioned by Tacitus as a conſiderable commercial place in the reign of the Roman emperor Nero. In it's moſt extenſive view, as the metropolis, it conſiſts of The City, properly ſo called, the city of Weſtminſter, which was once a mile from London, and the borough of Southwark; beſide the ſuburbs in Middleſex and Surry, within what are called the Bills of Mortality. London and Weſtminſter are ſituated in Middleſex, on the N. ſide

N. side of the river Thames. Southwark is seated on the opposite bank in Surry. The extent of the whole, from Limehouse and Deptford to Millbank and Vauxhall, is about 5 miles; but the greatest breadth does not exceed 3. With respect to the government of this metropolis, the city is divided into 26 wards, each governed by an alderman. From the aldermen the lord mayor is annually chosen. There are likewise 236 common councilmen, a recorder, two sheriffs, who are also sheriffs of Middlesex, and other officers. The government of Westminster is vested in the high steward, an under steward, and the high bailiff, all chosen also by the dean and chapter. The suburbs are under the jurisdiction of the magistrates of Middlesex. Among the public buildings, St. Paul's cathedral, as the most conspicuous first claims attention. This beautiful yet modest fabric is 1092 feet in circumference, and 369 in height to the top of the cross. It is inferior to none in Europe, in magnificence and nobleness, except St. Peter's at Rome. Westminster Abbey is a grand specimen of Gothic architecture, said to have been founded by Sebert, king of the East Saxons, in 610. Having been destroyed by the Danes, it was rebuilt by Edward the Confessor, in 1066. Henry III. pulled down the Saxon pile, and began to build the present structure in 1245. The work was carried on slowly by succeeding princes, and can hardly be said to have been finished before the time of Sir Christopher Wren, who built the two towers at the west end. It is 360 feet in length within the walls; at the nave it is 72 broad, and at the cross 195. The chapel of Henry VII. adjoining, Leland calls "The Wonder of the World." St. Stephen's, Walbrook, is a small church of exquisite beauty, the masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren; perhaps Italy itself can produce no modern building that can vie with this in taste and proportion. Bow-church in Cheapside; St. Bride's, in Fleet street; St. Dunstan's in the East; and St. Martin's in the Fields, are, among the other churches, most distinguished for fine architecture. The parishes, in what are called the Bills of Mortality, amount to 146; namely, 97 within the walls, 16 without the walls, 23 out-parishes in Middlesex and Surry, and 10 in the city and liberties of Westminster. With respect to palaces, the magnificence of royalty is not to be found in them. That of St. James was an hospital for leprous females, dedicated to that saint. It was surrendered to Henry VIII. who erected on it's site the present palace; of which, it has been observed, that notwithstanding it's mean exterior, it is the most commodious for the parade of royalty of any in Europe. He likewise laid out a large piece of ground adjoining, into a park, formed a canal and walks; calling it, in conformity to the name of the palace, St. James' Park. Charles II. enlarged and improved this spot, adorning it with plantations of trees; but, a few years ago, it was improved in a still more beautiful degree. The Queen's Palace stands in the most favourable situation that St. James' Park could furnish. It was erected by the Duke of Buckingham, in 1703, and called Buckingham House, until it was purchased, in 1761, for the royal residence, when it acquired it's present name. In 1775, parliament settled this house upon the queen, in case she should survive the king. Carlton House, the residence of the Prince of Wales, the gardens extending to St. James' Park, is a stately building, on which vast sums have been expended; but it is not yet completed. The Banqueting House, at Whitehall, was begun in 1619, from a design by Inigo Jones. It is only a small part of the vast plan of a palace, intended for the residence of the British monarchs, but left incomplete. Beside the royal palaces, there are many fine houses of the princes of the blood, and of the nobility and gentry. Westminster Hall, and some buildings appendant to it, contain the Houses of Lords and Commons, and the superior courts of justice. The great hall, in which are held the trials of peers, and of persons impeached before the lords, exceeds, in dimension, any in Europe, which is not supported by pillars. It's length is 270 feet; the breadth 74; and the height in proportion. The Guildhall of the city, situated at the end of King-street, Cheapside, was built in 1431. It's great hall is 153 feet long, 50 broad, and 58 high. The front of this hall has been rebuilt in the Gothic style. Here the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, hold sittings at Nisi Prius; here also the city elections are held, and all the business of the corporation transacted. The Sessions House in the Old Bailey, in which the criminals of both London and Middlesex are tried; and the County Hall for Middlesex, on Clerkenwell Green, are noble structures. Of the buildings appropriated to the great national offices, military, naval, and fiscal, the most ancient is the Tower of London. It is surrounded by a wall and ditch, which also inclose several streets. The circumference is about a mile. It was a palace during 500 years; the monarchs, on their accession to the throne, constantly holding their courts in this fortress; but after the accession of Queen Elizabeth, this custom ceased. The Horse Guards, an elegant structure, stands opposite the Banqueting House. The War Office is in this place, and here courts-martial for the army are held. The Ordnance Office, for the military department, is in St. Margaret's-street, Westminster. The Admiralty is a large structure, in which the higher departments of the business of the navy is transacted, and the lords of the admiralty have houses. The Navy, Navy Pay, and Victualling Offices, are in Somerset Place, a stupendous and magnificent structure, built on the site of the old palace, erected by the first Duke of Somerset, in the reign of Edward VI. It was begun during the last war, and was intended to bring into one spot the most considerable public offices; and, although not yet finished, it already contains, beside the offices above mentioned, the following, namely, the auditors of imprest, clerk of the estreats, duchy courts of Lancaster and Cornwall, hackney coach, hawkers and pedlars, horse duty, lord treasurer's, remembrancer's, lottery, pipe and comptroller of the pipe, salt, sick and hurt, signet, stage-coach duty, stamp, surveyor of crown-lands, tax, and wine licence offices. The king's barge-houses are comprehended in the plan, with a dwelling for the barge-master; beside houses for the treasurer, paymaster, and 6 commissioners of the navy; 3 commissioners of the victualling and their secretary; 1 commissioner of the stamps, and 1 of the sick and hurt; with commodious apartments in every office for a secretary, or some other acting officer, for a porter, and their families. In the front, toward the Strand, which consists of a rich basement, supporting an excellent example of the Corinthian order, and containing a principal and attic story, are apartments for the Royal Academy, and the Royal and Antiquarian Societies. The grand entrance, by 3 lofty arches, leads into a spacious quadrangle, on each side of which, to the east and west, a street is to be formed, beyond which the wings are to be carried. The front to the Thames is erected on a noble terrace, 53 feet wide; and the building, when finished, will extend 1200 feet. This terrace, unparalleled for grandeur and beauty of view, is supported on a rough, rustic basement, adorned with a lofty arcade of 32 arches, each 12 feet wide, and 24 high. The grand semicircular arch, in the middle of the basement, is that intended for the reception of the king's barges. The Treasury, which has a noble, elevated front, is in St. James's Park; and what is called "The Cockpit" forms a part of this building, and is now the council chamber for the cabinet ministers. In the city is the Royal Exchange, originally built in 1567, by Sir Thomas Gresham. Being destroyed by the great fire in 1666, it was rebuilt, in its present form, at the expence of 80,000 l. In each of the principal fronts is a piazza, and in the centre an area. The height of the building is 56 feet, and from the centre of the south side rises a lantern and turret 178 feet high, on the top of which is a vane, in the form of a grasshopper, the crest of Sir Thomas Gresham. The inside of the area, which is 144 feet long and 127 broad, is surrounded by piazzas. The Bank of England, a magnificent structure, is situated in Threadneedle-street. The Custom House, to the west of the Tower, is a large irregular pile, before which ships of 350 tons can lie, and discharge their cargoes. It was built in 1718, on the site of a former Custom House, destroyed by fire. The Excise Office, in Broad-street, is a building of magnificent simplicity, erected in 1768, on the site of Gresham College. The East India House, in Leadenhall-street, was built in 1726. The original front was very confined, but a new front, much enlarged and improved, has been lately erected, richly furnished in respect to exterior decorations, architectural ornaments, stone sculpture, &c. it has great extent in depth, and contains all the offices necessary for the transacting the business of a commercial company. The South Sea House, in Threadneedle-street, is a handsome building; but the General Post Office, in Lombard-street, is rather convenient than splendid. Of the structures, which more particularly belong to the city, the most distinguished is the Mansion House, erected, in 1753, for the residence of the lord mayor; it is magnificent, but ponderous. The Monument is a grand fluted Doric column, 202 feet high, erected in commemoration of the great fire in 1666. The bridges are a great ornament to the metropolis. The most ancient, London Bridge, was begun in 1176, and finished in 1209. The length of it is 915 feet. The number of arches was 19, of unequal dimensions, and deformed by the enormous sterlings, and by houses on each side, which overhung in a terrific manner. These were removed in 1756, when the upper part of the bridge, assumed a modern appearance; pearance; but the ſterlings remain, though they ſo contract the ſpace between the piers, as to occaſion, at the ebb of tide, a fall of 5 feet, or a number of temporary cataracts, which have occaſioned the loſs of many lives. Weſtminſter Bridge, one of the fineſt in the world, was built by Labelye, a native of Switzerland. The firſt ſtone was laid in 1739, the laſt in 1747; but on account of the ſinking of one of the piers, the opening of the bridge was retarded till 1750. The whole is of Portland ſtone, except the ſpandrels of the arches, which are of Purbeck. It is 1223 feet in length. It has 13 large, and 2 ſmall ſemicircular arches: the centre arch is 76 feet wide; the other arches, on each ſide, decreaſing in width 4 feet. Blackfriars Bridge, built by Mr. Mylne, was begun in 1760, and completed in 1768. It's length is 995 feet; the breadth of the carriage way 28, and of the footpaths 7 feet each. It conſiſts of 9 elliptical arches, the center one of which is 100 feet wide; and both this, and the arch on each ſide, are wider than the celebrated Rialto at Venice, but it's decay is already too viſible. This noble ſtructure is built of Portland ſtone. In London are ſeveral muſeums. The Britiſh Muſeum, which is open to the public gratis, was founded by parliament, in 1753, in purſuance of the will of Sir Hans Sloane, who directed his executors to make an offer to the public of his collection of natural and artificial curioſities and books, for the ſum of 20,000l.; and the noble building called Montague Houſe, was purchaſed for their reception. At the ſame time were purchaſed the MSS. collected by Edward Harley, earl of Oxford. Here are likewiſe the collections made by Robert and John Cotton; and large ſums have ſince been voted to augment this noble repoſitory. George II. preſented to it the libraries of the kings of England, from the reign of Henry VII. His preſent majeſty gave it an intereſting collection of tracts publiſhed in the reigns of Charles I. and II. and a variety of antiquities, brought from Italy, were purchaſed by parliament, for 8,421l. in 1762. The Leverian Muſeum is ſituated in Great Surry-ſtreet, on the S. ſide of Blackfriars Bridge. This magnificent muſeum was collected by the late Sir Aſhton Lever, and contains the moſt aſtoniſhing collection in natural hiſtory that had ever been formed by an individual. Having obtained an act of parliament, empowering him to diſpoſe of this muſeum by a lottery, to conſiſt of 30,000 tickets, at a guinea each, he found ſo little avidity in the public to adventure, that he ſold no more than 8000 tickets; when the appointed time of drawing arrived; when this valuable treaſure was tranſlated from him to the preſent poſſeſſor, Mr. Parkinſon, who erected the building it now occupies for it's reception. Another muſeum, conſiſting of anatomical preparations, and natural curioſities, collected by the late Dr. William Hunter, who built a ſpacious edifice for their reception, in Windmill-ſtreet, Haymarket, is now open to the public, and is to continue ſo for 30 years from the time of his death in 1783. Of the inns of court, or ſocieties for the ſtudy of the law, the principal are the Middle and Inner Temples, Lincoln's-Inn, and Gray's Inn. Theſe are very ſpacious, and have large gardens, which are open to the public. The others are Clifford's Inn, Clement's Inn, Serjeant's Inn, New Inn, Lyon's Inn, Barnard's Inn, Furnival's Inn, and Staple's Inn. The College of Phyſicians, unfortunately hidden in Warwick-lane, was built by Sir Chriſtopher Wren. Sion College, near London Wall, founded, in 1603, by the Rev. Thomas White, is governed by a preſident, 2 deans, and 4 aſſiſtants; and all the clergy within the Bills of Mortality are it's fellows. Here is a library for their uſe, and almſhouſes for 10 men and 10 women. The Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, have a handſome houſe in the Adelphi. Of public ſeminaries, the moſt diſtinguiſhed are Weſtminſter School, St. Paul's School, the Charter Houſe, and Merchant Taylors School. The places of diverſion are numerous and magnificent. Of the halls of the city companies, the moſt diſtinguiſhed in point of architecture, are Surgeons Hall, in the Old Bailey, Goldſmiths Hall, Foſter lane; Ironmongers Hall, Fenchurch-ſtreet; and Fiſhmongers Hall, near London Bridge. The principal hoſpitals are Chriſt's Hoſpital, near Newgate-ſtreet, a royal foundation, for orphans and poor children; St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, Weſt Smithfield, another royal foundation for the ſick and lame; Bridewell, in Blackfriars, once a royal palace, but now a royal hoſpital, for the apprenticing of the induſtrious youth, and a priſon for the diſſolute; Bethlehem, in Moorfields, another royal hoſpital, for lunatics; St. Luke's, in Old-ſtreet, alſo for lunatics; St. Thomas's in the Borough, the fourth royal hoſpital for the ſick and lame; and for the ſame purpoſe are Guy's Hoſpital, adjoining; the London Hoſpital, in Whitechapel-road; the Middleſex Hoſpital, Berners-ſtreet;

was

he Westminster Infirmary, Petty France; nd St. George's Hospital, Hyde Park Corner. The Foundling Hospital, in Lamb's Conduit Fields; the Asylum, at Lambeth, for orphan girls; the Magdalen Hospital, in St. George's Fields, for penitent prostitutes; the Marine Society, in Bishopsgate street; the Smallpox Hospitals at Pancras; the Lock Hospital, near Grosvenor-place; the Westminster Lying-in Hospital, and many others for the same purpose, are also excellent institutions; and there are many dispensaries for dispensing medicines to the sick, who keep to their houses, under the direction of a physician to each dispensary, and proper assistants. The prisons are numerous: the principal are Newgate, a stupendous structure; the New Compter, Giltspur street; the Fleet Prison, for debtors; the King's Bench, in St. George's Fields, for the same purpose; and a new county gaol (including a new sessions-house) in Southwark. Some of the squares and streets in the metropolis are magnificent; and many of those which cannot boast of grandeur, are long, spacious, and airy. Portland Place forms, perhaps, the most magnificent street in the world; Stratford Place is truly elegant; and the Adelphi Terrace is the admiration of foreigners, for the noble view which it affords of the river, the bridges, and other public buildings, and of the fine hills beyond Lambeth and Southwark. The broad stream of the Thames flowing between London and Southwark, continually agitated by a brisk current, or a rapid tide, brings constant supplies of fresh air, which no buildings can intercept. The country round, especially on the London side, is nearly open to some distance; whence, by the action of the sun and wind on a gravelly soil, it is kept tolerably dry in all seasons, and affords no lodgment for stagnant air or water. The cleanliness of London, as well as it's supply of water, are greatly aided by it's situation on the banks of the Thames; and the New River, with many good springs within the city itself, further contributes to the abundance of that necessary element. All these are advantages, with respect to health, in which this metropolis is exceeded by few. It's situation, with regard to the circumstance of navigation, is equally well chosen; had it been placed lower on the Thames, it would have been annoyed by the marshes, and more liable to the insults of foreign foes; had it been higher, it would not have been accessible, as at present, to ships of large burden. It now possesses every advantage that can be derived from a sea-port, without it's dangers; and, at the same time, by means of it's noble river, enjoys a very extensive communication with the internal parts of the country, which supply it with necessaries, and, in return, receive from it such commodities as they require. With the great article of fuel, London is plentifully supplied by sea from the northern collieries. Corn and various other articles are with equal ease conveyed to it from all the maritime parts of the kingdom, and great numbers of coasting vessels are continually employed for this purpose. London, therefore, unites in itself all the benefits arising from navigation and commerce, with those of a metropolis at which all the public business of a great nation is transacted; and is, at the same time, the mercantile and political head of these kingdoms. It is also the seat of many considerable manufactures; some almost peculiar to itself, as ministering to the demands of studied splendor and refined luxury; others in which it participates with the manufacturing towns in general; with this difference, that only the finer and more costly of their works are performed here. The most important of it's peculiar manufactures is the silk weaving, established in Spitalfields by refugees from France. A variety of works in gold, silver, and jewellery; the engraving of prints; the making of optical and mathematical instruments are likewise principally, or solely, executed here, and some of them in greater perfection than in any other country. The porter-brewery, a business of very great extent, is also chiefly carried on in London. To it's port art likewise confined some branches of foreign commerce, as the vast East India trade, and those to Turkey and Hudson's Bay. Thus London has risen to it's present rank of the first city in Europe with respect to opulence; and nearly, if not entirely so, as to number of inhabitants. It is probable, that the residents in London, Westminster, Southwark, and all the out-parishes, do not fall short of 1,000,000. London is a bishop's see, and sends 4 members to parliament. To enumerate all the events by which this great capital has been distinguished, would greatly exceed our limits; we shall only mention, therefore, the great plague in 1665, which cut off 90,000 people, and the dreadful conflagration in 1666, by which 13,000 houses were destroyed. Lat. 51. 31. N.

London Eastcote, Linc. among the Fens, on Boston Dyke. London, Little, Essex, near Samford Magna. London, Little, Midd.

Midd. S. of Hillingdon Heath. London Thorp, Lincolnshire, NE. of Grantham.

LONDON, New, a sea port of N. America, in the state of Connecticut, and county of the same name. It's harbour is the best in Connecticut, and as good as any in the United States, and is defended by 2 forts. It is situated on the W. side of the river Thames, near it's entrance into the Sound, about 75 miles SSW. of Boston, and 100 ENE. of New York. Lat. 41. 25. N. lon. 73. 20. W.

LONDONDERRY. See DERRY.

Longaston, Somers. 4 miles from Bristol. Long Ball, Dorsets. near Brandsey Island. Longbeach, Kent, near Charing. Longborough, Gloucesters. 3 miles E. of Stow. Longbredy, between Dorchester and Bridport, on the river Bride. Longbridge, Dorsets. NW. of Axminster. Longbridge, Glouc. near Ashworth. Longbridge, Glouc. N. of Berkeley. Longbridge, S. of Warwick.

Longbridge, a village in the county of Murray, 4 miles E. of Elgin.

Long Burton, Dorsets. 3 miles SE. of Sherborn. Longchapel, Shrops. NW. of Wellington. Longcomb, Oxf. near Woodstock Park. Long Coppice, Hants, in Warblington parish. Longcot, Berks, near Barrington. Longditch, Northamptons. a causey that runs by Oldhambridge, through W. Deeping, in Lincolnshire. Longdon, Staff. 4 miles from Lichfield, on the road to Chester, on a brook that runs into the Trent. It communicates with the Grand Trunk navigation. Longdon, Shrops. near Drayton. Longdon, S. of Shrewsbury. Longdon, Worc. S. of Upton. Longdridge, Cornwall, NW. of Kellington.

Longfield, in Leitrim, Connaught.

Longfield, Bucks, near Fenny Stratford. Longfield, Kent, between Dartford and Cobham. Longfleet, Dorsets. at the bottom of Poole Harbour.

LONGFORD, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, about 21 miles in length, and 14 in it's greatest breadth; bounded on the W. by the river Shannon, on the E. and S. by West Meath, and on the N. and NW. by Leitrim and Cavan. It contains 23 parishes, about 10,000 houses, and rather more than 50,000 inhabitants, and is a rich and pleasant country, in general flat, in some places apt to be overflown by the Shannon, and towards the N. mountainous. A considerable quantity of linen is manufactured in the county, and large quantities of flax are sent to other parts.

LONGFORD, the capital of the county of Longford, is seated on the river Cromlin, or Cammin, which falls into the Shannon a few miles below, 64 miles NW. by W. of Dublin.

Longford, W. of Derby. Longford, near Gloucester. Longford, Midd. SE. of Colnbrook. Longford, Shrops. near Drayton. Longford, Wilts, 3 miles from Salisbury; here is an elegant seat of Lord Radnor, furnished with taste and abounding with beauties; but the situation of the house is low, and the ground too flat. Longford's Burley, Glouc. in Hampton parish. Longham, Dorsets. E. of Winborn Minster. Longham, Norf. NW. of East Dereham. Longham, Somersetshire, NW. of Somerton.

LONGHOLM, a town of Dumfriesshire, 22 miles E. of Dumfries.

Longhope, Glouc. 3 miles NE. of Mitchel Dean. Longhope, Northumb. near Hexham. Longhorsly, Northumb. near Widrington Castle. Longhurst, Northumberland, NE. of Morpeth.

LONG ISLAND, an island of the state of New York, separated from Connecticut by Long Island Sound, and divided into 3 counties, King's, Queen's, and Suffolk. It extends NE. from the city of New York about 140 miles, but is not more than 28 broad on a medium. Hence are exported, to the West Indies, &c. whale oil, pitch, pine boards, horses, cattle, flaxseed, beef, &c. The produce of the middle and western parts of the island, particularly corn, is carried to New York. This island, in 1792, contained upward of 30,000 inhabitants.

LONG ISLAND, an island of N. America, on the coast of Main, about 4 miles long and 1½ wide. Lat. 44. 10. N.

LONG ISLAND, a narrow island, about 2 miles in length, on the coast of Cork, in Munster, in Roaring Water Bay. Lat. 51. 26. N. lon. 9. 27. W.

Longlane Mill, Dorsetshire, near Pen. Longleat, or Longfleet, Wilts, 3 miles E. of Warminster; here the marquis of Bath has a fine seat, containing a well chosen collection of paintings, &c. Longlede, Somers. SW. of Ilchester. Longlether, Dorsets. NE. of Bridport. Long Meg and her Daughters, see Lethbold. Longmore, Staff. near Water Eaton.

LONGNAN, a city of China, of the first rank, in the province of Setchuen. It is situated on the river Mouquay, 710 miles SW. of Pekin.

Longney, Glouc. 3 miles E. of Newnham. Longnon, Shrops. near the river Warren, W. of Wenlock. Longnon, Staff. NW. of Lichfield. Longnor, by the Severn, SE. of Shrewsbury. Longnor, Staffordshire, forfhire, near the fource of the river Idle.

LONGNEY, a town in the dept. of the Orne, 9 miles E. of Mortagne.

Longparish, Hants, between Amlover and Burton. Longridge, Chapel and Hill, Lanc. NE. of Preston. Longridge, Cumb. in Bromfield parish. Longrigg, Yorkshire, in Hulderness, NE. of Beverley.

Longrock, in the harbour of Donaghdee, in Down, Ulster, is a dangerous ridge of rocks stretching out into the sea.

Longsdon, Staff. near Leek.

Longside, a village of Aberdeenshire, 4 miles W. of Peterhead.

Longsleddle, Westmorl. near Kendal.

Longstock, Hants, between Dunbury Hill and Stockbridge. Longstone, Derbysh. in the High Peak. Longthorp, York. near Bedale. Longthorp, Northampton, near Peterborough. Longtoft, and its Drain, Linc. near Market Deeping. Longton, Staff. near Ridgley, consists of scattered houses, extending for a gateway on each side of the road. Longtown, Hereford, near Old Court. Dovey.

LONGTOWN, a town in Cumberland, is seated on the river Esk, near it's confluence with the Kirkstop, on the borders of Scotland, 9 miles N. of Carlisle, and 310 NNW. of London. Market on Thursday.

LONGUEVILLE, a town in the dept. of Lower Seine, 9 miles S. of Dieppe.

Longwood, E. of Hartford.

Longwood, in Meath, Leinster.

Longworth, Berks, W. of Abingdon.

Longworth, Kent, E. of Chatley.

Longworth, Ecton, near Hereford.

LONGWY, a town in the dept. of the Moselle, seated on an eminence, near the Chiers, 9 miles W. of Luxemburg, and 167 NE. of Paris. It was taken by the Austrians, under General Clairfayt, August, 1792, but retaken the same of October following.

Longside, Westmorland, a mile on the river Lon.

LONS LE SAUNIER, a town in the dept. of Jura, formerly celebrated for it's salt works, which are now entirely destroyed. It is seated on the river Solvans, 31 miles S. of Dole.

LOO, a town of Dutch Gueldreland, 8 miles W. of Deventer. The Prince of Orange lately had a fine palace here. Also a town of the Austrian Flanders, 6 miles SSE. of Dixmude.

LOOE EAST and WEST, two small, strong towns in Cornwall, separated from each other by a creek, or river, of the same name, over which there is a narrow, stone bridge, at low water. They are W. of Plymouth, and 240 W. by S. of London. Each of them has a market on Saturday. The river Looe is navigable for vessels of 200 tons burthen.

Looke, Higher and Lower, Derbyshire, near Ashbourn.

Loop Head, or Cape Lean, in Clare, Munster, at the mouth of the Shannon. Lat. 52. 30. N. lon. 9. 56. W.

LOOPOOL, Cornwall, a lake near Helston, about a mile long, parted from the sea by a ridge, over which the waves sometimes beat with a wonderful roaring. It abounds with excellent trout.

Lope, Kent, S. of Maidstone.

LOPEN, a town and county of Liege.

Lopham, North and South, or Great and Little, Norfolk, on the borders of Suffolk, W. of Diss. Lophamford, Staff. NW. of Rudge. Lophams is a tan colour'd earth, which gives rise to the rivers Lesser Ouse and Waveney.

Loppington, Shropshire, NW. of Wem.

LORA, a town of Seville.

LORCH, a town and lordship of Hohenstein, in Upper Saxony.

LORCA, a town of Spain, in Murcia, inhabited chiefly by descendants of the Moors, called New Christians. It is seated on an eminence near the river Guadalentin, 9 miles SW. of Murcia.

LORCHA, a town of Mexico.

LORD HOWE'S GROUP, an extensive group of islands in the S. Pacific Ocean, discovered by Captain Shuter, in 1792, who, from the mast head, could distinctly discern 40 of them. They appeared thickly covered with wood, among which the cocoa nut was very distinguishable. The natives were of a dark copper colour; their hair tied in a knot on the back of the head; and they seemed to have some method of taking off the beard, for they appeared as if clean shaved. They had an ornament, consisting of a number of strings, like an artificial beard, which they tied between the nose and mouth; and their ears, under the nose. For that beard hung across both, which gave them the appearance of having two mouths. Their mats were neatly worked, which are not usually carried on. They have holes run through the sides of the nose into the nostrils; into which as well as through the septum, they thrust pieces of reed, or bone. They arms and thighs are tattooed in the manner described by Captain Cook, of some of the natives of the islands he visited in these seas, called Tatowing; and some were painted with red and white streaks. They wore a wrapper round their middle. Lat. 5. 30. S. lon. from 159. 14. to 159. 37. E.

LORD HOWE'S ISLAND, an iſland of the S. Pacific Ocean, about 140 leagues E. of New South Wales. On the W. ſide is good anchorage, but the bottom is a coral rock. Many excellent turtle have been caught here on a ſandy beach; and the iſland abounds with a variety of birds, which, when our ſeamen landed here, were ſo unaccuſtomed to be diſturbed, that they came near enough to knock down as many as they wanted with a ſtick. This iſland was diſcovered, in 1788, by Lieutenant King, in his voyage from Port Jackſon to Norfolk Iſland. At the S end of it are two very high mountains, nearly perpendicular from the ſea, the ſouthernmoſt called Mount Gower. About 14 miles to the S. is a very remarkable rock, named Ball's Pyramid, which had much the appearance of a ſteeple at a diſtance. Lord Howe's Iſland is about 3 miles and a half long, and very narrow acroſs. Lat. 31. 36. S. lon. 159. 0. N.

Lordings, Suffolk, between Stepham and Billinghurſt.

LOREDO, a town in the late Venetian Dogada, 20 miles S. of Venice.

LORETTO, a town of Italy, in the marquiſate of Ancona. They pretend to ſhew here the Santa Caſa, or Houſe of Nazareth, in which Jeſus was brought up; and ſay that it was carried by angels into Dalmatia, and thence to the place where it now ſtands. This houſe is nearly 32 feet long, 13 wide, and 18 feet 9 inches in height, incruſted with marble, with inſide walls of brick, and ſome pieces of ſtone intermixed. The inner part, or chapel, is very old, but is ſurrounded by a marble wall, and within is a church built of freeſtone. A ſtatue, to repreſent Mary, the mother of Jeſus, with the image of Chriſt, covered with diamonds, in her arms, ſtands upon the principal altar: it is of cedar-wood, 3 feet high, but the face can hardly be ſeen, on account of the ſmoke of the numerous lamps around it. She is clothed with cloth of gold, ſet off with jewels, with a triple crown on her head, and the infant is covered with a ſhirt, holding a globe in it's hand, adorned with rich jewels. The ſanctuary is perfectly crowded with 62 great lamps of gold and ſilver; one of the golden ones, which was preſented by the Republic of Venice, weighs 37 pounds; there are alſo angels waiting about the holy image, one of maſſive gold and two of ſilver; and the walls are covered with plates of ſilver. Chriſtina, queen of Sweden, gave a crown of gold, worth above 100,000 crowns; and Iſabella, infanta of Spain, ſent a garment, which coſt 40,000 ducats. Lewis XIII. of France, and his queen, ſent two crowns of gold, enriched with diamonds. Beſide theſe crowns, they ſent an angel of maſſy ſilver, holding in it's hand the figure of the dauphin, of ſolid gold. The jewels of the Holy Houſe, however, are nothing in compariſon with the treaſure, where the number, variety, and richneſs of the veſtments, lamps, candleſticks, goblets, crowns, crucifixes, images, cameos, pearls, gems of all kinds, &c. is prodigious. As for the town itſelf, excluſive of the chapel, it is neither very conſiderable nor very agreeable, nor does it contain above 300 inhabitants, who are almoſt all ſhoemakers, taylors, or ſellers of chaplets. Loretto is ſeated on a mountain, about 3 miles from the Adriatic, 10 SE. of Ancona, and 111 NE. of Rome.

LORGUES, a populous town in the dept. of Var, ſeated on the river Argens, 5 miles W. by S. of Draguignan.

LORN, a diſtrict in the N. part of Argyleſhire, between Loch Etive and Loch Awe.

LORRAIN, a ci-devant province of France, abounding in all ſorts of corn, wine, hemp, flax, rape-ſeed, game, fiſh, and, in general, all the neceſſaries of life. The air is thick and cold, but healthy; and it's lakes abound in fiſh. Here are fine meadows, and large foreſts, with mines of iron, ſilver, and copper, and ſalt-pits. The principal rivers are the Maeſe, or Meuſe, the Moſelle, the Seille, the Meurthe, and the Saure. Separated from Bar, it is about 30 leagues in length, and 23 in breadth. It now forms, with the duchy of Bar, the depts. of the Meuſe, Meurthe, Moſelle, and Voſges.

LORRIS, a ſmall town in the dept. of Loiret; 12 miles W. by S. of Montargis.

Lorton, Cumberl. a village divided into High and Low. It is pleaſantly ſeated on the river Cocker, in Lorton Vale, 4 miles SE. of Cockermouth. Loſcomb, Dorſetſ. 2 miles and a half from Netherby. Loſcby, Leic. NE. of Bilſdon. Loſely, Surry, on the Wey river, between Guilford and Godalmin. Lockſtock Graham, Cheſh. E. of Northwich. Loſome, Yorkſ. NW. of Howden.

LOT, a river of France, which has it's riſe in the dept. of Lozere, paſſes by, or near, to Mende, Cahors, Villeneuve, &c. and falls into the Garonne at, or near, Arguillon, in the dept. of Lot and Garonne. It begins to be navigable at Cahors.

LOT, a dept. of France, bounded on the N. by the dept. of the Correze, and on the SE. by the Aveiron. It takes it's name from from the river Lot. Cahors is the capital.

LOT AND GARONNE, a department of France, bounded on the N. by the dept. of the Dordogne, on the E. by the Lot, and on the S. by the Gers; it is ſo called from the junction of the two rivers of that name. Agen is the capital.

Lothbury, Bucks, N. of Newport Pagnel.

LOTHIAN, EAST. See HADDINGTONSHIRE.

LOTHIAN, MID. See EDINBURGHSHIRE.

LOTHIAN, WEST. See LINLITHGOWSHIRE.

Lottackbell, Devonſ. near Collumpton.

LOUBANS, a ſmall town in the dept. of Saone and Loire, ſituated in a kind of iſland, between the rivers Seille, Salle, and Solaan, 15 miles SE. of Chalons. It has many manufactories and an hoſpital; and is pretty much reſorted to by the merchants of France and Switzerland, for the purpoſes of commerce.

Louard, Dorſetſ. in Piddleton pariſh.

LOUDOWN, a county of Virginia.

LOUDON, a town, in the dept. of Vienne, ſeated on a mountain, between the rivers Creuſe and Dive, 27 miles NNW. of Poitiers, and 135 SW. of Paris.

Louch, Dorſetſ. in W. Knighton pariſh. Lovelace, Kent, in Betherſden pariſh. Lovell's Croſs, and Heath, Suſſex, NE. of Horſham. Lovelſtan, Devonſ. in Hewiſh pariſh.

LOWENDEGEN, a fortreſs in the late Auſtrian Flanders, ſeated on the canal between Ghent and Bruges, 5 miles W. of Ghent.

Lovenor, Devonſhire, in the pariſh of Berry Pomery.

LOUGH AGHREE, in Down, Ulſter, 3 miles ESE. of Dromore. It is in length near a mile, and in breadth about a quarter; and ſtored with excellent trout and eels.

LOUGH ALLEN, in Leitrim, Connaught, more than 30 miles in circuit, and encompaſſed by high mountains, forming a beautiful and picturesque ſcene. This diſtrict abounds with coal and iron mines; and iron works have lately been eſtabliſhed in it's vicinity.

LOUGH ALLUA, in Cork, Munſter, within a mile of Inchigeela, and heretofore remarkable for the hermitage of Finbar, ſituated on an iſland in this lake.

LOUGH ARROW, in Sligo, Connaught, about 2 miles from Ballinaſabad. It has in it a number of iſlands, romantically ſituated and well planted.

LOUGHS BALLYDOWGAN, BALLYKILBEG, BALLYKINLER, BALLYNAHINCH, BALLYRONEY, and BEG, all in Down, Ulſter, and generally abounding with eels, trout, pike, and roach.

*LOUGHBOROUGH, a conſiderable town of Leiceſterſhire, with a conſiderable manufacture of ſtockings, and a very extenſive buſineſs in the coal trade, produced by the new canals. It is pleaſantly ſeated among fertile meadows, on the river Soar, which runs here almoſt parallel with the Foſſe, near the Foreſt of Charnwood, 18 miles N. of Leiceſter, and 110 NW. by N. of London. Market on Thurſday.

*LONGBRICKLAND, a town in the county of Down, in Ulſter. The name ſignifies the lake of the ſpeckled trout, and it was ſo called from a lake near it, which abounds with that particular ſpecies of fiſh. It conſiſts chiefly of one broad ſtreet, and is a great thoroughfare, being ſituated on the great road from Belfaſt to Dublin, from which latter place it is diſtant 58 miles N.

LOUGH CONN, a lake in Mayo, Connaught.

LOUGH CORRIB, in Galway, Connaught, is upwards of 20 miles long, and, in ſome parts, 6 broad, having very many fine iſlands in it. It is remarkable for the Gillaroe trout, a very delicate fiſh, which weighs from 12 to 18 pounds.

LOUGH CURRANE. See LOUGH LEE.

LOUGH DERG, a lake of Donegal, in Ulſter, from which the river Derg iſſues, which falls into Lough Foyle. In it is the iſland containing the little, narrow cell, called St. Patrick's Purgatory.

LOUGH DERG, a large lake in the Shannon, between Tipperary and Galway.

LOUGH DIAN, in Down, Ulſter.

LOUGH DIREVREAGH, in W. Meath, Leinſter.

LOUGH DORN, in Down, Ulſter.

LOUGH DRINE, in Cork, Munſter.

LOUGH ENNEL, in Weſt Meath, Leinſter, about 2 miles S. of Mullingar.

LOUGH ERIN, in Down, Ulſter, in the pariſh of Anahilt. It is ſo deep, in ſome places, that a line of 16 fathoms has proved inſufficient to ſound it. It is remarkable for breeding pike, trout, and eels of a very large ſize.

LOUGH ERNE, in Fermanagh, Ulſter, is divided into the Upper and Lower Lakes. See ERNE, LOUGH.

LOUGH ESK, in Down, Ulſter, produces plenty of char fiſh.

LOUGH FALCON, in Down, Ulſter.

LOUGH FOYLE, in Derry, Ulſter. Before the mouth of this lake, or gulf, is a great ſand, called the Touns, which, however, does not obſtruct the navigation, as there are at all times 14 or 15 fathoms water in the channel, which is broad as well as deep; and in that arm whereon Londonderry ſtands there are 10 or 12, ſo that it is eſteemed as good and commodious a harbour as any in the kingdom.

LOUGHS GARA and GILL, in Sligo, Connaught.

LOUGH GILL, in Antrim, Ulſter.

LOUGH GLEN, in Donegal, Ulſter, about 22 miles WNW. of Londonderry.

LOUGH GUIR, in Limerick, Munſter.

LOUGH GULE, in Antrim, Ulſter.

LOUGH HANCH, in Queen's County, Leinſter.

LOUGH HENNEY, in Down, Ulſter.

LOUGH HINE, in Cork, Munſter. It is about 2 miles in circumference, and abounds with ſalmon, white trout, lobſters, crabs, eſcalops, and ſmall deep oyſters.

LOUGH HOYLE, in W. Meath, Leinſter, about 2 miles NW. of Mullingar.

LOUGH INCHIQUIN, in Clare, Munſter, affords delicious fiſh and fine views.

LOUGH INNY, in W. Meath, Leinſter.

LOUGH IRON, in W. Meath, Leinſter, about 5 miles NW. of Mullingar.

LOUGH KAY, in Leitrim, Connaught. It is a beautiful piece of water, interſperſed with iſlands, ſome of which exhibit old caſtles and ruins; ſome lofty timber-trees; and ſome, highly improved, a perpetual verdure, without a ſingle tree.

LOUGH KERNAN, in Down, Ulſter.

LOUGH KEY, in Roſcommon, Connaught, about 6 miles NW. of Carrick.

LOUGH LANE, in W. Meath, Leinſter.

LOUGH LEAN. See KILLARNEY.

LOUGH LEE, or LOUGH CURRANE, in Cork, Munſter, near the Bay of Ballinaſkeligs. It is of an oval form, about 3 miles in length, and half as broad; contains 3 ſmall iſlands, and abounds with excellent white trout and ſalmon.

LOUGH LEIGHS, or HEALING LOUGH, in Cavan, Ulſter.

Loughlin, in Roſcommon, Connaught.

LOUGH LOUGHAIL, in Weſt Meath, Leinſter. It is about 3 miles long and 1 broad, having in it 5 ſmall iſlands, which are planted with trees, and pretty well cultivated.

LOUGH MACKNEAN, in Fermanagh, Ulſter. It communicates with the E. part of Lough Earne.

LOUGH MACHAN, in Down, Ulſter. It is in the barony of Kinelearty, covers about 23 acres, and is ſtored with pike, eels, roach, and bream.

LOUGH MASK, in Mayo, Connaught.

LOUGH MORE, in Limerick, Munſter.

LOUGH NEAGH, ſituated in or between the counties of Armagh, Down, Derry, and Antrim, in Ulſter. It is the largeſt lake in Europe, thoſe of Ladoga and Onega in Ruſſia, and that of Geneva in Switſerland excepted, being about 20 miles long and 15 broad. The area of it is computed to be 100,000 acres. It is remarkable for it's healing virtue in ſcrofulous caſes, by bathing; and, for it's petrifying quality, which is not only found in the water, but in the adjacent ſoil at a conſiderable depth.

LOUGH PALLIS, in King's County, Leinſter, about 12 miles WNW. of Portarlington.

LOUGH RAMOR, in Cavan, Ulſter. It is near Virginia, about 40 miles from Dublin, and contains ſeveral iſlands, on which there are ſome ruins of caſtles.

*LOUGHREA, a town of Galway, in Connaught. It is ſeated near a beautiful lake of the ſame name, which is more than a mile in length, and one in breadth, 10 miles SW. of Galway, and 86 W. of Dublin.

LOUGH REE, between the counties of Longford and W. Meath, in Leinſter, and Roſcommon, in Connaught, is a handſome, ſpacious lake, formed by the Shannon, and contains ſeveral ſmall iſlands.

Loughbrigg, Weſtmorl. near Rydal, to which it is joined by a bridge, making one village with it.

LOUGH SALT, in Donegal, Ulſter, between Kilmacrenan and Glenn Inn, on the top of a lofty mountain.

LOUGH SCUDY, in W. Meath, Leinſter.

LOUGH SHARK, in Down, Ulſter, covers about 80 acres.

LOUGH SHELLIN, in W. Meath, Leinſter, within a mile of Daly's Bridge. It contains ſome ſmall iſlands, and is of conſiderable magnitude, extending to Finae, where it communicates with Lough Inny. Between the loughs is a bridge, which joins the counties of Weſt Meath and Cavan.

LOUGH SHY, in Mayo, Connaught.

LOUGH STRANGFORD, in Down, Ulſter, takes it's preſent name from a ſmall port town, called Strangford, ſeated on the W. ſide of the narrow entrance from the ſea. It was formerly known by the name of Lough Cone, or Lough Coyne. It is a deep bay, or inlet of the ſea, about 17 miles long and 4 or 5 broad, and abounds with excellent fiſh, particularly ſmelts; and, off the bar, there is a periodical odical herring fiſhery in autumn. It contains 54 iſlands, ſmall and great, known by particular names, and there are many others which are nameleſs. Four of them are called Swan Iſlands, from the number of ſwans which frequent them. The great and profitable manufacture carried on in theſe iſlands, is the burning of ſea-weed into kelp.

LOUGA SWILLY, in Louth, Leinſter.

Loughton, Bucks, between Fenny and Stony Stratford. Loughton, Eſſex, 10 miles from London. Loughton, Linc. W. of Kirton, in Lindſey. Loughton, Linc. E. of Sleaford. Loughton, Devonſhire, near Plympton. Lowick Bridge, Cumb. near Coinſton Water. Lovington, Hants, near Alresford. Lovington, Somerſ. between Bruton and Somerton.

LOUISA, at firſt called DEGERLEY, a ſea-port of Nyland, built in 1745, as a frontier town towards Ruſſia. The houſes are all of wood, two ſtories high, and painted red. It is ſituated on a bay on the N. coaſt of the Gulf of Finland, and defended towards the ſea by a ſmall fortreſs.

LOUISBURGH, a town of N. America, capital of the Iſland of Cape Breton, ſubject to the Engliſh. It has an excellent harbour, about 6 miles in length, from NE. to SW. and more than half a mile in breadth, from NW. to SE. It's entrance is not above 1800 feet wide, and is formed by 2 ſmall iſlands. In the NE. part is a fine, careening wharf, to heave down, very ſecure from all winds. On the oppoſite ſide are the fiſhing ſtages, with room for 2000 boats to cure their fiſh; the cod being remarkably plentiful here, and, at the ſame time, better than any about Newfoundland. The fiſhery may, in general, be continued from April to the cloſe of December, when the harbour becomes impracticable, being entirely frozen, ſo as to be walked over. The town is about half an Engliſh mile in length, and 2 in circuit, built, for the moſt part, of ſtone houſes, and laid out in broad and regular ſtreets. At a little diſtance from the fort, or citadel, is a large parade, the inſide of which is a fine ſquare, near 200 feet every way. This iſland was taken by Admiral Boſcawen and Lieutenant-general Amherſt, June 27, 1758, and it's fortifications ſince demoliſhed. Lat. 45. 54. N. lon. 59. 48. W.

LOUISIANA, a large country of North America, ſituated on both ſides of the Miſſiſſippi, and bounded on the E. by Florida and the United States; on the S. by the Gulf of Mexico; on the W. by New Mexico; and on the N. by Indian Nations. It is agreeably ſituated between the extremes of heat and cold; it's climate varying as it extends towards the N. The ſouthern parts, lying within the reach of the refreſhing breezes from the ſea, are not ſcorched like thoſe under the ſame latitude in Africa; and it's northern regions are colder than thoſe in Europe under the ſame parallels, with a wholeſome, ſerene air. From the favourableneſs of the climate, two annual crops of Indian corn, as well as rice, may be produced; and the ſoil, with little cultivation, would furniſh grain of every kind in the greateſt abundance. The timber is as fine as any in the world; and the quantities of live oak, aſh, mulberry, walnut, cherry, cypreſs, and cedar, are aſtoniſhing. The neighbourhood of the Miſſiſſippi, beſides, furniſhes the richeſt fruits in great variety; the ſoil is particularly adapted for hemp, flax, and tobacco; and indigo is at this time a ſtaple commodity, which commonly yields the planter three or four cuttings a year. Whatever is rich and rare in the moſt deſirable climates in Europe ſeems to be the ſpontaneous production of this delightful country. It is interſected by a number of fine rivers, among which are the Natchitoches, and the Adayes, or Mexicano. In 1763, Louiſiana was ceded to Spain.

LOUISVILLE, a town of N. America, in the ſtate of Kentucky, and county of Jefferſon. It is ſeated on the river Ohio, oppoſite Clarkſville, at the Falls, in a fertile country, and promiſes to be a place of great trade; but it's unhealthineſs, owing to ſtagnated waters at the back of the town, has hitherto retarded it's growth. It is 80 miles SW. of Lexington. Lat. 38. 3. N. lon. 86. 30. W.

Lound, Eaſt, Linc. in Axholm Iſle. Lound Hall, Nott. N. of Retford, on the river Idle.

LOUNG, LOCH, an arm of the ſea, in Argyleſhire, about 15 miles long and 1 wide, between Loch Fyne and Loch Lomond. Near it's NE. extremity is the dark, wild, and romantic Vale of Glencroy.

Lourbottle, Northumberl. S. of Whittingham.

LOURDE, a town in the dept. of Upper Pyrenees, with an ancient caſtle, ſeated on a rock, 10 miles from Baigneres.

LOUTH, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinſter, about 22 miles in length, and from 9 to 14 in breadth; bounded on the W. by Monaghan and Meath; on the N. by Armagh and Carlingford Bay; on the E. by St. George's Channel; and on the S. by Meath, from which it is parted by the river Boyne. It is is the ſmalleſt county in the kingdom, but very fertile and pleaſant, and contains 61 pariſhes, 11,500 houſes, and about 57,750 inhabitants. It's chief towns are Dundalk, Garlingford, Drogheda, Ardee, and Dunleer.

LOUTH, a town of Ireland, in the county of the ſame name, 6 miles SW. of Dundalk.

*LOUTH, a large and conſiderable town of Lincolnſhire, containing many handſome houſes, and about 4000 inhabitants. It has a large church, with a fine ſteeple, thought by ſome to be as high as the ſpire at Grantham, which is 288 feet high. From hence there is a canal to the ſea, at Tilney, about 8 miles. It is ſituated on the river Lud, from which it takes it's name, 28 miles NE. of Lincoln, and 148 N. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

Louther ſtown, in Fermanagh, Ulſter.

LOUVAIN, or LOEVEN, a large city of the late Auſtrian Brabant, with a celebrated univerſity. The walls of this place are nearly 7 miles in circumference, but within them are a great many gardens and vineyards. The public buildings are magnificent, and the univerſity conſiſts of 60 ſmall colleges, much admired for their ſituation and architecture, but not ſumptuous. They formerly made large quantities of cloth here, inſomuch that this city contained, at one time, 150,000 clothiers; but at preſent their trade is greatly decayed, and the place is chiefly remarkable for it's good beer, with which it ſerves the neighbouring towns. In it's caſtle, built originally by the Emperor Arnulph, to defend the country againſt the Normans, and called at firſt Loven and afterwards Cæſar's Caſtle, the emperor, Charles V. and his ſiſters were brought up to the year 1510; and formerly the aſſembly of the ſtates was held here. It is now in ruins. It is ſeated on the river Dyle, 12 miles NNE. of Bruſſels.

LOUVESTEIN, a fortreſs of S. Holland, ſituated on an iſland, called the Bommel Waert, formed by the junction of the rivers Waal and Maeſe, 6 miles SE. of Gorcum, and 16 E. of Dort. In this caſtle, the patriotic chiefs were impriſoned by Prince Maurice, whence that party has ever ſince been called the Louveſtein party. Their principles are ſtrongly republican, and, of courſe, in direct oppoſition to the ſtadtholder.

LOUVIERS, a handſome town in the dept. of Eure, with a conſiderable manufactory of fine cloths. It is ſeated in a fertile plain, on the river Eure, 10 miles N. of Evreux, and 55 NW. of Paris.

LOUVIGNY, a town in the dept. of the Ille and Vilaine, 24 miles E. of Dol.

LOUVIGNY EN BAIN, a town in the dept. of the Ille and Vilaine, 7 miles SW. of Vitre.

LOUVO, a conſiderable town in the kingdom of Siam, with a palace, where the king paſſes one part of the year. It is very populous, and is ſeated in a pleaſant plain, 50 miles N. of the city of Siam.

LOUVOIS, a town in the dept. of the Marne, 9 miles NE. of Epernay.

Lowbyer, Cumberl. near Kirkhaugh

Lowdham, Nottingh. between Nottingham and Southwell.

LOWDORE, a celebrated cataract in Cumberland, on the E ſide of the Lake of Derwent, in the Vale of Keſwick. It is formed by the ruſhing of the waters of Watanlath through an awful chaſm, made by the contiguity of two vaſt rocks; but entirely fails in a dry ſeaſon.

LOWENSTEIN, a town, capital of a county of Suabia, annexed as a fief to the duchy of Wirtemburg. It is 20 miles NE. of Stutgard.

Lowes Foreſt, Northumberland, in the SW. part of the county.

LOWES WATER, a lake of Cumberland, about a mile in length, and a quarter of a mile in breadth. It is a moſt romantic ſpot, the oppoſite ſhores being rivals in beauty of hanging woods, little groves, and waving incloſures, with farms ſeated in the ſweeteſt points of view. It is of no great depth, and without char but it abounds with pike and perch, and has ſome trout. It is near Dean, and about 6 miles S. of Cockermouth.

LOWESTOFF. See LESTOFF.

Low Green, Worceſ. near Lindridge

Lowick Chapel, Lancaſ. N. of Ulverſto

Lowick Chapel, Northumb. between Wooler and Berwick.

LOWICZ, a town of Rava, in Poland

Lowhworth, 7 miles NW. of Cambridge. Lowyln, Northumb. betwe Lowick and Berwick. Lownd, Linc. of Stamford. Lownd, Suff. near the coa between Yarmouth and Leſtoff. Lowsborough, Yorkſhire, N. of Market Wigton. Lowworthy, Devonſhire, near Hol worthy.

Lowran, in Carlow, Leinſter.

Lowther, Weſtmorl. on the river Lod 2 miles from Penrith. Not far from t river is a row of pyramidal ſtones, 8 or feet high, which extend about a mil Lowthorp, Yorkſ. near Kilham. Lo re, Lanc. near Leigh. Lowye, Northumberl. near Woller.

to

LOXA, or LOJA, a town of Granada, containing 3 parish churches and 4 convents. It has royal salt works and a copper forge, and is situated on the river Xenil, in a country producing abundance of fruits, legumes, olives, and saffron, 26 miles W. of Granada.

LOXA, or LOJA, a town capital of a jurisdiction of Quito, in S. America, containing 2 churches, a convent, a college, and an hospital. It's territory is famous for producing the quinquina tree, or bark, a well-known specific for intermitting fevers, and also for producing the trees which breed the cochineal, reckoned of equal goodness with that of Oaxaca, in Mexico; although the inhabitants breed no more than what they imagine will be sufficient for the dyers of that and the neighbouring jurisdiction of Cuença.

Loxbear, Devonf. NW. of Tiverton. Loxford, Essex, near Barking. Loxborn, Devonf. near Barnstaple. Loxley, Staff. near Needwood Forest. Loxley, Surry, SE. of Godalmin. Loxley, Warw. SE. of Stratford upon Avon. Loxwood, Chapel and Park, Suffex, on the borders of Surry, towards Awfold. Loynton, Staff. SW. of Eccleshall. Loyterton, Glouces. in Boxwell parish.

LOYTZ, a town of Swedish Pomerania, 14 miles S. of Stralsund.

LOZERE, a department of France, having the depts. of Cantal and Upper Loire to the N. and Gard to the S It includes the range of mountains from which it takes it's name. Mende is the capital.

LUBAN, a town of Novogrodeck, in Lithuania.

LUBANSKEN SEA, or, the LAKE OF LUBAN, a lake in Livonia, toward the confines of Courland and Lithuania. It abounds with excellent fish.

LUBBECKE, or LUTHICKE, a town of Minden, in Westphalia, with some trade in yarn and linen; also in the breeding of cattle and brewing beer.

LUBBEN, a town and small circle of Lusatia, situated on the river Spree, 56 miles N. of Dresden. It contains four churches, with a noble hospital, and a land-house, or house where the diets assemble.

Lubbenham, Leices. near Harborough.

LUBECK, a celebrated sea-port of Holstein, in Lower Saxony. It is a free, imperial city, and was long the head of the famous Hanseatic League, which was formed here in 1264. It was likewise the most commercial city and powerful republic of the north. It's fleet set the northern powers at defiance, and rode triumphant in the Baltic. But Lubec retains scarcely a shadow of it's former power. It's trade, however, is still considerable, but will probably be still farther diminished, if the Canal of Kiel should answer the purpose for which it was planned; for, by that means, great part of the merchandise, which now passes through this town, will be conveyed along that canal, down the Eyder, to Tonningen, and thence by sea, and up the Elbe to Hamburg. The houses of Lubeck are built all of stone, in a very ancient style of architecture; the doors being so large as to admit carriages into the hall, which frequently serves for a coach house. The walls of many houses bear the date of the 15th century, and, at that period, no doubt, the town was esteemed very beautiful. The streets are, for the most part, steep, as the city stands on the two sides of a large hill, the eastern part extending towards the Wackenitz, as the western does towards the Trave.—Here are 4 parochial churches, besides the cathedral. The town-house is a superb structure, and has several towers. In it is a large hall, called Haanseſaal, where the deputies of the Hanse Towns used formerly to meet. Here is also a fine exchange, built in the year 1683. The inhabitants are all Lutherans, and there are 21 preachers, whose chief has the title of Superintendant. Here were formerly 4 convents; and in that of St. John there are still 22 Protestant girls, under the government of an abbess. That of St. Mary Magdalen is turned into an hospital; that of St. Anne is made a house of correction; and of the monastery of St. Catharine, they have made a handsome college. In the great hospital, there is always a considerable number of poor men and women. Besidē this, there are 14 other hospitals, 1 for lunatics, a pest-house, and 4 others for sick persons. Lubec is seated at the confluence of the rivers Trave, (which is the largest), the Steckenitz, another navigable stream, by which it communicates with the Elbe; and the Wackenitz, which issues from the Lake of Ratzeburg, and, after joining the Sewartau, falls into the Baltic, by means of which several streams, long and flat-bottomed vessels pass from the Baltic into the German Ocean, 14 miles SW. of the Baltic, and 40 NE. of Hamburg. Lat 53. 52. N. lon. 10. 44. E.

LUBECK, THE BISHOPRICK OF, a small territory in that part of the duchy of Holstein, which was anciently called Wagria. The bishop, who is always of the houſe of Holſtein, is a prince of the empire, yet, in the college of princes, he ſits neither on the ſpiritual nor temporal bench, but on a particular one, placed croſswiſe, and laid there purpoſely for him and the biſhop of Oſnaburg, when a Lutheran. The chapter conſiſts of 30 perſons, who are all Lutherans, 4 Roman Catholics excepted. The cathedral ſtands in Lubec, where, however, it has no authority.

LUBEC, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, near Madura. Lat. 5. 50. S. lon. 112. 22. E.

LUBEN, a town of Lignitz, in Sileſia.

LUBLIN, a city of Poland, capital of a palatinate of the ſame name, part of which is annexed to the new kingdom of Galicia. It contains ſeveral churches and convents, has three annual fairs, which laſt a month each, and are frequented by great numbers of German, Greek, Armenian, Turkiſh, Ruſſian, Jewiſh, and even Arabian merchants, and is ſituated in a very pleaſant and fertile country, on the little river Byſtranza, with a caſtle built on a high rock, 85 miles SE. of Warſaw.

LUBOMLA, a town of Chelm, in Poland.

LUC, a town in the dept. of the Var; a town in the dept. of the Lower Pyrenees, 12 miles W. of Pau; a town in the dept. of Lozere; and a town in the dept. of the Drome. Alſo a town of Leuchtenberg, in Bavaria, ſituated on the Nab, 12 miles NNE. of Amberg.

Lucan, a pleaſant village on the river Liffey, 6 miles from Dublin. It is noted for a medical ſpring.

LUCANS, a town and fertile juriſdiction, abounding in ſilver mines, of Guamanga, in Peru, ſituated not far from the ſource of the river Apurinac. The juriſdiction begins about 80 miles SW. of Guamanga.

LUCAR DE BAREMEDA, ST. a town in Andaluſia. It has a fine harbour, well defended, and is ſeated at the mouth of the river Guadalquiver, 44 miles S. by W. of Seville, and 270 S. by W. of Madrid.

LUCAR DE GUADIANA, a town of Andaluſia, with a ſmall harbour ſeated on the river Guadiana, 12 miles N. of Ayamonte.

LUCAYA ISLANDS. See BAHAMA.

LUCCA, a town of Italy, capital of a republic of the ſame name. It is about 3 Italian miles in circumference, and fortified with 11 baſtions. The inhabitants, who are above 40,000, are conſiderable manufacturers of ſilk, and gold and ſilver ſtuffs; for this reaſon it is called Lucca the Induſtrious. They oblige all travellers who have arms to leave them at the city gate, and will not ſuffer any one to wear a ſword within it. The ſtate palace is a large building, and includes the arſenal, which has arms for 20,000 men. The houſes are handſome, and the ſtreets broad and well paved, but moſt of them are irregular. It is ſeated in the middle of a fruitful plain, terminating in pleaſant eminences, near the river Serchio, 10 miles NNE. of Piſa, 37 W. of Florence, and 155 N. by W. of Rome. Lat. 43. 50. N. long. 10. 35. E.

LUCCA, THE REPUBLIC OF, a ſmall territory of Italy, lying on the Tuſcan Sea; about 24 miles in length, and from 10 to 20 in breadth. The ſoil does not produce much corn; but there is plenty of wine, oil, ſilk, wool, and cheſnuts. Their oil, in particular, is in high eſteem, but the poorer people receive part of their ſupport from cheſnuts, lupins, and French beans. The induſtry of the people, in improving to the beſt advantage every ſpot of their ground, is equally ſurpriſing and commendable. This republic is under the protection of the emperor. The regency conſiſts of a gonfalonier, aſſiſted by a council of 9 members; all of theſe, however, are changed every two months, and are choſen out of the great council. This is compoſed of 240 nobles, of whom one half forms what are called the ordinary counſellors, and the others the extraordinary. Both are changed once in two years, by a new election. The gonfalonier, and nine regent counſellors, whilſt in the adminiſtration, live in the ſtate palace, and at the public expence. The republic maintains a regular body of 500 men, and 70 Swiſs, as a guard for the regency. The number of inhabitants in the city, and the 150 villages belonging to it, is computed at upwards of 120,000. The revenues amount to about 30,000l. per annum.

LUCE, a great bay of Wigtonſhire, lying to the E. of the Mull of Galloway.

LUCENA, a town of Cordova; and a town of Valencia, 18 miles NE. of Segorva; both in Spain.

LUCENA, a town of Capitanata, in Naples, with a manufacture of cloth. It is 60 miles NE. of Naples.

LUCERN, one of the 13 cantons of Swiſſerland, and the moſt conſiderable of them, except Zurich and Bern. It is bounded on the E. and SE. by the cantons of Zug, Schewitz, and Underwalden; and on all the other ſides by the canton of Bern. The inhabitants, who are Romaniſts, are under the ſpiritual juriſdiction of the biſhop ſhop of Conſtance. It is about 30 miles in length, and 20 in it's mean breadth. The ſoil is fertile, but unequal; the ſouthern parts are mountainous, but without glaciers, and there is a very conſiderable exportation of cheeſe. The ſovereign power of this republic reſides in the council of 100, comprifing the ſenate, or little council. The former is the nominal ſovereign; but the power reſides in the latter, conſiſting of 36 perſons, who are formed into two diviſions, which exerciſe the office by rotation. Although the government appears purely ariſtocratic, yet this ariſtocracy is reſtrained in divers reſpects; as in the matter of making war or peace, concluding new alliances, acquiring new territories, or impoſing new taxes, the conſent of all the citizens muſt be obtained. The chiefs of all the republic are two magiſtrates, called advoyers.

LUCERN, a very ancient and tolerably well built town, the capital of the canton of Lucern, in Swiſſerland. It is divided into two parts by one of the branches of the river Reuſs, which falls into the lake, on which the town is ſituated. The ſtreets are clean, the grand church is very handſome, and the arſenal is well furniſhed with new cannon; but the town ſcarcely contains 3000 inhabitants, has no manufactures of conſequence, and little commerce; and there are few places where learning meets with leſs encouragement, and, conſequently, is less cultivated.—The bridges, which ſkirt the town, round the edge of the lake, are the faſhionable walk of the place, and remarkable for their length. Being covered at the top, and open at the ſides, they afford a conſtant view of the beautiful and romantic country. They are decorated with coarſe paintings, repreſenting the Hiſtories of the Hebrews, the Battles of the Swiſs, and the Dance of Death. Lucern is ſituated on the Waldſtaetter See, or Lake of Lucern, where the Reuſs iſſues from it, 30 miles SW. of Zurich, and 35 E. of Bern. Lat. 47. 5. N. lon. 8. 6. E.

LUCERN, LAKE OF. See WALDSTAETTER SEE.

LUCERNA, a town of the Four Valleys, in Piedmont, to one of which it gives name. It is 5 miles SW. of Pignerola.

LUCIA, ST. or ALOUSIE, an iſland of the W. Indies, about 22 miles in length and 15 in breadth, affording amongſt other tropical productions, plenty of cocoa and fuſtic. It is very healthy, and exhibits a variety of hills, yet partly conſiſts of very fertile plains, finely watered with rivulets, and furniſhed with timber, fit for building houſes and windmills, and often employed for that purpoſe by both the French and Engliſh planters. It is provided with ſeveral good bays and commodious harbours, the chief of which, called the Little Carnage, is reckoned the beſt in all the Caribbee Iſlands. In it are two remarkably round and high mountains, ſaid to be volcanos, by which this iſland may be known at a conſiderable diſtance. It was long conſidered as neutral, by the Engliſh and French, till it was ceded to France by the peace of 1763. In 1777, it was taken by the Engliſh, but reſtored to the French by the peace of 1783. It has been again taken by the Engliſh in the preſent war, (by Sir Charles Grey and Sir John Jervis, in 1794,) and ſtill remains in their poſſeſſion. It is about 70 miles NNW. of Barbadoes, and 38 S. of Martinico. Lat. 13. 25. N. lon. 60. 58. W.

LUCIA, St. one of the ſmaller Cape de Verd Iſlands, about 24 miles in length, with a commodious harbour on the E. ſide, formed by two ſmall iſlands, and affording good ſhelter and anchorage. The iſland is high and mountainous. Lat. 17. 18. N. lon. 24. 8. W.

LUCIGNANO, a town of Tuſcany.

Luckford, Dorſetſ. W. of Holme, by the river Luckford, which empties itſelf into the Frome, and forms the W. boundaries of Purbec Iſle. Luckham, Devonſ. in Uffculumb pariſh. Luckington, Wilts, SW. of Malmſbury. Lucknor, Northumb. W. of Sunderland.

LUCKNOW, an ancient city of Hindooſtan, capital of Oude. It is an extenſive place, but poorly built: the houſes are chiefly of mud, covered with thatch; and many conſiſt entirely of mats and bamboos; and are thatched with leaves of the cocoa-nut, palm-tree, and ſometimes with ſtraw. The houſes of the merchants are of brick, lofty, and ſtrong, and there are ſome, but not many, magnificent edifices, Sujah Dowlah having deſtroyed moſt of the ancient palaces, when he erected others. The others are moſtly built on eminences, here and there, whence the inequality of the ground makes it troubleſome to walk, continually aſcending or deſcending. The ſtreets, moreover, are crooked, narrow, and ſtinking, every kind of filth being thrown into them, and no care taken to keep them clean. In the dry ſeaſon, the duſt and heat are almoſt intolerable; in the rainy ſeaſon, the mire is ſo deep as to be ſcarcely paſſable; and there is a great number of elephants belonging to the nabob and the great men of his court, which are continually paſſing the ſtreets, either to the palace or to the river, to the great danger and annoyance of the foot paſſengers and ſhopkeepers. The palace of the nabob is ſeated on a high bank near the Goomty, and commands an extenſive view both of that river and the country on the eaſtern ſide. Lucknow is 650 miles NW. of Calcutta. Lat. 26. 35. N. lon. 81. 25. E.

LUCKO, a town of Volhynia, in Poland, 176 miles SE. of Warſaw.

Luckcme, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

LUCKOR, Glamorganſ. an ancient borough, on the river Luckor, which is navigable here for veſſels of 200 tons burden, and over which it has a ferry. It is 7 miles W. by N. of Swanſea.

Luckor, a river of Glamorganſhire, which paſſes by Llanetty or Llanelly, Luckor, &c. and empties itſelf into the Briſtol Channel at the Worms Head.

Luckton, Heref. near Croft Caſtle.

LUCO, a town of Abruzzo Ultra.

Lucomb, Dorſetſ. 2 miles N. of Weſt Chelburgh.

LUÇON, or LUZON, a town in the dept. of Vendee, ſeated in an unwholeſome moraſs, on a canal, about 6 miles long, which communicates with the ſea, 17 miles N. of Rochelle.

LUCONIA, or MANILLA, the chief of the Philippine Iſlands, in Aſia, about 400 miles in length and 100 in breadth. It is not ſo hot as might be expected, becauſe it is watered by a vaſt abundance of large and ſmall lakes, ſprings, rivulets, and great rivers, and by the periodical rains, which inundate all the plains. There are ſeveral volcanos in the mountains, which occaſion earthquakes; and a variety of hot baths. The produce of this very fertile and healthy iſland is wax, cotton, wild cinnamon, ſulphur, cocoa-nuts, rice, gold, which is found in every part; horſes, buffaloes, game, 40 different ſorts of palm-trees, and all ſorts of fruits, both of the E. and W. Indies, with ſome that are to be found no where elſe. The inhabitants are compoſed of ſeveral nations, beſides Spaniards, and they all produce a mixed breed, diſtinct from any of the reſt. The blacks have long hair and good features; and there is one tribe who tattoo themſelves, drawing curious figures on their bodies. To this iſland the Spaniards bring all ſorts of commodities; ſuch as ſilver from New Spain, Mexico, and Peru; diamonds from Golconda; ſilks, tea, Japan and China ware, and gold duſt, from China and Japan. The Spaniards ſend hence two large ſhips every year to Acapulco in Mexico, with merchandiſe, and return back with ſilver. There is an inquiſition here, but it does not affect the natives and the Mahometans. This iſland is divided into ſeveral provinces, moſtly under the juriſdiction of the Spaniards. The principal are Illocos, the richeſt and moſt populous, the coaſt of which extends upwards of 30 leagues; Balagan, which contains about 2500 tributary Indians; Camarinas, in which is the city of New Caceres, the ſee of a biſhop; Paracale, which contains about 7000 tributary Indians, and abounds in mines of gold and other metals, and of valuable loadſtones; and Cagayan, in which are about 9000 tributaries. Manilla is the capital.

Ludbrook, Devonſ. in the pariſhes of Ermington and Modbury. Ludburgh, Lincolnſ. W. of Saltfleet. Luddenham, Kent, two miles from Feverſham. Ludderton, Yorkſ. NW. of Saerborn. Luddeſton, Kent, SE. of Halſted. Luddington, Huntingd. NW. of the Giddings. Ludeington, Linc. in Axholm Iſle. Luddington, Northamptonſ. NE. of Thrapſton. Luddington, Warw. SW. of Stratford upon Avon. Luddington, Wilts. S. of Highworth. Luddington, Yorkſ. NW. of Halifax.

LUDER, a town of Fulda, circle of Upper Rhine.

Ludford, Heref. near Ludlow. Ludford, Linc. near Market Raiſin, where Roman coins have often been dug up.

LUDGERSHALL, a ſmall town in Wiltſhire, formerly the reſidence of ſeveral kings. It is ſeated near the Foreſt of Chute, in a delightful country, 15 miles N. of Saliſbury, and 64 S. by W. of London. Market diſuſed.

Ludgraves, Middl. near Hadley. Ludham, Norfolk, between Accle and Hickling. Ludley, Suſſex, W. of Pevenſey Marſh or Level.

*LUDLOW, a large, neat, flouriſhing and well-built town of Shropſhire, ſeated on the river Temd, near it's conflux with the Corve, in a pleaſant, fruitful, and populous country, 29 miles S. of Shrewſbury, and 138 NW. of London. Arthur prince of Wales, ſon of Henry VII. held a court, and died here; and here Henry VIII. eſtabliſhed the council of the Marches, whoſe lord lieutenant uſed to keep his court here, till they were diſuſed in the reign of William III. who appointed two lord lieutenants of N. and S. Wales. It is a great thoroughfare to Wales, and is much reſorted to by the Welch youth of both ſexes for education. Market on Monday.

Ludſham, Suſſex, near Marſhfield and Cuckfield.

Cuckfield. Ludſton, Shropſ. 5 miles from Bridgenorth. Ludwell, Herts, N. of Hitchin. Ludwell, Wilts, near Wardour Caſtle. Ludwick Hall, Herts, NE. of Hatfield. Ludworth, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Ludworth, E. of Durham. Luffencot, Devonſ. near Houlſworthy. Luffenhall, Herts, NE. of Stevenage. Luffenham, N. and S. Rutland, 4 miles from Uppingham. Lufield, part in Bucks, and part in Northamptonſh. in Stow pariſh. Luff-wick, Northamptonſ. NW. of Thrapſton. Lug, a river in Hereſ. which runs into the Wye near Hereford. Lug, a river which riſes in Radnorſhire, and running S. through Herefordſhire, Shropſhire, and Monmouthſhire, paſſes by Monmouth, and falls into the Severn at or near Chepſtow.

LUGANO, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of a bailiwick of the ſame name, which is the principal of the 4 tranſalpine bailiwicks, about 20 miles in length and 13 in breadth. It is built round a gentle curve on the NW. coaſt of the Lake of Lugano, and is the emporium of the greateſt part of the merchandiſe, which paſſes from Italy over St. Gothard or Bernardin. It contains about 8000 inhabitants. Moſt of the houſes are built of tufſtone. The bailiwick contains 106 towns and villages, and about 53,000 inhabitants, who are all Romaniſts. The ſoil is fertile in paſture, corn, fruit, and ſilk, and olives are produced in great abundance. It is governed by a bailiff, ſent every 2 years by each canton in it's turn. Lugano is 17 miles NW. of Como. Lat. 45. 54. N. lon. 8. 48. E.

LUGANO, a lake of Swiſſerland, on the Italian ſide of the Alps, and in nearly the centre of the bailiwick of Lugano. It is about 20 miles in length, and from 2 to 4 in breadth; it's form very irregular, bending into continual ſinuoſities. It is about 190 feet perpendicular higher than the Lakes of Como and Locarno.

Lugban, Cornw. near Mount's Bay. Lughan, or Luggan, Cornw. among hills, N. of Redruth.

LUGO, a city of Galicia, chiefly celebrated for it's warm medicinal ſprings. It contains 3 pariſh churches, 4 convents, 2 hoſpitals, and a ſeminary, and is ſituated on the river Minho, 40 miles N. of Orenſe.

Lugwardine, near Hereford. Luke's, St. Suſſex, NW. of Midhurſt.

LULA, a ſea-port of W. Bothnia, ſituated at the NW. extremity of the Gulf of Bothnia, on a river of the ſame name, with a good harbour, 110 miles ENE. of Umea. Lat. 65. 36. N.

Luland Iſle, Cornw. at the mouth of Padſtow Haven. Lulleſley, Worceſ. 2 miles E. of Sukeley. Lullington, Kent, on the Derwent. Lullington, Derbyſ. SW. of Greſley Caſtle. Lullington, Somerſ. near Philip's Norton. Lully, Herts, SW. of Hitchin. Lulſey, SW. of Worceſter. Lulworth, E. and W. Dorſetſ. between Weymouth and Corfe Caſtle, The church of E. Lulworth, the whole of which is very ancient, has a tower of an uncommon form, reaching from the baſe to the top, like a cone. Lulworth St. Andrews, Dorſetſ. a mile SE. of Lulworth. Lulworth Cove, Dorſetſ. is 1380 feet in diameter, and 21 feet in depth at law water, and will admit veſſels of 80 tons burden. Lumley Caſtle and Park, Durham, on the Wear, oppoſite to Cheſter-le-Street.

LUNCARTY, a town of Perthſhire, about 5 miles N. of Perth. It is noted, at preſent, for one of the moſt extenſive bleaching grounds in Scotland, and is ſignaliſed in Scottiſh hiſtory, for being the place where, in the year 970, the gallant Hay turned the tide of conqueſt in favour of his countrymen, the Scots, in a victory obtained over the Danes.

Lund, Yorkſhire, NW. of Beverley. Lund, Yorkſ. N. of New Malton.

LUND, a town, the capital of Scania, and the ſee of an archbiſhop. It is accounted the moſt ancient in Sweden, according to an old proverb, that when our Saviour, Jeſus Chriſt, was born, Lund was in it's glory. Here is a univerſity, founded by Charles XI. for 21 profeſſors, and furniſhed with a good library. The number of ſtudents is about 300, and of other inhabitants about 800, who have but little trade. Here likewiſe a Royal Phyſiographical Society was inſtituted in 1776, and incorporated by the king in 1778. The ſubjects treated of in it's Acts relate only to natural hiſtory, chemiſtry, and agriculture. The cathedral is an ancient, irregular building. It is 20 miles SSE. of Landſcrona, and 225 SW. of Stockholm. Lat. 55. 33. N. lon. 13. 26. E.

LUNDEN, a town of Daniſh Holſtein, ſeated near the river Eyder, 24 miles W. of Renſburg, and 57 NNW. of Hamburgh.

LUNDY, an iſland in the mouth of the Briſtol Channel, near the middle, between Devonſ. and Pembrokeſ. It is about 5 miles long and 2 broad, and encompaſſed with inacceſſible rocks, ſo that it has but one entrance, and there ſcarcely two perſons ſons can go abreaſt. In the N. part of it is a high, pyramidical rock, called the Conſtable. Here are horſes, kine, hogs, and goats, with great ſtore of ſheep and rabbits; but the chief commodity is fowl, with which it abounds much, their eggs being very thick upon the ground, at their ſeaſon of breeding. It had once a fort and a chapel; at preſent, the only inhabitants are a man and his family.

Lune, a river of Weſtmorland and Durham, which runs into the Tees below Longton, about 6 miles above Barnard Caſtle. Lune; ſee Lon. Lune Foreſt, Yorkſ. near Richmond.

LUNEBURG, a town of Natangen, in Pruſſia.

LUNEL, a town in the dept. of Gard, producing excellent muſcadine wine. It is 16 miles E. of Montpellier.

LUNEN, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia, ſituated at the confluence of the rivers Zeſick and Lippe, 20 miles SSW. of Munich.

LUNENBURG, a duchy in the circle of Lower Saxony, which, including Zell, is ſeparated from Holſtein and Lawenburg on the N. by the river Elbe; and is bounded on the E. by the duchies of Brunſwick and Mecklenburgh. It is about 100 miles in length and 70 in breadth. It is watered by the rivers Aller, Elbe, Ilmenau, Jetze, the Old Mark, the Lahe, the Seeve, and other rivers; and part of it is full of heaths and foreſts; but, near the rivers, pretty fertile. It abounds with wild boars, which the German nobility come to hunt here for their diverſion, at certain ſeaſons. It is ſubject to the elector of Hanover. Lunenburg is the capital.

LUNENBURG, a large, fortified town of Germany, containing about 1300 houſes and 9000 inhabitants. The chief public edifices are 3 pariſh churches, the ducal palace, 3 hoſpitals, the town houſe, the ſalt magazine, formerly a church belonging to the abbey of Heiligenthal, the anatomical theatre, and the academy. The Sulze conſtitutes a diſtinct part of the town, is walled in, and has a ſeparate magiſtracy. It conſiſts of ſmall houſes, built deep in the ground, with four large, leaden pans in each, which are new caſt every month, and wherein the ſalt is daily boiled. Every ſalt houſe is eſtimated at 40,000 rix dollars, ſo that the capital of the whole Sulze greatly exceeds the ſum of two millions of rix dollars. Of theſe ſalt-works, one-fifth part is the ſovereign's due. The ſalt trade, however, is much reduced ſince the commencement of the laſt century, yet it ſtill chiefly employs the inhabitants. Lunenburg is ſeated on the river Ilmenau, 36 miles SE. of Hamburg. Lat. 53. 16. N. lon. 10. 31. E.

LUNENBURG, a town of Virginia, 50 miles SW. of Richmond; a county of Virginia; a town of New York; and a town of Acadia, in Nova Scotia, ſituated on the SE. coaſt, 40 miles SW. of Halifax.

LUNERA, a mountain of Italy, between Naples and Puzzoli. It contains a great deal of ſulphur and alum, and the ſprings that riſe from it are accounted excellent for curing various wounds.

LUNEVILLE, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, ſeated in a marſhy country, which has been drained, on the river Meurthe, near it's confluence with the Veſouze, 12 miles SE. of Nanci. In the 6th century, it was a county of itſelf, but in the 12th it was united to Lorrain. It's magnificent caſtle, where the dukes of Lorrain formerly kept their court, as did afterwards King Staniſlaus, is now converted into barracks. Staniſlaus founded here a military ſchool, a large library, and a fine hoſpital.

Lungdridge, Northumb. near Tweedmouth. Lungford, Hants, S. of Winchester.

LUNGRO, a town of Calabria Citra, chiefly inhabited by Greeks. It is 10 miles SSW. of Caſſano.

LUNGSARP, a town of W. Gothland, 57 miles from Gotheborg.

LUNGSUND, a town of Wermeland, in Sweden, 25 miles NE. of Carlſtadt.

LUNTENBURG, a town of Brunn, in Moravia, 36 miles SE. of Brunn. It was taken and burnt by the Pruſſian army, in 1742.

Luntley, Heref. S. of Pembridge. Lunton, Yorkſ. on the Tees, NW. of Rumbaldkirk.

LUNTZ, a town in the archduchy of Auſtria.

LUNZENAU, a town of Schonburg, Upper Saxony.

LUPANNA, an iſland in the Adriatic, ſituated near the territory of Raguſa, with a good and ſafe harbour. The ſoil is ſtony, but rendered fertile by the induſtry of the inhabitants, and the coaſts abound with fiſh.

LUPARA, a town of Moliſo, in Italy, 17 miles NE. of Moliſo.

LUPO GLAVO, a town of Iſtria.

Luppiat, Upper and Nether, Glouceſ. near Stroud. Luppit, or Lovepit, Devonſ on on the river that comes from Upper Ottery.

LUPPURG, a town of Neuburg, in Bavaria, 16 miles NW. of Ratiſbon.

Lupton, Devonſ. in Brixham pariſh. Luſton, Weſtmorl. near Kirby Lonſdale. Luroſtle, Northumberland, SW. of Alnwick.

LURCY, a town in the dept. of the Allier, 8 miles ENE. of Donjon.

LURCY LEVY, a town in the dept. of the Allier, 9 miles NNE. of Cerilly.

LURE, a town in the dept. of Upper Saone, chiefly remarkable for an abbey of Benedictines, converted, in 1764, into a chapter of noble canons. It is ſituated near the Ougnon, 30 miles NE. of Beſançon. Alſo a town in the dept. of the Allier, 18 miles NW. of Moulins.

*LURGAN, a town in Armagh, Ulſter, ſituated about two miles from Lough Neagh, of which it commands a beautiful and extenſive proſpect. The linen manufacture is carried on here very extenſively, and the country around it is much improved. It is 14 miles NE. of Armagh, and 67 N. of Dublin.

Lurganbuy, Leitrim, Connaught.

*LURGAN GREEN, a town in Louth, Leinſter, 37 miles N. of Dublin.

Lurgerſhall, Suſſex, near Blackdown Beacon.

LURI, a town of Corſica, 12 miles N. of Baſtia.

LURIN, a town of Peru, in the juriſdiction of Lima LURS, a town in the dept. of the Lower Alps, 17 miles SW. of Digne.

LURY, a town in the dept. of the Cher, ſituated on the river Arnon, 14 miles W. of Bourges.

LUS, a town in the dept. of the Upper Pyrenees, 3 miles SW. of Bareges.

LUS LA CROIX-HAUTE, a town in the dept. of the Drome, 15 miles ESE. of Die.

LUSATIA, a territory of Germany, about 80 miles long and 40 wide, bounded on the N. by the Mark of Brandenburg; on the E. by Sileſia; on the S. by Bohemia; and on the W. by Meiſſen. It is about 28 leagues long and 15 wide, and is divided into the Upper and Lower. Upper Luſatia abounds in mountains and hills, in which are found many boggy and mooriſh tracts. The latter, on the contrary, has a great number of fine woods; the very great heaths themſelves being provided with it, even to exuberance. In each of theſe marquiſates, rye, wheat, barley, and oats, are cultivated; as alſo much buckwheat, together with peas, lentils, beans, and millet. The culture of flax is pretty conſiderable, and they make ſome white and red wine. The inhabitants of Luſatia enjoy an important means of ſubſiſtence, in the numerous and good manufactures of linen and woollen ſtuffs. Theſe flouriſh principally in Upper Luſatia. The cloth manufactures are the oldeſt, having been in vogue, in ſeveral towns, ſo early as the 13th century. There are alſo good manufactures of hats, leather, paper, gun-powder, iron, glaſs, wax bleaching, black and fine dyings, &c. &c. The moſt ancient inhabitants of this country were the Semnones, or Senones, a Suabian nation, who inhabited Upper Luſatia, but by their cuſtom of wandering, gave place to the Wandalers; and theſe laſt again, by a like expedition, in the 7th century, to the Sorber Wends, a Sclavonian people. At preſent, the towns are almoſt wholly peopled with German inhabitants, but, in the villages, a greater number of Wendiſthan Germans is to be met with. The principal rivers are the Spree, the Black Elſter, and the Pulſnitz. Upper Luſatia formerly belonged to Bohemia. Lower Luſatia, which alone, till the 15th century, was called Luſatia, was erected into a marquiſate, in the year 931, by Henry I. king of Germany. In the middle of the 16th century, they were both ceded to the Elector of Saxony, in conſideration of a large ſum of money, which the elector had advanced to the emperor, in his war with the Bohemians, with the ſingle condition, that the kings of Bohemia ſhould retain the armorial bearings. The whole country is now divided between the King of Pruſſia and the Elector of Saxony.

Luſby, Linc. NW. of Spilſby. Luſhcomb, Devonſhire, in Rattery pariſh.

LUSIGNAN, a town in the dept. of Vienne, ſeated on the river Vonne, 12 miles SW. of Poitiers.

Luſk, in Dublin, Leinſter.

LUSITZ, or MUNCHBACH, a river of Erzeburg, in Upper Saxony, which paſſes through the town of Friburg.

LUSO, a river of Italy, which riſes in the duchy of Urbino, and croſſing part of Romagna, falls into the Adriatic, about 10 miles W. of Rimini.

LUSSAC, a town in the dept. of the Gironde, 6 miles ENE. of Libourne.

LUSSAC LES CHATEAUX, a town in the dept. of the Vienne, 18 miles SE. of Poitiers.

LUSSAC LE EGLISES, a town in the dept. of Upper Vienne, 33 miles N. of Limoges.

LUSSAN, a town in the dept. of the Gard, 9 miles N. of Uſez.

Luſſe, a village of Dumbartonſhire, in Scotland, ſituated on the W. ſide of Loch Lomond, 10 miles NNW. of Dumbarton.

LUSSINGE, a town in the duchy of Savoy, 3 miles WNW. of Bonne.

Luſtleigh, Devonſ. near the river Bovy, not far from Bovy Tracey.

LUSTENFELDEN, a town in the archduchy of Auſtria, 2 miles E. of Lintz.

Luſton, Herefordſhire, NW. of Leominſter. Luſton, Somerſetſhire, 2 miles from Yeovil.

LUTANGE, a town in the dept. of the Moſelle, 8 miles SE. of Thionville.

LUTAYA, one of the ſmaller Manilla Iſlands, ſituated near the Iſland of Panay.

LUTENBURG, or LUTTENBERG, a town of Stiria, ſituated on the river Stantz, 22 miles E. of Pettau, and 100 nearly S. of Vienna.

LUTENBERG OBER, a town of Stiria, 3 miles SSW. of Lutenberg.

Luthingland, Suffolk, by the Lake Luthing, near Leoſtoff.

LUTKENBURG, a town of Holſtein, ſituated near the Baltic, 30 miles N. of Lubeck.

LUTKEN DORTMUND, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia.

*LUTTON, a ſmall, dirty town, of Bedfordſhire, noted for it's manufacture of ſtraw hats. In it's church is a remarkable Gothic font, in form of a hexagon, open at the ſides, and terminating in elegant tabernacle work. It is pleaſantly ſeated among hills, on the river Lea, 20 miles S. of Bedford, and 31 N. by W. of London. A corn market on Monday.

LUTRI, a town of Swiſſerland, in the Pays de Vaud, ſituated on the N. coaſt of the Lake of Geneva, 2½ miles E. of Lauſanne.

LUTSCHINEN, a river of the bailiwick of Interlacken, and canton of Bern, in Swiſſerland, formed by the junction of two ſtreams, the one called the Weiſs Lutſchinen, flowing through the Valley of Lauterbrunnen, and the other called the Schwartz Lutſchinen, which comes from the Valley of Grindelwalde. After having left the fertile plains of Gifteig, and paſſed the village of Wilderſwyl, the breadth of the valley leſſens, and continues to grow ſo narrow, that the ſtream of the Lutſchinen can hardly force a paſſage. In a rainy ſeaſon, the river forms a torrent, which ruſhes impetuouſly through the great maſſes of rock, that obſtruct it's courſe, and, with inconceivable violence, forces from their beds the moſt enormous fragments. The road to Zwey Lutſchinen and Lauterbrunnen is over this river, by a kind of bridge, which, to a ſtranger to the country, preſents the moſt terrific appearance. It is ſuſpended over a roaring torrent, and fixed againſt the ſides of rocks; while a huge, vertical ſtone, raiſed in the middle of the river, ſupports ſome thick planks, ſo badly joined, as to be neither ſteady nor ſolid; and theſe form a wretched, inſecure bridge, over which the inhabitants of the country daily paſs, with a firm ſtep and undaunted eye; a paſſage, which the traveller, unaccuſtomed to ſuch ſtrange communications, would tremble to attempt.

LUTTER, a town of Brunſwick, in Lower Saxony, near which Chriſtian IV. king of Denmark, was defeated by the Imperialiſts, under Count Tilly, in the year 1626; it is 11 miles NW. of Goſſlar. Alſo a river of Weſtphalia, which runs into the Aa 2 miles S. of Hervorden; and a river of Lower Saxony, which runs into the Lachte 12 miles NE. of Zell.

LUTTERBURG, a town of Hanover, formerly a county, and long governed by it's own lords. It is 15 miles S. of Goſſlar.

LUTTERHAUSEN, a town of Holſtein, in Lower Saxony, 2 miles from Hamburgh.

LUTTERINGHAUSER, a town of Berg, in Weſtphalia, 2 miles NE. of Lennep.

*LUTTERWORTH, a town of Leiceſterſhire, containing about 360 houſes and 1620 inhabitants. It's rector, the famous reformer, John Wickliff, died and was buried here, in the year 1385: but his bones were taken out of his grave, and burnt, 40 years after, by order of the council of Conſtance. The pulpit, in which he preached, is ſtill preſerved in it's church. The Roman Watling-ſtreet runs on the W. ſide of the town. It is ſituated on the little river Swift, (into which the bones of Wickliff were thrown, after being burnt) in a fertile ſoil, and pleaſant, open country, 14 miles S. of Leiceſter, and 88 NNW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Lutton, Dorſetſ. in Steeple pariſh, Purbeck Iſle. Lutton, Northamptonſ. SE. of Oundle. Lutton, E. and W. Yorkſ. E. of Malton. Luttonbory, Lincolnſhire, near Holbeach.

Luttrell's Town, in Dublin, Leinſter, a romantic ſpot near Lucan.

LUTZELSTEIN, or PETITE PIERRE, a town in the dept. of the Lower Rhine, formerly the capital of a county, which comprehended comprehended a few villages, and ſubject to the elector palatine. It is ſituated on a mountain, defended by a caſtle, 24 miles NW. of Straſburg.

LUTZEN, a town of Merſburg, in Upper Saxony, 10 miles WSW. of Leipſic. Near this place, in the year 1632, was fought the famous battle between the Swedes and Imperialiſts, in which the former remained maſters of the field, but loſt their great king, Guſtavus Adolphus, in the very moment of victory. On the ſpot on which he was found dead, nothing but a bare ſtone has been erected, and which is ſtill to be ſeen there.

LUTZENSTEIN, a town in the dept. of Lower Rhine, ſeated on a mountain, with a caſtle, 30 miles NW. of Straſburg.

Luxborough, Somerſetſ. near Dunſter.

Luxborough, Eſſex, in Chigwell pariſh, near Woodford Bridge, is a ſuperb and elegant villa, built by Lord Luxborough, about 60 years ago.

LUXEMBURG, (anciently called LUCIS BURGUM, becauſe the ſun was adored here, as the moon was at Arlon, Jupiter at Carignan, and Mars at Marche-en-Famine) a city of the Netherlands, capital of a duchy of the ſame name. The city of Luxemburg is ſmall, but ſtrong, as well from it's ſituation as it's fortifications. Sigefroy I. count of Luxemburg, built a wall round it in the 10th century. In 1543, Luxemburg was taken and pillaged by the French, commanded by Charles, duke of Orleans, ſecond ſon of Francis I. but in the year 1544, Ferdinand de Gonſagne, retook it for Charles V. after 15 days ſiege. It was again beſieged by the duke of Guiſe, in 1559, but he was obliged to retire when the French were defeated at St. Quintin. In 1597, the marquis de Biron attempted to take it by a coup-de-main, it having only a ſmall garriſon, but meeting a very obſtinate reſiſtance from the citizens, he was obliged to abandon his enterpriſe. The city continued under the dominion of Spain till 1684, when the French, under the marechal de Crequy, came to aſſault it, after having bombarded it in December the preceding year; the trenches were opened the 8th of May, and on the 4th of June the city ſurrendered. It was ceded to the French by the treaty of Ratiſbon, concluded the ſame year, who very much extended the fortifications; but by the peace of Ryſwick, in 1697, it was reſtored to Spain. It was again taken by the French, in 1701, who ceded it, by the barrier treaty, to the States General; but in 1715, it was reſtored to the emperor. In the 16th century, when Philip II. eſtabliſhed ſo many new dioceſes in the Netherlands, it was in agitation to erect Luxemburg into a biſhopric, and to annex the abbey of Orval to it's revenues; but at the earneſt ſolicitation of the archbiſhop of Treves, whoſe ſpiritual juriſdiction extended over the city, and part of the province of Luxemburg, the deſign was laid aſide. The river Allitz runs through it, and divides it into the Upper and Lower Towns; the former almoſt ſurrounded with rocks, but the Lower ſeated on a plain. It is 25 miles SW. of Treves. Lat. 49. 37. N. lon. 6. 17. E.

LUXEMBURG, THE DUCHY OF, one of the 17 provinces of the Netherlands, lies in the centre of the Foreſt of Ardennes, W. of the electorate of Treves, and S. of the territories of Liege, Limburg, and Juliers. In ſome places it is covered with mountains and woods, but it is, in general, fertile in corn and wine, and has a good breed of cattle, and all ſorts of game; here are alſo a great number of iron mines and founderies for cannon, which laſt conſtitute it's greateſt riches. It is watered by many ſmall rivers, the principal of which are the Ourt, the Semois, the Laſs, and the Chiers, which diſcharge themſelves into the Meuſe, with ſeveral others which flow into the Moſelle. In the whole duchy, excluſive of the principal town (Luxemburg) are twenty-three other ſmaller ones. Charles IV. emperor of the Romans, raiſed the county of Luxemburg, in 1354, to a duchy, but dying without heirs, it came by his will to Wenzel, ſon to the emperor Charles IV. king of the Romans and Bohemia, who, by way of mortgage, ceded to the princeſs Elizabeth, daughter to his brother John, duke of Gorlitz, (who firſt married Anthony, duke of Burgundy, and afterwards John of Bavaria) this duchy, in lieu of a dowery of 120,000 Rheniſh florins, which he had promiſed to give her. In 1444, this princeſs ceded all her right in the duchy of Luxemburg to Philip, duke of Burgundy. By the peace of the Pyrenees, France obtained the diſtricts and towns of Thionville, Montmedy, Marville, Chevancy, Carignan, and Damvilliers; and, during the preſent war, the whole (with it's capital, which ſurrendered by capitulation, June 7, 1795) has ſubmitted to the French republic.

LUXEUIL, a town in the dept. of Upper Saone, remarkable for it's chalybeate ſprings and warm baths. A great number of urns, medals, and inſcriptions having been found here, it is ſuppoſed to have been a conſiderable place in the time of of the Romans. It was deſtroyed by Attila in 540. Near the town was a late celebrated abbey, founded by St. Columban, an Iriſhman. It is ſeated at the foot of the Voſges, 15 miles W. of Veſoul.

Luxford Lake, Dorſetſ. the arm of the ſea, which encompaſſes Pool. Luxton, Somerſetſhire, between Axbridge and Uphill. Luxulian, Cornwall, W. of Leſtwithiel.

LUZ, LA, a ſea-port town of the Iſland of Canary.

LUBA, a river of Ruſſia, which empties itſelf into the Dwina at Uſting.

LUZARCHES, a town in the dept. of the Seine and Oiſe, 15 miles N. of Paris.

LUZEBURG, a town in the circle of Weſtphalia, 2 miles NE. of Norden.

LUZECH, a town in the dept. of Lot, 8 miles WNW. of Cahors.

LUZERNE, a county of Pennſylvania, 80 miles long and 61 broad. In 1790, it contained 4904 inhabitants. Wilkeſborough is the capital.

LUZILLE, a town in the dept. of Indre, 9 miles S. of Amboiſe.

LUZY, a town in the dept. of Nievre, 17 miles SW. of Autun.

LUZZANA, a town in the duchy of Mantua, 22 miles S. of Mantua.

LUZZARA, a town of Mantua, ſituated near the confluence of the rivers Po and Croſtolo, 16 miles S. of Mantua. It is remarkable for a long and bloody battle fought here, in 1702, between the Imperialiſts, under Prince Eugene, and the French and Spaniards, commanded by the Duke of Anjou. Both ſides claimed the victory.

LUZZI, a town of Calabria Citra. It is ſituated near the river Crate, 3 miles S. of Biſignano.

LYBD. See LIDD.

Lyddam, Shropſ. N. of Biſhop's Caſtle. Lydden, Kent, SE. of Barham Downs. Lydiate, Lanc. SW. of Ormſkirk. Lyddington, and it's Park, Rutland, between Uppingham and Rockingham. Lyddon, a river in Dorſetſhire, which runs into the Stour near Sturminſter Newton. Lydſing, Kent, near Graveſend. In this village 600 young Normans, who came over with Alfred and Edward, the ſons of Ethelred, after the death of Canute, to take poſſeſſion of their father's throne, were maſſacred by Godwin earl of Kent. Lye, Glouc. NW. of Cheltenham. Lye, near Worceſter, S. of the Teme. Lye, Surry, near Ryegate. Lye, N. and S. Oxfordſ. near Witney. Lyehouſe, Suſſex, near Bolney.

LYESSE, a town in the department of the North, 15 miles E. of Landrecy.

Lyſden, Northamptonſ. SW. of Oundle. Lyford, Berks, near Wantage.

LYGE, a town of Norway, ſituated near a lake of the ſame name, 16 miles NW. of Chriſtianſand.

Lygh, Hants, on the borders of Suſſex.

LYGUM, a town in the duchy of Sleswick, 14 miles W. of Apenrade.

Lyham, Northumberl. NE. of Woller. Lylborn, Northamp. NE. of Hilmerton, near Dow Bridge. Lyleſhill, Shropſhire, S. of Newport. Lymbergh, Great and Little, Lincolnſ. W. of Great Grimſby. Lyme, Cheſhire, E. of Warrington.

*LYME REGIS, a town of Dorſetſhire, ſeated in a cavity between two rocky hills, on the river Lyme, which runs through it, at the head of a little inlet, and from which it takes it's name. It's harbour is formed by a noble pier, called the Cobb, behind which ſhips lie in ſafety; and it has a Newfoundland and coaſting trade, but greatly on the decline. It is a place of reſort for ſea-bathing, and is remarkable for the landing of the duke of Monmouth, in 1685, for the execution of his ill-judged deſign againſt James II. Lyme is 28 miles E. by S. of Exeter, and 143 W. by S. of London. Market on Friday.

LYMFIORD, or LYMFURT, a gulf, or large bay near the W. coaſt of N. Jutland, which communicates with the Scaggerac, and runs 80 miles inland, widening gradually, and forming ſeveral iſlands. It is ſeparated from the North Sea only by a narrow bank.

Lyming, Kent, 2 miles S. of Elham.

*LYMINGTON, a town of Hampſhire, about a mile from the channel that runs between the main land and the Iſle of Wight, has a harbour for veſſels of conſiderable burden. The chief trade is making ſalt. It is ſeated on a high hill, 97 miles SW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Lymiſter, Suſſex, near Arundel. Lymbridge, Northumberl. on the Coquet, near Harbottle Caſtle.

LYNCH, a town of S. Carolina, 11 miles S. of George Town.

LYNDALS, a river of Norway, which runs into the Baltic, about 10 miles NNW. of Chriſtianſand.

Lyndel, Lancaſ. near Cartmel. Lyndholm, or Linham, Yorkſ. in a moraſs, below Hatfield. Lyndhurſt, Hants, in the New Foreſt. Here is a ſeat, which belongs to the duke of Glouceſter, as lord warden warden of the New Foreſt. It is 7 miles N. of Lymington. Lyndhurſt, Wood, Nott. E. of Mansfield. Lynaen, Rutland, 4 miles from Stamford. Lyndridge, Kent, between Tunbridge and Rye. Lyndſel, Eſſex, SE. of Thaxted. Lyne, rivers in Staffordſhire, Nottinghamſhire, and Northumberland.

Lyne, a village of Scotland, in the county of Peebles, ſituated at the conflux of the rivers Lyne and Tweed, 3 miles W. of Peebles.

Lynemouthſtock, Northumberl. in Woller lordſhip. Lynford, Great and Little, Bucks, near Newport Pagnel. Lynther, a river in Cornwall. Lyniel, Shropſhire, NW. of Wem. Lynley, Shropſhire, N. of Biſhop's Caſtle. Lynn, a river of Norfolk, which runs into the Ouſe at Lynn Regis.

LYNN, a town of Maſſachuſets, 5 miles NE. of Boſton.

Lynn, North, Norf. at the mouth of the Ouſe. It had formerly a church, called St. Edmond's, which has long ſince been entirely ſwallowed up by the ſea. On the oppoſite ſide of the river is Lynn, Old, or Weſt.

LYNN REGIS, or KING'S LYNN, a populous and flouriſhing town of Norfolk. The ſituation of this town, near the fall of the Ouſe into the ſea, after having received ſeveral other rivers, of which ſome are navigable, gives it an opportunity of extending it's trade into 8 different counties, by which many conſiderable cities and towns, viz. Peterborough, Ely, Stamford, Bedford, St. Ive's, Huntingdon, St. Neot's, Northampton, Cambridge, St. Edmundſbury, and the N. part of Bucks, as well as the inland parts of Norfolk and Suffolk, are ſupplied with heavy goods, not only of home produce, as coals and ſalt from Newcaſtle, but alſo of merchandiſe imported from abroad, eſpecially wine, of which two articles, viz. coals and wine, this is the greateſt port for importation of any place on all the eaſtern coaſt of England; and thoſe wherein the Lynn merchants deal more largely than any town in England, except London, Briſtol, and Newcaſtle. In return for this, Lynn receives back all the corn which the counties juſt mentioned produce, for exportation; and therefore ſends more of it abroad than any port, except Hull. The foreign trade of the merchants here is very conſiderable, eſpecially to Holland, Norway, and the Baltic, and alſo to Spain and Portugal, and formerly they drove a good trade to France, till it was turned off, by treaties on one hand, and prohibitions, high duties, &c. on the other, to Spain and Portugal. The harbour is ſafe when ſhips are in it, but difficult to enter by reaſon of the many flats and ſhoals in the paſſage; but they are well buoyed, and good pilots are always ready. It's air is unwholeſome, on account of it's vicinity to the ſeas. The ſtreets are narrow, but well paved, and it has a good market-place, and a noble old town-houſe and exchange. It is 106 miles N. by E. of London. Lat. 52. 45. N. lon. 0. 28. E. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

Lynſtock Caſtle, Cumberl. on the river Eden, NE. of Carliſle. Lynthorp, Yorkſ. W. of Bradford. Lynton, Yorkſ. E. Riding, N. of York Woulds. Lynton, Yorkſ. on the Ouſe, SE. of Boroughbridge. Lynton, Yorkſ. W. Riding, on the Wherfe, between Bardon Chace and Kettledale. Lynton, Northumberl. NE. of Morpeth. Lynton, Weſt, Cumb. on the Leven, W. of Brampton. Lynwood, Hants, in the New Foreſt.

LYOE, a ſmall iſland of Denmark, in the Baltic, near the S. coaſt of Funen.

LYOENA, a town of Algiers, in Africa, 106 miles S. of Conſtantina.

Lyom, Northumb. NE. of Woller.

LYON, a town of N. Carolina.

Lyon, a river of Scotland, which iſſues from Loch Lyon, on the SW. part of Perthſhire, and runs into the Tay about 2 miles ENE. of Kenmore.

Lyonneſs, Cornwall, part of the promontory overflowed at the Land's End.

LYONNOIS, a ci-devant province of France, W. of the rivers Saone and Loire, about 30 miles in length and 17 in breadth. It now forms, including the diſtricts of Beaujelois and Forez, the department of the Rhone and Loire. Lyons is the capital.

LYONS, a large, ancient, and famous city, in the dept. of Rhone and Loire, the moſt conſiderable in the kingdom next to Paris, for beauty, commerce, and opulence, and is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Rhone and Saone, by the ſide of two high mountains. It was founded, about the year 42 B.C. by the Romans, who made it the centre of the commerce of the Gauls. About the year 145, it was totally deſtroyed by fire, but was rebuilt by the munificence of Nero. Many antiquities are ſtill obſerved, that evince it's Roman origin. Lyons was the ſee of an archbiſhop, and before it's recent calamities, contained about 160,000 inhabitants, upward of 30,000 of whom were employed in various manufactures, particularly of rich ſtuffs of the moſt exquiſite workmanſhip, workmanſhip, in ſilk, gold, ſilver, &c. The quays were adorned with magnificent ſtructures. The Hotel de Ville vied with that of Amſterdam; and the theatre was not ſurpaſſed by any in France. The other principal public buildings are the Hotel de Dieu, the hoſpital of charity, the exchange, the cuſtom-houſe, the palace of juſtice, the public library, and a well ſupplied arſenal. The town-houſe, cathedral, and many other buildings, are alſo magnificent. The bridge, which unites the city with the ſuburb de la Guillotiere, is 1560 feet long. The houſes, in general, are high and well built; it has 6 gates and 4 ſuburbs, and had, before the revolution, 4 abbeys, 50 convents, 3 public ſchools, a college of phyſic, an academy of arts and ſciences and belles lettres, a ſociety of agriculture, and a veterinary ſchool. Such was Lyons before the fatal year 1793, when the miſchiefs of the revolution were poured upon this devoted city in all their horrors. In June, 1793, the Lyoneſe revolted againſt the national convention, and ſuſtained, with great bravery, an active ſiege of two months. General Kellerman, who commanded the army of the Alps, was ordered to beſiege the city; but not anſwering to the impatience of the convention, he was removed, and general Doppet appointed to ſucceed him, to whom the inhabitants, who were not only unuſed to arms, but very ill provided with the means of defence, as well as the neceſſaries of life, were obliged to ſurrender on the 8th of October following. Conſiderable loſſes were ſuſtained by the beſiegers, as well as the beſieged, in their various actions; a great part of the city was reduced to aſhes, by an inceſſant bombardment; and, when taken, it became a prey to the mercileſs victors, who ſatiated their rage by barbarities for which language has no name. The miſerable victims, who were too numerous for the individual operation of the guillotine, were driven in great numbers, with the moſt ſavage and blaſphemous ceremonies, into the Rhine, or hurried in crowds to the ſquares, to be maſſacred by the more painful operation of fire-arms and artillery. It is ſuppoſed that not leſs than 70,000 perſons in this unfortunate city alone were either put to death or forced into exile. It was alſo decreed by the convention, that the walls and public buildings of Lyons ſhould be deſtroyed, and the name of the city changed to that of VILLE AFFRANCHIE. In 1794, however, on the deſtruction of the faction of the Jacobins, the convention decreed, that the city ſhould reſume it's ancient name, and that meaſures ſhould be taken to reſtore it's manufactures and commerce. Lyons is a place of very great trade, which is extended not only through France, but to Italy, Swiſſerland, and Spain; and there are four celebrated fairs every year. It derives vaſt advantages from the rivers it ſtands upon; and is 70 miles S. by W. of Geneva, and 220 SE. of Paris. Lat. 45. 46. N. lon. 4. 55. E.

Lyonſhall Caſtle, Cumberl. near Carliſle.

LYPEZE, or LIPCH, a town of Hungary, capital of the county of Lypeze.

Lypiat, Upper and Lower, Glouceſterſhire, hamlets in the pariſh of Stroud.

LYSE, a town of Norway, 8 miles SSW of Bergen.

LYSEKIL, a ſea-port town of Sweden, in W. Gothland, 16 miles W. of Uddevalla.

LYSKO, a town of Novogrodeck, in Lithuania, 52 miles SW. of Novogrodeck.

LYSOBYKI, a town of Lublin, in Poland, 20 miles NNW. of Lublin.

LYSTON, a town of Devonſhire, ſeated on the river Lyd, 4 miles from Newport. Market on Saturday.

Lyſton Hall, Eſſex, SW. of Melford, in Suffolk.

LYSWIK, a town of Warmeland, in Sweden, 34 miles N. of Carlſtadt.

Lytborrow, Northamp. between Towcester and Daventry.

LYTCHAM, a ſmall town of Norfolk, between E. Dereham and Caſtle Riſing. It is 24 miles W. of Norwich, and 92 NNE. of London. Market diſuſed.

Lythe, Yorkſ. 3 miles from Whitby.

Lythe, Weſtmorl. near Croſthwate. Lythe Chapel, Suſſex, NW. of Stedham. Lytham, Lanc. in Amounderneſs. Lytham, Yorkſ. near N. and S. Cave. Lytton, Yorkſ. W. Riding, near Langſterdale Chace.

MABERIA, a lake of Africa, whoſe waters run into the Senegal, in Lat. 14. 40. N. lon. 7. 40. E.

Mabin, Cornwall, SW. of Camelford.

Mablethorp, or Mallerthorp, Linc. near the coaſt, SE. of Saltfleet.

MABRA, a town on the coaſt of Algiers, 10 miles W. of Bona.

MACAO, a town of China, in the province of Canton, ſeated in an iſland at the mouth of the river Tae. The Portugueſe have been in poſſeſſion of the town and harbour ſince the early part of the 17th century. The houſes are low, but built after the ſame manner as in Europe. The Portugueſe on this iſland are properly a mixed breed; having taken Aſiatic women to their wives. Here is a Portugueſe governor, as well as a Chineſe mandarin. The former nation pays a tribute of 100,000 ducats, for the liberty of chuſing their own magiſtrates, &c. The city is defended by 3 forts, built upon eminences; the works are good, and well planted with artillery. Lat. 22. 33. N. lon. 113. 51. E.

MACAO, a town of Portugueſe Eſtremadura.

MACAS, a town and juriſdiction of Quito, S. America, 40 miles E. of Quito.

MACASSAR, or BONY, a conſiderable kingdom of Aſia, in the ſouthern part of the iſland of Celebes. In the mountains there are quarries of very fine ſtone, as well as mines of gold and copper. The ſoil is extremely fertile, and there are ripe fruits at all times of the year. The Macaſſars are ſtout, robuſt, courageous, and addicted to war. They are Mahometans by profeſſion, and the flatteſt-noſed women are accounted the greateſt beauties.

MACASSAR, a town and harbour on the SW. coaſt of the iſland of Celebes, capital of the kingdom of the ſame name. The houſes are all of wood, and ſupported by thick poſts, to preſerve them from inundations; and they have ladders to aſcend into them, which they draw up when they have entered. The roofs are covered with very large leaves, ſo that the rain cannot penetrate. It is ſeated near the mouth of a large river, which runs through the kingdom from N. to S. The king is in alliance with the Dutch. Lat. 5. 0. S. lon. 119. 54. E.

MACASSAR, STRAITS OF, the ſea, or narrow channel, between the iſlands of Celebes and Borneo.

MACARSCA, a ſea-port of Dalmatia 36 miles E. SE. of Spalatro.

* MACCLESFIELD, a large handſome town of Cheſhire, with manufactures of cotton, mohair, twiſt, hatbands, buttons, and thread. Here are ſeveral mills, for the winding of ſilk, and a conſiderable manufactory of mohair buttons. It is ſeated at the edge of a foreſt, of the ſame name, near the river Bollin, 36 miles E. of Cheſter, and 171 NW. of London. Market on Monday.

MACEDONIA, a province of Turkey, bounded by Romania and Bulgaria on the E. the Archipelago and Theſſaly on the S. Servia and Bulgaria on the N. and Albania on the W. The air is clear, ſharp, and wholeſome, and the ſoil is for the moſt part fertile. In the inland part are ſeveral uninhabited waſtes. Salonichi is the moſt conſiderable town.

MACER. See MACRES.

MACERATA, a town of Ancona, Italy, with a univerſity; generally conſidered as the capital of the province; and a town of Lavora, Naples, about 3 miles from Capua, in the road to Naples.

MACHALA, a town of Guaquil, in Quito, S. America.

Mac Gilly Cuddy's Reeks, a range of high mountains in Kerry, Munſter, in the parish of Knockane.

MACHECOUL, at town in the depart. of Lower Loire, 18 miles SW. of Nantes.

MACHIA, a town of Moliſe, and a town of Capitanata; both in Naples.

MACHIAN, one of the Molucca Iſlands, in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, near the W. coaſt of Gilolo. It is about 20 miles in circumference, and the moſt fertile of them all. It is populous, and produces the beſt cloves and ſago. The Dutch have three forts, with companies of ſoldiers to guard the iſland. Lat. 0. 26. N. lon. 126. 55. E.

MACHINLETH, a town of Montgomeryſhire, ſeated on the river Douay, over which is a large ſtone bridge which leads into Merionethſhire. Here Owen Glendour, in 1402, accepted the crown of Wales, and aſſembled a parliament: the houſe wherein they met is now ſtanding, divided into tenements. It is 30 miles W. of Montgomery, and 198 NW. of London. Market on Monday.

MACKERAN, or MACKRAN, a province of Perſia, bounded on the N. by Segeſtan and Candahar, on the E. by Hindooſtan, on the S. by the ocean, and on the W. by Kerman. The ſouthern part is little more than a deſart for 60 leagues together. In the northern parts water is ſcarce, and deep and moving ſands often ſtop and ſometimes overwhelm travellers in their journey. It is the Gedroſia of the ancients. Kidge is the capital.

Mackworth, near Derby.

Maclony, in Cork, Munſter.

MACOCO. See ANRICO.

MAÇON, or MASCONS, a trading town in the dept. of Saone and Loire, formerly capital of the Maconnors. It is ſeated near the Saone, 35 miles N. of Lyons, and 188 SE. of Paris.

Macreddin, in Wicklow, Leinſter.

MACRES, a river of Africa, which runs acroſs the kingdom of Tripoli, and falls into the Mediterranean, 20 miles E. of Lebida.

MACRI, an ancient town of Samos.

MACRONISI, an iſland of the Archipelago, near the coaſt of Livadia, anciently very populous, but now deſerted. It affords a habitation for lizards and other reptiles, and in the internal parts are found a number of rare plants. It is 20 miles E. of Setines.

MACROOMP, a town of Cork, in Munſter, where many perſons are employed in combing wool and ſpinning yarn. Some ſalt works have been erected here. Half a mile from the town there is a mild chalybeate ſpa. It is ſituated in the barony of Muſkerry, 142 miles SW. of Dublin.

MACUNA, one of the Navigators Iſlands, in the S. Pacific Ocean, where M. de la Peyrouſe met with his firſt fatal accident, M. de Langle, his captain of the Aſtrolabe, with 8 officers and 5 ſeamen, being maſſacred by the natives. Lat. 14. 19. S. lon. 169. W.

MACZUA, a ſmall iſland in the Red Sea.

MADAGASCAR, an iſland lying on the eaſtern coaſt of Africa, about 800 miles in length, and from 120 to 200 in breadth. The inhabitants in the interior are black. Their hair is long and curled, at leaſt on the coaſts; and there are ſome likewiſe of a yellowiſh complexion, who have neater features than the reſt. The iſland is uneven and hilly, but the face of the country is one of the moſt agreeable in the world. It is extremely populous; yet they have no cities or towns, but a great number of villages, a ſmall diſtance from each other. Their houſes are huts, with doors ſo low, that a boy of 12 years old cannot enter them without ſtooping. They have neither windows nor chimneys, and the roofs are covered with reeds or leaves. Their furniture conſiſts of a few baſkets, to put their neceſſaries in, and they can change their habitations when they pleaſe. There are a great many petty kings, whoſe riches conſiſt in cattle and ſlaves, and they are often at war with each other. Great quantities of iron and ſteel are found throughout the iſland; as alſo three ſorts of gold. The rivers and brooks are rich in various kinds of precious ſtones. The productions of the iſland, are the ravens, a kind of palm-tree known only in Madagaſcar, the top of which is prepared and eaten like the cabbage palm, and of the ribs of its leaves they form the walls of their houſes; rice, barley, ſugar-canes, white pepper, ginger, cocoa-nuts, grapes, ſaffron, ſeveral kinds of gums, five different kinds of honey, and a variety of plants unknown to Europeans. Buffaloes run in herds and there are great numbers of ſheep whoſe mutton is finely taſted, as well as goats, kids, and other kinds of uſeful quadruped animals, but neither elephants tigers, lions, nor horſes. Large crocodiles, monkeys, wild boars, cameleons lizards, locuſts, inſects, birds, and fiſh, are numerous. The chief employment of the inhabitants is in building, in gold and iron works, making of earthenware, ſpinning, weaving, cordage, fiſhing, hunting and moſtly in agriculture. The language has a great affinity with the Arabic, the Arabs having made a conqueſt of the iſland about 300 years ago. The French have frequently attempted to ſettle here but have always been driven hence. Lat. from 12. 0. to 25. 30. S.

Madam's Court Hill, in Kent, 19 miles from London, in the road to Sevenoaks. It commands a beautiful proſpect of Kent and Suſſex. Madam's Court, Kent, a hill near Maidſtone. Maddern, Wilts, 9 miles from Saliſbury.

MADEIRA, an iſland of the Atlantic Ocean, principal of a group called the Madeiras, and ſubject to the Portugueſe. The climate is more temperate than in the Canaries, and the ſoil more fertile, for wine, ſugar, fruits, &c. but leſs ſo in corn, though infinitely better watered with ſprings and rivers. Spring and autumn reign here together, and produce flowers and fruit throughout the year. It abounds in every kind of tropical and European fruits; as oranges of all ſorts and dimenſions, lemons of a prodigious ſize, bananas, citrons, peaches, nectarines, apricots, figs, plums, melons, apples, and ſtrawberries, that grow wild in the mountains with aſtoniſhing profuſion; grapes which are as large as our common plums, and remarkable for their peculiar flavour. The oranges are of a ſanguine red: this ſpecies is produced from the common orange-bud, ingrafted on the pomegranate ſtock. There is likewiſe a kind of pear found here, not bigger than a walnut, and very criſp. The ſugar-cane alſo is cultivated with ſucceſs, though not in any conſiderable quantity. The cedar tree is found in great abundance: it is extremely beautiful: moſt of the ceilings and furniture at Madeira are made of that wood, which yields a very fragrant ſmell. The dragon tree is a native of this iſland, as are alſo maſtic and other gums. Flowers nurſed in the Engliſh greenhouſes grow wild here, in the fields; the hedges are moſtly formed of myrtles, roſes, jeſſamine, and honeyſuckle in everlaſting bloſſom, while the larkſpur, the fleur-de-lis, the lupine, &c. ſpring up ſpontaneouſly in the meadows. There are very few reptiles to be ſeen in the iſland; the lizard is the moſt common. Canary birds and goldfinches are found in the mountains; of the former, numbers are ſent every year to England. But Madeira is principally celebrated for its excellent wine, which, moreover, keeps beſt in the hotteſt climate under the torrid zone. For this reaſon the inhabitants of the W. India Iſlands, that can afford it, drink little elſe; and the Madeira wine that is brought to England, is thought to be worth little, unleſs it has firſt been a voyage to the E. or W. Indies. Theſe wines are of different kinds, different both in taſte, colour, and ſtrength. The exports of this article, and the profits on it are immenſe, and bring a large revenue to the king of Portugal. In Madeira are made the fineſt ſweetmeats in the world; all kinds of fruits being here candied in the moſt exquiſite perfection. Madeira is well watered and peopled; the inhabitants are good-natured, ſober, frugal, and indolent. Funchal is the capital of this iſland, which is about 150 miles in circumference, and lies in 16 deg. W. long. and 33 deg. N. lat.

MADELEY, a town of Shropſhire, ſituated near the iron bridge in Colebrook Dale, 8 miles NNW. of Bridgnorth, and 147 NW. of London.

Madeley, Staff. SW. of Newcaſtle-under-Line. Madeley Alphorn, Staff. near Uttoxeter. Madeley Houſe, Linc. NW. of Stamford. Madeley Lead, Camb. in the Iſle of Ely, between Welney and Helgey. Madern, Cornwall, N of Penzance. Madersfield, Worceſterſhire, near Great Malvern. Mad Fens, Northumberland, between the Picts Wall and Kirkheaton.

MADIA, MAGGIA, or MEYNTHAL, a long and narrow valley of Swiſſerland, on the confines of the Milaneſe and the Upper Valais, containing 22 pariſhes, and about 24,000 inhabitants. It is watered throughout its whole length by a river of the ſame name, which runs into Lake Major at Locarno, and is the fourth bailiwick of the Swiſs in Italy. There is a town of the ſame name, ſeated on the river.

Madingley, 3 miles from Cambridge. Madley, SW. of Hereford.

MADRAS, or FORT ST. GEORGE, called by the natives CHINA-PATAM, a fort and town of the peninſula of Hindooſtan, on the coaſt of Coromandel, built in the reign of Charles II. by order of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, under the ſuperintendance of Sir William Langhorne; ſome writers, however, aſſert, that it was firſt ſettled in 1640, and afterwards enlarged in the reign of Charles II. It is the principal ſettlement of the Engliſh on the E. ſide of the peninſula, and is a fortreſs of very great extent, including within it a regular well-built city. It is cloſe on the margin of the ſea, from which it has a rich and beautiful appearance; the houſes being covered with a ſtucco called chunam, which in itſelf is nearly as compact as the fineſt marble, and, as it bears as high a poliſh, is equally ſplendid with that elegant material. They conſiſt of long colonnades, with open porticoes, and flat roofs; and they may be conſidered as elegant, particularly ſo, from being finiſhed with ſuch a beautiful material as the chunam; and the city contains many handſome and ſpacious ſtreets. But the inner apartments of the houſes are not highly decorated, preſenting to the eye only white walls; which, however, from the marble-like appearance of the ſtucco, give a freſhneſs grateful in ſo hot a country. Ceilings are very uncommon in the rooms. Indeed it is impoſſible to find any which will reſiſt the ravages of that deſtructive inſect, the white ant. Theſe animals are chiefly formidable from the immenſity of their numbers, which are ſuch as to deſtroy, in one night's time, a ceiling of any dimenſions. It is the wood work which ſerves for the baſis of the ceilings, ſuch as the laths, beams, &c. that theſe inſects attack. "The approach to Madras, from the ſea," ſays Mr. Hodges, "offers to the eye an appearance ſimilar to what we may conceive of a Grecian city in the age of Alexander. The clear, blue, cloudleſs ſky, the poliſhed, white buildings, the bright ſandy beach, and the dark green ſea, preſent a combination totally new to the eye of an Engliſhman, juſt arrived from London, who, accuſtomed to the ſight of rolling maſſes of clouds floating in a damp atmoſphere, cannot but contemplate the difference with delight: and the eye being thus gratified, the mind aſſumes a gay and tranquil habit, analogous to the pleaſing objects with which it is ſurrounded. Some time before the ſhip arrives at her anchoring ground, ſhe is hailed by the boats of the country, filled with people of buſineſs, who come in crowds on board. This is the moment in which a European feels the great diſtinction between Aſia and his own country. The ruſtling of fine linen, and the general hum of unuſual converſation, preſent to his mind for a moment the idea of an aſſembly of females. When he aſcends upon the deck, he is ſtruck with the long muſlin dreſſes, and black faces adorned with very large gold ear-rings and white turbans. The firſt ſalutation he receives from theſe ſtrangers is, by bending their bodies very low, touching the deck with the back of the hand, and the forehead three times. The natives firſt ſeen in India by a European voyager, are Hindoos, the original inhabitants of the peninſula. In this part of India they are delicately framed; their hands, in particular, are more like thoſe of tender females; and do not appear to be, what is conſidered a proper proportion to the reſt of the perſon, which is uſually above the middle ſize. Correſpondent to this delicacy of appearance are their manners; mild, tranquil, and ſeduloufly attentive; in this laſt reſpect they are indeed remarkable, as they never interrupt any perſon who is ſpeaking, but wait patiently till he has concluded: and then anſwer with the moſt perfect reſpect and compoſure. From the ſhip a ſtranger is conveyed on ſhore in a boat of the country, called a Maſſoolah boat; a work of curious conſtruction, and well calculated to elude the violent ſhocks of the ſurf, that breaks here with great violence: they are formed without a keel, flat-bottomed, with the ſides raiſed high, and ſewed together with the fibres of the cocoa-nut tree, and caulked with the ſame material: they are remarkably light, and are managed with great dexterity by the natives; they are uſually attended by two kattamarans, (rafts) paddled by one man each, the intention of which is, that, ſhould the boat be overſet by the violence of the ſurf, the perſons in it may be preſerved. The boat is driven, as the ſailors ſay, high and dry; and the paſſengers are landed on a fine ſandy beach, and immediately enter the fort of Madras. The appearance of the natives is exceedingly varied; ſome are wholly naked, and others ſo clothed, that nothing but the face and neck are to be diſcovered: beſide this, the European is ſtruck with many other objects, ſuch as women carried on men's ſhoulders on palankeens, and men riding on horſeback, clothed in linen dreſſes like women; which, with the very different face of the country from all he had ever ſeen, or conceived, excite the ſtrangeſt emotions of ſurpriſe." There is a ſecond city, called the Black Town, nearly four miles in circuit, ſeparated from Madras by the breadth of a proper eſplanade only. Madras, in common with all the European ſettlements on this coaſt, has no port for ſhipping; the coaſt forming nearly a ſtraight line; and it is incommoded alſo with a high and dangerous ſurf. The citadel here, which was planned by Mr. Robins, and is ſituated in the middle of the White, or Engliſh Town, is one of the beſt fortreſſes in poſſeſſion of the Britiſh nation. The town is alſo encompaſſed with a ſtrong wall, of the ſame ſtone with which the citadel is built, defended by batteries, baſtions, half-moons, and flankers; the whole mounted with upwards of 200 pieces of cannon and mortars. Oppoſite the weſt gate of the citadel are barracks, and a convenient hoſpital for the company's ſoldiers, and at the other end of the barracks is a mint, where the company coin gold and ſilver. Madras was firſt ſettled by the Engliſh, in 1640, and greatly enlarged in the reign of Charles II. it was taken by the French in 1746, but reſtored by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. Lat. 13. 5. N. lon. 80. 25. E.

MADRE DE DIOS, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, near the coaſt of Patagonia, 60 leagues in circumference. Lat. 51. S. lon. 77. W.

MADRE DE POPA, a town and celebrated convent of S. America, in Terra Firma, ſeated on the river Grande, 50 miles E. of Carthagena. It is almoſt as much reſorted to by pilgrims of America, as the Santa Caſa, or Holy Houſe of Loretto, is in Europe; and they pretend that the image of Mary, the mother of Jeſus, has done a great many miracles in favour of the fleets and ſeafaring people.

Madreſfield, Worceſterſhire, N. of Malvern-Chace.

MADRID, the capital of Spain, in New Caſtile, ſituated on the Manzanares, the banks banks of which, in the environs, afford an agreeable ſhade, coolneſs, and verdure. It was formerly an obſcure place, belonging to the archbiſhop of Toledo, but the purity of the air engaged Charles V. and his ſucceſſors, to chuſe it for their reſidence. It is ſeated in a large plain, ſurrounded by high mountains, but has no wall, rampart, or ditch. The houſes are all built with brick, and the ſtreets are long, broad, and ſtraight, and adorned at proper diſtances with handſome fountains. There are above 100 towers, or ſteeples, in different places, which contribute greatly to the embelliſhment of the city. The royal palace is built on an eminence, at the extremity of the city. The fineſt ſquare in Madrid is the Placa Mayor, which is ſpacious and regular, ſurrounded with 136 houſes, five ſtories high, and of an equal height. Every ſtage is adorned with a handſome balcony, and the fronts are ſupported by columns, forming a piazza round the ſquare. Here the market is held, and here they had their famous bull-fights. However, it is obſervable, that the very fineſt houſes have no glaſs-windows, they being only lattices. The Prado, which is the public airing place, is ſhaded with regular rows of poplar trees, and is watered with 23 fountains. Here the ſtately Spaniards make the moſt brilliant diſplay of their finery. Philip II. built a large and magnificent bridge over the river, which river being exceedindly ſmall, has occaſioned a great many jokes. The city of Madrid contains 15 gates, 18 pariſhes, 35 convents of monks, and 31 of nuns, 30 colleges, hoſpitals, or houſes of charity, 7398 dwelling houſes, and about 160,000 inhabitants. There are four academies in Madrid: the Academy of Belles Lettres; the Academy of Spaniſh Hiſtorical Monuments; the Academy of the fine Arts, painting, ſculpture, and architecture; and the Academy of Médicine; which laſt is held in no great eſteem. Lat. 40. 25. N. lon. 3. 30. W.

MADRID NEW, a town of N. America, in Louiſiana, intended as the capital of a new ſettlement. It is likely to become the great emporium of the weſtern country, as the immenſe quantities of produce that will be borne down the Illinois, the Miſſiſſippi, the Ohio, and their various branches will naturally centre here. It is ſituated on the weſtern ſide of the river Miſſiſſippi, 1040 miles from the mouth, and oppoſite the mouth of the river Ohio. Lat. 30. 36. N. lon. 89. 50. W.

MADRIGAL, two towns in Old Caſtile; the latter is 90 miles S. of Valladolid.

MADRIGAL, a town of Popayan.

MADROGAM, or BANANATAPA, a large town of Africa, capital of Monomotapa, with a ſpacious palace, where the king reſides. The upper part of the houſes are in the ſhape of bells. Lat. 18. 0. S. lon. 31. 40. E.

MADURA, a town of Hindooſtan, capital of a province of the ſame name, about 60 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is fortified with ſquare towers and parapets, well furniſhed with cannon, and is ſituated on the coaſt of Coromandel, 90 miles SSW. of Tanjore. Lat. 9. 55. N. lon. 78. 12. E.

MADURA, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, about 75 miles in length, and from 9 to 15 in breadth. Two provinces are under the Dutch; the third is governed by a native king. It is exceedingly fertile in rice, for which article it is one of the granaries of India. Madura, the capital, is ſituated on the S. coaſt, in lat. 7. 5. S. lon. 112. 49. E.

MAELER, a beautiful lake of Sweden, ſituated between the provinces of Weſtmanland and Sudermanland, and communicating with Stockholm. It is ſaid to contain 120 iſlands, great and ſmall. Its length is about 80 miles from E. to W. the breadth is various.

MAELLA, a ſmall town of Arragon.

MAELSTRAND. See MARSTRAND.

MAELSTROM, a very extraordinary and dangerous whirlpool on the coaſt of Norway, in lat. 68 deg. N. Of the ſituation of this whirlpool we have the following account from Jonas Ramus: "The mountain of Helfeggen, in Lofoden, lies a league from the Iſland Ver, and betwixt theſe two runs that large and dreadful ſtream, called Moſkoeſtrom, from the iſland Moſkoe, which is in the middle of it, together with ſeveral circumjacent iſles, as Ambaaren, half a quarter of a league northward, Ifleſen, Hoeholm, Kieldholm, Suarven, and Buckholm. Moſkoe lies about half a quarter of a mile ſouth of the Iſland of Ver, and betwixt them, theſe ſmall iſlands, Otterholm, Flimem, Sandfleſen, and Stockholm. Betwixt Lofoden and Moſkoe, the depth of the water is between 36 and 40 fathoms; but on the other ſide, toward Ver, the depth decreaſes ſo as not to afford a convenient paſſage for a veſſel, without the riſk of ſplitting on the rocks, which happens even in the calmeſt weather. When it is flood, the ſtream runs up the country between Lofoden and Moſkoe with a boiſterous rapidity; but the roar of its impetuous ebb to the ſea is ſcarce equalled by the loudeſt and and moſt dreadful cataracts; the noiſe being heard ſeveral leagues off, and the vortices or pits are of ſuch extent and depth, that if a ſhip comes within its attraction, it is inevitably abſorbed and carried down to the bottom, and there beat to pieces againſt the rocks; and when the water relaxes, the fragments thereof are thrown up again. But theſe intervals of tranquillity are only at the turn of the ebb and flood, and calm weather, and laſt but a quarter of an hour, its violence gradually returning. When the ſtream is moſt boiſterous, and its fury heightened by a ſtorm, it is dangerous to come within a Norway mile of it; boats, ſhips, and yachts having been carried away, by not guarding againſt it before they were within its reach. It likewiſe happens frequently, that whales come too near the ſtream, and are overpowered by its violence; and then it is impoſſible to deſcribe their howlings and bellowings in their fruitleſs ſtruggles to diſengage themſelves. A bear once, attempting to ſwim from Loſoden to Moſkoe, with a deſign of preying upon the ſheep at paſture in the iſland, afforded the like ſpectacle to the people; the ſtream caught him, and bore him down, while he roared terribly, ſo as to be heard on ſhore. Large ſtocks of firs and pine trees, after being abſorbed by the current, riſe again, broken and torn to ſuch a degree as if briſtles grew on them. This plainly ſhows the bottom to conſiſt of craggy rocks, among which they are whirled to and fro. This ſtream is regulated by the flux and reflux of the ſea; it being conſtantly high and low water every 6 hours. In the year 1645, early in the morning of Sexageſima Sunday, it raged with ſo much noiſe and impetuoſity, that on the Iſland of Moſkoe, the very ſtones of the houſes fell to the ground."

Maenclochog, Pembrokeſhire, S. Wales.

Maer, Staffordſhire, between Drayton in Shropſhire and Whitmore.

MAESE, or MEUSE, a large river which riſes in France, near the village of Meuſe, in the dept. of Upper Marne. It waters Verdun, Sedan, &c. and entering the Netherlands at Givet, it flows to Charlemont, Namur, Liege, Maeſtricht, Venlo, Grave, Battenburg, and Voorn, where it is joined by the Waal. At Dort, it receives the Merwe, and enters the German Ocean by ſeveral channels, through the iſlands of Holland and Zealand.

MAESLAND-SLUYS, a town in S. Holland, the inhabitants of which are principally engaged in the herring and whale fiſheries. It is ſituated on a canal which forms a communication between Delft and the Maeſe, 17 miles S. of Delft, and 10 W. of Rotterdam.

MAESTRICHT, a large, ancient town of the Netherlands, formerly belonging to the duchy of Lorrain. It is now united to the duchy of Brabant, although inſulated in the biſhoprick of Liege. The town-houſe and other public buildings are handſome, and the place is ſo well defended by detached baſtions, horn-works, intrenchments, numerous redoubts, ravelins, a good covered way, &c. that it is juſtly reckoned one of the ſtrongeſt fortreſſes in Europe. Near it are large ſtone quarries, in which are ſubterraneous paſſages of great extent. It is ſeated on the river Maeſe, which ſeparates it from Wyck, and with which it communicates by a handſome bridge, 15 miles N. of Liege, and 46 E. of Bruſſels.

MAESYEK, a town of Liege, ſituated on the Meuſe, 30 miles NNE. of Liege.

MAFFRA, a town of Eſtremadura, in Portugal, famous for a convent of extraordinary magnificence, founded, in purſuance of a vow, by king John V. on the ſpot where formerly ſtood the pooreſt friary in the kingdom. This, on enquiry, was found to be at Maffra, where 18 Franciſcans lived together in a poor hut. The draught of this building was procured from Rome. It is 5 miles NW. of Liſbon.

MAGADOXA, or MOLDOSCHO, the capital of a kingdom of the ſame name, in Africa, on the coaſt of the Indian Sea; ſeated near the mouth of a river of the ſame name, with a good harbour. The country of Magadoxa extends from the river Juboo, near the equator, to beyond the fifth degree of N. lat. how far it extends to the weſtward is but little known. The inhabitants are moſtly Mahometans, who came and ſettled here in the time of the caliphs. Mixed with them are the Bedwin Arabs, who ſtill follow their old pagan ſuperſtitions, and a ſtill greater number of Abyſſinian Chriſtians. All ſpeak the Arabic tongue. The inhabitants are warlike, and uſe poiſoned arrows and lances. The city of Magadoxa is a place of great commerce, foreign merchants from Aden, and other parts, exchanging cotton, ſilk, cloth, ſpices, drugs, &c. for gold, ivory, wax, and other commodities. Lat. 2. 30. N. lon. 44. 0. E.

Magdalen, Hants, N. of Winchester.

Magdalen-Chapel, Cornw. N. of Penryn.

Magdalen-Hill, Hants, near Winton.

Magdalen's, St. Somerſetſ. near Briſtol.

MAGDALENE's-CAVE, a cave in Carinthia, 10 miles E. of Gortz. It appears like like a chaſm in a rock, and at the entrance, torches are lighted to conduct travellers. It is divided into ſeveral apartments, with a vaſt number of pillars formed by nature, which give it a beautiful appearance, they being as white as ſnow, and almoſt tranſparent. The bottom is of the ſame ſubſtance, inſomuch that a perſon may fancy himſelf to be walking among the ruins of an enchanted caſtle, ſurrounded by magnificent pillars, ſome entire, and others broken.

MAGDALEN ISLANDS, in the gulf of St. Lawrence. The largeſt, which gives name to the reſt, is ſituated in lat. 47. 25. N. and lon. 61. 20. W.

MAGDEBURG, a large, well-built and trading town of Lower Saxony, capital of a duchy of the ſame name. Among the public buildings are the king's palace, anciently the reſidence of the biſhops, the armoury, the governor's houſe, and the guild-hall, where the regency and conſiſtory are held. In the cathedral is a ſuperb mauſoleum of Otho the Great. The cathedral ſquare is ornamented with large elegant houſes, and its area is well paved. Here are different manufactories of cotton and linen goods, ſtockings, hats, beautiful leather gloves, tobacco, and ſnuff; but the principal are thoſe of woollen and ſilk. It is happily ſituated for trade, having an eaſy communication with Hamburg by the Elbe, and lying on the road between Upper and Lower Germany. It was taken by ſtorm, in 1631, by the imperial general Tilly, who burnt the town and maſſacred the inhabitants, of whom only 800 eſcaped out of 40,000; and many young women plunged into the Elbe to eſcape violation. It is ſtrongly fortified, having among other works, a citadel ſeated on an iſland in the river Elbe, and is 52 miles WSW. of Potſdam. Lat. 52. 11. N. lon. 11. 45. E.

MAGDEBURG, a duchy in Lower Saxony, about 60 miles in length and 30 in breadth, ſubject to the king of Pruſſia. In 1703, it contained 35 towns and 431 villages. The States conſiſt of the prelates, the nobility, and the cities. It produces fine cattle, and a conſiderable quantity of corn; thoſe parts, which are not marſhy and overgrown with wood, being very fertile. The country affords ſeveral mines of pit-coal; and the ſalt ſprings are ſo rich, that they are able to ſupply all Germany with that commodity.

MAGDELAINE, a ſmall iſland near the ſouthern extremity of the iſland of Corſica.

MAGDELANA, a large river of S. America, which riſes under the equator, and running N. through Terra-Firma, unites with the Cance, is then called Rio Grande, and falls into the Atlantic Ocean, below Madre de Popa, 20 leagues W. of St. Martha.

MAGEE, an iſland on the coaſt of Antrim, Ulſter, 6 miles long and 2 broad, ſituated N. of Carrickfergus-Bay.

MAGELLAN, a famous ſtrait of South America, diſcovered in 1520 by Ferdinando Magellan, a Portugueſe, in the ſervice of Spain. It has many ſafe harbours in it, with narrow entrances, and vaſt large bays ſheltered ſo cloſely on all ſides by high mountains, that ſhips may ride ſafely in them without the leaſt anchor. The Spaniards call the country to the N. of the ſtrait, Tierra Magellanica, and reckon it a part of Chili. They had a fort and garriſon upon this ſtrait, but the men all periſhed through cold and want of proviſions.

MAGGEROE, a large iſland near the coaſt of Norway. Lat. 71. N.

Mageſtan, Dorſetſ. near Gillingham.

MAGGIA. See MADIA.

MAGGIORE, or LOCARNO, a lake in Italy, about 46 miles long and 6 or 8 broad, lying between the Swiſs bailiwicks and the Milaneſe. The lake abounds with trout, perch, and other fiſh, and the water is clear, but greeniſh.

Magben, Monmouthſ. W. of Newport.

Maghera, in Derry, Ulſter, 92 miles from Dublin. Maghera, in Down, Ulſter, Magheracreegan, in Tyrone, Ulſter, Magherafell, in Londonderry, Ulſter, with a conſiderable linen manufacture; 30 miles SE. of Londonderry. Magheralin, in Armagh, Ulſter, pleaſantly ſituated on the river Lagan; there are ſeveral bleachyards and manufactories about it. Magheredroll i. e. The Field of Difficulties; a name given to the country about Ballinehinch, in Down, Ulſter, on account of its being full of rocks and mountains.

Magharee, or Seven Hogs, a cluſter of ſmall iſlands on the W. coaſt of Ireland, at the S. ſide of the entrance into Tralee Bay.

MAGHARIES BAY, in Kerry, Munſter, between Brandon-Head and the Magheries Iſlands. It is a dangerous place for mariners, being full of ſunken rocks, and expoſed to frequent ſqualls from the mountains.

Maghereliu, or Maralin, in Down, Ulſter. The linen manufacture is carried on extenſively here. Magherevoly, in Fermanagh, Ulſter. Maghery, in Armagh, Ulſter, Magheryboy, in Kerry, Munſter, Maghremore,

Magbremore, in Donegal, Ulſter; alſo a bay on the coaſt of Wicklow, Munſter, 5 miles S. of Wicklow Head. Magilla, in Cork, Munſter. Magillagan-Point, a cape in Derry, Ulſter.

MAGLIANO, a town of the pope's territories, in Sabina, 28 miles N. of Rome.

MAGNAVACCA, a fort in the Ferrareſe, ſituated on a canal which runs from the Adriatic to Comachio.

MAGNISA, anciently MAGNESIA, a town of Natolia, once the ſeat of the Ottoman empire, and ſtill large, populous, and rich. It is ſeated on the Sarabat, 60 miles N. of Smyrna. Lat. 38. 50. N. lon. 27. 25. E.

MAGNY, a town in the dept. of Seine and Oiſe, 12 miles N. of Mantes; and a town in the depart. of Nievre, 8 miles S. of Nevers.

Magor, Monm. SW. of Caldicot.

MAGRA, or MAGORA, a river of Italy, which riſes in the Appenine Mountains, on the borders of Modena, Tuſcany and Genoa, and paſſing through the Valley of Magra, falls into the Mediterranean, 5 miles S. of Sarzana, in the territory of Genoa.

MAGUELONE, a lake in the dept. of Herault, near a town of the ſame name, ſeated on the coaſt of the Mediterranean.

Maguniby, in Kerry, Monſter. Maguire's Bridge, in Fermanagh, Ulſter.

Mahallagh, in Cork, Munſter, on the Lee, 5 miles E. of Macroomp.

MAHANADA, a river of Hindooſtan, which riſes in Berar, croſſes the country of Oriſſa, and falls, by ſeveral mouths, into the Bay of Bengal, 40 miles ESE. of Cattack.

Mahon, a river in Waterford, Munſter, which runs into the ſea, 11 miles E. of Dungarvan.

MAHRATTAS, the name of two large ſtates of India, which derive their name from Marhat, an ancient province of the Deccan. They are called the Poonah, or Weſtern Mahrattas; and the Berar, or Eaſtern. Collectively, they occupy all the ſouthern part of Hindooſtan Proper, with a large proportion of the Deccan. Malwa, Candeiſh, Viſiapour, and part of Oriſſa; the principal parts of Berar, Guzerat, and Agimere; and a ſmall part of Dowlatabad, Agra, and Allahabad, are compriſed within their extenſive empire, which extends nearly from ſea to ſea, acroſs the wideſt part of the peninſula; and from the confines of Agra northward to the river Kiſtna ſouthward; forming a tract of about 1000 miles long and 700 broad. The weſtern ſtate, the capital of which is Poonah, is divided among a number of chiefs, or princes, whoſe obedience to the paiſhwah, or head, like that of the German princes to the emperor, is merely nominal at any time; and, in ſome caſes, an oppoſition of intereſts begets wars, not only between the members of the empire themſelves, but alſo between the members and the head. Nagpour is the capital of the eaſtern Mahrattas. Both theſe ſtates, with the Nizam of the Deccan, were in alliance with the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, in the late war againſt Tippoo Sultan, from whoſe territories, on the termination of the war, they gained ſome conſiderable acquiſitions.

Maiden Bower, Bedfordſ. a very large Daniſh camp of a circular form, ſurrounded with a great rampart and ditch; near Dunſtable.

Maiden-Bradley, Wilts, 5 miles from Frome and Warminſter. Maiden Caſtle, Dorſ. a Roman encampment in the pariſh of Winterborn, St. Martin, the largeſt and moſt complete of any in the W. of England, and the ſummer ſtation of the Durotriges garriſon. It conſiſts of a treble ditch and rampart, the inner ones very deep and high. The form is oval, with two entrances, the one on the E. the other on the W. The ends of the ramparts lap over each other, ſo as to make the entrances winding and intricate. The whole area is 30 acres, and, including all the ramparts and ditches, makes 120 acres. Near the S. entrance is the mouth of a cave, formed by art, the W. diviſion of which could contain 1800 men; its uſe is unknown. Maiden-Croſs, Herts. near Hitchin.

MAIDENHEAD, anciently, SOUTH EALINGTON, a town in Birkſhire, ſeated on the river Thames, on the great weſtern road, carrying on a great trade in malt, meal, and timber, in their barges to London. It is 12 miles E. by N. of Reading, and 26 W. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Maiden-Heath, Lanc. near Blackburn.

MAIDEN NEWTON a town of Dorſetſ. 3 miles NW. of Frampton. Market diſuſed.

Maiden Oak, Suſſex, near the road from Petersfield to London.

Maiden-Way, extends from Maiden Caſtle, on Stainmore, York, N. Riding, by Kirby Thore, in Weſtmoreland, and Whitley, to Caer Voran in Northumberland, paſſing by a chain of ſtations of the Romans. It is near ſix yards wide; the ſides are formed by lines of very large pebbles, and where the road lies down

ſtero

eep deſcents, the pavement is formed f flat, thin ſtones, placed on their edges, nd laid tranſverſely.

Maidens, or Whillans, rocks ſo called etween the mouths of Larne and Glearm Bays, in Down, Ulſter.

Maidford, Northamp. NW. of Towcſter. Maidhurſt, Suſſex, NW. of Arundel. Maidſmerton, N. of Buckingham.

MAIDSTONE, a conſiderable borough f Kent, which contains above 6000 inabitants. It is a large place, conſiſting f 4 principal ſtreets, which interſect ach other at the market croſs, with a ill and county-hall. In the ancient Britons' time, it was reckoned their third hief city, having been a ſtation of the Romans. By means of the Medway, it njoys a briſk trade in exporting timber, lour, apples, nuts, and other commodiies of the county, particularly hops, of which there are numerous plantations round it, as well as orchards of cherries. Here are likewiſe ſome capital paper-mills, nd a manufactory of linen thread, originally introduced by the Flemings. The ide flows quite up to the town, and brings up barges of 50 or 60 tons. It is ſeated on the river Medway, a branch of which runs through the town, in a very plentiful county, 9 miles S. of Rocheſter, 20 W. of Canterbury, and 35 SE. by E. of London. Market on Thurſday, and another market on the ſecond Tueſday in every month.

Maidwell, Linc. near Burwell. Maidwell, Northamptonſh. near Harborough Maies, Suſſex, near Selmſton.

MAILLEZAIS, a town in the dept. of Vendee, 6 miles S. of Fontenay.

Maimbead, Devonſ. W. of Exmouth.

MAIN, a province of North America, which belongs to the ſtate of Maſſachuſetts. It is about 180 miles in length, and 110 in breadth, and is bounded on the N. and NW. by Canada; on the NE. by New Brunſwick; on the SE. by the Atlantic Ocean; and on the W. by Vermont and New Hampſhire. It is divided into three counties. Lincoln, which is the eaſternmoſt, Cumberland, and York. Portland is the county town of Cumberland, and capital of the whole territory. The heat in ſummer is intenſe, and the cold in winter equally extreme: all the freſh water lakes, ponds, and rivers are uſually paſſable on ice for near three months in the winter. The climate is very healthful; many of the inhabitants living 90 years, their preſent number is about 100,000.

MAINA, a country in the Morea, lying between two chains of mountains, which advance into the ſea. The inhabitants were never yet ſubdued by the Turks. They maintain their independence in the faſtneſſes of their mountains, and traffick in ſlaves, which they take indifferently from the Turks and the Chriſtians. They have a harbour and a town of the ſame name, 30 miles SW. of Miſtra.

Main Broad, Dorſetſhire, 3 miles N. of Owen Main.

MAINE, a river of Germany, which riſes in the marquiſate of Culmbach, on the confines of Bohemia, and running weſtward, falls into the Rhine, a little above Mentz. It runs by Bamberg, Wirtzberg, Aſchaffenburg, Hanau, and Francfort.

MAINE, a ci-devant diviſion of France, now principally forming the departments of the Mayenne and Sarte.

MAINLAND, ORKNEY, or POMONA, the principal of the Orkney Iſlands, is 24 miles long and 9 broad. The general appearance of the country is not very different from the Mainland of Shetland. The ſoil, however, is more fertile, and, in ſome parts, better cultivated. Kirkwall is the capital. See ORCADES.

MAINLAND, the principal of the Shetland iſles, is 60 miles long from N. to S. its breadth, which varies greatly, ſeldom exceeds 6 miles. The face of the country exhibits a proſpect of black, craggy mountains, and marſhy plains, interſperſed with ſome verdant ſpots, which appear ſmooth and fertile. Neither tree nor ſhrub is to be ſeen, except the juniper and the heath. The mountains abound with various kinds of game. Lofty cliffs, impending over the ocean, are the haunts of eagles, falcons, and ravens. The deep caverns underneath ſhelter ſeals and otters; and to the winding bays reſort the ſwans, geeſe, ſcarfs, and other aquatic birds. The ſeas abound with fiſh, ſuch as the cod, turbot, and haddock; but, particularly, at certain ſeaſons, with ſhoals of herrings of incredible extent; and they are viſited, at the ſame time, by whales and other voracious fiſhes. Lobſters, oyſters, muſcles, &c. are alſo plentiful. The hills are covered with ſheep of a ſmall breed, and of a ſhaggy appearance; but their fleece is commonly very ſoft, and often extremely fine. From their wool, ſtockings of ſuch a fine texture have been made, that, although of a large ſize, a pair was capable of paſſing through a common gold ring. Their horſes are of a diminutive ſize, but remarkably ſtrong and handſome, and are well known by the name of Shelties, from the name of the country. Many rivulets, and conſiderable lakes, abound with ſalmon, trout, &c. A mine of copper, and another of iron, have lately been opened near the S. extremity of this iſland. They are in the hands of the Angleſey Company, and are ſaid to be extremely productive. There is an inexhauſtible ſtore of peat, but no coal. Lerwick is the capital.

of

Mainlaw, Northumb. in the barony of Wark. Main Little, or Frier, Dorſetſh. Mains, Lancaſ. in Amounderneſs.

MAINTENON, a town in the dept. of Eure and Loire, ſeated on the river Eure, 9 miles N. of Chartres.

MAINUNGEN, a town of Henneburg, Franconia.

MAJORCA, an iſland belonging to Spain, in the Mediterranean Sea, between Ivica and Minorca, the largeſt of thoſe anciently called Baleares, about 50 miles in length and 35 in breadth. It is mountainous in the N. and W. parts, but fertile, producing corn, oil, honey, ſaffron, cattle, fiſh, rabbits, partridges, deer, wild fowl, horſes, &c. The whole iſland is encompaſſed with watch towers. It is temperate and wholeſome, but the exceſſive heat frequently occaſions a ſcarcity. It has no conſiderable rivers, though there are a great many fine fountains and wells, and ſeveral good harbours. The inhabitants are robuſt, lively, and good ſailors. The capital, MAJORCA, anciently PALMA, is a large and rich town, ſituated in a bay on the SW. coaſt of the iſland, with a good harbour. It has large and broad ſtreets, ſpacious ſquares, ſtately ſtone houſes, built in the antique manner, a large and magnificent cathedral, and 22 churches, beſides chapels and oratories. The inhabitants are computed at 10,000. The univerſity is more ancient than celebrated. Lat. 39. 34. N. lon. 2. 25. E.

MAIRE, LE, a ſtrait of S. America, lying between Staten Land and Terra del Fuego, ſo called from the navigator, who diſcovered it, in 1616. Lat. 55. 0. S.

Maize Hill, Kent, in Eaſt Greenwich. Maismore near Glouceſter.

MAIXENT, ST. a town in the department of the Two Sevres, trading in corn, ſtockings, and woollen ſtuffs, 26 miles SW. of Poictiers; and a town in the department of the Sarte, ſeated on the Seure.

Makely, Derb. E. of Uttoxeter. Makeney, N. of Derby. Maker. Devonſ. above Hamoaze, on a hill between Mount Edgecomb and Ram-Head. Makeſtick-Caſtle, Warw. E. of Coleſhill.

MAKRAN. See MACKERAN.

MALABAR, the name of the weſtern coaſt of the peninſula of Hindooſtan, extending from Cape Comorin to about 100 miles S. of Goa.

MALAÇCA, called by the ancients the GOLDEN CHERSONNESUS, a large peninſula in Aſia, bounded on the N. by Siam; and on all other ſides by the ocean; about 500 miles in length, and from 60 to 150 in breadth. It produces few commodities for trade, except tin and elephants' teeth; but there are a great many excellent fruits and roots, which yield good refreſhment for ſtrangers that call here. The pine-apple is the beſt in the world, and the manjoſtain is a delicious fruit, in the ſhape of an apple, whoſe ſkin is thick and red. The ramboſtan is of the ſize of a walnut, with a very agreeable pulp; and the durian, though it has not a pleaſant ſmell, yet has a very delicious taſte. They have plenty of cocoa nuts, whoſe ſhells will hold an Engliſh quart; beſide lemons, oranges limes, ſugar-canes, and mangoes. There is but little corn, and ſheep and bullocks are ſcarce; but pork, poultry, and fiſh are pretty plentiful. The religion of the natives is a mixture of Mahometaniſm. Their language is peculiarly ſoft, and is as common in the Indies as the French is in Europe, being very eaſily acquired, becauſe it has no inflections either in nouns or verbs. The interior inhabitants, who are, for the moſt part, ſavages, have abandoned themſelves, with deſperation, to the moſt ferocious habits, taking delight in doing miſchief to their neighbours. The Dutch have been maſters of the town of Malacca, ſituated on the SW. coaſt, ſince 1640, when they took it from the Portugueſe, after a ſix months ſiege. While in poſſeſſion of the latter, it was famous all over India and Europe, being, after Goa and Ormuz, by far the richeſt city in the Indies, and a great market for all the different commodities produced in Japan, China, Formoſa, Tonquin, Cochin-China, Siam, Lucon, Amboyna, &c. During the preſent war, it has been attacked and taken by the Engliſh, and is now in their poſſeſſion. Lat. 2. 11. N. lon. 101. 11. E.

MALACCA, STRAIT OF, the narrow ſea between the Iſland of Sumatra and the SW. coaſt of Malacca.

Maladar, Cornwall, N. of Grampound.

MALAGA, a conſiderable ſea port of Granada,

Granada, with a good harbour, built by the Phenicians, who called it Malacha, ſeveral centuries before Chriſt. Strabo ſpeaks of it as a Carthaginian colony, very commercial, and famous for its ſalted proviſions. The inhabitants export to the amount of two millions and a half of piaſtres, in wines, brandy, fruits, ſhumach, pickled anchovies, oil, &c. and only import to about one million and a half; Malaga, however, has little navigation of its own, the ſhips which arrive there being chiefly Engliſh and Dutch. It is ſeated on the Mediterranean, 15 miles S. of Cordova, and 235 S. of Madrid. Lat. 36. 44. N. lon. 4. 25. W.

MALAHIDE, a town and bay of Dublin, 6 miles from the metropolis. A cotton manufacture is eſtabliſhed here, the works of which are carried on by water.

MALAMOCO, a ſmall iſland and ſeaport of Italy, in the Lagunes of Venice, 4 miles S. of that city.

MALATIAH, a town of Aladulla, in Turkey and Aſia, the reſidence of a Jacobite and Neſtorian biſhop. It is ſituated on the W. ſide of the Euphrates, 90 miles WNW. of Diarbekir.

Malbay, a conſiderable bay on the coaſt of Clare, in Ulſter, extending from Hog's Head to Ballard's Point. Malborough, Devonſ. on the coaſt, between Salcomb and Hope Key. Malchaager, SE. of Kingſclere.

MALCHIN, a town of Mecklenburg, Lower Saxony, ſituated on the Cummer Lake, where it receives the river Peene, 20 miles E. of Guſtrow.

Malchway, a river in Rednorſ. which runs into the Wye, near Llanſtevan.

Malden, Kent, in Sheppey Iſle. Malden, Surry, 5 miles from Kingſton.

MALDEN, anciently CAMELODUNUM, a populous town of Eſſex, the firſt Roman colony in Britain, and the ſeat of ſome of the old Britiſh kings, ſituated near the confluence of the Chelmer with the Blackwater. Veſſels of 400 tons burden come up to the haven to unload; the colliers, however, lie in deep water below the town, and the coals are fetched up in lighters. Malden carries on a conſiderable trade in corn, coals, iron, wine, brandy, rum, deals, and chalk rubbiſh. The cuſtom of Borough Engliſh is kept up here. It is ſituated near the confluence of the river Blackwater, called alſo Malden Water and the Chelmer, 10 miles E. of Chelmsford, and 37 NE. of London. Market on Saturday.

Malden-Jenkins, Eſſex, two miles from Malden.

MALDIVE ISLANDS, a cluſter of Iſlands ſaid to be 1000 in number, SW. of Cape Comorin, in the Indian Sea. The northernmoſt is in lat. 7. 6. N. lon. 73. 4. E. The principal of them, called MALE, about a league and a half in circumference, is the moſt fertile, and the reſidence of the prince. It is ſituated nearly in the centre. Theſe iſlands are moſtly ſmall, and uninhabited. The inhabitants are a mixture of Arabs and Indians of Malabar. They ſupply veſſels with ſails and cordage, cocoa-nuts, oil, honey, dry fiſh, tortoiſe ſhell, and eſpecially cowries.

MALESHERBES, a town in the department of the Loiret.

MALESTROIT, a town in the department of Morbihan, 16 miles. ENE. of Vannes.

Malewry, Yorkſ. S. of Boroughbridge.

Malham, Yorkſhire.

Malin, in Donegal, Ulſter.

MALINES. See MECHLIN.

MALIO, or St. Angelo, a cape of the Morea, 50 miles SE. of Miſitra.

Mallerſtang-Foreſt, Weſtmoreland.

MALLICOLLO, an iſland, one of the largeſt of the New Hebrides, in the S. Sea, about 18 leagues long, and from 5 to 7 wide. Its inland mountains are moderately high, and clad with foreſts. The ſoil is a rich and fertile mould, in general, however, inferior to that of the Friendly Iſlands. Its vegetable productions are luxuriant, and in great variety; cocoa-nuts, bread-fruit, bananas, ſugar-canes, yams, eddoes, turmeric, and oranges.—Hogs, and common poultry, are their domeſtic animals. They had no dogs, for which reaſon, Captain Cook, who viſited the iſland in 1774, left them a dog and a bitch. The inhabitants, in their form, language, and manners, are widely different from thoſe of the Friendly and Society Iſlands. They correſpond in many particulars with the natives of New Guinea and Papua, particularly in their black colour and woolly hair. Both men and women are very dark coloured, ill-proportioned, and ugly, with long heads, flat faces, and monkey countenances; and the latter paint their heads, faces, and ſhoulders red. They are of a ſlender make, and tie a rope ſo faſt round their belly, that the ſhape of their bodies reſembles that of an overgrown piſmire. The climate of Mallicollo is very warm, and the inhabitants feel little inconvenience in going almoſt naked, either from heat or cold. Their keeping their bodies entirely free from punctures, is one particular.

particular, that remarkably diſtinguiſhes them from the other tribes of the S. Sea. Lat. 16. 15. S. lon. 167. 45. E

MALLING, WEST, a town of Kent, ſeated near Compherſt Wood, on a brook, that runs into the Medway, 6 miles W. of Maidſtone, and 30 E. by S. of London. This pariſh was anciently taxed to contribute towards the repair of the third arch, or pier, of Rocheſter-bridge. Market on Saturday.

MALLOW, a conſiderable town of Cork, in Munſter. Here is a fine ſpring, of moderately tepid water, reſembling in its qualities the hot-well waters of Briſtol. It is ſeated on the river Blackwater, 14 miles N. of Cork.

Mallocks, or Mattocks, Herts, on the river Aſh, near Hunſdon.

MALMEDY, a town of Liege, which, however, in ſpiritualities, is under the Archbiſhop of Cologne. The principal trade is making of cloth and dreſſing leather.

MALMO, a ſea-port of Schonen, ſeated on the Sound, 9 miles SW. of Lund.

MALMSBURY, originally MAIDULPHSBURG, and, by corruption, Malmsbury; in an ancient manuſcript, however, called Adhelmſbirig, an ancient town in Wiltſhire, which drives a conſiderable trade in the woollen manufacture. It was long famous for its abbey, which flouriſhed in great wealth, exceeding all in the county in bigneſs, revenues, and honour. Its Abbot was mitred, and ſat in parliament. The memory of Aldhelm, its firſt Abbot, the favourite of the great Saxon King Athelſtan, and whom he procured to be canonized after his death, is ſtill kept up by a meadow near this town, called Aldhelm's Mead. King Athelſtan amply endowed the abbey, granted the town large immunities, and choſe it for his burying place: he was buried accordingly under the high altar of the church, and his monument ſtill remains in the nave of it. It is pleaſantly ſituated on the river Avon, which almoſt ſurrounds it, and over which it has 6 bridges, 26 miles E. by N. of Briſtol, and 95 W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Malmeton, Linc. N. of Kirton, in Lindſey. Malmſborn, Weſtm. SW. of Appleby.

MALO, ST. a ſea-port in the department of Ille and Vilaine, on a ſmall iſland, united to the main land by a narrow mole or cauſeway, 6 or 700 yards in length: it has a large, well-frequented harbour, but difficult of acceſs, on account of the rocks that ſurround it; and is a rich trading place, ſtrong by nature and art towards the ſea, and defended by a citadel. It is 206 miles NW. of Paris. Lat. 48. 39. N. lon. 1. 57. W.

MALORA, a town of Genoa.

MALPARTIDA, a town of Spaniſh Eſtremadura, 14 miles SSW. of Placentia.

MALPAS, a town of Cheſhire, called in Latin Mala Platea, and by the Normans Mal Pas, according to Camden, from its narrow, ſteep, intricate way. It contains three ſtreets, an hoſpital, and a grammar-ſchool, and the benefice is rich enough to ſupport two rectors, who officiate alternately. It is ſeated on a high eminence, near the river Dee, 15 miles SE. of Cheſter, and 166 NW. of London. Market on Monday.

Malperton, Dorſetſ. near Charborough.

MALPLAQUET, a village of the late Auſtrian Hainault, famous for a dearly-purchaſed victory, gained Sept. 11, 1709, by the allies under the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, over the French, commanded by the Marſhals Villars and Boufflers. The confederates took 40 colours and ſtandards, 16 pieces of artillery, and a good number of priſoners. It is 8 miles SE. of Mons.

MALTA, an iſland of the Mediterranean, between Africa and Sicily, 90 miles in length, and 12 in its greateſt breadth. It was anciently little elſe than a barren rock; but ſuch quantities of ſoil have been brought from Africa and Sicily, that it is now become fertile. It has excellent vines, lemons, fruits, cotton, plenty of honey, good paſtures, conſiderable fiſheries, ſea ſalt, and a profitable coral fiſhery. However, they ſow but little corn, becauſe they can purchaſe it cheap in Sicily, and the iſland is deficient in wood. The number of inhabitants is variouſly eſtimated at from 60 to 90,000, who ſpeak a corrupt Arabic, and, in the towns, Italian. After the taking of Rhodes, the emperor Charles V. gave this iſland to the knights of St. John of Jeruſalem. It was attacked by the Turks in 1566, who, after many dreadful aſſaults, were obliged to abandon the enterpriſe, with the loſs of 30,000 men. The whole iſland is extremely well fortified. The knights of Malta formerly conſiſted of 8 nations; but they have long been only 7, becauſe the Engliſh have forſaken them. They are obliged to ſuppreſs all pirates, are at perpetual war with the Turks and other Mahometans, and are all under a vow of celibacy and chaſtity. It is about 60 miles SSW. of Cape Paſſaro, in Sicily.

MALTA, ſee CIVITA VECCHIA; Valetta is the capital.

Maltby, Linc. NW. of Burwell. Maltby, Linc. N. of Alford. Maltby, Norf. NW. of Yarmouth. Maltby, Norf. NW. of Stokeſley. Maltby, Yorkſ. SE. of Rotherham. Malthan-Cragg, Yorkſhire, E. of Settle.

* MALTON, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on the river Derwent, which was made navigable to the Ouſe, by an act in the 1ſt of Queen Anne. It is compoſed of two towns, the New and the Old, and is well inhabited. It is 18 miles NE. of York, and 216 N. by W. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday, and fairs on Saturday before Palm Sunday, the Saturday before Whitſunday, and October 10 and 11.

Maltravil, near Montgomery, North Wales, a poor village, but formerly a large place, and the reſidence of the princes of Powyſland.

MALVASIA, anciently EPIDAURUS, a ſmall promontory of Turkey in Europe, almoſt ſurrounded by the ſea, on the eaſtern coaſt of the Morea. The rich wine, formerly ſo much valued under the title of Malmſey, is brought hence. It is 40 miles ESE. of Miſitra. Lat. 36. 57. N. lon. 23. 22. E.

Malvern Hills, hills in the SW. part of Worceſterſhire, which may be ſeen at a great diſtance. They extend about 10 miles in length, in a direction N. and S. the N. extremity about 7 miles SSW. of Worceſter. In theſe hills is a ſpring of uncommon purity, much reſorted to in ſcrofulous and ſcorbutic caſes.

MALWA, a province of Hindooſtan, bounded on the W. by Guzerat; on the N. by Agimere and Agra; on the E. by Allahabad and Oriſſa; and on the S. by Candeiſh. It is ſituated nearly under the tropic of Cancer, and is one of the moſt extenſive, elevated, and diverſified tracts in Hindooſtan, and is divided between the paiſhwah of the weſtern Mahrattas, and two of the inferior chiefs, Sindia and Holkar. Ougein is the capital of Sindia, and Indore of Holkar.

Malwater, Yorkſhire, NE. of Settle. Malwood Caſtle, and Lodge, Hampſhire, near Beaulieu. Manarabby, mountains of Mayo, in Connaught, 18 miles WNW. of Caſtlebar.

MAMERS, a town in the department of Sarte, 12 miles SE. of Alençon.

Mamble, Worceſterſhire, near Lindridge. Mambiled, Monmouthſhire, W. of Uſk. Mamhead, Devonſhire. Here is one of the fineſt ſeats in the county, commanding, full, various, and beautiful proſpects of the river Ex, the ſea, and the country, ſtretching away beyond Exmouth, Lympſtone, &c. to the Dorſetſhire and Somerſetſhire hills. Mam Tor, a mountain of Derbyſhire, with lead mines in it, in the Peak, near Caſtleton.

* MAN, an iſland in the Iriſh Sea, W. of the coaſt of Cumberland, about 30 miles in length, and from 8 to 15 in breadth. It contains 17 pariſhes, called kirks, and the chief towns are Ruthen, Douglas, and Peel. The ſoil varies in different tracts, yet produces more corn than is ſufficient to maintain the natives. The air, which is ſharp and cold in winter, is healthy, and the inhabitants live to a very great age. The commodities of this iſland are black cattle, wool, fine and coarſe linen, hides, ſkins, honey, tallow, and herrings. The froſts here are ſhort, and the ſnow, eſpecially in lands near the ſea, lies not long on the ground. Their cattle and horſes are ſmall, and they have badgers, foxes, eagles, and mottled hawks. Here are ſeveral quarries of ſtone and thin blue ſlate, and ſome mines of lead, copper, and iron. Thin oat cakes are the common bread of the inhabitants. About the rocks of the iſland breed an incredible number of all ſorts of ſea-fowl, and eſpecially on the Calf of Man, an iſland 3 miles in circuit, before the S. promontory of Man, and ſeparated from it by a channel 2 furlongs broad. On this little iſland 5000 young puffins are generally taken every year. The biſhop is nominated by the Duke of Athol, as heir of the eldeſt branch of the Stanleys, Earls of Derby; but the ſovereignty of the iſland was purchaſed by the Engliſh government in 1765, whereby a free trade was permitted with England, and an entire ſtop put to the clandeſtine trade which they carried on, with prodigious ſucceſs, with England and Ireland. He was formerly reckoned a baron, but does not ſit in the houſe of Peers, although he is allowed the higheſt ſeat in the lower houſe of convocation. The language is a dialect of the Erſe. In its civil government, the iſland is divided into 6 ſheedings, each having its proper coroner, who is intruſted with the peace of his diſtrict, and acts in the nature of a ſheriff. Of their laws, the Lord Chief Juſtice Coke obſerves, "that they are ſuch as are ſcarce to be found any where elſe."

Man or Mann, a river in Nottinghamſhire, which falls into the Meden at Maughton. Manacha, Cornw. SE. of Helſton, Helſton. Manacles, Cornwall, rocky points in the Engliſh Channel, E. of the Lizard Point.

MANAR, an iſland of Aſia, on the NW. coaſt of the iſland of Ceylon. It gives the name of Gulf to the Sea which lies to the S. The Portugueſe got poſſeſſion of it in 1560; but the Dutch took it from them in 1658. Lat. 9. 0. N. lon. 79. 58. E.

MANATEE BAY, on the S. coaſt of the iſland of Jamaica, in lon. 76. 45. W.

MANATOULIN, a chain of iſlands in Lake Huron, N. America, extending 30 leagues in length, and about 2 in breadth. The name ſignifies "a place of ſpirits;" and they are conſidered as ſacred by the Indians.

Manby, Linc. W. of Glanford-Brigg. Manby, Lincolnſ. NE. of Louth. Manby, Yorkſ. on the Wherfe, NW. of Thirſk. Manceſter, Warwickſ. near Atherſtone.

MANCHA, LA, a mountainous territory in New Caſtile, having Murcia on the E. and Murcia and Jaen to the S. This is the moſt cheerful country of Spain. The inhabitants are affable, and great lovers of muſic and dancing. Their ſongs, or ſeguidillas, are peculiar to that part of the kingdom. The women are tall, well-made, and have handſome features; while ſeeing a pretty woman dance the meneo, a certain rapid movement, with voluptuous poſtures, and ſteps languiſhing, graceful, varied and juſt, even a philoſopher would find his wiſdom troubleſome. A late traveller ſays, "There is no labourer or young female peaſant, who is not well acquainted with Don Quixote and Sancho."

MANCHA, a town of Jaen in Spain, 7 miles E. of Jaen.

MANCHE LA, or THE CHANNEL, a department in the weſtern part of the ci-devant Normandy, forming nearly a peninſula, on the N. coaſt. Manchi La coaſt. It is bounded on the N. and W. by the Engliſh channel, and on the S. by the departments of Ille and Vilaine, and the Mayenne. Coutances is the capital.

* MANCHESTER, anciently a Roman ſtation called MANCUPIUM, a large, populous, and flouriſhing town in Lancaſhire, and a place of great antiquity. It was famous for its population, market, and manufactures of ſtuffs in Camden's time, but it is now principally conſpicuous as the centre of the cotton trade, an immenſe buſineſs, extending, in ſome or other of its operations, from Furneſs (where great cotton ſpinning-mills have been eſtabliſhed) to Derby N. and S. and from Halifax to Liverpool E. and W. The labours of a very populous neighbourhood are recollected at Mancheſter, whence they are ſent to London, Liverpool, Hull, &c. Theſe conſiſt of a great variety of cotton, ſilk, linen, and mixed goods, fitted for all ſorts of markets, both at home and abroad, ſpreading over a great part of Europe, America, and the coaſt of Guinea, and bringing back vaſt profits to this country. The manufacture of ticking, tapes, filleting and other ſmall wares, of ſilk goods, and of hats, is alſo carried on at Mancheſter; from which various ſources of wealth, it has attained greater opulence than almoſt any of the trading towns in England. Its buildings, eſpecially the more modern ones, are on a proportional ſcale of ſize and elegance. Its chief ornaments are the college, the market-place, the exchange, the collegiate church, and the infirmary. Mancheſter contains 600 ſtreets and 14 churches, beſides other places of worſhip; the number of inhabitants is eſtimated at 70,000. By the river Irwell, over which it has an ancient and lofty ſtone bridge, it has a communication with the Merley, and all the late various extenſions of inland navigation. It is ſituated at the confluence of the above river and the Irk, 67 miles WSW. of York, and 182 NNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

MANCHESTER, a town of Virginia, ſituated on James River, and a town in the State of Vermont.

MANDERSCHEIDT, a town of Treves.

Mandevilles, Dorſetſhire, in Whitchurch pariſh. Mandevilthorp, Northamptonſhire, near Chipping-Warden.

MANDINGO, a country of Africa, ſituated about 200 miles from the Atlantic, near the river Gambia.

MANDRIA, a ſmall deſert iſland, in the Archipelago, between Samos and Langos. It is ſurrounded by rocks, and gives name to the ſea near it.

Manenden, Eſſex, S. of Berden. Manesgate. Lincolnſh. S. of Burwell. Maney, Cambridgeſhire, in the Fens. Maney-Manor, Warwickſhire, S. of Stretton. Manfield, Yorkſhire, on the Tees.

MANFREDONIA, a ſea-port of Capitanata, Naples, built in the year 1256, by King Manfroi, on the ruins of the ancient Sipontium. It is ſeated on a gulf of the ſame name, in the Adriatic, in lat. 41. 35. N. and lon. 16. 12. E.

MANGALORE, a ſea-port in Hindooſtan, in the Canary country, on the coaſt of Malabar. It has an excellent road for ſhips ſips to anchor in, while the rainy ſeaſon laſts. On their feſtival days, the Hindoo inhabitants carry their idols in triumph, being placed in a waggon, adorned on all ſides with flowers. There are ſeveral ſharp, crooked, iron hoops faſtened to the wheels, upon which the mad devotees throw themſelves, and are cruſhed to pieces. It is the greateſt place for trade of any in the kingdom; and the Portugueſe have a factory here for rice, and a pretty large church, frequented by black converts. The houſes are meanly built along the ſides of the rivers. Lat. 2. 50. N. lon. 74. 44. E.

MANGERA, an iſland in the S. Sea, about 4 leagues in circumference. The coaſt is guarded by a reef of coral rocks, againſt which a heavy ſurf is continually breaking. In the interior parts it riſes into ſmall hills, whence there is an eaſy deſcent to the ſhore. They have neither hogs nor dogs; but they have plaintains, taro, and bread-fruit. Captain Cook repreſents this as a very fine iſland; but the hoſtile appearance of its inhabitants obliged him to leave it (in the year 1777) without making any ſtay. Lat. 21. 27. S. lon. 158. 13. W.

Mangerſbury, Glouceſterſhire, near Stow-on-the-Would.

Mang-River, in Kerry, Munſter, Mangerton Mountain, in Kerry Munſter, near the lake of Killarney, accounted the higheſt in Ireland.

Mangotsfield, Glouceſterſhire, 4 miles NE. of Briſtol.

MANGISCHLAK, a town on the E. coaſt of the Caſpian Sea, 180 miles SE. of Aſtracan. It is a place of conſiderable trade between the Ruſſians and Tartars, the latter bringing hither the produce of their own country, and even of Bucharia, ſuch as cotton, yarn, and ſtuffs, furs, and ſkins, and rhubarb.

Mangwell, Oxfordſ. near Wallingford.

MANHARTZBURG, a quarter or diviſion of the archduchy of Auſtria, lying between the Danube, and Bohemia, and Moravia.

MANHEIM, one of the moſt beautiful cities in the palatinate of the Rhine, circle of Lower Rhine. The ſtreets are all ſtraight, and interſect each other at right angles. The inhabitants are computed at 24,000. The town has three grand gates, adorned with baſſo-relievos, very beautifully executed. It is almoſt entirely ſurrounded by the Neckar and the Rhine, and the country about it is flat. The palace of the elector palatine is a magnificent ſtructure, containing a gallery for paintings, cabinets of antiquities and natural hiſtory, a library, treaſury, and menage. The number of the inhabitants, in 1784, excluſive of the garriſon, was 21,858. Manheim is ſix miles NE. of Spire, and 10 W. of Heidelberg.

Manhood, Suſſex, near Thorney. Manie, Lincolnſhire, W. of Spilſby.

MANIANA, or MALIANA, a town of Algiers, much frequented by pilgrims.

Maning, Cornwall, near Stow. Maningham, Yorkſhire, N. of Bradford.

MANILLA, town or city, capital of the Iſland of Luconia, as well as the Philippine Iſlands, ſituated on a bay on the SW. coaſt. It contains about 3000 inhabitants, excluſive of as many Chineſe, who live in the ſuburbs, and about as many more throughout the iſlands. There are 15 other ſuburbs, inhabited by Japaneſe and nations of various mixtures. The ſtreets are broad, but frequent earthquakes have ſpoiled their uniformity. The citadel is in the ſhape of a triangle, having one baſtion towards the ſea, another towards the river, and a third at the W. point, to cover the port, which is only fit for ſmall veſſels, and there are good out-works. In 1762, Manilla was taken by the Engliſh under Rear Admiral Corniſh, and Colonel Sir William Drapier, and, to ſave it from deſtruction, it was agreed to pay a million ſterling for its ranſom; but this agreement was ungenerouſly diſowned by the Spaniſh court.

* MANINGTREE, a dirty town of Eſſex, ſeated on the river Stour, 9 miles ENE. of Colcheſter, and 60 ENE. of London. A good market on Tueſday.

Maniton, Cornwall, SW. of Launceſton. Manlefs, Glouceſterſ. a hamlet in Brimpsfield. Manley, Cheſhire, in Delamere-Foreſt. Maningford, Abbott's and Crucis, Wilts. NW. of Everley Warren, Mannington, Dorſetſhire, near Holt Foreſt. Mannington, Norfolk, NW. of Aleſham. Manor, Durham, near Lanchester. Manner, Nottinghamſhire, W. of Worksop.

Man of War, in Dublin, Leinſter, a ſmall village, 13 miles N. of the metropolis. Manor Cunningham, in Donegal, Ulſter. Manor Hamilton, in Leitrim, Connaught.

MANOSQUE, a town in the department of the Lower Alps, before the revolution, a commandery of Malta. It is 10 miles S. of Forcalquier, and 350 S. by E. of Paris.

MANRESA, or MANXES, a town of Catalonia, 25 miles NNW. of Barcelona.

MANS, LE, a large town, capital of the the dept. of Sarte. The inhabitants amount to about 14,000. It has excellent poultry, known at Paris by the name of pullets of Mans; and its wax and ſtuffs are very famous. It is ſeated near the confluence of the Sarte and the Huiſne, and is 75 miles W. by N. of Orleans.

MANSAROAR, a large lake of Thibet, from which the ſouthernmoſt head of the Ganges is ſuppoſed to iſſue. It is about 100 miles in circumference.

Manſel Gamage, between Hereford and Stanton. Manſel Hope, Herefordſhire, SE. of Roſs. Manſel-Lacy, Herefordſhire, SE. of Weobly. Manſergh, Weſtmoreland, NW. of Kirby-Lonſdale.

MANSFELDT, a town of Upper Saxony, with a caſtle, ſituated on a high rock, 26 miles SSE. of Halberſtadt, capital of a county of the ſame name, about 28 miles in its greateſt length, and 16 in its greateſt breadth. It is ſurrounded by the electorate of Saxony, and the diſtricts of Querfurt, Merſeburg, Magdeburg, Anhalt, Halberſtadt, and Stolberg.

*MANSFIELD, a well built town in Nottinghamſhire, ſeated near the edge of the foreſt of Sherwood, is pretty large, has a great trade in corn and malt, and a conſiderable manufacture of ſtockings. It is 12 miles N. of Nottingham, and 140 N. by W. of London. Market on Thurſday.

MANSFIELD, a town of Connecticut.

Manſfield Woodhouſe, Nottinghamſhire, N. of Manſfield. Manſforth, Durham, E. of Biſhop Auckland.

MANSILLA EL BURGO, a town in the province of Leon, 10 miles SE. of Leon.

Manſton, Devonſhire, S. of Morton.

MANTES, a town in the department of Seine and Oiſe, ſeated on the river Seine, over which it has a bridge of 36 arches, 27 miles NW. of Paris.

Manton, Dorſetſ. NE. of Sturminſter. Manton, Nottinghamſh. near Worksop. Manton, Wiltſhire, near Marlborough. Manton, Rutlandſhire, between Martinſthorp and Normanton.

MANTUA, THE DUCHY OF, a country of Italy, lying along the river Po, which divides it into parts, having the Veroneſe and Breſſan to the N. and the Cremoneſe to the W. It is about 50 miles in length, and 35 in breadth; is fruitful in corn, paſture, flax, leguminous plants, fruits, and excellent wine, and abounds with good horſes. The houſe of Auſtria has been in poſſeſſion of this duchy ſince the death of the laſt duke, Charles IV. in 1708, having annexed it to the government of Milan. It now, however, maintains a French garriſon, and forms a part of the new Cisalpine Republic. The principal rivers are the Po, Oglio, Mincio, and Secchia; and the principal town is of the ſame name.

MANTUA, the capital city of the duchy of the ſame name, in Italy, is ſeated on an iſland in the midſt of a lake, and is very ſtrong by ſituation as well as art, as there is no coming at it, except by two cauſeways which croſs the lake. It is very large, having 8 gates, 4 collegiate churches, 21 parochial, 14 other churches and alms-houſes, 11 oratories, 40 convents and nunneries, and without the city, 3 parish churches, 2 other churches, and 7 convents; alſo a quarter for the Jews to live in, and above 16,000 inhabitants. The ſtreets are broad and ſtraight, and the houſes well built. It was greatly noted for its ſilk, and other manufactures; but they are now inconſiderable, and the air in the ſummer-time is unwholeſome. It is ſeated on the river Mincio, and has a univerſity; 35 miles NE. of Parma, 28 SW. of Verona, and 220 N. by W. of Rome. Lat. 45. 10. N. Lon. 10. 50. E.

Manuden, Eſſex. Manworthy, Devonſ. in Houlſworthy pariſh. Manyan, a river in Denbighſ. Manyfold, a river in Staff. Maperley, N. of Nottingham. Maperton, Dorſetſhire, near Bridport. Maperton, N. and S. Dorſetſ. near Beminſter. Maperton, Somerſetſhire, SW. of Wincaunton. Mapes, Middleſex, near Kilburn. Mapleback, Nottingh. N. of Southwell. Mapleborough, Warw. near Studley. Maplesirwell, Hants, near Baſingſtoke. Mapledurham, Hants, near Petersfield. Mapledurham, Oxfordſ. 4 miles from Reading. Mapleſdown, Kent, NW. of Wrotham. Mapleſted, Great and Little, Eſſex, near Caſtle-Heningham. Mapleton, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, near Frodlingham. Mapowder, Dorſetſ. 5 miles NE. of Buckland-Abbas. Mappleton, Derb. near Aſhborn.

MAR FOREST, a woody, mountainous diſtrict in the W. angle of Aberdeenſhire.

MARACAIBO, a rich and conſiderable town of S. America, capital of the province of Venezuela. It carries on a great trade in ſkins, chocolate, which is the beſt in America, and very fine tobacco. It is ſeated towards the middle of a lake of the ſame name, where it becomes narrower. In lat. 10. 0. N. lon. 70. 45. W.

MARACAIBO, a large lake in Terra Firma,

Firma about 200 miles long, and 50 broad, emptying itſelf into the Gulf of Venezuela.

MARAGNAN, or MARANHAO, a province of Brazil, which comprehends a fertile, well inhabited iſland, upwards of 30 miles in circumference, and ſituated at the mouth of 3 rivers. The French ſettled here in 1612, and built a town; but they were ſoon driven from it by the Portugueſe, who have poſſeſſed it ever ſince. The climate is agreeable and wholeſome, and the land fertile and rich, producing every thing in perfection without labour or manure. Lat. 2. 30. S. lon. 45. 55. W.

MARANO, a town of Friuli, Venice; the capital, St. Felipe de Maranhas, is now very ſtrong, and has a ſtout caſtle built on a rock towards the ſea, which commands a very convenient harbour: and a town of Lavora, Naples.

MARASCH, a town of Aladulia; and a town of Caramania.

MARANT, or AMARANT, a town of Aderbeitzan, Perſia, 50 miles N. of Tauris.

MARATHONA, a village of Livadia, the ancient Marathon, 12 miles NE. of Athens.

MARAZION. See MERAZION.

MARBACH, a town and river of Suabia, which runs into the Fils, in the duchy of Wurtemburg: alſo three towns in the archduchy of Auſtria, and a town of Ergzeburg, Upper Saxony.

MARBELLA, a ſeaport, a town of Granada, ſeated at the mouth of the Rio-Verde 26 miles SW. of Malaga.

Marbrook, N. of Stafford. Marbrook, a river in Shropſhire. Marbury, Cheſhire, near Northwich. Marbury, Cheſhire, E. of Malpas.

MARCEL, ST. a town in the reſpective departments of Ardeche, Saone, and Loire, Mouths of the Rhone and Indre.

MACELLIN, ST. a town in the dept. of Iſere, ſeated in a country that produces excellent wine. It is 5 miles from St. Antoine, and 253 S. by E. of Paris, and a town in the department of Rhone and Loire.

MARCELLINO, a town of Calabria Citra.

MARCH, or MERCH, a town of Cambridgeſhire, in the Iſle of Ely, 26 miles N. of Cambridge, and 79 N. of London. Market on Friday.

Marcham, Berkſhire, near Abingdon.

MARCHE, a ci-devant province of France, about 55 miles in length and 20 in breadth, not very fertile in corn and wine, but feeding a great number of cattle. It now principally forms the department of Creuſe, and part of that of Vienne.

MARCHE, LA, a town in the dept. of the Volges, ſituated near the ſource of the Mouſon, 20 miles S. of Neufchateau: alſo a town of Luxemburg, ſituated on the river Marſette.

MARCHENA, a town of Seville, Andaluſia, particularly fertile in olives, though dry for want of water.

MARCHIENNES, a town of Liege, ſituated on the Sambre, 2 miles W. of Charleroy.

MARCHIENNES, a town in the dept. of the North, ſeated in a moraſs, on the river Searpe, 7 miles ENE. of Douay.

Marchington, Staffordſhire, 2 miles below Uttoxeter. Marchomley, Shropſhire, SE. of Prees.

MARCHPURG, a town of Stiria.

MARCIGLIANO, a town of Lavora, 9 miles NE. of Naples.

MARCIGNY, a town in the dept. of Saone and Loire, ſeated near the river Loire.

Marcleeve, Warwickſ. near Bidford.

MARCK, a territory in Weſtphalia, pretty fertile in wheat, rye, peas, flax, barley, &c. and ſubject to the king of Pruſſia. Ham is the capital. It has the duchy of Berg on the S. and the duchies of Berg and Cleves on the W.

Marcley, Great and Little, Herefordſhire, SW. of Ledbury. Near it is a hill, which in 1575, according to Dr. Fuller, moved from its place, carrying along with it the trees that grew on it, together with the ſheepfolds and flocks of ſheep grazing on it, till it ſettled on a place 12 fathoms higher. In its progreſs it overthrew Kinnaſton Chapel, together with the cauſeways, trees, houſes, &c. that ſtood in its way.

MARCO, ST. a town of Otranto, a town of Principato Ultra, two towns of Capitanata, a town of Calabria Citra, and a town of Galicia in Spain.

Mardale, Weſtmoreland, in the pariſh of Shap. Marden, Herefordſhire, on the river Lug. Marden, Kent, near Maidſtone. Marden, Surry near Godſtone.

MARDIKE, a ſea-port in the department of the North, 4 miles SW. of Dunkirk.

MAREE, LOCH, a great freſh-water lake of Roſsſhire, 11 miles long, and in ſome parts, 4 broad. Many ſmall iſlands are ſcattered over it; and it abounds with ſalmon, char, and trout.

Mare End, Glouc. near Aſhelworth.

MARENNES, a town in the department of Lower Charente, remarkable for its ſalt-works, and the green-finned oyſters found near the coaſt. It is 8 miles SSW. of Rochfort, and 270 SW. of Paris.

Mareſfield, Suſſex. Mare-Street, Middleſex, in Hackney.

MARETIMO, an iſland near the W. coaſt of Sicily, about 10 miles in circumference: it contains only a few farm-houſes, with a chateau, but produces a great deal of honey. Lat. 38. 5. N. lon. 12. 35. E.

Margam, Glamorg. Margaret's, St. Wilts, near Marlborough. Margaret's, St. Northumberland, SE. of Alnwick. Margaret's, St. Kent, between St. Mary Cray and Graveſend. Margaret's, St. Suffolk, near Bungay. Margaret's, St. Suffolk, SE. of St. Margaret's, near Bungay. Margaret's, St. Heref. near Morehampton. Margaret's-at-Cliff, St. has a bay NE. of Dover. Margaret's, St. Kent, adjoining Rocheſter. Margaret's, St. Herts, near Amwell. Margaret Marſh, Dorſetſhire, SW. of Melbury.

MARGARETTA, an iſland of S. America, near Terra Firma, about 40 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. The continual verdure renders it very pleaſant; and it is fertile in maize and fruits; but the Spaniards have moſtly retired thence to Terra Firma, and the inhabitants now are Mulattoes, and the original natives. Lat. 11. 7. N. lon. N. 63. 12. W.

*MARGATE, a ſea-port of Kent, on the N. ſide of the Iſle of Thanet, within a ſmall bay in the breach of the cliff; it has rapidly increaſed of late years, by the great reſort to it for ſea-bathing, the ſhore being level and covered with fine ſand, well adapted for that purpoſe. Here is a ſalt-water bath, which has performed great cures in nervous and paralytic caſes, and numbneſs in the limbs. Great quantities of corn are exported hence, and veſſels are frequently paſſing to and from the coaſt of Flanders. There are, moreover, regular packet-boats, of 80 or 100 tons burthen, to and from London, ſome of which are elegantly fitted up. It is built on an eaſy aſcent, (the principal ſtreet being near a mile in length) 14 miles N. of Deal, and 72 E. by S. of London.

Marget-End, Eſſex, by Ingateſtone, Marham, Lincolnſhire, near Scrivelby and Tatterſhall. Marham, Northamptonſhire, near Peterborough. Marham, Norfolk. W. of Swaffham.

MARIAN ISLANDS. See LADRONES.

MARIA, or ST. MARIA, an iſland of the Indian Ocean, about 5 miles E. of Madagaſcar, in lat. 17. 0. S. It is 45 miles in length, and 5 in breadth; well watered, fertile in rice, ſugar-canes, legumes, pine-apples, tobacco, &c. and ſurrounded by rocks. The air is extremely moiſt, as it rains almoſt every day, and ſometimes for a fortnight together. It is inhabited by about 600 negroes, but ſeldom viſited by ſhips paſſing that way.

MARIA, ST. a conſiderable town of S. America, in the audience of Panama, built by the Spaniards after they had diſcovered the gold mines that are near it. It is ſeated at the bottom of the Gulph of St. Michael, at the mouth of a river of the ſame name. The Spaniards come here every year in the dry ſeaſon, which continues three months, to gather the gold-duſt out of the ſands of the neighbouring ſtreams, and carry away great quantities. Lat. 7. 43. N. lon. 78. 48. W.

MARIA, ST. one of the Azores, or Weſtern iſlands. It produces plenty of wheat, and has about 5000 inhabitants.

MARIA, ST. a town of Andaluſia, 18 miles N. of Cadiz, and ſeveral towns in Italy.

MARIE-AUX-MINES, a town in the department of Upper Rhine, famous for its mines of ſilver and lead, 12 miles NW. of Colmar.

MARIENBURG, a town of Erzeburg, Upper Saxony, near which are mines of ſilver, cobalt, iron, vitriol, and ſulphur; alſo a town and palatinate of Pruſſia, on the Viſtula; a town in the dept. of the North, 10 miles W. of Charlemont; and a town in the dept of the Ardennes.

MARIENWERDER, a town of Oberland, Pruſſia, ſeated near the Viſtula, 31 miles S. of Dantzick.

MARIENSTADT, in W. Gothland, ſituated on the Wenner Lake.

MARIGALANTE, a ſmall iſland of the Weſt Indies, ſubject to the French. It is of a circular form, and about 14 leagues in circumference. Along the E. ſhore are lofty, perpendicular rocks, that ſhelter vaſt numbers of tropical birds. The weſtern ſhore is flat, and the ground, in general, is proper for cultivation. It has ſeveral large caverns, where crabs are found, with many little ſtreams, and ponds of freſh water. It is covered with trees, and particularly abounds with tobacco and the wild cinnamon-tree. It is 30 miles NE. of Dominica, and 40 E. of Guadaloupe. Lat. 16 N. lon. 61. 11 W.

MARIGNANO, a town of Milan.

Maring-on-the-Hill, Lincolnſhire, near Horncaſtle. Maringtus, Shropſhire, E. of Montgomery.

MARINO, ST. a town of Italy, capital of a ſmall independent republic, ſeated on a mountain, to which its territory is confined.

ſined, and ſurrounded by the duchy of Urbino. The inhabitants are about 6000; without heroes, without conquerors, without parade; they have enjoined repoſe, and liberty near 14 centuries.

MARINO, a town of Italy, in the Campagna, 10 miles SE. of Rome.

Maris, Glouc. in Winruſh. Mariſton, Devonſ. near Liſton. Mark, Eaſt, Somerſetſ. in Wedmore pariſh. Markham, Cornw. S. of Stratton. Markby, Linc. near Alford. Markfield, Leic. near Bagworth Park. Markſfield, South, NE. of Biſſdon. Markendale Chapel, Weſtmorland, by Ull's Water. Markes, Eſſex, near Rumford. Market-End, Oxfordſhire, near Amerſden.

Market Hill, in Armagh, Ulſter.

MARKET JEW. See MERAZION.

MARKET OVERTON, a town in Rutland, 3 miles from Okeham. Market on Tueſday, if not diſuſed.

Market Street, in Herts, and Beſordſ. 3 miles from Dunſtable. Mark Hall, Eſſex, near Harlow. Markham, E. and W. or Great and Little, Notting. near Tuxford. Markingfield, Yorkſhire, W. of Boroughbridge. Markinton, Yorkſhire, between Ripley and Rippon. Marks, St. Somerſ. near Briſtol. Markſbury, Somerſ. near Fenneford. Mark's-Hall, Eſſex, near Coggeſhall. Mark's-Hall, in Margaret Roding pariſh. Mark's-Hall, Eſſex, in the pariſhes of Leighton and Walthamſtow. Mark, Weſt, Somerſetſhire, near Brent Marſh. Marlais, a river in Pembrokeſhire. Marland, Lanc. near Rochdale.

*MARLBOROUGH, an ancient borough of Wiltſhire, containing two pariſh churches, ſeveral commodious inns, and about 500 houſes, with broad and paved ſtreets. Mr. Camden mentions an ancient cuſtom here, viz. that every freeman, at his admiſſion, gave to the mayor a couple of greyhounds, two white capons, and a white bull. It is ſeated on the river Kennet, 40 miles E. of Briſtol, and 74 W. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturdays.

MARLBOROUGH, two towns of Maryland, a town of Maſſachuſett's, a town of Penſylvania, and a county of South Carolina.

MARBOROUGH, FORT, an Engliſh factory, on the SW. coaſt of Sumatra, 3 miles eaſt of Bencoolen.

Marldon, Devonſhire, in a marley ſoil; whence a brook runs to Torbay. Marles, Eſſex, near Epping. Marlees, Suſſex, near Weſt Grinſted. Marleigh, Devonſhire, near King's and Biſhop's Nemet. Marliford, Suffolk, SE. of Framlingham. Marlewood, Glouceſ. in Thornbury pariſh. Marling ford, Norfolk, W. of Norwich. Marloe, Shropſhire, near Purſlow.

MARLOW, GREAT, a town of Buckinghamſ. ſeated on the river Thames, over which is a bridge into Berkſhire. Its manufactures are making bone lace, paper, and thimbles, and there are ſeveral corn mills on the Loddon, between this town and High Wycombe. It is 17 miles S. of Ayleſbury, and 31. W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Marlow, Little, Bucks, near Marlow. Marlow, Heref. beyond Kinton, towards Shropſhire. Marlſton, near Cheſter.

MARLY, a ci-devant royal palace in France, and foreſt of the ſame name, noted for its fine gardens and water-works. It is ſituated near the Seine, 3 miles N. of Verſailles.

MARMANDE, a town in the department of Lot and Garonne, which carries on a great trade in corn, wine, and brandy. It is ſituated on the Garonne, 40 miles SE. of Bourdeaux.

MARMORA, an iſland in the ſea of Marmora, 10 miles long, and 8 wide; with a town of the ſame name, and a few villages.

MARMORA, or THE WHITE SEA, between Europe and Aſia, which communicates with the Straits of Gallipoli, and the Strait of Conſtantinople. It is 90 miles in length, and 44 in breadth, and was anciently called the Propontis.

MARNE, a department of France, W. of the department of the Meuſe. It takes its name from a river which riſes 3 miles E. of Langres, paſſing by Chaumont, Vitry, Epernay, Meux, &c. joins the Seine at Charenton. Chalons is the capital.

MARNE, UPPER, a dept. of France, bounded on the NW. by the dept. of Marne, and divided into nearly two equal parts by the river Marne, which has its riſe here. Chaumont is the capital.

Marnhams, Nottinghamſhire, two hamlets by the Trent, near Normanton. Marnhull, Dorſetſhire, a village on the Stour, 5 miles SW. of Shaftſbury.

MARO, a town of Oneglia.

MAROGNA, a town of Romania.

MAROLLES, a town in the reſpective dept. of the North, the Aube, Loir, and Sarte.

Marple, Cheſhire, near Stockport.

MARPURG, a conſiderable town, capital of Upper Heſſe, with an univerſity, academy for claſſical learning, caſtle, palace, handſome ſquare, and magnificent town-houſe. It is 56 miles N. of Frankfort on the Maine.

MARQUESAS, a group of iſlands in the South Sea, firſt diſcovered by Mendana, a Spaniard, in 1595. They are 6 in number, and named St. Chriſtina, Magdalena, Dominica, St. Pedro, and Hood. Captain Cook lay ſome time at the firſt of theſe, in 1774. The natives are of a tawny complexion, but look almoſt black, from being punctured over the whole body. They go almoſt naked, having only a ſmall piece of cloth, perfectly reſembling that made by the people of Otaheite round their waiſt and loins. Their beard and hair are of a fine jet black, like thoſe of the other natives of the torrid zone. The iſland, though high and ſteep, has many valleys, which widen toward the ſea, and are covered with fine foreſts to the ſummits of the interior mountains. The products of theſe iſlands are bread fruit, bannas, plantains, cocoa-nuts, ſcarlet beans, paper-mulberries, of the bark of which their cloth is made, caſuarinas, with other tropical plants and trees, and hogs and fowls. They have alſo plenty of fiſh. Capt. Foſter ſays, he never ſaw a ſingle man deformed, or even ill proportioned among the natives: all were ſtrong, tall, well-limbed, and active in the higheſt degree. Their arms were clubs and ſpears, and their government, like that of the Society Iſlands, monarchical. But they were not quite ſo cleanly as the inhabitants of the Society Iſles, who, in that reſpect, ſurpaſs, perhaps, any other people in the world. The drink of the Marqueſans is purely water, cocoa nuts being rather ſcarce. Their muſic, muſical inſtruments, dances, and canoes, reſemble thoſe of Otaheite. Indeed, the inhabitants of the Marqueſas, Society, and Friendly Iſlands, Eaſter Iſland, and New Zealand, ſeem to have all the ſame origin; their language, manners, cuſtoms, &c. bearing a great affinity in many reſpects. Lat. 9. 55. S. lon. 139. 9. W.

Marr, Yorkſhire, 3 miles weſt of Doncaſter. Marrick, Yorkſhire, SW. of Richmond Moor.

MARSAL, a town in the department of Meurthe, remarkable for its ſalt-works. It is 17 miles ENE. of Nanci.

MARSALA, a town and river of Sicily.

MARSAN, a ci-devant diſtrict in the department of Landes, fertile in wine. Mont Marſan was the capital.

MARSAQUIVER, or MARSALQUIVER, a ſea-port of Tremeſen, Algiers, one of the beſt harbours in Africa, 3 miles from Oran. It is ſubject to the Spaniards.

Marſcough, with its Chace, Lancaſhire, near Garſtang. Marſden Chapel, Yorkſhire, SW. of Almondbury. Marſden Rocks, Northumberland, a little way from the ſhore, are ſometimes viſited by parties on pleaſure from Tinmouth. They have ſome large caverns in them, and are ſo perforated, in ſeveral places, as to give a free paſſage to boats.

MARSEILLES, a flouriſhing ſea-port in the dept. of the Mouths of the Rhone, lately an epiſcopal ſee. It was ſo celebrated in the time of the Romans, that Cicero ſtyled it the Athens of Gaul, and Pliny called it the Miſtreſs of Education. It is ſeated on the Mediterranean, at the upper end of a gulph, covered and defended by many ſmall iſlands, and is divided into the Old Town or the City, and the New Town. The firſt appears like an amphitheatre to the veſſels which enter the port; but the houſes are mean, and the ſtreets dirty, narrow, and ſteep. In the latter the ſtreets are ſtraight and broad, and adorned with handſome edifices. In this part is the principal church built by the Goths, on the ruins of the temple of Diana. This place was conſidered as endowed with an invaluable privilege confirmed by different popes; namely, that it ſhould be for ever exempt from an interdict. The armoury is the fineſt in the kingdom, and contains arms for 40,000 men. Here is alſo a large arſenal, well ſtored with all the implements for building and fitting out the galleys. The harbour is not deep enough for men of war. Gold and ſilver ſtuffs are made here. The inhabitants are eſtimated at 90,000. With reſpect to commerce, Marſeilles has been eminent ſince the days of antiquity, and it is now ſometimes called Europe in Miniature, on account of the variety of dreſſes and languages. In 1649, the plague raged with great violence in Marſeilles, and with ſtill greater in 1720, 1721, and 1722, when it carried off 50,000 of the inhabitants. During this laſt dreadful viſitation, M. de Belſunce, (the "Marſeilles good Biſhop," celebrated by Pope) the cannon Bourgeret, the magiſtrate Mouſtier, and the commandant Langeron, by their intrepid and indefatigable humanity, did the moſt ſignal honour to themſelves and to human nature. Marſeilles is 18 miles NW. of Toulon, and 362 S. by E. of Paris, Lat. 43. 18. N. lon. 5. 27. E.

Marſhbrook, in King's County Leinſter.

Marſfield, Suſſex, N. of Cuckfield.

Marſh, Buckinghamſhire by Newport-Pagnel.

Paguel. Marſh, Dorſetſhire, near Beminſter. Marſh, Shropſ. N. of Cauſe Caſtle. * Marſh, in Somerſetſhire, near E. and W. Coker. Marſhall, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Marſhall, Suſſex, in Fletching pariſh. Marſhall, Eſſex, near the N. Weald. Marſham, Kent, near Aſhford. Marſham, Norfolk, near Aleſham. Marſhden Chapel, Lancaſ. S. of Colne. Marſhden Chapel, Yorkſ. S. of Halifax. Marſh Ditch, Yorkſhire, a fenny tract between the Dun and Ouſe. Marſh-Farm, Dorſetſ. near Verminſter. Marſton Bigot, Somerſ. near Frome.

MARSHFIELD, a town of Glouceſ. with a manufacture of broad-cloth, and a conſiderable trade in malt. It is ſeated on the Cotſwold-Hills, 12 miles E. of Briſtol, and 102 W. of London, Market on Tueſday.

Marſhland, Norfolk, a marſhy peninſula, oppoſite to Lynn. It ſeems to have been gained from the water, and has at different times been inundated both by the ocean, and by the rivers which nearly ſurround it, to the great damage of the inhabitants. Marſhland, Yorkſ. E. R. between the rivers Are, Dun, Ouſe, and Trent, which with Marſh Ditch, make a river iſland ſeveral miles in length and breadth. Marſh Salt, Glouceſ. by the Severn ſide. Marſh ſide, Middl. N. E. of Edmunton. Marſh, N. and S. Devonſh. near Modbury. Marſh Street, Eſſex, between Walthamſtow and the river Lee. Marſh-Street, N. W. of Sandwich. Marſh-wood, with its Vale and Park, Dorſetſh. 4 miles NW. of Whitchurch. Marſh-Wood, Huntingdonſhire near Redbridge.

MARSICO NUOVO, a town of Principato Citro, Naples.

MARSICO VETERE, a town of Baſilicata Naples.

Marſk, a river of Yorkſhire, falling into the Swale, near Marſk. Marſton, Berks, near Bucklebury. Marſton, Linc. between Grantham and Clay Pool. Marſton, SW. of Derby, near the Dove. Marſton, Herefordſhire, near the Grendons, Warren, and Biſhops. Marſton, Heref. near Pembridge. Marſton, Herefordſ. between Roſs and Monmouthſhire. Marſton, near Oxford. Marſton, N. of Stafford. Marſton, Staff. NW. of Lapley. Marſton Sicca, Glouc. SW. of Stratford-upon-Avon, in Warw. Marſton St. Laurence, Northamptonſ. NW. of Brackley. Marſton, Long, Glouceſ. in Tring Pariſh. Marſton, Long, alias Hutton Wanely, near York. Marſton Montgomery, Derbyſhire, near the Dove, SW. of Aſhborn. Marſton-Moor, Yorkſ. between Wetherby and York. Marſton Mortain, 5 miles from Bedford. Marſton Potters, Leic. E. of Hinckley. Marſton, South, Wilts, near Highworth. Marſton Truſſel, Northamp. by Harborough. Marſton Wood-End, Bedfordſhire, near Houghton-Conqueſt.

MARSTRAND, a rocky iſland of W. Gothland, in the Cattegate, about 2 miles in circumference. The town, which lies on the eaſtern ſide, conſiſts of about 200 ruinous and almoſt uninhabited houſes. The harbour is ſpacious, deep, ſecure, and commodious, but of difficult entrance The inhabitants ſubſiſt chiefly by the herring fiſhery; by the number of ſhips which in rough weather take refuge in the harbour, and by a contraband trade. It is 18 miles NW. of Gotheborg.

MARTABAN, a town and province of Pegu, on the Gulf of Bengal, a long time an independent kingdom. The ſoil is fertile in rice, fruits and wines of all kinds. Its capital was a rich trading place before ſhips were ſunk at the entrance of the harbour to choke it up, (by the king of Ava) which it has done effectually. The chief trade is now in earthen ware and fiſh. The whole country, moreover, is now ſubject to the king of Ava, who in 1754, ſubdued the kingdom of Pegu, and rendered it a dependent province. The town of Martaban is ſituated on a bog or large river, 80 miles, SE. of Pegu. Lat. 16. 38. N. lon. 97. 3. E.

MARTANO, a town of Otranto, Naples

MARTEL, a town in the department of Lot, ſituated near the Dordogne, 28 miles NNE. of Cahors.

MARTHA, ST. a province of S. America, on the coaſt of Terra Firma. It is about 300 miles in length, and 200 in breadth, and is moſtly a mountainous country, having Venezuela on the E. and Carthagena on the W. It is extremely hot and ſultry on the ſea-coaſt, but within cold, on account of the mountains. It abounds with fruit proper to the climates, and there are mines of gold and precious ſtones, and ſalt-works. The Spaniards poſſeſs but one part of this province, in which they have built St. Martha, the capital. The air about the town is wholeſome, and it is ſeated near the ſea, at the mouth of the River Guayra, having a harbour ſurrounded by high mountains. It was formerly very conſiderable, when the Spaniſh galleons were ſent thither, but is now come almoſt to nothing. Lat. 11. 27. N. lon. 74. 0. W.

MARTHA ST. or SIERRA NEVADA, a high mountain in Mexico, ſaid to be 100 miles in circumference at the bottom, and 5 high; the top being always covered with ſnow in the hotteſt weather.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD, an iſland of N. America, near the coaſt of Maſſachuſett's, 80 miles S. of Boſton. The inhabitants apply themſelves chiefly to the fiſheries, in which they have great ſucceſs. Lat. 41. 16. N. Lon. 70. 22. W.

Martball, Cheſhire, E. of Knottesford. Martham, Norf. near Winterton. Marthelly Chapel, Monmouthſhire, S. of Uſk. Marthom, Lancaſh. near Shuttleworth.

MARTIGUES, LES, a ſea-port in the departments of the Mouths of the Rhone, ſeated near a lake, 12 miles long, and 5 broad, which is much leſs conſiderable than it was formerly, but whence they get very fine fiſh and excellent ſalt. It is 20 miles NW. of Marſeilles.

Martin, Kent, near Canterbury. Martin, Lincolnſhire, near Horncaſtle. Martin, Somerſetſh. in Stanton Drew pariſh. Martin, Wilts, 6 miles from Saliſbury. Martin, Worceſterſh. S. of Droitwich. Martin, Surry, ſee Merton.

MARTIN, CAPE, a promontory of Valencia; and a river of Arragon.

MARTIN, ST. a ſmall town in the Iſle of Ree, with a harbour and citadel.

MARTIN, ST. an iſland in the Weſt-Indies, lying between St. Bartholomew, and Anguilla. It is about 5 leagues in length and 4 in its greateſt breadth, has neither harbour nor river, but ſeveral valuable ſalt pits and ſalt-water lakes. It has been jointly held by the Dutch and Engliſh ſince the year 1744. Lat. 18. 20. lon. 63. 0. W.

MARTIN and MARTINO ST. ſeveral towns of France and Italy.

Martin St. Cornwall, SE. of Helſton.

Martin, St. Cornwall, near E. Low.

Martin, St. Cornwall, near Saltaſh.

Martin, St. Kent, between Appledore and Romney. Martin, St. E. and W. Wiltſhire, E. of Cranbourn-Chace.

MARTINICO, a conſiderable iſland of the Weſt-Indies, about 44 miles in length and 120 in circumference. There are 3 high mountains, with numberleſs hills of a conical form, and ſeveral rivers and fertile valleys, but they will not bear either wheat or vines; however, the former is not much wanted, for thoſe that are born here, prefer caſſava to wheat bread. It poſſeſſes many natural advantages, and in particular, its harbours afford a certain ſhelter from the hurricanes. It exports ſugar, cocoa, caſſia, ginger, cotton, indigo, chocolate, aloes, pimento, tobacco, yarn, plantains, moſaſſes, preſerved fruits, &c. is extremely populous, and has ſeveral ſafe and commodious harbours. The principal places are Fort Royal, Fort St. Peter, Fort-Trinity, and Foot-de-Mouillage. There are ſtill ſome of the ancient inhabitants remaining. In 1769, France imported from Martinico, in 202 trading veſſels, merchandiſe to the amount of 536 631 l. ſterling. In Feb. 3, 1794, this iſland was attacked by the Engliſh under Sir John Jervis and Sir Charles Gray, and the conqueſt was completed on March 16th. Fort Royal is in lat. 14. 44. N. lon. 61. 16. W.

Martingley, Hants, W. of Hartley-Row. Martin Hoſyntree, Worc. between Worceſter and Droitwich. Martin How, Devonſ. between Comb-Martin and Linton. Martin Meer, Lanc. W. of Eccleſton. Martin's Eſſex, near Manningtree. Martin's St. Northamp. near Stamford. Martinſdale, Weſtmorl. a pariſh of Barton. Martin's Thorp, Rutl. 3 miles from Uppingham. Martinſton, S. of Dorcheſ. Martinworthy, Hants, N. of Winchester. Martleſham, Suffolk, 5 miles from Ipſwich. Martleſton, Berks, near Bucklebury. Martley, W. of Worceſter. Martock, or Mattock, Somerſ. between Ilcheſter and Ilminſter. Marton, Cheſh. E. of Delamere Foreſt. Marton, with its Mere, Cheſhire, SW. of Macclesfield. Marton, Devonſ. near Hewiſh. Marton, Lancaſ. N. of Ormſkirk. Marton, Linc. near the Trent. Marton, Linc. near Gainſborough. Marton, Norfolk, S. of Watton. Marton, Nottingh. a hamlet of Harworth. Marton, Shropſ. bordering on Denbighſ. Marton, Shropſ. N. of Chirbury. Marton, Warw. on the Leame. Marton, Weſtm. NW. of Appleby. Marton, Yorkſ. near Flamborough. Marton, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs. Marton, E. of Rippon. Marton, Yorkſ. near Stokeſley. Marton, Yorkſ. SE. of Kirby-Moorſide. Marton, York. SE. of Boroughbridge. Marton, Yorkſ. NW. of Boroughbridge. Marton, Yorkſ. E. of Eaſingwould. Marton-Brooke, running into the Derwent, near Derby. Marton, E. and W. Yorkſ. E. of Giſborn. Marton, Great and Little, Lanc. in Amounderneſs.

MARTORNO, a town in Calabria Citra.

MARTOREL, a town of Catalonia.

MARTOS, a town of Jaen, Andaluſia.

MARVEJOLS, a trading town in the department of Lozere, 10 miles NW. of Mende, and 300 S. of Paris.

Marvel, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina.

MARVILLE, a town in the department of the Meuſe, ſeated on the river Oſheim, 4 miles W. of Longwy.

MARWOOD,

MARWOOD, a town of Durham, ſituated on the Tees, near Barnard-Caſtle. Market on Wedneſday.

Marwood Church, and Middle, Devonſ. NW. of Barnſtaple. Maryborn St. Hants, W. of Whitchurch. Mary Church, Devonſhire, near Torbay. Mary Hill, St. Glamorganſhire.

MARYLAND, one of the United States of America, lying about the N. end of Cheſapeak Bay, which divides it into two parts, called the eaſtern and weſtern ſhores: bounded on the N. by Pennſylvania, on the E. by the ſtate of Delaware, on the SE. and S. by the ſea and Virginia, and on the W. by the interior country of America. It is 174 miles long, and 110 broad. It is divided into 18 counties, 10 of which are on the weſtern and 8 on the eaſtern ſhore of the Cheſapeak. The exports are wheat and tobacco, which are the ſtaple commodities; timber, hemp, flax, and barrelled pork; there being vaſt numbers of ſwine, which run wild in the woods, feeding on the maſt or nuts of various kinds of trees. —The number of inhabitants is about 260,000. The chief towns are Annapolis and Baltimore. The climate of this province, which in moſt reſpects reſembles Virginia, is generally mild and agreeable.

MARYPORT, a town in Cumberland, ſituated at the mouth of the Ellen. It has 80 or 90 ſail of ſhipping, from 50 to 300 tons burden; ſome of which ſail up the Baltic for timber, flax, iron, &c. The coal and coaſting-trade and ſhipbuilding are carried on pretty extenſively, and lately an extenſive cotton manufactory has been erected. Here is a furnace for caſt-iron, and one of the fineſt glaſshouſes in the Britiſh dominions. By a late ſurvey, the number of inhabitants amounted to 2625. It is 7 miles NW. of Cockermouth, and 307 NNW. of London. Market on Friday.

MARY, ST. a ſea-port of Maryland, ſituated near the mouth of the river Potomack.

Mary, St. Cambridgeſh. near Wiſbeach. Mary's St. Devonſ. near Ottery. Mary's St. Kent, 5 miles NE. of Rocheſter. Mary's St. Kent, between Clift and the iſle of Greane. Mary's St. Kent, in Rumney Marſh, 2 miles N. of New Rumney. Mary's St. Linc. W. of Walpole in Norf. Mary's St. Linc. near Wainfleet. Mary's St. Norf. SE. of Walpole. Mary's St. Hants, near Southampton.

MARY'S RIVER, ST. a river of N. America, in Georgia, which forms a part of the ſouthern boundary of the United States, and enters Amelia Sound, in lat. 30. 44. N. It is navigable for veſſels of conſiderable burden for 90 miles; and its banks afford immenſe quantities of fine timber ſuited to the Weſt-India markets.

MARY'S STRAIT, ST. a ſtrait in N. America, which forms the communication between Lake Superior and Lake Huron. It is about 40 miles long; and at the upper end is a rapid fall or deſcent, which, though it is impoſſible for canoes to aſcend, yet, when conducted by careful pilots, may be deſcended without danger.

* MARYBOROUGH, a ſmall borough, the county town of Queen's County in Leinſter, conſiderable for its woollen manufactures. It is 40 miles SSW. of Dublin.

MARY GERANE'S HOUSE, a name given to Dunmore Head, in Kerry, Munſter.

MARZA SIROCCO, a ſmall gulf or bay on the S. ſide of the Iſle of Malta. The Turks landed here in 1565, when they went to beſiege Valetta, for which reaſon the Grand Maſter ordered three forts to be built, two at the entrance of the gulf, and one on the point of land that advances into the middle of it.

MARZILLA, a town in Spain, in Navarre, 30 miles S. of Pampeluna.

MASAFUERO, a very high and mountainous iſland, in the S. Pacific Ocean, about 31 leagues SW. of Juan Fernandez. There is plenty of wood and water all round the iſland, and the N. and W. ſides afford good anchorage.

MASBATE, one of the Phillippine Iſlands, almoſt in the centre of the reſt. It is 80 miles in circumference. The natives are moſtly independent; about 250 families are tributary to the Spaniards. Here are ſome mines, which are not wrought. The principal produce is rice. Lat. 12. 0. N, lon. 122. 25. E.

Maſbrook, Upper and Lower, Shropſ. near Oſweſtry. Maſbrough, a flouriſhing village of Yorkſhire, near Rotherham. Here is a conſiderable iron manufactory, with furnaces for ſmelting the iron out of the ore, forges for making it malleable, and mills for flatting the tin plates, which are alſo tinned here. Great quantities of goods of hammered iron are made here for exportation; and they alſo convert iron into ſteel, and caſt all kinds of veſſels, &c. in the ſame metal.

MASCATE, the principal town of Oman, on the coaſt of Arabia, beſide a ſmall gulf encompaſſed with ſteep rocks, and forming an excellent harbour, in which the largeſt veſſels may find ſhelter. Arrian calls it Moſca, and ſpeaks of it as being in his time, a great eporium of the trade of Arabia, Perſia, and India; an advantage which it has ever enjoyed and ſtill poſſeſſes. The Portugueſe conquered it about the year 1508, but the Arabs took it from them in 1658, and put all the garriſon to the ſword, except 18, who turned Mahometans. The cathedral built by the Portugueſe, is now the palace of the wali or governor, acting for the ſcheik or imam, and their other church is a magazine. There are neither trees, ſhrubs, nor graſs to be ſeen on the coaſt near it, and only a few date-trees in a valley at the back of the town, though they have all things in plenty. The bazars, or market-places, are covered with the leaves of date-trees, laid on beams, which reach from the houſe-tops on one ſide to thoſe on the other. The horſes, cattle, and ſheep are accuſtomed to eat roaſted fiſh; notwithſtanding which, the beef and mutton are both good. Their religion is Mahometaniſm, and yet they ſuffer any one to go into their moſques contrary to the cuſtom of the Turks. There are about 1200 Banians in this city, who are permitted to bring their wives here, ſet up idols in their chambers, and burn their dead, &c. The products of the country are horſes, dates, fine brimſtone, coffee, and ruinoſs, a root that dyes red. Lat. 24. 0. N. lon. 57. 26. E.

MAS D'ASIL, LE, a town in the department of Arriege, 8 miles NNW. of Taraſcon.

Maſengill, Lancaſhire, near Kirby Lonſdale.

MASHAM, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, with a cotton manufactory. It is ſeated on the river Ure, 218 miles from London. Market on Tueſday.

Maſsbury, Eſſex, NW. of Chelmsford.

Maſt, Yorkſhire, near Richmond. Maſt Yorkſ. on the coaſt, NE. of Giſborough

MASKAT. See MASCATE.

Maſkelbury, Eſſex, near White Roding.

MASKELYNE'S ISLES, a group of ſmall, but beautiful iſlands, lying off the SE. point of Mallicollo, one of the New Hebrides. Lat. 16. 32. S. lon. 167. 55. E.

Mſtaſcanlane, in Cork, Munſter.

MASOVIA, or MASUREN, an ancient province of Poland, conſiſting of two palatinates, Czerſk or Maſovia Proper, and Polotz. Warſaw is the chief city.

MASSA, a town and territory of Italy, between the dominions of Genoa and Tuſcany, united to Modena. It is ſeated 3 miles from the ſea, and is famous for quarries of fine marble.

MASSA, a town of Lavora, Naples.

MASSA, a town of Italy, in the Sienneſe. Between this town and the ſea is an unhealthy tract, called Maremma di Sienna. Near it are found borax and lapis lazuli.

MASSACHUSETS, one of the United States of N. America, bounded on the N. by New Hampſhire and Vermont; on the W. by New York; on the S. by Connecticut, Rhode Iſland, and the Atlantic Ocean; and on the E. by that ocean and the Bay of Maſſachuſets. It is 120 miles long, and 50 broad; and is divided into 11 counties. It produces Indian corn, flax, hemp, hops, potatoes, beans, peas, fruits, &c. Iron has been found in immenſe quantities; as likewiſe copper-ore, black lead, alum, ſlate, &c. This ſtate owns more than one third part of the trade and ſhipping belonging to the United States. The negro trade was prohibited by law, in 1778. The number of inhabitants, in 1790, was 378,787. Here are 265 towns, the principal of which are Boſton and Salem. They have manufactories of leather, linen, and woollen cloth, and plenty of beef, pork, fowls, and fiſh.

MASSAFRA, a town of Otranto Naples

Maſſelek, a river in Cardiganſh. which runs into the Iriſh Channel near Aberyſtuith.

MASSERANO, a town and ſmall principality (a papal fief), inſulated in Piedmont. It is 21 miles NNW. of Vercelli.

MASSINGHAM, GREAT, a town of Norfolk, near Rougham. Market on Friday.

Maſſingham, Little, near Great Maſſingham.

Maſſytown, in Cork, Munſter.

MASTICO, CAPO, a Cape on the W. ſide of the iſland of Scio, in the Archipelago.

Maſthorn, Cumberland, near Hathwait

Maſton, Wiltſhire, S. of Highworth.

MASUAH, or MATSUAH, (called by the Greeks Sebaſticum Os, from the capacity of its port), an iſland in the Red Sea, near the coaſt of Abyſſinia, three quarters of a mile long, and nearly half a mile broad. One third of it is occupied by houſes, another by ciſterns to receive rain water, and the laſt is reſerved for burying the dead. The houſes, in general, are built of poles and bent graſs, as in the towns of Arabia. Here is an excellent harbour, with water deep enough for ſhips of any ſize, where they may ride ſide in the utmoſt ſecurity, from whatever point, or with whatever degree of ſtrength the wind blows, to the edge of the iſland. Lat. 15. 45. N. lon. 40. 3. E.

MASULIPATAM, a ſea-port, with manufactures of chintzes and printed linens, ſeated near the mouth of the Kiſtna, in the circar of Condapilly, on the coaſt of Coromandel. Lat. 16. 8. N. lon. 81. 12. E.

MATACA, or MANTACA, a commodious bay in the Weſt-Indies, on the N. coaſt of Cuba. Here the galleons uſually come to take in freſh water on their return to Spain. It is 35 miles E. of the Havannah.

MATAGORDA, a fort which covers the entrance of Cadiz harbour.

MATALONA, a town of Lavora, Naples.

MATAMAN, or CIMBIBBA, a country of Africa, S. of Benguela, on the coaſt of the Atlantic, extending from lat. 16. to 24 S. and lon. 13. to 18. E. It is little viſited by Europeans.

MATAMBA, a large country in the interior parts of Africa. Lat. about 9. S. lon. 22. E.

MATAPAN, or CAGLIA CAPE, the moſt ſouthern promontory of the Morea. E. of the Gulf of Coron. Lat. 36. 33. N. lon. 22. 40. E.

MATARAM a territory of Java, on the S. ſide, near the centre of the iſland. Lat. 8. 20. S. lon. 110. 13. E.

MATARO, a town of Catalonia, remarkable for its glaſs works, and other manufactures. The vineyards in its environs produced a wine, much famed for its flavour.

Matching, and Mantching Barnes, Eſſex, near Harlow.

MATELLES, LES, a town in the department of Herault, 8 miles N. of Montpellier.

MATERA, a town of Baſilicata, Naples.

Matford, Devonſh. near Exeter. Matham, Great, Kent, in Benenden pariſh. Matham, Little, or Lowden, Kent, near Great Matham. Machanan, a rivulet in Angleſea, which runs into the Iriſh channel, below Llanbaderick. Matharn, Monm. S. of Chepſtow. Matharn, Heref. near Malvern-Hills. Mathern, a river in Cardiganſhire, which runs into the Tivy at Llanbeder. Mathfield, Upper, and Nether, or Mayfield. Staff. on the Dove, near Aſhborn, in Derbyſhire. Mathlington, Shropſhire, NW. of Biſhop's-Caſtle. Mathon, 7 miles from Worceſter. Mathry, Pembrokeſ. Matlaſt, Norfolk, between N. Walſham and Holt. Matlock, Derbyſh. near Wirkſworth, ſituated on the river Derwent, 17 miles N. of Derby. It has two baths, whoſe waters are milk warm, and efficacious in cholicky, conſumptive, and cutaneous caſes. It is an extenſive, ſtraggling village, built in a very romantic ſtyle, on the ſteep ſide of a mountain, the houſes riſing regularly one above another, from the bottom to nearly the ſummit. There are good accommodations for the numerous company who reſort to the baths; and petrifactions, cryſtals, and other curioſities for ſale. Notwithſtanding the rockineſs of the ſoil, the cliffs of the rocks produce an immenſe number of trees, whoſe foliage adds greatly to the beauty of the place. Matſhall, Norfolk, near E. Dereham. Matſon, near Glouceſ.

MATSUMAY, a ſea port of Jedſo, capital of a province of the ſame name, tributary to Japan. Lat. 41. 0. N. lon. 138. 55. E.

Matteleigh, Cheſhire, NE. of Stopford. Matterdale, Cumberl. NE. of Kelwick, in Grayſtock pariſh. Matterſey Nottinghamſhire, on the Idle, near Bautree.

MATTHEO ST. a town of Arragon.

MATTHEO, ST. an iſland of Africa, 420 miles diſtant ſtom Cape Palmas, the neareſt land on the coaſt of Guinea. It was planted by the Portugueſe, who have now a ſettlement here. Veſſels frequently ſtop here ſome days to take in refreſhments. Lat. 1. 24. S. lon. 6. 10. W.

MATTHEW'S, ST. an iſland in the Indian Ocean, near the coaſt of Siam. Lat. 9. 35. N. lon. 97. 52. E.

Matthew's Green. Berks, near Okingham. Mattingley. Hants. N. of Hartley Row. Mattiſhal, Norfolk.

MAUBEUGE, a town in the depart. of the North, ſeated on the river Sambre, 12 miles S. of Mons. It was ceded to France by the treaty of Nimeguen, when Louis XIV. ordered it to be fortified.

Maugan, Cornwall NW. of Columb-Magna. Maugerſbury, Glouceſ. in Stow pariſh. Maulam, Yorkſ. SE. of Settle.

MAULDAH, a city of Bengal, ſituated on a river that communicates with the Ganges. It is a place of trade, and produces, in particular, much ſilk. It is 52 miles N. of Moorſhedabad, and 190 N. of Calcutta.

Maulden, Bedfordſhire, near Ampthill. Mauld's Meburn, Weſtmoreland, in the pariſh of Croſby Ravenſworth.

MAULEON a town in the department of Lower Pyrenees, 20 miles WSW. of Pau; and a town in the dept. of Upper Pyrenees, 9 miles SE. of La Barthe.

Maulſwick, Glouceſ. in Newent pariſh.

by King's County. Its greateſt length is 38 miles; its greateſt breadth 21. It contains 62 pariſhes, about 13,700 houſes and 69,000 inhabitants; and beſides Lough Ree, formed by the Shannon on its weſtern extremity, it is watered by a number of other agreeable lakes; as the Loughs Leign, Derrivaragh, Iron, Ennel, Drin, and Bannean Annagh, the rivers Inny, Broſna, &c. Here is a great proportion of graſs land, yet more corn is raiſed than ſerves for the conſumption of the inhabitants. The chief town is Mullingar, where the ſecond great fair in the kingdom for wool is held.

MEAUX, a large, handſome, and populous town in the dept. of Seine and Marne, ſeated on the river Marne, 25 miles ENE. of Pavo.

MECAN, MECON, MICON, or CAMBOJA, a large river of Aſia, which riſes in Thibet, and flowing SE. through the Chineſe province of Yunnan, and the kingdoms of Lahoa and Cambodia, falls by two mouths into the Indian Ocean, 200 miles below the city of Cambodia, which gives its own name to the eaſtern branch.

MECCA, a city of Hedias, in Arabia, ſeated on a barren ſpot in a valley, ſurrounded by little hills, about a day's journey from the Red Sea. It has neither walls nor gates, but the buildings are better here, than in any other town of Arabia. What chiefly ſupports it, is the annual reſort of a great many thouſand pilgrims at a certain ſeaſon of the year; for at other times, the ſhops are ſcarcely open. The inhabitants are poor, very thin, lean, and ſwarthy. The hills about the town are numerous; all conſiſt of a blackiſh rock; and ſome of them aſchalf a mile in circumference. The town has plenty of water, and yet little garden-ſtuff; but there are ſeveral ſorts of good fruit, as grapes, melons, water-melons, and cucumbers. Numbers of ſheep are brought hither to be ſold to the pilgrims. Mecca ſtands in a very hot climate, and the inhabitants uſually ſleep on the tops of their houſes, for the ſake of coolneſs. Among its edifices, the moſt remarkable is the famous Kaba, or houſe of God, held in high veneration by the Arghars, even before the days of Mahomet, and ſaid to have been Abraham's houſe of prayer. The Kaba is a ſquare tower, covered on the top with a piece of black, gold embroidered ſilk ſtuff. It has 42 doors, and reſembles, in its form, the Royal Exchange, but is near ten times as large. The ground in the middle, or area, is moſtly covered with gravel. There are cloiſters all round, and in the ſides are cells for thoſe who live a monaſtic life. The arcades around the ſquare are ſaid to be magnificent, and are illuminated with a vaſt number of lamps, and candleſticks of gold and ſilver. In the Kaba is a ſingular relic, the famous black ſtone, ſaid to have been brought from heaven, by the Angel Gabriel, which every Muſſulman muſt kiſs, or at leaſt touch, every time he goes round the Kaba. Here alſo is the well of Zemzem, ſaid to have been that where Hagar quenched the thirſt of Iſmael. Lat. 21. 45. N. lon. 40. 55. E.

MECHLIN, or MALINES, a town and diſtrict of the late Auſtrian Brabant. It conſiſts of ſeveral ſmall iſlands, made by artificial canals, over which are a great many bridges. Here is a very large houſe, in which are brought up 800 or 1000 young girls, and a great foundry for ordnance of all kinds. It is famous for its manufactures, in bed-quilts, thread, and particularly in fine lace, and they brew a ſort of beer, which is ſent into the neighbouring provinces. It is ſeated on the river Dyle, 10 miles NNE. of Bruſſels.

MECHOACAN, or VALLADOLID, a province of Mexico, on the South Sea, bounded on the N. by part of Guaſteca, and the provinces of Zacatecas and Guadalajara, and on the S. by Mexico Proper, and the South Sea. It extends about 70 leagues along the coaſt, and ſtill farther inland; the ſoil is remarkably fertile and the climate good. It is very rich and abounds in excellent horſes, honey wax, and all the neceſſaries of life. It has alſo mines of ſilver and copper, and great plenty of cocoa-nuts, beſide a great deal of ſilk. The capital of the ſame name, is about 70 miles from Mexico, in lat. 20. 5. N. lon. 103. 37. W.

MECKLENBURG, a principality of Lower Saxony, including the duchies of Schwerin and Guſtro, which are divided into three circles, Mecklenburg, Werden and Stargard. It extends 135 miles in length, and 90 where broadeſt. It abounds in corn, paſtures and game, and is well ſeated on the Baltic for foreign trade. The ſovereignty of this country is divided between the Houſe of Mecklenburg Schwerin, which is the elder branch, and has a revenue of 300,000 rix dollars per annum, and the houſe of Mecklenburg Strelitz, whoſe revenue amounts to about 126,000 rix dollars.

MECKLEY, a large province of India bounded on the N. by Aſſam and Thibet on the E. by China, on the W. by Ber gal, and on the S. by Roſhaan and Burmah. It is ſubject to the king of Burmah.

MECON. See MECAN.

MECRAN. See MACKERAN.

Medborn, Leiceſterſhire, S. of Hallaton. Medborn Wilts, near Swindon. Medborn Maud's, Weſtmoreland, W. of Appleby. Medcomb, Devonſh. near Marwood. Medely, Shropſhire, SW. of Bridgenorth.

MEDELIN, a town of Spaniſh Eſtramadura, ſeated on the river Guadiana.

MEDELPADIA, a maritime province of Sweden, in Norland, N. of the province of Helſingia, about 90 miles in length and 46 in breadth. It is very mountainous and full of foreſts, which abound in deer and game of all ſorts, and its lakes and rivers ſupply them with plenty of fiſh. There is alſo a ſufficiency of grain, and plenty of cattle. It has only one ſea-port, Sundſwell the capital.

MEDEMBLICK, a town of the United Provinces, in W. Friſeland, ſeated on the Zuyder-Zee, with a good harbour. They trade chiefly in timber brought from the Baltic. It has a houſe belonging to the Eaſt India Company, is 9 miles N. of Hoorn, and 22 NNE. of Amſterdam.

Medford, Dorſetſhire, near Catſtock. Medhole, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

MEDINA, a city of Hedjas, in Arabia Felix, celebrated for being the burial place of Mahomet. It is of moderate extent, is walled round, and has a large moſque, but nothing like the temple at Mecca. In one corner is a place, 14 paces ſquare, with great windows, and braſs gates, and in the middle the tomb of Mahomet, incloſed within iron rails, hung with curtains, and ſurrounded by a vaſt number of lamps. The tomb is not expoſed to any, except the 40 eunuchs who guard it, and light the lamps. It is placed between two other tombs, in which reſt the aſhes of the two firſt Caliphs. The ſtory of its being ſuſpended in the air by a loadſtone is now well known to be a fable. Proviſions are brought to this place out of Nubia, acroſs the Red Sea, in odd ſort of veſſels, whoſe ſails are made of mats. It is called the city of the Prophet, becauſe here he was protected by the inhabitants when he fled from Mecca; and here he was firſt inveſted with regal power. The time of his death was in 687; but the Mahometan epoch begins in 622, from the time of his flight. It is ſeated on a ſandy plain, abounding in palm-trees, 170 miles NNW. of Mecca. Lat. 24. 20. N. lon. 39. 33. E.

MEDINA CELI, a town in Old Caſtile, ſituated on the Xalon.

MEDINA-DE-LOS-TORRES, a town of Spaniſh Eſtremadura.

MEDINA-DEL-CAMPO, a conſiderable town of Leon, endowed with great privileges. It is a trading place, 26 miles SSW. of Valladolid, and 75 NNW. of Madrid.

MEDINA-DEL-RIO-SECCO, a town of Leon, 14 miles NW. of Valladolid.

MEDINA-SIDONIA, a town of Andaluſia, 20 miles SE. of Cadiz.

MEDITERRANEAN, the name of the ſea between Aſia, Africa, and Europe, communicating with the ocean by the Straits of Gibraltar, and with the Black Sea by the Dardanelles, the Sea of Marmora, and the Strait of Conſtantinople. Its name, ſignifying Middle of the Earth, was given to it by the ancients, who were then acquainted with little more of the ſurface of the globe, than the regions which encompaſs it.

Medler, Lanc. in Amounderneſs. Medley, High, Yorkſ. 5 miles NE. of Wakefield. Medlock, a river in Lanc. running into the Irwell, near Manchester. Medley Low, Yorkſ. between Leeds and Pomfret. Mednam, Berks, near Great Marlow.

MEDNIK, or WARMIC, a town of Poland, in Samogitia; 60 miles SW. of Mittau.

MEDUA, a town of Algiers, ſeated in a fertile country, 180 miles SW. of the city of Algiers.

MEDWAY, a river riſing in Surry, in four different branches, which unite in Kent, where it waters Tunbridge, and from Maidſtone is navigable to Rocheſter; below which, at Chatham, it is a ſtation for the royal navy. It falls into the Thames at the Nore. From Rocheſter Bridge to Sheerneſs, the diſtance is about 17 miles. In this part of the river, the channel is ſo deep, the banks ſo ſoft, and the reaches ſo ſhort, that it is one of the beſt and ſafeſt harbours in the world. The forts of Upnor and Gillingham, erected on oppoſite ſhores of the river, are well furniſhed with cannon, and defend all the ſhips which ride between them and the bridge. There is alſo a platform of guns at the Swam, and another at Cookham-wood. But the principal defence of this river is the caſtle and works at Sheerneſs. On the 22d of June, 1667, the Dutch ſquadron ſailed boldly up to Blackſtakes, and 7 of their largeſt ſhips went as far as Upnor, where they burnt the London, and ſeveral other men of war, damaged moſt moſt of the ſhips within reach of their cannon, and carried off the Royal Charles, a firſt rate of 100 guns.

MEDWAY, a town of Maſſachuſett's.

MEDWI, a town of E. Gothland, 3 miles from Wadſtena. It is called the Swediſh Spa, on account of its waters, which are vitriolic and ſulphureous. The walks and rides in its environs are pleaſant, particularly on the banks of the Wetter Lake.

MEDZIBOZ, a town of Volhinia, ſituated near the ſource of the river Bog.

Meelick, in Clare, Munſter. Meelick, in Galway, Connaught.

Meen, Glouceſterſ. in Quinton pariſh. Meer, Cornwall. NW. of Stratton, near Beed's-Haven. Meeſden, or Meſdon, Hertf. on a hill, NW. of the Pelhams.

MEGARA, a town of Livadia, formerly very large, but now inconſiderable, being inhabited only by poor Greeks. Here are ſome fine remains of antiquity. It is 26 miles NW. of Setines, or Athens.

MEHAIGNE, a river of the Netherlands, which runs into the Meuſe near Huy, and a town of Namur.

MEHRAN, the name of the principal of the many mouths of the river Indus, near Tatta, in Hindooſtan.

MEHUN-SUR YEVRE, an ancient town in the dept. of Cher. Here are the ruins of an old caſtle built by Charles VII. as a place of retirement; where he lived and died, ſtarving himſelf to death, in the dread of being poiſoned by his ſon, the infamous Lewis XI. It is ſeated on the river Yevre, 8 miles NW. of Bourges, and 105 S. of Paris.

MEHUN-SUR-LOIRE, a town in the dept. of Loiret, 6 miles NE. of Beaugency.

Meie, a river in Shropſh. running into the Severn at Shrewſbury.

MEILLERIE, a village of Chablais, in the dept. of Mont Blanc, ſeated on the S. ſide of the Lake of Geneva, in the recels of a ſmall bay, and at the foot of impending mountains.

MEINUNGEN, a town of Henneburg, Franconia.

MEISSEN, a conſiderable town of Saxony, in Miſnia. Here is a famous manufacture of porcelain, and a manufacture of cloth. It is ſeated on the river Elbe, where the ſmall river Meiſe runs into it, 14 miles NW. of Dreſden.

MEISSEN, or MISNIA, a margravate of Upper Saxony, about 100 miles in length, and 80 in breadth, united to the electorate of Saxony. It is divided into five circles, viz. Meiſſen, Leipſick, Ertegeburg, Voigtland, and Neuſtadt, including the foundations of Wurzen, Merſeburg, and Naumburg Zeitz. It is a very fine country, well ſupplied with water, and producing corn and wine; and in their hills are rich mines. The inhabitants are polite, hoſpitable, and ſpeak the pureſt language in Germany. The capital town is Meiſſen.

MELAZZO, a ſea-port of Demona, Sicily, 18 miles W. of Meſſina.

Melborn, Camb. N. of Royſton. Melborn, Derbyſ. near Kegworth. Melborn, Yorkſ. E. Riding, near Thornton. Melbury, Melbury Abbats, Melbury Bub, Melbury Eaſt, Melbury Oſmond, or Lower Melbury, and Melbury Sanford, all in Dorſetſ. Melchborn, 8 miles NW. of Bedford.

MELCK, or MOLCK, a ſmall old town in the Archduchy of Auſtria, near the Danube.

Melcomb Bingham, and Melcomb Horſey, Dorſetſh. NW. of Cheſilborne. Melcomb-Regis, in Mayo, Connaught.

MELCOMB REGIS, a town of Dorſetſh. ſituated at the mouth of the river Wey, and joined to Weymouth by a timber bridge, which was erected in 1770, and has a drawbridge in the middle, to admit the paſſage of ſhips into the weſtern part of the harbour. It is further united to Weymouth as a port, a corporation, and a market town, and is 8 miles SW. of Dorcheſter, and 129 WSW. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Friday.

Melcrith, or Melcrig, Northumb. near Beltingham and Cheſter on the Wall.

MELDOLA, a town in Romagna.

MELDRET, a town of the late Auſtrian Brabant, 8 miles S. of Louvain.

Meldon, Northumb. SW. of Morpeth.

MELDRUM, a town of Aberdeenſh. 16 miles NNW. of Aberdeen.

Meldrith, Cambridgeſ. near Foulmere.

MELEDA, an iſland of Raguſa, in the Adriatic, 32 miles in length, and 4 in breadth. It is ſuppoſed by many to be the iſland where St. Paul landed, in his voyage to Rome, and where he was bitten by a viper. Lat. 43. 5. N.

Melendeder, or Melendyder, a river in Denbighſhire, running into the Conway.

MELFI, a town of Baſilicata, Naples.

Melford, Long, Suffolk, a large, well-built village, near Stour river, between Clare and Sudbury.

MELGASSO, a town of Entre Douro Minho, ſituated on the Minho.

MELILLA, a town of Fez, on the Mediterranean, ſubject to the Spaniards. It is 140 miles E. of Tetuan.

MELINDA, a kingdom of Africa, on the coaſt of Zanguebar. The capital town is of the ſame name, and ſeated at the the mouth of the river Quilmanci, in an agreeable plain. It is a large, populous place, in which the Portugueſe have 17 churches and 9 convents. The houſes are built of ſquare ſtone, for the moſt part ſtately, and ſome magnificent. They have warehouſes well provided with ſilks, cottons, linen cloth, corn, and other commodities, which they receive in exchange from the foreigners who reſort hither for gold, copper, quickſilver, ivory, ſlaves, elephants' teeth, oſtrich feathers, wax, aloes, ſena, and other drugs. The country produces plenty of rice, ſugar, cocoanuts, and other tropical fruits. It is ſurrounded on all ſides by fine gardens, and has a good harbour; but it is at ſome diſtance, and the entrance difficult and dangerous, on account of the great number of ſhoals and rocks hid under water. The inhabitants conſiſt of Chriſtians and negroes, which laſt have their own king and religion, and the number of both is ſaid to amount to 200,000. Lat. 3. 10. S. lon. 39. 40. E.

MELITO, a town of Principato Ultra.

*MELKSHAM, a town of Wilts, with a conſiderable manufactory of fine broad-cloth. It is ſituated on the river Avon, on the road between Devizes and Bath, 96 miles W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Mellans, St. Monm. NE. of Cardiff.

MELLE, a town of Oſnaburg, and a town of Flanders, 5 miles SSE. of Ghent.

MELLE, a town in the dept. of the Two Sevres, 13 miles S. of St. Maixent.

Meller, Derbyſ. in Gloſſop pariſh, near the High Peak. Melles, Suffolk, near Byddeſdale. Melles, Suffolk, near Blythford and Haleſworth. Melles, Cheſhire, near High Lake. Mellichap, Shropſhire, N. of Munſlow. Melling, Lanc. near Hornby Caſtle.

MELLINGEN, or MELLING, a town of Weimar, Upper Saxony.

Mellington, Lancaſhire, S. of Ormſkirk. Melling's Houſe, St. Cornw. NW. of Saltaſh. Mellis, Somerſ. 2 miles W. of Frome. Mellor, Lanc. in Blackburn pariſh. Melmerby, Cumb. SE. of Heſket. Melmerby, Yorkſ. near Newby. Melmerby, Yorkſ. on the river Cover, S. of Midlam.

MELNIK, a town of Boleſlau, Bohemia, ſituated at the conflux of the rivers Elbe and Moldau.

Melok, Cornwall, NE. of Bottreaux-Caſtle.

Melough River, in Down, Ulſter.

Melplaſh, Dorſetſhire, near Beminſter, Melplaſh, E. and W. a mile SE. of Netherby.

MELROSS, a town of Roxburghſhire, cloſe by which are the magnificent remains of Melroſs Abbey, the fineſt of any in Scotland, founded in 1136, by David I. Part of it is at preſent uſed for public worſhip. In 1791, 1232 pieces of linen cloth were whitened here. Melroſs is ſeated on the Tweed, 28 miles SSW. of Edinb.

MELRICHSTADT, a town and bailiwick of Wurtzurg, Franconia.

Melſonby, Yorkſhire, NE. of Richmond. Melta, a river in Brecknockſhire, which runs into the Hepſey, near Iſtradwelthy. Melton, Suffolk, near Woodbridge. Melton, Yorkſ. near Hull. Melton Conſtable, Norfolk, SW. of Holt. Melton Roſſe, Linc. near Great and Little Lymbergh. Melton, Weſt, Yorkſ. W. of Melton on the Hill. Melton, Magna, and Parva, Norfolk, NE. of Windham. Melton-on-the-Hill, Yorkſ. 3 miles from Doncaſter.

*MELTON MOWBRAY, a town of Leiceſterſhire, ſeated on, and almoſt encompaſſed with the little river Eye, over which are two handſome ſtone bridges. The houſes are well built. It is a large town, with a conſiderable market for cattle, proviſions, &c. It is 15 miles S. by E. of Nottingham, and 106 N. by W. of London. Market on Tueſday. Fairs on the firſt Tueſday after January 17th; Whitſun Tuesday; and Auguſt 21ſt.

Melvonby, Yorkſ. near Pocklington.

MELUN, a town in the dept. of Seine and Marne, ſeated on the Seine, 10 miles N. of Fontainbleau.

Melverley, Shropſhire, near Shrawerden Caſtle. Melwood-Park, Linc. in Axholm Iſle. Membury, Devonſhire, SW. of Chard.

MEMEL, a town of Pruſſia, in Lithuania, with the fineſt harbour in the Baltic, and a very extenſive commerce; but it is an ill built town, with narrow, dirty ſtreets. It is ſeated on the N. extremity of the Curiſch Haff, 72 miles NNE. of Koningſburg. Lat. 55. 46. N. lon. 21. 28. E.

Memland, Devonſhire, near Plymouth.

MEMMINGEN, a free town of Suabia, ſituated on the Iller, 22 miles SSE. of Ulm.

Memſted, Hants, in the New Foreſt. Menageſſey, Cornwall, SW. of Fowey. Menai, a river or channel between the Iſle of Angleſea and the county of Cameroon.

MENAN, a large river of Siam, which runs through it from N. to S. paſſes by the city of Siam, and falls into the Gulf of Siam below Bankok. There are ſeveral ſingular fiſhes in it, beſide crocodiles, which are common in theſe parts.

MENANCABO, a town and ſmall kingdom dom of Sumatra, on the SW. coaſt, oppoſite the Iſle of Naſſau.

MENDE, a populous town, capital of the department of Lozere, ſituated on an eminence near the Lol. The fountains, and one of the ſteeples of the cathedral, are remarkable. It has manufactures of ſerges, and other woollen ſtuffs; and is 35 miles SSW. of Puy, and 210 S. by E. of Paris.

Mendham, Suff. 1 mile from Harleſton.

MENDIP HILLS, in old records called MOINEDROP. a lofty, mineral tract, ſtretching from E. to W. and from N. to S. of Somerſetſhire, and abounding in coal, lead, and lapis calaminaris. The lead is of a harder quality than that of Derbyſhire, and is moſtly exported, or uſed for making bullet ſhot, &c. The lapis calaminaris is carried to Briſtol, &c. to be uſed in the making of braſs. Copper mangeneſe, bole, and red ochre, are alſo found in theſe hills. On their ſummits are vaſt heaths, covered with fern, which feed great numbers of ſheep and cattle, but in which, however, are ſome ſwampy flats, dangerous to croſs.

MENDLESHAM, a town of Suffolk, ſituated near the riſe of the river Deben, among deep miry roads, 18 miles E. of Bury, and 82 NE. of London. Market on Tueſday.

MENDOZA, a town and juriſdiction of Chili, E. of the Cordilleras.

MENDOZA ISLANDS. See MARQUESAS.

MENDRAH, a town and diſtrict of Fezan, 60 miles ſouth of Mourzouk. The quantity of trona, a ſpecies of foſſil alkali, that floats on the ſurface, or ſettles on the banks of its numerous ſmoking lakes, has given a higher importance to this barren country than that of the moſt fertile diſtricts. The trona is conveyed to Tripoli, and ſhipped off for Tunis, Turkey, and particularly Morocco, where it is employed in the red dye of leather, for which they are ſo famous Menebilly, Cornwall, between Foy and Trewardreth Bay.

MENEHOULD, ST. a conſiderable town in the dept. of Marne, ſituated in a moraſs, between two rocks, near the river Aiſne, 20 miles ENE. of Chalons, and 110 E. of Paris.

Menhinnick, or Menheniock, Cornw. NW. of Launceſton.

MENIN, a ſtrongly fortified town of Flanders; often taken and retaken in the late wars. It is ſeated on the river Lis, 10 miles N. of Liſle.

Menlough, in Galway, Connaught.

Menſton, Yorkſ. near Otley. Menthorp, Yorkſ. SW. of New Malton. Mentmore, Bucks, NE. of Aylesbury.

MENTON, a town of Monaco, in Italy, with a caſtle, 5 miles NE. of Monaco.

MENTZ, a large populous city in the circle of the Lower Rhine, capital of the electorate of Mentz, with an univerſity, and an archbiſhop's ſee. The archbiſhop is an elector of the empire, archchancellor of the empire, keeper of the archives and director of the general and particular aſſemblies. He alſo convokes the electoral colleges, and is the firſt ſtate of the empire, after the emperor and the king. The chapter conſiſts of 5 prelates; and 19 capitulars. This city is finely ſituated, built, however, in an irregular manner, with narrow ſtreets and old faſhioned houſes, and containing, beſides the pariſh churches, 6 monaſteries, 5 nunneries, and 6 hoſpitals. The cathedral is a gloomy fabric. Here are manufactures of ſtockings and ſtuffs. Many of the publick buildings, and private houſes, have been deſtroyed, or greatly injured, during the late ſieges. Mentz is ſeated on the Rhine, (ſoon after its confluence with the Maine) over which is a bridge of boats communicating with Caſſel. It is 20 miles N. of Worms. Lat. 49. 59. N. lon. 8. 20. E.

MENTZ, THE ARCHBISHOPRICK OF, a country of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, and lying upon that river. It is about 50 miles in length, and 20 in breadth, a very fertile territory, but conſiderably diſperſed. In the whole electoral circle are 41 cities and 21 boroughs. Beſides the proper archbiſhoprick, the elector of Mentz is ſovereign of the country of Eichsfeld, Eisfeld, or Eifeld; and alſo of the city and territory of Erfort.

MENZALA, a town of Egypt, ſituated near a large lake of the ſame name, which runs parallel with the Medilenancar, 20 miles SSE. of Damietta.

Meoles, Cheſh. near Hyle Lake. Mepham, Kent, 4 miles S. of Graveſend. Mepal, Cambridgeſh. in the Iſle of Ely.

MEPPEN, a town of Munſter, in Weſtphalia, ſituated at the conflux of the Haſe and Ems.

Mepſhall, Bedfordſhire, 4 miles from Biggleſwade.

MEQUINENZA, a town of Arragon, ſeated in an angle at the confluence of the rivers Cinca and Segra, where they both fall into the Ebro, 16 miles SSW. of Lerida.

MEQUINEZ, a city of Fez, in Morocco, rocco, 26 miles SW. of Fez, the reſidence of the emperor, and the capital of the whole empire. Hither the baſhaws and alcayds reſort with the tribute and preſents every two or three years. In the middle of the city the Jews have a place to themſelves, walled in and guarded, with an alcayd to protect them. It is death for them to curſe, or lift up a hand againſt a Moor, inſomuch that the boys kick them about at their pleaſure. They are obliged to wear black clothes and caps, and to pull off their ſhoes whenever they paſs by a moſque. Cloſe by Mequinez, on the NW. ſide, ſtands a large negro town, which takes up as much ground as the city, but the houſes are not ſo high, nor ſo well built. The palace ſtands on the S. ſide, and is guarded by ſeveral hundreds of black eunuchs, who are armed with knives and ſcimiters, covered with wrought ſilver. It is an extenſive building, and includes ſeveral gardens. The ſtreets are exceedingly narrow, with hardly any of the windows to be ſeen, except little holes to look out at. The houſes are flat at the top, ſo that, in many places, they can walk a great way upon them. The women live in the upper apartments, and often viſit each other from the tops of the houſes. When they go abroad, they have their heads covered with their outward garment, which comes down cloſe to their eyes; and underneath they tie a piece of white cloth, to hide the lower part of their faces. They are quite covered all over, except their legs, which are generally naked; but within doors they appear in their hair, and have only a ſingle fillet over their foreheads. Here, as well as at Morocco, is a hoſpital or convent of Spaniſh Recollects, founded by the Kings of Spain, for the benefit of Chriſtian captives, the fathers of both which, ſupply the poor with medicines gratis. It is ſeated in a plain, ſurrounded with fertile well-watered valleys and eminences, 26 miles SW. of Fez, and 165 NE. of Morocco. Lat. 33. 56. N. lon. 6. 6. W.

MER, or MENARS, a town in the department of Loir and Cher, 10 miles NE. of Blois.

MERAN, a town of Tirol, ſeated at the conflux of the Adige and the Paſſer.

MERAZION, or MARKET JEW, a mean town in Cornwall, ſeated on a dangerous arm of the ſea, called Mount's Bay, 3 Miles E. of Penzance, and 283 W. by S. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Merden, Wilts, 2 miles NW. of Uphaven. Merden, E. W. N. and Upper, Suſſex, on the borders of Hants. Merden, Little, Bucks, NW. of Ayleſbury. Merden, or Meriden, NW. of Hertford.

MERDIN, a town of Aſia, in Diarbeck, ſubject to the Turks, who have a baſhaw here, with 200 ſpahis and 500 janizaries. It is 50 miles S. of Diarbekar.

Merdiſſen, Northumb. in the manor of Eland. Mere, Cheſh. near Knottesford. Mere, Somerſ. near Pen. Mere, Staff. at the head of the river Tern. Mere, Devonſh. NE. of Tiverton.

MERE, a town of Wiltſhire, ſeated in an angle, bordering upon Somerſetſhire and Dorſetſhire, 28 miles NW. of Saliſbury, and 100 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Mere-Booth, Linc. NW. of Tatterſhal. Mere Hoſpital, S. of Lincoln. Mere-Houſe, Yorkſ. NE. of Barneſley. Mere-Land, Linc. near Somerton-Caſtle.

MEREOZ, a town and river of Troki, in Lithuania, 28 miles N. of Grodno.

Mereworth, Kent, between Hadlow and Maidſtone. Merfleet, Yorkſh. near Headon. Meriam-Court, Kent, near Maidſtone.

MERGENTHEIM, a town of Franconia, the reſidence of the Grand Maſter of the Teutonic Order, and ſeat of the Regency. It is ſituated on the Tauber, 25 miles SSW. of Wertzburg.

MERIDA, a town of Spaniſh Eſtremadura, built by the Romans before the Chriſtian æra, and called Auguſta Emerita. Here are ſeveral fine remains of antiquity, particularly a triumphal arch. It is ſeated on the Guadiana, 12 miles E. of Badajox.

MERIDA, a town of Mexico, capital of Yucatan, about 40 miles S. of the Gulf of Mexico, and 130 NE. of Campeachy.

MERIDA, a town of Terra Firma, capital of a diſtrict called Merida, or Grilla, bordering on the province of Venezuela. It is ſeated in a country abounding with fruits, 130 miles NE. of Pampeluna.

Meriden or Mireden, Warw. near Coventry. Merill Grange, Leic. near Worthington. Merin, Cornw. near Padſtow Merington-Kirk, Durham, near Biſhop's Auckland. Mering, Nottinghamſhire, near Greſthorp.

MERIONETH, a town in the county to which it gives name, ſeated near the ſea, 12 miles N. of Aberyſtwith, and 10 W. of Machynleth.

MERIONETHSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, bounded on the N. by Carnarvonſhire and Denbighſhire; on the E. by the latter county, and that of Montgomery; on the S. by Montgomery and a ſmall part of Cardiganſhire; and on the W. by the Iriſh Channel. It extends 96 miles from N. to S. and is 34 wide in its broadeſt part. The ſoil is as bad as any in Wales, being very rocky and mountainous; however, large flocks of ſheep and goats, and large herds of horned cattle, find pretty good paſture in the valleys. The face of the country is awfully and aſtoniſhingly romantic, and it is well clothed with wood. The principal rivers are the Dee and Dovy; and it has a great mountain, the Cader Idris, one of the higheſt in Wales. Merionethſhire contains 5 hundreds, 5 market-towns, 37 pariſhes, 2590 houſes, and 17,100 inhabitants. Harlech is the capital.

Meriton, Shropſh. near Albrighton.

MERITZ, or MERRICK, a fortreſs and city of Viſiapour, in Hindooſtan, ſituated on the N bank of the Kiſtna, 50 miles SW. of Viſiapour.

MERK, a river which riſes in Auſtrian Brabant, and running N. by Breda, afterwards turns W. and joins the Meuſe by two channels, E. of the iſland of Overflackee, in Holland.

Merkel, Yorkſ. N. Riding, near Skelton. Merland, and Merland Peters, Devonſ. in Padſtow pariſh. Mernfield, Somerſ. NW. of Ilminſter.

Merriol, Nottingh. in Elkeſley pariſh. Merriot, Somerſ. SE. of Ilminſter. Merrow, Surry, between Guilford and Clandon.

MERS. See BERWICKSHIRE.

MERSBURG, a town and principality of Upper Saxony, and a town of Conſtance in Swabia, ſeated on the lake of Conſtance.

MERSEY, a river of England, the boundary between Cheſhire and Lancaſh. It riſes in Derbyſhire; above Stockport, it receives the Tame; lower down, the Irwell; and paſſing by Warrington, &c. enters the Iriſh Sea below Liverpool. This river not only affords ſalmon, but is viſited annually by ſhoals of ſmelts, here called ſparlings, of a remarkable ſize and flavour.

Merſey-Iſland, Eſſex, at the mouth of the Coln, S. of Colcheſter. Merſh, iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Merſhall, Berks, SW. of Newbury. Merſham, Kent, SE. of Aſhford. Merſham Hatche, or Hutton, Kent, SW. of Merſham.

Merſton, Bucks, S. of Winſlow. Merſton, Linc. NW. of Grantham. Merſton, Kent, near Upnor-Caſtle. Merſton, Norf. W. of Clay. Merſton, Suſſex, SE. of Chicheſter. Merſton, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Merſton, Warw, near Lee. Merſton-Bigot, Somerſetſh. S. of Frome. Merſton-Bread, Somerſ. near Queen-Camel. Merſton-Butters, Warw. SW. of Kineton. Merſton-Culy, Warwickſ. near Sheldon. Merſton-Jabett. Warwickſ. NW. of Wolvey. Merſton, or Marſton-Long, Herts, in the pariſh of Tring. Merſton Meaſy, Wilts on the borders of Glouceſ. Merſton Priors, Warw. in the pariſh of Hardwick-Priors. Merſton-Weavers, Warwickſ. in Church-Bickenhill pariſh. Merſworth, Bucks, near Ivingo. Merther, Cornw. SE. of Truro. Merther-Derwa, Cornw. E of St. Ives-Bay. Merthern, Cornw. NW. of Helford-Haven. Merther-Uni, Cornw. NE. of Helſton.

MERTOLA, a town of Alentejo, ſituated on the river Guadiana, 27 miles N. of Tavira.

Merton or Martin, near Oxford. Merton Surry, on the river Wandle, 1 mile from Tooting. It is conſiderable for its calico printing and bleaching. Merton, Linc. W. of Tatterſhall-Chace. Merton, Devonſhire, near Merland.

MERVE, the N. outlet of the river Maeſe, on which Rotterdam is ſeated.

MERVILLE, a town in the department of the North, ſeated on the river Lis, 16 miles W. of Liſle.

MESCHED, a city of Choraſan, in Perſia; famous for the magnificent ſepulchre of Riſa, an iman, of the family of Ali, to which the Perſian devotees reſort. It has a manufactory of beautiful pottery, and of ſkins, and is ſeated on a mountain in which are found fine Turkey ſtones, 190 miles NNW. of Herat. Lat. 37. 18. N. lon. 57. 20. E.

MESCHEHED-ALI. See MEXAT ALI.

MESCHEHED-HUSSAIN. See MEXATOCEM.

MESEMBRIA, a town of Romania, ſituated at the foot of Mount Hæmus.

Meſhew, Devonſ. S. of S. Moulton.

MESSA, a town of Morocco, ſeated at the foot of Mount Atlas, on the river Sus, near the Atlantic, 165 miles SW. of Morocco.

MESSINA, a city of Sicily, in the valley of Demona, about five miles in circumference, with four large ſuburbs. The public buildings and monaſteries, which are very numerous, are magnificent and well endowed, and it contains about 20,000 inhabitants. The harbour, whoſe quay is above a mile in length, is one of the ſafeſt in the Mediterranean, and in the form of a half-moon. It is five miles in circumference, extremely deep, and defended by a citadel and other works. The viceroy of Sicily reſides here ſix months in the year; and it is a place of great trade in ſilk, oil, fruit, corn, and excellent wine, eſpecially ſince it has been declared a free port. This place, in 1783, ſuffered much by an earthquake, which ſhook great part of Calabria and Sicily to their foundations, overturned many rich and populous towns, and buried thouſands in their ruins. It is ſeated on the ſea-ſide, 104 miles E. of Palermo. Lat. 38. 10. N. lon. 15. 50. E.

viceroy

Meſing, Eſſex, SW. of Colcheſter.

Meſingham, Linc. near Butterworth.

Meſtham, Surry, near Ryegate.

METRE, a town in the Treviſan, Italy.

MESURATA, a ſea-port of Tripoli, and reſidence of a governor; caravans travel from hence into the interior parts of Africa: 75 miles ESE. of Tripoli.

Meſybampton, Glouc. near Fairford.

METELIN, an iſland of the Archipelago, anciently called Leſbos, NNE. of Scio. The ſoil is very good, and the mountains are cool, being covered with wood in many places. It produces good wheat, excellent oil, and the beſt figs in the Archipelago; nor have their wines loſt any thing of their ancient reputation. It is governed by a baſhaw. Caſtro is the capital.

Metfield, Suffolk, 4 miles from Harleſton. Meth, Devonſ. near Padſtow. Metham, Yorkſhire, SW. of Almondbury. Metheringham, SE. of Lincoln.

METHVEN, a town of Perthſhire, with a manufacture of broad and narrow linens. It is 6 miles WNW. of Perth.

Methum, Yorkſ. SE. of Howdendike-Ferry. Methop, Weſtmorl. near the Ken Sands.

METHWOLD, a town of Norfolk, 15 miles NW. of Thetford, and 86 ENE. of London. Market on Friday.

Metley, Warw. in Tillongley pariſh.

METRO, a river of Urbino, which croſſes that duchy, and runs into the Adriatic, 3 miles ESE. of Fano.

Mettingham, Suffolk, near Bungay. Metton, Norfolk, near Felbrig.

METZ, a large town, capital of the dept. of the Moſelle. The cathedral is one of the fineſt in Europe, and the ſquare called Coiſlin, and the houſe of the governor, are elegant. The Jews, about 3000, live in a part of the town by themſelves, where they have a ſynagogue. The ſweetmeats they make here are in high eſteem. The inhabitants are computed at 40,000, beſides a numerous garriſon, who have noble barracks. Metz was formerly, for a long time, the capital of Auſtraſia. It is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Moſelle and Seille, 25 miles NNW. of Nanci. Lat. 49. 7 lon. 6. 16. E.

MEUDON, a handſome palace in France, ſeated on a hill, near the river Seine, five miles SW. of Paris, whence there is a fine proſpect of the environs of that city.

MEULAN, an ancient town in the dept. of Seine and Oiſe, built in the form of an amphitheatre, on the river Seine, 20 miles NW. of Paris.

MEURS, a town and principality, about 8 miles long, and as many broad, of Cleves, ſubject to Pruſſia.

MEURTHE, a depart. of France, 65 miles long and 35 broad, S. of the dept. of the Moſelle. It is called ſo from a river that riſes in the dept. of the Voſges, and watering Luneville, Nanci, &c. falls into the Moſelle, 5 miles below that city, which is the chief town.

MEUSE, a department of France, near 90 miles long and fifty wide, and almoſt equally divided by the river Meuſe or Maeſe. Bar-le-Duc is the capital.

Meux, Yorkſ. E. of Beverly. Mevy-Church, Devonſ. S. of Taviſtock.

MEWARI, a town of Niphon, Japan.

MEWAT, a hilly and woody tract of Hindooſtan, lying SW. of Delhi, and W. of Agra, on the W. ſide of the river Jumna. The inhabitants are infamous as thieves and robbers, parties of them being taken into pay by the chiefs of Upper Hindooſtan, in order to diſtreſs the countries that are the ſeat of warfare. Mewat is almoſt entirely ſubject to Madajee Sindia, a Mahratta chief.

Mew Iſland, in Down, Ulſter, at the S. entrance of Carrickfergus-Bay.

Mew Stone, Devonſ. near Dartmouth, a large rock in the Engliſh Channel, ſo called from the birds that frequent it.

METAX-ALI, a noted town in Irac-Arabia, famous for the ſuperb and rich moſque of Ali, to which the Perſians go in pilgrimage from all parts; but it is not ſo conſiderable as it was formerly. It is ſituated near a large lake, called Rakemat, 100 miles in circumference, which communicates by a canal with the Euphrates, 150 miles S. of Bagdad.

MEXAT-OCEM, a conſiderable town in Irac-Arabia, which takes its name from a moſque dedicated to Ocem, the ſon of Ali. It is ſeated on a canal, which paſſes from the Euphrates, to the lake Rakemat, 75 miles SSW. of Bagdad.

Mexborough, Yorkſ. N. of Rotherham.

MEXICO, a city of North America, capital of the province of that name.

It was a flouriſhing place before the Spaniards entered the country, and is ſeated on ſeveral iſlands, in a ſalt-water lake, to which there is no entrance, but by five cauſeways, three of which are about two miles in length. It formerly contained 80,000 houſes, with ſeveral large temples, full of rich idols, and three palaces, where the emperor of Mexico reſided. Mexico was taken by Ferdinand Cortez, in 1521, after a ſiege of three months. As the Mexicans defended themſelves from ſtreet to ſtreet, it was almoſt ruined, but afterwards rebuilt by the Spaniards. It now contains about 35,000 houſes built of ſtone and brick, with a ſuburb of 8000 houſes, inhabited by the native Americans, 20 churches, and 22 monaſteries and nunneries. It is the uſual reſidence of the viceroy, whoſe employment continues 3 years, and has a royal audience, a univerſity, and the tribunal of the inquiſition. All the ſtreets are ſtraight, and exactly diſpoſed in point of regularity, and it is remarkable for having neither gates, walls, nor artillery. The revenue of the cathedral amounts to nearly 80,000l. a year, out of which the archbiſhop receives annually 15,000l. beſides vaſt ſums that ariſe by perquiſites. The inhabitants are immenſely wealthy, and a vaſt abundance of ſilver, gold, and jewels, is expoſed in plate and toys in the ſtreets, by the goldſmiths and ſhopkeepers. Mexico enjoys a prodigious commerce, being the centre of all the trade carried on between Spaniſh America and Europe, and Spaniſh America and the E. Indies. An incredible number of horſes and mules are employed in tranſporting goods from Acapulco to Vera Cruz, and from Vera Cruz to Acapulco. Hither all the gold and ſilver is brought to be coined; here the king's fifth is depoſited; and all that immenſe quantity of plate wrought which is annually ſent to Europe. This place was overflowed by an inundation in October, 1629, in which 40,000 perſons were drowned. This obliged the Spaniards to make a great conduit through a mountain, in order to empty the lake; which being done, part of the town became ſeated on dry land. Mexico is ſupplied with freſh water by an aqueduct of three miles in length. The Spaniards do not make a tenth part of the inhabitants, the others being negroes, mulattoes, native Americans, and a mixture of them all. It is 130 miles W. by N. of Vera Cruz, and 250 NE. by N. of Acapulco. Lat. 19. 54. N. lon. 100. 0. W.

MEXICO, or NEW SPAIN, a country of N. America, including, in its largeſt ſenſe, all that extenſive peninſula ſituated between Louiſiana and unknown countries on the N. and Terra Firma, in S. America, on the S. but the audience of Mexico contains only the provinces of Mexico Proper, Mechoacan, Guaſteca, Thaſcala, Guaxaca, Tabaſco, and Yucatan. It is waſhed on the E. by the Atlantic Ocean and on the S. and W. by the S. Sea, and is above 2000 miles in length, and from 60 to 600 in breadth. It is divided into 23 diſtricts or provinces, the principal of which is that of Mexico Proper, and contains mines of gold and ſilver, of the latter of which they count above a thouſand beſides, mines of iron, copper, lead, alum, cryſtal, vitriol, precious ſtones, marble, &c. The ſoil produces Indian corn, cabbage trees, cocoa-nuts, vanellas, plantains, pine-apples, cochineal, cotton, and ſeveral other fruits, gums, and drugs, proper to the climate. Before the Spaniards came here, they had a ſort of dogs that did not bark, but howled like wolves; grey lions, leſs formidable than thoſe of Africa; and alſo ſmall tigers, bears, though uncommon, elks, or mooſe-deer, pecaries, warrens, beavers, opoſſums, armadillos, guanoes, flying ſquirrels, racoons, crocodiles, manattes, or ſea-cows, monkeys, parrots, macaws, pelicans, cormorants, and a great variety of other birds, ſnakes, ſcorpions, and other inſects. The Spaniſh clergy are very numerous, and there are a great number of convents. In general, it is a mountainous country, intermixed with many rich valleys: but the higheſt mountains are near the coaſt of the South Sea, many of which are volcanoes. The eaſtern ſhore is a flat, level country, full of bogs and moraſſes, overflowed in the rainy ſeaſon, which is at the ſame time as our ſummer. The hills between the mountains, and the flat country, are beſt inhabited, becauſe there the air is moſt temperate. This province is vaſtly populous, and the original natives, in general, paſs their lives in eaſy circumſtances. In ſome places, the collection of the public revenue, and the exerciſe of the police, are depoſited in the hands of their chiefs, while the laws of the Spaniſh government, upon the whole, have a tendency to make them good ſubjects, rather than miſerable and diſcontented ſlaves. Among the inferior orders of Indians, many are admitted to offices in the church, army, magiſtracy, and in all the principal Spaniſh towns, they are invited to a full incorporation with the natives of Spain. The revenues of the crown, which are great, ariſe from a fifth part of the the gold and ſilver, and from the duties and cuſtoms, as well as from the lands held of the crown.

MEXICO, NEW, a large country of N. America, bounded on the W. by the Gulf of California; its other limits are uncertain. The ſoil and climate are as rich, plentiful, and temperate as any country of America, or any other part of the world. It is inhabited by a great number of people, whoſe languages and cuſtoms are very different; ſome wander about, and others dwell in towns and villages. The chief diviſions are New Mexico Proper, New Leon, New Navarre, and California; the principal Spaniſh colonies are St. Barbe, and Santa Fé, the capital town.

MEXICO, a large gulf of N. America, lying between the S. coaſt of E. Florida and the NE. point of Yucatan.

MEYENFIELD, a handſome town in the country of the Griſons, in the league of the Ten Juriſdictions. It is ſeated on the Rhine, in a pleaſant country, fertile in excellent wine, 15 miles NNE. of Coire.

Meyſey Hampton, Glouceſterſhire, E. of Cirenceſter.

MEZANDERAN, or MAZANDERAN, a province of Perſia, bounded on the N. by the Caſpian Sea, on the E. by Choraſan, on the S. by Chuſiſtan and Irak, and on the W. by Ghilan. The ſouthern part, called Taberiſtan, is mountainous and deſart, but the north is aſtoniſhingly fertile. Ferabad is the capital.

MEZEN, a ſeaport town of Archangel, Ruſſia, ſituated at the mouth of a large river of the ſame name, 128 miles NNE. of Archangel.

MEZIERS, a town in the dept. of Ardennes, ſeated on the river Meuſe, 12 miles NW. of Sedan, and 127 NE. of Paris.

MEZIN, a ſmall town in the dept. of Lot and Garrone, ſeated in a country that abounds in wheat; with vines, from which they principally make brandy; and with the cork-tree, which they ſell both in its natural ſtate, and in corks. It is 8 miles NW. of Condom.

MEZOUR, a town of Candahar.

MEZURADO, a cape on the coaſt of Upper Guinea, between Cape Palmas and Tagrin, or Cape Ledo. Lat. 6. 6. N.

MEZZANA, a town of Corſica, 12 miles SW. of Corte.

MIA, or MIJAH, a town of Japan, on the S. coaſt of the iſland of Niphon.

MICHA, a cape of Dalmatia, in the Adriatic, near the town of Zara.

Michael, Cornw. N. of Penkenel. Michael, Heref. SW. of Roſs. Michael, Lane, near Garſtang. Michael, Monm. N. of Abergavenny. Michael, Somerſetſ. in N. Petherton pariſh. Michael, St. Devonſhire, near Honiton. Michael, St. Devonſhire, S. of Modbury.

MICHAEL ST. or SAN MIGUEL, an iſland in the Atlantic, the largeſt of thoſe called Azores, about 60 miles in circumference. It has ſome populous towns and villages, with a conſiderable commerce in corn, wine, cattle, &c. but the harbours are neither good nor ſafe. The chief towns are Ponta del Gada, with a ſtrong caſtle, in lat. 37. 47. N. lon. 25. 42. W. and Villa Franca. The number of inhabitants is variouſly eſtimated, at from 25 to 50,000.

MICHAEL, ST. a ſtrong town of Malta, adjoining to the city of Valetta. It is ſeated on a rock, ſeparated from the mainland by a ditch.

MICHAEL, ST. a borough of Cornwall, yet has no market, 8 miles SW. of St. Columb, and 249 W. by S. of London.

MICHAEL, ST. a conſiderable town in the dept. of Meuſe, ſeated on the river Meuſe, 20 miles NNE. of Bar-le-Duc, and 165 E. of Paris; alſo ſeveral other towns of France, Savoy, and Italy.

Michael Carthеis, Cornwall, N. of Falmouth Haven. Michael Chapel, Cornw. near Padſtow Haven. Michael Church, Heref. near Hunlington. Michael's, St. Norf. on the coaſt, between Yarmouth and Winterton Neſs. Michael's St. Suff. SE. of Bungay. Michael's Burrow, St. Somerſ. between Bridgwater and Pilney. Michael's Chapel, St. Cornwall, NW. of Lammoram. Michael's Mount, St. Cornwall, is a very high rock in Mount's Bay, on the NW. ſide, a little to the S. of Merazion, inſulated by the tide at high water. Here is an extenſive pier or mole where number of ſhips may clear and refit. On the rocks along this coaſt is bred the Corniſh chough, a bird which will not only ſteal money and hide it, but fire too, with which it ſometimes privately burns houſes. Michael's Rock, St. Devonſhire, between Start-Point and Plymouth. Micheldever, Hants, NW. of Alresford. Michelgrave, Suſſex, between Arundel and Stening. Michelham, Suſſex, near Haylſham. Michelham-Park, Suſſex, near Luggerſhal. Michelmarſh, Hants. N. of Rumſey.

MICHELAU, a town of Culm, Pruſſia. Michelſtow, Cornw. SW. of Camelford.

MICHIGAN, a lake of N. America, 260 miles in length, and above 50 in breadth. It is deep enough for veſſels of any ſize. See MICHILLIMACKINAC.

MICHILLIMACKINAC, a ſtrait or broad river (with an iſland and fort) of N. America, which unites the Lakes Michigan and Huron. Lat. 46. 0. N. lon. 85. 0. W.

Miching, Suſſex, near Newhaven. Michlebaw-Hill, Yorkſhire, S. of Rippon. Micklbye Yorkſ. near Moulgrave-Caſtle. Micklefield. Herts, NW. of Rickmanſworth. Micklefield, Suffolk, W. of Debenham. Micklebam, Surry, at the foot of Box-Hill, between Letherhead and Darking. Micklehurſt, Cheſhire, NE. of Manchester. Mickleton, Glouceſ. 5 miles N. of Camden. Mickleton, Yorkſ. near Rumbald Kirk, Mickley, Northumb. SW. of Newcaſtle. Middlenhall, Wilts. NE. of Marlborough. Middle, 3 miles from Shrewſbury. Middlebourn, Northumb. in Lowes-Foreſt.

MIDDLEBURG, a large, commercial town, capital of the Iſland of Walcheren, and of all Zealand. The ſquares, townhouſe, and other public buildings are magnificent. It contains about 26,000 inhabitants, has a communication with the ſea by a canal, which will bear the largeſt veſſels; and is ſeated in the centre of the iſland, 78 miles SW. of Amſterdam. Lat. 51. 32. N. lon. 3. 39. E.

MIDDLEBURG, a town in Dutch Flanders, 7 miles NE. of Bruges.

MIDDLEBURG. See EODA.

Middle-Headſley, Yorkſhire, between Snaith and Sherborn.

MIDDLEHAM. See MIDLAM.

Middlehope, Shropſhire, near Munſlow. Middlemarſh, Dorſetſh. near Great Minſtern. Middlemead, Eſſex, W. of Maldon.

MIDDLESEX, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Hertfordſhire; on the E. by Eſſex; on the S. by Surry, and a corner of Kent; and on the W. by Buckinghamſhire. It is one of the leaſt counties of England, being only about 22 miles in length and 14 in breadth, but is much the richeſt and moſt populous, and pays more taxes than any ten beſide. It contains 7 market towns, and about 200 pariſhes, without including thoſe in London and Weſtminſter. The air is healthy; but the ſoil, in general, being of a lean gravel, it is naturally a diſtrict of little fertility; though, by means of the vicinity to the metropolis, many parts of it are converted into rich beds of manure, clothed with almoſt perpetual verdure. There are ſtill, however, very extenſive tracts of uncultivated heath. Beſides the Thames, the Lea, and the Coln, Middleſex is watered by ſeveral ſmall ſtreams; one of which, called the New River, is artificially brought from Amwell, in Herts, for the purpoſe of ſupplying London with water. Indeed, the whole county may be conſidered as a demeſne to the metropolis, the land being laid out in gardens, paſture and incloſures of all ſorts for its convenience and ſupport MIDDLESEX, a county of Maſſachuſets, a county of Virginia, and a county of New Jerſey.

Middleſmore, Yorkſh. W. Riding, Netherdale. Middleſoy, Somerſ. 3 miles from Bridgewater.

Middlethird, in Waterford, Munſter.

Middlethorp, near York. Middlethorp, Nott. a hamlet of Norwell. Middlethorp, Weſtm. a chapel of eaſe to Kirby Lonſdale. Middleton, Derbyſ. S. of Bakewell. Middleton, Durham, SE. of Darlington. Middleton, Eſſex, near Sudbury in Suffolk. Middleton, Herefordſh. N. of Leominſter. Middleton, Lanc. near the Irk, 4 miles NE. of Manchester. Middleton, Lanc. between Lancaſter and Sunderland Point. Middleton, Norfolk, SE. of Lynn. Middleton, Northamp. in Cottingham pariſh. Middleton, Northumb. on the coaſt, against Farn-Iſland. Middleton, Shropſ. NE. of Ludlow. Middleton, Shropſ. near Oſweſtry. Middleton, Shropſ. near Priors-Ditton. Middleton, Suffolk, near Saxmundham. Middleton, Suſſex, W. of Arundel-Haven. Middleton, Suſſex, S. of Terring. Middleton, Warw. 4 miles NW. from Coleſhill. Middleton, Yorkſh. W. Riding, near Newbiggin. Middleton, Yorkſ. N. Riding, SE. of Kirkliagton. Middleton, Yorkſ. NW. of Scarborough. Middleton, Yorkſ. near Pickering. Middleton, Yorkſ. SE. of Yarum. Middleton, Yorkſ. NW. of Danby-Wiſk. Middleton, York. W. Riding, near Rothwell. Middleton Cheney, Northamp. near Banbury in Oxfordſ. Middleton, Row and Green, Durham, E. of Darlington. Middleton Hall, Northumb. near Waller. Middleton Hall, Shropſhire, W. of Biſhop's Caſtle. Middleton, in Teeſdale, Durham, S. of Stanhope. Middleton Kents, Bucks near Newport-Pagnel. Middleton, Prior's, Scriven, Shropſ. SW. of Bridgenorth. Middleton Stony, Derbyſh. in the Hi Peak. Middleton Stony, Oxfordſh. N. of Bicester. Middleton-Place, Cumberl. Corney-pariſh. Middleton Tiars, York NE. of Richmond. Middleton, N. S. Northumberland, between Kirk-Ha and Morpeth.

*MIDDLETON, a town of Cork, Munſter, ſeated on the NW. angle Cork Harbour. Contiguous to the to there is a ſubterraneous river, and a mantic cave.

MIDDLETOWN, a town of Edinburgh ſhire, 6 miles S. of Dalkeith.

Middleto

Middleton, in Armagh, Ulſter.

MIDDLETON, a town of Connecticut, ſeated on the W. bank of the river Conneſticut, 15 miles S. of Hartford. It is the principal town of the county of Middleſex.

MIDDLETOWN, a town of New Jerſey, adjoining that of Shrewſbury, in the county of Monmouth. Sandy-Hook (ſo called from its ſhape and ſoil) is included in this townſhip. On the point of the Hook ſtands the lighthouſe, 100 feet high, built by the city of New York. Middletown is 14 miles ESE. of Brunſwick. Alſo a town of Pennſylvania, and a town of Rhode Iſland.

*MIDDLEWICH, a large town of Cheſhire, ſeated near the conflux of the rivers Croke and Dan, and communicating with all the late inland navigations. Here are two rich ſalt-water ſprings, the brine of which is ſo ſtrong, as to produce a full fourth part ſalt. A cotton manufacture has been lately eſtabliſhed here. It is 24 miles E. of Cheſter, and 167 NW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Middlewood, Heref. W. of Bredwardine-Castle. Midgeley, Yorkſ. W. of Halifax. Midgham, Berkſ. near Thatcham.

*MIDHURST, a large neat town of Suſſex, ſeated on a hill ſurrounded with others, having the river Arun at the bottom, 11 miles N. of Chicheſter, and 50 SW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

MIDLAM, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, noted for a woollen manufactory. It is ſeated on the river Ure, 10 miles S. of Richmond, and 255 NNW. of London. Market on Monday.

Midlam Durham, NE. of Biſhop-Auckland. Midlavant, Suſſex, N. of Chicheſter. Midley, Kent, near Romney.

Midpace River, in Down, Ulſter.

MIECHAU, or MIEKOW, a town of Cracow, Poland.

Mierſtough, Lancaſ. in Amounderneſs.

Migiam, Hants, near Fordingbridge.

MIGUEL, ST. a town and juriſdiction of Quito, in Peru; alſo a town of Guatimala, a town of Michoacan, and a town of Culiacan, all in Mexico; a town of Tucuman, a town of New Grenada, and a town of St. Paul, Brazil, all in S. America; and a town of Seville, in Spain.

MILAN, a city of Italy, capital of a duchy of the ſame name. It was the ancient capital of Lombardy, and is the largeſt city of Italy, except Rome; but, although it is thought rather to exceed Naples in ſize, it does not contain above one half the number of inhabitants. It is ſeated in a pleaſant plain, between the rivers Adda and Teſin. It is about 10 miles in circumference, and called by the Italians, Milan the Great. Here are 22 gates, 230 churches, 90 convents, 100 religious fraternities, 120 ſchools, and about 250,000 inhabitants. Broad and ſtraight ſtreets are but few in compariſon of the narrow and crooked; and the many paper windows, or glaſs and paper panes intermixed, even in the fineſt palaces, have a mean appearance. The governor's palace, or the old regency-houſe, is the moſt ſtately and ſpacious. The cathedral is a grand ſtructure, being 500 feet long, 200 broad, and 400 high. It ſtands in the centre of the city, and, next to St. Peter's at Rome, is the largeſt in Italy This vaſt fabric is entirely built of ſolid white marble, and is ſupported by 50 columns, ſaid to be 84 feet high. The 4 pillars under the cupola are 28 feet in circumference. The college of St. Ambroſe has a library, which, beſide ſome thouſands of manuſcripts, contains 45000 printed volumes. In it is an academy of painting. The moſt conſiderable commerce of the inhabitants is in grain (eſpecially rice), cattle, and cheeſe, which they export; and they have manufactures of ſilk and velvet ſtuffs, ſtockings, handkerchiefs, ribbons, gold, and ſilver laces, and embroideries, woollen and linen cloths, glaſs, and earthen-ware, in imitation of China. Here are ſeveral rivers and many canals. It is 65 miles N. of Genoa, 145 NNW. of Florence, and 270 NW. of Rome. Lat. 45. 28. N. lon. 9. 16. E.

MILAN, THE DUCHY OF, a conſiderable country of Italy, bounded on the N. by Switzerland, and the country of the Griſon's; on the E. by the ci-devant ſtate of Venice, and the duchies of Parma and Mantua; on the S. by Parma and Piedmont; and on the W. by Piedmont and Savoy, being about 108 miles in length and 96 in breadth. The ſoil is as fertile as that of any country in Europe, in corn, wine, fruits, rice, olives, and vegetables; and the diſtrict of Lodi breeds vaſt herds of cattle. The rivers are, the Secchia, Teſin, Adda, and Oglio. There are likewiſe ſeveral lakes, the three principal of which are thoſe of Maggiore, Como, and Lugano. This duchy, including the Milaneſe Proper, the dukedom of Mantua, the territories of Como, Pavia, Lodi, and Cremona, has been, ſince the beginning of this century, ſubject to the houſe of Auſtria, but in the preſent war it has been overrun by French troops, and now forms a principal part of the new Ciſalpine Republic.

MILBORN-PORT, a borough of Somerſetſhire, ſurrounded in a manner by Dorſetſhire. The inhabitants are about 1100. It is no market town, though it appears in Domeſday book to have had a market once, and 56 burgeſſes. It is ſeated on a branch of the river Parret, 2 miles from Sherborn in Dorſetſhire.

Milborn, St. Andrews, Dorſetſh. near Blandford, Milborn Stiham, Dorſetſ. W. of Bere. Milborn Stoke, Shropſhire, near Brown Clee Hill. Milbrook, Bedf. near Ampthill. Milbrook, or Meloch, Cornw. W. of Plymouth-Haven, has a good fiſhing trade. Milbrook, Hants, near Southampton. Milburn, Warw. near Stonely. Milburne, Weſton, in the pariſh of Kirby-Thore. Milby, Yorkſ. N. Riding, between Aldborough and Catterick. Milcomb, Oxfordſ. near Deddington. Milcote, Warw. in the pariſh of Weſton upon-Avon, in Glouceſterſhire. Milcotton, Northamp. near Addington. Milcourt, Hants, NE. of Alton.

MILDENHALL, a large populous town in Suffolk, ſeated on the river Lark, a branch of the Ouſe, with a harbour for boats, 12 miles NW. of Bury, and 69 NNE. of London. A well-frequented market on Friday, eſpecially for fiſh and wild fowl.

Milding, Suffolk, between Lavenham and Lindley. Mile End, Middleſex, a hamlet to Stepney. Mile End, Eſſex, near Colcheſter. Mileham, Norfolk, NW. of Eaſt Dereham. Miler, Cornwall, near Penryn.

MILETO, a town of Calabria Ultra.

Milfield, Northumb. near Brankeſton, once the reſidence of the Saxon kings of Bernicia. Milford, Hants, SW. of Lymington. Milford, Herts, near the Hormeads and Pelhams. Milford, Wiltſ. near Saliſbury. Milford, Shropſhire, NW. of Shrewſbury. Milford, Surry, S. of Godalmin. Milford, N. and S. Yorkſ. near Tadcaſter and Sherborn.

Milford, in Cork, Munſter.

MILFORD, a town of N. America, in the ſtate of Delaware, and county of Suſſex, of which it is the emporium. It is ſituated 15 miles from the Bay of Delaware, and 150 S. of Philadelphia; alſo a town of Maſſachuſets, and two towns of Connecticut.

MILFORD, a town of Pembrokeſhire, ſituated on the N. coaſt of Milford Haven, 6 miles WNW. of Pembroke, and 6 SSW. of Haverfordweſt. A new quay has been lately built here, and a conſiderable number of new buildings erected, by a commercial company of quakers from America.

MILFORD HAVEN, a deep inlet of the Iriſh Sea, on the coaſt of Pembrokeſhire, univerſally allowed to be the beſt harbour in Great Britain, and as ſafe and ſpacious as any in Europe. It has 16 deep and ſafe creeks, 5 bays, and 3 roads, all diſtinguiſhed by their ſeveral names, in which 1000 ſail of ſhips may ride in perfect ſecurity, and at ſufficient diſtance from each other. There is no danger in ſailing in or out with the tide, by day or night, from whatever point the wind may happen to blow; and if a ſhip in diſtreſs comes in, without either anchor or cable, ſhe may run on ſhore on ſoft ooſe, and there lie in ſafety till ſhe is refitted. The ſpring tide riſes in this harbour 36 feet, ſo that ſhips may at any time be laid aſhore. Dale Harbour is a ready outlet for ſmall veſſels, where they may ride in 2 or 3 fathoms at low water. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, before the Spaniſh invaſion, two forts were begun at the entrance of the haven, one on each ſide, called Nangle and Dale Blockhouſes, but they were not finiſhed. In the middle of the entrance between Nangle and Dale, the Stack Rock riſes above water. The breadth of the entrance, between rock and rock, is but 200 yards at high water, and 112 at low water. One great advantage attending this harbour is, that a ſhip may be in or out of it in an hour's time, and in 8 or 10 hours may be on the coaſt of Ireland, or off the Land's End; they may alſo get out to the W. much ſooner than from either Plymouth or Falmouth. The parliament, on April 14th, 1759, granted 10,000l. for fortifying this harbour, all of which was expended on the fort at Neyland, which, however, ſtill remains unfiniſhed.

Milgate, Kent, near Maidſtone.

MILIANE, a town of Tremeſen, in Africa, ſeated in a country fertile in oranges, citrons, and other fruits, the beſt in Barbary.

Milkbourn, a river in Northum. Milkhouſe, Kent, near Cranbrook, Milkinthorp, Weſtmorl. near Whitfield-Foreſt. Milkley, Herts, near Puckeridge. Mill, Devonſ. near Witheridge.

MILHAU, a town in the dept. of Aveiron, ſeated on the river Tarn, 50 miles NW. of Montpellier and 142 S. of Paris.

Millaxtown, in Louth, Leinſter.

Mill-End, Glouceſt. in Nibly pariſh. Mill End, Bucks, in Hambledon pariſh. Mill-Hall, Kent, near Aylsford. Mill-Hill, Middleſex, in Hendon pariſh. Mill-Houſe, Cheſh. W. of Macclesfield. Mill-Houſe, Houſe, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Mill-Houſes, Durham, SE. of Stanhope. Miller's Green, Berks, near Windſor-Foreſt. Millington, Cheſ. NW. of Knottesford. Millington, Yorkſhire, near Pocklington.

Mill Iſles, a group of rocks, 2 miles S. of Donaghadee, in Down, Ulſter.

Millplace, Suſſex, near E. Grinſtead. Millpool, Cheſhire, E. of Namptwich. Mill-Row, Lancaſ. near Rochdale.

MILLSTREET, a ſmall town of Cork, in Munſter, where ſome manufactures of linen have been introduced, 136 miles SW. of Dublin.

Mill-Thorp, Nott. in Cokeney pariſh. Milltown, Derbyſ. NW. of Alfreton.

*MILLTOWN, a town of Kerry, in Munſter, 152 miles from Dublin.

Milltown, a village in Dublin, Leinſter, 2 miles from the metropolis.

*MILLTOWN, a town in Weſt Meath, in Leinſter.

MILLUM, Cumb. the moſt ſouthern manor in the country, lying between the Dudden and the Eſk; it is thinly peopled. Market diſcontinued.

Milly-Chapel, Shropſ. NW. of Brown-Clee Hill.

MILO, an iſland of the Archipelago, about 50 miles in circumference, with one of the beſt and largeſt harbours in the Mediterranean. All its productions are of incomparable excellence. The earth, conſtantly heated by ſubterraneous fires, produces, almoſt without intermiſſion, wheat, barley, cotton exquiſite wines, and delicious melons. The cattle, eſpecially goats, are very good, and here are mines of iron and ſulphur. In the ſpring, the fields are enamelled with anemonies, of all ſorts. The inhabitants, who are all Greeks, except the cadi, are good ſailors. A ſort of plumous alum is found here, in large lumps, compoſed of threads as fine as the ſofteſt ſilk, ſilvered over, and ſhining very prettily; it has the ſame taſte as rock alum. Here is a waiwode, who is a Greek, and 3 conſuls, who can depoſe the cadi when he fails in his duty; here are likewiſe 2 biſhops; one of the Greek, and the other of the Latin church. There is a town of the ſame name, in the eaſtern part of the iſland, which is a poor dirty place. The whole iſland, which in the time of Tournefort, in 1700, had upwards of 20,000 inhabitants, from the peſtilence, and the oppreſſion of the Turks, does not now contain above 700. Lat. 36. 41. N. long. 25. 6. E.

Milſted, Kent, near Sittingbourn. Milſton, Wiltſ. on the Avon, N. of Ambreſbury.

MILTENBERG, a town of Mentz.

Milthorp, Linc. SE. of Fokingham.

Milthorp. See Ken.

MILTON, or MILTON ABBEY, an ancient town in Dorſetſhire, chiefly noted for its abbey, now in ruins, built and founded by king Athelſtan. It is 14 miles NE. of Dorcheſter, and 112 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

MILTON, or MILTON ROYAL, a town in Kent, formerly the reſidence of the kings of Kent, and of king Alfred, who had a caſtellated palace here, which ſtood below the church, and it is now famous for its excellent oyſters. It is ſeated on the E. Swale, a branch of the river Medway. It is 14 miles NE. of Maidſtone, and 42 E. of London. Market on Saturday.

MILTON, a town in Kent, 1 mile E. of Graveſend, but incorporated with it. King Henry VIII. raiſed a blockhouſe and platform here for the defence of this town and Graveſend, and for the command of the river.

Milton, Berks, S. of Abingdon. Milton, Bucks, near Newport. Milton, 3 miles N. of Cambridge. Milton, Derbyſ. NE. of Reppington. Milton, Devonſ. between Hope-Key and Dodbrook. Milton, Dorſet. N. of Gillingham. Milton, Weſt, Dorſetſ. N. of Bridport. Milton, Hantſ. between Lymington and Chriſtchurch. Milton, Heref. on the Arrow, near Pembridge. Milton, Kent, near the Stour, a mile and a half SW. of Canterbury. Milton, Northamp. near Peterborough. Milton, SW. of Northampton. Milton, Oxf. S. of Banbury. Milton, Oxf. between Adderbury and Bloxham. Milton, Surry, near Egham. Milton, Surry, in Darking pariſh. Milton, Wilts, 5 miles S. of Marlborough. Milton, Upper and Nether, Oxf. W. of Wichwood Foreſt. Milton, Upper and Nether, Shropſhire, beyond Bridgnorth, bordering on Staffordſhire. Milton, Upper and Nether, Somerſ. NW. of Bruton. Milton, Upper and Nether, Somerſetſ. W. of Queen Camel. Milton-Abbots, Devon, near Brentor. Milton-Brian, Bedfordſh. near Woburn-Abbey. Milton Damerell, Devonſ. NW. of Padſtow. Milton-End, Glouc. near Arlingham. Milton-Earneſt, 4 miles from Bedford, near the Ouſe. Milton, Great and Little, Oxfordſ. near Tame. Milton, alias Midleton Hall, Eſſex, near Priſtlewell. It is an excellent nurſery for oyſters, which are brought hither ſmall, and ſpread about with a ſhovel, till they come of a proper growth. Milverton, Somerſ. near Wivelſcomb, 13 miles E. of Dulverton.

Miltown-Malby, in Clare, Munſter. Miltown Paſt, in Roſcommon, Connaught.

Milverton,

Milverton, Warw. on the SE. ſide of the Avon, below Guy's-Cliff. Milwich, Staff. E. of Stone. Mimere, a river in Herts, which runs into the Beane, above Ware. Mims-Hall, Middleſex, NE. of South Mims. Mims, North, Herts, two miles from Hatfield. Mims, South, Middleſex, 2 miles from North Mims, in the moſt northern angle of the county. Minchington-Hall, Middleſ. near Southgate.

MINCIO, a river in the N. of Italy, which riſes in lake Garda, forms the Lake which ſurrounds the city of Mantua, and runs into the Po near Sacchetta.

MINDANAO, one of the Philippine Iſlands, and next to Luconia in point of ſize, being 180 miles in length and 120 in breadth. It is interſected with ſo many points running out into the ſea, and deep bays, that a man may go acroſs it in any where in a day and a half. It is generally a mountainous country, full of hills and valleys; but the mould is deep, black, and fruitful. There are many lofty trees, of kinds not known in Europe, and the valleys are well watered with rivulets. The inhabitants find very good gold, by digging deep in the ground, as alſo in the rivers, making trenches before the floods. The libby-trees produce the ſago, of which, when reduced into meal, the poor people make bread and biſcuits. Here are all the various ſorts of fruits proper to the climate, beſides plenty of rice. The cinnamon-tree grows here, on the mountains, without culture, and has no owner but him that finds it. They have horſes, beeves, buffaloes, goats, deer, monkeys, guanoes, bats of a large ſize, lizards, and ſnakes; but they have neither lions nor tigers. Their hogs are accounted very ugly creatures, they have all great nobs growing over their eyes; their fleſh, however, is ſweet. Their fowls are, ducks, hens, pigeons, parrots, parroquets, and turtle-doves, beſide many ſmall birds. The air is temperate, they having ſea-breezes by day, and cooling land-winds at night. The inhabitants are of a mean, low ſtature, with ſmall limbs, and little heads. They have flat foreheads, black ſmall eyes, ſhort low noſes, and pretty large mouths. Their hair is black and ſtraight, and their complexion tawny, but more inclined to yellow than that of other Indians. The chief trades are goldſmiths, blackſmiths, and carpenters; they build pretty good veſſels for the ſea, and eaſily collect ſulphur enough for all ſorts of uſe, from the ſeveral burning mountains. Polygamy is practiſed here, and the ſultan has a queen, beſide 20 other women: for their religion is Mahometaniſm. Their houſes are built on poſts, from 14 to 20 feet high: and they have ladders to go up out of the ſtreets. They have but one floor, which is divided into ſeveral rooms, and the roofs are covered with palmetto leaves.

MINDELHEIM, a town and ſmall territory of Suabia, about 8 miles ſquare, 22 miles SW. of Augſburg.

MINDEN, a conſiderable trading town of Weſtphalia, with a fertile territory of the ſame name, about 96 miles in circumference, ſubject to Pruſſia. On a heath, near this town, Prince Ferdinand of Brunſwick defeated the French Marſhal Contades, in 1759, with the loſs of 7000 men killed, wounded, and priſoners. It is ſeated on the river Weſer, 37 miles SW. of Hanover.

MINDORO, an iſland in the Eaſtern Ocean, one of the Philippines, 150 miles in circumference, and ſeparated from Luconia by a channel 18 miles over. It is full of high mountains, which abound in palm-trees, cocoa-trees, various ſorts of fruits, and rice. The inhabitants are pagans, and pay tribute to the Spaniards. Lat. 13. N.

Minegabane, in Kerry, Munſter.

*MINEHEAD, a town of Somerſetſh. containing about 500 houſes and 2000 inhabitants. Here is a ſafe and commodious harbour for ſhips of large burden, formed by a pier and quay, to which laſt a new head has been added, the beach cleared, &c. It carries on a conſiderable trade to Ireland and the Weſt-Indies, and is 31 miles N. of Exeter, and 161 W. by S. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

MINEHEAD, a cape of Waterford, in Munſter, 4 miles SSW of Helwick Head.

Mineries, Somerſetſhire, near Chewton Mendip. Mines, Dorſetſhire, E. of Pool.

MINGRELIA, a province of Aſia, ſituated along the E. coaſt of the Black Sea. The principality is hereditary, and is governed by a prince, who takes the title of Dadian, or chief of juſtice. The tribute enacted by the Turks is a quantity of linen-cloth made in the country. The principal commerce is in ſlaves. The face of this country, its products, and the cuſtoms and manners of the inhabitants, are ſimilar to thoſe of Georgia.

Minheniet, Cornwall E. of Leſkeard.

MINHO, a river of Spain, which riſes near Mindonedo, in Galicia, and paſſing by by Lugo, Ortenſe, Tuy, &c. falls into the Atlantic at Caminha.

MINIATO, ST. a town of Tuſcany, ſeated on the Arno.

Minley, Hants, near Blackwater.

Minola, in Mayo, Connaught.

MINORBINO, a town of Calabria Citra; and a town of Bari; both in Naples.

MINORCA, a conſiderable iſland of the Mediterranean, lying 24 miles NE. of Majorca. It is about 30 miles in length and 12 in breath, and chiefly valuable for the excellent harbour of Port-Mahon. It is a mountainous country, with ſome fruitful valleys, where there are excellent mules. Rabbits are in great plenty, and here are plantations of palm-trees, which bear no fruit, vines, olives, cotton, and capers. The peaſants are very dexterous with their ſlings, and command their cattle with them. The houſes on the iſland are computed at 3089, and the inhabitants at 27,000. It was taken by the Engliſh in 1708, and kept by them till 1756, when the French took it. It was reſtored to the Engliſh by the treaty of 1763, and retaken by the Spaniards in the American war, and confirmed to them by the peace of 1783. Citadella is the capital, beſide which there are Port-Mahon, the fortifications of which are now demoliſhed, Lahor, and Mercadal.

MINORS, a town in Principato Citra.

Minſenden, Middleſex, near Southgate.

Minſhul Church, Cheſh. N. of Nampt-wich. Minſhul-Vernon, Cheſhire, SE. of Church-Minſel. Minſingbury, Herts, near Barley.

MINSK, a town and a palatinate of Ruſſian Lithuania, 250 miles NE. of Warſaw. The foreſts contain vaſt numbers of bees, whoſe honey makes part of the riches of the country.

Minſkip, Yorkſhire, near Boroughbridge. Minſted, Hants, in New Foreſt. Minſter, Cornw. near Bottreaux Caſtle. Minſter, Kent, in the Iſle of Thanet, 3 miles and a half from Sandwich. Minſter, in Sheppey Iſle, near Sheerneſs. Minſter-Lovel, Oxfordſ. 3 miles from Witney, Minſter, South, Eſſex, near Barnham and Tillingham. Minſteracres, Northumb. NW. of Ebchurch, near Slealey. Minſterley, Shropſh. near Hayes Foreſt. Minſterworth, four miles from Glouceſter. Mintern, Great, Dorſetſ. 2 miles from Cerne-Abbas. Minting, Lincolnſh. NW. of Horncaſtle. Mintling, Norfolk, near Lynn. Minton, Shropſh. S. of Church Stretton. Mintown, Shropſ. E. of Biſhop's Caſtle. Minty, Wilts, NE. of Malmſbury. Minworth, Warwickſh. near Caſtle Bromwich.

MIOLANS, a fortreſs in the department of the Lower Alps, 9 miles NW. of Barceloda; and a town in the department of Mont Blanc, 10 miles E. of Chamberry.

MIOSS, a lake of Aggerhuys, in Norway, near 50 miles in length, and from 2 to 16 in breadth. It contains ſeveral farm-houſes, on an iſland 8 miles in circumference, 30 miles NE of Chriſtiana.

MIQUELETS, a name given to the Spaniſh peaſants who inhabit the Pyrenean Mountains, on the frontiers of Catalonia and Arragon, and who lived formerly by robbing.

MIQUELON, a ſmall iſland about 9 miles SW. of Cape May, in Newfoundland, ceded to France by the treaty of Paris, in 1763, for the convenience of drying and curing their fiſh. It was taken by the Engliſh in 1793.

MIRABEL, a town in the department of the Drome, and a town in the department of Lot.

MIRABELLA, a town of Moliſo and a town of Principato Ultra.

MIRAMONT, a town in the department of Lot and Garonne.

MIRANDA-DE-EBRO, a town of Old Caſtile, ſeated on the river Ebro, 34 miles S. of Bilboa, and 160 N. of Madrid.

MIRANDE, a town in the dept. of Gers, trading in wool, down, and the feathers of geeſe. It is ſeated near the river Baiſe, 15 miles SW. of Auch, and 340 SW. of Paris.

MIRANDA-DE-DOURO, a town of Tralos Montes, Portugal, ſeated on a rock, in a barren mountainous country, near the Douro, 28 miles SW. of Braganza, and 208 N. by E. of Liſbon.

MIRANDOLA, a town and duchy of Italy, lately ſubject to the Duke of Modena, and almoſt ſurrounded by the duchy of that name.

Mircaſton, NW. of Derby.

MIREBEAU, a town in the department of Vienne, famous for the beauty and ſtrength of the aſſes which its environs produce.

MIRABEAU, a town in the dept. of Cote d'Or, 14 miles NE. of Dijon.

MIRECOURT, a town in the depart. of Voſges, famous for its violins and fine laces. It is 15 miles NW. of Epinal.

MIREMONT, a town in the dept. of Dordogne; and a town in the dept. of Upper Garonne.

MIREPOIX, a town in the dept. of Arriege, 15 miles NE. of Foix.

Mirfield,

Mirfield, Yorkſ. W. of Wakefield.

MISENO CAPE, on the N. ſide of the Gulf of Naples. Lat. 40. 48. N.

Miſerden, Glouceſterſh. 2 miles from Biſley, and 9 from Glouceſter. Here is a park 7 miles in circumference, full of fine beech wood.

MISITRA, the ancient LACEDÆMON, a celebrated town of the Morea. It is divided into four parts, the caſtle (which is on a rock, and ſaid to be impregnable,) the town, and two large ſuburbs. The Chriſtians have ſeveral churches; one of them, called Perileptos, is ſaid to be one of the moſt beautiful in the world. The Turks have a ſuperb moſque and magnificent hoſpital; and the Jews, three ſynagogues. Miſitra contains about 12,000 inhabitants, and is the ſee of a Greek archbiſhop, and the reſidence of a bey, an aga, and a waiwode. It is ſeated on the river Vaſilipotamo, 40 miles SSW. of Argos, and 40 miles S. of Corinth. Lat. 37. 6. N. lon. 22. 30. E.

Miſmers Haven, Suff. S. of Dunwich.

MISNIA. See MEISSEN.

Miſſen, Nottingh. NE. of Bawtry.

MISSEN-HEAD, the moſt ſouthern point of Ireland, in Cork, Munſter. Here is a large bay. Lat. 51. 14. N. lon. 9. 35. W.

Miſſenden, Great and Little, Bucks, NW. of Amerſham.

MISSISSIPPI, a conſiderable river of N. America, which is the great channel of the waters of the Ohio, the Illinois, and their numerous branches from the E. and of the Miſſouri and other rivers from the W. Its ſource is unknown, but its length (in a ſoutherly direction) is ſuppoſed to be upward of 3000 miles, in all its windings, to its entrance into the Gulf of Mexico, between the 89th and 90th degrees of W. lon. In this river, in lat. 44. 30. N. are the Falls of S. Anthony, where the whole river, which is more than 250 yards wide, falls perpendicularly about 30 feet.

Mis Sliabh, or Mountains of the Moon, two mountains of Ireland; one in Antrim, Ulſter, the other in Kerry, Munſter, near Tralee Bay.

MISSOURI, a large river of N. America, whoſe ſource is unknown. It joins the Miſſiſſippi, in lat. 39. N. and lon. 91. W. but is a longer, broader, and deeper river than that, and is, in fact, the principal ſtream. It has been aſcended by the French traders upwards of 1200 miles, and from the depth and breadth of the river, at that diſtance, appeared to be navigable much higher.

Miſterton, Leiceſ. E. of the Avon, oppoſite to Lutterworth. Miſterton, Nott. in the N. part of the county, called North Clay. Mistley, Eſſex, near Manningtree. Miſtole, Kent, SW. of Canterbury. Miſton, Berks, between Wantage and Abingdon. Mitcham, Surry, on the river Wandle, on which are ſome ſnuff-mills, eight miles SW. by S. of London.

Mitchel's Fort, in Cork, Munſter.

*MITCHEL'S TOWN, a town of Cork, in Munſter. Here is a college for the ſupport of 12 decayed men, and the ſame number of women, who have 40l. yearly, and handſome apartments, and a chaplain at 100l. per annum, with a houſe, who officiates daily in a neat chapel belonging to the college. It is 23 miles NE. of Cork, and 102 SW. of Dublin.

Mitford, Somerſ. near Bath. Mitford-Caſtle, Northumb. near Morpeth, not far from the river Wanſbeck. Mitredale, Cumb. NE. of Ravenglaſs.

MITTAU, an extenſive town, pretty well inhabited, and the capital of Courland; and the reſidence of the duke of the Regency of the country. It is ſituated on the river Aa, in that part of Courland called Semigallia, 140 miles NNE. of Koningſberg, and 56 SSW. of Riga.

Mitton, Worceſ. N. of Tewkeſbury. Mitton, Lanc. SW. of Clitheroe. Mitton, NW. of Shrewſbury. Mitton, Staff. W. of Penkridge. Mitton, Iſle of Wight, in Eaſt Medina. Mitton, Worceſ. near Kidderminſter. Mixbury, Oxfordſ. NE. of Somerton.

MOAB, a town of Yemen, and a town of Hadramaut, both in Arabia.

*MOAT, called alſo MONTAGRENOGE, a town of Weſt Meath, in Leinſter, 52 miles W. of Dublin.

Moat of Aſkull, in Kildare, Leinſter, 3 miles from Athy.

Moate Hall, near Shrewſbury. Mobberley, Cheſhire, NE. of Northwich.

MOBILE, a conſiderable river of W. Florida, which empties itſelf into MOBILE BAY, in the Gulf of Mexico, in lon. 87. 55. W.

MOCAMPOUR, a town and country of India, N. of Bengal. Lat. 27. 35. N. lon. 65. 37. E.

MOCHA, a conſiderable town, with a harbour, of Yemen, in Arabia, built about 400 years ago; it is ſurrounded by walls, conſiſting of half ſtone and half earth; and ſeveral towers, guarded by ſoldiers. The women, except a ſmall number of the common ſort, never appear in the ſtreets ſtreets in the day-time, but viſit each other in the evening. Over their other dreſs, they wear a large veil of painted ſalico, that they can ſee through without being ſeen. They have alſo little buſkins of Morocco leather: ſome of the women of rank are handſome, and not browner than the Spaniſh women. Mocha was the laſt city in Yemen of which the Turks retained poſſeſſion. It has now no other maſter than the Iman. The inhabitants are computed at 10,000 without comprehending the Armenians, or the Jews, who inhabit the ſuburbs. Here are about 700 Banians, Rajaputs, and other Indians, who, when they have made a ſmall fortune, commonly return to India. The Engliſh engroſs, almoſt excluſively, the trade of this place, which conſiſts (the Arabs having ſcarcely any other article for exportation) in exporting coffee, and importing iron, (of which a great quantity is ſold in Arabia), purchaſed chiefly from the Danes; and they often gain conſiderably by carrying money to India, with which the Arabian merchants intruſt them. It is ſeated in a dry, ſandy country, abounding in date-trees, near the Straits of Babelmandel. Lat. 13. 19. N. lon. 43. 23. E.

Mockys, near Hereford. Mockley, Warwickſhire, near Umberley.

Mocollop. in Waterford, Munſter. Mocarry, in Wexford, Leinſter.

MODBURY, a town in Devonſh. noted for fine white ale. It is 14 miles SW. of Plymouth, and 208 W. by S. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Modelligo, in Waterford, Munſter.

MODENA, a city of Italy, capital of the Modeneſe, ſeated between the rivers Secchia and Penaro. It is pretty large and populous, having ſeveral piazzas; but the ſtreets are narrow, the houſes without beauty or ſymmetry, and the walks low and dark. The churches have little or nothing worth notice, but the ducal palace is large and ſplendid, and is richly furniſhed. The picture-gallery conſiſts of 6 rooms, all filled with ſelect pieces of the moſt famous maſters. In a chamber under the cathedral is ſhown the ſo much talked of Secchia rapita, or well-bucket, with iron hoops, taken in a petty war from the doors of one of the inhabitants of Bologna. The inhabitants are ſaid to be 40,000. It is 22 miles NW. of Bologna. Lat. 44. 39. N. lon. 11. 18. E.

MODENESE, THE, or the territory of Modena, is bounded on the W. by the duchy of Parma, and the ſtate of Genoa; on the N. by the duchy of Mantua; on the E. by the Bologneſe; and on the S. by part of Tuſcany and the republic of Lucca. It is about 60 miles in its greateſt length, and from 20 to 36 in breadth. The ſoil is fertile in corn, wine, oil, fruits, and other productions. It alſo feeds a great number of cattle. The duchy of Modena conſiſts of Modena Proper, the duchies of Reggio and Mirandola, the principalities of Correggio, Carpi, and Novellara, with a few other eſtates.

MODICA, a town and river of Sicily, in the Val di Noto, 18 miles W. of Noto.

Modlicot, Shropſh. NW. of Church-Stretton.

MODON, a town on the SW. coaſt of the Morea, with a large and ſafe harbour. It is ſeated on a promontory, advanced into the ſea of Sapienza, 20 miles SSW. of Coron. Lat. 36. 56. N. lon. 21. 35. E.

MOFFAT, a town of Dumfrieſſhire, containing about 220 families. It has a manufacture of coarſe woollen ſtuffs, with 2 mineral ſprings, of a bracing quality, accounted the ſtrongeſt in Britain. Moffat is ſeated near the river Annan, 20 miles N. by E. of Dumfries.

MOFFAT HILLS, mountains in the northern part of Dumfrieſſhire; from which deſcend, in different directions, the Tweed, the Clyde, and the Annan.

MOGADOR, or SUERA, a ſea-port of Morocco, near Cape Ozem. The town, which was begun in 1760, is now completely finiſhed. The houſes are handſomely and ſolidly built, with great regularity of plan, the ſtreets being all ſtraight lines. It is defended by walls and batteries, and is 90 miles SW. of Morocco. Lat. 31. 30. N.

Mogeely, in Cork, Munſter.

Mogerhanger, Bedfordſhire, NW. of Biggleſwade.

MOHACZ, a town of Hungary, ſeated on the Danube, 56 miles W. of Zegedin.

Mohill, or Moyle, in Leitrim, Connaught.

MOHILLA, one of the Comora Iſlands, between the N. end of the Iſland of Madagaſcar and the continent of Africa. The inland parts are mountainous and woody, and there are villages ſcattered here and there, whoſe houſes are made of reeds and ſtraw. The inhabitants tattoo their ſkins. Some of them are Mahometans, and have a few moſques, built with wood and ſtraw without, and matted neatly within. It produces buffaloes, goats, tortoiſes, hens, large bats, cameleons, leons, rice, peaſe, honey, cocoa-nuts, plantains, oranges, lemons, citrons, pine-apples, cucumbers, tamarinds, and ſugar-canes. There are ſeveral fine ſtreams, and the graſs and trees are green all the year. The cattle, called buffaloes, have a great bunch on their ſhoulders, but in other reſpects are not like thoſe of the Eaſt-Indies. Here is a good road for ſhips. Lat. 12. 30. S. lon. 44. 5. E.

MOHILEF, or MOGILEV, one of the 41 governments of the Ruſſian Empire, containing 12 diſtricts, part of Lithuania, diſmembered from Poland, by the partition treaty of 1772. Its capital is MOHILEF, a populous town, of conſiderable trade, ſeated on the Dnieper. Lat. 53. 52. N. long. 31. 2. E.

MOIRA, or MOYRA, in Down, Ulſter, 15 miles S. of Antrim, and 69 N. of Dublin. It is noted for its linen manufacture, and has a monthly market for vending the ſame.

MOISSAC, a town in the dept. of Lot, ſeated on the river Tarn, near its conflux with the Garonne, 13 miles W. of Montauban.

Mokeſheare, Devonſ. near Halberton.

MOLA, a town of Lavora, near the ſea; and a town of Bari, both in Naples.

Molands, Kent, near Sandwich.

MOLD, a town of Flintſh. where the aſſizes are held, 5 miles SSE. of Flint, and 13 WNW. of Wrexham.

Moldaſh, Kent, adjoining Godmerſham.

MOLDAVIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by Poland; on the E. by Baſſarabia and Budziac Tartary; on the S. by Walachia; and on the W. by Tranſylvania, being 180 miles in its greateſt length, and ſomewhat leſs in breadth. The principal rivers are the Pruth, Moldan, Bardalach, and Sereth. The ſoil is rich, and it abounds in good paſtures, which feed a great number of horſes, oxen, and ſheep: it alſo produces corn, pulſe, honey, wax, fruits, with plenty of game, fiſh, and fowls. The inhabitants are Chriſtians of the Greek church. The Turks oblige the hoſpodar, or waiwode, to pay an annual tribute, and to raiſe a large body of troops at his own expence, in time of war. Jaſſy is the capital.

Moleſworth, Cheſ. in Delamere-Foreſt.

MOLE, a mountain in the department of Mount Blanc, which, from its height and fine ſloping peak, is an object of great beauty, when ſeen from the Lake of Geneva.

Mole, in ancient deeds called Emley, a river in Surry, which is ſuppoſed to run under ground from Boxhill, near Darking, till it appears again near Leatherhead; it afterwards enters the Thames oppoſite Hampton-Court. Perhaps it is rather abſorbed, eſpecially in dry ſeaſons, by a tract of ſoft ground, called the Swallows, near two miles in length, and by caverns in the ſides of the banks: yet not ſo far as to prevent a conſtant ſtream from taking its courſe in an open channel above ground, winding in the valleys from Darking to Letherhead, except in a very dry ſummer; in ſuch ſeaſons, at Burford bridge, beyond Mickleham, its channel is ſometimes dry. Mole, Kent, N. of Tunbridge. Mole-Hall, Eſſex, near Tendring. Mole, or Moad-Hall, Eſſex, near Bardfield. Molecop, or Mowcop, Staffordſh. on the borders of Cheſhire, towards Congleton. Moleſworth, Huntingdonſh. SW. of the Giddings.

MOLFETTA, a town of Bari, Naples.

MOLINA, a town, lordſhip, and river (which runs into the Tagus) of New Caſtile; and a town, of Murcia.

Molington, near Cheſter.

MOLISE, or MOLISO, a county or territory of Naples, bounded on the N. by Abruzzo Citra; on the E. by Capitanata; on the S. by Lavora; and on the W. by the States of the Church. It is 30 miles long and 24 wide, is a mountainous country, but fertile in corn, wine, ſaffron, and ſilk, and abounds in game. The town of Moliſo is 50 miles NNE. of Naples, but Campo-baſſo is the capital.

MOLL, a river of Saltzburg, and Upper Carinthia, which runs into the Drave near Saxenburg.

Molland, Devonſ. NE. of S. Moulton.

MOLLEN, a town of Saxe-Lawenburg, Lower Saxony, in the territory of Lubec, and 6 miles S. of that city.

Mollerſtang, Weſtmorl. near Pendragon-Caſtle. Moll-Hall, Eſſex, W. of Thaxted. Mollington, Oxfordſhire and Warwickſhire, N. of Banbury. Mollyton, Northumb. in Mitford barony.

MOLSHEIM, a town in the depart. of Lower Rhine, 10 miles WSW. of Straſburg, and 228 E. of Paris.

MOLUCCAS, or SPICE ISLANDS, a cluſter of ſmall but valuable iſlands in the Eaſtern Ocean, lying moſtly within ſight of each other. The principal are Ternate, Ambayna, Tydore, Machian, Timor, or Motyr, Bachian, Bourſo, and Ceram. They are ſituated to the E. and S. of Celebes. Their coaſts are rendered very dangerous by ſands and ſhelves.

They

They produce neither corn, rice, nor cattle, except goats; but they have oranges, lemons, coarſe tobacco, and other fruits; and are moſt remarkable for ſpices, eſpecially nutmegs and cloves. Here are parrots of extraordinary beauty, and many birds of paradiſe. They have large ſnakes, which are not venomous, but very dangerous lizards, or land crocodiles. The Dutch, who drove out the Spaniards and Portugueſe, keep out all other European nations, being jealous of their ſpice trade. The natives are Pagans, but there are many Mahometans. All the particular kings of theſe iſlands are ſubject to the king of Ternate, who is in alliance with the Dutch. Moſt, if not all of them, have been reduced by the Engliſh, ſince the commencement of the preſent war.

MOLWITZ, a town of Brieg, Sileſia.

MOMBAZA, or MONBAZA, a town and country of Africa, on the eaſtern coaſt, in Zanguebar, S. of Melinda. The ſoil is fruitful, producing rice, millet, and other grain, variety of fruit-trees, vegetables, and eſculents. Here is alſo plenty of cattle and poultry, and the country abounds with ſprings of freſh water. The climate is temperate, and the air healthy. The city was held ſome time by the Portugueſe, but they were driven out in 1631 by an Arabian ſcheik, and their converts are moſtly turned Mahometans. Lat. 3. 45, S. lon. 39. 0. E.

MONA, or MOEN, an iſland of Denmark, in the Baltic, SE. of Zealand, from which it is ſeparated by a narrow ſea, about 16 miles in length, and from 3 to 5 in breadth. It contains one town, Stoege, and ſeveral villages.

MONACO, a ſmall city of Italy, capital of a territory of the ſame name, 4 to 5 Italian miles in circuit, It is ſeated on a craggy rock, which ſtretches out into the ſea, and has, or lately had, its own prince, under the protection of France. It has fortifications, with a good harbour, and is 8 miles NE. of Nice. Lat. 43. 48. N. lon. 7. 36. E.

MONAGHAN, a county of Ireland, in the province of Ulſter, 30 miles in length and from 10 to 20 in breadth; bounded on the W. by Fermanagh; on the N. by Tyrone; on the E. by Aramagh; and on the SE. and S. by Louth and Cavan. It contains 19 pariſhes, about 21,528 houſes, and 118,000 inhabitants. The ſoil is, in general, deep and fertile; wet and dump in ſome places, and hilly in others. The linen manufacture flouriſhes in the N. and W. parts, and is averaged at 104,000. yearly.

*MONAGHAN, the capital of the county of Monaghan, was fortified with a caſtle and fort againſt the Iriſh, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. It is 62 miles NNW. of Dublin.

Monallen, in Down, Ulſter. At Shanmore, near this place, on the new canal being cut, ſome years ago, a multitude of fallen trees of oak, aſh, elder, &c. was diſcovered, lying for near a mile in length, under a covering of earth, in ſome places 6, in others 8 feet deep, many of them of large bulk, tumbled down, one over another, ſome lying in ſtraight lines, and others in an oblique or tranſverſe poſition.

Monamultina, in Wexford, Leinſter.

MONASTEER, a town of Tunis, built by the Arabs, on a peninſula which advances into the ſea, 15 miles SE. of Tunis.

Monaſterboyce, in Louth, Leinſter,

*MONASTERVAN, a town of Kildare in Leinſter. It is ſeated on the river Barrow, where a branch of the Grand Canal is united with that river, hereby opening a paſſage between that metropolis and the province of Munſter. From its being a ſtation or ſtage of the packets as well as of the lumber boats, it has of late been much improved and enlarged. It is 6 miles W. of Kildare, 19 N. of Carlow, and 32 SW. of Dublin.

MONCALLIER, a town of Piedmont, ſituated on an eminence near the Po, 5 miles W. of Turin.

MONCALVO, a ſmall town, in Montferrat, ſeated on a mountain, 7 miles SSW. of Caſal.

MONÇAON, or MONZON, a ſmall, but fortified town of Entre Douro e Minho, ſituated on the Minho, 24 miles N. of Braga.

MONÇARAS, a town of Alentejo, ſeated on the Guadiana, 25 miles E. of Elvora.

Moncaſter, Cumberl. near Ravenglaſs.

MONÇON, a town of Arragon, ſituated on the Cinca, 7 miles S. of Balbaſtro.

MONCONTOUR, a town in the dept. of the N. Coaſt; and a town in the dept. of Vienne.

MONDEGO, a river of Portugal, which has its ſource near Guarda, in Beira, croſſes that province, and paſſing by Coimbra, falls into the Atlantic near Cape Mondego.

Monderfield, Heref. S. of Bromyard.

MONDIDIER, a town in the depart. of the Somme, ſeated on a mountain, 18 miles SE. of Amiens.

MONDONEDA, a town of Galicia, in Spain, 62 miles NE. of Compoſtella.

MONDOUBLEAU, a town in the dept. of Loir and Cher, 13 miles NNW. of Vendome, and 30 NNW. of Blois.

MONDOVI, a town and ſmall province in Piedmont. Beſides the cathedral, it has 5 pariſh churches, a univerſity, 12 convents, and about 10,000 inhabitants. The date of the foundation of the city is marked on a ſtone in the cathedral, 1232. It is ſeated on a mountain near the river Elero, 30 miles S. of Turin.

Monea, in Fermanagh, Ulſter. Monemoynter, in Waterford, Munſter.

Monethisloyen, Monm. NW. of Caerleon. Monewdon, Suſſex, SW. of Framlingham. Moneybridge, Linc. in Holland.

Moneygall, in King's county, Leinſter. Moneybore, in Wexford, Leinſter.

*MONEYMORE, a town of Derry, in Ulſter, 83 miles from Dublin.

Monford, 3 miles from Shrewſbury.

MONFORTE, a town of Tralos Montes; a town of Beira; and a town of Alentejo; all in Portugal: a town of Galicia; and a town of Valencia; both in Spain: and a town of Demona, in Sicily.

MONGALLO, a town and capital of a kingdom, N. of Monomotapa. It is ſituated on a river of the ſame name, which runs into the Indian Ocean, in lat. 10. 5. S.

Mongans, St. NW. of Monmouth.

Mongham, Great and Little, Kent, 3 miles and a half S. and SE. of Sandwich.

MONGHIR, a town and fortreſs of Hindooſtan, in Bahar, ſeated on the S. bank of the Ganges, 70 miles E. of Patna.

MONGULS, a people who inhabit a country to the N. of China. They aſſume to be of the ſame original as thoſe who accompanied Tamerlane in the conqueſts of India, Perſia, and other countries, and called, in moſt hiſtories, Moguls. The country is very little known, except that part of it which the caravans paſs through in travelling from Ruſſia to China. The Monguls dwell in tents, or little moveable houſes, and live entirely on the produce of their cattle, which are horſes, camels, cows, and ſheep. They exchange their commodities for rice, ſugar, tea, tobacco, cotton, cloth, and ſeveral ſorts of household utenſils; not having the uſe of money. The religion of the Mongols of the W. is that of the Dalay Lama, which is full of ceremonies, not unlike Popery.

Monhall, Eſſex, NE. of Bumſted.

MONHEIM, a town of Neuberg, Bavaria; and a town of Berg, Weſtphalia.

MONIKEDAM, a ſea-port of N. Holland, on the SW. coaſt of the Zuyder Zee, 9 miles NE. of Amſterdam.

Moningſby, Linc. near Bullingbrook. Monington, Heref. near Stanton. Manington, Heref. near Morehampton.

Monivea, in Galway, Connaught.

Monk-Breton, Yorkſh. near Barnesley. Monkey Iſland, Berks, in the Thames, between Maidenhead and Windſor. Monkland, Heref. NE. of Pembridge. Monkland, Old and New, two towns of Lanerkſhire, 8 or 10 miles E. of Glaſgow; a canal paſſes from here to the Clyde. Monkleigh, Devonſ. S. of Frithelſtoke. Monkleſden, Durh. on the ocean, NW. of Hartlepool. Monks Ely, Suff. near Bilderſton. Monks Park, Warw. 2 miles from Shuſtoke. Monkton, Kent, in Thanet Iſle, 4 miles and a half NW. of Sandwich. Monk Seton, Northumb. on the ocean, NW. of Tinmouth. Monk Silver, Somerſ. W. of Stokegomer. Monk Soham, Suff. NW. of Framlingham. Monkſton, Hants. SW. of Andover.

Monkſtown, in Dublin, Leinſter, 5 miles from the metropolis. Monkſtown, in Cork, Munſter, near Cove.

Monkton, Devonſhire, N. of Honiton. Monkton, Dorſetſhire, SW. of Cranborn. Monkton, or Winterborn Monkton, Dorſ. from that river running through it. It is one mile from Winterborn and Farringdon. Monkton, Kent. NE. of Lenham. Monkton, Somerſet. NE. of Taunton. Monkton, Wilts, E. of Calne. Monkton-Biſhops, Yorkſ. SE. of Boroughbridge. Monkton-Farley, Wilts. Monkton More, Yorkſh. W. Riding, S. of the Nyd. Monkton-Nun, Yorkſhire, N. of the Nyd, and SE. of Boroughbridge. Monkton-Weſt, Somerſetſhire, between Bridgewater and Taunton. Monkwood, Dorſetſh. NW. of Armſwell.

*MONMOUTH, the county town of Monmouthſhire, pleaſantly ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Wye, Munnow, and Frothy, which almoſt ſurround it. It is a large handſome town, and carries on a conſiderable trade with Briſtol by the Wye. In its once ſtately caſtle, the remains of which ſhow it to have been very ſtrong, Henry V. from hence called Henry of Monmouth, the conqueror of France, was born. It is 21 miles W. by S. of Glouceſter, and 128 W. by N. of London. A plentiful market for corn and proviſions on Saturday. Fairs on Whitſun Tueſday, September 4th, and November 22d.

MONMOUTHSHIRE,

MONMOUTH, a town of New Jerſey.

MONMOUTHSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Herefordſh. and Brecknockſhire, on the E. by Glouceſterſhire, on the SE. by the mouth of the Severn, and on the W. by the counties of Brecknock and Glamorgan. Its extent from N. to S. is about 28 miles, and from E. to W. 20. It is divided into 6 hundreds, and contains 7 market towns, 27 pariſhes, about 5,660 houſes, and 18,360 inhabitants. The air is temperate and healthy, and the ſoil fruitful, though mountainous and woody. The hills feed ſheep, goats, and horned cattle; and the valleys produce plenty of graſs and corn. Beſide the Wye, the Mynnow, and the Rhyney, or Rumney, this county has almoſt peculiar to itſelf the river Uſk, which divides it into two unequal portions, the eaſtern, and largeſt part of which is a tract, fertile, on the whole, in corn and paſture, and well wooded. It abounds with limeſtone which is burnt on the ſpot, for the general manure of the country. The ſmaller weſtern portion is mountainous, and, in great part, unfavourable for cultivation; whence it is devoted to the feeding of ſheep. It has ſeveral long, narrow valleys, watered by ſtreams that fall into the Briſtol Channel. All the rivers above mentioned, particularly the Wye and Uſk, abound with fiſh, eſpecially ſalmon and trout. Monmouthſhire was formerly reckoned one of the counties of Wales; and, from the names of its towns and villages, its mountainous, rugged ſurface, as well as its ſituation beyond the Wye, which ſeems to form a natural boundary between England and Wales in this part; it certainly partakes moſt of the character of the latter country, though, ſince the reign of Charles II. when it was added to the Oxford circuit, it has been conſidered as an Engliſh county. The people uſe the Welſh language, but the Engliſh tongue is coming into uſe. The manufacture of this county is flannels.

MONOEMUGI, or NIMAAMA, a kingdom of Africa, lying near the equator, ſaid to be bounded by Abyſſinia on the N.; Mongallo, Mozambique, and other ſtates of Zanguebar on the E.; Monomotapa on the S.; and Congo and Angola on the W.; but the real limits are unknown. The ſovereign, however, is rich and powerful, having ſubdued moſt of the petty kings around. His ſubjects carry on a commerce with Abyſſinia and the eaſtern coaſts in gold, and vaſt quantities of ivory teeth, as elephants are very numerous here, which they exchange for European and Indian commodities. This is all we can find concerning this unknown empire.

MONOMOTAPA, a country of Africa, extending from the Indian Sea to a conſiderable diſtance from it, between lat. 15. 0. and 23. 0. S. and between lon. 24. and 35. E. The climate is temperate, the air is clear and healthy, and the ſoil fertile, well watered, and abounding with paſture grounds. Sugar-canes grow here without cultivation. There are a great many oſtriches, and vaſt herds of elephants; their foreſts ſwarm with wild beaſts and game, and on their paſture-grounds are bred vaſt multitudes of cattle. Their rivers abound with gold as well as fiſh, and they have mines of ſilver. They exchange their gold and ſilver with the Portugueſe for cotton-cloth, and other merchandiſe, and trinkets brought from India and Europe. The houſes in Benematapa, the metropolis, called by ſome Medrogan, are white-waſhed within and without, and adorned with beautiful cloths of cotton, finely wrought and dyed. The palace is a large ſpacious fabric of wood, well flanked with towers, and with four avenues or ſtately gates, continually kept by a numerous guard. The natives are all black, with woolly hair, notwithſtanding their diſtance from the equator. They believe in one God that created the world, and admit of polygamy. The metropolis is about 20 miles W. of Sofala.

MONOPOLI, a town of Bari, Naples, ſituated on the Adriatic.

MONS, called by the Flemings BERGHEN in HANEGOW, a city of the late Auſtrian Hainault, having manufactures of ſays, grograms, &c. and a good trade. It was taken by the Duke of Luxembourg in 1691, and by the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, Oct. 20, 1709. It ſtands on a hill, in a marſhy ſoil, at the confluence of the rivers Haine and Trouide, 17 miles SE. of Tournay.

MONSANTO, or MONTE SANTE. See Athos.

Monſcomb, Suſſex. N. of Brighthelmſtone. Monſil Lacy, Herefordſh. NW. of Kencheſter.

MONSTIER. See MOUTIER.

MONTABAUR, a ſmall town of Treves.

MONTAGNAC, a town in the reſpective departments of Herault, Dordogne; and two in the department of Lot and Garonne.

MONTAGUE ISLANDS, one of the New Hebrides,

Hebrides, in the S. Pacific Ocean; alſo an iſland in the N. Pacific Ocean, ſituated at the entrance of Prince William Sound, near the W. coaſt of N. America. It is about 50 miles long and 10 broad. Lat. about 60. N. lon. 147. to 148. W.

MONTAIGU, a town of La Vendee; a town of Puy de Dome; and a town of the Lot and Garonne; alſo Montaigu, or Scherpenheuel, a town of the late Auſtrian Brabant.

MONT-ALBAN, a fortreſs of Nice, ſituated on the coaſt of the Mediterranean, between Nice and Villa Franca.

MONTALTO, a town of Ancona.

Montanagee, in Kerry, Munſter.

MONTARGIS, a conſiderable town in the dept. of Loiret. The muſtard and cutlery of this place are excellent; and from the river Loing is a navigable canal hence to the Seine. It is ſeated near a fine foreſt, 15 miles S. of Nemours, and 62 S. of Paris.

MONTAUBAN, a commercial town in the department of Lot. The inhabitants amount to 40,000; and have manufactures of ſilk ſtockings and ſtuffs, ſerges, ſhalloons, &c. It is ſeated on an eminence, on the river Tarn, 20 miles N. of Toulouſe. Alſo a town in the dept. of Ille and Vilaine; and a town in the dept. of the Drom.

MONTBAZON, a town in the dept. of Indre and Loire, ſeated at the foot of a hill, 135 miles SW. of Paris; and a town in the dept. of Herault, 10 miles SW. of Montpellier.

MONTBELLIARD, a town and principality of Suabia, trading in linen, leather, ſtockings, and cutlery; it is inſulated in France, (to which one part of it belongs), by the departments of Upper Saone, Upper Rhine, and Doubs. It is pleaſantly ſeated at the foot of a rock, with a fertile ſoil and in a wholeſome air, near the rivers Alaine and Doubs, 33 miles SW. of Baſle.

MONTBLANC. See BLANC MONT.

MONTBRISON, a conſiderable town in the dept. of Rhone and Loire, celebrated for its medicinal waters. It is ſeated on the river Vezize, 40 miles W. of Vienne, and 250 S. by E. Paris.

MONT-CASSINO, a town and celebrated abbey of Livora, in Naples.

MONT-DAUPHIN, a town in the department of Upper Alps, 8 miles N. of Embrun, almoſt ſurrounded by the river Durance, 8 miles N of Embrun.

MONTE ALTO, a town of Ancona.

MONTECECCE, a town of Moliſo, Naples.

MONTECCHIO, a town of Modena.

MONTE CORVINO, a town of Principato Citra.

MONTE CHRISTO, a town of Guayaquil, in Quito, S. America.

MONTE-FALCO, a town of Spoleto.

MONTE-FALCONE, a town of Moliſo, Naples; and a cape on the W. coaſt of Sardinia; in lat. 40. 45. N.; a cape on the S. coaſt of the iſland of Yirca, and a cape on the coaſt of Algiers, in lat. 35. 45. N.

MONTE-FIASCONE, a ſmall, but populous town in the Patrimonio, ſituated near the Lake Bolſena, in a country abounding with excellent wine, 11 miles NNW. of Viterbo.

MONTE LEONE, a town of Principato Ultra, and a town of Calabria Ultra.

MONTELIMART, a town in the dept. of Drome, with ſome manufactures of wool, ſilk, and leather. It is ſeated in a fertile plain, on the river Robiou, 25 miles S. of Valence, and 325 S. by E. of Paris.

MONTE-MARANO, a town of Principato Ultra, ſeated on the river Calore.

MONTE-MOR-O-NOVO, a conſiderable town of Alentejo, ſituated on the Canna 15 miles WNW. of Evora.

MONTE-MOR-O-VELHO, a town of Beira, on the Mondego, ſeated in a fertil country, 10 miles SW. of Coimbra, an 90 N. of Liſbon.

MONTE-PELOSO, a town of Baſilicata Naples.

MONTE-PULCIANO, a town of Tuſcany, ſeated on a high mountain, nea the river Chiana, in a country note for excellent wine, 25 miles SE. o Sienna.

MONTEREAU, a town in the dept. o Seine and Marne, ſituated at the conflux of the rivers Seine and Yonne, 12 mile NE. of Nemours.

MONTESA, a town of Valencia.

MONTESQUIEU, a town in the dept of Upper Garonne, 15 miles SSE. o Toulouſe.

MONTE-VERDE, a town of Principat Ultra.

MONTFERRAT, a duchy of Italy bounded on the E. by the Milaneſe, an part of the territory of Genoa; on th N. by the ci-devant Savoy; on the W by Piedmont; and on the S. by the ter ritory of Genoa. It contains 200 town and caſtles, and is very fertile, and wel cultivated, abounding in corn, wine, oil and ſilk, and is ſubject to the king o Sardinia. Caſal is the capital.

MONTFORT, a town in the dept. o Seine and Oiſe, 25 miles W. of Paris.

MONTFORT, a town in the depart. of Seine and Oiſe, 25 miles W. of Paris.

MONTFORT, a town in the depart. of Ille and Vilaine, 12 miles NNW. of Rennes: alſo a town in the reſpective departments of Eure, Landes, Gers, and Sarte.

MONTFORT, a handſome town of Utrecht, ſeated on the river Yſſel, 23 miles S. of Amſterdam.

MONTFORT, a town of Auſtria; and a town and country of Suabia.

MONTFORT-DE-LEMOS, an ancient town of Galicia, ſeated in a fertile country.

MONTGATZ, a town and lordſhip of Hungary, with an almoſt impregnable caſtle, erected on a high and ſteep hill, 52 miles ESE. of Caſchau.

MONTGOMERY, the county town of Montgomeryſhire, a ſmall neat town, with a rich ſoil, but little trade. The reliques of its caſtle, which ſtand on a projecting ridge, of a great height and ſteepneſs, and, towards the end, are quite precipitous, impend in a pictureſque manner over the town, but are now very ſmall. It is pleaſantly ſeated on a rocky hill, near the Severn, 26 miles SW. by W. of Hereford, and 161 NW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

MONTGOMERY, a county in the reſpective ſtates of New-York, Maryland, and Virginia.

MONTGOMERYSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, bounded on the N. by Merionethſhire, and Denbighſhire, on the NE. and E. by Shropſhire, on the S. by Radnorſhire, on the SW. by Cardiganſhire, and on the W. by part of Merionethſhire. It extends 33 miles from N. to S. and about 24 from E. to W. and is divided into 7 hundreds, which contain 6 market towns, 47 pariſhes, about 5,660 houſes, and 33,960 inhabitants. The air is pleaſant and ſalubrious; and the country, in general, mountainous, but fertile, (the S. SE. and NE. parts are extremely ſo, being much more level) and agreeably interſperſed with valleys, hills, meadows, and corn-fields. The hilly tracts are almoſt entirely ſheep-walks; and the flocks, like thoſe of Spain, are driven from diſtant parts to feed on them during the ſummer. This county alſo affords mineral treaſures, particularly lead; and it abounds with ſlate and lime; but there is no coal. Its principal rivers are the Severn, Vyrnew, and Tannat, which are remarkable for their great variety of fiſh, and for ſalmon in particular.

Montgrace-Abbey, Yorkſ. NE. of Northallerton. Montisford, Hants, near the Somborns.

MONTJOY, a town in the dept. of Lot and Garonne, 14 miles E. of Agen; alſo another town in the ſame depart. 9 miles SSW. of Agen.

MONTIVILLIERS, a town in the dept. of Lower Seine, 6 miles N. of Havre.

MONT-LOUIS, a fortified town in the department of the Eaſtern Pyrenees; and a town in the department of Indre and Loire.

MONT LUEL, a town in the dept. of Ain, ſeated on the river Seraine, 12 miles NE. of Lyons.

MONT-LUÇON, a town in the dept. of Allier, ſeated on the river Cher, 35 miles SW. of Moulins, and 150 S. of Paris.

MONTMARAULT, a town in the department of Allier, 24 miles SW. of Moulins.

MONTMARTIN PRES LA MER, a town in the dept. of the Channel; and MONTMARTIN EN GRANGE, another town in the ſame department.

MONTMEDI, a ſmall town in the department of Meuſe, ſeated on the river Cher, which divides it into the Upper and Lower Town. It is 22 miles SE. of Sedan, and 135 NNE. of Paris.

MONTMELIAN, a town in the dept. of Mont Blanc, with a large and lofty caſtle, ſeated on the rocky ſummit of a mountain, inacceſſible, except towards the town. It is ſituated in a very agreeable country near the river Iſere, 8 miles SSE. of Chamberry.

MONTMORENCI, a townin the dept. of Seine and Oiſe, ſeated upon a hill 8 miles N. of Paris: and a town in the depart. of Aube, 16 miles N. of Bar.

MONT-MORILLON, a ſmall town in the department of Vienne, ſeated on the Gartemp.

MONTPELLIER, a large, rich, and beautiful city, in the depart. of Herault. Before the revolution, here was a univerſity, with a celebrated ſchool of medicine, founded by phyſicians, who were expelled from Spain in the year 1180. The ſcarlet gown of that witty philoſopher, Rabelais, with which doctors of phyſic are, or were, inveſted here, at taking their degrees, has long ſince ceaſed to be an original, the ſtudents having, from time to time, cut off little ſlips, ſo that the robe now, or lately uſed, is, at leaſt, the third or fourth ſubſtitute: alſo a botanic garden, the firſt eſtabliſhed in Europe, and an academy of ſciences. The town-houſe is remarkable for its halls, which are embelliſhed with fine paintings. It has many fine houſes, and ſeveral ſtately edifices, but the ſtreets are very narrow. The number of inhabitants is computed at 50,000, who trade in verdigreaſe, which is the principal manufacture, wool, wine, aqua-vitæ, Hungary-water, cinnamon-water, capillaire, eſſence of bergamot, lemons, &c. alſo in woollen carpets, dimities, fuſtians, and ſilk ſtockings. Theſe commodities are ſent, by the canal, to Cette, which is the ſea-port of Montpellier. The air is extremely healthy, and a great number of perſons flock hither, from all parts, to recover their health. Montpellier is pleaſantly ſeated upon a hill, by the river Lez, 5 miles from the Mediterranean, 27 SW. of Niſmes, and 212 S. by E. of Paris.

MONTPENSIER, a town in the dept. of Puy de Dome, ſeated on a hill, 20 miles NE. of Clermont, and 210 SE. of Paris.

MONT-REAL, a town of Arragon; and a town of Navarre, both in Spain: and a town of Sicily, 3 miles WSW. of Palermo.

MONTREAL, an iſle of N. America, in the river St. Lawrence, about 30 miles in length, and 12 in breadth. The ſoil is very fertile, and the air wholeſome. It was ſurrendered by the French, in 1760, to the Engliſh, by a capitulation, by which all Canada was likewiſe ceded. It has a town of the ſame name, with wide, open ſtreets, built on the ſide of the river, whence there is a gradual, eaſy aſcent to what is called the Upper Town. It is pretty ſtrongly fortified by a citadel, wall, baſtions, &c. and has ſuffered much by fires, ſince it has been in the poſſeſſion of the Engliſh. The only ſtaple commodity is furs, and the ſkins of foxes, racoons, deer, and other peltry, produced by their trade with the Indians, together with corn and lumber to the W. Indies. Montreal is now the capital of the province of Upper Canada, and is 120 miles SW. of Quebec, and 110 N. of Albany. Lat. 45. 38. N. lon. 73. W.

MONT-REAL, or MOUNT-ROYAL, a fortreſs of Treves, ſituated on the Moſelle.

MONTREAL, the name of a town in the reſpective departments of the Yonne, Gers, Aude, and Ain.

MONTREUIL, a town in the dept. of the Straits of Calais, ſeated on a hill near the river Canche, 10 miles NW. of Heſdin, and 117 N. of Paris. Alſo, ſeveral other towns of France.

MONTREUIL BELLAY, a town in the dept. of Maine and Loire, ſeated on the river Touet, 9 miles S. of Saumer, and 155 from Paris.

MONT-RICHARD, a ſmall town in the dept. of Loir and Cher, ſeated near the Cher, 12 miles SSE. of Amboiſe, and 112 SW. of Paris.

*MONTROSE, a town of Angusſhire containing, in 1790, about 6,194 inhabitants. At high water it is almoſt ſurrounded by the ſea. The harbour is a fine ſemicircular baſon, with a handſome ſtone pier; and a great number of trading veſſels belong to this port. The buildings are neat, and many of them in the modern taſte. The moſt remarkable are the town-houſe, the preſbyterian church and an elegant epiſcopal chapel. A great quantity of malt is made here; and there are manufactures of ſail-cloth, linen, coloured and white thread, brown ſheeting, Oſnaburgs, and cotton ſtockings, as alſo a tannery and rope-works. The ſalmon fiſheries on the N. and S. Eſk form a valuable branch of commerce. Montroſe is ſeated on a gentle eminence, in a peninſula, formed by the eſtuary of S. Eſk (over which a new bridge has been lately erected) and the German Ocean, 48 miles NE. of Edinburgh.

MONTSERRAT, a ſingular mountain in Catalonia, on which is a celebrated monaſtery and chapel, with hermitages, inhabited by monks of ſeveral nations, who entertain all that come out of devotion or curioſity, for three days, gratis. This mountain is ſaid to be 10 miles in circumference, and 5 high. From the top of it is a view of the country to the diſtance of 150 miles. It is 20 miles NW. of Barcelona.

MONTSERRAT, a well-watered fruitful iſland in the Weſt Indies, diſcovered in 1493, by Colmbus, and ſo named by him from its reſemblance to the above mentioned mountain in Spain. It is about 9 miles in length, and as much in breadth, and is divided into two pariſhes. The mountains are covered with cedar, cypreſs, the iron-tree, with other woods, and ſome odoriferous ſhrubs. As to ſoil, animals, and commerce, Montſerrat is much the ſame as the other Caribbee Iſlands. It is poſſeſſed by the Engliſh, and is 30 miles SW. of Antigua. Lat. 16. 54. N. lon. 61. 34. W.

MONT ST. MICHAEL, a town in the dept. of the Channel, built on a rock, in the midſt of a ſandy plain, which is overflowed by the ſea twice in 24 hours. It is 7 miles SW. of Avranches, and 18 W. of Paris.

Montſtone, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Monwood, Warw. W. of Anſtey. Mony Aſh, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak.

MONZA, a town of Milan, ſituated on the river Lambro, 8 miles NNE. of Milan. In its treaſury is the iron crown, with which the ancient Italian kings, and afterwards the emperors of Germany, were crowned as kings of Lombardy. It is of gold, enriched with jewels, about 3 fingers in height, and exceedingly ſmall, with an iron ring on the outſide. It has neither points nor rings.

Moon, or Moun, in Kildare, Leinſter, within 3 miles of Caſtledermot.

MOOR, a county of N. Carolina.

MOOR-BAY, on the coaſt of Clare, in Connaught. Lat. 52. 38. N.

Moor, Cheſhire, S. of Warrington. Moor-Hall, Lancaſ. near Bolton. Moor-Hall, Hertf. SW. of Buntingford. Moor-Kirk, Yorkſ. Moor-End, Glouc. a hamlet to Hartpury. Moor-End, Glouc. in Slimbridge pariſh. Moor-Lynch, Somerſetſ. Moor-Park, Surry, near Farnham. Moor-Winſtow, Cornwall, N. of Stratton.

MOORSHEDABAD, a large, ill-built, decaying city of Bengal, ſituated near the weſtern arm of the Ganges, 100 miles N. of Calcutta. It was formerly the capital of Bengal, before the eſtabliſhment of the Engliſh power.

MORA, a town of New-Caſtile; and a town of Alentejo.

Mora, in Waterford, Munſter,

Moran, Cornwall, SW. of Tregony. Moran's Court, Kent, near Sevenoaks.

MORANT, or EAST POINT, the moſt eaſterly promontory of Jamaica. Lat. 17. 56. N. lon. 75. 56. W.

MORAT, a conſiderable town and bailiwick of Swiſſerland, in the Validois, ſituated on the SE. ſide of the lake to which it gives name, 12 miles W. of Bern.

MORAT, a lake of Swiſſerland, in the bailiwick of the ſamename, 6 miles long and 2 broad, emptying itſelf into the Lake of Neufchatel by means of the river Broye.

MORAVIA, THE MARQUISATE OF, a province of Germany, ſurrounded by Sileſia, Bohemia, and Auſtria, and divided into ſix circles. It is partly mountainous and woody, and partly champaign, with many moraſſes, bogs, and lakes; and has conſtantly remained annexed to the crown of Bohemia. It takes its name from the river Morava, or Moraw, which runs through it; is very fertile and populous; and hence the Unitas Fratrum, or Brethren, called Moravians, take their name, their doctrines having being early promulgated here. Olmutz is the capital.

MORAW, or MORAVA, a river of Germany, which riſes on the confines of Bohemia and Sileſia; croſſes all Moravia, where it waters Olmutz and Hradiſch, and falls into the Danube after ſeparating the countries of Lower Hungary and Upper Auſtria.

MORAVE, a river which riſes in Bulgaria, runs N. through Servia by Niſſa, and falls into the Danube 8 miles E. of Semendria.

MORBACH, or MURBACH, a town in the dept. of Lower Rhine, 42 miles S. of Straſburg.

Morbath, Dorſetſhire, in Whitchurch pariſh. Morborn, Huntſ. NW. of Stilton.

MORBEGNO, a handſome commercial town in the Valteline, in the country of the Griſons, ſeated on the S. ſide of the Adda. It is the reſidence of a bailiff, who has the title of Podeſta, and is 12 miles SE. of Chiavenna.

MORBIHAN, a department of France, bounded on the N. by the dept. of the North Coaſt, and on the W. by the dept. of Finiſterre. It takes its name from a ſmall bay between that town and the Iſland of Belleiſle. Its entrance is narrow; but it expands within, and contains about 30 little iſlands. Vannes is the capital.

Morchard, Biſhop's, Devonſhire, SE. of Chimleigh. Morchard Cruwys, Devonſ. 4 miles SW. of Tiverton. Morchel, Eſſex, near Harlow. Morcote, or Boyfield, Glouceſ. a hamlet in Minterſworth pariſh. Morcomb Lake, Dorſetſhire, W. of Chidiock. Morden, Dorſetſhire, N. of Wareham. Morden, Surry, between Chipſted and Kent. Morden, Upper, Surry, S. of Wimbledon. Morden, Gelden and Steeple, Cambridgeſ. near Royſton. Mordford, SE. of Hereford. Mordon, Durham, SE. of Biſhop-Aukland. More, near Hereford. More, Devonſ. in High Week pariſh. More, Herts, a manor in Rickmanſworth. More, Worceſ. on the banks of the Teme. More, Northumb. in Bothal barony. More, Shropſhire, N. of Biſhop's Caſtle. More, Suſſex, NE. of Petworth.

MOREA, formerly called PELOPONNESUS, a peninſula in the ſouthern part of Greece, to which it is joined by the Iſthmus of Corinth, lying between the Gulfs of Lepanto and Engia. It is 180 miles in length, and 130 in breadth. The air is temperate, and the ſoil fertile, excepting the middle, where there are many mountains. Its preſent name is ſaid to be derived from Morus, a mulberry-tree, from the great number of mulberry-trees it produces. It is watered by ſeveral rivers, of which the Alpheus, the Vaſili-Potamo, and the Stromio, are the chief. It is divided into four diſtricts. The ſangiack of the Morea reſides at Modon.

ver-

Morebarn, Leiceſ. near Orton. Morebath, or Murbach, Devonſ. N. of Bampton. Moreby, Linc. near Bullingbrook. Morecambe Bay, on the coaſt of Lancaſhire, in the Iriſh Channel, at the mouth of the Dudden and Leven. More-Church, Dorſetſhire, W. of Horton. Morecot, Hants, SW. of Rumſey. Morecot, Oxfordſ. between Biceſter and Whatley. Morecot, Rutl. S. of the Luffenhams. Morecot-Hall, Warw. in Berkeſwell pariſh, near Mereden. Moreball, Eſſex, near Harlow. More-Hall, Suſſex, S. of Aſhburnham. More-Hall, Middl. NW. of Uxbridge. More-Hall, Warwickſ. N. of Bitford. More-Hall, Warwickſ. NE. of Sutton. Morehampton, Heref. near the Golden Vale. Morehatch, Middl. a hamlet of Enfield. Morehayes, Devonſhire, on the Clume, oppoſite to Columpton. Morehouſe, NE. of Durham. Morehouſe, Nott. a hamlet of Lexington. Morehouſe, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, near Frodlingham. Morehouſes, Derbyſ. NW. of Cheſterfield. More-Lees, Lancaſhire, near Leigh.

MORELLA, a town of Valencia, on the mountainous frontiers of Arragon.

Moremead, Herts, near Hitchin. Morend, Glouceſ. a hamlet in Mangotsfield pariſh. More North, W. of Oxford. Moreſby, Cumb. 2 miles NE. of Whitehaven. Mores-Court, Dorſetſ. near Sturminſter-Marſhal. Moreſham, Yorkſ. N. Riding, in Skelton pariſh. Moreſbey, NE. of Durham. Moreſted, Hants, SE. of Wincheſter.

MORET, an ancient town in the dept. of the Seine and Marne, ſeated on a canal, near the Seine, 35 miles SE. of Paris.

Moretey, Staff. near Wolverhampton.

MORETON-HAMPSTEAD, a pretty large town of Devonſhire, with a conſiderable woollen manufacture. It is ſeated on a hill, near Dartmoor, 14 miles SW. of Exeter, and 185 W. by S. of London. A noted market for yarn on Saturday.

MORETON, a town in Glouceſterſhire, ſeated on the Foſſeway, 89 miles ESE. of Worceſter, and 83 WNW. of London. Market diſuſed.

Moreton, Cheſhire, near Hyle-Lake. Moreton, Staff. E. of Aquilate-Meer, and W. of Stafford. Moreton, Staff. N. of Needwood-Foreſt. Moreton, Worceſterſ. SW. of Alceſter. Moreton-Alcamlow, Cheſhire, by Congleton. Moreton-Corbet, Shropſ. SE. of Wem. Moreton Jefferys, Heref. between Bromyard and Hereford. Moreton-Say, Shropſhire, near Drayton. Moretown, Northumberland, near Tweedmouth. Morewent-End, Glouceſterſhire, a hamlet to Hartpury pariſh.

MORGAN, a town of Virginia, ſituated on the Monongbela river.

MORGAN'S TOWN, a town in Penſylvania.

MORGES, a town of Swiſſerland, in the Vaudois, and capital of a bailiwick. It is a place of ſome trade, with a port and quay, and is ſituated on the N. ſide of the Lake of Geneva, 5 miles W. of Lauſanne.

MORGES, a town in the dept. of Iſere.

MORGO. See AMORGO.

MORHANGE, a town in the dept. of Moſelle, 21 miles ESE. of Metz, and 200 E. of Paris.

MORLACHIA, a mountainous country chiefly in the N. part of Dalmatia, the inhabitants of which are called Morlacks or Morlacchi; ſubject to the Emperor. They inhabit the pleaſant valleys of Kotter, along the rivers Kerka, Cettina, Narenta, and among the inland mountains of Dalmatia. They are ſaid, by ſome to be of Walachian extraction; but this is denied by Abbé Fortis, who thinks their origin involved in the darkneſs of barbarous ages. Among a variety of curious particulars reſpecting their manners and cuſtoms, he preſents ſome very pleaſing traits of character. "Friendſhip," he ſays, "is laſting among the Morlacchi. They have even made it a kind of religious point, and tie the ſacred bond at the foot of the altar. The Sclavonian ritual contains a particular benediction, for the ſolemn union of two male or two female friends, in the preſence of the congregation. He was preſent at the union of two young women, who were made Poſeſtre, in the church of Peruſſich. The ſatisfaction," he continues, "that ſparkled in their eyes, when the ceremony was performed, gave a convincing proof, that delicacy of ſentiment can lodge in minds not formed, or rather not corrupted, by ſociety, which we call civilized. The male friends, thus united, are called Pobratimi, and the females Poſeſtrime, which mean half-brothers and half-ſiſters. Friendſhips between thoſe of different ſexes are not bound with ſo much ſolemnity, though perhaps in more ancient and innocent ages it was alſo the cuſtom. From theſe conſecrated friendſhips among the Morlacchi, and other nations of the ſame origin, it ſhould ſeem, that the ſworn brothers aroſe, a denomination frequent enough among the common people in many parts of Europe. If diſcord has per pens to ariſe between two friends, among the Morlacchi, it is talked of, over all the country, as a ſcandalous novelty; and there have been ſome examples of it of late years, to the great affliction of the old Morlacchi, who attribute the depravity of their countrymen, to their intercourſe with the Italians. Wine, and ſtrong liquors, of which the nation is beginning to make daily abuſe, after our example, will, of courſe, produce the ſame bad effects as among us."

MORLAIX, a conſiderable ſea-port in the dept. of Finiſterre, with a tide-harbour. The Notre-Dame church is a ſingular ſtructure, and the hoſpital is very handſome; the inhabitants carry on a conſiderable trade in linen, hemp, and tobacco. It is ſeated on a river of the ſame name, 30 miles NE. of Breſt.

Morland, Weſtmorl. W. of Appleby. Morlas, a river in Carmarthenſ. Morley, 3 miles NE. of Derby. Morley, Devonſ. between Totneſs and Kingſbridge. Morley. St. Botolph's and St. Peter's, Norf. SW. of Windham. Morley, Yorkſhire, SW. of Leeds. Morley-Hall, called alſo Hallingbury, Eſſex, near Birchinghanger. Morley-Nether, Northumberland, near Chipchaſe. Morlinch, Someſetſhire, near Bridgewater. Morningthorp, Norfolk, S. of Saxlingham.

MOROCCO, an empire of Africa, comprehending a conſiderable part of the ancient Mauritania, bounded on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean, on the E. by Algiers and Biledulgerid, on the N. by the Mediterranean, and on the S. by Zahara. Its greateſt length is about 450 miles; and, where wideſt, about 390. The territories of Morocco are formed by the union of ſeveral ſmall kingdoms, anciently limited to a ſingle province, and perpetually at variance with each other, till, at laſt, they were all ſubdued, and united under one ſovereign, by the ſharifs. The S. part of the empire contains the kingdom of Suz, Tarudant, Morocco Proper, Tafiletz, and Segilmeſſa; and the N. part, thoſe of Fez, Mequinez, and Tremecen; but the latter having been conquered by the Turks of Algiers, is now a part of that regency. The air of this country is very pure, and pretty temperate, eſpecially to the N. of Mount Atlas. The ſoil, though ſandy and dry on the weſtern coaſt, is exceedingly fertile; the land containing within itſelf ſalts ſufficient to make it fruitful. The increaſe of corn is often an ſixty to one. The fruits, ſuch as vines, figs, melons, apricots, apples, pears, olives, and the prickly-pear, or Barbary fig, the palm-tree, as well as the paſtures, are excellent, but dates ripen with difficulty, and indeed the country, &c. is not properly cultivated, as two thirds of it, at leaſt, lies waſte. Acorns, which taſte like cheſnuts, ſalt and wax, abound here. The humidity of the atmoſphere is ſo corroſive, that it quickly covers with ruſt, iron, ſteel, metals, and even the keys and ſciſſars carried in the pocket. The Moors make food of the locuſts; prodigious quantities of them are brought to market, ſalted and dried like red herrings. The inhabitants are Mahometans, of a tawny complexion, robuſt, and very ſkilful in managing a horſe and wielding a lance. There are two ſorts of inhabitants; the Arabs, who dwell in moveable villages, compoſed of about 100 tents, and the Bereberies, or Brebes, who are the ancient inhabitants, and dwell in cities and towns. There are a great number of Chriſtian ſlaves, and ſome merchants, upon the coaſt, beſide a multitude of Jews, who carry on almoſt all the trade; eſpecially by land with the negroes, to whom they ſend large caravans, who travel over vaſt deſerts, almoſt deſtitute of water. They carry with them woollen manufactures, ſilk, ſalt, &c. and, in return, have ſlaves, gold, and elephants' teeth. Out of the ſlaves the emperor recruits his cavalry. They alſo ſend large caravans to Mecca every year, partly out of devotion, and partly for trade, conſiſting of ſeveral thouſand camels, horſes, and mules. Their commodities are woollen manufactures, Morocco leather, indigo, cochineal, oſtrich feathers, ſalt, and wax; in return for which they have ſilks, muſlins, calicos, coffee, and drugs. In the deſerts are lions, tigers, leopards, and ſerpents of ſeveral kinds. The fruits are dates, figs, grapes, almonds, lemons, oranges, melons, pomegranates, apples, pears, &c. They have alſo flax and hemp, but little timber. The naval force conſiſts chiefly of rovers, who now and then take large prizes, eſpecially thoſe belonging to Sallee. The emperor is abſolute, his will being a law, and he often exerciſes great cruelties. His uſual taxes are, one tenth of the goods of his Mahometan ſubjects, and ſix crowns a year of the Jews; but he often breaks through theſe rules, and ſeizes what he pleaſes. He can bring 100,000 men into the field, half of which are foot, and half horſe; but they are poorly armed, and know but little of the art of war.

MOROCCO, the capital of the kingdom of Morocco, ſeated in a beautiful plain, planted with palm-trees, formed by a chain of of mountains on the N. having Mount Atlas, from which it is diſtant about 20 miles, on the S. and E. Though one of the capitals of the empire (for there are three, Morocco, Mequinez, and Fez) it has nothing to recommend it but its great extent, and the royal palace. It is incloſed by remarkably ſtrong walls, built of tabby, the extent of which ſtill exiſts entire, and ſuppoſes a city which might contain 300 000 ſouls: they are flanked by ſquare towers, and ſurrounded by a wide and deep ditch. The moſques are more numerous than magnificent. The ſtreets are narrow, dirty and irregular, and many of the houſes uninhabited, and falling to ruin. Thoſe which are decent are built of tabby, and incloſed in gardens; but the generality of them, which are not better than ruins of houſes heaped one upon another, ſerve only to harbour thieves, who lurk among them, in order to rob paſſengers. M. Chenier doubts whether Morocco contains 30,000 inhabitants, even when the court is there. The Jews, who are pretty numerous here, have a ſeparate town, walled in, and under the charge of an alcade, appointed by the emperor. They have a market of their own; and when they enter the Mooriſh town, market, or palace, they are compelled to be bare-footed. It has two gates, which are regularly ſhut every evening at nine o'clock, after which no perſon can enter or depart, till they are opened the next morning. The palace is a very extenſive and ſolid building, with gates compoſed of Gothic arches, embelliſhed with ornaments in the Arabian taſte. Within the walls are various courts and gardens, elegantly laid out by European gardeners. Lat. 31. 12. N. lon. 6. 45. W.

MORON, a town in Seville, Andaluſia; and a town in the department of Morbihan.

MOROTOI, one of the Sandwich Iſles, about 7 miles WNW. of Mowee. Yams are its principal produce; yet it has but little wood. The coaſt, on the ſouthern and weſtern ſides of the iſland, forms ſeveral bays, which promiſe a tolerable ſhelter from the trade winds. Lat. 21. 10. N. lon. 157. 14. W.

*MORPETH, a town of Northumberland, ſeated on the river Wanſbeck, 28 miles N. of Durham, and 287 N. by W. of London. A good market on Saturday for corn, cattle, and proviſions, and a very large one on Wedneſday for live cattle. Fairs on Wedneſday, Thurſday, and Friday before Whitſunday; and the Wedneſday before July 22d.

Morrick, Northumb. near Warkworth.

Morris, Cornwall, NE. of Botreaux-Caſtle.

MORRIS, a county of New Jerſey.

MORRISON, a town of N. Carolina.

MORRIS TOWN, a town of New Jerſey.

MORTAGNE, a town in the dept. of Orne, well known for its ſerges and tanners. Alſo a town in the dept. of the North, 8 miles SE. of Tournay; a town in the dept. of Lower Charente; and a town in the dept. of Vendee.

MORTAIN, a town in the dept. of the Channel, almoſt ſurrounded by craggy rocks, ſeated on the rivulet Lances, 20 miles SSE of Avranches.

MORTARA, a town of Lumello, in Milan.

Mort-Bay, and Morthow, Devonſhire, SW. of Ilfracomb near the coaſt. Mortimer, Berks. Mortimers, Kent, near Cowling-Caſtle. Mortimers, Hants, 5 miles from Reading. Mortlake, Surry, on the Thames, 9 miles W. of London. Mortlich, a village of Banffſhire, in Scotland, 6 miles SW. of Keith. Morton, Eſſex, N. of Shelly. Morton, cum Eaſtwood Park, Glouceſ. in Thornbury pariſh. Morton, Nott. in Fiſkerton pariſh. Morton, Worceſ. SW. of Alceſter. Morton, Cheſhire, near the ferry over the Mercy into Lancaſhire. Morton, Derbyſ. N. of Alfreton. Morton, Dorſetſ. SE. of Puddleton. Morton, Durham, E. of Raby-Caſtle. Morton, Worceſ. N. of Leominſter. Morton, Linc. 1 mile N. of Gainſborough. Morton, Lincolnſ. between Fokingham and Bourn. Morton, Nott. near Retford. Morton, Shropſhire, W. of the Morda. Morton, Weſtm. NE. of Appleby. Morton, Yorkſhire, W. of Barrard-Caſtle. Morton, Yorkſhire, NE. of Northallerton. Morton, NE. of York. Morton, Yorkſ. between Bradford and Skipton. Morton-Abbot's, Worceſter. N. of Eveſham. Morton-Bagot, Warw. SW. of Ullenhale. Morton Banks, Yorkſhire, near Keighley. Morton Birts, Worceſ. near the Malvern-Hills. Morton-Underhill, Worceſterſhire, in Inkborough pariſh.

Morton-in-the-Marſh*, Glouceſ. 4 miles from Stow.

Morton Meriat, Warw. N. of Kineton. Morton, N. and S. Berks, SW. of Wallingford. Morton Pinkney, Northamptonſhire, N. of Weedon. Morton-Valence, Glouc. 4 miles from Painſwick. Morton-upon Lug, N. of Hereford. Morton upon Swale, Yorkſ. SW. of Northallerton. Moriſton, Devonſhire, near Mortbay, W. of Ilfracomb. Morva, Cornw. near Madern. Morvale, Cornw. between between the Lees and Leſkard. Morvath, Cornwall, N. of Penzance.

MORVIEDRO, ſuppoſed to be the ancient SAGUNTUM, a town and river of Valencia, 13 miles NNE. of the city of Valencia.

Morvil, Shropſhire, near Bridgenorth, Morvil-Hill, Yorkſ. N. Riding, in Lune Foreſt.

MOSAMBIQUE, a kingdom of Africa, on the coaſt of Zanguebar, ſo called from the capital of the ſame name, ſituated on an iſland, principal of 3 iſlands which form a part of the kingdom. This iſland is not more than 3 miles in length, and half as much in breadth, and is about 2 miles from the continent. It was ſeized by the Portugueſe in 1497, and they have kept poſſeſſion of it ever ſince. The town is large well-built, and rich, with handſome churches and convents, and a fort or caſtle, the ſtrongeſt and beſt contrived the Portugueſe have on this coaſt. The ſoil, on the continent, is fat and fertile, and the country breeds numerous herds of cattle, and ſheep with large tails. They alſo ſwarm with ſtags, wild boars, other wild beaſts, and elephants ſo fierce and deſtructive, that the natives dare not ſtir far from their homes without lighted firebrands in their hands to frighten them away. The country has alſo rich mines of gold. The governor is changed every three years, and the Portugueſe export gold, ſilver, copper, elephants' teeth, ebony, wax, rice, other proviſions, ſlaves and cattle, in exchange for little bells, knives, ſciſſars, razors, and other European goods. Their ſhips always call here in going to the Eaſt Indies; and the harbour is ſo commodious, that whole fleets may anchor here, and refit their veſſels, as well as provide themſelves with all neceſſaries; and they have a large hoſpital for ſick ſailors. Lat. 15. 5, S. lon. 40. 49. E.

MOSAMBIQUE, a ſtrait, or channel, in the Indian Ocean, lying between the E. coaſt of Africa and the iſland of Madagaſcar, and between lat. 11. and 24 deg. S.

MOSBACH, a handſome town in the palatinate of the Rhine, ſituated on the Neckar, and a town of the Upper Palatinate of Bavaria.

Moſbarrow, Lancaſ. SW. of Wigan.

MOSBURG, a town of Lower Bavaria, 24 miles NE. of Munich; and a town of Carinthia.

Moſcea, St. Cornwall, near St. Mawes Caſtle.

MOSCOVY. See RUSSIA.

MOSCOW, one of the moſt ancient and conſpicuous provinces of Ruſſia, formerly a duchy, but now one of the 41 governments of that vaſt empire. Its capital is of the ſame name.

MOSCOW, a large city of the Ruſſian empire, capital of the government of Moſcow, and formerly of the whole empire. It may be conſidered as a town built upon the Aſiatic model, but gradually becoming more and more European; exhibiting, in its preſent ſtate, a motley mixture of diſcordant architecture. It is diſtributed into the following diviſions. 1. Kremlin, which is the central and higheſt part of the city, ſurrounded by high walls of ſtone and brick, 2 miles in circumference. This diviſion is not deformed by wooden houſes. It contains the ancient palace of the czars, ſeveral churches, 2 convents the patriarchal palace, and the arſenal, now in ruins. 2. The Khitaigorod, or the Chineſe town, which is much larger than the Kremlin: it contains the univerſity, the printing-houſe, and many other public buildings, with all the tradeſmen's ſhops. The houſes are moſtly ſtuccoed, or white-waſhed; and it has the only ſtreet in Moſcow in which the houſes ſtand cloſe to each other, without any interval between them. 3. The Bielgorod, or White Town, which runs round the two preceding diviſions: it takes its name from a white wall, by which it was formerly ſurrounded. 4. Semlainogorod, which environs all the other three quarters; and is ſo denominated from a circular rampart of earth by which it is encompaſſed. The two laſt-mentioned diviſions exhibit a groteſque group of churches, convents, palaces, brick and wooden houſes, and mean hovels. 5. The Sloboda, or ſuburbs, which form a vaſt exterior circle round all the parts already deſcribed, and are inveſted by a low rampart and ditch. Theſe ſuburbs contain, beſides buildings of all kinds, corn-fields, much open paſture, and ſome ſmall lakes, which give riſe to the Neglina. The Moſkva, from which the city takes its name, flows through it in a winding channel; but, excepting in ſpring, is only navigable for rafts. It receives the Yauſa in the Semlainogorod, and the Neglina at the weſtern extremity of the Kremlin; but the beds of both theſe laſt mentioned rivulets are, in ſummer, little better than dry channels. Moſcow exhibits an aſtoniſhing degree of extent and variety, irregularity, and contraſt. The ſtreets, in general, general, are very long and broad. Some of them are paved; others, particularly in the ſuburbs, are formed with trunks of trees, or are boarded with planks like the floor of a room. Wretched hovels are blended with large palaces; cottages of one ſtory ſtand next to the moſt ſtately manſions; many brick ſtructures are covered with wooden tops; ſome of the wooden houſes are painted; others have iron doors and roofs. Numerous churches appear in every quarter, built in a peculiar ſtyle of architecture; ſome with domes of copper, others of tin, gilt, or painted green, and many roofed with wood. In a wood, ſome parts of this vaſt city have the appearance of a ſequeſtered deſert; others, the quarters of a populous town; ſome of a poor village; others of a great capital. Moſcow is certainly the largeſt town in Europe; its circumference, within the rampart that incloſes the ſuburbs, being 26 miles; but it is built in ſuch a ſtraggling manner, that its population correſponds, in no degree, with its extent. It has, however, been pretty well aſcertained: it contains, within the ramparts, 300,000 ſouls. It is ſtill the moſt populous city in the empire, notwithſtanding the reſidence of the court is at Peterſburgh. Here the chief nobles reſide, who do not belong to the court: they here ſupport a large number of retainers: gratify their taſte for a ruder and more expenſive magnificence in the ancient feudal ſtyle; and are not, as at Peterſburgh, eclipſed by the ſuperior ſplendor of the court. The places of public worſhip in Moſcow, including chapels, amount to above 1000; of theſe, 484 are public churches, 199 of which are of brick, ſtuccoed, or white waſhed: and the others of wood, painted red. Some of their bells are of a ſtupendous ſize: they hang in belfreys detached from the church, are fixed immoveably to the beams, and are rung by a rope tied to the clapper. It has always been eſteemed here a meritorious act of religion to preſent a church with bells; and the piety of the doner has been meaſured by their magnitude. Accordingly, Boris Godunuf, who gave a bell of 288,000 pounds to the cathedral of Moſcow, was the moſt pious ſovereign of Ruſſia, till he was ſurpaſſed by the empreſs Anne, who preſented a bell that weighs 432,000 pounds, and is the largeſt in the known world. Among the public inſtitutions in Moſcow, is the Foundling Hoſpital, endowed, in 1764, by Catharine, and ſupported by voluntary contributions; to encourage which, ſhe granted to all benefactors ſome valuable privileges, in proportion to the extent of their liberality; and, it is remarkable, that a private merchant, named Dimidof, has expended on this charity 200,000l. The gardens hereabouts yield the famous tranſparent apple, called by the Ruſſians Naliwi, with variety of other fruits. Moſcow is the centre of the inland commerce of Ruſſia, particularly connecting the trade between Europe and Siberia. The navigation to this city is formed ſolely by the Moſkva, which riſes near Ruza, and falling into the Occa, near Colomna, communicates, by that river, with the Volga. But as the Moſkva is navigable in the ſpring only, upon the melting of the ſnows, the principal merchandiſe is conveyed upon ſledges in winter. This city is 460 miles SE. of Peterſburgh, 1200 N. by E. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 55. 45. N. lon. 37. 31. E.

Moſe, a river that runs through Leiceſ. Derb. and Staff. and falls into the Trent, near Croxhall. Moſe, Eſſex, SW. of Harwich. Moſedale, Cumb. SE. of Ireby. Moſedale, Weſtmorland. Moſeley, Worceſterſhire, in Bromſgrove pariſh.

MOSELLE, a depart. of France, N of the department of Meurthe, and S of the duchy of Luxembourg. It takes its name from a river which riſes in the mountains of the Voſges, waters Epinal, receives the Meurthe below Nancy, and paſſing by Metz, Thionville, Treves, &c. falls into the Rhine at Coblentz. Metz is the capital of this department.

Moſergh, Cumb. near Cockermouth.

Moſgrove, in Cork, Munſter.

MOSKOE, See MAELSTROOM.

MOSQUITO SHORE, a country of Mexico, in N. America, lying on the Atlantic Ocean. It is bounded on the N and E. by the ſea, on the S. by Nicaragua, and on the W. by Honduras. In magnitude it exceeds the kingdom of Portugal; is well watered by navigable rivers and lakes; abounds in fiſh, game, and proviſions of all ſorts; furniſhes every neceſſary for raiſing cattle and flock on plantations of every kind, and to any extent; and is clothed with woods, producing timber for every uſe and purpoſe at land or ſea. The ſoil is ſuperior to that of the Weſt India Iſlands; the air and climate are more ſalubrious; and the deſtructive ravages of hurricanes and earthquakes have never been known here. The Spaniards have no ſettlements in the he Moſquito country, and reckon it a part of Honduras. When they firſt invaded this part of Mexico, they maſſacred moſt of the natives, which gave thoſe that eſcaped into the inacceſſible part of the country, an inſuperable averſion to them; and they have always appeared ready to join Europeans that came upon their coaſts, and particularly the Engliſh, who frequently came hither againſt the Spaniards. The Moſquito-men being excellent markſmen, the Engliſh long employed them in ſtriking the maratee fiſh, &c. and many of the Moſquito Indians went to Jamaica, and failed with the Engliſh in their voyages. They are ſo ſituated between moraſſes and inacceſſible mountains, and a coaſt full of rocks and ſhoals, that no attempts againſt them by the Spaniards, whom they mortally hate, could ever ſucceed. The connection between the Engliſh and the Moſquitos no longer exiſts. By a convention with Spain, in 1786, the former, in conſideration of certain ceſſions on the coaſt of Honduras, agreed to evacuate this country totally; and it is now a province of Spain. See HONDURAS.

MOSTAGAN, a town of Algiers, with a good harbour, 50 miles ENE. of Oran.

MOSTAR, a ſea-port town of Turkiſh Dalmatia, ſituated on the Narent.

Moſſdale, Cumb. in Caldbeck pariſh, near Heſket.

Moſſide, in Antrim, Ulſter.

Moſſtera, Dorſetſ. NW. of Beminſter.

Moſton, N. of Cheſter. Moſton, Cheſh. near Sandbach. Moſton, Shropſhire, E. of Wem.

MOSUL. See MOUSUL,

MOTALA, a town of E. Gothland, 21 miles NW. of Linkioping. The river Motala runs from the Wetter Lake, into the Baltic, about 22 miles E. of Nordkioping.

Motcomb, Dorſetſhire, near Shaftſbury. Mote, Cumberl. near Longtown. Mote, Kent, 1 mile from Maidſtone. Motesford, Hants, near Wincheſter. Mothecomb, Devonſhire, near Plymouth. Motherby, Cumberland, in Grayſtock pariſh. Motherſall, Staffordſh. NE. of Stone.

Mothill, in Waterford, Munſter.

Mothingham, Kent, 2 miles from Elham. Motley, Cheſhire, near Holſingworth.

MOTOLA, a town of Otranto, Naples; and a town of Congo, in Africa.

MOTRIL, a town of Granada, with a good harbour, and a rich fiſhery, 4 miles E. of Malaga.

MOTTE, LA, a town in the reſpective departments of Saone and Loire, Lower Alps, Drome, Vendee, Voſges, Gironde, and Upper Loire.

Motteſton, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Mottram-Andrew, Cheſhire, 3 miles from Macclesfield. Mottram-in-Longendale, Cheſhire, NE. of Stopford.

MOTYR, one of the Molucca Iſlands.

MOUDON, a town and bailiwick of Switſerland, in the Pays de Vaud. The bailiff appointed by the canton of Bern reſides in the caſtle of Lucens, built on the ſummit of a mountain, in a ſituation exceedingly picturesque. Moudon is 12 miles N. by E. of Lauſanne.

MOULD. See MOLD.

Moule, a river in Devonſ. running into the Towridge, near Briſtol Channel. It is noted for its ſoftneſs and excellence in whitening wool. Moulgrave Caſtle, Yorkſ. 2 miles from Whitby. Moulham, Dorſetſ. in Swanwich pariſh.

MOULIN, a town in the department of the Moſelle, 3 miles SW. of Metz.

MOULINS, a town in the depart. of Allier, which takes its name from the great number of mills (moulins) that were formerly in its neighbourhood. It contains between 16,000 and 17,000 inhabitants. The houſes of the late Chartreux, and of the Viſitation, are magnificent, and the ſtreets are broad and clean. The cutlery of Moulins is more eſteemed than that of Chatellerault. Near it is a medicinal ſpring. It is ſeated on the river Allier, over which it has a bridge, in the modern ſtyle, of 13 arches, miles S. of Nevers.

MOULINS ENGILBERT, a ſmall town in the dept. of Nievre, at the foot of the mountains of Morvan, 7 miles SW. of Chateau-Chinon.

Moulſey, E. and W. Surry, near Kingſton, on oppoſite ſides of the river Mole. Moulſo, Bucks, near Newport. Moulſham, Eſſex, a mile from Chelmsford. Moulſham, Eſſex, S. of Colcheſter.

MOULTAN, a province of Hindooſtan Proper, bounded on the N. by Lahore, on the E. by Delhi and Agimere, on the S. by Guzerat, and on the W. by Perſia and Candahar. Its products are cotton, wine, ſugar, opium, galls, brimſtone, &c. It is, or has been ſubject to the ſeiks; but its capital, Moultan, has been garriſoned by the king of Candahar, ever ſince 1779.

MOULTAN, one of the moſt ancient cities in Hindooſtan, capital of the province of the ſame name. Thevenot deſcribes it as a city of ſmall extent, for a capital, but ſtrongly fortified, having a pagoda temple much reverenced. He mentions mentions the river that led to Moultan as having been partly choaked up in his time, (1665) and that this had greatly leſſened its trade. He alſo takes notice of a particular ſect of Hindoos in this city, called Catry; a tribe, which he elſewhere explains to mean Rajpoots, or warriors; that is the Kuttry tribe, which Rennel ſuppoſed to be the Catheri, or Cathei, with whom Alexander warred on the banks of the Malli. The king of Candahar keeps a garriſon here. The country of Moultan has Lahore to the N. Delhi to the E. Agimere and Sindy to the S. and Perſia to the W. Moultan had formerly conſiderable manufactures of cotton, and is ſeated on the Chunaub, 200 miles SW. of Lahore, and 800 miles from the ſea by the courſe of the river. Lat. 29. 52. N. lon. 70. 40. E.

Moulthorp, Yorkſ. SW. of New Malton. Moulton, Yorkſ. near Richmond. Moulton, Suffolk, E. of Newmarket. Moulton, Cheſh. near Sandbach. Moulton, 3 miles from Northampton. Moulton, Linc. near the Waſh. Moulton, Norfolk, W. of Yarmouth. Moulton-Chapel, Linc. SE. of Spalding. Moulton-Second, Lincolnſ. NE. of Spalding. Moulton, Little and Michael, Norfolk, E. of New Buckenham. Moulton-Park, NE. of Northampton. Moulton, North, Devonſ. on the river Moul, and the N. ſide of South Moulton.

MOULTON, SOUTH, a town of Devonſhire, ſeated on the river Moul, 12 miles SE. of Barnſtaple, and 179 W. by S. of London. A regular market on Saturday, beſides two conſiderable ones, viz. Saturday before April 10, and Saturday before Michaelmas-day. Both N. and S. Moulton are conſiderably engaged in the manufactories of ſerges, ſhaloons, felts, &c.

Moundford, Norfolk, SE. of Methwold. Mounſted, Surry, SE. of Godalmin. Mountague, or Mountacute, Somerſetſhire, 3 miles W. of Yeovil.

Mount-Bellew-Bridge, in Galway, Connaught; here are good flour-mills. Mount-Bolus, in King's County, Leinſter.

Mount Boon, Devonſ. near Dartmouth.

MOUNT-CASSEL. See CASSEL.

Mount-Charles, in Donegal, Ulſter.

Mount Drake, Devonſh. in Muſbury pariſh.

Mount-Eagle, a high mountain in Mayo, Connaught, otherwiſe called Croagh Patrick. Mount-Eagle-Loyal, in Kerry, Munſter.

MOUNT-EDGECUMBE, a round high peak, at the entrance of Cook's Strait, on the NE. coaſt of New Zealand; ſuppoſed to be not much inferior in height to that of the Peak of Teneriff.

MOUNT-GABRIEL, a conical hill, in Cork, Munſter, 300 yards higher than the ſurface of the ſea. On its ſummit there is a deep lough or well; and from it a proſpect of vaſt extent, over a rude uncultivated country, from the Mizen-Head to Roſs, comprehending a great number of iſlands, bays, creeks, and harbours.

Mountgarret, in Wexford, Leinſter. Mountgarret-Ferry, in Kilkenny, Leinſter.

Mount-Grace, Yorkſ. NE. of Thirſk.

Mount-Hall, in Down, Ulſter. Mount-Hamilton, in Tyrone Ulſter.

Mount-Harry, Suſſex, W. of Lewes.

Mount Hill, in Down, Ulſter. Mount-Leinſter, in Carlow, Leinſter. On the top of it is a very deep well, the water of which is uſed againſt ſcorbutic and ſcrofulous humours: grouſe, hares, and foxes are numerous here. Mount-Melly, a name given to Slieu-Donard, in Down, Ulſter.

Mount-Marſh, Kent, near Foot's Cray.

*MOUNTMELLICK, a pretty neat town of Queen's County, in Leinſter, ſeated on a ſmall river, which ſoon after runs into the Barrow, 5 miles N. of Maryborough, and 41 W. of Dublin. The wool-combing, malting, and tanning buſineſſes, with the cotton manufacture and bleaching, are carried on here.

Mount-Naſing, Eſſex, NW. of Billericay.

Mount Nugent, in Cavan, Ulſter.

Mounton, Chapel and Hall, Monm. in Llanvaren pariſh. Mount Ottery, or Upper Ottery, Devon. NW. of Axminſter.

Mount-Pelier, in Limerick, Munſter.

Mount-Pleaſant, Middleſ. near Hornſey. Mount-Pleaſant, Herts, N. of Eaſt Barnet. Mount-Poynings, Dorſetſ. near the Lulworths.

*MOUNTRATH, a town of Queen's County, in Leinſter, with a woollen manufacture, and ſeveral iron forges and furnaces in its neighbourhood. It is 6 miles WSW. of Maryborough, and 46 SW. from Dublin.

Mount-Sautre, Devonſhire, NW. of Axminſter.

MOUNTSBAY, a bay on the S. coaſt of Cornwall, between the Land's End and the Lizard Point, ſo named from a lofty rock, called Mount St. Michael, which riſes within it. It is a very ſafe harbour againſt the S. and SE. winds. In Mountſbay is a conſiderable pilchard fiſhery.

MOUNTSORREL,

MOUNTSORREL, a town in Leiceſterſhire, ſo named from a high mount, or ſolid rock, adjoining to the town (of a duſky red, or ſorrel-coloured ſtone, extremely hard) and which had a caſtle on it in the reign of Henry III. but which the country people beſieged and demoliſhed. Of rough ſtones, hewn out of this rock, the town is built. It is ſeated on the river Stour, or Soare, 8 miles N. of of Leiceſter, and 105 NW. by N. of London. Market on Monday.

Mount-Talbot, in Roſcommon, Connaught.

MOURA, a town of Alentejo, ſeated on the Guadiana.

Mourkin, or Mopperkin, Cumberland, near Pardſhaw, has a ſmall lake or tarne.

Mourne, a barony, in Down, Ulſter, ſo named from a ridge of high mountains, called the Mountains of Mourne. Mourne, in Cork, Munſter, called alſo Ballynamona.

MOURZOOK, a city, the capital of Fezzan, in Africa, ſituated on a ſmall river, and ſupplied with water from a multitude of ſprings and wells. Being formerly built of ſtone, it ſtill retains the appellation of a Chriſtian town; and the medley which it preſents to the eye, of the vaſt ruins of ancient buildings, and the humble cottages of earth and ſand that form the dwellings of its preſent Arab inhabitants, is ſingularly groteſque and ſtrange. It is ſurrounded by a high wall, which enables the government to collect, at its three gates, a tax on all goods (proviſions excepted) that are brought for the ſupply of its people. A caravan ſets out annually from Meſurata to this place; and hence, the Fezzaneers themſelves diſpatch, every year, a caravan to Caſhna, and another to Bornou. Mourzook is 262 miles S. of Meſurata. Lat. 27. 20. N. lon 15. 5. E.

Mouſhall, Staffordſhire, S. of Wolverhampton. Mouſehole, Cornwall, on the W. ſide of Mountſbay; here is a harbour for fiſhing-boats. Mouſely, Leiceſterſh. NW. of Harborough.

MOUSUL, or MOSUL, a town of Turkey, in Aſia, in Diarbec, ſeated on the W. bank of the river Tigris. It is a large place ſurrounded by high walls, and defended by a ſtrong caſtle; but the houſes are ill-built, and in ſeveral places gone to ruins. It is a place of great trade, particularly in cloth, and all ſorts of cottons and ſilks. The inhabitants are a mixture of Arabians, Perſians, Turks, Curds, Maronite and Armenian Chriſtians. Here are conſiderable manufactures of cotton. Merchandiſe from India is brought hither by the way of Baſſora, and European goods by the way of Aleppo. At Elkaſh, near this town, the Neſtorian patriarch of Syria reſides. It is 130 miles SE. of Diarbekir, and 190 NW. of Bagdad. Lat. 35. 40. N. lon. 41. 15. E.

MOUSTIERS, a town in the dept. of the Lower Alps, noted for a manufacture of fine porcelain. It is 5 miles NE. of Riez.

MOUTIER, or MONSTIER, anciently FORUM CLAUDII, and, in the ſucceeding ages, MONASTERTUM CENTRONUM, a town of the Tarentine, in the dept. of Mont Blanc, ſeated on the river Iſere, at its confluence with the Doiron, 27 miles ESE. of Chamberry. They procure excellent ſalt from the mountains and a ſpring in the neighbourhood. It is difficult of acceſs, by reaſon of defiles on the ſides of torrents and precipices.

MOUZON, a town in the department of the Ardennes, with a manufacture of ſerges. It is ſeated on the river Meuſe, 8 miles SE. of Sedan, and 120 NNE. of Paris.

Mourne, a river of Donegal, which iſſues from a lake of the ſame name in that county, and runs into the Foyle at Lifford.

Mowak, Cornwall, near St. Auſtel. Mowbrick, Lancaſhire, near Kirkham, in Amounderneſs. Mowcap, Northumberl. near Kirkhaugh and Alſton Moor.

MOWEE, one of the Sandwich Iſlands, about 140 miles in circumference. A low iſthmus divides it into two circular peninſulas, of which the eaſtern is double the ſize of the weſtern. The mountains in both riſe to a great height, and may be ſeen at the diſtance of more than 30 leagues. The northern ſhores, like thoſe of Owyhee, afford no ſoundings, and the country preſents the ſame appearance of verdure and fertility. Near the W. point of the ſmaller peninſula is a ſpacious bay, with a ſandy beech ſhaded with cocoa-nut trees. The country behind has a romantic appearance, the hills riſing almoſt perpendicularly in a great variety of peaked forms; and their ſteep ſides, and the deep chaſms between them, are covered with trees. The inhabitants are computed at 65,000. Lat. 20. 53. N. lon. 157. 56. W.

Mowſwell, Northumb. between Woller and Sunderland. Moxall, Warwickſh. in Wiſhaw pariſh. Moxby, Yorkſ. near Stillington. Moxon, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina.

MOY, a town of Inverſaſhire.

Moy, in Tyrone, Ulſter. Moy, a river of Connaught, ſeparating the counties of Mayo and Sligo, and falling into the Atlantic below the port of Killala. Moyallen, in Down, Ulſter. The linen manufacture is carried on here. It is 3 miles from Portadown, and 63 from Dublin.

MOYENVIC, a town in the department of Meurthe, 3 miles E. of Vic. It is remarkable for its ſalt-ſprings, from whence water is conveyed by ſubterraneous channels to Dieuze.

MOYENVILLE, a town in the depart. of the Somme.

Moyle, a river of Tyrone, in Ulſter, which joins the Mourne, 5 miles S. of Strabane.

Moyles Court, Hants, near Ringwood.

Moynalty, in Meath, Leinſter. Moyne, in Mayo, Connaught.

Moynes Court, Monmouthſhire, near Caerleon. Moynes in Hempſtead, Eſſex, between Radwinter and Steeple Bumſted.

Moyvore, in Weſt Meath, Leinſter.

Muaker, Yorkſ. in Swaledale. Muchelney Iſle, Somerſetſh. S. of Langport. It is a river iſland, formed by the Ivel and another river.

MUCIDAN, a ſmall town in the depart. of Dordogne, ſeated on the river Ille, 18 miles SW. of Perigueux.

Muckenfield, Devonſhire, near North Tawton. Mucking, Eſſex, N. of Tilbury. Mucking-Hall, Eſſex, between Sutton and the Wakerings. Muckings, Middl. E. of Tottenham. Muckleford, Dorſetſhire, near Frampton. Muckleſton, Staff. near Blore-Heath. Muckleswick, Shropſ. NE. of Biſhop's-Caſtle. Muckley, Shropſhire, between Wen and Wellington.

Mucruſs-Lake, near the Lake of Killarney.

Mudford, Somerſetſhire, between Ilcheſter and Sherborn. Mudghill, Wilts, between Brandon-Foreſt and Wotton-Baſſet. Mudgian, Cornwall, near Helford-Haven.

MUERAW, a town of Stiria, ſituated on the Muehr.

MUEHR, a great river of Germany, which has its ſource in the archbiſhopric of Saltzburg, croſſes Stiria, paſſes by Judenburgh and Gratz, and falls into the river Drave, about 6 miles S. of Kaniſha, in Hungary.

Muff, in Cavan. Muff, in Derry, and Muff, in Donegal, Ulſter.

MUGGIA, or MUGLIA, a town of Iſtria, ſituated on a gulf of the ſame name.

Muggington, NW. of Derby. Mugleſwick, Durham, NW. of Lancheſter.

MUIRKIRK, a town of Ayrſhire, ſeated on the river Ayr, with a conſiderable iron work.

Mulabiſh, and Mulahuff, or Mullahuff, in Kerry, Munſter.

Mulbach, a river of Upper Saxony, which runs into the Elbe; alſo a river of Swabia, which runs into the Neckar.

Mulberton, Norfolk, between Harleſton and Norwich. Mulcote-Abbey, Warwickſhire, between Atherſton and Warwick.

MULBERG, or MUHLBERG, a town of Meiſſen, Upper Saxony; a town of Erfurt, Lower Rhine; and a town of Baden, in Swabia.

MULDA FREYBURG, and MULDA WEISSE, two rivers of Upper Saxony; the former joins the Muldau, 2 miles N. of Colditz, and the latter paſſes by Colditz, and runs into the Elbe near the Deſſau.

MULDAW, a river of Germany, which riſes in the mountains between Bohemia and Bavaria, and running by Budweis and Prague, falls into the Elbe a little above Melnick.

MULDORF, a town of Saltzburg, Bavaria, ſituated on the Inn.

MULHAUSEN, an imperial city of Thuringia, Upper Saxony, ſeated in a fertile country, on the river Unſtruth, 15 miles NE. of Eiſenach, and 45. E. by S. of Caſſel.

MULHAUSEN, a town of Alſace, which though ſituated at the diſtance of ſome miles from the frontiers of Swiſſerland, and inſulated by the French dept. of the Upper Rhine, is not only in alliance with the Helvetic confederacy, but is conſidered and reſpected as a part of it, and entitled to all the privileges enjoyed by that body. The walls of the town incloſe a circumference of not more than two miles, and its whole territory is confined within a precinct of eight miles. This little republic maintained its privileges, which had been granted by the emperors in the feudal times, by contracting alliances, at different periods, with Baſil, Straſburg, the towns of Alſace and Suabia, Bern, Friburg, and Soleure. In 1515, it was received into the Helvetic confederacy; which league has preſerved its liberty and independence from the encroachments of the empire, on the one hand, and, on the other, from the attacks of France. The town contains about 6000 inhabitants, who are Proteſtants; and there are 2000 people in its adjacent adjacent villages. It owes its present flourishing state to its manufactures, which are chiefly of printed linens and cottons. The government is aristo-democratical. The supreme power resides in the great and little council, consisting together of 78 persons, and drawn from the burghers, whose number amounts to 700, distributed into 6 tribes. Mulhausen is 15 miles NW. of Basle.

MULHEIM, two towns of Berg, Westphalia; one on the Ruhr, and the other on the E. side of the Rhine, 3 miles N. of Cologne.

MULL OF CANTYRE. See CANTYRE.

MULL OF GALLOWAY, a rocky promontory, the most southerly point of Scotland, in the county of Wigton.

MULL, one of the Western Islands of Scotland, about 22 miles in length, and, in some places, of the same breadth, but towards the N. not more than 8 miles. There are many good natural harbours; but there is only one village, called Torbermorey, near the northern point, where a fishing station has been lately erected. The soil is unfavourable for corn, being, for the most part, rocky and barren. The mountains, however, abound with springs, and are covered with cattle, of which a great number are annually exported. These, with fish, and a considerable quantity of kelp, are the only articles of commerce.

Mullagheame, a mountain in Tyrone, Ulster, 12 miles SSE. of Strabane.

Mulle, a river in Montgomeryshire, which runs into the Severn at Castle Dolevern.

Mulleghrew, in Louth, Leinster.

MULLERAS, or MUHLROSE, a town in the Middle Marche, Brandenburg.

Mullian, Cornw. on the coast, between Helston and Lizard-Point.

Mullinabone, in Tipperary, Munster. Mullinabow, and Mullinavat, in Kilkenny, Leinster.

*MULLINGAR, the county-town of West Meath, in Leinster. It holds a great wool-mart, is a place of good trade, and is seated on the river Foyle, 38 miles N. by W. of Dublin.

MULLITS, or MULLETS, a cluster of islands on the NW. point of the county of Mayo, in Connaught; the largest of them, rather a peninsula, is about 9 miles long and 2 wide.

Mullogh, in Tipperary, Munster. Mulloghanee-Bridge, in Armagh, Ulster.

Mulnemese, Staffordshire, N. of Ecclesshal.

Multifarnham, in W. Meath, Leinster. Mulphedder, in Meath Leinster.

Mulroy Bay, on the N. coast of Donegal, in Ulster.

Mulynton, Cheshire, NW. of Knottesford. Mumby, or Numby Chapel, Linc. NE. of Spilsby. Munck, Northumb. near Whitfield. Munck-Rise, Northumberland, S. of Ellesdon. Munckton, Durham, between Newcastle and Shields.

Munck-Wearmouth, Durham, opposite to Sunderland, on the N. side of the Wear. Munk Weston, Shropshire, S. of Wenlock.

MUNDA, or MONDA, an ancient town of Granada, near which Julius Cæsar gained a long-disputed victory over the sons of Pompey.

MUNDERKINGEN, an Austrian town of Suabia, seated on the Danube.

Mundesley, Norfolk, on the shore, E. of Gimmingham and Gresham. Mundfield, Sussex, SE. of Echingham. Mundford, Kent, SE. of Ashford. Mundham, Norfolk, near Loddon. Mundham, N. and S. Sussex, SE. of Chichester.

Mundon, Essex, near Steple, on the S. side of Osith Island. Mundon-Furnival, or Great Mundon, Herts, SW. of Puckeridge. Mundon-Frewell, or Little Mundon, Herts, N. of Sacomb.

MUNDU, an ancient city of Malwa, in Hindoostan, of which it was the capital, about 200 years ago. It was then described as a city, 22 miles in circuit, and containing many monuments of ancient magnificence; but when visited by Sir Thomas Roe, in 1615, it had fallen much to decay. It occupies the top of a large and lofty mountain, and few cities were ever placed in a bolder situation. It is 32 miles SW. of Indore, and 90 N. of Burhampoor. Lat. 22. 50. N. lon. 75. 47. E.

MUNKACS. See MONTGATZ.

MUNIA, or MENIE, a considerable town of Egypt, seated on the river Nile, 140 miles S. of Cairo. The vessels that go down the Nile are obliged to stop here and pay certain duties. Lat. 27. 45. N.

MUNICH, one of the most pleasant and handsome cities in Germany, capital of the duchy of Bavaria, and containing about 40,000 inhabitants. The houses are high, and the streets large and spacious, with canals in many of them. The palace of the late electors of Bavaria, which now belongs to the elector-palatine of the Rhine, as Duke of Bavaria, is a stupendous structure, magnificently adorned. The cabinet of curiosities, in which are 200 marble statues and busts of Roman emperors, and some other antiques, mostly brought brought from Italy, the muſeum, the library, and the ducal gardens, attract the attention of travellers. The cathedral contains 25 chapels, and 30 altars; but the two ſteeples, and the tomb of one of the emperors, of black marble, adorned with ſtatues of bronze, are the moſt remarkable things belonging to it. There are many other fine buildings, both eccleſiaſtical and civil, in this city, and the ſtreets are ſtraight and broad. The market-place is very beautiful; and here are manufactures of ſilk, velvet, woollen-cloth, and tapeſtry. It is ſeated on the river Iſer, 15 miles SE. of Augſburg, and 62 SSW. of Ratiſbon. Lat. 488. 10. N. lon. 11. 36. E.

Munithesne, Shropſh. N. of Knighton.

Munkforce, Cumberland, in Bootle pariſh.

Munnoe, or Mynow, a river of Monmouthſhire, running into the Wye at Monmouth.

Munry, a river of Mayo, in Connaught, which runs into Tullaghan bay.

MUNSINGEN, a town of Wurtemburg.

Munſley, Herefordſ NW. of Ledbury.

Munſlow, Shropſ. W. of Brown-Clee-Hill.

MUNSTER, a ſovereign biſhopric in Weſtphalia, 120 miles in length and 80 in breadth. The country is level and fruitful, and has fine woods, turf, &c. The principal rivers are the Ems, the Lippe, the Vechr, and the Berkel. It lies E. of the Dutch States, and the county of Bentheim, and S. of E. Frieſland and Oldenburg. The capital is of the ſame name.

MUNSTER, a large, rich, and populous city in Weſtphalia, capital of the biſhopric of the ſame name. The cathedral is a ſtately fabric, and the houſes, in general, are of freeſtone and well built. The treaty of Weſtphalia was concluded here in 1648. It is ſeated on the river Aa, not far from the Ems, 65 miles NNE. of Cologne, and 77 S. by W. of Bremen. Lat. 51. 49. N. lon 7. 49. E.

MUNSTER, a town in the dept. of Upper Rhine, 9 miles WSW. of Colmar.

MUNSTER, a town of Lucerne in Switzerland, and a town and valley of the Griſons; a town in the Rhingrave, and a town of Heſſe, both in the circle of the Upper Rhine; and a town of Liege, and a town of Juliers, both in Weſtphalia; and a town of Treves, Lower Rhine.

MUNSTER, one of the four provinces of Ireland; bounded on the N. and NE. by Leinſter and Connaught, and on all other ſides by the ocean. It is about 135 miles in length and 120 in breadth. The chief rivers are the Suier, the Audluffe, the Lee, the Bande, the Leane, and the Caſhon. There are a great many bays and harbours, and many rich towns, and the air is mild and temperate. Some places are mountainous, but the valleys are embelliſhed with corn-fields. The moſt general commodities are corn, cattle, wood, wool, and fiſh. It contains the counties of Clare, Tipperary, Waterford, Cork, Limerick, and Kerry.

MUNSTERBURG, a town and principality of Silefia, noted for the culture of hops. It is 19 miles SW. of Glatz.

MUNSTER-MEINFELT, a town of Treves, 12 miles WSW. of Coblentz.

MURANO, an iſland and town of Italy, about one mile N. of Venice, formerly a very flouriſhing place as its great manufactories ſerved all Europe with looking-glaſſes. Inſtead of being caſt, as in England and France, the Murano mirrors are all blown in the manner of bottles.

MURCIA, a very mountainous province, formerly a kingdom of Spain, on the coaſt of the Mediterranean, about 115 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. Its principal rivers are the Segura, and the Guadalentin. The ſoil is dry, becauſe it ſeldom rains here, and therefore produces little corn or wine; but there is plenty of oranges, citrons, lemons, olives, almonds, figs, mulberries, rice, pulſe, ſugar, ſilk, and medicinal plants. The air is very healthful, and the principal town is of the ſame name.

MURCIA, a large, handſome, and populous city of Spain, capital of a province of the ſame name; it was a Roman city, and from its delightful ſituation dedicated to Venus Myrtia. It has a ſuperb cathedral, the ſtairs of whoſe ſteeple are ſo contrived, that a man may ride up to the top either on horſeback or in a coach. The inns here, like thoſe in the moſt of the great roads, &c. of Spain, afford but wretched lodgings and accommodations, being generally kept by Gitans, or Gipſies. It is ſeated on a plain, which abounds in fine gardens about the city, on the river Segura, 96 miles SSW. of Valencia, and 212 SE. of Madrid.

Murcot, Glouceſ. in Wickham pariſh.

MURET, a town in the dept. of Upper Garonne, 10 miles S. of Toulouſe.

Muriot-End, Northamptonſhire, NE. of Daventry.

MURO, a town of Otranto; and a town of Baſilicata; both in Naples.

MURRAY-FRITH, a conſiderable bay or inlet of the ſea, on the E. coaſt of Scotland, between Tarbetneſs, in Roſs-ſhire, ſhire, on the N. and Brough-Head, in Murrayſhire, on the S.

MURRAYSHIRE, or ELGINSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by the Frith of Murray, on the E. by Banffſhire, on the S. by a point of Aberdeenſhire, and by Inverneſsſhire, and on the W. by that county and Nairneſhire. It extends from SW. to NE. about 50 miles, and along the coaſt about 20. Some parts of it are hilly; but its ſoil, for the greateſt part, is rich, and produces wheat, barley, oats, and flax. The principal rivers are the Spey, Findhorn, Loſſie, and Nairne, all which abound in ſalmon. The county town is Elgin.

MURRHART, a town of Wirtemburg, Suabia, ſituated on the Muhr, a river of Suabia, which runs into the Neckar.

Murſley, Bucks, near Winſlow. Murſton, Kent, 1 mile E. of Milton. Murton, Cumberl. in Lamplugh pariſh. Murton, Weſtmoreland, near Appleby.

Muſberry, Devonſ. near Upper Ottery. Muſkham, N. and S. Nott. near Newark.

MUSCOVY. See RUSSIA.

Muſden-Grange, Staff. near Crockden. Muſgrave, Great and Little, Weſtmorel. NW. of Kirby Steven.

Muſgry, and Muſkerry, in Cork, Munſter.

MUSSELBURGH, a ſea-port of Edinburghſhire, ſeated on the Frith of Forth, at the mouth of the river Eſk. It is 6 miles E. of Edinburgh.

MUSSLIOGANNIM, or MOSTAGRAN, a ſea port of Algiers, 36 miles NE. of Oran.

Muſton, Leiceſterſ. SE. of Normanton. Muſton, Dorſetſ. NE. of Bere. Muſton, Yorkſ. near the coaſt and Hunanby. Muſwell-Hill, a village of Middleſex, NE. of Highgate, and 5 miles from London. Mutford, Suffolk, between Beccles and Keſſingland.

Muthel Church, in Waterford, Munſter.

MUTHILL, a town of Perthſhire, 2 miles S. of Crieff.

Muthwey, a river in Carmarthenſhire, which runs into the Towy, below Llangaddock. Muthwey, a river in Meripethſhire, which runs into the Avon at Kemmer abbey, and another in Cardiganſhire, which runs into the Tivy, below Iſtradmyrk.

MUXACRA, or MUJAXAR, a ſea-port of Granada. Lat. 37. 5. N.

MUYDEN, a town of N. Holland, noted for making of ſalt. It is ſituated on the river Vecht, near the Zuyder Zee, 6 miles E. of Amſterdam.

MYCENE, formerly the capital of a famous kingdom in the Morea, but now reduced to a ſmall village.

MYCONI, an iſland of the Archipelago, about 21 miles in circumference. The harbour is very open, and deep enough for the largeſt ſhips, where they may ride ſecure from the N. wind. There are about 500 ſeafaring men in the iſland, who belong to about 150 veſſels, and are accounted pretty good ſailors. The ſoil is dry, and mountainous, but the mountains are of no great height. Water is very ſcarce in ſummer; but in the town there is a large well, which is the only one in the iſland. The iſland produces little wheat, but plenty of partridges, quails, woodcocks, turtle-doves, rabbits, and beccaficos; beſide which there are excellent grapes and figs. The inhabitants, who are about 3000, are almoſt all Greeks, governed by a Cadi, have fifty churches, chapels, or monaſteries. Two or three European nations have conſuls here, and yet very few ſhips frequent it. Lat. 37. 28. N. lon. 25. 51. E.

Mydloe, Huntingdonſhire, near Hailweſton. Myles, Eſſex, near Kelvedon. Myliton, Shropſh. near Clebury. Myn-chinobarrow, Somerſetſhire, near Bath.

Myſhall, in Carlow, Leinſter.

MYSORE, a fortified town of Hindooſtan, anciently the capital of the kingdom ſo called. It is ſituated about 10 miles S. from the river Cauvery, and as many S. of Seringapatam.

MYSORE, a kingdom in the peninſula of Hindooſtan, ſubject to Tippoo Sultan, who ſtyles himſelf regent of the country. It includes generally, beſide the Myſore Proper, the countries of Bednore, Coimbettore, Canara, and Dindigul; beſide the conqueſts of his late father, Hyder Ally, (who uſurped the throne) to the northward; namely, Meritz, Soonda, Chitteldroog, Harponelly, Sanore, Bancapour, Roydroog, Gooty, Condanore, Canoul, and Cuddapah. The extent of Tippoo's territory, from N. to S. is near 500 miles; its breadth, in the wideſt place (the N. part of the peninſula) 330 miles, but proceeding to the S. it diminiſhes, till it ends in a point. By the peace of 1782, Hyder Ally was to relinquiſh all but his ancient poſſeſſions. How far his ſucceſſor fulfilled the terms of that treaty, cannot eaſily be aſcertained; but, on the termination of the late war, that prince agreed, beſides paying a large ſum of money, to cede one half of his dominions to the Engliſh Eaſt-India Company, and their allies, the Mahrattas, and the nizam of the Deccan. The country, in general, is dry, rugged, mountainous, and barren; inſomuch, that ſuſtenance for men and animals cannot be raiſed upon it, but by the moſt perſevering induſtry in its inhabitants. See SERINGAPATAM.

Myſſle, Yorkſhire, NW. of Ripon.
Mytbe, Glouceſterſhire in Tewkeſbury pariſh. Myton, Yorkſ. between Boroughbridge and Tenmile Hill, where the Swale leaps into the Ure, as it were, from a precipice.

NAAS, the county-town, and alternately with Athy, the aſſize-town of Kildare, in Leinſter. It was formerly the reſidence of the king of Leinſter, and is ſituated on the great poſt road between Dublin and Munſter, near the Grand Canal, 15 miles SW. of the metropolis.

Naborn, Yorkſhire, in the E. Riding, E. of the Ouſe, and S. of the city of York.

NABURG, a town of Bavaria, in the Upper Palatinate, ſituated on the Nab, a river which riſes in Franconia, and runs into the Danube, 4 miles W. of Ratiſbon.

Naby, Yorkſhire, near Barnard Caſtle.
Nackington, a mile and a half SE. of Canterbury. Nacton, Suffolk, near Ipſwich.
Nadder, a river which riſes in Dorſetſhire, and joins the Willy, at Wilton, in Wiltſhire.

Nadrid, in Cork, Munſter.

NAERDEN, or NAARDEN, a town of N. Holland, capital of a country called Goyland, which includes Naerden, Muyden, and Weſep, with 16 other villages. It is ſeated on the Zuyder Zee, 14 miles N. of Utrecht, and 11 SSE. of Amſterdam.

NAEFELS, a town of Glaris, in Swiſſerland.

Nafferton, Yorkſ. SW. of Kilham.
Nafford, Worceſ. near Eckington.

NAGIBANIA, a town of Hungary, ſeated on the river Zarud, 30 miles NE. of Zatmar. Near it there are gold and ſilver mines of great produce.

Nagle Mountains, in the S. of Cork, Munſter.

NAGOLD, a town and river, in Wirtemburg, Suabia.

NAGPOUR, the capital of part of Berar, in Hindooſtan, ſubject to Moodajee Boonſlah, the chief of the Eaſtern Mahrattas. It is a city of modern date; but, though extenſive and populous, is poorly built; and, excepting a ſmall citadel of no ſtrength, is open and defenceleſs. The country around it is fertile and well cultivated. It is 488 miles W. by S. of Calcutta. Lat. 21 8. N. lon. 79. 46. E.

NAHAR-MALEK, a town in Irac-Arabia, ſeated near the Euphrates. Lat. 31. N.

NAJERA, a town of Old Caſtile.

Nailby, Weſtmorl. near Kirby-Steven.
Nailesworth, Glouceſterſh. near Minching-Hampton.

NAIRNE, a ſmall ſea-port of Nairneſhire, exporting fiſh, corn, and yarn. It is ſeated at the entrance of the Frith of Murray, 10 miles E. of Inverneſs, and 104 N. of Edinburgh. The river Nairne ſeparates the county of Murray from Inverneſs, croſſes Nairneſhire, and runs into the Frith of Murray, near Nairne.

NAIRNESHIRE, a populous county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by the Frith of Murray, and incloſed on every other ſide by the counties of Inverneſs and Murray. Its extent from N. to S. is about 12 miles, and its breadth about 10. The ſoil, though rocky, is fertile; and, in general, well cultivated. It contains ſeveral lakes, which abound in fiſh, and ſome foreſts of firs. Nairne is the county town.

NAKSIVAN, a town of Perſian Armenia, capital of a province of the ſame name, with an archbiſhop's ſee, ſome conſiderable bazars, caravanſeras, public baths, and other buildings. It is ſuppoſed to have been the ancient Artaxata, and once contained 40,000 houſes. In the laſt century, here were 2000 houſes. It is 90 miles SE. of Erivan.

Nallers, Dorſetſh. in Aſkerwel parish.

NAMPHIO. See NANFIO.

NAMPTWICH, a large, well built town of Cheſhire, with very regular ſtreets, and manufactures of cotton, (lately eſtabliſhed) and of ſhoes. It is ſeated on the river Weever, near the Cheſter canal, which is finiſhed here with a handſome broad baſon, forming a kind of harbour. Here are ſalt-ſprings, which lie on the bank of a freſh-water ſtream, from which the ſalt nake great quantities of fine white ſalt. The principal dairies of Cheſhire are about his town. It is a great thoroughfare to Ireland, and is 26 miles SE. of Cheſter, and 162 NW. of London. A large market on Saturday, for corn, cattle &c.

NAMUR, a city of the Netherlands, ſaid to take its name from an ancient idol called Nam, ſuppoſed to be Neptune. It has, or had, a very ſtrong caſtle, built on the oppoſite ſide of the Sambre, on a ſharp rock, and defended by fort William, and many other conſiderable forts, ſo as to be ſuppoſed almoſt impregnable. In 1692, it was beſieged by Louis XIV. and the Duke of Luxemburg, with an army of 120,000 men, and ſurrendered in ſight of King William's army, after an obſtinate defence. Vauban and Cohorn, the two greateſt engineers Europe ever bred, exhauſted the whole ſcience of attack and defence in the ſiege of this place. Cohorn was dangerouſly wounded in the defence of Fort Cohorn. Namur was, however, retaken by King William, in 1695, after many deſperate, bloody, and dreadful attacks. The trenches were opened on July 11, and the citadel ſurrendered on the firſt day of September. The garriſon, conſiſting of 16,000 men, was commanded by Marſhal Boufflers. It is ſeated at the confluence of the Maeſe and Sambre, 25 miles SW. of Liege. Lat. 50. 29. N. lon. 4. 50. E.

NAMUR, a county of the Netherlands, one of the ten catholic provinces, lying between the rivers Sambre and Maeſe. It is pretty fertile; has ſeveral foreſts, marble quarries, and mines of iron, lead, and coal, and is about 30 miles in length and 20 in breadth. Namur is the capital.

NANCI, a large and handſome city, alternately capital with Luneville, of the department of Meurthe. It contains about 34,000 inhabitants, and is divided into the Old and New Town, which are ſeparated by a canal. The firſt, though irregularly built, is rich and populous, and contains the palace of the ancient dukes of Lorrain. The New Town, whoſe ſtreets are as ſtraight as a line, was already one of the fineſt in Europe, before the magnificent works with which Staniſlaus I. titular king of Poland, and duke of Lorrain, enriched it. Before the revolution, it had a univerſity, an academy of ſciences, and a medical college. It is 10 miles E. of Toul, and 90 S. of Metz. Lat. 48. 41. N. lon. 6. 17. E.

Nanby, Leiceſterſ. NE. of Boſworth.

Nanby, S. of Lincoln. Nanewath, Weſtmorl. near Penrith.

NANFIO, an iſland of the Archipelago, a little to the N. of the iſland of Santorino, about 16 miles in circumference. It has no harbour; the mountains are nothing but bare rocks, and there are not ſprings ſufficient to water the fields. The inhabitants are all Greeks, whoſe trade conſiſts in onions, wax, and honey. There are vaſt numbers of partridges, whoſe eggs they endeavour to deſtroy every year, to preſerve the corn, yet there are ſtill great numbers of them. The ruins of the temple of Apollo are yet to be ſeen, and conſiſt chiefly of marble columns. Lat. 36. 27. N. lon. 26. 10. E.

NANGASAKI, a town of Japan, ſituated on the W. coaſt of the Iſland of Ximo, with a well-frequented harbour. It is the only port of Japan open to foreigners. The inhabitants carry on a great trade with the Chineſe and Dutch. The latter are never ſuffered to come into the city, unleſs when their ſhips arrive, and then they deliver up their guns, helms, and ſails, as pledges of their good behaviour. Lat. 32. 32. N. lon. 130. 52. E.

NANKING, or KIANGNIN, a city of China, capital of the province of Kiangnan, and formerly the imperial city. It is the largeſt in China, being 17 miles in circumference, and about 3 miles diſtant from the great river Yang-tiſe-Chiang, from which canals are cut, ſo large, that veſſels may enter the town. This place is greatly fallen from its ancient ſplendor; for it had a magnificent palace, not a veſtige of which is now to be ſeen, as well as temples, tombs of the emperors, and other ancient monuments. A third part of the city is deſolate, but the reſt is extremely populous, well inhabited, and full of buſineſs. The ſtreets are narrow, but handſome and well paved, and on each ſide are ſhops, neatly furniſhed. The public buildings are mean, except a few temples, the city gates, and the famous tower of porcelain, 200 feet high, and divided into 9 ſtories, by projections, &c. covered with green varniſhed tiles. They have ſeveral manufactures in ſilk and wool. The number of the inhabitants is ſaid to be 1,000,000, without comprehending the garriſon of 40,000 men. Here the phyſicians have their principal academy. It is ſeated near the river Yantſekiang, 500 miles SSE. of Peking. Lat. 32. 4. lon. 119. 25. E.

Nans, Cornwall, W. of Redruth.

NANTES, an ancient and pretty large city in the dept. of Lower Loire. It is one of the moſt conſiderable places in the kingdom, and contains the richeſt merchants. The bridges over the river Loire, in which are ſome iſlands, are almoſt a league in length. The ſuburbs are ſo large, that they exceed the city. The inhabitants are computed at 80,000. Before the revolution, here was a univerſity, a ſociety of agriculture and arts, and a ſchool of anatomy and ſurgery; the merchants, alſo, had commonly, on their own account, more than 120 ſhips for Guinea, the French Weſt India iſlands, Spain, and the Spaniſh colonies; indeed this port, in reſpect to the ſlave trade, might, before that time, be conſidered as the Liverpool of France. Veſſels were fitted out here for the cod-fiſhery in N. America; and Nantes had a conſiderable ſhare in the commerce with the United States. A great quantity of ſalt is made in the territory of Nantes; both at the Bay of Bourgneuf, and in the ſalt-marſhes of Guerande and Croiſic. Large veſſels can come no higher than Paimbœuf, which is ſome miles below Nantes. It is 37 miles SW. of Angers, and 217 SW. of Paris. Lat. 47. 13. N. lon. 1. 28. W.

NANTCHANG, a city of China, of the firſt rank, capital of the province of Kiangſi. It is 695 miles S. of Peking.

Nantenane, in Limerick, Munſter.

Nantgiſſel-Cove, Cornw. at the Land's End. Nantglin, Denbighſh. N. Wales.

NANTUA, a town in the dept. of Ain, ſituated at the extremity of a great lake of the ſame name, 18 miles SSE. of Bourg.

NANTUCKET, an iſland of N. America, in the ſtate of Maſſachuſetts, of which it is a county, containing about 23,000 acres. It lies to the S. of Cape Cod, and had once the moſt conſiderable whale fiſhery on the coaſt; but it was almoſt ruined by the American war. It has begun, however, to revive lately; the greateſt part of the inhabitants being whalers and fiſhermen. As the iſland is low, ſandy, and unproductive, it is calculated for ſuch people only as are willing to depend almoſt entirely on the watery element for ſubſiſtence. It has one town, called Sherburne. The inhabitants are moſtly quakers. Lat. 41. 0. N. lon. 70. 0. W.

NANYANG, a city of China, of the province of Honan, of the firſt rank. It is 462 miles SSW. of Peking.

NANYONG, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Quantong. It is 902 miles S. of Peking.

NANTWICH. See NAMPTWICH.

NAPAUL, a province of Hindooſtan, between the NW. part of Bengal and the mountainous ridge of Himmaleh, N. of Mocampour; it is ſubject to Thibet. Catmandu is the capital.

NAPLES, an ancient, large, rich, and trading city of Lavora, in Italy, one of the fineſt in the world, capital of a kingdom of the ſame name, with a univerſity. It is ſeated at the bottom of the Bay of Naples, and is built in the form of a vaſt amphitheatre, ſloping from the hills to the ſea. Although the ſtyle of architecture is inferior to what prevails at Rome, and it cannot vie with that city in the number of magnificence of the churches, palaces, and public buildings, the private houſes, in general, are better built, and the ſtreets are broader and better paved. No ſtreet in Rome equals in beauty the Strada di Toledo at Naples; nor can any of them be compared to the beautiful ſtreets which lie open to the bay, and here the exceſſive heat of the ſun is often tempered with the ſea-breezes, and with gales wafting the perfumes of the Campagna Felice. The houſes, in general, are five or ſix ſtories in height, and flat at the top; on which are placed numbers of flower-vaſes or fruit-trees, in boxes of earth, producing a very gay and agreeable effect. On the mountain, St. Erno, in a moſt pleaſant ſituation, is a convent of Carthuſians on which much expence has been laviſhed to render the building, the apartments and the gardens, equal to the ſituation. Naples is admirably ſituated for commerce, and no kingdom produces the neceſſaries and luxuries of life in greater profuſion; and yet trade is but in a languiſhing condition. The beſt ſilks come from Lyons, and the beſt woollen cloths from England. The articles exported are ſilk and ſilk ſtuffs, oil, ſulphur, manna, roſemary, aniſeſeed, reſin, tartar, figs, ſoap, eſſences, ſilk waiſtcoats, ſnuff-boxes of tortoiſe-ſhell, and of the lava of Mount Veſuvius; tables, and ornamental furniture, of marble. They are thought to embroider here better than in France, and their macaroni is preferred to that of any made in any part of Italy. They excel alſo in liquors and confections; particularly in one kind of confection called Diabolonis, which is ſold at a very high price, and is of a very hot and ſtimulating nature. The inhabitants are computed to be 350,000, which is very probable; for though Naples is not one third of the ſize of London, yet many of the ſtreets are here more crowded than the Strand; and a great proportion of the pooreſt ſort are obliged to ſpend the nigh night in them, as well as the day, for want of habitations. There is not a city in the world, perhaps, with the ſame number of inhabitants, in which ſo few contribute to the wealth of the community by uſeful and productive labour, as Naples; the number of prieſts and monks, of whom there are 10,000; fidlers, lawyers, of whom there are 8000, footmen, and lazzaronies, is immenſe; and the laſt alone are computed at 40,000. The king, it is ſaid, counts a hundred perſons with the title of prince, and ſtill a greater number with that of duke, among his ſubjects. Six or ſeven of them have eſtates from 10 to 13,000l. a year; a conſiderable number have poſſeſſions to about half that amount; and the annual revenue of many is not above one or two thouſand pounds. The inferior order of nobility are much poorer; many counts and marquiſſes not having above three or four hundred pounds a year paternal eſtate; many ſtill leſs; and not a few enjoy the title without any eſtate whatever. Although the churches and convents of Naples are not to be compared with thoſe of Rome in reſpect of magnificent architecture, or for good paintings, they ſurpaſs them in rich jewels, and the quantity of ſilver and golden crucifixes, veſſels, and other ornaments. The cathedral is a grand Gothic edifice, and of all the palaces, that of the king is not only the moſt magnificent, but in the beſt ſtyle of architecture. The monaſteries and convents of both ſexes are computed at 149; beſides which there are 34 houſes for poor boys, girls, and women; 11 hoſpitals, 5 ſeminaries for eccleſiaſtics; four capital churches; 32 pariſh churches; 70 other churches and chapels; and about 150 oratories, or chapels of religious fraternities. The harbour, which is ſpacious, is protected by a mole; and the Bay of Naples is one of the fineſt in the world, being almoſt of a circular figure, about 30 miles in diameter, ſhut out from the Mediterranean by the Iſland of Caprea, and three parts of it ſheltered by a circuit of woods and mountains. Naples is 110 miles SSE. of Rome. Lat 40. 55. N. lon. 14. 20. E.

NAPLES, a kingdom of Italy, bounded on the NW. by the pope's territories; on the S. and W. by the Mediterranean; and on the E. by the Adriatic. Its greateſt length from NW. to SE. is upwards of 300 miles, and from NE. to SW. from 96 to 100; its breadth is variouſly eſtimated at from 90 to 30. It is divided into 12 provinces; namely, Terra di Lavora, which was the ancient Campania Felix, and of which the city of Naples is the capital; Principato Citeriore and Ulteriore (hither and farther); Moliſe; Baſilicata; Calabria Citeriore and Ulteriore; Abruzzo Citeriore and Ulteriore; Capitanata; Terra di Bari; and Terra di Otranto; the laſt three forming the ancient Apulia, (now called Puglio) on the E. ſide of the kingdom. The climate is extremely hot in ſummer; but the moſt diſagreeable part of the climate is the ſiroc, or SE. wind, which is very common in ſpring, and is ſtill more relaxing. In winter there is ſeldom any ice or ſnow except on the mountains. On account of its fertility, the country has been termed a terreſtrial paradiſe: it abounds with all ſorts of grain, the fineſt fruits, and vegetables of all kinds, with rice, flax, oil, wine, ſaffron, and manna; poultry, game, and fiſh are alſo plentiful and cheap. It affords alſo alum, vitriol, ſulphur, rock-cryſtal, marble, and ſeveral ſorts of minerals, together with fine wool and ſilk. Beſides theſe products, and the manufactures ſpoken of in the account of the city of Naples, waiſtcoats, caps, ſtockings, and gloves are alſo made of the hair or filaments of a ſhell-fiſh, which are warmer than thoſe of wool, and of a beautiful gloſſy green. The principal mountains are the Appenines, which traverſe it from S. to N. and the celebrated volcano, Mount Veſuvius. One of the greateſt inconveniences to which this kingdom is expoſed is earthquakes (See CALABRIA) which the eruptions of Mount Veſuvius contribute in ſome meaſure to prevent. The eſtabliſhed religion is the Romiſh; and the clergy and convents poſſeſs two thirds of the whole kingdom; but the Jews are allowed to ſettle here. The inhabitants of this country have, at all times, borne but an indifferent character among other nations; gluttony is here a predominant vice, while inſtances of ebriety are ſaid to be comparatively rare. In the female ſex the paſſion for finery is almoſt ſuperior to any other; and chaſtity is not accounted the characteriſtic virtue of the country. The breach of the conjugal vow ſometimes occaſions quarrels and aſſaſſinations among people of an inferior rank; and, in the metropolis, aſſaſſinations are often perpetrated from much leſs cogent motives. Theſe vices are attributed to the ſlavery and oppreſſion under which they groan, and to a radical defect in the adminiſtration of juſtice. In 1734, the Spaniards made themſelves maſters of Naples and Sicily, for the Infant Don Carlos, and in 1736, the emperor, peror, by a formal inſtrument, ceded both theſe kingdoms to his heirs male and female, and in default thereof, to his younger brother and ſiſters.

NAPOLI-DI-MALVASIA, a ſea-port of Turkey in Europe, in the Morea; ſeated on the promontory of Malvaſia, at the entrance of the Gulf of Napoli di-Romania. It has a fine harbour, and a long wooden bridge, which joins it to Terra-Firma, and was formerly noted for a temple of Eſculapius.

NAPOLI DI ROMANIA, a ſea port of Turkey in Europe, in the Morea; ſeated at the bottom of a bay of the ſame name. It has a good and ſpacious harbour, with a narrow mouth, through which one ſhip only can enter at a time, and defended by a ſtrong caſtle. It is a large place, inhabited by Greeks, Turks, and Jews; and is 56 miles SW. of Setines. Lat. 37. 36. N. lon. 23. 4. E.

Nappay, Yorkſ. SE. of Settle. Nappay, Yorkſ. by the Uſe, near Aſcrig. Napſbury, Herts, near London-Colony.

NAPTON, a town of Warwickſ. near Ladbroke. Market on Thurſday.

NARA, a town of Niphon, in Japan.

NARBARTH, a town of Pembrokeſh. ſeated on the ſummit of a hill, 12 miles N. of Pembroke, and 229 W. by N. of London. It had formerly a caſtle, the ruins of which are ſtill viſible. Market on Wedneſday.

NARBONNE, an ancient fortified city in the depart. of Aude. In the time of the Romans, it was the capital of that part of Gaul, called Gallia Narbonenſis. Some Roman inſcriptions, in different parts of the city, are ſtill viſible, and the canal, from the river Aude, through the city, to the Mediterranean, was cut by them. Narbonne is famous for its honey, wheat, much eſteemed for ſeed corn and olives, and contains about 10,000 inhabitants. In the cathedral, which is remarkable for its noble choir, is the tomb of Philip the Bold, king of France. It is ſituated in a low plain, expoſed to inundations from ſeveral adjoining rivers, 5 miles from the Mediterranean, and 75 E. by S. of Toulouſe.

NARBOROUGH, a ſmall iſland near the coaſt of Chili, diſcovered by Sir John Narborough. It affords wood and water, but is without inhabitants. Lat. 45. 12. S.

Narborough, Northamptonſ. near Eaſt Deeping. Narborough, Norfolk, W. of Caſtle-Acre. Narborough, 4 miles W. of Leiceſter.

NARDO, a town of Otranto, Naples.

NARENTA, a town in Venetian Dalmatia, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, 36 miles NNW. of Ragufa. In the year 987 the Venetians made themſelves maſters of this town, then poſſeſſed by the Sclavonians, who under the title of Narentani, had ſeated themſelves here, moleſting the navigation of theſe parts.

Narford, Norfolk, on the Nar, E. of Narborough.

NARNI, a rich and handſome town of Spoleto, in Italy, ſeated on the river Nera. Here are the ruins of a marble bridge, built by Auguſtus, one of whoſe arches was 150 feet high and 200 broad, as alſo of an aqueduct that brings water from a ſpring at the diſtance of 15 miles. It is 16 miles S. of Spoleto, and 38 NNE. of Rome.

NAROVA, or Narva, a river of Ruſſia, noted for two picturesque waterfalls. It iſſues from the Tchoudſkoi Lake, and watering Narva, flows into the Gulf of Finland, 8 miles below that town.

Narraghmore, in Kildare, Leinſter.

Narrowdale, Staffordſh. E. of Leek.

Narrow-Water, in Down, Ulſter, below Newry, on the Narrow-Water, or river of Newry.

NARSAPOUR, a town in the Circar of Ellore, a town of Golconda, and a town of the Myſore country; all in Hindooſtan.

NARSINGAPATAM, a town of Hindooſtan, ſituated in the territory of Cattack, near the coaſt of the Bay of Bengal, 45 miles S. of Cattack.

NARVA, a town of Ingria, in Ruſſia, in the government of Revel. The houſes are built of brick, ſtuccoed white; and it has more the appearance of a German than of a Ruſſian town. In the ſuburbs, called Ivangorod, or John's Town, the ſtupendous remains of an ancient fortreſs, built by Ivan Vaſſilievitch the Great, impend, in a picturesque manner, over the ſteep banks of the river. The principal exports from it are hemp, flax, timber, and corn. Near it is the celebrated ſpot where Charles XII. of Sweden, in his 19th year, gained a complete victory over the Ruſſian army in 1700. It is ſituated on the river Narova, 8 miles from its mouth, in the Gulf of Finland, 68 miles SW. of Peterſburgh. Lat. 59. 18. N. lon. 27. 52. E.

NARWAH, or NARWHA, a town of Hindooſtan, in the province of Agra, ſeated near the river Cally Sinde, which falls below it, into the Chumbull, a branch of the Jumna. It is 98 miles S. of Agra.

Naſeby, or Navelſby, Northamp. 12 miles North of Northampton, famous for for a victory gained by the Parliamentarians over the Royaliſts in 1645. Naſh, Bucks, in Waddon pariſh. Naſh, Dorſetſhire, in the pariſh of Broad Windſor. Naſh, Hants, E. of Chriſtchurch. Naſh, Herefordſh. near Preſtayne, in Radnorſh. Naſh, Kent, in the pariſh of Boughton-under-the-Bean. Naſh, Monmouthſh. near Newport-Haven. Naſh, Shropſh. E. of Ludlow. Naſh, Suſſex, in Steyning pariſh.

Naſh in Wexford, Leinſter.

Naſh Court Kent, near N. Foreland. Naſh Mill, Herts. N. of King's Langley. Naſing, Eſſex. near Waltham. Naſs, Glouceſt. in Lidney pariſh.

NASSAU, a very fertile county in the Wetterau, circle of Upper Rhine, containing mines of iron, copper, and lead. The preſent reigning princes, among whom it is divided, are Naſſau Weilburg, Naſſau Saarbruck Uſingen, and Naſſau Saarbruck Saarbruck. The town of Naſſau is ſeated on the river Lahn, 22 miles NW. of Mentz. Near it, on a high mountain, facing the town, formerly ſtood Naſſaubergra, a place of very great antiquity, and the original houſe of the Naſſau family, but now a fief of Treves.

NASSAU DIETZ. See DIETZ.

Naſſe-Fair, Naſſe Shell, and Naſſe-White Kent, E. of Margate Bay. Naſſet Sharp, Naſſet Sheer, and Naſſet Peter Kent, near the Weſt Swale. Naſſington, Northamp. NE. of Fotheringay-Caſtle. Naſtwood. Hants, near Woodhay.

NATA, ST. JAGO DE, a ſea-port of Panama, in South America, ſeated in a pleaſant, fertile country, on the Bay of Panama, 70 miles SW. of Panama.

NATAL, a country on the SE. coaſt of Caffraria, in Africa, lying NE. of the Cape of Good Hope, inhabited by the Boſhmen Huttentots. The river Natal, which forms its northern boundary, runs into the Indian Ocean, in lat. 29. 30. S.

NATANGEN, a province of Pruſſia, bounded on the N. and E. by the Pregel, on the S. by Ermeland, and on the W. by the Friſche Haff. It is populous, well-cultivated, well wooded, and yields all ſorts of game, and plenty of fiſh.

NATCHITOCHES, or RED RIVER, a fine river of Louiſiana, which falls into the Miſſiſſippi, in lat. 31. 18. N. and lon. 91. 47. W.

Nately, Hants, NE. of Baſingſtoke. Nately Hall Lane. near Garſtang.

Natenese, in Kerry, Munſter.

Nathy, Weſtmorl. near Kirby-Steven. Natland, Weſtmorl. SE. of Kendal.

NATOLIA, or ANADOLI, a country formerly called Aſia Minor; the moſt weſtern part of Turkey, in Aſia; it is a large peninſula, extending from the river Euphrates, as far as the Archipelago, the Sea of Marmora, the Dardanelles, and the Strait of Conſtantinople, which ſeparate it from Europe on the W. It is bounded on the N. by the Black Sea, and on the S. by the Mediterranean. In its modern diviſion it comprehends the provinces of Anatolia, Caramania, Amaſia, and Aladulia. Anciently it contained Bithynia, Paphlagonia, Galatia, Phrygia, Myſia, Eolia, Ionia, Lydia, Caria, Doris, Piſidia, Lycia, and Pamphelia. It is now governed by a beglerberg, who reſides at Kiutaja, under whom are ſeveral ſangiacks. The air is temperate and wholeſome, the ſoil, in general, fertile, and the commerce conſiderable, particularly in carpets, leather, drugs, cotton, and ſilks. It is croſſed by a chain of mountains, formerly called Taurus, from E. to W. and watered by a great number of rivers.

NATOLIA PROPER. See ANATOLIA.

NAVAN, a town of Meath, in Leinſter, ſeated at the conflux of the Blackwater and the Boyne, 7 miles NE. of Trim, and 28 NW. of Dublin.

NAVARINO, a large and populous town of the Morea, with an excellent harbour, the beſt frequented in the whole peninſula, and defended by a citadel. It is ſituated on the W. coaſt, on the Gulf of Zonchio, 8 miles NE. of Modon, and 17 NW. of Coron.

NAVARRE, a country of Europe, and formerly a kingdom, lying partly in France and partly in Spain, and divided into the Upper and Lower. The Upper, which belongs to Spain, extends about 54 miles in length and 45 in breadth. The air is more mild, temperate and wholeſome, than in the neighbouring provinces of Spain; and, though a mountainous country, it is pretty fertile, abounding in good corn, excellent wine, veniſon, and wild fowl, good paſtures, exceedingly well ſtocked with ſheep and goats; and alſo in iron-mines. The inhabitants are polite, hardy, lively, and laborious. It is divided into five juriſdictions, whoſe capital towns are Pampeluna, Eſtella, Tudela, Olita, and St. Gueſca. Lower Navarre is ſubject to France, and now forms the department of the Lower Pyrenees. It is ſeparated from Spaniſh Navarre by the Pyrenees, and is a mountainous, barren country, about 20 miles in length and 12 in breadth. In 1620, Louis XIII. ſon of Henry Henry IV. annexed Lower Navarre and Bearn to the crown of France.

NAVARRE, NEW, a province in Mexico, bounded on the S. by Cuſiacan, and on the W. by the Gulph of California. The chief Spaniſh town is St. Juan de Cinalos.

NAVARREINS, a town in the dept. of the Lower Pyrenees, ſeated on the river Gave d'Oleron, 18 miles W. of Pau.

Nevenby, Linc. Naveſtock, Eſſex, near Brentwood. Naughton, Suffolk, E. of Bildeſton.

NAUGHTON, a town in Fifeſhire, 6 miles N. of Cupar.

NAVIDAD, a ſea-port of Mexico, on the S. Sea. Lat. 19. 0. N. lon. 106. 0. W.

NAVIGATORS' ISLANDS, a cluſter of iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean. The inhabitants are very ſtout, and accounted a handſome race of men, ſcarcely one to be ſeen among them leſs than ſix feet high, the women delicately beautiful; their canoes, houſes, &c. well conſtructed; and they are much more advanced in internal policy and order than any of the iſlands in this ocean. They are ſurrounded by a coral reef; but boats may land with great ſafety. Lat. 14. 19. S. lon. 191. 0. E.

Naul, in Dublin, Leinſter.

NAUMBURG, a town of Jauer, and a town of Sagan, both in Sileſia; a town and biſhopric of Upper Saxony, united to the Electoral Houſe; and a town of Mentz, Lower Rhine.

Naunton, Glouceſterſh. in Cheltenham pariſh. Naunton, Glouceſterſh. 6 miles SW. of Stow, and 7 from Winchcombe. Naunton, Suffolk, near Letheringham. Naunton, Worceſterſh. N. of Perſhore. Naworth Caſtle, Cumberland, 10 miles from Carliſle, near the Gelt.

NAXKOW, a town of Denmark, in the Iſle of Laland, with a harbour commodious for trade, and a plentiful fiſhery. It is 60 miles SW. of Copenhagen. Lat. 54. 52. N. lon. 11. 31. E.

NAXOS, or NAXIA, the moſt fertile iſland in the Archipelago, about 80 miles in circumference. The whole iſland is covered with orange, olive, lemon, cedar, citron, pomegranate, fig, and mulberry trees, and their wine ſtill maintains its former excellence. It has no harbour, and yet they carry on a conſiderable trade in barley, wine, figs, cotton, ſilk, flax, cheeſe, ſalt, oxen, ſheep, mules, and oil. They burn only oil of maſtick, though olive-oil is exceedingly cheap. It is inhabited both by Greeks and Latins, and contains about 8000 inhabitants, and between 40 and 50 villages. They have here a mine of emery, which is ſo common, and ſo cheap, that the Engliſh often uſe it for ballaſt. The female dreſs of this iſland has ſomething truly abſurd in its appearance. The two wings of black velvet, which they fix behind to their ſhoulders, are altogether prepoſterous. The Greek women at Smyrna cover their breaſt with a ſingle gauze: at Naxia they wear a heavy ſtomacher or breaſt-piece of velvet, covered with embroidery and ſmall pearls; and they wear round their loins a ſort of circular ſhelf, calculated to ſupport the ends of a kind of laced lappets hanging down from their ſhoulders. They add to this cumberous dreſs, all the coquetry of behaviour they can aſſume; they paint, blacken their eye-brows and eye-laſhes, and cover their face with patches, made of the leaves of a black, ſhining talc, which they find in the iſland; theſe patches, or pretended blotch-covers, they ſometimes cut triangularly, ſometimes like a ſtar; but a patch like a creſcent, placed between the eyes, is thought to be irreſiſtibly beautiful. When they return out of the country to their town-houſes, they will have perhaps 40 women in their train, ſome on aſſes, and ſome on foot; one of whom carries a napkin or two; a ſecond a petticoat; a third a pair of ſtockings, and ſo on: all of which compoſes a very whimſical kind of proceſſion to ſtrangers.

NAXOS, or NAXIA, a conſiderable town, capital of the Iſle Naxos, over againſt the Iſle of Paros, with two archbiſhops' ſees, the one Greek and the other Latin. It is one of the moſt beautiful places in the Grecian archipelago. Lat. 37. 8. N. lon. 25. 59. E.

NAYLAND, a town of Suffolk, with a manufacture of ſoap, bays, and ſays. It is ſituated on the river Stour, which divides it from Eſſex, 6 miles N. of Colcheſter, and 56 NE. of London. Market on Friday.

Nayland Point, Kent, near Margate-Bay. Nayleſey, Somerſ. between Clevedon and Briſtol. Nayleſworth, Glouceſ. near Minching-Hampton.

NAZARENES, or NEZEIRES, THE, a ſect of Aſiatic Chriſtians: among the feſtivals which they obſerve is one, which they call that of the womb; on which day they proſtrate themſelves before the women and embrace their knees, with an appearance of the deepeſt veneration. On this, and other feſtivals, when aſſembled in their places of worſhip, the windows are ſhut, the lights are extinguiſhed, guiſhed, and the moſt unbridled licentiouſneſs takes place.

NAZARETH, a ſmall village of Paleſtine, in Syria, where the monks of St. Francis have a convent; and a Moravian town of Pennſylvania, 47 miles N. of Philadelphia.

NAZE-POINT, on the coaſt of Eſſex, with the North Foreland, in Kent, 60 miles to the S. forms the mouth of the Thames.

Neagh, a river in Denbighſhire, which runs into the Conway, 6 miles below Llanroſt.

NEAGH LOUGH. See LOUGH-NEAGH.

Neal, in Mayo, Connaught.

NEATH, a large town of Glamorganſhire, ſeated on a river of the ſame name, over which is a bridge, where a number of ſmall veſſels come to load coal. In the neighbourhood are iron forges, extenſive tin works, ſmelting works for copper, and many coal-mines. A navigable canal, 12 miles in length, has been lately cut from hence to the county of Brecon. It is ſituated near the Briſtol Channel, 38 miles NW. of Llandaff, and 200 W. by N. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

Neath, a river in Brecknock and Glamorganſhire, which runs into the Briſtol Channel, near Coldfrank-Foreſt. Neb, a river in the Iſle of Man, which runs into the Iriſh Sea, at Peel-Caſtle.

NEBIO, a ruinous city of Corſica, 9 miles SW. of Baſtia.

NECAU, a town of Biledulgerid.

NECAUS, a town of Algiers, with a ſuperb moſque; it is ſeated in a territory abounding with excellent figs, 100 miles SW. of Conſtantina.

Necbels, Warwickſh. near Aſton. Necbels, Staffordſh. near Wolverhampton.

NECKAR, a river of Germany, which has it ſource in the Black Foreſt, croſſes the duchy of Wirtemburg, and the palatinate of the Rhine, and falls into the Rhine a little below Manheim, after having paſſed by Hailbron, Heidelberg, and other towns of leſs note.

NECKARS GEMUND, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine, ſituated on the Neckar, 5 miles E. of Heidelberg.

NECKAR'S-ULM, a town of Franconia, ſituated on the Neckar, 23 miles SE. of Heidelberg.

Neckton, Norfolk, E. of Swaffham. Nedham-Grange, Derbyſ. SW. of Bakewell. Nedderton, Northumberl. NW. of Rothbury. Nedging, Suffolk, near Bildeſton. Nedgingworth, Huntingdonſ. a hamlet of Holywell.

NED-ROMA, a town of Tremeſen, in Africa, ſituated in a charming country, ſurrounded with magnificent ruins, 50 miles WSW. of Oran.

NEDSJED, an extenſive province of Arabia, comprehending all the interior parts, and chiefly inhabited by Bedwins, of a warlike character; at once robbers and hoſpitable. It has Hedsjas on the W. and Hadramaut and Yemen on the S.

Needen, in Kerry, Munſter.

Needham Norfolk. near Harleſton.

NEEDHAM, a town of Suffolk, with ſome trade in Suffolk blues and cloths; the poorer ſort of women are employed in ſpinning and weaving bonelace. It is ſeated on the river Orwell, 10 miles NW. of Ipſwich, and 73 NE. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

NEEDLES, two ſharp pointed rocks at the NW. end of the Iſle of Wight, ſo called from their ſharp extremities. Here were formerly three of theſe lofty white rocks; but the talleſt of them, called Lot's Wife, in its ſhape reſembled a needle, which roſe 120 feet above low-water mark, being undermined by the waves, in the year 1776, overſet and totally diſappeared. Lat. 50. 42. N.

Needwood-Foreſt, Staffordſh. between the Trent, Dove, and Blyth; it is ſaid to exceed all the foreſts in England in the excellency of its ſoil, and the fineneſs of its turf.

NEEHEEHOW, or ONEEHOW, one of the Sandwich Iſlands, about 5 leagues W. of Atooi. The eaſtern coaſt is high, and riſes abruptly from the ſea; but the reſt of the iſland conſiſts of low ground, except a round bluff head on the ſoutheaſt point. It produces abundance of yams, and of a ſweet root; and it contains about 10,000 inhabitants.

Neen Savage, Shropſhire, N. of Clebury. Neesdon, Middleſex, 3 miles SE. of Harrow-on-the-Hill. Nelfern, a village near Newport, in Pembrokeſhire. The church has no pavement in it, and the frequent burials have raiſed the ground within it to 7 or 8 feet higher than without it. Nefin Carnarvonſhire.

NEFTA, a populous town of Tunis.

NEGAPATAM, a ſea-port of Tanjore, taken from the Dutch by the Engliſh in 1782, but reſtored at the peace. It is ſituated on the coaſt of Coromandel, 42 miles E. of Tanjore, and 150 miles S. of Madras. Lat. 10. 46. N. lon. 79. 56. E.

NEGOMBO, a ſea-port of Ceylon, 12 miles N. of Columbo.

NEGRAIS, a ſea-port and iſland near the SE. coaſt of Ava, on the E. ſide of the the Bay of Bengal, in the mouth of the river Perſaim. Lat. 15. 50. N. lon. 95. 33. E.

NEGRIL POINT, a promontory of Jamaica, on the W. coaſt, near Negril Bay, or Harbour. Lat. 18. 23. N.

NEGRO-CAPE, a promontory of Benguela. Lat. 16. 15. S. lon. 12. 30. E.

NEGROES ISLAND, one of the Philippine Iſlands, about 240 miles in circumference, producing chiefly rice and cacao. About 3000 of the inhabitants are tributary to the Spaniards.

NEGROLAND or NIGRITIA, called by the Arabs, SOUDAN, and by the natives AAFNOU, a vaſt extent, of country in Africa, through which the river Niger is ſuppoſed to run. It has a great deſert, called Zahara on the N. and ſtretches far to the S. but little more is known of the inland parts than the names of ſome of the towns and kingdoms of which it is compoſed. However, the Europeans have many ſettlements on the coaſt, where they barter European goods for ſlaves, gold-duſt, elephants' teeth, gums, and drugs.

NEGROPONT, an iſland of Turkey in Europe, near 100 miles long, and from 8 to 16 broad, with a harbour, which is commonly the ſtation of the Turkiſh ſhips. It abounds exceedingly in corn, wine, oil, fruits, fleſh, fiſh, and fowls, and proviſions are very cheap. It has a Greek archbiſhop's ſee. The captain-baſhaw reſides here, who commands the whole iſland. The bridge reaches from the city to the continent, acroſs the Strait of Negropont. This ſtrait was formerly called Euripus, and was much celebrated for the ſtated irregularities of its motions. This irregularity has baffled the reſearches of both ancients and moderns, to account for it ſatisfactorily. In the firſt eight days of the month, viz. from the 14th to the 20, and alſo in the 3 laſt days, the tide is regular both in its ebb and in its flood, but on the other days the ebb and flood return 11, 12, 13, and even 14 times within 24 or 25 hours. It was taken from the Venetians in 1469, by the Turks, after a ſix months ſiege, at the coſt of 40,000 men. The Venetians attempted to retake it in 1688, without effect. It is 30 miles NE. of of Setines, or Athens, and 260 SW. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 38. 30. N. lon. 24. 8. E.

NEHAVEND, a town of Irac, in Perſia, 63 mile S. of Amadan.

NEIDENBERG, a town of Oberland, in Pruſſia, 80 miles S. of Koningſberg.

Neilſton, a village of Renfrewſhire, 3 of Paiſley, with a cotton manufactory.

Neir, or Slieve Neir, a mountain in Down, Ulſter, in the barony of Upper Iveagh.

NEISSE, a city and principality of Pruſſian Sileſia. It is ſurrounded by thick walls and deep ditches, and moſt of the houſes are well built. The biſhop of Breſlaw generally reſides here, and has a magnificent palace. The air is very wholeſome, proviſions are cheap, and the inhabitants carry on a conſiderable trade in linens and wine. It is ſeated on the river Neiſſe (which riſes in the N. part of Bohemia, enters Luſatia, paſſes by Goritz Guben, &c. after which it runs into the Oder), 44 miles S. of Breſlaw. Lat. 50. 19. N. lon. 17. 35. E.

Neland, Suſſex, near Cuckfield.

NELLENBUGH, a town and land graviate of Auſtrian Suabia, 16 miles NW. of Conſtance.

Nelmes, Eſſex, E. of Rumford. Nelſton, Leiceſterſh. near Market Boſworth.

NELSON, a fort and ſettlement in N. America, on the W. ſide of Hudſon's Bay, ſeated at the mouth of the river Nelſon. It is held by the Hudſon's Bay Company. Lat. 57. 7. N. lon. 92. 35. W.

NEMÆA; a village in the Morea, famous in antiquity for the games celebrated here. It is 20 miles SW. of Corinth.

Nemel, Biſhops, Broad, St. George, Kings, Rowland, and Tracy, all in Devonſhire. Nemmet, Somerſetſhire, near Chewton.

NEMOURS, a town in the depart. of Seine and Marne, ſeated (on the ſpot where ſtood the town of Grex, in the time of Julius Cæſar) on the river Loing, 10 miles S. of Fontainbleau, and 26. S. of Paris.

NEN, or NINE, the principal river of Northamptonſhire, which riſes in the W. part of the county. It is made navigable at Northampton, leaves the county at Peterborough, and croſſing the Iſle of Ely, forms part of the W. boundary of Norfolk, and falls into the Lincolnſhire Waſh. It likewiſe communicates, by ſeveral channels, with the Great Ouſe.

*NENAGH, a town of Tipperary, Munſter, ſeated on a branch of the river Shannon, 75 miles from Dublin.

Neve-Sollers, Shropſhire, S. of Clebury.

Newfield. Suſſex, S. of Aſhburnham.

NEOCASTRO, a town and fortreſs of Romania, 12 miles North of Conſtantinople.

Neot's St. Cornwall, N. of Lefkard.

*NEOT'S

NEOT's, ST. a large well-built town of Huntingdonſhire, ſeated on the river Ouſe, over which is a ſtone bridge. It is 20 miles WSW. of Cambridge, and 56 NNW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

NEPEAN ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean, oppoſite Port Hunter, on the S. coaſt of Norfolk Iſland. It conſiſts entirely of one maſs of ſand, held together by the ſurrounding cliffs, which form a border of hard rocks. Notwithſtanding there was not the leaſt appearance of earth or mould on the iſland, there were upward of 200 very fine pines growing on it. The ſurface was covered with a kind of coarſe graſs.

NEPI, a town in the Patrimonio, Italy.

Neptune's Court, Hants, near Portſmouth.

NERAC, a handſome town in the dept. of Lot and Garonne, divided by the river Baiſe (which here becomes navigable) into two parts, Great and Little Nerac. The kings of Navarre, as dukes of Albret, had once a palace here. It is 19 miles SW. of Agen.

NERBUDDA, a river of Hindooſtan, which iſſues from a lake on the ſouthern confines of the province of Allahabad, and after a courſe of 550 miles almoſt due W. runs into the Gulf of Cambay, 31 miles N. of Surat.

NERICIA, or NERIKE, a fertile province of Sweden, having Weſtmanland on the N. and Sudermanland on the E. Here are ſeveral flouriſhing manufactures of hardware, and it has always been remarkable for forging arms, &c. Orebro is the principal town.

NERO, one of the Banda Iſlands, in the Eaſt-Indies. The Dutch have a ſettlement here called Fort Naſſau. The mountains are covered with trees, in which are birds of a very ſingular kind. Lat. 4. 40. N. lon. 129. 45. E.

Neroche Foreſt, Somerſetſh. W. of Ilminſter.

NERTCHINSK, a province and its capital, ſeated on the Nertcha, near its union with the Amur, in the Ruſſian government of Irkutsk. Lat. 51. 12. N. lon. 116. 30. E.

Neſbit, Durham, near Hartlepool. Neſebit, Northumberl. in Veſcy barony. Neſbe, Kent, S. of Rumney.

NESLE, a town in the dept. of Somme, ſeated on the river Lingon, 9 miles S. of Perronne, and 66 N. by E. of Paris.

NESS, LOCH, a beautiful lake in Inverneſſhire, 22 miles in length, and for the moſt part, one in breadth. It is ſheltered on the NW. by the high mountains of Urquhart and Mealſourvoney, and edged with coppices of birch and oak.

NESS, a river of Scotland, which iſſues from Loch Neſs and falls into the Frith of Murray, below Inverneſs.

Neſs, NW. of Cheſter, by the Dee. Neſs, Yorkſ. N. Riding, NW. of Slingſby Caſtle. Neſs, Great and Little, and Neſs Cliff, NW. of Shrewſbury. Neſterfield, Yorkſhire, E. of Maſham. Neſton, NW. of Cheſter, on the Dee. Neſwick, Yorkſh. E. Riding, near Watton-Abbey. Netham, Hants, E. of Alton. Netham-Houſe, Linc. SW. of Dannington-upon-Bane. Netherbeworth, Durham, E. of Newcaſtle. Netherbury, Dorſetſ. one mile S. of Beminſter. Netherby, Cumb. on the Eſk, near Longtown. Nether Cerne, Dorſetſ. near Cerne-Abbas. Nethercot, Glouceſ. in the pariſh of Burton-on-the-Wate. Nethercote, Warw. Nethercourt, Kent, W. of Ramſgate. Netherdale, Yorkſ. W. Riding, N. of Patley-Bride. Netherex, Devonſ. near Bradninch. Netherfield, Suſſex, W. of Battel. Netherhall, Cumb. near Egremont. Netherhall, Eſſex, in Roydon pariſh. Netherhall, Eſſex, near Great and Little Parndon, and the conflux of the rivers Lea and Stort. Netherhamp, Somerſetſhire, S. of Axbridge. Netherington, Wilts, near Saliſbury.

NETHERLANDS, or the LOW COUNTRIES, in German, NIEDERLANDE, a large country of Europe, anciently called Gallia Belgica. In the fifth century the Franes, a people of Germany, coming to ſettle in Gaul, founded a new kingdom, to which they gave the name of France. In the 9th century, the ſons of the emperor, Louis the Pious, having divided the dominions of their father, who poſſeſſed Germany, France, and Italy, a new kingdom was formed, comprehending Germany and France, which extended from the Mediterranean to the ocean, and contained a part of the Netherlands. It was called Lotharia, but did not long ſubſiſt, for it was ſoon divided into two; and that ſeated near the Mediterranean was called the kingdom of Burgundy; while the other, to the N. had the name of Auſtraſia. Neither did this laſt continue long, it being divided into ſmall provinces, under different names, which ſtill depended on the empire of Germany, and were called Lower Germany. In proceſs of time, the houſe of Burgundy purchaſed many of them, and was about to form them with Burgundy, into a kingdom; kingdom; but Charles the Bold, the laſt duke of Burgundy, being killed by the Swiſs in 1477, his part of the Netherlands devolved on his only child and heireſs, Mary; by whoſe marriage with the emperor Maximilian, the Netherlands became an acquiſition to the houſe of Auſtria. The emperor Charles V. king of Spain, in 1555, abdicated the ſovereignty of the Netherlands, and, ſometime afterward, the Spaniſh crown, in favour of his ſon Philip. The tyranny of this cruel bigot, Philip II. who endeavoured to introduce the inquiſition into the Low Countries, with the barbarities exerciſed by the duke of Alva, exaſperated the people to ſuch a degree, that they threw off the Spaniſh yoke, and under the conduct of William I. prince of Orange, formed the famous league of Utrecht, in 1579, which proved the foundation of the republic of the United Provinces. The provinces which compoſe this republic, are thoſe of Holland, Weſt Friſland, Guelderland, Utrecht, Overyſſel, and Groningen. After a long and bloody war, the Spaniards agreed to a truce of 12 years, with the United Provinces, the very firſt article of which acknowledged them to be free and independent ſtates. The war was renewed in 1621, till at laſt, by the treaty of Weſtphalia, in 1648, Philip IV. of Spain expreſsly renounced all claim to ſovereignty over the United Provinces. The other 10 provinces, however, returned under the dominion of Spain, but with very favourable ſtipulations, with reſpect to their ancient laws and liberties. On the death of Charles II. king of Spain, and the ſubſequent acceſſion of a branch of the houſe of Bourbon, to that monarchy, it was ſtipulated, by the treaty of Baden, in 1714, that the Spaniſh Netherlands ſhould return to the German branch of the houſe of Auſtria, in which they remained till the reign of Joſeph II. but not without diminution and diſmemberment; for ſome conſiderable parts were obtained by conqueſt, or ceſſion, by the French and Dutch. The only territories that belonged entirely to Auſtria, were thoſe of Namur and Mechlin. The Dutch had part of Brabant, Limburg, and Flanders. The French had Artois and the Cambreſis, and they had likewiſe part of Luxemburg, Flanders, and Hainault. But on the other hand, part of Guelderland, one of the Seven United Provinces, belonged to Auſtria, and another to Pruſſia. The emperor, Charles VI. left the Auſtrian Netherlands to his daughter Maria Thereſa, queen of Hungary and Bohemia, who married Francis, grand duke of Tuſcany, afterwards emperor. During her reign, no ſovereign could be more beloved; no people more content and happy. But her ſon Joſeph II. having projected many innovations in the conſtitution, both in church and ſtate, and enforcing them with violence, a univerſal ſpirit of revolt broke out; an army of 40,000 men roſe, as if by magic, to ſupport the renunciation of all allegiance, which ſeveral of the provinces now openly made; a congreſs was formed from the different ſtates, in whom the ſupreme government was veſted; and by the end of 1790, the Auſtrian forces were entirely expelled from the Netherlands. The new government, however, was not of long duration. Leopold II. (the ſucceſſor of the capricious Joſeph, who died in the early part of 1790) partly by force of arms, partly by conciliatory meaſures, and partly by the mediation of the courts of London, Berlin, and the Hague, recovered the entire poſſeſſion of his authority in theſe provinces, and that, apparently, to the ſatisfaction of the people; the miniſters of the mediating courts having guaranteed the reſtoration of the ancient Belgic conſtitution, as enjoyed under the happy reign of the empreſs queen, Maria Thereſa. But ſince the death of Leopold, his ſon Francis, having joined the conſpiracy againſt the French, theſe countries have endured the horrors and ravages of war, and been alternately in the poſſeſſion of the different parties. They are entirely in the poſſeſſion of the French, who have reduced them into departments, and annexed them to their republic. The Netherlands, in general, are 360 miles long, and 260 broad; and are bounded on the W. the N. and NW. by the German Ocean, and the Dutch United States; on the E. by Germany; and on the S. by France. The principal rivers are the Scheldt, Rhine, Maeſe, Moſelle, Sambre, and Lis; and there are many fine navigable canals, which are of great advantage to the commerce of the country. The air is temperate; but the mouths of the rivers and harbours are frozen up in winter. The ſoil is extremely fertile in corn and paſtures; and there are ſeveral fine manufactures of lace, lawns, cambrics, tapeſtry, &c.

Netherleigh, Glouceſ. in Weſtbury pariſh. Netherſet, Leiceſ. S. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Netherſtoke, Dorſet, in Halſtock lock parish. Netherthorp, Derbyſ. NW. of Bolſover. Netherthorp, Oxfordſ. near Banbury. Netherton, Cheſhire, near Frodſham. Netherton, Devonſh. near Sidmouth. Netherton, Northumb. SE. of Morpeth. Netherton, Worc. in Cropthorn parish. Netherton, Yorkſ. 3 miles SW. of Wakefield. Nethertou-Hall, Worceſterſh. near Bewdley. Nethervent, Monmouthſh. the low lands of the county. Netherwich, Worceſt. near Droitwich. Netherwood, Herefordſhire. NW. of Bromyard. Netiſheard, Norf. S. of Tunſtead. Netley, Hants, near Southampton Water. Netley, Shropſhire, near Longnor. Netswell-Croſs, Eſſex, near Sabridgworth. Netswell, Eſſex, SW. of Harlow. Nettilham, NE. of Lincoln.

Nettlebed*, Oxfordſ. 4 miles and a half from Henley.

Nettlecomb, Dorſetſhire, NE. of Bridport. Nettlecomb, Somerſetſhire, near Taunton. Nettleden, Berks, in Pitſton parish. Nettlepots, Yorkſ. N. Riding, on the Lune, near Stainmoor. Nettlerſitch, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Nettleſted, Kent, 3 miles S. of Weſt Malling. Nettleſted. Suffolk, S. of Needham. Nettleſton, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Nettleton, Lincolnſhire, near Thong Caſtle. Nettleton, Wilts, near Keynton-Weſt. Nettleworth, Durham, E. of Lancheſter. Nettleworth, Nottinghamſhire, NE. of Mansfield Woodhouſe.

NETTUNO, a handſome, but thinly peopled town, in the Campagna of Rome, ſeated in a fertile ſoil, at the mouth of the river Loracina, 24 miles SE. of Rome.

NEVA, a river of Ruſſia, which is an outlet to the Lake Ladoga, and falls into the Gulf of Finland, below Peterſburgh.

NEUBURG, a town of Suabia, on the Rhine: a town of Pruſſian Pomerelia; a town of Stiria; a town in the Upper Palatinate, ſituated on the Schwarza; and a town of Bavaria, capital of a duchy of the ſame name, ſituated on the Danube, 15 miles W. of Ingoldſtadt.

NEUCHATEL, a territory of Swiſſerland, which, with that of Vallengin, forms one principality, that ſtretches from the Lake of Neuchatel to the limits of the late province of French Comté in France, containing, in length, about 10 leagues, and 4 in breadth. By the death of the Ducheſs of Nemours, in 1707, the ſovereignty of Neuchatel and Vallengin was claimed by Frederic I. king of Pruſſia as heir to the Prince of Orange; his right was acknowledged by the ſtates of the country, and from him it deſcended to his great grandſon, Frederick-William II. The conſtitution of this country is a kind of limited monarchy. The inhabitants are Proteſtants, except in the two diſtricts of Landeron and Creſſier, where the Romiſh religion is predominant. In 1589, this populous principality entered into a ſtrict alliance with the cantons of Bern, Friburg, Soleure, and Lucerne. The air is healthy and temperate, but the ſoil not every where equally fertile; however, there are large vineyards, which produce white and red wine, which laſt is excellent. The paſtures on the mountains feed a great number of all ſorts of cattle, and there are plenty of deer in the forett, beſide large trouts, and other good fiſh, in the lakes and rivers. The people are ingenious, polite, active, and induſtrious.

NEUCHATEL, a lake of Swiſſerland, which ſtretches about 24 miles in length, from the town Yverdun to that of Neuchatel, at which extremity it has a communication with the Lake of Bienne by a narrow outlet. Its ſhores, near Yverdun, are covered with country houſes and cultivated farms.

Nevendon, Eſſex, SE. of Billericay.

Nevern, a river in Pembrokeſhire.

NEUFCHATEL, a handſome town of Swiſſerland, capital of a principality of the ſame name; but it is a ſmall place, containing not more than 3000 people. It lies partly on the little plain between the Lake of Neuchatel and the Jura, and partly on the declivity of that mountain; and ſome of its ſtreets, in courſe, are very ſteep. The chief article of exportation is wine produced from the neighbouring vineyards, and much eſteemed. Manufactures alſo of painted linens and cottons have been eſtabliſhed with ſucceſs. Many public works have been lately executed at Neufchatel, at an expence far exceeding the revenues of this little ſtate; but for theſe they are indebted to a private citizen, Mr. David Pury, who, beſide contributions in his life time, to the amount of 40 000l. left his country heir to a ſum of 160,000l.; he himſelf having none but diſtant relations. Among theſe public works, are the new townhouſe, and the ſuperb cauſeway leading toward the valley of St. Imier. Neufchatel has a grand and little council; the firſt is compoſed of 40 perſons; the ſecond conſiſts of 24 members, comprehending the mayor, who is preſident. Theſe two councils aſſemble regularly every every month. The town is ſituated on the lake of the ſame name, 25 miles NNW. of Bern.

NEUFCHATEL, a town in the dept. of Lower Seine, noted for excellent cheeſe, and commodiouſly ſeated on the river Arques, 20 miles SE. of Dieppe, and 75 NW. of Paris.

Nevil's Croſs, near Durham; where, in 1346, David Bruce, king of Scots, was defeated and taken priſoner by the Engliſh.

NEVERS, a conſiderable town in the department of Nievre, formerly capital of the Nivernois. It contains ſeveral fine buildings, particularly the ancient ducal palace, and has about 8000 inhabitants. The principal manufactures are china, glaſs, and works of enamel. It is ſeated on the river Loire, over which there is a handſome ſtone bridge, and at the end of it a fine large cauſeway, reaching to the town. It is 24 miles NNW. of Moulins.

NEUFCHATEAU, a town of Luxemburg.

NEUFCHATEAU, a populous, trading town in the department of Voſges, ſeated in a fertile ſoil, on the river Mouzon, 30 miles NNW. of Epinal, and 150 E. by S. of Paris; alſo a town in the department of the Aiſne, and a town in the department of Lower Seine.

NEUHAUSEN, a town of Samland, in Pruſſia, and a town in the duchy of Courland.

NEVIN, or NEWIN, a very poor town of Carnarvonſhire, ſeated on the Iriſh Channel, oppoſite to Pulhelly. Here Edward I. in 1284, on the conqueſt of Wales, held a round table, in imitation of King Arthur, and celebrated it with a dance and tournament. The concourſe was prodigious; not only the chief nobility of England, but numbers of others from foreign parts, graced the feſtival with their preſence. It is 20 miles SW. of Carnarvon, and 249 NW. of London. Market on Saturday.

NEVIS, a ſmall but very fruitful iſland of the Weſt Indies, divided from the E. end of St. Chriſtopher's by a narrow channel. It is a beautiful ſpot, little more than a ſingle mountain, which is very high in the middle, and covered with large trees up to the top. Here are ſprings of freſh water and a hot bath, much of the ſame nature as thoſe of Bath in England. It is divided into 5 pariſhes, and contains one town, Charles Town, which is fortified. It produces, on an average, one hogſhead of ſugar per acre, and about 4000 hogſheads in the whole. The number of inhabitants is about 6000 whites, and about 10,000 negroes. It is ſubject to the Engliſh. Lat. 17. 14. N. lon. 62. 95. W.

NEUMARK, a town in the reſpective territories of Styria, Carniola, Further Pomerania, and of Culm, in Pruſſia; alſo a town in the Upper Palatinate; a town of Saltzburg, Bavaria; and a town of Erzgeburg, Upper Saxony.

NEUSOL, a town of Upper Hungary with great mines of excellent copper ore in the adjacent mountains. It is ſituate on the river Gran, 10 miles N. of Chremnitz, and 104 E. of Vienna.

NEUSTADT, a town of Olmutz, in Moravia; alſo a town in the archduchy of Auſtria, of Koningratz, in Bohemia; of Mentz; of the palatinate of the Rhine; of Wurtzburg, Franconia; of Meiſſen; two of Middle Marche, Brandenburg; a town of Erzgeburg, of Coburg, and of Neuſtadt, all in Upper Saxony; of Calenburg, of Wolfenbuttle, and of Holſtein, in Lower Saxony; of Oppeln, in Sileſia; of Culmbach, Franconia; of Bavaria, on the Danube; of the Circle of Weſtphalia, 26 miles ESE. of Bremen; and of Finland, near the gulf of Bothnia, 24 miles N. of Abo.

Newark, near Glouceſter. Newark, Northamp. near Peterborough. Newark, Surry, in the pariſh of Send. Newark, Eſſex, partly in Norton, and partly in High Ongar.

NEWARK, a flouriſhing town of New America, in the ſtate of New Jerſey, 10 miles W. of New York.

* NEWARK-UPON-TRENT, a town of Nottinghamſhire, ſeated on the river Trent, over which is a bridge into a ſmall iſland, made by the river. Here is a handſome and moſt ſpacious market place. They trade chiefly in corn, cattle, wool, &c. and there is a conſiderable manufacture of malt, and a ſmall one of ſacking. It once had a magnificent caſtle of great importance, now in ruins. It is 20 miles NE. by E. of Nottingham, and 124 N. by W. of London, on the York road. Market on Wedneſday.

NEWBERN, the largeſt town in the ſtate of N. Carolina, in N. America, the county town of Craven county. It ſtands on a flat, ſandy, point of land, formed by the confluence of the Nens on the N. and the Trent on the S. the former being here a mile and a half wide, and the latter three quarters of a mile. It is 499 miles S. by W. of Philadelphia. Lat. 35. 9 N. lon. 77. 20. W.

Newarne, Glouc. a hamlet in Lidney. Newbarn, Herts, S. of St. Alban's. Newberns, Camb. N. of Ely. Newberrys, Herts, near Aldenham. Newberry, Eſſex, near Abury-Hatch. Newbiggin, Cumb. SE. of Carliſle. Newbiggin, Durham, W. of Lancheſter. Newbiggin, Durham, near the Foreſts of Teeſdale, and Lune. Newbiggin, Durham, SW. of Biſhop Auckland. Newbiggin, Lanc. near the Ken Sands and Foulney Iſle. Newbiggin, Northumberland, near Newcaſtle. Newbiggin, Northumb. near Norham-Caſtle. Newbiggin, Northumb. on the coaſt, S. of Coquet-Iſland, near Seaton, inhabited by fiſhermen. Here is a fine bay, ſecured from ſtorms, by high rocks, and capable of receiving veſſels of 60 tons burthen. Newbiggin, Northumb. S. of Hexham. Newbiggin, Northumb. SW. of Rothbury. Newbiggin, Weſtmorl. N. of Adleby. Newbiggin, Yorkſh. NW. of Rumbald-Kirk. Newbiggin, Yorſhire, SW. of Whitby. Newbiggin, Yorkſh. near Burrowby. Newbiggin, Yorkſhire, in Biſhopſdale, W. of Midlam. Newbiggin, Yorkſ. near Leeds. Newbiggin, Yorkſ. on the river Are, S. of Skipton, in Craven.

Newbliſs, in Monaghan, Ulſter.

Newbold, Cheſhire, by Aſtbury. Newbold, Derbyſ. near Cheſterfield. Newbold, Leiceſterſh. NE. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Newbold, Staffordſ. near Burton-upon-Trent. Newbold, Worceſ. near Alderminſter. Newbold Comin, Warw. in the pariſh of Lemington Priors. Newbold, N. and S. Yorkſhire, E. Riding, near N. and S. Cave. Newbold Pacis, Warwickſ. a mile from Morton Merial. Newbold Revel, Warw. between Brinklow and Monk's Kirby. Newbold-upon-Avon, Warwickſh. near Rugby. Newbold Verdon, Leiceſterſh. E. of Boſworth. Newborn, Suffolk, S. of Woodbridge.

NEWBOROUGH. See GOREY.

NEWBOROUGH, a ſmall town of N. Wales, in the Iſle of Angleſey, once the reſidence of the Princes of Wales, but now principally ſupported by making mats and ſea-reed graſs. It is ſeated on the river Brant, 15 miles SW. of Beaumaris, and 257 NW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Newborrow, Staffordſh. in Needwood-Forett, 5 miles from Lichfield. Newbottle, NE. of Durham. Newbottle, Northamptonſh. 2 miles from Brackley. Newbottle, Northamptonſh. 1 mile from Harpole. Newbottle, a town of Edinburgſh. 1 mile S. of Dalkeith. Newbottle, Rutland, NE. of North Luffenham. New Bounds, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells. New Bridge, Berks. New-Bridge, Cornwall, SW. of Kellington. New Bridge, Kent, near Staplehurſt. New-Bridge, Suſſex, NE. of Petworth.

New Bridge, in Kildare, Leinſter. New-Bridge, in Cork, Munſter. New-Bridge, in Limerick, Munſter. New-Bridge, in Wicklow, Leinſter. New-Buildings, in Derry, Ulſter.

Newburgh, Lancaſh. W. of Wigan. Newburgh, Northumb. near Hexham. Newburgh, Yorkſhire, near Burlington. Newburgh, Yorkſ. N. Riding, near Rhidale Vale, 10 miles from York. Newburn-upon-Tyne, a village in Northumb. on the W. ſide of Newcaſtle, inhabited chiefly by miners.

*NEWBURY, a large, well-frequented town in Berkſ. with ſpacious ſtreets and a large market-place. It was formerly eminent for the clothing manufacture, and ſtill makes a conſiderable quantity of ſhalloons and druggets, and many of the poor are employed in ſpinning. They alſo ſend a great quantity of malt to London. In the reign of Henry VIII. Orman John Winchcomb, commonly called Jack of Newbury, employed 100 looms in his own houſe; and in the expedition againſt the Scots, marched to Floddonfield with 100 of his own men, all armed and clothed at his own expence; he alſo built all the W. part of the church. It is ſeated on the river Kennet, which abounds with excellent trout, eels, and cray-fiſh, on the great road between London and Briſtol, 16 miles W. of Reading, and 56 W. of London. A well-ſupplied market on Thurſday.

NEWBURY, PORT, a ſea-port of Maſſachuſetts, which carries on a very conſiderable commerce with the W. India iſlands, as alſo the buſineſs of ſhipbuilding largely, and employs a few veſſels in the fiſhery. It is ſituated on the SW. ſide of the river Merrimak, 2 miles from the ſea, and 30 N. of Boſton.

Newby, Cumb. in Irthington pariſh. Newby, Yorkſ. near Scarborough. Newby, Yorkſ. NW. of Stokeſley. Newby, Yorkſ. SW. of Thirſk. Newby, Yorkſ. near Settle. Newby-Hall, Yorkſ. 2 miles from Boroughbridge. Newby-Stones, Weſtmorl. W. of Appleby. Newby-upon-Swale, Yorkſhire, in Richmond. Newby-upon-Wiſk, Yorkſ. E. of Bedall. Newcaſtle, Shropſh. near Clun-Foreſt.

NEWCASTLE, a ſmall town of Carmarthenſhire, in S. Wales, ſeated on the river Tyvy, 17 miles NW. of Carmarthen, and 219 WNW. of London. Mark. on Frid.

*NEWCASTLE,

*NEWCASTLE, or NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LINE, a conſiderable and well-built town in Staffordſh. with a manufactory of cloth, and a large one of hats, here being an incorporated company of felt-makers. In the neighbourhood are many manufactures of ſtone ware, the ſale of which is ſuppoſed to average, annually, about 100,000l. It is ſeated on a branch of the Trent, 15 miles N. of Strafford, and 149 NW. of London.

*NEWCASTLE, or NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, the largeſt and moſt populous town in Northumberland, ſituated among ſteep hills, on the Tyne, which is here a fine and deep river; ſo that ſhips of 8 or 400 tons burden may ſafely come up to the town, though the large colliers are ſtationed at Shields. It is ſo ſecure a haven, that veſſels when they have paſſed Tynemouth Bar, are in no danger either from ſtorms or ſhallows. It is defended by Clifford's Fort, which effectually commands all veſſels that enter the river. The town may be conſidered as divided into two parts, of which Gateſhead, on the Durham ſide, is one; and both were joined by a ſtrong bridge, which had ſtood above 500 years. It originally conſiſted of 12 arches, but by the embankment of the river for the purpoſe of forming the quays on the N. ſide, they were reduced to nine. On this bridge were houſes, which, in general, ſtood at ſome diſtance from each other. In 1771, a dreadful flood carried away four of theſe arches, with the houſes that ſtood upon them. This part of the bridge was rebuilt in 1779. The town riſes on the N. bank of the river, where the ſtreets, upon the aſcent, are exceedingly ſteep. Many of the houſes are built of ſtone; but ſome of them are of timber, and the reſt of brick. The caſtle, which is old and ruinous, overlooks the whole town. The exchange, churches, and other public buildings, are elegant; and the quay for landing goods is long and large. Here is a hall for the ſurgeons, a large hoſpital, built by the contribution of the keel-men, for the maintenance of the poor of their fraternity; and ſeveral charitable foundations. It is ſituated in the centre of the great collieries, which have for centuries ſupplied London, all the eaſtern, and moſt of the ſouthern parts of the kingdom with coal. This trade has been the ſource of great opulence to Newcaſtle; which, beſides, exports large quantities of lead, ſalt, ſalmon, butter, tallow, and grindſtones; and imports wine and fruit from the S. of Europe, and timber, iron, hemp, &c. from the Baltic and Norway. Ships are ſent hence to the Greenland fiſhery. It alſo poſſeſſes manufactories of ſteel, iron, and woollen cloth; and in the town and neighbourhood are ſeveral glaſs-houſes. The ſtreets in the old part of Newcaſtle are unſightly and narrow, and the buildings greatly crowded together; but ſome of the newer parts are handſome and commodious. The ſuburbs are chiefly inhabited by keel-men, a rough and ſturdy race, employed in carrying the coal down the river in keels, or lighters, to the large ſhips. Newcaſtle was made a borough by William the Conqueror, and the firſt charter which was granted to the townſmen for digging coal was by Henry III. in 1239; but, in 1306, the uſe of coal for fuel was prohibited in London, by royal proclamation, chiefly becauſe it injured the ſale of wood for fuel, great quantities of which were then growing about that city; but this interdiction did not long continue, and we may conſider coal as having been dug and exported from this place for more than 400 years. The caſtle was built by Robert Courthoſe, eldeſt ſon of William the Conqueror. Newcaſtle is 14 miles N. of Durham, 94 N. of York, and 271 N. by W. of London, on the great road to Edinburgh. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

NEWCASTLE, a town of N. America, in the ſtate of Delaware, firſt ſettled by the Swedes, about the year 1627, and called Stockholm, but afterward taken by the Dutch, and called New Amſterdam. When it fell into the hands of the Engliſh, it was called Newcaſtle. It was the firſt town ſettled on the river Delaware, and was formerly the ſeat of government. It now contains about 60 houſes, which have the aſpect of decay, and is ſeated on the W. bank of the Delaware, 30 miles SSW. of Philadelphia.

NEWCASTLE, a town or borough, in the county of Dublin, 10 miles WSW. of Dublin.

NEWCASTLE, a county in the ſtate of Delaware; alſo a town of Virginia, and a town, or village, on the N. coaſt of the iſland of Nevis.

Newcaſtle, in Dublin, Leinſter. Newcaſtle, in Down, Ulſter. Newcaſtle, in Meath, Leinſter. Newcaſtle, in Waterford, Munſter.

NEWCASTLE, a handſome town of Limerick, in Ulſter, 114 miles from Dublin.

Newceſtown, in Cork, Munſter.

Newchapel, Northumb. near Morpeth.

Newchapel, Staffordſ. NE. of Newcaſtle-underunder-Line. Newchapel, Surry, in Burſtow pariſh. New-Church. Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. New Church, Kent, 3 miles and a half N. of Romney. New-Church, Lanc. S. of Leigh. New Church, Monm. W. of Chepſtow Park. New College Manor, Berks, in E. Hendred pariſh. New Court, Heref. between the old Court Dowlas and the Golden Vale. Newdigate, in Surry, 5 miles SE. of Darking. In the E. part of this village is a medicinal ſpring, of the ſame nature as that of Epſom. New Dyke, Huntingdonſhire, between Brickmeer and Holme. Newell Hall, Yorkſh. N. of Ottley. Newenden, Kent, anciently a famous city of the Britons, but razed to the ground by the firſt king of the South Saxons, and rebuilt in the reign of Edward I. It has a bridge over the Rother, which here divides the county from Suſſex, 4 miles SE. of Cranbrook. Newenham, E. of Bedford. Newenham, Devonſhire, near Axminſter. Newenham, Devonſhire, near Plymton. Newenham, Hertfordſh. N. of Baldock. Newenham, Kent.

NEWENHAM, CAPE, a rocky point of conſiderable height, in the N. Pacific Ocean, on the W. coaſt of N. America. It forms the northern extremity of a vaſt bay, called Briſtol Bay, of which the promontory of Alaſka is the ſouthern boundary. Lat. 58. 42. N. lon. 162. 24. W.

NEWENT, a town of Glouceſterſhire, ſeated on a branch of the Severn, navigable for boats, 8 miles NW. of Glouceſter, and 114 WNW. of London. Some valuable mines of excellent coal, the beds of which are of great magnitude, have been lately diſcovered in this pariſh. A navigable canal is now making from hence to Hereford. Market on Friday.

Newenton, Kent, near Sittingbourn. Newenton, Wilts, NW. of Everley Warren. Newenton, Wilts, 2 miles N. of Malmſbury. New Eye Courſe, Kent, W. of Hithe. Newfield, Durham, NW. of Biſhop-Auckland. Newfield, Lincolnſh. near Glandford-Bridge.

New Ferry, in Derry, Ulſter.

NEWPIDLER-SEA, a lake of Hungary, 17 miles in length, and 6 in breadth. It is 20 miles S. by W. of Preſburg.

NEW-FOREST, a foreſt in Hampſhire, ſituated in that part of the county which is bounded on the E. by Southampton-Water, and on the S. by the Engliſh Channel. According to the plan taken of it in 1683 (the laſt on record,) it extends from Godſhell on the NW. to the ſea on the SE. about 20 miles, and from Hardley on the E. to Rin_wood on the W. about 15 miles. It contains within thoſe limits about 92,365 acres, ſtatute meaſure. Of theſe, however, only 63,845 acres are woods and waſte lands, the reſt are incloſed lands, held by the maſter keepers and groom keepers, with their reſpective lodges, purpreſtures or incroachments, &c. There are nine walks in it, and a keeper to every one, under a lord warden, beſides two rangers and a bow-bearer. King Henry VIII. built ſome caſtles in it, and it has now ſeveral pretty towns and villages. It has advantages of ſituation, with reſpect to conveyance by water carriage, and vicinage to Portſmouth dock-yards, ſuperior to every other foreſt, having, in its neighbourhood, ſeveral places for ſhipping timber. It was afforeſted by William the Conqueror, who expelled the inhabitants and laid waſte the country for that purpoſe. His ſon, William Rufus, was killed in this foreſt by an arrow ſhot by Walter Tyrrel, a French knight, and which is ſaid to have accidentally glanced againſt a tree.

NEWFOUNDLAND, a large iſland lying on the eaſtern coaſt of N. America, between 47 and 52 deg. N lat. It is 850 miles in length from N. to S. and 200 in breadth, at the baſe, from E. to W. It is a mountainous, barren country, and is much colder than England, being covered with ſnow five months in the year. It ſeems to have no inhabitants of its own, but in the ſummer-time is viſited by the Eſkimaux Indians. About 500 Engliſh families, however, continue here all the year, beſides the garriſon of St. John's, Placentia, and other forts, or villages, eaſtward, towards Cape Raze, and from thence to Cape Bona Viſta. The remainder, both of the country and coaſt, northward and weſtward, is entirely deſert. The whole coaſt of the iſland is a ſucceſſion of ſpacious and perfectly ſecure harbours, near each other; they all grow gradually narrower from the entrance, ſo that at the end there is ſcarcely room for a a ſingle veſſel to anchor. In the fiſhing ſeaſon it is reſorted to, by, at leaſt, 10,000 people, on account of the fiſhing-banks to the E. of this iſland, for here they cure the cod, which is carried, not only to England, but to all parts of Europe. There is great plenty of veniſon, fiſh, and fowls, but very little corn, fruit, or cattle; upon which account the inhabitants have not only their clothes and furniture, but likewiſe their proviſions, from England. In 1785, 292 Britiſh fiſhing veſſels, and 85 Britiſh trading ſhips, carried off from hence 591,276 quintals of fiſh for foreign markets. In 1787, 14,000 ſeamen were thought to be employed in theſe fiſheries.

Newforge, in Down, Ulſter.

Newgate, Linc. near Boſton. New-Grange, Yorſ. NW. of Leeds. New-Hall, Cheſh. SE. of Stockport. New-Hall, Cheſh. W. of Lyme. New-Hall, Derbyſhire, near Mansfield. New-Hall, Eſſex, near Harlow. New-Hall, Eſſex, 2 miles NE. of Chelmsford. New Hall, Eſſex, SE. of Malden. New-Hall, Herts. near Wadeſmill. New Hall, Lanc. NW. of Rochdale. New Hall, Lancaſ. near Warrington. New-Hall, Lancaſ. near Ormſkirk. New Hall, Warw. near Birmingham. New-Hall, Warw. S. of Sutton Colfield. New-Hall, Yorkſhire, near Barnſley. New-Hall, Yorkſhire, near Settle. New-Hall, Yorkſh. near Leeds. Newham, Northumb. N. of Ellingham. Newham Cumin, Northumb. in Veley barony. Newham, Derbyſhire. Newhaven, Kent, in Thanet Iſle.

NEWHAVEN, a ſmall but populous town of Suſſex, ſeated at the mouth of the river Ouſe. It has a little, though convenient harbour, incloſed with timber piers, and a quay on the E. ſide, and is 7 miles S. of Lewes, and 56 S. of London. Market diſuſed.

NEWHAVEN, a town of Connecticut, flouriſhing with ſeveral kinds of manufactures. It lies round the head of a bay, in Long Iſland Sound. Near the centre of the town is the public ſquare, which is encircled with rows of trees; and on it, or around it, are the public buildings, which are the ſtate-houſe; a univerſity, conſiſting of one college, called Yale College; a chapel; three churches for Congregationaliſts; and one for Epiſcopalians. Newhaven carries on a conſiderable trade with New-York, and the W. India iſlands, and is 70 miles NNE. of New-York.

NEWHAVEN, a town and river in the State of Vermont.

New Hithe, Kent, N. of Malling. New-Houſe, Cornw. near Launceſton. New Houſe, Middleſex, NW. of Twickenham. Newick, Suſſex, N. of Iſield. Newington, Kent, near Hithe and Folkſton. Newington, Oxfordſ. NE. of Dorcheſter. Newington Bagpath, Glouceſterſ. 6 miles from Tetbury. Newington Bloſſomville, Bucks, near Oulney. Newington Butts, between Southwark and Lambeth, and Walworth. Newington Green, Middleſex, between Iſlington and Newington Stoke, chiefly conſiſting of a handſome ſquare, with a graſs plot in the middle. Newington Longville, Bucks, near Water Eaton. Newington Stoke, Middleſex, the firſt village in the road from Shoreditch to Edmonton. It is extremely populous. Newinham, Kent, 4 miles and a half SW. of Feverſham. New Inn, Warwickſ. near Birmingham.

New Inn, in Galway, Connaught. New Inn, in Tipperary. Munſter, New Inn, or Nineteen Mile Houſe, in Meath, Leinſter, 19 miles from Leinſter.

Newkirk, Cumb. in Grayſtock pariſh. Newland, Cumb. among the mountains, near the head of the Derwent. Newland, Dorſetſh. in Sherborn pariſh. Newland, Dorſetſh. in Batcomb pariſh. Newland, Glouceſ. SE. of Monmouth. Newland, Kent, in Stoke pariſh. Newland, Warwickſh. in Exhall pariſh. Newland, Worceſterſ. near Great Malvern. Newland, Yorkſ. E. of Howden. Newland, Yorkſ. N. of Hull. Newland, Yorkſ. on the Are, SW. of Howden. Newland, Yorkſ. on the Calder, a little above Wakefield. Newlathes, Cumb. near Carliſle. Newlathes, Yorkſhire, N. of Barnetley. Newleam, Camb. near Wiſbeach. Newlin, Cornw. NW. of St. Michael's. Newlin, Cornwall, within Mountſbay, near Penzance. Newlodge, Surry SW. of Chertſey.

NEWMARK. See NEUMARK.

*NEWMARKET, a town in Cambridgeſhire, on the borders of Norfolk, conſiſting chiefly of one long well-built ſtreet, the N. ſide in Suffolk, and the S. ſide in Cambridgeſhire. It is chiefly celebrated for horſe-races (its heath being the fineſt courſe in England), and the two meetings in April and October, are the firſt in the kingdom, or, perhaps, the world. It is a great thoroughfare, in the road from London to Norfolk, and is ſituated in a healthy air, 14 miles NNE. of Cambridge, and 60 N. by E. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Thurſday.

NEWMARKET, a ſmall town of Flintſhire, 4 miles NE. of St Aſaph.

Newmeadow, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak.

New-Mill, in Cork, Munſter. New-Mills, in Tyrone, Ulſter.

New Mills, Glouceſterſhire, in Stroud pariſh. Newminſter, Northumberland, near Morpeth. Newmore, Cumberland, near Carliſle. Newmore, Northumberl. in Bothal lordſhip. Newnd Park, Suſſex, near Aſhdown-Foreſt.

NEWNHAM, a town of Glouceſterſh. ſeated on the W. ſide of the Severn, over which which it has a ferry. It has to this day the ſword of ſtate which King John gave with their charter. It is 10 miles SW. of Glouceſter, and 112 WNW. of London. Market on Friday.

Newnham, Hants, between Hartley-Row and Baſingſtoke. Newnham, Northamptonſh. S. of Daventry. Newnham, Northumberl. S. of Bamburgh-Caſtle. Newnham, SW. of Shrewſbury. Newnham, Warwickſhire, a hamlet of Aſton Cantilupe. Newnham-Bridge, Worceſ. NE. of Tenbury. Newnham Courtney, Oxfordſ. near Chiſlehampton. Newnham King's, Warwickſ. on the Avon, oppoſite to Rugby. Newnham Paddox, Warwickſh. 5 miles from Rugby. Newnham Warren, Oxfordſhire, near Wallingford. Newnis, Shropſhire, SW. of Elleſmere. Newton-Long, Wilts, between Aſhley and Brokenborough. New-Park, Glouceſterſh. S. of Berkeley. New-Park, Huntingd. S. of Kimbolton. New-Park, Lanc. near Ormſkirk. New-Park, Surry, between Kingſton and Richmond. It is one of the fineſt parks in England, made in the reign of King Charles I. and encloſed with a brick wall 11 miles in compaſs. New-Park, Worc. near Eveſham. New-Paſſage, a ferry on the Severn, 8 or 10 miles above Briſtol, by which the mail is conveyed to Milford Haven. It is much ſafer than the old paſſage called Auſt Ferry, a mile or two above it. New-Place, Herts, SW. of Sawbridgworth.

*NEWPORT, a town of Tipperary, in Munſter, 86 miles SW. of Dublin.

NEWPORT, a large well-frequented town of Hampſhire, in the Iſle of Wight, with a manufacture of ſtarch. It is called in Latin, Medina, from whence the whole iſland, on the E. and W. ſides of it, is called E. and W. Medina. It is ſituated almoſt in the centre of the iſland, on the river Cowes, (which falls 7 miles below it, into the ſea, and which is navigable up to the quay here for ſmall veſſels), 6 miles S. of Cowes, and 91 SW. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

*NEWPORT, a town in Shropſhire. It has a handſome free-ſchool and a market-houſe; and is 17 miles NE. of Shrewſbury, and 140 NW. of London. Market on Saturday.

NEWPORT, a town of Monmouthſh. ſeated on the river Uſk, 4 miles from its mouth. It has a good harbour, whence it has its name; and is 19 miles SSW. of Monmouth, and 152 W. by N. of London. Market on Saturday.

NEWPORT, a town of Pembrokeſhire, ſeated at the foot of a high hill, on the Nevern, a fine navigable river, at the bottom of a bay of the ſame name, 18 miles NE. of St. David's, and 235 WNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

NEWPORT, a ſmall village of Cornwall, which ſends two members to parliament, 3 miles N. of Launceſton, and 214 W. by S. of London.

NEWPORT, a ſea-port of N. America, in the ſtate of Rhode Iſland. Its harbour, which is one of the fineſt in the world, ſpreads weſtward before the town, which lies upon a gradual aſcent, and exhibits a beautiful view from the water. It is 20 miles SE. from Providence.

Newport, Devonſhire, one mile from Barnſtaple. Newport, Glouceſterſh. in Berkeley pariſh. Newport, Eſſex, joins to Debden. The neighbouring fields produce great quantities of ſaffron.

Newport-Key, Yorkſhire, on the Tees, E. of Stockton.

*NEWPORT PAGNEL, a town of Buckinghamſhire, ſeated on a ſmall river which ſoon after falls into the Ouſe. It is noted for the manufacture of bone-lace, for which it is a ſort of ſtaple; and it flouriſhes conſiderably on that account. It is 14 miles ENE. of Buckingham, 15 SSE. of Northampton, and 51 NNW. of London. A market on Wedneſday for lace, and another on Saturday for corn and proviſions.

NEWPORT PRATT, a ſea-port of Mayo, in Connaught, ſituated on a river which runs into Clew Bay, near its mouth. It is 8 miles W. of Caſtlebar, and 123 NW. of Dublin.

NEW RIVER, a fine artificial ſtream, brought from two ſprings at Chadwell and Amwell, near Ware, in Hertfordſh. for the ſupply of the metropolis with water. It was finiſhed in 1613, by Sir Hugh Middleton, a rich citizen of London, who expended his whole fortune in the undertaking. This river, with all its windings, is 38 miles and three quarters, and 16 poles long; and is under the management of a flouriſhing corporation, called the New-River Company. See ISLINGTON and AMWELL.

NEWRY, a conſiderable town of Down, in Ulſter, ſituated on the ſide of a ſteep hill, at the foot of which is the NEWRY-WATER, having over it two ſtone bridges, and there is a third bridge over a navigable canal, open for veſſels of 70 tons burden, by which it has a communication with Lough Neagh and Carlingford-Bay. Newry is ſo much improved in its ſhipping trade, buildings, and the linen manufacture, that it is now the largeſt town in the county. It is 49 miles N. of Dublin.

Newſam, Yorkſhire, near Howden. Newſam, Yorkſh. in the pariſh of Kirby-on-the-Mount. Newſam, Yorkſh. NW. of Ravenſworth Caſtle. Newſam, Yorkſ. E. of Slingſby Caſtle. Newſam, Yorkſ. near Kighley. Newſam, Yorkſ. N. of Giſborn. Newſells-Bury, Herts, near Royſton. Newſham, Durham, on the Tees, 5 miles from Darlington, Barnard's Caſtle, and Richmond. Newſham, Northumb. N. of Seaton-Delavale. Newſham-Abbey, Linc. NE. of Glandford-Bridge.

NEWSOL. See NEUSOL.

Newſted, Nottinghamſ. in Popplewick pariſh. Newſtede, Lincolnſ. between Stamford and Uffington. Newſtede, Linc. in Axholm Iſle. Newthorp, Nottingh. near Codnor-Caſtle. Newthorp, Yorkſh. near Sherborn. Newtimber, Suſſex. E. of Stening.

NEWTON, a ſmall town of Lancaſh. communicating with all the late inland navigations. It is 5 miles N. of Warrington, and 190 NW. of London. Market on Saturday. Fairs on Auguſt 12 and May 17.

NEWTON, a town of Montgomeryſh. in N. Wales, ſeated on the river Severn, trading in flannels. It is 7 miles SW. of Montgomery, and 169 WNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

NEWTON, a town of Hampſhire, in the Iſle of Wight. Its creek, or haven, at high water, is able to receive veſſels of 500 tons burden, and affords the beſt ſecurity for ſhipping of any in the iſland. It is 14 miles S. of Southampton, and 93 miles W. by S. of London. Market diſuſed.

Newton, Berkſhire, near Hungerford. Newton, in Hawkſton pariſh, 4 miles from Cambridge. Newton, Camb. near Wiſbeach. Newton, near Cheſter. Newton, Cheſhire, near Middlewich. Newton, Cheſhire, NE. of Stockport. Newton, Cheſhire, near Malpas. Newton, Cheſhire, near Hyle Lake. Newton, Cheſhire, near Tattenhall. Newton, Cumb. near Solway Frith. Newton, Cumb. in Englewood Foreſt, near Penrith. Newton, Devonſ. E. of Biddiford. Newton, Dorſetſhire, in the Iſle of Purbeck, in Studland pariſh. Newton, Durham, NW. of Darlington. Newton, Eſſex, in Great Dunmow pariſh. Newton, Glamorganſ. between Cowbridge and Pile. Newton, Hampſhire, NW. of King's-Clear. Newton, Hampſhire, SE. of Alton. Newton, Heref. near Bromyard. Newton, Heref. SE. of Leominſter. Newton. Lanc. 1 mile S. of Kirkham. Newton, Lanc. N. of the Ken Sands. Newton, Lanc. NE. of Manchester. Newton, Lancaſ. N. of Hornby Caſtle. Newton, Leiceſterſ. S. Aſhby-de-la Zouch. Newton, Linclonſ. near Fokingham. Newton, Lincolnſ. between Gedney-Fen and Cambridgeſhire. Newton, Norfolk, near Windham. Newton, Norfolk, near Caſtle-Acre, and South-Acre. Newton. Northamp. 1 mile from Geddington. Newton, Northamp. 2 miles from Archeſter. Newton, Northumberland, SW. of Rothbury. Newton, Northumb. W. of Morpeth. Newton, Nottingh. E. of Cheſterfield. Newton, Glouceſterſ. in Rockingham pariſh. Newton, Shropſhire, near Welchampton. Newton, Shropſh. S. of Wem. Newton, Shropſh. in Shrewſbury Liberty. Newton, Staff. near Blithfield. Newton, Suffolk, near Sudbury. Newton, Warw. near Seckington. Newton, Warw. NE. of Rugby. Newton, Wilts, NW. of Salisbury. Newton, Yorkſ. E. of Bedal. Newton, Yorkſhire, S. of Eaſingwould. Newton, Yorkſhire, NE. of Stokeſley. Newton, Yorkſ. near Conſtable Burton. Newton, Yorkſhire, N. of Pickering. Newton, Yorkſ. W. Riding, in Bowland Foreſt. Newton, Yorkſ. N. of Leeds. Newton, Yorkſhire, SE. of Wetherby. Newton-Abbot, Devonſhire. Newton-Archdeacon, Durham, NW. of Darlington. Newton Bagpeth Glouceſt. near Tetbury. Newton-Bank, Yorkſhire, in Gargrave pariſh. Newton-Beaulieu, Durham near Cotham.

Newton Breda, in Down, Ulſter.

Newton Burdet, Leiceſterſ. NE. of Billeſdon.

NEWTON BUSHEL, a large, but meanly built town in Devonſhire, ſeated on the river Teign, 15 miles S. by W. of Exeter, and 188 WSW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Newton Chapel, Cheſh. N. of Preſtbury. Newton Cold, Leiceſterſhire, near Aſhby-Folville. Newton-Dale, Yorkſhire, N. of Pickering. Newton, Eaſt, Yorkſh. on the coaſt E. of Burton Conſtable. Newton, Eaſt, Yorkſh. near Rydal. Newton-Ferters, Cornw. E. of Leſkard. Newton-Ferris, Devonſ. SE. of Plymouth, near Holberton. Newton Fryers, Devonſh. near Crediton. Newton-Hall, Northumb. by Ovingham. Newton-Hall, Yorkſh. E. of New Malton. Newton-Hall, Yorkſ. near Ripley. Newton-Hanſet, Durham, near near Brantoft. Newton Harcourt, Leiceſterſh. SW. of Billſton. Newton-in-Mackerfield, or the Willows, Lancaſhire, between Warrington and Wigan. Newton-Kings, Derbyſhire, near Repton. Newton-Kirk, Northumb. N. of Cheviot-Hills. Newton Kyme, Yorkſ. near Tadcaſter. Newton-Long, Durham, near Cotham. Newton Long, Wilts, near Malmſbury. Newton Low, N. of Durham. Newton-Maiden, Dorſetſ. NW. of Frampton. Newton Merrit, Yorkſh. near Stapleton, on the Tees. Newton Mulgrave, Yorkſh. NW. of Whitby. Newton-Owler, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs. Newton Petrock, Devonſ. near Milton. Newton-Peverel, Dorſetſh. near Sturminſter-Marſhall. Newton-Poplar, Devonſ. near Sidmouth. Newton Purſell, Oxfordſhire, SE. of Mixbury. Newton-Regny, Cumberland, near Penrith. Newton, St. Low, Somerſetſh. between Bath and Penſford. Newton-Solney. Derbyſ. on the Dove, near Repton. Newton, South, Devonſhire, near Exmouth Bar. Newton Stacy, Hampſh. E. of Andover.

NEWTONSTEWART, a town of Wigtonſhire, in Scotland, ſituated on the river Cree, which is navigable for ſmall veſſels to within 2 miles of the town. There is a handſome bridge over this river, whoſe mouth, in Wigton Bay, affords a valuable ſalmon-fiſhery; and ſeveral manufactures have been commenced here with ſucceſs. It is 6 miles N. of Wigton.

Newton-Tony, Wilts, SE. of Ambreſbury. Newton-Tracey, Devonſhire, near Biddiford. Newton-upon Derwent, Yorkſ. W. of Pocklington. Newton-upon-Ouſe, Yorkſ. SE. of Boroughbridge. Newton-Water, Huntingdonſh. SE. of Stibinton. Newton Weld, Herefordſhire, near Pembridge-Caſtle. Newton-Well, Yorkſh. in Newton-Dale. Newton, Weſt, Cumb. 2 miles E. of Allenby. Newton, Weſt, Norfolk, near Sandringham. Newton, Weſt, Northumberland, near Kirk-Newton. Newton, Weſt, Somerſetſhire, S. of Bridgewater. Newton, Weſt, Yorkſhire, near Burton Conſtable. Newton-Wood, Northamptonſhire, near Fotheringay.

Newtown, in Leitrim, Connaught. Newtown, in Sligo, Connaught. Newtown, in Waterford, Munſter.

Newtown, in Renfrewſh. S. of Paiſley, noted for ſeveral large print-fields. Newtown, Cumb. near Scalby-Caſtle. Newtown, Durham, N. of Darlington. Newtown, Leiceſterſh. near Groby. Newtown, Durham, N. of Sunderland. Newtown, Northumberland. SW. of Alnwick. Newtown, Northumberland, NW. of Rothbury.

*NEWTOWN-ARDES, a town of Down, in Ulſter, in repute for the manufacture of its fine diaper, and other linen. It is agreeably ſeated on the northern point of the Lake of Strangford, which, at low water, affords a fine level ſtrand for many miles, and, at high water, is navigable, the tide flowing up as far as the town. It is 9 miles E. of Belfaſt, and 87 N. of Dublin.

Newtown, Barry, in Wexford, Leinſter. Newtown Bellew, in Galway, Connaught. Newtown-Buller, in Fermanagh, Ulſter. Newtown-Cunningham, in Donegal, Ulſter. Newtown-Forbes, in Longford, Leinſter. Newtown-Glens, in Antrim, Ulſter. Newtown-Gore, in Leitrim, Connaught. Newtown-Hamilton, in Armagh, Ulſter.

*NEWTOWN, MOUNT KENNEDY, a town of Wicklow, in Leinſter, 17 miles from Dublin.

*NEWTON-LIMAVADY, a town of Derry, in Ulſter, 106 miles NNW. of Dublin.

Newtown-Saville, in Tyrone, Ulſter. Newtown-Stewart, in Tyrone, Ulſter.

Newtrán, Eſſex, E. of Clavering. New-Wear, Monmouthſhire. Here is the fineſt proſpect on the Wye. Newwood Houſes, Shropſ. E. of Whitchurch. Newwork, Glouceſterſh. near Wotton under-Edge.

NEW-YEAR'S ISLANDS, ſmall iſlands on the N. ſide of Staten-Land, in the S. Atlantic Ocean. Great numbers of ſea-lions, ſeals, and a ſpecies of vultures, reſort to theſe iſlands, together with albatroſſes, large petrels, and penguins. Lat. 54. 46. S. lon. 64. 20. W.

NEYLAND. See NAYLAND.

Neyland, Norfolk, near Wreningham.

NIAGARA, a river of N. America, which forms the communication between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, and runs from S. to N. about 30 miles. At the entrance of this river, on its eaſtern ſhore, on the S. ſide of Lake Ontario, is Fort Niagara, (in lat. 43. 14. N. and lon. 79. W.) about 18 miles N. from which are thoſe remarkable falls which are reckoned among the greateſt natural curioſities in the world. The waters which ſupply the river Niagara, riſe near 2000 miles to the NW. and paſſing through the lakes Superior, Michigan, Huron, and Erie, receiving, in their courſe, conſtant accumulations, ruſh, at laſt, with aſtoniſhing grandeur, down a ſtupendous precipice of 140 feet perpendicular; and in a ſtrong rapid, that extends to the diſtance of about 9 miles below fall nearly as much more. The river then loſes itſelf in Lake Ontario. When the water ſtrikes the bottom, it rebounds to a great height in the air, occaſioning a thick cloud of vapours, on which the ſun, when it ſhines, paints a beautiful rainbow.

NIBIANO, a town of Placenza, Italy.

Nibley Glouceſtſhire, in Weſtereigh pariſh. Nibley, Glouceſterſhire, 2 miles from Wotton-under Edge. Newtbwaite, Lancaſh. i. Furneſs Fells.

NICARAGUA, a maritime province of Mexico, in the audience of Guatimala, bounded on the N. by Honduras, on the E. by the Atlantic Ocean, on the SE. by Coſta Rica, and on the SW. by the S. Sea; being 400 miles in length from E. to W. and 120 in breadth from N. to S. It is conſidered as the garden of Mexico, and is well watered by lakes and rivers. The air is wholeſome and temperate; and this country produces plenty of ſugar, cochineal, and fine chocolate, but little wheat. It abounds in black cattle and hogs, but ſheep are ſcarce. Leon de Nicaragua, the capital, is ſituated on the S. ſide of the lake ſo called, near the Pacific Ocean, in lat. 112. 2. N. lon. 85. 40. W.

NICARAGUA, a lake of New Spain, in the province of the ſame name, 200 miles in circumference. It has ſome iſlands in it, and ſtretching from the city of Leon NW. to SE. communicates with the Atlantic Ocean by the river St. Juan, called alſo Nicaragua. It is full of fiſh, but infeſted with crocodiles.

NICARIA, an iſland of the Archipelago, between Samos and Tine, 18 miles long, and 8 wide. It was anciently called Icaria, and is full of rocks; in the caverns of which the poor inhabitants make their abode. Theſe people are of the Greek church, and about 3000 in number. They apply themſelves to ſwimming and diving for ſponges, and for goods loſt by ſhipwreck. "The richeſt men in the iſland," ſays Thevenot "give their daughters to the beſt divers, who are tried before the maid and her father; and he who remains longeſt under water, wins her." "The women," he adds, "have the aſcendency; and as ſoon as the huſband arrives from any place, in his boat, the wife goes to the ſea ſide, takes the oars, and carries them home; after which the huſband can diſpoſe of nothing without her permiſſion." Lat. 37. N. lon. 26. 4. E.

NICASTRO, a town of Calabria Ultra.

NICE, a county of Italy, (but on the French ſide of the Alps,) bounded on the W. by the ci-devant Provence; on the N. by Piedmont; on the E. by Piedmont alſo, and the territories of Genoa; and on the S. by the Mediterranean. It is 36 miles long, 18 broad, and contains about 120,000 inhabitants.

NICE, an ancient and conſiderable ſea-port, on the confines of France and Italy, capital of the county of the ſame name, lately under the protection of the king of Sardinia, but in 1792, united with the French republic. It is very agreeably ſituated, on a ſharp rock, with a ſtrong citadel, at the mouth of the river Pigliou, 4 miles from the river Var, 83 miles S. by W. of Turin, and 83 E. of Aix. Lat. 43. 42. N. lon. 7. 23. E.

NICE. See ISNIC.

NICHABURG, a town of Choraſan, Perſia, famous for a mine of turquois ſtones near it, 30 miles S. of Meſched.

NICHOLAS, ST. a town in the dept. of Meurthe, ſeated on the river Meurthe, 6 miles SE. of Nancy.

Nicholas, St. Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Nicholas, St. Yorkſhire, near Richmond. Nicholas, St. near York. Nicholas, St. Kent, in the iſle of Thanet.

Nicholas, St. Devonſhire, an iſland of about three acres in extent, juſt before the mouth of Plymouth-Harbour. It is ſtrong both by nature and art, having a caſtle that commands the entrance to Hamoaze and Catwater. Nicholas, St. Glamorganſhire. Nicholas-Atwood, St. Kent, near Ramſgate.

NICHOSBUR, a town of Brunn, Moravia, 22 miles S. of Brunn.

NICOBAR ISLANDS, ſituated to the NW. of Sumatra, at the entrance of the Gulf of Bengal. The natives are tall and active, with long faces, black eyes, black lank hair, and copper-coloured ſkins. They are excellent ſwimmers, and ſometimes will overtake ſhips under ſail. They have no corn, but a fruit which ſerves them inſtead of bread, and they catch plenty of fiſh. They are ready to ſupply the ſhips that ſtop there with proviſions, for they have hogs and poultry enough; and, in return, they take iron, linen, and tobacco. The largeſt of theſe iſlands, which gives name to the reſt, is about 40 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. Its ſouth end is in Lat. 8. 0. N. lon. 94. 23. E.

NICOLAS, ST. one of the moſt conſiderable of the Cape-de-Verd Iſlands, lying between St. Lucia and St. Jago. It is of a triangular figure, and about 90 miles miles in circumference. The centre is mountainous and ſtony, and the coaſts are barren. The inhabitants, who are black or copper-coloured, under the direction of a Portugueſe prieſt, are about 500 in number. Lat. 16. 32. N. lon. 24. 6. W.

NICOLO, ST. the moſt conſiderable and beſt peopled of the Iſles of Tremiti, in the Gulf of Venice, about 12 miles from the coaſt of Italy. It has a harbour, and is in lat. 42. 10. N. lon. 15. 7. E.

NICOMEDIA, a town of Natolia, now called Is Nikmid, or Schmit; ſuppoſed to be the ancient capital of Bithynia. It was formerly very large, as appears by the ruins, and now contains 30,000 inhabitants; who conſiſt of Greeks, Armenians, and Turks. It is ſtill a place of conſequence, and carries on a trade in ſilk, cotton, glaſs, and earthen-ware. It is the ſee of a Greek archbiſhop, and is ſituated on a bay of the ſea of Marmora, 45 miles ESE. of Conſtantinople.

NICOPOLI, a town of Bulgaria, 164 miles NW. of Adrianople.

NICOPOLI, or GLANICH, a town of Armenia, 15 miles S. of Erzerum.

NICOSIA, a town of Aſia, capital of Cyprus, ſeated within a chain of mountains, which ſurround it on all ſides, in the centre of the iſland. It is about 3 miles in circumference; and there are plantations of olives, almonds, lemons, oranges, mulberries, and cypreſs-trees, interſperſed among the houſes, which give the town a rural appearance. Under the family of the Luſignans, Nicoſia was the royal reſidence, and an archiepiſcopal ſee; it contained 300 churches, Greek and Latin, and a great number of palaces and public buildings, the ruinous remains of which atteſt its greatneſs in that and former ages. The church of St. Sophia is a beautiful Greek ſtructure, which the Turks have turned into a moſque. Here the kings of Cyprus were formerly crowned. It is 100 miles SW. of Aleppo. Lat. 35. 12. N. lon. 34. 45. E.

NICOTERA, a town of Calabria Ultra.

NICOYA, a town of Coſta Rica, Mexico, ſituated on the coaſt of the S. Sea, at the bottom of a bay, 45 miles SE. of Nicaragua. Lat. 10. 42. N. lon. 85. 7. W.

Nid, Yorkſhire, W. Riding, near Ripley.

NIDAW, or NIDOW, a handſome town and bailiwick of Bern, Switzerland.

Niderdale, Yorkſh. the valley through which the river Nid runs from the bottom of Craven Hills to Ripley; it afterwards paſſes by Knareſborough, and runs into the Ouſe about 7 miles above York.

NIEBLA, a town of Seville, Andaluſia.

NIEMECZ, a ſtrong town of Moldavia.

NIEMEN, a large river, which riſes in the palatinate of Minſk, Lithuania, and empties itſelf into the Curiſch Haff.

NIENBURG, a town of Berg; a town of Munſter; and a town of Hoya; all in Weſtphalia: and a town of Anhalt-Cothen, Upper Saxony.

NIENHUS, a town of Bentheim, Weſtphalia.

NIEPER. See DNIEPER.

NIESTER. See DNIESTER.

NIEUHAUS, a town of Bechin, in Bohemia; a town of Worms, Upper Rhine; and a town of Padeborn, in Weſtphalia.

NIEUPORT, a ſea-port of the ci-devant Auſtrian Flanders, ſituated on a branch of the Yperlee, 8 miles SSW. of Oſtend. The harbour is dry at low water. The chief trade of the inhabitants, who are principally fiſhermen, is the making of nets and cordage for veſſels.

NIGER, a river, ſuppoſed to be one of the largeſt in Africa. Its riſe and termination are unknown; but its courſe is ſaid to be from E. to W. running S. of the kingdom of Caſhna toward Tombuctoo, in the ſands of which country it is ſuppoſed to be loſt; but others account the great rivers Senegal, Gambia, and Rio Grande, to be only ſo many branches or mouths, whereby this vaſt river diſcharges itſelf into the Atlantic. The Africans have two names for this river; namely, Neel il Abeed, or River of the Negroes; and Neel il Kibeer, or the Great River. They alſo term the Nile, Neel Sbem; that is, the Egyptian River; ſo that the term Neel, whence our Nile is derived, is nothing more than the appellative of River, like Ganges, or Sinde. So great is the rapidity with which the Niger traverſes the empire of Caſhna, that no veſſel can aſcend the ſtream; and ſuch is the want of ſkill, or of commercial inducements, among the inhabitants of its borders, that even with the current, neither veſſels nor boats are ſeen to navigate. Even the food, which the bounty of the river would give, is in vain offered to their acceptance; for ſuch is the want of ſkill, or ſuch the ſettled diſlike of the people to this ſort of proviſions, that the fiſh are never diſturbed. In the rainy ſeaſon, the Niger ſwells above its banks, floods the adjacent lands, and often ſweeps before it the cattle and cottages of the ſhort-ſighted, or too-confident inhabitants.

Niger, a river in Norfolk, running into the ſea at Clay. Nighton, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Nighton, St. Cornwall, SE. of Leſtwithiel.

NIKOPING, a town of Denmark, capital of the iſland of Falſter, or Hulſter, in the Baltic, 55 miles SSW. of Copenhagen.

NIKOPING, a town of Sweden, formerly the reſidence of the kings and princes of Sudermania, and now capital of that province. It has ſome manufactures of cloth and Morocco leather, a braſs hammer-mill, and a conſiderable trade by ſea. It is ſeated near the Baltic, 50 miles SW. of Stockholm.

Niland, Upper and Lower, Dorſetſh. near Great Kington.

NILE, a great river of Africa, which riſes in the mountains of Abyſſinia, called the Mountains of the Moon, near the village of Geeſh, in lat. 10. 59. N. lon. 36. 55. E. It runs firſt NE. afterward turns directly E. and enters the great lake Dambia or Dembia, running through it, and paſſing among the rocks, the ſight of it is almoſt loſt. Then it croſſes the country of Nubia, and enters Egypt at Syene, which country it divides into two parts: a little below Cairo, it divides itſelf into two great branches, which, with the Mediterranean Sea, forms the iſland of Delta. The ancients reckoned eleven mouths of the Nile, of which ſeven were conſiderable; but at preſent there are only two that are navigable at all times; and theſe are at Roſetta and Damietta. In the middle of this river, between Old Cairo and Gize, is ſeated the Iſland of Raouda, which is almoſt as long as Old Cairo. It is 500 paces in breadth in the middle; and the front of the Mekias, or Nilometer, a work of the Saracens, takes up all the breadth of the ſouthern part. Here they obſerve, every day, by means of a graduated column, (erected in the centre of a low chamber, its bottom being level with the bed of the Nile) the increaſe or decreaſe of the waters of that river, and thence the public criers regulate the proclamations they make of theſe events, at different hours, through the city. In ſome parts of this river there are rocks, whence the water falls ſeveral feet, and theſe are called the cataracts of the Nile. It overflows regularly every year, from the 15th of June to the 17th of September, when it begins to decreaſe. The fertility of Egypt depends upon the overflowing of the Nile; and they reckon it will be a bad year when it is leſs than 14 cubits, and above 18; but that 16 cubits is the proper height; and when this happens, they make public rejoicings throughout the Delta. This river affords plenty of fiſh, and breeds a great number of crocodiles, which are very large and dangerous. The Delta, or Lower Egypt, is always overflowed; and when the waters are almoſt gone off, they ſow it with rice, which delights in watery grounds. During the inundation, the little towns, ſtanding upon eminences, look like ſo many iſlands; and they go from one to the other by boats. In Cairo there is a canal called Khalis, which is opened when the water is high enough; thence it is conveyed into reſervoirs and ciſterns, and is afterward diſtributed into the fields and gardens, as occaſion requires. This inundation of the Nile is cauſed by the periodical rains which fall every year between the tropics, and more particularly in Abyſſinia. Off the mouth of this river, Auguſt 1, 1798. Rear Admiral Sir Horatio Nelſon took, or deſtroyed, a French fleet of 18 ſail of the line and 2 frigates. The Britiſh fleet conſiſted of thirteen 74-gun ſhips and one of 50 guns: in the French line of battle were 1 of 120 guns, the L'Orient, Admiral Brueys, burnt and blown up, 3 of 80 guns, 9 of 74, and four frigates. The French armament was directed againſt Egypt, where General Bonaparte had previouſly landed with a conſiderable military force.

NIMEGUEN, a town of the United Provinces, capital of Dutch Guelderland, and the chief town of the country of Betewe. It has a magnificent town houſe, a citadel, and an ancient palace, and is noted for the peace concluded here, June 30, 1678, between France and the Emperor, Spain and the United Provinces. It is ſeated on the S. ſide of the river Wahal, 35 miles SE. of Utrecht.

Nim-Hall, Herts, near Bell-Bar. Nimpſield, Glouceſterſh. 4 miles NE. of Durſley.

NIMPO, or NINGPO, a ſea-port of China, in the province of Chekiang. It is a city of the firſt rank, and is called by Europeans, Liampo. The ſtreets are very narrow, and appear more ſo on account of penthouſes over the ſhops. The Chineſe merchants of Siam and Batavia go thither yearly to buy ſilks; and they have a great trade to Japan, it being but two days ſail diſtant from it. It is ſituated in a plain, which reſembles a garden garden for its levelneſs and cultivation: it is full of towns and houſes, and divided by a great number of canals. Lat. 30 0. N. lon. 120. 20. E.

Nine-Churches, Weſtmoreland, on the river Eimot, NE. of Penrith.

Nine-Mile-Houſe, in Tipperary, Munſter. Nine-Mile-Houſe, in Tyrone, Ulſter, between Dungannon and Omagh. Nineteen-Mile-Houſe, in Kildare, Leinſter.

Ninkenholt, Hampſh. NW. of Whitchurch.

NINOVE, a town of Flanders county, ſituated on the Dender.

Niewick, Northumb. in Simondſburn pariſh.

NIO, an iſland in the Archipelago, (anciently called Ino, Ios, and Dios,) S. of Naxia, about 30 miles in circumference. It is fertile in corn, but has very little wood or oil. "The regular manners and behaviour of theſe iſlanders, one among another," ſays the Count de Choiſeul Gouffier, "with their kind treatment of ſtrangers, revives an idea of the ſimplicity of primitive ages. Men, women, and children, appear eager to do any good offices for travellers, without permitting their ſervants to ſhare in their endeavours. This benevolent diſpoſition is without any mixture of impertinent curioſity or intereſt, but is the genuine remains of ancient hoſpitality. An ingenious gentleman, who was lately on the iſland, experienced the truth of this repreſentation. He could not prevail on any of them to accept the leaſt pecuniary recompence for their trouble; they only required an atteſtation of the welcome he received; their character in this reſpect ſeeming to be what theſe honeſt people chiefly prided themſelves in. The iſland has ſome good harbours. Lat. 36. 43. N. lon. 25. 35. W.

NIORT, a conſiderable town in the department of the Two Sevres, with manufactures of druggets, ſerges, and other coarſe woollen goods. Their dry ſweetmeats are much eſteemed. It is 28 miles NE. of Rochelle.

NIPHON, or HIPHON, an iſland of Aſia, and the largeſt of Japan, being 660 miles in length, and from 150 to 400 in breadth, containing 55 provinces. The principal cities in this iſland are Meaco, Jeddo, Oſacca, Gurunga, and Saccai.

NISHNEI NOVOGOROD, or NISHGÓROD, a populous town of Ruſſia, with a conſiderable trade, capital of the government of the ſame name. As it was the appendage and place of reſidence of the ancient Ruſſian princes many of them lie buried here. It is ſeated at the confluence of the Volga and Occa, 220 miles E. by N. of Moſcow. Lat. 56. 18 N. lon. 46. 30. E.

NISIBIN, a town of Diarbekir, ſituated on the Tigris, 78 mile, SSE. of Diarbek.

NISIDA, a ſmall iſland in the Gulf of Naples, very fertile, (being a kind of large garden, laid out in ſlopes and terraces) and would be more ſo but for the great number of rabbits. It has a ſmall harbour, called Porto Pavone, and on a neighbouring rock ſtands a lazaretto, where ſhips bound for Naples perform quarantine.

NISMES, an ancient, large, and flouriſhing town, capital of the dept. of Gard. There are ſeveral monuments of antiquity, a public fountain, a mauſoleum, and an amphitheatre, built by the Romans. The maiſon quarrée, or the ſquare houſe, is a temple of the Corinthian order, in exquiſite taſte, raiſed by the inhabitants of Niſmes, in the year of Rome 754, to the memory of Caius and Lucius, ſons of Agrippa. The temple of Diana is, in part, gone to ruin. This city was taken by the Engliſh in 1417. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of a biſhop, and contanied a ſeminary, a college, an academy of ancient hiſtory and belles lettres, and about 40,000 inhabitants, of whom one third was ſuppoſed to be Proteſtants. It is ſeated in a fine plain, abounding in wine, oil, game, and cattle, 27 miles NE. of Montpellier.

NISSA, a town in Servia, ſituated on a river of the ſame name.

NITH, a river of Dumfrieſſhire, which riſes in the monntains to the NW. (ſome ſay in Ayrſhire) and gives the name of Nithſdale to that part of the country through which it flows. A little above Dumfries, it joins the Cairn, and their united ſtreams form a fine eſtuary in Solway Frith.

NITRIA, a famous deſert of Egypt, 37 miles in length, bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean, on the E. by the Nile, on the S. by the Deſert of Seta, and on the W. by St. Hilarion. It had formerly a great number of monaſteries, which are now reduced to four; and it takes its name from a ſalt lake, out of which is got the natrum of the ancients, in which they carry on a great trade.

NIVELLE, a town of the late Auſtrian Brabant, having a good manufacture of cambricks. It is 15 miles S. of Bruſſels.

NIVERNOIS

NIVERNOIS, a ci-devant province of France. It is pretty fertile, contains mines of iron, and is watered by a great number of rivers, of which the Loire, Allier, and Yonne, are the principal. It is now chiefly in the depts. of Nievre and Yonne.

Niwegal, Pembrokeſ. in S. Wales.

NIXABOER, or IRAN, a town of Koraſan, in Perſia, near which is a celebrated mine of turquoiſes. The ſword-blades made here are eſteemed the beſt in Perſia.

NIXAPA, a town of Guaxaca, Mexico, 30 miles SE. of Antequera.

NIZZA-DELLA PAGLIA, a town of Montferrat, 14 miles SE. of Aſti.

NOAILLES, a town in the reſpective departments of Vienne and Oiſe.

NOANAGUR, a conſiderable town of Hindooſtan, capital of a diſtrict, on the S. coaſt of the Gulf of Cutch, in Guzerat. It is inhabited by a piratical tribe, called Sangarians, who cruiſe for merchant ſhips as far as the entrance of the Gulf of Perſia, and is 160 miles SW. of Amadabad.

Nobber, in Meath, Leinſter.

Nobock, Northumberl. near Hexham.

Nobould, S. of Shrewſbury.

NOCERA, a town of Spoletto, in Italy.

NOCERA-DELLI-PAGANI, a town of Calabria Citra.

Nocton, near Lincoln. Nocturam, Cheſhire, in Woodchurch pariſh.

NOGENT, a town in the reſpective departments of Eure, Upper Marne, Loiret, and Sarte.

NOGENT-SUR-MARNE, a town in the department of Paris, 6 miles ESE. of Paris.

NOGENT-SUR-SEINE, a town in the dept. of Aube, ſeated on the river Seine, 25 miles NW. of Troyes.

NOGENT-LE-ROTROU, a town in the dept. of Eure and Loire, ſeated on the river Huiſne, 35 miles NE. of Mans.

Nohavel, in Cork, Munſter.

NOIR CAPE, a cape at the W. extremity of Terra del Fuego, in S. America. Lat. 54. 30. S. lon. 73. 18. W.

NOIRMOTIER, a town in the depart. of La Vandee, with a harbour and bay on its E. coaſt, capital of an iſland of the ſame name, which lies in the S. entrance of the river Loire, 17 miles in length, and 8 in breadth: it is full of bogs, and yet there are good paſtures.

Noke, Glouc. in Church-Down pariſh. Noke, Herefordſ. near Pembridge. Noke, Oxfordſhire, near Iſlip. Nokebill, Eſſex, near Burntwood. Nokeholt, Kent, NW. of Sevenoaks.

NOLA, an ancient town of Lavora Naples, where Auguſtus died, and where bells are ſaid to have been firſt made. The ſilk ſpun here and in the neighbourhood, is much eſteemed.

NOLI, a fiſhing town of Genoa, with a good harbour, 30 miles SW. of Genoa.

Noman's Land, Herts, W. of Hatfield. Noman's-Land, Middleſex, between Fulham and Hammerſmith. Noman's-Moor, Yorkſh. N. of Maſham.

NOMBRE-DE-DIOS, a town of Darien, ſituated at the bottom of a bay to which it gives name, 30 miles E. of Porto-Bello.

NOMBRE-DE-DIOS, a populous town of Zacatecas, in Mexico.

NOMENY, a town in the department of Meurthe, ſeated on the river Selle, 15 miles N. of Nancy.

NON, or NUN CAPE, a promontory of Morocco, oppoſite to Forteventura, one of the Canary Iſlands. Lat. 28. 20. N. lon. 10. 30. W.

NONA, a ſea-port of the late Venetian Dalmatia, with a good harbour, ſtrongly fortified.

Nonington, Kent, 5 miles SW. of Sandwich. Nonmonkton, Yorkſ. E. of Knareſborough. Nonſuch, Surry, near Sutton and Epſom, formerly called Cuddington, till a magnificent palace was erected here by Henry VIII. Charles II. gave it to the Ducheſs of Cleveland, who pulled it down, and ſold the materials. Nonyde-la-Mare, Somerſ. 2 miles SW. of Frome.

NOORDEN, a ſea-port of E. Frieſland, 15 miles N. of Embden.

NOOTKA. See KING GEORGE'S SOUND.

Nopton, Northumb, near Shields. Noberry, Worceſ. near Inkborough. Nobery, Lanc. in Amounderneſs. Noborn, Kent, S. of Sandwich. Norborow, Leic. E. of Hinckley. Norbrook, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle, N. of Sandwich. Norbury, Derbyſ. SW. of Aſhburn. Norbury, Cheſhire, SE. of Stockport. Norbury, Cheſhire, near a lake, NE. of Malpas. Norbury, Shropſh. near Biſhop's-Caſtle. Norbury, Staffordſh. SW. of Ecteſhal. Norbury, Surry, near Leatherhead. Norbury-Booths, Cheſhire, near Stopford.

NORCIA, a city of Spoletto, Italy, governed by its own magiſtrates.

Norcot, Berks, near Abingdon. Norcot, Middleſex, near Southold.

NORDEN. See NOORDEN.

NORDGAW. See UPPER PALATINATE OF BAVARIA.

NORDHAUSEN, an imperial town of Lower Saxony, 38 miles N. of Erfurt.

NORDHEIM,

NORDHEIM. See NORTHEIM.

Nordham, or Northiam, Suſſex, near Ewhurſt, in Surry.

NORDKIOPING, a large inland town of Eaſt Gothland, Sweden, next to Stockholm in extent. It contains 5 churches, and about 10,000 inhabitants, but the houſes are ſmall and ſcattered. Its ſituation on the Motala is exceedingly picturesque. That river flows through the town, forms a ſeries of cataracts, and is divided into four principal ſtreams, which encircle ſeveral rocky iſlands, covered with houſes and manufacturies. At the extremity of the town is a new and commodious quay. Here are many fabrics of woollen cloth, ſome ſugar-houſes, one of ſnuff, ſeveral paper-mills, 10 mills for grinding corn, 2 copper-mills, and a hammer-mill for braſs. Corn is exported hence in great quantities; and a ſalmon fiſhery gives employment and riches to many of the inhabitants. Nordkioping is 76 miles SW. of Stockholm.

NORDLAND, a large diſtrict of Sweden, containing 9 towns, and 7 provinces, viz. Hefricia, Helſingia, Medelpadia, Jemptland, Angermania, Weſt Bothnia, and Lerjedalia.

NORDDINGEN. or NORLINGEN, an imperial town of Suabia, on the Eger.

Nordon, Dorſetſh. 1 mile N. of Corfe, noted for its fine tobacco-pipe clay.

NORDSTRAND, an iſland on the W. coaſt of Sleſwick, about 36 miles long and 15 wide. Lat. 54. 35. N.

Nordy or Nortyh Chapel, Suſſex, near Ravenſey Haven. Nore, Surry, SE. of Godalmin.

Nore River, in Waterford, Munſter, paſſes by Kilkenney, and falls into the Barrow, two miles N. of Roſs.

NORFOLK, a county of England, bounded on the N. and E. by the German Ocean; on the W. by Cambridgeſhire, Lincolnſhire, and the Waſh; and on the S. and SE. by Suffolk. It extends about 60 miles from E. to W. and 40 from N. to S. It contains 33 hundreds, 1 city, 32 market-towns, 660 pariſhes, and about 120,000 inhabitants. The face of this county varies leſs than in moſt tracts of equal extent in England. Not one hill of any conſiderable height is to be seen in the whole county; yet, in moſt parts, its ſurface is broken into gentle ſwells and depreſſions. The ſoil, however, is more various than that of any other county, comprehending all the ſorts that are to be found in the iſland; yet the worſt of them are far from being unprofitable. At the weſtern extremity, is a conſiderable tract or flat, fenny land; and, on the eaſt, a narrow tract of marſhes runs from the ſea, near Yarmouth, to ſome diſtance up the country. Several of the weſtern hundreds, from Thetford northward, are open and bare, conſiſting of extenſive heaths, the ſoil of which is a light ſand, or hungry gravel. The reſt of the county, in general, is arable land, varying in its degrees of fertility. To the NE. the ſoil is a light ſandy loam, eaſy of tillage, and equal in value to the beſt parts of the Netherlands, to which it is ſimilar. The SE. has a richer and deeper ſoil. The middle and ſouth abound in clay; and various parts yield chalk and marl. The products of the county vary according to the ſoil and ſituation. The lighter arable lands produce barley in great plenty. Wheat is cultivated in the ſtronger ſoils; but turnips are more generally grown here than in any other part of the kingdom, and from the baſis of the Norfolk huſbandry. The peculiar excellence of this culture is, that the ground never lies fallow, as the turnips ſerve to prepare it for corn, beſide fattening great numbers of cattle. Much buck-wheat is alſo grown in the light ſoils, and uſed for feeding ſwine and poultry. The fenny parts yield great quantities of butter, which is ſent to London, under the name of Cambridge butter. The ſheep are a hardy, ſmall breed, much valued for their mutton. Turkeys are reared here to a larger ſize than elſewhere. Rabbits are extremely numerous on the ſandy heaths; and there is likewiſe abundance of game, eſpecially of pheaſants. On the ſea coaſt, herrings and mackarel are caught in great plenty; and Yarmouth in particular, is noted for the curing of red herrings. The air of this country is ſharp and piercing, which throws the ſeaſons more backward than in other counties under the ſame latitude: but, is very wholeſome, particularly in the inland parts. No county has a greater ſhare of river and ſea navigation. The manufactures of Norfolk are chiefly worſted, woollens, and ſilks. Its principal rivers are the Great Ouſe, Nen, Little Ouſe, Waveney, Yare, and Bure. Norwich is the capital.

NORFOLK ISLAND, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, lying E. of New South Wales, and ſettled by a colony of convicts, ſubordinate to that government. The number of men, by the laſt advices, amounted to 44, the women only to 16. It is a fertile ſpot, and is very hilly. Some

Some of the valleys are tolerably large, but moſt of them are only deep hollows. Mount Pitt, the only remarkable hill, is 12,000 feet high. The whole iſland is covered with a very thick foreſt, choked with underwood. The timber trees are a ſort of ſpruce pine, reſembling the live oak, a yellow wood, a hard black wood, and a wood reſembling beech. The ſpring is perceptible in our autumn, but the trees are in a conſtant ſucceſſion of flowering and fruiting the whole year round. The flax-plant is more luxuriant here than in any part of New Zealand; but the chief produce is the pine, which grows in great abundance, and to a large ſize, many of the trees being as thick, breaſt high, as two men can fathom, and exceedingly ſtraight and tall. It is very uſeful in building, and ſeems to be durable. The ſoil is rich and deep. In ſummer the heat is exceſſive. All the grain and European plants ſeed in December. From February to Auguſt may be called the rainy ſeaſon. The winter, from April to July, is very pleaſant: there is never any froſt: but when the SW. wind blows, the air is raw and cold. This iſland is well ſupplied with many ſtreams of good water, which abound with very fine eels. The cliffs round the coaſt are 240 feet high, and quite perpendicular. The want of a ſafe harbour is a great inconvenience; and the vaſt number of coral rocks render anchorage very inſecure. The ſettlement is formed in Sydney-Bay, on the S. ſide of the iſland. Lat. 29. 30. S. lon. 168. 12. E.

Norgill, Yorkſhire, NW. of Barnard's-Caſtle. Norgrave, Worceſterſhire, near Upton. Norham, Durham, inſulated in Northumberland, and giving name to a tract of country called Northamſhire. It ſtands on the Tweed, near the mouth of the Till, 6 miles SW. of Berwick.

Norleaſe, Wilts. Norleigh, Cheſhire, near Frodſham. Norleigh, Devonſ. near Hamiton. Norleigh, Shropſh. SE. of Wenlock. Normanby, Linc. 5 miles W. of Market Raiſin. Normanby, Linc. N. of Market Raiſin, Normanby, Surry, near Aſh. Normanby, Yorkſ. SE. of Kirby-Moreſide. Normanby, Yorkſ. near Robin Hood's-Bay. Normanby, Yorkſ. NW. of Giſborough.

NORMANDY, a ci-devant province of France, on the Engliſh Channel, about 150 miles in length, 80 in breadth, and 600 in circumference. It is one of the moſt fertile tracts in France, and abounds in all its productions except wine, but they ſupply that defect by cider and perry. It contains mines of iron and copper, and a great number of rivers and harbours. The Normans, a people of Denmark and Norway, having entered France, under Rollo, Charles the Simple ceded this country to them in 912, which, from that time, was called Normandy. Rollo the firſt duke, having been baptized, Charles gave him his daughter Gilla in marriage. He held Normandy as a fief of the crown of France, and ſo did all of his ſucceſſors after him, till William the ſeventh duke, conquered England in 1066, from which time it became a province of England, but was loſt in the reign of King John, and reunited to the crown of France; the Engliſh, however, ſtill keep the iſlands on the coaſt of Normandy. Rouen was the capital. It now forms the departments of Calvados, Eure, the Channel, Orne, Lower Seine, with a ſmall part of Eure and Loire.

Normangate Fields, Northamp. N. of Peterborough. Normanton, near Derby. Normanton, Derbyſ. S. of Cheſterfield. Normanton, Leiceſterſ. S. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Normanton, Nottingham. by Southwell. Normanton, Nott. at Greſthorp. Normanton, Nott. on the Soar, nearly oppoſite to Loughborough. Normanton, Rutl. E. of the Vale of Catmoſe. Normanton, Wilts, near Amesbury. Normanton, Yorkſh. NE. of Wakefield. Norreys, Devonſ. in Hartland pariſh. Norridge, Wiltſhire, near Warminſter. Norrindon, Wilts, between Warder-Caſtle and Cranborn-Chace.

Norris, in Armagh, Ulſter.

Norrys, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

NORTGAU. See NORDGAW.

NORTH, DEPARTMENT OF THE, a department of France, adjoining that of Calais, bounded on the NW. by the German Ocean, and on the NE. by Flanders and the late Auſtrian Hainault. It is compoſed of the late French Flanders, French Hainault, and Cambreſis. Douay is the capital.

Northall, Middleſex, a village on the north ſide of Enfield Chace, 3 miles S. of Barnet. Northall, Suffolk, near Benacre.

*NORTHALLERTON, a well-built trading town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, conſiſting of only one ſtreet, about half a mile long. It is ſituated in a diſtrict called Alvertonſhire, on a ſmall brook, which, a mile below, runs into the river Wiſk. It is 30 miles NNW. of York, and 223 N. by W. of London. It has a good market on Wedneſday for cattle, corn ım, &c. Fairs on Jan. 2d, and on St. Bartholomew's Day.

Northam, Devonſ. between Barnſtaple-lay and Biddeford.

NORTHAMPTON, the county town of Northamptonſhire, ſeated on an emi-ence, gently ſloping to the river Nen, hich is joined here by another rivulet, nd has been made navigable to Lynn. It ontains about 1083 houſes and 5200 in-abitants. Its principal manufacture is hat of boots and ſhoes, of which many re made here, and in other parts of the ountry, for exportation. Some ſtock-gs and lace are alſo made here. The ree-fairs of this place are reckoned to xceed all others in the kingdom. It is handſome, well-built town, and has regular, ſpacious market-place, one f the fineſt in England, a good free-hool, and a county infirmary and gaol. Vithin half a mile of Northampton is a ne Gothic ſtructure, called Queen's Croſs, rected by Edward I. in memory of his ueen Eleanor, who, at the hazard of er own life, had ſaved his, by ſucking he poiſon from a wound which he re-eived in the cruſades. This town is a reat thoroughfare, both in the N. and N. roads, and is 50 miles W. of Cam-ridge, 80 SE. of Coventry, and 66 NW. by N. of London. Markets on Wedneſday, Friday, and Saturday. Fairs n Feb. 20, April 15, May 4, Auguſt 5 nd 26, Septemeber 19, November 28, nd December 19.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the NW. by Lei-eſterſhire, and Rutlandſhire, on the N. by Lincolnſhire, on the E. by the coun-ties of Cambridge, Huntingdon, and Bedford, on the S. by Bucks and Oxford-ſhire, and on the W. by that county and Warwickſhire. It is divided into 20 hundreds, containing a city, 13 market-towns, 336 pariſhes, about 25,000 houſes, and 150,000 inhabitants. The air of this county is very healthy, except in the NE. part near Peterborough, which being ſurrounded and interſected by rivers, is very liable to inundations, and forms the commencement of the fenny tract ex-tending to the Lincolnſhire Waſhes. With this ſingle exception, Northamp-tonſhire is, in a manner, proverbially re-garded as a fine and pleaſant county; an opinion, confirmed by the number of ſeats of the nobility and gentry which it contains. Its greateſt defect is a ſcarcity of fuel; this is but ſcantily ſupplied by its woods, which, like thoſe in all other parts of the kingdom, have been much diminiſhed by agriculture; and though coal is brought into this county by the river Nen, it is at a very dear rate. North-amptonſhire, however, poſſeſſes ſome con-ſiderable remains of its old foreſts, par-ticularly thoſe of Rockingham on the NW. and of Salcey and Whittlebury on the S. In this laſt, that fierceſt of Bri-tiſh animals of prey, the wild cat, is ſtill found. There is but one piece of waſte ground in this county, and that is a barren heath near Whittering. The pro-ducts are, in general, the ſame with thoſe of other farming countries. It is, in-deed, peculiarly celebrated for grazing land; the tract eſpecially, which lies from Northampton northward to the Lei-ceſterſhire border. Horned cattle, and other animals, are here fed to extraordi-nary ſizes; and many horſes of the large black breed are reared. Woad for the dyers is cultivated in this part; but the county is not diſtinguiſhed for manufac-tures, excepting ſome of ſerges, tam-mies, ſhaloons, boots and ſhoes; and the trifling one of bone lace. The prin-cipal rivers are the Nen and Welland; beſide which, it is partly watered by the Ouſe, Lean, Cherwell, and Avon. The county-town is Northampton.

Northamſted, Herts, a mile S. of Bark-way. Northaw, Middleſex; ſee Northal. Northborough, Northamp. S. of Market-Deeping. North Bovey, Devonſh. near Morton. North Bradley, Wilts. North Brook, Oxfordſh. W of Biceſter.

NORTH, CAPE, the moſt northern pro-montory in Europe, in the iſland of Mag-gero, on the coaſt of Norway. Lat. 71. 10. N. lon. 26. 2. E.

Northcoats, Linc. between Saltfleet and Grimſby. Northcot, Berks, near Abingdon. Northcot, Devonſh. on the river Tamar. Northcot, Devonſhire, in Leigh-North. Northcot, Devonſhire, in Uffculumb pariſh. Northcot, Herts, S. of Berkhampſtead. Northcote, Glouc. near Cirenceſter. North Court, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina.

NORTH CURRY, a pretty conſiderable town of Somerſetſhire, ſeated on the river Tone. It is 20 miles SW of Wells, and 134 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

North-Downs, ſands ſo called, on the coaſt of Wicklow, in Leinſter.

North Down, Kent, near Margate-Bay and the North Foreland. North Duffield, Yorkſh. North End, Eſſex, N. of Horn-church. North End, Middleſex, a hamlet of Finchley. North-End, Mid-dleſex, between Walham-Green and the road road to Hammerſmith. North-End, Middleſex, NE. of Hampſtead-Heath. North End, Warwickſ. E. of Kineton. Northerden, Cheſhire, on the Merſey, W. of Stockport. Northey, Glouceſ. near Tewkeſbury. Northey Iſle, Eſſex, between Maldon and St. Oſyth Iſland. Northfield, Worceſterſ. between Bromſ. grove and Birmingham. Northfleet, Kent, on the banks of the Thames, one mile W. from Graveſend, and 21 from London. Vaſt quantities of lime are made, and great numbers of extraneous foſſils have been dug up here.

NORTH FORELAND. See FORELAND.

North Hall, Herts, 3 miles N. of Barnet. North-Hall, or North Hold, Middleſex, NE. of Hayes. North-Hall-Lodge, Middleſex, N. of Uxbridge. North-Haven-Point, Dorſetſ. by Brankſey-Caſtle.

NORTHEIM, a town of Calenburg, Lower Saxony, which carries on a great trade, and is a well-frequented paſſage, ſeated between the rivers Rhume and Leina, 10 miles N. of Gottingen.

North-Hill, Bedfordſh. N. of South Hill. North-Hill, Cornwall, SE. of Launceſton. Northiam, Suſſex. Northington, Hants, N. of Alresford. Northland, Yorkſhire, near Halifax. Northlands, Middleſex, near Kenſington Gravel-pits.

*NORTHLEECH, a town of Glouceſ. It has ſeveral alms-houſes, and a free grammar-ſchool, and is ſeated on, or near, the river Leech, 25 miles E. of Glouceſter, and 80 W. by N. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Northorp, Flintſhire. Northorp, Linc. near Kirton. Northover, Somerſetſh. near Ilcheſter.

North-Rocks, in the harbour of Donaghadee, in Down, Ulſter. From N. to S. they extend about 2 miles, but there is good clean ground between them. The ſouth rock is dangerous, many veſſels have been wrecked on it: it is above a mile from the ſhore.

North-Town, Staffordſh. near King's Bromley.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a county of England, receiving its name from being ſituated to the N. of the Humber. In the Saxon heptarchy it was a part of the kingdom of the Northumbrians, which contained not only the county now called Northumberland, but alſo Yorkſhire, Lancaſhire, Durham, Cumberland, and Weſtmorland. It is ſeated on the extremity of England next to Scotland, and is bounded on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the biſhopric of Durham, on the W. and SW. by Cumberland, and on the NW. and N. by Scotland. It extends about 64 miles in length from N. to S. and 48 in breadth from E. to W. and is divided into 6 wards, which contain 13 towns, 460 pariſhes, and about 100,000 inhabitants. The air is not ſo cold as might be imagined from the latitude in which it lies, for its ſituation between two ſeas, in the narroweſt part of England, gives it the advantage of having the cold moderated by the temperate breezes of each; and for this reaſon the ſnow ſeldom lies long in Northumberland, except on the tops of high hills. The air is extremely healthful, and many of the inhabitants enjoy health to a great age. The ſoil is various; the eaſtern part being fruitful, having very good wheat, and moſt ſorts of corn, with rich meadows on the banks of the rivers; but the weſtern part is generally barren, it being moſtly heathy and mountainous. The SE. part abounds with pit-coal; the SW. angle has very rich lead-mines, but very little wood. The rivers abound with ſalmon, trout, &c. and the coaſts are rich in cod, ling, turbot, ſoles, &c. This county is well watered by rivers, the principal of which are the Tyne, Tweed, Coquet, and Aln. Alnwick is the county-town.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a county of Virginia, and a county and town of Pennſylvania, the laſt of which is ſituated on the N. ſide of the Suſquehana, oppoſite Sunbury.

NORTHUMBERLAND ISLANDS, a chain of iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean near the NE. coaſt of New Holland. Lat. 21. 18. to 22. 26. S. lon. 149. to 150. 20. E.

Northway and Newton, Glouceſt. near Aſhchurch.

NORTHWICH, a handſome town in Cheſhire, chiefly noted for its ſalt-mines, which were diſcovered in the beginning of the preſent century. Here are ſeveral deep brine-pits, from which immenſe quantities of ſalt are raiſed, partly to be purified on the ſpot by re-diſſolving and boiling, and partly to be exported in its crude ſtate. Moſt of the latter goes to Liverpool by the river Weaver. The ſalt-quarries here, (diſcovered within theſe few years, on the S. ſide of the town,) when a perſon is let down into them by a bucket, to the depth of 150 feet, afford a truly pleaſing and picturesque appearance, looking very much like a ſubterraneous cathedral. The extent extend ſeveral acres, and are ſupported by rows of pillars, having a cryſtal roof, all of the ſame rock, and tranſparent and glittering from the numerous candles burnt there to light the workmen, who dig it away with ſteel pick-axes. The ſtratum of ſalt lies above 40 yards deep: above it is a bed of whitiſh clay. The clear annual duty received by government for Cheſhire ſalt amounts to 200,000l. Here is alſo a large cotton manufacture. Northwich is ſeated on the river Weaver, near its conflux with the Dane, by which it communicates with all the the inland navigations,) 20 miles NE. of Cheſter, and 173 NW. of London. Market on Friday.

Northwick, Worceſterſ. near Campden in Glouceſterſhire. Northwick, Glouceſ. hamlet to Henbury. Northwold, Norf. near Methwold. Northwood, Shropſh. near of Ellesmere. Northwood, Hants, between Havant and Thorney Iſland. Northwood, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Northwood, Suſſex, S. of Petworth. Northwood, Worceſterſhire, near Kidderminſter. North Wotton, Dorſetſ. 5 miles NE. of Thornford. Nortley Wood, Suffolk, near Roydon.

NORTON, or CHIPPING-NORTON, a town of Oxfordſhire, with manufactures for horſe clothing and harrateens. It is ſituated on the great poſt road between Worceſter and Oxford, 12 miles NW. of Banbury, and 74 NW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Norton, Cheſhire, 4 miles from Warrington. Norton, Cornwall, near Stratton. Norton, Derbyſ. N. of Dronfield. Norton, Durham, near Stockton. Norton, 3 miles from Glouceſter. Norton, Hants, near Selborn. Norton, Herts, near Baldock. Norton, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Norton, Kent, 3 miles SW. of Feverſham. Norton, Leiceſ. near Galbey. Norton, SE. of Lincoln. Norton, Monmouthſh. near Skenfrith-Caſtle. Norton, Norfolk, near Loddon. Norton, Norfolk, near Fakenham. Norton, Northamptonſhire, near Towceſter. Norton, Norfolk, near Rockland. Norton, Northamptonſhire, near Daventry. Norton, Nottinghamſ. in Cukeney pariſh. Norton, Shropſhire, near Candover. Norton, Shropſhire, NW. of Ludlow. Norton, Shropſ. near Atherley. Norton, Shropſh. N. of Bridgenorth. Norton, Somerſetſh. N. of Pen. Norton, Staffordſhire, N. of Chebſey. Norton, Staffordſh. near Cank, NE. of the Wurleys. Norton, Staffordſh. in the Moors by the Trent, 1 mile W. of Bagnal. Norton, Suffolk, near Wulpet. Norton, Suſſex, N. of Seaford. Norton, Wilts, in Laycock pariſh. Norton, Wilts, S. of Malmeſbury. Norton, Worceſterſh. N. of Eveſham. Norton, Worceſ. E. of Upton, and about a mile N. of Bredon, of which it is a hamlet. Norton, SE. of Worceſter. Norton, Yorkſh. near New Malton. Norton, Yorkſh. between Swaldale and Biſhopſdale-Chace. Norton, Yorkſh. SE. of Pontefract. Norton, Biſhop's, Lincolnſ. NE. of Spittle-in-the-Street. Norton-Bovant, Wilts, E. of Warminſter. Norton-Brimer, Oxfordſ. SW. of Witney. Norton Canon, Herefordſ. S. of Webley. Norton, Cold, Eſſex, near Stow-Maries. Norton-Conyers, Yorkſhire, near Rippon. Norton-Curli, Warw. near Budbroke. Norton-Dawney, Devonſh. near Dartmouth, Norton Diſney, Linc. N. of Beckingham. Norton-Eaſt, Leiceſterſhire, in Tugby pariſh. Norton Friars, or Midſummer, Somerſetſ. in Kilmerſdon pariſh. Norton-in-the-Clay. Yorkſ. NW. of Boroughbridge. Norton, Lindſey, or Upper, Warw. W. of Claverdon. Norton, Malreward, Somerſetſhire, between Dundry and Penſford. Norton-Mandeville, Eſſex, N. of Ongar. Norton Over, Oxfordſh. near Chipping-Norton. Norton Over, 3 miles from Glouceſter. Norton-ſuper-Montem, Norfolk, S. of Attlebridge. Norton-under-Hambden-Hill, Somerſetſ. 2 miles from S. Petherton. Norton Wood, Norfolk, N. of Foulſham. Norwell, Nottinghamſhire, S. of Willoughby.

NORTON SOUND, a large bay of the N. Pacific Ocean, on the W. coast of N. America, diſcovered by Captain Cook in his laſt voyage. Lat. 63. N. lon. 161. to 164. W.

NORWALK, a town of Connecticut.

NORWAY, a kingdom in the N. of Europe, the moſt weſterly part of the ancient Scandinavia. It is formed naturally into two divisions; namely, Northern and Southern or Proper Norway ſeparated from each other by the ſmall Swediſh province of Herndahl. Northern Norway is a long and narrow ſlip of land, extending as far as Cape North, the moſt northern part of Europe, beyond 71. 0. deg. N. lat. and bounded on the W. and N. by the Northern Ocean, by Swediſh and Ruſſian Lapland on the E. and by Sweden on the S. It is divided into Nordland and Finmark, and comprehended in the government of Drontheim. Southern Norway is bounded on the E. by by Sweden, and on the S. and W. by the Northern Ocean. It is divided into the four governments of Aggerhuys or Chriſtiania, Chriſtianſand, Berghen, and Drontheim. From its rocky ſoil and northern poſition, Norway is not populous in proportion to its extent. Mr. Coxe has calculated the number of inhabitants to be 750,000, who, like the Swiſs mountaineers, are eſteemed good ſoldiers, and are exceedingly attached to their country. The horſes are ſmall, but ſtrong, active, and hardy. In Norway they have a particular code, called the Norway Law, compiled by Griffelfeld, at the command of Chriſtian V. the great legiſlator of this country. By this law, the palladium of Norway, peaſants are free, a few only excepted, on ſome eſtates near Fredericſtadt. The benefits of this code are viſible in the great difference, in their appearance, between the free peaſants in Norway, and the enſlaved vaſſals of Denmark, though both living under the ſame government. The Norwegian peaſants poſſeſs much ſpirit and fire in their manner; are frank, open, and undaunted, yet not inſolent; never fawning, yet paying proper reſpect. The ſame cauſes which afflict the population of Norway, operate likewiſe on the ſtate of tillage; for, although in ſome places vegetation is ſo quick, that the corn is ſown and cut in 6 or 7 weeks, yet the country does not produce ſufficient corn for its own conſumption. It is, however, exceedingly rich in paſture, and conſequently produces much cattle. The fiſheries, particularly on the weſtern coaſt, procure employment and wealth to the natives. The principal fiſh, which, dried and ſalted, furniſh a conſiderable article of exportation, are the cod, the ling, and the whiting; their livers alſo yield train oil, and the ſmalleſt are given as winter fodder to the cattle. The extenſive foreſts of oak and pine produce timber ſpars, beams, and planks, beſide charcoal, turpentine, bark, fuel, and even manure; and the birch (the bark of which is uſed as a covering for the roofs of houſes) not only ſupplies fuel, but alſo a kind of wine, which is produced by boring a hole in the trunk, and the wine diſtils into a flaſk placed under it. The twigs of the birch alſo, as well as of the elder and aſpen, are given to horſes in ſcarcity of fodder. The general exports of Norway are tallow, butter, ſalt, dried fiſh, timber and planks, horſes and horned cattle, ſilver, alum, Pruſſian blue, copper, and iron. Norway abounds in lakes and rivers: the former ſo large that they appear like inlets of the ſea but the bays are ſo ſmall, that they appear like lakes. It was formerly governed by its own hereditary ſovereigns, but is now united to the crown of Denmark. The capital is Chriſtiania.

*NORWICH, an ancient, large, and populous city of Norfolk, ſeated on the river Yare, which runs through it, and is navigable hence to Yarmouth, without locks. Although it is 6 miles in circumference the population is not ſo great as might be expected from that circumſtance, for it contains a number of gardens and orchards within the walls. It has a ſtately ancient caſtle, on a hill, which commands a fine view of the city: the caſtle is the ſhire houſe for the county and the county gaol; the aſſizes for the city being held at the Guildhall. Norwich has a good public library, a city and county hoſpital, a lofty market-house of free-ſtone, and a bridewell built of flints, remarkable for being beautifully cut into regular little ſquares, without any viſible cement. It had formerly 36 parochial churches, beſides monaſteries, and has now 36 churches, beſide the cathedral, chapels, and diſſenting meeting houſes. It had alſo a flint-ſtone wall, now much decayed, about 3 miles in compaſs, which had 40 towers, and was finiſhed in 1309. Here is a free-ſchool founded by Edward VI. and ſeveral other charitable foundations. Norwich has taken the lead in point of commerce and conſequence among the inland towns. For this it was indebted to its great manufactures of crapes, bombazines, and ſtuffs of various kinds, which are ſtill conſiderable, though ſomewhat declining on account of the rivalſhip of the cotton branches, and in conſequence of prohibitions in foreign countries. The manufacture is confined to the city, but the operations of ſpinning and preparing the wool, employ the poor of moſt of the ſmall towns and villages in the county. It is computed that ſtuffs, ſuch as crapes, maſks, camlets, black and white crapes, to the amount of 70,000l. have ſometimes been manufactured here in a year. This city adds much to the trade of Yarmouth, by the vaſt cargoes of coals, and other heavy goods, which come to it from thence by the river Yare. Here are many good buildings, particularly a very ſpacious market-place; but the ſtreets (that of St. Giles excepted) are narrow and ill-diſpoſed. The market place being on an aſcent, is very clean has a fine effect. Norwich has 12 gates, 6 bridges over the Yare, about 7500 houſes, and 45,000 inhabitants. It is well ſupplied with proviſions, and is 43 miles N. of Ipſwich, and 100 NE. by N. of London. Markets on Wedneſday, Friday, and Saturday.

NORWICH, a town of Connecticut, erected near the head of the river Thames, in a ſituation convenient for mills; at which place and Norwich the executive courts of law are held alternately. Here are conſiderable manufactories for paper, ſtockings, clocks, and watches, chaiſes, buttons, ſtone and earthen ware, wire, oil, chocolate, bells, anchors, and all kinds of forge work. The number of houſes is about 500. It is 12 miles N. of New London, and 66 SW. of Boſton.

NORWICH, a town of Vermont.

Norwood, a village in Surry, ſituated on a fine hill, in the pariſhes of Croydon, Streatham, Lambeth, and Camberwell, 5 miles S. of London. It is a wildly-rural ſpot, bearing the marks of unimproved nature, and was, ſome years ago, a principal haunt of the gipſies. Norwood, Iſle of Wight, in Eaſt Medina. Norwood, Kent, near Ramſgate. Norwood, Middleſex, a chapel of eaſe to Hayes. Norwood-Park, Nottinghamſ. near Southwell. Noſeley, Leiceſterſhire, NW. of Hallaton. Noſtol-Hall, Yorkſ. E. of Wakefield. Noſtrop, Yorkſhire, near Leeds.

NOTEBURG, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Peterſburgh, ſeated on an iſland in the Lake of Ladoga, at the place where the river Neva proceeds from this lake. It was the capital of the province of Ingria, before Peterſburgh was built, from which it is diſtant 25 miles E.

Notely, Black and White, Eſſex, near Braintree. Notgrove, Glouceſt. 4 miles NW. of Northleach, Notley, Bucks, near Tame, in Oxfordſhire.

NOTO, NUOVO, an ancient, large, and handſome town of Sicily, capital of the Val-di-Noto. It was entirely ruined by an earthquake in 1693, but the inhabitants built another town at ſome diſtance from it. It is 14 miles SW. of Syracuſe.

Notown, Nottinghamſh. near Thurgarton and Blaſeby. Nottar, Cornwall, NW. of Saltaſh.

NOTTINGHAM, the county-town of Nottinghamſhire, takes its name from the Saxon, Snottengaham, or Houſe of Dens, ſo called from the ſpacious vaults dug in the rock, in which the ancient Britons are ſuppoſed to have reſided. It is pleaſantly ſeated on a rocky eminence, above the meadows bordering the Trent; on the higheſt part of which ſtands the caſtle, a large, elegant, and noble palace, belonging to the Duke of Newcaſtle, with a moſt extenſive proſpect. It is a large, populous, and handſome town, with a ſpacious market-place, and conſidered as one of the principal ſeats of the ſtocking manufacture; particularly of the finer kinds, as thoſe of ſilk and cotton. It has alſo a manufactory of glaſs and coarſe earthen ware, and a conſiderable trade in malt. It is remarkable for its vaults or cellars, cut into the rock. Many of the houſes in the market-place have their fronts ſupported by lofty ſtone columns, which make a very handſome appearance, and at the ſame time afford ſhelter in wet weather. The ſtreets are well paved, and, from their ſituation on a rock, many of them are always clean. Heavy goods are brought hither from London by ſea, and up the river Trent; and many coal pits, within 3 or 4 miles of the town, afford plenty of fuel at little expence. It is 16 miles E. of Derby, and 123 N. by W. of London. Markets on Wedneſday, Friday, and Saturday. Fairs on Friday after January 13th, May 7th, Thurſday before Eaſter, and October 2d.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Yorkſhire and Lincolnſhire, on the E. by the latter county, on the S. by Leiceſterſhire, and on the W. by Derbyſhire. Its greateſt length is 48 miles; its greateſt breadth above 20. It is divided into 8 hundreds, and contains 13 towns, 168 pariſhes, and about 150,300 inhabitants. Being agreeably ſituated between the mountainous country of Derbyſhire on the one hand, and the flat of Lincolnſhire on the other, it enjoys ſuch a temperature of ſoil and climate, as to render it one of the moſt fertile and agreeable counties in England. The principal rivers are the Trent and Idle. Almoſt the whole of the middle and weſtern parts of the county were formerly occupied by the extenſive foreſt of Sherwood, which is the only royal foreſt N. of the Trent, but the wood has in many parts been cleared, and the extent of the foreſt much contracted. A canal from Cheſterfield in Derbyſhire paſſes acroſs the northern part of this county, and joins the Trent juſt as that river ceaſes to be its boundary. The chief products of this county are corn, malt, pit-coal, of which there is great plenty; and a kind of ſtone ſomewhat like alabaſter, but not ſo hard, which, when burnt, makes a plaſter harder than that of Paris, with which the inhabitants generally plaſter the floors of their upper rooms, inſtead of boarding them. Their other commodities are malt, wool, liquorice, wood, fiſh, and fowl. Their manufactures chiefly conſiſt of frame-work knitting, glaſs, and earthen ware. The principal town is Nottingham.

Nottingham, Dorſetſh. N. of Melcomb-Regis. Notton, Dorſetſhire, near Crookſton. Notton, Wilts, near Laycock and Corſham. Notwell Court, Devonſh. near Topſham.

NOVALE, a ſmall town of the Treviſan.

NOVALLERA, a town and principality in Italy, ſubject to Modena. It is 10 miles NE. of Reggio.

NOVARA, a town of Milan, capital of the Novareſe, containing 17 pariſh churches, beſides the cathedral, and 18 convents.

NOVA SCOTIA, a peninſula of Acadia, about 240 miles in length, and from 30 to 60 in breadth, joined to the continent by a narrow iſthmus at the NE. extremity of the Bay of Fundy. The whole province was formerly called Nova Scotia, or Acadia, but in 1784 it was divided into two governments, New Brunſwick and Nova Scotia. Several new towns have been founded here, during and ſince the American war; and the country is in many parts cultivated and flouriſhing. The winter laſts here, with great ſeverity, during, at leaſt, 7 months in the year. The ſoil is tolerably fertile, though inferior to that in New England.

NOVA ZEMBLA. See ZEMBLA NOVA.

NOVI, a town of Italy, in Genoa.

NOVI BAZAR, or JENI BAZAR, a town of Bulgaria, ſituated on the river Ibar, 83 miles NE. of Raguſa.

NOVIGRAD, a town and county of Hungary, ſeated on a mountain near the Danube, 14 miles E. of Gran.

NOVIGRAD, a town of Venetian Dalmatia, ſeated on a bay of the ſame name.

NOVIGRAD, a town of Sclavonia.

NOU-KIANG, the Chineſe name of the river Ava.

NOVOGORODECK, a large town and a palatinate (otherwiſe called Black Ruſſia) of Lithuania.

NOVOGOROD, or NOVGOROD, one of the moſt ancient cities of Ruſſia, in the government of the ſame name. It was formerly called Great Novogorod, to diſtinguiſh it from other Ruſſian towns of the ſame appellation. It was the great mart of trade between Ruſſia and the Hanſeatic cities, and made the moſt rapid advances in opulence and population. Its territory extended to the N. as far as the frontiers of Livonia and Finland; comprifing great part of the province of Archangel, and a large diſtrict beyond the NW. limits of Siberia. At this period its dominions were ſo extenſive, its powers ſo great, and its ſituation ſo impregnable, as to give riſe to a proverb, "Who can reſiſt the gods and Great Novogorod?" But in 1477, this independent republic was obliged to ſubmit to the arms of Ivan Vaſſilivitch I. grand duke of Ruſſia. An enormous bell, denominated by the inhabitants eternal, and revered by them as the palladium of their liberty, was removed by their conqueror from Novogorod to Moſcow. It continued, nevertheleſs, the largeſt and moſt commercial city in Ruſſia, and contained, at leaſt, 400,000 people. It was firſt deſolated, in a manner, by the cruelties exerciſed here by Ivan Vaſſilivitch II. in 1570, but its ſplendour was not totally eclipſed until the Czar Peter built Peterſburgh, to which favourite capital he transferred all the commerce of the Baltic that had before centred here. It now contains ſcarce 7000 inhabitants; but a vaſt number of churches and convents ſtand melancholy monuments of its former magnificence. The town ſtretches on both ſides of the Volchova, a beautiful river, of conſiderable depth and rapidity, which ſeparates it into two diviſions; namely, the Trading Part and the quarter of St. Sophia. The cathedral of St. Sophia is one of the moſt ancient in Ruſſia: it was begun in 1044, by Vladimir Yaroſlavitch, duke of Novogorod, and completed in 1050. Several princes of the ducal family of Ruſſia are interred in this cathedral. Novogorod is ſituated near the Lake Ilmen, 92 miles SSE. of Peterſburgh. Lat. 58. 20. N. lon. 32. 45. E.

NOVOGOROD, once an independent republic, finally reduced by Ivan Vaſſilivitch II. in 1570, and united to the Ruſſian empire, of which it now forms a government. It is bounded on the N. by the government of Olonetz, and on the SW. by the government of Pſkov. The capital is of the ſame name.

NOVOGOROD, NISHNEI. See NISHNEI NOVOGOROD.

NOVOGOROD SEVERSKOI, a government of the Ruſſian empire, comprifing part of the Ukraine, or Little Ruſſia. Its capital, which is of the ſame name, is 201 miles SSW. of Moſcow.

NOVOGRODOCK,

NOVOGRODOCK, a town and palatinate of Ruſſian Lithuania, otherwiſe called BLACK RUSSIA, 200 miles ENE. of Warſaw.

Nour-Head, or Buoy at the Nore, Kent, in the Thames, oppoſite to Sheerneſs.

Now, a river in Derbyſhire, which runs into the Derwent, below Stratton.

Now-ſtool-Hill, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak.

Nowton, Suffolk, near Bury.

NOYA, a ſea-port of Galicia, noted for building of ſhips. It is ſituated at the mouth of the Tambro. Lat. 42. 49. N.

NOYERS, a town in the dept. of Yonne, ſeated on the river Serin; alſo a town in the dept. of Lower Alps; and a town in the dept. of the Meuſe.

NOYON, a town in the dept. of Oiſe, ſeated near the river Oiſe, 22 miles NW. of Soiſſons, and 60 N. by E. of Paris.

NOZEROY, a town in the dept. of Jura, 27 miles S. of Beſançon.

Nubey, Yorkſhire, W. Riding, SW. of Tadcaſter. Nuby, Yorkſhire, W. Riding, SE. of Ingleton.

NUBIA, a kingdom of Africa, bounded on the N. by Egypt, on the E. by the Red Sea, on the S. by Abyſſinia, and on the W. by countries of Africa, of which hardly the names are known. The river Nile runs through it, on the banks of which, and thoſe of the other rivers, it is uncommonly fertile, but in other places barren, ſandy, and in want of water. Money is of no uſe in this country in the way of trade, it being all carried on by way of exchange. Their bread and drink is made of a ſmall round ſeed, called doca, or teff, which is very ill taſted. Their houſes have mud walls, being very low, and covered with reeds. The habit of the rich is a veſt without ſleeves, and they have no coverings for their heads, legs, and feet; others wrap a piece of linen cloth about them, and the children go quite naked. They profeſs to be Mahometans. Great part of the coaſt is under the power of the Turks, as well as the country between Egypt and Dungala; the reſt is compoſed of ſeveral kingdoms, little known. The exports of this country are gold, elephants' teeth, civet, ſandal-wood, and ſlaves. Millet grows in great abundance; and the ſugar-cane is cultivated, but, for want of knowing well how to prepare it, the ſugar is black. The principal diſtricts known to the Europeans are Dungala and Sennaar.

Nuceſtown, in Cork, Munſter.

NUESTRA-SENORA-DE-LA-PAZ, a town of Peru, in the audience of Charcas. It is ſeated in a valley abounding with vines and fruits.

NUESTRA-SENORA-DE-LA-VITTORIA, a town of Tabaſco, Mexico, ſeated on the coaſt of the Bay of Campeachy.

NUEVA SEGOVIA, a town in the Iſle of Luzon, one of the Philippines, ſituated near the N. coaſt, 250 miles N. of Manilla.

NUITS, or NUYS, a town in the dept. of Côte d'Or, famous for its excellent wines. It is 12 miles S. of Dijon.

Nuke, Northumb. near Beltingham.

NUMIDIA. See BILEDULGERID.

NUN, or VLED DE NUN, a vaſt, but deſert province of Africa, S. of Sus. It is inhabited by different tribes of Arabs, nominally dependant on the emperor of Morocco. There is not a ſingle harbour or anchoring place, along a coaſt of 60 leagues, viz. to Cape Bojador.

Nunbrook, Yorkſ. W. of Dewſbury, has a bridge over the Calder. Nunburnham, Yorkſhire, E. of Pocklington. Nunckling, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, NW. of Hornſey.

NUNDYDROOG, a fortreſs of Hindooſtan, in Myſore, capital of a conſiderable diſtrict, built on the ſummit of a mountain almoſt inacceſſible. It was beſieged and ſtormed by the Britiſh troops, under Lord Cornwallis, in 1792, after a ſiege which laſted from September 22d to October 18th.

Nuneaton, Wilts, near Cricklade.

NUNEATON, a town of Warwickſhire, with a manufactory of woollen cloth. It is ſeated on the river Anker, 8 miles N. by E. of Coventry, and 99 NNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Nuneham, 5 miles E. by S. of Oxford. Nunhead, Surry, in Peckham pariſh. Nunnely, Shropſhire, near Wem. Nunnikirk, Northumb. S. of Rothbury. Nunnington, Yorkſ. between Slingſby-Caſtle and Helmeſley. Nunn's Green, near Derby. Nunny, Somerſetſh. Nunny, Cumberl. N. of Penrith. Nunriding, Northumb. 3 miles NW. of Morpeth. Nunſbrough, Northumb. near Corbeſter and Hexham, on the banks of the Tyne, on the brink of a precipice 200 feet high, over the fineſt natural theatre in the N. of England. Nunſtanton, Durham, on the Skern, E. of Biſhop-Auckland. Nunthorp, Yorkſ. N. of Stokeſley. Nunton, Wilts, SE. of Saliſbury. Nunwell, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Nunwich, Northumb. near the confluence of the Symondburn with the Tyne. Nupdown, Glouceſ. in Hill pariſh. Nupping-End, Glouceſ. near Aſhelworth.

NUREMBURG, an imperial city, one of the moſt handſome and flouriſhing places in Germany, and capital of Franconia. It is ſeated in a ſandy, barren ſoil, and yet the inhabitants are ſo induſtrious, that they have brought this republic into a very flouriſhing ſtate. It is about 6 miles in circumference, ſurrounded by high walls, flanked with 365 towers, as alſo with a deep ditch. The river Pegnitz runs through the middle, and divides it into two parts; over it are 6 wooden bridges, and 6 others of ſtone. Among the public buildings, two of the churches, the arſenal, and the very magnificent council houſe, are greatly admired. The townſmen are divided into eight quarters, or parts, and 131 captainſhips. The government is ariſtocratical. The great council is compoſed of 200 perſons, and the ſupreme council of 34 patricians, and of 8 of the moſt reputable tradeſmen. The burgeſſes are very induſtrious, and fine workmen in the arts. Their maps, prints, paintings, and engravings are in high eſteem, as well as their muſical and mathematical inſtruments; nor are they leſs curious in clock-work, and in the ſeveral manufactures of metal, ivory, wood, and alabaſter. The trade in toys made here, and ſold in England by the name of Dutch toys, is conſiderable, though it does not bring in ſo much money to the town as formerly. Here is alſo a famous academy for painting. The anatomical theatre, and the public library, are alſo worth notice. Geography is much indebted to the celebrated ſhop for land charts, eſtabliſhed here by John Baptiſt Homann. In the cleanneſs of their ſtreets, and the neatneſs of their houſes, they imitate the Dutch; and though they formerly kept to their old habits, they now follow the moſt faſhionable modes. Their religion is the Lutheran; yet ſeveral Roman Catholic cuſtoms are ſtill retained in their divine ſervice. The building called the church of the Holy Ghoſt, has a variety of reliques, as alſo the imperial crown, the imperial ſceptre, the globe of the empire, the ſword of St. Maurice, the imperial mantle, the white robe of the emperors, called the Dalmatic, the golden ſurplice, the mantle of the choir, and the gloves, the ſlippers, and the hereditary crown of the emperor Rodolph II. All theſe rarities are placed in a cheſt, which is ſuſpended by a rope in the dome, and they are never taken down but at the coronation of the emperor, or when any perſon of high diſtinction wants to ſee them. The ancient and ſuperb caſtle, or palace, which the inhabitants bought of the burgraves, is ſtill ſtanding at the extremity of the city. It was partly burnt down in 1420, and contains at preſent a granary, a pentagonal tower, and a priſon. Here are four Latin ſchools, beſide a famous college, or univerſity. This town has, in proceſs of time, obtained a conſiderable circle of territory, about 30 miles in diameter, and 100 in circumference, and in which are two large foreſts. Their manufactures are conveyed all over Europe by the means of two large fairs. The houſes are all built of free-ſtone, and are four or five ſtories high. It is ſeated almoſt in the centre of Germany, 55 miles NW. of Ratiſbon, and 250 W. by N. of Vienna.

Nurſted, Wilts, near Devizes. Nurſted, Hants, SE. of Petersfield. Nurſting, Hants, near Redbridge. Nurſtre, Staffordſhire, W. of Wolverhampton. Nusfield, Oxfordſh. E. of Wallingford. Nuthorn, Devonſ. near Tiverton. Nuthorn, Suſſex, NE. of Amberley. Nutcomb, Devonſ. in E. Allington parish. Nutfield, or Northfield, Surry, near Blechingley. Nuthall, near Nottingham. Nuthurſt, Suſſex, S. of Horſham. Nutley, Hants, between Alton and Whitchurch. Nutley, Suſſex, S. of Aſhdown Foreſt. Nutſted, Kent, 3 miles S. of Graveſend. Nutwith, Yorkſhire, near Maſham.

NUYS, or NUCSZ, a town of Cologne, Lower Rhine.

Nybly, Glouceſterſhire, near Durſley.

NYBORG, a ſea-port of Denmark, ſituated on the E. coaſt of the Iſle of Funen, 10 miles E. of Odenſee. The ſhips that paſs through the Great Belt, are obliged to pay toll here.

Nyde, or Ica, a river in Yorkſhire, running into the Ouſe at Nun-Monckton.

NYEVRE, a department of France bounded on the N. by the department of the Yonne, and on the W. by the department of the Cher. Nevers is the capital.

NYKOPING. See NICOPING.

NYKOPING, a ſea-port of Denmark, in the Iſle of Zealand, with a conſiderable commerce and a good harbour. Lat. 55. 57. N. lon. 11. 44. E.

NYLAND, a province of Sweden, lying on the Gulf of Finland, and to the W. of the province of Carelia. It is about 130 miles in length, and 90 in breadth, and is a level, fertile, pleaſant country, better peopled and cultivated than the neighbouring provinces.

Nyland

Nyland Hill, Somerſetſ. S. of Chedder.

NYMBURG, a town of Boleſlau, Bohemia, ſituated near the Elbe, 36 miles ENE. of Prague.

NYMPH-BANK, in St. George's Chanel, about ten leagues off the coaſt of Waterford, in Munſter. It is a great ſhing-bank, abounds with cod, ling, kate, bream, whiting, and other fiſh.

Nynehead, Somerſetſh. N. of Welington. Nyneton, Shropſhire, SW. of Bridgenorth.

NYON, a trading town and extenſive ailiwick, of Bern, in Switzerland, ſeated a fertile country, 10 miles N. of eneva.

NYONS, a town in the dept. of Drome, ſeated on the river Aigues, with a fine bridge of one arch, prodigiouſly high, the work of the Romans. Here is a mineral ſpring, and ſome manufactories of woollen ſtuffs and ſoap. It is 18 miles NE. of Orange.

NYSLOT, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Wiborg, 50 miles NW. of Wiborg.

NYSTADT, a town of Finland, ſeated on a bay of the Gulf of Bothnia, 22 miles NNW. of Abo.

Nyſum, Durham, on the Tees, SE. of Darlington. Nytimber, Suſſex, near Pagham.

OACCO, a town and province of Benguela, in Africa.

Oak, Staffordſh. near Bromwich-Weſt. Oaken, Staffordſh. near Codſall. Oak Farm, Dorſetſ. in Corſcomb pariſh. Oakfield Green, Berks, in Mortimer pariſh, towards Reading.

OAKHAMPTON, or OCKINGTON, a town of Devonſhire, with a manufacture of ſerges. It is ſeated on the river Oke, on the road between Launceſton and Crediton, 24 miles W. of Exeter, and 195 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Oak-Hill, Eſſex, near Rumford. Oak-Honour-Hill, Surry, near Dulwich. Oakington, 4 miles from Cambridge. Oakley Lodge, Glouceſ. a hamlet of Cirencester. Oakley, NW. of Bedford. Oakley, Dorſetſhire, 1 mile from Merley. Oakley, Staffordſh. near Croxal. Oakley, Oxfordſhire, near Chinner. Oaks, Shropſ. SW. of Condover. Oakwell-Hall, Yorkſ. E. of Halifax. Oatlands, Surry, near Weybridge. Oban, a village of Argyleſhire, on the ſea-coaſt, S. of Loch Etive. Here is an excellent fiſhing-ſtation, with a cuſtom-houſe: alſo a ſea-port in the county of Inverneſs, 20 miles WNW. of Inverary.

OBASINE, a town in the dept. of Correze, 5 miles S. of Tulles.

OBDACH, a town of Auſtria, in Stiria.

OBERKIRCH, a town in the circle of the Upper Rhine, 12 miles E. of Straſburg.

OBERLAND, formerly called HOCKERLAND, a fertile and well-cultivated province of Pruſſia.

OBERNDORFF, a town of Hohenburg, in Auſtrian Suabia, on the river Neckar.

OBERNPERG, a town of Bavaria, ſituated on the Inn; and a town of Mentz, Lower Rhine.

OBERSTENFELD, a town of Wirtemburg, Suabia.

OBERWESEL, a town of Triers.

Obley, Shropſ. between Clun-Caſtle, and Hopton-Caſtle.

OBOLLAH, a well peopled town of Perſian Irac, beautifully ſituated on the Tigris, near Baſſorah.

Oborn, Dorſetſhire, near Sherborn. Obridge, Somerſetſh. between Lediard and Wellington.

O'Brien's-Bridge, in Clare, Munſter.

OBY, a river of the Ruſſian empire, in Aſia, which riſes in the deſert of Iſchimſka, paſſes by Kolivan, and running N. joins the Irtyſh, near Tobolſki; it falls into the Frozen Ocean, in lat. 66. 55. N. lon. 70. 0. E.

Oby, Norfolk, near Thurn.

OCANA, a town of New Caſtile.

Ochelins, Devonſhire, near Exeter.

OCHILLS, the name of ſome verdant and gently-ſwelling hills of Perthſhire, S. of Strathearn.

OCHSENFURT, a town of Wurzburg, Franconia.

Ock, a river in Berkſhire, which runs into the Thames at Abingdon. Ock, a river in Devonſhire, which runs into the Towridge, below Hatherley.

OCKA, a river of Ruſſia, which paſſes by Ocka, Kaluga, and falls into the river Volga, near Niſhnei Novogorod.

Ockbrook, 5 miles from Derby. Ockenden, N. and S. Eſſex, S. of Cranham.

OCKER, a river of Lower Saxony, which paſſes by Wolfenbuttle, Brunſwick, &c. and runs into the Aller, 5 miles W. of Gifhorn.

Ockeridge, Glouceſt. a hamlet to Biſley. Ockerton, Oxfordſhire, W. of Banbury. Ockford, Dorſetſhire, in Marchwood Vale. Ockford, Child, Superior and Inferior, Dorſet. E. of the Stour. Ockford Fitzpaine, Dorſetſ. 3 miles SE. of Sturminſter Newton. Ockham, Surry, SE. of Woking. Ockleſton, Cheſhire, S. of Middlewich. Ockley, Bucks, NW. of Tame. Ockley, Worceſterſhire, near Salwarp. Ockley, Great and Little, Northamptonſhire, by Rockingham Foreſt. Ockley Park Houſe, Shropſ. near Ludlow. Ockold, Suffolk, S. of Eye. Ocull and Ocull Pichard, NE. of Hereford.

OCZAKOW, or OCHZAKOFF, a town lately of Turkey in Europe, but now included in new Ruſſia, or the government of Catherinenſlaf. It is ſeated at the mouth of the river Dnieper, oppoſite Kinburn, 190 miles N. by E. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 46. 50. N. lon. 33. 16. E.

Odcomb, Somerſetſ. between Crewkern and Yeovil. Oddeſton, Leiceſterſ. NW. of Boſworth. Oddleden, Weſtmorland, near Croſby-Ravenſworth. Odeby, S. of Leiceſter. Odebill, Bedfordſh. NW. of Bedford, and near Sharnbrook. Odel, Bedfordſhire.

ODENSEE, an ancient town of Denmark, capital of the Iſle of Funen, ſeated on a ſmall river, about 2 miles from the Bay of Stegeſtand, and 75 miles W. of Copenhagen. Lat. 55. 30. N. lon. 10. 17. E.

ODER, a river of Germany, which riſes in Moravia, about 18 miles NE. of Olmutz. It runs NW. through Sileſia, and then into the New Marche of Brandenburg and Pomerania, where it forms a large lake, called the Friſch Haff, afterward falling into the Baltic Sea by three mouths; between which lie the Iſlands of Uſedom and Wollin.

ODERBURG, a town of Teſchen, Sileſia; and a town of the Middle Marche, Brandenburg: both are ſituated on the Oder.

ODERNHEIM, a town of Deux Ponts, circle of Upper Rhine; and a town in the palatinate of the Rhine, 14 miles S. of Mentz.

ODIHAM, a town of Hampſhire, ſituated on a navigable canal, from the Wye and Thames, to Baſingſtoke, 24 miles NE. of Wincheſter, and 42 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Odingley, Worc. 2 miles SE. of Droitwich. Oddington, Glouceſt. 2 miles from Stow. Odington, Oxfordſh. near Iſlip. Odſtoke, Wilts, near Saliſbury. Odſy Grange, Hertfordſhire, between Baldock and Royſton.

OELAND, a fertile iſland of Finland, about 70 miles in length and 6 in breadth. It contains about 7000 inhabitants. Lat. 56. 45. N. lon. 16. 40. E.

OEBSFELD, a town of Magdeburg.

OELS, a city and principality of Sileſia, 14 miles ENE. of Breſlaw.

OELSNITZ, a town of the Vogtland, Upper Saxony.

OESEL, an iſland of Ruſſia, in the Baltic, about 8 miles in circumference. Lat. 58. 20. N. lon. 22. E.

OETING, a town of Upper Bavaria.

OETING, or OETINGEN, a town of Germany, in the circle of Suabia, capital of a county of the ſame name; ſeated on the river Wirnitz, 16 miles NNW. of Donawert.

OFANTO, a river of Naples (the ancient Aufidus) which riſes near Conza, and falls into the Adriatic, 10 miles W. of Trani.

Ofchurch, Warwickſhire, NW. of Southam.

OFFA'S DIKE, an intrenchment, yet viſible, caſt up by Offa, a Saxon king, to defend England againſt the incurſions of the Welch. It runs through Herefordſhire, Shropſhire, Montgomeryſhire, and Denbighſhire, to Holywell, in Flintſhire.

Offam, Suſſex, NE. of Arundel.

OFFENBACH, a town of Iſenburg; and a town of Salm; both in the circle of Upper Rhine.

OFFENBURG, a town of Ortenau, in Suabia, ſituated on the Kinzig.

Offenham, or Uffenton, Worceſterſh. near Eveſham. Offerton, Cheſhire, E. of Altringham. Offington, or Uffington, Berks, near Faringdon. Offington, Suſſex, near Terring. Offley, Biſhop's and High, Staffordſhire, near Eccleſhall. Offrd, near Derby. Offord, Warwickſhire, part of the lordſhip of Wooton Haven. Offord Cluny, and Darcy, Huntingdonſh. near Bugden. Offton, Suffolk, SW. of Needham. Offam, Kent, 1 mile and a half from W. Malling. Offley, Great and Little, Herts, SW. and W. of Hitchin: named, perhaps, from Offa the Mercian king, who lived a good while, and died at Great Offley. Offwell, Devonſhire, between Axminſter and Honiton.

niton. Ogborn, St. Andrew's, St. George, and Maſſey, Wiltſhire, N. of Marlborough. Ogerſtone, Huntingdonſ. W. of Stilton. Ogle-Caſtle, Northumb. NW. of Point Eland. Oglethorp, Yorkſ. near Bramham. Ogmore River, Glamorganſhire. Ognerſh, Surry, 3 miles E. of Godalmin. Ogſtone, Derb. NW. of Alfreton. Ogwell, E. and W. Devonſ. 1 mile from Newton-Friars.

OHETEROA, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, 13 miles in circuit, without either harbour or anchorage, and only a bay on the W. coaſt, which is foul and rocky. It is neither ſo populous nor fertile as the iſlands to the northward of it, but the inhabitants diſplay greater ingenuity in carving, cutting, and poliſhing their clubs and ſpears, and in their manufactures of cloth. They form circles round their arms and legs, but have no figures on the other parts of their body. The people are luſty, and rather browner than thoſe of the Society Iſles. Lat. 22. 27. S. lon. 150. 47. W.

OHIO, in N. America, one of the moſt beautiful rivers in the world; it has its ſource in the Alleganv Mountains, and is called the Allegany, till its junction with the Monongahela, at Fort Pitt, when it firſt receives the name of Ohio. It runs a courſe of near 1200 miles, in a SW. direction, till it joins the Miſſiſſippi, about 10 miles above New Madrid, forming the N. boundary of the ſtate of Kentucky, and receiving in its courſe, numbers of large and ſmall rivers. The only diſadvantage this river has, is a rapid, one mile and a half long, and a mile and a quarter broad, called the Falls of Ohio, in latitude 38. 8. N. In this place the river runs over a rocky bottom, and the deſcent is ſo gradual, that the fall does not, probably, in the whole, exceed 20 feet. When the ſtream is low, empty boats only can paſs and repaſs this rapid; their lading muſt be tranſported by land; but, when high, boats of any burden may paſs in ſafety. Excepting this place, there is hardly a finer river in the world for navigation by boats. At a ſalt-ſpring, near this river, very large bones have been found, far ſurpaſſing the ſize of any ſpecies of animals now in America. The head appears to have been about three feet long, the ribs ſeven, and the thigh bones about four; one of which is depoſited in the library at Philadelphia, and is ſaid to weigh ſeventy-eight pounds. The tuſks are above a foot in length, the grinders above five inches ſquare, and eight inches long. Specimens of theſe bones have been ſent to France and England, where they have been found, upon compariſon, to be remains of the ſame ſpecies of animal that produce the foſſil bones, which have been diſcovered in Tartary, Chili, and ſeveral other places, both of the old and new continent. What animal this is, and by what means its ruins are found in regions ſo widely different, and where none ſuch exiſts at preſent, is a queſtion of difficult deciſion. The bones bear a great reſemblance to thoſe of the elephant. There is no terreſtrial animal now known, large enough to produce them. The tuſks, with which they are equally furniſhed, equally produce true ivory. But, from the form of the teeth, it has been obſerved, that they muſt have belonged to a carnivorous animal, whereas the habits of the elephant are foreign to ſuch ſuſtenance, and his jaws totally unprovided with the teeth neceſſary for its uſe. From the whole, it has been concluded, to the ſatisfaction of naturaliſts, that theſe bones belonged to a quadruped, now unknown, and whoſe race is probably extinct, unleſs it may be found in the extenſive continent of New Holland, whoſe receſſes have not yet been pervaded by the curioſity or avidity of civilized man.

OICH, LOCH, a lake of Inverneſſhire, extending four miles long, and a quarter of a mile wide. It contains ſome little wooded iſlands; and its waters flow through Loch Neſs into the Frith of Murray. It is 4 miles SW. of Fort Auguſtus.

OIRA, a town of Otranto, Naples.

OISANS, a town in the department of Iſere, 28 miles SE. of Grenoble.

OISE, a department of France, lying S. of the department of the Somme. It takes its name from a river which riſes on the confines of Hainault, and paſſing by Noyon, Compeigne, Pontoiſe, &c. falls into the Seine 5 miles S. of Pontoiſe. Beauvais and Compeigne are alternately the capitals.

Oke, Somerſetſhire, near Milverton. Okebury, Hants, 6 miles from Andover. Okeford, Devonſ. on a river running into the Ex, near Bampton. Okeford, Glouc. in Marſhfield pariſh. Okeford, Child, or Okeford, Upper and Lower, Dorſetſ. near Blandford. Okeford Eſkilling, or Shilling, Dorſetſhire, near Sturminſter.

*OKEHAM, the county town of Rutlandſhire, is pretty well built, and has a free ſchool, and a hoſpital. The firſt time any peer of the realm comes within the precincts of this lordſhip, he forfeits a ſhoe from the horſe he rides on, to the lord of the manor, unleſs he commutes for it with money. It is ſeated in a rich valley, called the Vale of Catmos, 28 miles S. by E. of Nottingham, and 98 N. by W. of London. Markets on Monday and Saturday.

Okeham, Suſſex, near Lewes. Okehampton Monks, Devonſ. near Hatherley. Okehanger, Hants, SE. of Alton. Okehanger Mere, Cheſhire, S. of Sandbach. Okehurſt, Suſſex, N. of Billinghurſt. Okeley, Surry, W. of Newdigate. Okeley, Suffolk, between Denham and Diſs. Okeley, Shropſhire, by Biſhop's-Caſtle. Okeley, Church and North, Hants, SW. of Baſingſtoke. Okeley, Eaſt, or Water, Berkſhire, near Bray. Okeley, Great and Little, Eſſex, SW. of Harwich. Oken, Staffordſhire, near Codſal, Okeney, Bucks, near Newport Pagnel. Okenſhaw, Yorkſ. in Burſtall pariſh. Okenyate, Shropſhire, near Wrekin-Hill. Okeover, Staffordſhire, on the Dove, near Blore. Okeſey, Wilts, NE. of Malmſbury. Oke's-Green, Derbyſ. S. of Aſhburn. Oketborp, Derbyſh. near Aſhby de la-Zouch. Okewood, Surry, near Okeley, on the borders of Suſſex. Okeworth, Yorkſ. SW. of Keighley. Okeymour, Staffordſhire, near Alton.

*OKINGHAM, or WOKINGHAM, a town of Berkſhire, (but partly ſituated in Wiltſhire,) with a ſmall manufactory of denims, and ſome mills for throwing ſilk. It is 8 miles SE. of Reading, and 32 W. of London. Market on Tueſday.

OKOTZK, one of the four provinces of Irkutsk, in Ruſſia. Its capital, of the ſame name, is ſeated at the mouth of the Okota, in a bay of the Eaſtern Ocean. From this port veſſels ſail to Kamtſchatka. The trade between here and Jakutſk is carried on partly by land and partly by water. The journey by land carriage takes up near ſix weeks, as the road lies over mountains, and through moraſſes and thick woods of larch and birch trees. Every thing is carried this way on horſes or rein-deer, the latter of which are furniſhed by the Tunguſians.

Olaves, St. in Waterford, Munſter.

Olaves, St. Suffolk, SW. of Yarmouth.

Okon, a river in Herefordſhire.

Old Abbey, in Cork, Munſter.

Oldacres, Durham, near Sedgfield. Oldbarrow, or Oldborough, Worceſterſ. adjoining Warwickſh. near an ancient tumulus or barrow.

Oldbridge, in Louth, Leinſter, 2 miles from Drogheda. A very handſome obeliſk is erected here, on a rock, on the banks of the Boyne, in commemoration of the victory of William III. over his father-in-law, James II.

Oldbury, Glouceſ. in Stapleton pariſh. Oldbury, Suſſex, between Chicheſter and Arundel. Oldbury, Warwickſ. S. of Atherſton. Oldbury, Warwickſ. a mile from Henley in Arden. Oldbury, Glouc. in Thornbury pariſh. Oldbury Chapel, Staffordſ. 1 mile E. of Dudley-Caſtle. Oldbury Hill, Wilts, near E. and W. Kennet. Oldbury-on-the Hill, Glouc. 6 miles from Tetbury. Oldbury on the Severn, Glouceſ. near Auſt Ferry. Old Carliſle, Cumberl. 1 mile S. of Wigton. Oldcaſtle, Cheſhire, near Malpas. Oldcaſtle, Monmouth. on the Munnow N. of Alterinnis.

*OLD CASTLE, a town of Meath, in Leinſter, 41 miles from Dublin.

Oldcaſtle, in Cork, Munſter.

Old Court-Dowlas, Herefordſh. S. of New-Court.

OLDENBURG, a town and county of Weſtphalia, having E. Frieſland on the W. and the county of Delmonhurſt on the E. It is about 45 miles in length and 30 in breadth. It is a marſhy country, with fat paſtures, but ſubject to great inundations, and is noted for fine horſes. On account of Oldenburg, the king of Denmark, to whom the country belongs, has a ſeat and voice in the Weſtphalian College of the counts of the empire, as alſo at the diets of the circle of Weſtphalia. The town of Oldenburg is 39 miles ESE. of Emden.

OLDENBURG, a town of Holſtein; and a town of Paderborn, Weſtphalia.

OLDENDORF, a town of Schawenburg, Weſtphalia, ſituated on the Weſer.

OLDENZEEL, a town, the capital of Twente, in Overyſſel. The neighbouring diſtrict is called Sallant, or Zallant, which, according to ſome authors, means the country of the Saliens or ancient Salii.

OLDELSO, a town of Holſtein, 15 miles W. of Lubeck.

Oldfield, Cheſhire, on the Dee, between Cheſter and Hyle-Lake. Oldfield, Linc. SW. of Market Raiſin. Oldfield, Yorkſ. near Rippon. Oldford, Middleſex, in Stepney pariſh, near Stratford le-Bow and Hackney. Oldford, Somerſ. between Frome and Beckington. Oldham, Lanc. 6 miles NE. of Manchester.

OLD HEAD OF KINSALE, a rocky promontory of Cork, in Munſter, running far into the ſea. It is 4 miles S. of Kinſale, ſile, and has a light-houſe on it Hawks and ſea-eagles, or oſpreys, build their neſts among the rocks.

Old-Hurſt, Huntingdonſhire, near St. Ives. Oldiſh, Warwickſh. S. of Balſhall. Oldland, Glouceſ. near Kingswood-Foreſt.

Old-Merrion, in Dublin, Leinſter near the metropolis. Old-Mill-Street, in Cork, Munſter.

Old Mixon, Somerſetſ. near Bridgewater. Oldmoor, Northumberland, near Morpeth. Oldridge, Devonſhire, SE. of Crediton.

Old Roſs, in Wexford, Leinſter, 63 miles from Dublin.

Oldſtoke, Hampſ. near Micheldever.

Oldſtone, in Antrim, Ulſter.

Oldton, Suffolk, 2 miles from Leoſtoff.

Oldtown, in Donegal, Ulſter.

Oldtown. Northumb. with the Chapel-Houſe, S. of Beltingham. Oldtown, Northumb. E. of Oldtown, with the Chapel Houſe. Oldtown, Heref. near Alterinnis. Oldtown, Yorkſ. NW. of Halifax. Oldwark Spring, Nottingh. near E. Bridgeford. Oldwincle. Northamptonſh. N. of Thrapſton. Oldwives, or Oldwood Leas. Kent, in Chilham pariſh, Olpen, or Oldpen, Glouceſterſ 3 miles from Durſley.

OLERON, a town and fertile iſland of France, lying on the coaſt of the department of Lower Charente, 5 miles from the continent. It is 15 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. The number of inhabitants is about 12,000. They are moſtly ſeamen. In the reign of Richard I. this iſland was part of the poſſeſſions of the crown of England; and here that monarch compiled the code of maritime laws, which are called the laws of Oleron, and are received by all nations in Europe, as the ground and ſubſtruction of all their marine conſtitutions.

OLERON, a town in the depart. of Lower Pyrenees, 10 miles SW. of Pau. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of a biſhop, who had the title of Premier Baron of Bearn.

Olewark, Yorkſ. near Boroughbridge.

OLESKO, a town of Belcz, Poland.

OLIKA, a town of Volhynia, Poland.

OLINDA, or FERNAMBUC, a town and juriſdiction in the E. part of Braſil, on the coaſt of the Atlantic. Lat. 8. 13. S.

OLITE, a town of Navarre, formerly the reſidence of the kings of Navarre, but now much reduced. It is 20 miles S. of Pampeluna.

OLIVA, a ſea-port of Pruſſian Pomerania, 10 miles NW. of Dantzick; alſo a town of Valencia.

OLIVENZA, a town of Alentejo.

Ollantigh, Kent, in the pariſh of Wye. Ollerſet, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Ollerſton, Yorkſ. SE. of Pickering. Ollerton, Cheſhire, SE. of Knottsford.

Ollerton*, Yorkſ. S. of Sherborn.

OLMEDA, a decayed town of New Caſtile.

OLMUTZ, a trading town of Germany, capital of Moravia, and a circle of the ſame name, with a college, a riding academy, and a learned ſociety. It is well built, populous, and fortified, and is ſeated on the river Morawa, 80 miles N by E. of Vienna, and 97 SSE. of Breſlau.

OLNEY, a town of Bucks, with a conſiderable manufacture of bone lace. It is ſeated on the river Ouſe, 12 miles SE. of Northampton, and 56 NNW. of London. Market on Monday.

OLONNE, an iſland, town, and harbour, in the dept. of Vendee, 30 miles NW. of Rochelle, and 258 SW. of Paris.

OLONETZ, a town of Ruſſia, famous for its mines of copper and iron, and its mineral ſpring. It is ſituated in the government of Oloneſkoi, on the river Olonza, which falls into the E. ſide of the Lake Ladoga, 104 miles NE. of Peterſburgh.

Olſton, Somerſetſ. near Briſtol.

OLT. See ALAUTA.

OLTEN, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of a bailiwick, in the canton of Soleure.

Olton, Staffordſhire, N. of Stone. Olton, Upper and Lower, Staffordſh. near Norbury. Olton, Low, Cheſhire, near Delamere-Foreſt. Olten End, or Oken-End, Warwickſh. N. of Solihull. Olveſton, Glouceſterſh. near Auſt Paſſage.

OLYMPO, or OLYMPUS, a mountain of Natolia, one of the higheſt and moſt conſiderable in Aſia, the top of which is always covered with ſnow; alſo a mountain of Theſſaly, 10 miles N. of Lariſſa.

*OMAGH, a town of Tyrone, in Ulſter, in which the aſſizes for the county are held. It is 86 miles NNW. of Dublin.

OMAN, a province of Arabia, bounded on the N. by the Perſian Gulf, on the E. by the Ocean, and on the S. and W. by extenſive deſarts. It is pretty fertile in barley, lentiles, grapes, dates, and other fruits, and the country affords plenty of cheeſe. It is poſſeſſed by a number of petty ſovereigns or ſchiecks, the moſt conſiderable of whom is called the the Imam of Oman. The principal towns are Oman, in lat. 24. N. lon. 57. 20. E. and Maſcat.

Omberley, Devonſ. near Torrington.

OMBERSLEY, a town of Worceſterſ. W. of Droitwich. Market diſuſed.

OMBRONE, a town of Sienna, ſituated at the mouth of a river of the ſame name.

OMEGNA, a town of Milan.

OMER, ST. a large and populous town in the department of the Straits of Calais. The hoſpital and college here are worthy of notice. It is ſeated on the river Aa, on the ſide of a hill, 8 miles NW. of Aire, and 135 N. of Paris.

Omerg, in Cork, Munſter.

OMLANDS, or OMMERLANDS, a name given to the environs of Groningen.

OMMEN, a town of Overyſſel, ſituated on the Vecht.

OMMENBURG, a town of Mentz.

OMMIRABI, or MORBEYA, a river of Morocco, which riſes in Mount Atlas, and falls into the Atlantic near Azamor.

OMOA, a ſeaport town in the country of Honduras, in N. America, defended by a fort. Lat. 15. 50. N. lon. 89. 55. W.

ON, a town of Egypt, the ancient Heliopolis, was formerly a conſiderable place, ſeated near the Nile, 10 miles NE. of Cairo, and had a ſuperb temple, dedicated to the Sun. At preſent it is almoſt ruined, and bears the name of Aimkems.

On, High and Low, Staffordſhire, NW. of Penkridge.

Oncot, Staffordſhire, near Butterton.

Oneby, Lincolnſhire, N. of Stamford.

ONEEHEOW, one of the Sandwich Iſlands, 5 leagues W. of Atooi, containing about 10,000 inhabitants. Its eaſtern coaſt is high, and riſes abruptly from the ſea; but the other parts conſiſt of low ground, except a round bluff head on the SE. point. It produces plenty of yams, and of the ſweet root, called tee, but Captain Cook and Captain King could obtain no other proviſions. Lat. 21. 50. N. lon. 161. 0. W.

ONEGA, or ONEZKOE, a lake of Ruſſia, in the government of Olonetzkoi, 120 miles in length, and 40 in its mean breadth, has a communication with the Lake Ladoga, and conſequently with Peterſburgh.

ONEGA, a river of Ruſſia, which riſes near Kargapol, in the government of Vologda, and falls into the White Sea, near Oneg, in the government of Archangel.

ONEGLIA, a principality of Italy, nearly ſurrounded by the territory of Genoa, and ſubject to the king of Sardinia. It conſiſts of three valleys, Oneglia, Maro, and Prela, altogether extending 15 miles from the ſea, and contains 53 towns or villages, and about 14,000 inhabitants. The country produces wine, fruits, and excellent oil. Oneglia, the capital, is 30 miles NE. of Nice.

ONEIDA, LAKE, in the ſtate of New-York, about 20 miles SW. of Fort Stainwix, is 20 miles long and 3 wide.

Ongar, High, Eſſex, NE. of Chipping Ongar.

ONGAR PARK, a town in Eſſex, near High Ongar, from which it is ſeparated by Greenſted and Bobbingworth. Market on Saturday.

ONGOLE, a town and diſtrict in the N. part of the Carnatic, 90 miles NNE. of Cuddapa.

Onhouſe, Suffolk, near Stow Market.

Onibury, Shropſhire, NW. of Ludlow.

Only, Northamptonſhire, E. of Dunchurch.

Onneley, Staffordſhire, NW. of Whitmore.

Onney, a river in Shropſhire, which runs into the Temd, 2 miles NW. of Ludlow.

ONORE, a ſea-port of Canara, on the coaſt of Malabar, 80 miles SSE. of Goa.

ONONDAGO, a river of N. America, which runs from Lake Oneida to Lake Ontario; this laſt lake it enters at Oſwego.

ONRUST, a ſmall iſland of Java, in the harbour of Batavia, where the Dutch build and careen their ſhips.

ONSLOW, a county of N. Carolina, and a town of Acadia, in Novo Scotia, 42 miles N. of Halifax.

Onſlow, SW. of Shrewſbury.

ONTARIO, a lake of N. America, about 600 miles in circumference. It abounds with fiſh of an excellent flavour, among which are the Oſwego baſs, weighing three or four pounds. On its S. ſide it receives the waters of Lake Erie, by means of the river Niagara; near the SE. part it receives the river Oſwego; and on the NE. its waters enter the river Iroquois, which river, at Montreal, takes the name of St. Lawrence.

OODOOANNULLAH, a town of Hindooſtan Proper, in Bengal, ſeated on the W. bank of the Ganges, which is high and bold, and at the foot of a chain of hills. The ſituation is eſteemed unhealthy, on account of the foreſts in its vicinity. It was the ſeat of the government of Bengal, under the ſultan Sujah, till he fell in the conteſt for empire with his brother Aurungzebe. The numerous ruins here and in the neighbourhood, evince his paſſion for building; and the great extent of many of them affords a proof of his magnificence. There ſtill remains

emains a part of the palace, which, in his ime, was nearly deſtroyed by fire. Here s an elegant bridge over the Ganges, uilt by the ſame prince; and famous for he victory gained over Meer Coſſim, in 764, by the late Major Adams; 82 miles l. by W. of Moorſhedabad. Lat. 24. 8. N. lon. 87. 55. E.

OONALASHKA, one of the iſlands of he Northern Archipelago, viſited by Capain Cook in his laſt voyage. The native nhabitants of this iſland are, to all appearances, a very peaceable people, having een much poliſhed by the Ruſſians, who ow keep them in a ſtate of ſubjection. As the iſland furniſhes them with ſubſiſtnce, ſo it does, in ſome meaſure, with lothing, which is chiefly compoſed of tins. Fiſh, birds, roots, berries, and even ea-weed, compoſe their food. They dry uantities of fiſh during the ſummer, hich they lay up in ſmall huts for their ſe in winter. They did not appear to e very deſirous of iron, nor to want any ther inſtrument, except ſewing needles, heir own being formed of bone. With hoſe they ſew their canoes, and make heir clothes, and alſo work very curious mbroidery. They uſe, inſtead of thread, he fibres of plants, which they ſplit to the hickneſs required. All ſewing is performed by the females, who are ſhoemakers, taylors, and boat-builders. They manufacture mats, and baſkets of graſs, which are both ſtrong and beautiful. Lat. 53. 5. N. lon. 165. 0. W.

OOSTBORCH, a town in the iſland of Cadſand, 4 miles NE. of Sluys.

OOSTENBY, a town of Sweden, in the iſland of Oeland, 27 miles S. of Borkholm.

OPORTO, or PORTO, a handſome city and ſea-port of Douro, in Portugal, with an excellent harbour. It is noted for its ſtrong wines, upwards of 80,000 pipes of which are exported annually; whence all red wines that come from Spain or Portugal to England, are called Port wines. The road is ſpacious, and will contain a large fleet; that from Brazil ſometimes rides here. Next to Liſbon, it is the richeſt, moſt populous, and moſt commercial town in the kingdom. Here is an arſenal for fitting out ſhips of war, which are built in the docks. It is ſeated on the declivity of a mountain, about 3 miles from the mouth of the Douro, and 147 N. by E. of Liſbon. Lat. 41. 10. N. lon. 8. 21. W.

OPPELN, a town of Sileſia, capital of a principality of the ſame name, with a fine hoſpital. The chief tribunal of juſtice, and the firſt conſiſtory of Sileſia, were ſettled here in 1742. The principality contains 27 towns, and but few villages. It is fortified in the ancient manner, and is ſeated on the river Oder, 35 miles SE. of Breſlau.

OPPENHEIM, a town and bailiwick in the palatinate of the Rhine.

OPPIDO, a town of Calabria Ultra; and a town of Baſilicata; both in Naples.

Or, or Ore, a river in Suffolk, which runs into the ſea at Orford Haven.

ORACH, a town of Turkiſh Boſnia.

ORAN, or WARRAN, a town of Tremeſen, in Barbary, with ſeveral forts, and an excellent harbour. It is ſeated partly on the ſide of a hill, and partly on a plain, almoſt oppoſite to Carthagena, in Spain. It is about a mile and a half in circumference, and is ſubject to the Spaniards. On the 8th of October, 1790, this place was nearly deſtroyed by an earthquake, little but the exterior walls being left ſtanding; and 2000 perſons periſhed on this occaſion. It is 160 miles W. by S. of Algiers. Lat. 36. 2. N. lon. 0. 8 W.

ORANGE, an ancient and conſiderable town in the department of Drome. It was an important place in the time of the Romans. The triumphal arch, viſited by connoiſſeurs, and which is 200 paces from the town, was formerly within its limits. This arch, which was much damaged in 1707 and 1709, was erected by Caius Marius and Luctatius Catulus, after the victory which they obtained over the Cimbri and the Teutones. Here are alſo the remains of a fine amphitheatre, and ſome aqueducts, which eſcaped the fury of the Goths and Saracens. The principality, which is about 10 miles long, and 7 broad, contains one city, two ſmall towns, and nine villages. The ſovereignty of it was lodged in the Houſe of Naſſau, from 1598 to 1702, when it reverted to Frederic William, king of Pruſſia, on the death of William III. king of England, and ſtadtholder of Holland. By the treaty of Utrecht, however, it was ceded to the houſe of Bourbon. Orange is ſeated in a fine plain, on the little river Aigues, 26 miles N. of Avignon.

ORANIENBURG, a town and palace in the Middle Marche, Brandenburg, ſeated on the river Havel.

Oranmore, in Galway, Connaught.

ORATAVIA, a ſea-port on the W. coaſt of the Iſland of Teneriff, and the chief place of trade, but the harbour is unſafe in a NW. wind. It contains one church and ſeveral convents.

ORBASSAN, a town of Piedmont, 6 miles SW. of Turin.

ORBE,

ORBE, an ancient and handſome town, in the Pays de Vaud, capital of a bailiwick, whoſe ſovereignty is divided between the cantons of Bern and Friburg. Its romantic ſituation, the boldneſs of the ſingle-arched bridge projecting over the Orbe, the wild ſcenery on the banks of that river, its frequent cataracts, and the various pictureſque views in the neighbourhood, are much admired by travellers. It is ſeated on a river of the ſame name, 24 miles SW. of Friburg.

ORBITELLO, a ſea-port of Sienna, with a good harbour, and well fortified. It is ſubject, however, to Naples. Lat. 42.28. N.

ORBOE, a river of France, which riſes in the mountains of the Cevennes, 8 miles NW. of Lodeve, waters Beziers, and falls into the Gulf of Lyons, 8 miles below that town.

Orby, Lincolnſhire, NE. of Spilſby.

ORCADES, or ORKNEYS, a cluſter of iſlands on the N. of Scotland, from which they are ſeparated by a channel, 20 miles in length, and 6 in its neareſt breadth. Their number has generally been reckoned 30, of which 26 are inhabited; the reſt are called holms, and are uſed only for paſturage. The principal one, called the Main Land, or Pomona, greatly exceeds the others in extent. Beyond this iſland, to the NE. are ſeen, among others, Rowſay and Weſtra, Shappinſha, and Edda, Stronſa, Sanda, and N. Ronalſha. To the S. appear the Iſles of Hoy and S. Ronalſha, with others of inferior note. The currents and tides, which flow between theſe iſlands, are extremely rapid and dangerous; and near the ſmall Iſle of Swinna are two whirlpools, that have been known to ſnatch in boats and light veſſels, which were inſtantly ſwallowed up. The ſtrait, called Pentland Frith, which divides theſe iſlands from the county of Caithneſs, is likewiſe very dangerous to thoſe who are not well acquainted with the tides and currents; eſpecially in paſſing the Pentland Skerries, a cluſter of rocks that lie in the E. entrance of the Frith. Springs of pure water are found in all the mountainous parts of theſe iſlands; and there are numerous lakes and rivulets abounding in fiſh. The heath on theſe mountains ſhelters grouſe, plovers, ſnipes, &c. but here are neither partridges, hares, nor foxes. There are numbers of ſheep and ſmall black cattle. The products of the valleys and plains are bear (an inferior kind of barley) and oats, but no other ſort of grain. The climate of theſe iſlands is unfavourable; although they do not ſuffer ſo much from froſt and ſnow, as might be ſuppoſed from their northerly poſition. In general, the air is moiſt; and they are often viſited by dreadful ſtorms of wind, rain, and thunder. Their longeſt day is 19 hours and a half; their ſhorteſt four and a half. Thus, for about three weeks in midſummer they enjoy the light of the ſun, almoſt without intermiſſion; but, for the ſame ſpace in winter, that luminary hardly riſes above the horizon, and is commonly obſcured by clouds and miſts. In this gloomy ſeaſon, the abſence of day is ſupplied partly by moon-light. But the radiance of the Aurora Borealis contributes ſtill more effectually to ſupply this want. The almoſt inceſſant corruſcations of theſe meteors are, indeed, ſublimely beautiful; and we, who only ſee the extremities of theſe northern phenomena, have but a faint idea of their ſplendour and their motions, in the higher latitudes. The inhabitants are robuſt and hardy; the inferior claſſes are active and induſtrious, while thoſe of ſuperior rank are diſtinguiſhed for politeneſs and hoſpitality. The Teutonic, or Pictiſh, language, was in general uſe here till the laſt century; but, except in Foula, where a few words are ſtill known by aged people, it is quite loſt. The Engliſh language, with a Norwegian accent, is now generally ſpoken in theſe iſlands, although many of the inhabitants uſe the Norſe. The principal trade of theſe iſlands is with Leith, Hamburgh, and Bergen. Their chief exports are linen and woollen yarn, ſtockings, butter, dried fiſh, herrings, oils, feathers, with ſkins of various kinds, and kelp. The Orkneys contain about 23,000 inhabitants, who are divided into 3 preſbyteries, and 18 miniſteries.

Orchard, Devonſh. between Taviſtock and Oakhampton. Orchard, Dorſetſhire, in Purbeck Iſle, 2 miles from Corfe-Caſtle. Orchard, Dorſetſhire, in Whitchurch pariſh. Orchard E. and W. Dorſetſhire, 2 miles from Bedceiſter.

Orchard, in Carlow, Leinſter.

Orchard-Houſe, Middl. E. of Poplar. Orchardley, Somerſ. N. of Frome. Orchard-Portman, Somerſ. near Taunton. Orchardſtoke, Glouceſ. between Cheltenham and Tewkſbury. Orchard-Windham, Somerſ. in a vale between Stamford, Brett, and Nettlecomb. Orcharton, Devonſ. near Modbury. Orcheſton, St. George and St. Mary's, on or near Saliſbury plain, NE. of Hatchbury.

ORCHIES, an ancient town in the dept. of the North, 14 miles SSE. of Liſle.

ORCHILLA, a ſmall iſland, or rather a cluſter of iſlands, in the W. Indies, near the the coaſt of Terra Firma. The ſoil, from its flatneſs, is ſalt, and conſequently, produces few plants. The only animals found here are goats and lizards. Lon. 65. 20. W. lat. 12. N.

Orde, E. and W. Northumberland, near Norham.

ORDINGEN, a town of Cologne.

ORDUNA, a town in Biſcay, 20 miles SW. of Bilboa.

Ordſall, Nottinghamſ. E. of Redford.

OREBRO, a long, narrow town of Sweden, capital of the province of Nericia. Here are manufactures of fire-arms, cloth, and tapeſtry; and they carry on a conſiderable trade with Stockholm, acroſs the Hielmar and Maeler, by means of the canal of Arboga; ſending iron, vitriol, and red paint, in particular to that capital. Orebro is ſeated near the weſtern extremity of the Lake Hielmar, (being quite ſurrounded with water (88 miles SSW. of Stockholm.

OREGRUND, a ſea-port of Upland, in Sweden, ſeated on the Gulf of Bothnia, 34 miles NNE. of Upſal.

OREL, a government of Ruſſia. Its capital, of the ſame name, is ſeated on the rivers Occa and Orel, 176 miles SW. by S. of Moſcow.

ORELLANA. See AMAZON.

ORENBURG, a province and its capital in the government of Ufa, in Ruſſia, ſituated on the Ural, 180 miles S. of Ufa.

ORENSE, a town of Galicia, ſituated on the Minho, 37 miles SE. of Compoſtella. It is noted for hot and moderately warm ſprings, the waters of both which are ſalutary in ſeveral diſtempers.

ORFA, or ROHA, a conſiderable town of Diarbec, which formerly belonged to Perſia, but is now in the Turkiſh dominions. It is a place of very good trade, dealing in carpets of ſeveral ſorts, ſome of which are made here. It is ſeated on the river Euphrates, 83 miles NE. of Aleppo.

ORFORD, a ſea-port of Suffolk, formerly a conſiderable fiſhing town, but the ſea has retired from it many years. Here is a handſome church, whoſe ſteeple is a ſea-mark; and near it are the ruins of an old caſtle, as alſo of a priory, St. George's Chapel, and a houſe where ſeamen's wives uſed to pray for the ſafety of their husbands. It is ſaid to have had once 12 churches; but it has now only about 300 houſes. There is a light-houſe at Orfordneſs, which is of great uſe to ſeamen. It is ſeated near the mouth of the river Ore, (after it has joined the Ald) 18 Miles E. of Ipſwich, and 88 NE. of London. Market on Monday.

Orgarſford, a village near Poole, in Dorſetſhire, remarkable for the prodigious quantity of pennyroyal, here called organ, that is produced in the neighbourhood. Orgarſwick, Kent, 3 miles and a half NE. of New Romney.

ORGAZ, a town of New Caſtile.

ORGELET, a town in the department of Jura, ſeated at the ſource of the river Valouſe, 30 miles N. by E. of Bourg.

ORGON. See ARGUN.

Orgrave, Staff. near King's Bromley.

ORGUEIL, MOUNT ORGUEIL, or GOURY, a neglected caſtle on the E. coaſt of the iſland of Jerſey, 5 miles W. of St. Helier.

ORIA, a town of Otranto, Naples.

ORIENT, or PORT L'ORIENT, a regular and handſome town in the dept. of Morbihan, built in 1720, by the French E. India Company, who made it the excluſive mart of their commerce. The harbour, which is good, but not ſpacious, is oppoſite Port Louis, and at the bottom of the ſame bay. It is 5 miles SSW. of Hennebon.

ORIGUELA, a town of Valencia, with a univerſity; and a town of Arragon.

ORJIVA, a town of Granada, in Spain.

ORIO, a town of Guipuſcoa, ſeated at the mouth of the river Orio; and a town of Negroponte, in the Archipelago.

ORISSA, a province of Hindooſtan, bounded by Bahar and Bengal on the N. by Berar on the W. by the northern circars on the SW. and the bay of Bengal on the SE. The ſoil is flat and moiſt, but fertile, and the heat exceſſive. The diſtrict of Midniapour, in this province, is ſubject to the Engliſh E. India Company: but all the reſt belongs to the Berar Mahrattas.

ORISTAGNI, a town of the Iſland of Sardinia, with a good harbour, and an archbiſhop's ſee. It is large, and well fortified, but thinly inhabited, on account of the unhealthy air; and is ſeated on the weſtern coaſt, on a bay of the ſame name 38 miles NW. of Cagliari.

Oriſtown, in Meath, Leinſter.

ORKNEY ISLANDS. See ORCADES.

ORLAMUNDA, a town of Altenburg, Upper Saxony, ſubject to the Duke of Saxe Gotha. It is ſeated at the conflux of the rivers Sala and Orla, 24 miles ESE. of Erfurt.

Orlaſton, Kent, N. of Appledore.

ORLANDO, a cape on the N. coaſt of Sicily, 15 miles W. of Patti.

ORLEANOIS, a ci-devant province of France, which, with the Blaiſois and Chartrain, is divided into the three departments ments of Loir and Cher, Loiret, and Eure and Loir. It is divided by the river Loir into the Upper and Lower, and is a very plentiful country. Orleans is the capital.

ORLEANS, a large, ancient, and handſome city of France, capital of the dept. of Loiret. It is built in the form of an oval, and contains 6 principal gates, 22 pariſhes, and about 40,000 inhabitants. The ſtreets are ſpacious, but the houſes are generally ill-built. That of the Fauxbourg of Paris is of a prodigious length. The commerce conſiſts in wine, brandy, corn, grocery, and particularly ſugar, which is brought raw from Nantes and Rochelle. About 100,000 cwts. of loaf ſugar are ſent annually from Orleans; a great part of which is taken by the merchants of Paris. Sheep ſkins and ſtockings, both knit and woven, form alſo a conſiderable article of trade. This city has, or lately had, a ſociety of natural philoſophy, natural hiſtory, &c. and a public library. The environs are very pleaſant; particularly the ſuburb of Olivet, on the left ſide of the Loire, which has a communication with the city by a bridge, the boldneſs and lightneſs of which are equally admired. It conſiſts of 9 arches; the centre one of which is 100 feet wide. Orleans is ſeated on the river Loire, 30 miles NE. of Blois, and 60 SSW. of Paris. Lat. 47. 54, N. lon. 1. 59. E.

ORLEANS, CANAL OF, commences at the river Loire, about two leagues above Orleans, croſſes the Foreſt of Orleans, and the plain which ſucceeds it, joins the canal of Briarie, near Montargis, and paſſing by Nemours, falls into the river Seine. It was finiſhed in 1682, and has 30 locks in its courſe, which is about 18 leagues in extent.

ORLEANS, FOREST OF, near the city of that name, contains 94,000 acres, planted with oak and other valuable trees. It is one of the moſt conſiderable of all France; and the ſales of its timber and underwood produce annually about 100,000 livres.

ORLEANS, NEW, a city of N. America, capital of Louiſiana, built in the time of the regency of the Duke of Orleans. In 1788, ſeven-eighths of it were deſtroyed by fire; but great progreſs has been ſince made in rebuilding it. Here are 2 convents, a pariſh church, magazines, forges, and ſome public buildings. The houſes are chiefly of wood, on foundations of brick. It never contained above 1500 inhabitants, and is ſeated in a rich, fertile ſoil, and with an excellent climate, on the E. ſide of the Miſſiſippi, 54 miles from its mouth. Lat. 30. 2. N. lon. 89. 53. W.

ORLEANS, an iſland and town in the middle of the river St. Lawrence, a little below Quebec.

ORLOVSKOE, a government of Ruſſia, bounded on the N. by the governments of Smolenſk and Kaluga, and on the SE. by the governments of Kurſkoi and Voroneſkoi.

Orlton, Herefordſhire, near Richard's-Caſtle. Orlton, Shropſhire, near Wellington. Orlton, Worceſterſhire, near Lindridge.

ORMOND, the northern diviſion of the county of Tipperary, in Munſter.

Ormeſby, St. Margaret's and St. Michael's, Norfolk, on the coaſt, near Caſtor light-houſe. Ormeſby, Yorkſhire, W. of Giſborough. Ormeſby, North, Linc. NW. of Louth. Ormeſby, South, Linc. SW. of Alford. Ormſhead-Hall, Weſtmorland, NW. of Kirby-Steven. Ormſide, Weſtmorl. near Appleby.

*ORMSKIRK, a handſome town of Lancaſhire, ſeated near the Grand Canal, 30 miles S. of Lancaſter, and 206 NNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

ORMUS, an iſland at the entrance of the Gulf of Perſia, about 10 miles in circumference. Here is neither ſweet water nor graſs, it being, ſtrictly ſpeaking, no better than a rock of ſalt. The very duſt of the country, within land, is white and pure, as well as pungent to the taſte. It was formerly the greateſt mart in the Eaſt, being viſited by ſhipping from India, Africa, Egypt, and Arabia, as well as by caravans, who carried on a regular trade acroſs the country, and brought with them immenſe quantities of the richeſt and moſt valuable commodities. At certain ſeaſons of the year, there was a prodigious reſort of merchants from all countries, beſide factors who conſtantly reſided here, particularly Venetians. The houſes were then about 4000 in number, and contained 40,000 inhabitants. The Portugueſe conquered this iſland in 1507, and kept it till 1622, when the Perſians, by the aſſiſtance of an Engliſh ſquadron of 9 ſail, took the place and demoliſhed the houſes. The trade was then transferred to Gamb[illegible]n. It is now almoſt deſerted, yet is ſtill the key of the Perſian Gulf, on account of the commodiouſneſs of its harbour. Lat. 27. 20. N. lon. 56. 25. E.

ORNANS a town in the department of Doubs. In its vicinity is a well, which, during luring the time of the great rains, overflows in ſuch a manner as to inundate the djacent country. The fiſhes which it liſgorges are called umbres. There is a imilar well about a league from Veſoul. Ornans is ſeated on the Louve, 8 miles E. of Beſançon.

ORNE, a department of France, part of the ci-devant Normandy, bounded on the N. by the depart. of the Calvados, and on the W. by the depart. of the Channel. It takes its name from a river which riſes in it, and paſſing by Sees, Argentan, &c. falls into the Engliſh Channel 8 miles below Caen. The capital is Alençon.

ORONOOKO, a river of South America, which riſes in Popayan, within 160 miles of the S. Sea; and, after a courſe of 1380 miles NE. enters the Atlantic Ocean, in lat. 8. 30. N. lon. 59. 50. W. where its impetuoſity is ſo great, that it ſtems the moſt powerful tides, and preſerves the freſhneſs of its waters to the diſtance of 12 leagues out at ſea.

ORONSA, a ſmall, fertile iſland, one of the Hebrides, 16 miles W. of Jura.

ORONTES, or ELL-AASI, a river of Syria, which runs into the Mediterranean, about 18 miles below Antioch.

OROPESA, a town of New Caſtile; and a town of Valentia.

OROPESA, a town of La Plata, S. America, 180 miles NW. of La Plata.

Orpeth, Durham, in the pariſh of Cheſter-le-Street.

ORPHEA, a river of the Morea, formerly Alpheus, a famous river of Arcadia.

Orpington, Kent, a mile S. of St. Mary Cray.

ORR, a river of Scotland, which riſes near New Galloway, in Kircudbrightſhire, and watering the town of Orr, flows ſouthward, and falls into the Solway Frith, 10 miles E. of Kircudbright.

Orrator, in Tyrone, Ulſter.

Orrel, Lancaſhire, SW. of Wigan.

Orrery, a barony in Cork, Munſter.

ORSCHA, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Mohilev, ſeated on the Dnieper.

Orſet, Eſſex, SW. of Horndon. Orſingbury, Northamp. near the Walgrave. Orſlow, Staffordſ. N. of Blimhill.

ORSOWA, a town of Servia, built on both ſides of the Danube, 75 miles E. of Belgrade.

ORSOY, a town of Cleves, on the Rhine.

Orſton, Nottinghamſ. E. of Bingham.

ORTA, a town in the Patrimonio; a town in the Milaneſe; and a town in the Capitanata, Naples; all in Italy.

ORTEGAL, a cape and town on the N. coaſt of Galicia. Lat. 43. 48. N. lon. 7. 35. W.

ORTENAU, a tract of country in Suabia, ſituated between the Briſgau, the marquiſate of Baden, the Black Foreſt, and the Rhine.

ORTENBURG, a town of Carinthia; a town of Lower Bavaria; and a town of Hanau Munzenburg, Upper Rhine.

ORTHEZ, a town in the dept. of the Lower Pyrenees, ſeated on the river Gave-de-Pau, 20 miles NW. of Pau.

ORTON, a town of Weſtmorland, 12 miles SW. of Appleby, and 271 NNW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

ORTONA, a ſea-port of Abruzzo Citra.

Orton, Northamptonſhire, near Rothwell. Orton, or Overton, Cumberland, near Thurſby, Orton, Great and Little, Cumberland, near Carliſle. Orton-on-the-Mount, Leiceſterſhire, near Hog's Norton.

ORVIETO, a town, capital of a diſtrict of Italy, in the Pope's territories. In this place is a deep well, into which mules deſcend, to fetch up water by one pair of ſtairs, and aſcend by another. It is ſeated near the confluence of the rivers Pagli and Chiana, 20 miles NNW. of Viterbo, and 50 N. by W. of Rome.

Orwell, Cambridgeſh. near Wimble. Orwell, Wilts, near Bradford.

ORWELL, a river of Suffolk, which riſes in the middle of the county, runs SE. by Ipſwich, and uniting with the river Stour from Maningtree, forms the fine harbour of Harwich. Above Ipſwich, it is called the Gipping.

OSACA, a town of Niphon, Japan, with a large magnificent citadel. It has a harbour, and is one of the moſt populous and trading places of that iſland. Here they proclaim the hours of the night by the ſound of different inſtruments of muſic. Lat. 35. 20. N. lon. 133. 45. E.

Oſbaldeſton, Lancaſh. NW. of Blackburn, Oſbaldwick, Yorkſhire, near Stockton-Moor. Oſbaſton, NE. of Shrewſbury. Oſberton, Leiceſ. NE. of Boſworth. Oſberton, Nottinghamſh. in Worksop pariſh. Oſborne. Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Oſburnby, Lincolnſh. N. of Fokingham. Oſend, Eſſex. near the harbour of Harwich. Oſendike. Yorkſ. SE. of Tadcaſter. Oſeney Iſlands, in the meadows near Oxford; it is formed by the river Iſis.

OSERO,

OSERO, or OSORO, a town and iſland in the Adriatic, lately ſubject to the Venetians, having that of Cherſo to the N. to which is joined by a bridge. The coaſt abounds with ſardines and mackarel. Lat. 44. 48. N. 14. 50. E.

OSEY ISLANDS, or OSEYH, St. in Blackwater-Bay, near Malden, in Eſſex, in the pariſh of Great Totham, is covered with wild fowl at certain ſeaſons. Here the coal ſhips for Malden unload their cargoes.

Oſgarby, Linc. near Boothby Pannel. Oſgarthorp, Leiceſterſhire, near Colorton. Oſgodby, Lincolnſ. near Market-Raiſin. Oſgodby, Yorkſhire, near Selby. Oſgodby, Yorkſhire, S. of Scarborough.

OSIMO, a town of Ancona.

Oſlaſton, Derbyſhire, in the pariſh of Sutton-on-the-Hill.

OSMA, a town of Old Caſtile, ſituated on the Douro.

Oſmaſton, near Derby. Oſmington, Dorſetſ. near Weymouth. Otmondſton, or Scbole, Norfolk, on the borders of Suffolk, in the road between Ipſwich and Norwich. Oſmondthorp, Nott. in Southwell pariſh. Oſmondthorp, or more properly Oſwinthorp, Yorkſ.E. of Leeds; once a royal village, and the ſeat of the Northumbrian king, Oſwin. Oſmotherley, Yorkſ. NE. of Northallerton.

OSNABURGH, a town of Weſtphalia, capital of a biſhopric of the ſame name, with a univerſity. The beer of this place is highly eſteemed in the other parts of Germany. It is ſeated on the river Haze, 24 miles NNE. of Munſter, and 75 W. of Hanover. Lat 52. 24. N. lon. 8. 20. E.

OSNABURG, THE BISHOPRIC OF, a province of Weſtphalia, bounded on the N. and W. by the biſhopric of Munſter, and on the S. by the county of Ravenſburg, about 40 miles in length, and from 16 to 24 in breadth. It is divided into 7 bailiwicks, and abounds in cattle and hogs, almoſt half of the biſhopric conſiſting of heath lands. The chief occupation of the inhabitants is ſpinning of yarn, and manufacturing a coarſe kind of linen, which is conveyed by the Engliſh, Dutch, and Spaniards to Guinea and America, and annually brings into the country about a million of rix-dollars. The biſhopric is poſſeſſed by papiſts and Proteſtants alternately, the Proteſtant being always choſen out of the houſe of Brunſwick Lunenburg. The preſent biſhop, is Frederick duke of York, ſecond ſon of the king of Great Britain. Oſnaburgh is the capital.

OSNABURGH ISLAND, a ſmall iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered and named by Capt. Wallis, in June, 1767. Some hogs were ſeen here. It is called Miatea by the natives. Lat. 17. 51 S. lon. 147. 30. W.

Oſney Abbey, near Oxford.

OSORNO, a town of Chili, ſeated on Rio-Bueno, in a territory where there are mines of gold, 40 miles SSE. of Baldivia.

Oſpring, Kent, 2 miles SW. of Feverſham. Oſſet, Yorkſhire, 2 miles from Wakefield.

OSSETIA, the country of the OSSI, or OSSETI, one of the 7 Caucaſian nations, between the Black Sea and the Caſpian. It is fertile, and contains 19 diſtricts, of which one is ſubject to Imeritia, and the others to Georgia. Their language has ſome analogy with that of the Perſian, but their hiſtory is entirely unknown. The Circaſſians and Tartars call them Kuſha; that is, Bones.

Oſſington, Nottinghamſ. near Carlton on Trent.

OSSORY, the weſtern diviſion of the Queens County, in Leinſter, Ireland; giving name to a biſhopric, the cathedral of which is ſituated at St. Canice, in Kilkenny.

OSSUNA, an ancient and well-peopled town of Andaluſia, with a univerſity and an hoſpital, 40 miles SSE. of Seville.

OSTAGIA, a town of Genoa.

OSTALRIC, a town of Catalonia.

OSTEND, a large and populous ſea-port of Flanders, famous for the long ſiege it ſuſtained againſt the Spaniards, from July 5th, 1601, to September 22d, 1604, when it ſurrendered, by an honourable capitulation, to the celebrated Marquis Spinola. The Spaniards loſt nearly 80,000 men before this place, although, when it was inveſted, they did not expect it would hold out a fortnight. It is ſeated in a marſhy ſoil, among a number of canals, and almoſt ſurrounded by two of the largeſt of them. Ships of great burden enter theſe canals with the tide. It is 22 miles NE. of Dunkirk. Lat. 51. 14. N. lon. 3. 1. E.

Oſtenhanger-Houſe, Kent, in Stamford pariſh. Oſterly Park, Middleſex, NW. of Brentford.

OSTIA, an ancient and celebrated town of Italy, in the Campagna of Rome, ſeated at the mouth of the river Tiber, 12 miles SW. of Rome. The air being unwholeſome, it is now very thin of people, and gone to decay; and the harbour is choaked up.

OSTIGLIA, a town of Mantua.

Oſton, Suffolk, SW. of Needham.

OSTROGOTHIA, the name of the eaſtern part of Gothland, in Sweden, having Nericia and Sundermanland to the N. the Baltic to the E. and Smaland to the S.

OSTUNI, a town of Otranto, Naples, near the Adriatic. Its territory is well cultivated, and abounds with olives and almonds.

Oſwald St. Northumberl. on the Picts Wall, N. of Hexham. Here Oſwald defeated Cedwell, a Britiſh uſurper, and here he ſet up the firſt croſs in the kingdom of Northumberland. Oſwald was afterwards ſainted. Oſwaldeſlaw, between Worceſter and Speechly. Oſwaldkirk, Yorkſhire, S. of Helmſley.

OSWEGO, a fort of N. America, ſeated on the S. ſide of the lake Ontario, at the mouth of a river of the ſame name, which runs from Lake Oneida to Lake Ontario, 30 miles E. of Niagara Fort.

OSWESTRY, a very old and decayed town of Shropſhire, ſeated at the head of a ſmall river, near the canal between the Severn and Merſey. It has ſome trade from Wales in flannels, which was formerly much more conſiderable; and is 18 miles NW. of Shrewſbury, and 174 NW. of London. Market on Monday.

OSWICCZEN, a town of Poland, in Cracovia. It has a great trade in ſalt, and is ſeated on the Viſtula, 32 miles W. of Cracow.

OTAHA, one of the Society Iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean. It lies N. of Ulitea; and is divided from it by a ſtrait, which, in the narroweſt part, is not more than 2 miles broad. This iſland is ſmaller than Ulitea, and not ſo fertile, but it has two very good harbours. Lat. 16. 33. S. lon. 151. 20. W.

OTAHEITEE, one of the Society Iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean, about 90 miles in circumference, ſuppoſed to have been firſt ſeen by Quiros in 1606. It was firſt diſcovered to the Engliſh by Captain Wallis, in 1767, who called it George the Third's Iſland. Bougainville next arrived at it in 1768, and ſtaid 10 days. Captain Cook, in the Endeavour, came thither, in 1769, to obſerve the tranſit of Venus, ſailed round the whole iſland in a boat, and ſtaid here three months. It was afterwards viſited twice by that celebrated navigator. It conſiſts of two peninſulas, great part of which is covered with woods and foreſts, conſiſting partly of bread-fruit trees, palms, cocoa-nut-trees, plantains, bananas, mulberries, ſugar-canes, and others peculiar to that climate, particularly of a kind of ananas, or pine-apple, caſuarinas, and dragon trees. The people have mild features and a pleaſing countenance. They are about the largeſt ſize of the Europeans, of a clear olive or brunette complexion, with fine black hair and eyes, and wear a piece of cloth round the middle, of their own manufacture, and another wrapped about the head, in various picturesque ſhapes, like a turban. The women, who are accounted very handſome, wear a piece of cloth, with a hole in the middle, through which they paſs their heads, ſo that one part of the garment hangs down behind, and the other before, to the knees; a fine white cloth, like muſlin, paſſes over this, in various elegant turns, round the body, a little below the breaſt, forming a kind of tunic, of which one turn ſometimes falls gracefully acroſs the ſhoulder. "This dreſs," ſays Mr. Forſter, "appeared more advantageous to the human figure, than any modern faſhion we had hitherto ſeen. Both ſexes are adorned, or rather diſfigured by thoſe black ſtains, occaſioned by puncturing the ſkin, and rubbing a black colour into the wounds. This operation is performed upon the youth of both ſexes, when about twelve or fourteen years of age. No language ſeemed eaſier to acquire than theirs, every harſh and ſibilant conſonant being baniſhed from it, and almoſt every word ending in a vowel. The only requiſite is a nice ear to diſtinguiſh the numerous modifications of their vowels." The houſes of the natives conſiſt only of a roof, thatched with the long prickly leaves of the palm-nut tree, and ſupported by a few pillars made of the bread-fruit tree. As a roof is ſufficient to ſhelter the natives from rains and nightly dews, and as the climate of this iſland is one of the fineſt in the world, the houſes have ſeldom any walls, but are open on all ſides. Various little birds are found among the ſhrubs and trees, that had a very agreeable note, though common report among the Europeans, has denied the powers of harmony to the birds of warm climates. The birds moſt common are two ſorts of paroquets, one of a beautiful ſappharine blue, another of a greeniſh colour, with a few red ſpots; a king's fiſher, of a dark green, with a collar of the ſame hue round his white throat; a large cuckoo; ſeveral ſorts of pigeons or doves, herons, and ducks. The cloth of the natives is made of the fibrous bark of the mulberry tree, which is beaten with a kind of mallet; and a glue made of the hibiſcus eſculentus, is employed to make the pieces of bark cohere together. Some of theſe pieces are 2 or 3 yards wide, and 60 yards long. The colours with which they dye this cloth are principally red and yellow. The red is exceedingly beautiful, and of a brighter and more delicate colour than any known in Europe. Their matting is alſo finer and better in every reſpect, than any we have in Europe. They are alſo exceedingly neat in making baſket and wicker work. Their fiſhing lines are alſo the beſt in the world, made of a kind of nettle which grows in the mountains, holding the ſtrongeſt and moſt active fiſh, ſuch as bonnettas and albicores. It is remarkable, that though the natives of this iſland far excel moſt of the Americans in the knowledge and practice of the arts of ingenuity, yet they have not invented any method of boiling water; and, having no veſſel that could bear the fire, they had no more idea that water could be made hot, than that it could be made ſolid. The only quadrupeds found upon the iſland, are hogs, domeſtic dogs, and rats, which the inhabitants ſuffer to run about at pleaſure, without ever trying to deſtroy them. The ſea ſupplies them with a variety of excellent fiſh. Long nails on the fingers are a mark of diſtinction among the natives, as among the Chineſe. The two ſexes here eat ſeparately, as in many other countries. Their burying places, called Morai, are built of ſeveral ranges of ſtones, like ſteps, each about three feet and a half in height, and covered with graſſes, ferns, and ſmall ſhrubs. At a little diſtance is an oblong incloſure round it, made of ſtone, about three feet high. The proviſions of the Otaheiteans are chiefly fiſh, pork, cocoa-nuts, bread-fruit and bananas. Their pork is exceedingly delicious, and entirely free from that luſcious richneſs which makes it reſiſt the ſtomach ſo ſoon in Europe. They are, indeed, much cleanlier than the European hogs, and have not their cuſtom of wallowing in the mire. They are of the ſmall breed, which is commonly called the Chineſe, but they have the pendulous ears of ours. Mr. Forſter is laviſh in his praiſes of the gentleneſs, good nature, and hoſpitality of this people; and alſo of the beauty, elegance, and gracefulneſs of the air, features, and perſons of many of them, particularly thoſe of the better ſort. On the coaſt are ſeveral excellent bays and harbours, with room and depth of water ſufficient for the largeſt ſhips. The whole iſland could furniſh about 6760 fighting men. The ſea affords them a great variety of fiſh, in every expedient for taking which they are exceedingly ingenious.

Otnby, Linc. NW. of Caſtor. Otes-Hall, Eſſex, 3 miles from Harlow. Oteford, Kent, 3 miles N. of Sevenoaks, Otham, Kent, 2 miles SE. of Maidſtone. Otherton, Staff. near Penkridge. Otley, Shropſ. near Elleſmere. Otley, Suffolk, W. of Dallinghoe.

OTLEY, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated in a charming country, on the river Wharfe, under a high, craggy cliff, 10 miles NW. of Leeds, and 202 NNW. of London. Market on Friday.

Otmote, Oxfordſ. near Iſlip.

OTRANTO, or TERRA D'OTRANTO, a province of the kingdom of Naples, bounded on all ſides by the ſea, except toward the NW. where it is joined to Bari. It is about 60 miles in length, and from 20 to 25 in breadth, is a mountainous country, abounding in olives, figs, and wine; but it is often viſited by locuſts, and by Algerine pirates, who carry all the people they catch into ſlavery.

OTRANTO, a city of Naples, capital of Terra d'Otranto, is a large, handſome place, with a commodious harbour. It is ſeated on the Adriatic, 37 miles SSE. of Brindiſi.

OTRICOLI, a town of Spoleto.

OTTENWALD, a ſmall territory in the palatinate of the Rhine, between the rivers Maine and Neckar, and on the confines of Franconia, and of Mentz.

OTTONE, a town of Genoa.

Otter, a river of Devonſhire, which falls into the ſea near Otterton, 8 miles below St. Mary Ottery, and 5 miles E. of Exmouth. Otterburn, Hants, S. of Wincheſter. Otterburn, Northumberl. near Elleſdon. A battle was fought here, in 1388, between the Engliſh, under the Earl of Northumberland and his two ſons, Henry and Ralph Percy, and the Scots, under Sir W. Douglas. The intrenchments, and a number of tumuli, ſcattered over the adjacent ground, are viſible to this day. Otterburn, Yorkſ. S. of Settle. Otterden, Kent, 5 miles NE. of Lenham. Otterford, Somerſetſh. SE. of Wellington. Otterham, Cornwall, SE. of Bottreaux Caſtle. Otterham Wharf, Kent, in Upchurch parish. Otterhampton, Somerſ. near Stokegurſey. Otteringham, Yorkſh. in the S. bailiwick of Holderneſs. Otterington, N. and S. Yorkſ. S. of Northallerton. Otter-Marsh-Land, Yorkſ. S. of Otteringham. Otterſey, Somerſ. near S. Petherton. Otterton, Devonſ. SW. of Sidmouth.

OTTERY ST. MARY, or AUTRY, a town of Devonſhire, ſeated on the ſmall river Otter, 10 miles E. of Exeter, and 162 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Otery-

Ottery-Mohuns, Devonſ. on the Otter river, above Honiton. Ottery-Up, Devonſ. S. of Otterford.

OUDE, a ſoubah, or province of Hindooſtan, ſubject to a nabob, whoſe dominions lie on both ſides of the Ganges, occupying (with the exception of the diſtrict of Rampour) all the flat country between that river and the mountains of Thibet, as well as the principal part of that fertile tract, lying between the Ganges and Jumna, known by the name of Dooab, to within 40 miles of the city of Delhi. The dimenſions of Oude and its dependencies are eſtimated, by Major Rennel, at 360 miles in length from E. to W. and in breadth from 150 to 180. The capital is Lucknow. The nabob is in alliance with the Britiſh power, and a brigade of the Bengal army is conſtantly ſtationed on the weſtern frontier, covering Oude as well as Bengal, and keeping the weſtern ſtates in awe. The whole expence of this eſtabliſhment is paid by the nabob of Oude, under the name of a ſubſidy.

OUDE, an ancient city of Hindooſtan Proper, in the ſoubah of Oude, the remains of which are ſeated on the Ganges, nearly adjoining Fyzabad. It is ſaid to have been the firſt imperial city of Hindooſtan, and to have been built by their hero Kriſhen. In Colonel Dow's tranſlation of Feritſha's hiſtory, it is mentioned as the capital of a great kingdom, 1209 years before the Chriſtian era; and it is frequently mentioned in the Mahabheret, the famous Hindoo work in Shanſcrit, (the learned language of the Bramins) under the name of Ajudia. But whatever may have been its former magnificence, ſcarcely any traces of it are left. It is conſidered as a place of ſanctity; and the Hindoos frequently come hither, in pilgrimage, from all quarters of India.

OUDENARD, a rich and ſtrong town of Flanders, with a manufacture of very fine linen, and of curious tapeſtry. This town was beſieged by the French in 1708, but they were compelled to raiſe the ſiege by the Duke of Marlborough, who entirely routed their army, (commanded by the Dukes of Burgundy and Vendome) and took 5000 priſoners. It is ſeated on the river Scheldt, 12 miles S. of Ghent.

OUDENBURG, a town of the late Auſtrian Flanders, 8 miles SE. of Oſtend.

OUDIPOUR, or MEYWAR, a province of Hindooſtan, belonging to the Rajpoots, 100 miles in length, and nearly as much in breadth. The rana, or prince of Oudipour, is a ſort of head of the Rajpoot ſtates, receiving homage for them by a long-eſtabliſhed cuſtom, but not claiming ſuperiority in any other way.

OUDIPOUR, a city, capital of a circar in the country of Agimere, in Hindooſtan, 260 miles SW. of Agra.

Ovenden, Yorkſ. near Halifax. Over, Cambridgeſhire, E. of St. Ives. Over, Cheſhire, by the river Wever. Over, near Glouceſter. Over, Gloucеſterſhire, SW. of Chipping-Sodbury. Overacres, Northumberland, near Elleſdon. Over-Arley, Staffordſhire, near Kidderminſter. Overbothilleſton, Northumb. a hamlet of Warkworth. Overburrow, Lancaſh. S. of Kirby-Lonſdale. Overbury, Worceſ. near Tewkeſbury. Overbury, Cheſhire, near Hyle Lake. Overcot, Northamp. NW. of Daventry.

OVERFLACKEE, an iſland of Holland, in the Maeſe. Somerdyck is the capital.

Over Hall Eſſex, a manor of Morton. Over-Hall, Northumb. near Thirlewall-Caſtle. Overhill, Herefordſ. near Hope. Over-Iſgar, Northumb. a manor of Felton. Overland, Kent, near Aſh. Overley, Shropſhire, NW. of Wem. Over, Magna and Parva, SW. of Derby. Over Milton, Worceſterſ. in Hartlebury pariſh. Overſbridge, near Glouceſter. Overſley, Warwickſhire, in the pariſh of Arrow. Overſtrand, Norfolk, near Cromer. Overſwell, Glouceſterſ. near Stow-on the-Would. Overton, Cheſh. N. of Malpas. Overton, Cheſh. between Upton and Macclesfield Foreſt. Overton, Flintſhire, S. of Wrexham. Overton, Glouceſ. near Arlingham.

Overton*, Hants, 8 miles W. by S. of Baſingſtoke.

Overton, Lancaſhire, at the mouth of the Lune, SW. of Lancaſter. Overton, Northamp. between Lamport and Walgrave. Owly, Kent, in the Iſle of Oxney. Overton, Oxfordſh. S. of Chalgrave. Overton, Shropſ. near Billingſley. Overton, Staffordſh. on the borders of Cheſhire, towards Congleton. Overton, Wilts, near E. and W. Kennet. Overton, Wilts, S. of Swindon. Overton, Wilts, near Everly-Warren. Overton, Glouceſ. in Preſbury pariſh. Overton, Worceſ. SW. of Eveſham. Overton, Yorkſ. near Stockton Moor. Overton Longville, Huntingdonſ. near Peterborough. Overton Sanſye, Leiceſterſh. E. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Overton Waterville, or Cherry-Overton, Huntingdonſ. near Overton Longville.

OVERYSCHE, a town of Brabant, ſituated on the river Yſche, 10 miles SE. of Bruſſels.

OVERYSSEL, one the Seven United Provinces, bounded on the E. by the biſhopric of Munſter; on the N. by Weſt Frieſland and Groningen; on the W. by the river Yſſel, and part of the Zuyder Zee; and on the S. by the county of Zutphen and the biſhopric of Munſter. It is divided into three diſtinct parts, which are, the territories of Drente, Twente, and Salland. There are many moraſſes in this province, and but few inhabitants, in compariſon with the reſt. Its greateſt riches conſiſts in turf, which is dug up here, and ſent to the neighbouring provinces, particularly Holland OUGEIN, a town of Malwa, in Hindooſtan, the capital city of Madajee, Sindia, one of the Weſtern Mahratta chiefs. It is a place of great antiquity, 200 miles SE. by S of Agimere. Lat. 23. 26. N. lon. 75. 56. E.

OVIEDO, a city of Spain, capital of Aſturias, with a univerſity. It is ſituated in a plain, between the ſmall rivers Deva and Ove, 47 miles N. of Leon.

Oughteragh, in Waterford, Munſter.

OUGHTERARD, a town of Galway, in Connaught, 119 miles from Dublin.

Oving, Bucks, N. of Ayleſbury. Ovingdean, Suſſex, E. of Brighthelmſtone. Ovingham, Northumb. 10 miles W. of Newcaſtle. Ovington, Eſſex, E. of Steple-Bumpſted. Ovington, Hants, near Alreſford. Ovington, Norfolk, N. of Watton. Ovington, Northumb. between Corbridge and Ovingham. Ovington, Yorkſhire, E. of Barnard-Caſtle. Oulcote, Nottinghamſhire, near Blithe. Oulcote, Yorkſhire, NE. of Settle. Ould, NE. of Northampton. Ouldbarrow, Warwickſhire, near Henley in Arden. Ouleſton, Cheſhire, NW. of Sandbach. Oulnal, Warw. near Ouldbarrow.

OULNEY. See OLNEY.

Oulpen, Glouceſ. in Bagpath pariſh. Oulſton-Hall, Yorkſh. near Eaſingwold. Oulton, Norfolk, NW. of Aleſham. Oulton, Staffordſh. N. of Stone. Oulton, Suffolk, two miles from Leoſtoff.

OUNDLE, a pretty little uniform town of Northamptonſhire, noted for a well that ſometimes makes a drumming noiſe. It is ſeated on the river Nen, 26 miles NE. of Northampton, and 83 N. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Ounſberry-Topping, ſometimes called Roſemary-Topping, Yorkſhire, a ſteep, high, verdant mountain, near Giſborough, in Cleveland, affording a beautiful proſpect, and ſerving as a ſea mark to mariners. Ounſton, Derbyſ. near Dronfield. Ounwell, Devonſ. W. of Kingſbridge. Ouram, Yorkſhire, N. of Hornſey. Oure, Kent, near Feverſham. Oure, Somerſ. W. of Porlock. Oure, Suſſex, N. of Haſtings.

OUREM, a town of Portugal, in Eſtramadura, ſeated on a mountain, between the towns of Leira and Tomar.

Ouremouth, Suſſex, by Thorney Iſle.

OURIQUE, a town of Alentejo.

Ouſburn, Great and Little, Yorkſ. SE. of Boroughbridge. Ouſby, Cumberland, near Kirk Oſwald.

OUSE, a river of Suſſex, riſing from two branches, one of which has its ſpring in St. Leonard's Foreſt, near the ſource of the Arun; the other, in the Foreſt of Worth; but they ſoon unite to the S. by Lewes, into one ſtream, which entering the Engliſh Channel, forms the harbour of Newhaven.

OUSE, GREAT, a river which riſes near Brackley, in Northamptonſhire, waters Buckingham, Stony-Stratford, Newport-Pagnel, Olney, and Bedford, where it is navigable. Thence it proceeds to St. Neots, Huntingdon, St. Ives, Ely, and Lynn, below which it enters the Lincolnſhire Waſhes, or German Ocean.

OUSE, LITTLE, a river which riſes in the S. part of Norfolk, and divides that county from Suffolk, as it flows weſtward. It becomes navigable at Thetford, and falls into the Great Ouſe near Downham.

OUSE NORTHERN, a river of Yorkſhire, formed by the junction of the Ure and Swale, which riſe near each other in the romantic tract, called Richmondſhire. Theſe, after collecting all the rills from this mountainous region, unite at Aldborough, and thence take the name of the Ouſe, which now forms a large river. It flows through York, where it is navigable for conſiderable veſſels, and afterward, receiving the Wharfe from the NW. the Derwen, from the NE. and the Aire, formed by the united Aire and Calder, from the W. and joined, near its termination in the Ouſe, by the Dan from the SW. it falls into the Humber.

Ouſgreſs, Northumb. S. of Alnwick. Ouſley-Bridge, Staff. over the Stow, E. of Cank Wood. Ouſtern, Warwickſ. near Merevale-Abbey. Ouſton, Yorkſ. N. of Eaſingwold. Ouſton Ferry, Linc. on the Trent, in the Iſle of Axholm. Outchſter, Northumb. near Bamburgh. Outeſby, and Outerſide, Cumberland, in the parish of Aſpatrick.

Outtar, in Wexford, Leinſter.

Outſeates, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Outwell, Camb. SE. of Wiſbeach. Outwood, wood Common, Yorkſ. N. of Wakefield. Owdeſwell, Glouc. in Withington pariſh. Ower-Mayne, Dorſetſhire.

OWERRA, OVEIRO, or OZZE, a territory of Guinea, dependant on Benin, with a town of the ſame name, ſituated on the river Formoſa. The air is unwholeſome, and the ſoil dry and lean; however, there are ſeveral kinds of fruits, ſuch as bananas and cocoa-nuts.

Owerſby, Linc. NW. of Market-Raiſin. Owers Rocks, E. of the Iſle of Wight. Owghton Head, Herts, the ſource of that river, near Hitchin.

OWHYHEE, the eaſternmoſt and by much the largeſt of the Sandwich Iſlands, of a triangular ſhape. Its greateſt length, from N. to S. is 28 leagues, and its breadth 24. It is divided into ſix diſtricts, two of which, on the NE. ſide, are ſeparated by a mountain, that riſes in three peaks, perpetually covered with ſnow, and may be ſeen clearly at 40 leagues diſtance. To the N. of this mountain, the coaſt conſiſts of high and abrupt cliffs, down which fall many beautiful caſcades; and the whole country is covered with cocoa-nut and bread-fruit trees. The peaks of the mountain, on the NE. ſide, appear to be about half a mile high, and are entirely covered with ſnow. To the S. of this mountain, the coaſt preſents a proſpect of the moſt dreary kind, the whole country appearing to have undergone a total change from the effects of ſome dreadful convulſion. The ground is every where covered with cinders, and interſected in many places with black ſtreaks, which ſeem to mark the courſe of a lava that has flowed, not many ages back, from the mountain to the ſhore. The ſouthern promontory looks like the mere dregs of a volcano. The projecting headland is compoſed of broken and craggy rocks, piled irregularly on one another, and terminating in ſhort points; yet, amid theſe ruins, are many patches of rich ſoil, carefully laid out in plantations. The fields are incloſed by ſtone fences, and are interſperſed with groves of cocoa-nut trees. There are ſuppoſed to be on this iſland about 150,000 inhabitants. It was here, on Feb. 14. 1779, that the celebrated Captain Cook fell a ſacrifice to a ſudden impulſe of revenge in the natives, with whom he unfortunately had a miſunderſtanding or diſpute. Lat. of the eaſtern extremity 19. 28. N. lon. 156. 0. W.

Owlcotes, Derbyſ. in Scarſdale. Owlerton, Yorkſhire, near Sheffield. Owley, Herts, near Buntingford. Owly, Kent, in Oxney Iſle. Owmby, Linc. NW. of Caſtor. Owre, Camb. E. of St. Ives. Owre, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle, 4 miles NE. of Corfe. Owre, Hants, near Calſhot-Caſtle. Owre, Shropſhire, NE. of Atherley. Owre-Chapel, Berks, S. of E. Iſley. Owre Moigne, Dorſetſ. NE. of Weymouth. Owre Nitty, Dorſetſhire, near Ower. Owreſby, Lincolnſ. between Normanby and the river Ankam. Owrum, N. and S. Yorkſ. in the pariſh of Halifax. Owſden, Suffolk, near Dalham. Owſebury, Hamp. between Wincheſter and Biſhop's Waltham. Owſton, Durham, by the Wear, N. of Cheſter-le-Street. Owſton, Durham, near Seaton. Owſton, Northumb. S. of Stannerton. Owſtwick, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs. Owthorn, Yorkſ. in the S. bailiwick of Hornſey. Owthorp, Nottinghamſ. between Coſgrave and Hickling. Owton, Cumberl. N. of Wigton. Owving, Suſſex, near Chicheſter. Oxborough, Norfolk SE. of Downham. Oxbrand, Norfolk, near Cromer. Oxcliff, Lancaſhire, on the W. ſide of the Lune, SW. of Lancaſter. Oxcomb, Linc. NE. of Horncaſtle. Oxcroft, Derbyſhire, near Bolſover. Oxenborn, Hants, near Eaſt Mean. Oxenborn, Hants, near Weſt Mean. Oxenden, Glouce. E. of Tewkeſbury. Oxenden, Northamp. S. of Harborough. Oxenfield, Lancaſ. near Hawſhead. Oxenford, Surry, on the Wey, SW. of Godalmin. Oxenhall, Durham, a hamlet of Darlington, on the W. ſide of the river Ikern. Oxenhall, Glouc. near Newent. Oxenheath, Kent, between Maidſtone and Tunbridge. Oxenholm, Weſtmorl. 1 mile from Kendal. Oxey, Herts, S. of Watford.

*OXFORD, the capital of Oxfordſhire, is ſeated at the confluence of the Thames and Cherwell, on an eminence almoſt ſurrounded by meadows, except on the E. ſide. The whole city, with the ſuburbs, is of a circular form, 3 miles in circumference. It conſiſts chiefly of two ſpacious ſtreets, which croſs each other in the middle of the town. The origin of the univerſity is involved in obſcurity; a certain proof of its great antiquity. Alfred, who reſided at Oxford, together with his three ſons, is ſaid to have founded three ſchools, or colleges here; one for philoſophy, another for grammar, and a third for divinity. It is generally ſuppoſed, however, to have been a ſeminary of learning before his time, although it owed its revival and conſequence to his liberal patronage; and it was certainly a place of ſtudy at the time of the Norman invaſion. About the middle of the 12th century, public Public lectures on the civil law were read here not more than ten years after a copy of Juſtinian's Inſtitutes had been found in Italy. In the reign of Henry III. there were ſaid to be 15,000 ſcholars here, if they deſerved that name, the ſole object with many being only to read and write, while the greateſt number attained to neither, and the moſt learned acquired only bad Latin and logic. Here are 20 colleges and 5 halls, ſeveral of which ſtand in the ſtreets, and give the city an air of magnificence. It is thought, that there is not ſuch another group of buildings, nor ſuch another univerſity, at this day, in the world. The colleges are provided with ſufficient revenues for the maintenance of a maſter, fellows, and ſtudents. In the halls, the ſtudents live, either wholly or in part, at their own expence. The colleges are, Univerſity, Baliol, Merton, Exeter, Oriel, Queen's, New, Lincoln, All Souls, Magdalen, Brazen Noſe, Corpus Chriſti, Chriſt Church, Trinity, St. John Baptiſt's, Jeſus, Wadham, Pembroke, Worceſter, and Hertford. Of theſe, Baliol College is the firſt, according to Mr. Camden, that was endowed with a regular and permanent income, in 1260. The halls are, Alban, Edmund, St. Mary's, New Inn, and St. Mary Magdalen. Theſe laſt were anciently hotels, or inns, and were the only academical houſes originally poſſeſſed by the ſtudents of Oxford. Among the libraries in the univerſity, the moſt diſtinguiſhed is the Bodleian, founded by Sir Thomas Bodley; thoſe of all Souls College, Chriſt Church, Queen's, New College, St. John's, Exeter, and Corpus Chriſti. Among other public buildings are the Theatre, the Aſhmolean Muſeum, the Clarendon Printing-Houſe, the Radcliffe Infirmary, and a fine Obſervatory. Oxford has lately been embelliſhed with a noble market-place, and a magnificent ſtone bridge, and is 20 miles SW. of Buckingham, and 58 W. by N. of London. Markets on Wednеſ. and Saturday.

OXFORDSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the W. by Glouceſterſhire; on the N. by Warwickſhire and Northamptonſhire; on the E. by Bucks, and a part of Berks; and on the S. by Berks. Its extreme length is 48 miles; its greateſt breadth 36. It is divided into 14 hundreds, which contain one city, 12 market-towns, 280 pariſhes, 451 villages, 19,000 houſes, and about 114,000 inhabitants. The air is ſweet, mild, pleaſant, and healthy. The ſoil, though various, is fertile in corn and graſs. The ſouthern part of the county, eſpecially on the borders of Buckinghamſhire, is a hilly and woody country, having a continuation of the Chiltern Hills running through it. The north-weſtern part is alſo elevated and ſtony. The middle is, in general, a rich country, watered by numerous ſtreams, running from N. to S. and terminating in the Thames. Of theſe, the moſt conſiderable are the Windruſh, Evenlode, Cherwell, and Tame. The latter, although an inconſiderable rivulet, has obtained ſome celebrity from having been ſuppoſed to give name to the Thames, into which it flows above Wallinford. The products of Oxfordſhire are chiefly thoſe common to the midland farming counties. Its hills yield ochre, pipe clay, and other earths, uſeful for various purpoſes. Corn and malt are tranſmitted from it, by the Thames, to the metropolis. Good cheeſe is made in the grazing parts. The greateſt want in this county is that of fuel; for the woods, with which it once abounded, being greatly diminiſhed, it is neceſſary to ſupply the deficiency of fire-wood with ſea coal, brought, by a long and troubleſome navigation, from London. The junction of the Thames with the Trent and Merſey, by the canal cut from Braunſton to Hampton-Gay, and by another canal, (for which an act of parliament was obtained in 1793) from Braunſton to Brentford, will greatly remedy this inconvenience. The moſt conſiderable foreſt now remaining in Oxfordſhire is that of Witchwood, between Burford and Charlbury.

Oxgate, Middleſex, a prebend of St. Paul's in Wilſdon pariſh. Oxhill, Warwickſhire, N. of Brailes. Oxinton, Glouceſterſ. 4 miles E. of Tewkeſbury. Oxley, Staffordſ. N. of Wolverhampton. Oxlinch, Glouceſterſ. in Standiſh pariſh. Oxned, Norfolk, SE. of Aleſham. Oxney, Northamptonſ. near Peterborough. Oxney Iſland, Kent, formed by the Rother, near Appledore. Oxnop, Yorkſ. SW. of Keighly. Oxſpring, Yorkſ. SW. of Barneſley. Oxted, Surry, in the pariſh of Stoke-Dabernon. Oxton, Cheſ. between Upton and the Merſey. Oxton, Devonſ. in Kenton pariſh, near Exmouth. Oxton, Yorkſ. near Tadcaſter. Oxton, Yorkſ. N. of Kilham. Oxwell, Camb. between Biggleſwade and Cambridge. Oxwich, Norfolk, near Rainham Hall.

Oyſter-Haven, in Cork, Munſter, is ſeldom frequented by veſſels. It is ſufficiently deep, but the entrance is narrow.

Ozleworth, Glouceſterſ. 3 miles SE. of Durſley.

PABBAY,

PABBAY, one of the Weſtern Iſlands of Scotland. It is about 9 miles in circuit, and has corn, marl, and paſture. Lat. 57, 55. N. lon. 6. 7. W.

PABLO SAN, a lake of Otabalo, in Quito, abounding with fiſh and wild-fowl. On its banks is a village of the ſame name. Alſo a town of Caxamarca, in Truxillo.

PACAJES, a juriſdiction of La Paz, in Buenos Ayres, containing ſome rich ſilver mines. The air is temperate, and the paſtures are good.

PACEM, a town and kingdom on the N. coaſt of Sumatra, dependant on Achen. It is 120 miles SE. of Achen.

PACHACAMAC, a town of Lima, in S. America, celebrated for a magnificent temple, built by the Incas of Peru, and dedicated to the Supreme Being. When Pizarro took this temple, he found an immenſe quantity of gold in it, beſides what the ſoldiers pillaged. It is ſituated in a valley of the ſame name, about 12 miles S. of Lima.

PACHSU, and ANTIPACHSU, two ſmall iſlands on the coaſt of Greece, S. of Corfu; lately ſubject to Venice.

PACHUCA, a town of Mexico, famous for ſilver mines, as rich as any in the province. It is 35 miles NNE. of Mexico.

PACIFIC OCEAN, otherwiſe called the SOUTH SEA, lies between Aſia and America, and is upward of 10,000 miles in breadth. This immenſe body of water may be ſaid alſo to ſtretch from pole to pole. When Magellan entered this ocean, through the dangerous ſtrait that bears his name, he ſailed three months and 20 days, in a uniform direction toward the NW. without diſcovering land. In the extreme diſtreſs which he ſuffered in this voyage, before he diſcovered the Ladrone Iſlands, he had the conſolation, however, of enjoying ſuch an uninterrupted courſe of fair weather, with favourable winds, that he beſtowed on this ocean the name of Pacific, which it ſtill retains. The Spaniards, having paſſed the iſthmus of Darien, from N. to S. at the firſt diſcovery of this ocean, named it the South Sea, although, with reſpect to America, it is more properly the Weſtern Ocean. On one ſide of the equator it is called the N. Pacific Ocean; and, on the other, the S. Pacific Ocean.

PACKINGTON, a town of Leiceſterſhire, in a retired delightful ſituation, within a mile of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch.

Packington, Staffordſ. NW. of Tamworth. Packington, Magna and Parva, Warwickſ. S. of Coleſhill. Pack's-Hill, Suſſex, near Horſted-Cayns. Packwood, Warwickſ. near Lapworth.

PACY, a town in the department of Eure, ſeated on the river Eure, 10 miles E. of Evreux.

PADANG, a ſea-port town on the W. coaſt of Sumatra, with a fort and ſettlement belonging to the Dutch. Lat. 1. 0. S.

Padbury, SE. of Buckingham, on a river that runs into the Ouſe.

Paddington, a village of Middleſex, which lies by the N. of London, or rather, by the late increaſe of buildings, may be ſaid to form a part of it, and yet the pariſh contains many ſequeſtered rural ſpots. A canal is making from this place, which is to join the Grand Junction Canal at or near Hayes. Paddingwick, Middleſ. near Hammerſmith. Paddingham, Lancaſ. SE. of Clithero.

PADERBORN, a conſiderable city of Weſtphalia, capital of a biſhopric of the ſame name, and formerly one of the Hanſe Towns. The rivulet Pader riſes here under the high altar of the cathedral. It is a celebrated univerſity, and is 37 miles SW. of Minden, and 43 ESE. of Munſter. Lat. 51. 46. N. lon. 8. 55. E.

PADERBORN, THE BISHOPRIC OF, is a ſmall diſtrict of Germany, in Weſtphalia, about 44 miles in its greateſt length, and 36 in its greateſt breadth. It is bounded by the county of Lippe on the N. and by the dutchy of Weſtphalia and the principality of Waldeck on the S. In the middle of it are high mountains, containing iron-mines; but the reſt of the country is fertile in corn and paſtures. It is moſt remarkable for its bacon, or hams, and veniſon. The biſhop is a prince of the empire.

Padfield, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Paddleſworth, Kent, 3 miles SE. of Elham. Paddleſworth, Kent, 3 miles N. of Weſt Malling. Padley, Derbyſ. in the High Peak, near Scaridale. Padmore-Chaſe, Staffordſ. E. of Bloreheath. Padongre, Warwickſ. near Studley.

PADRON, EL, a town of Spaniſh Galicia, ſeated on the Ulla.

Padſide, Yorkſ. S. of Patley-Bridge. Padſton, or Paxton, Northumb. on the Tweed, W. of Berwick. Padſtow, Devonſ. between Hatherley and the Merlands.

PADSTOW, a town in Cornwall, is a place of ſome trade to Ireland, Briſtol, and London. The harbour is capable of containing veſſels of 500 tons at high water, but is of dangerous acceſs, without a ſkilful pilot, being rocky on the E. ſide, and barred with ſea-ſand on the W. The chief buſineſs here, and along this coaſt, next to the trade in ſlate-tiles, is fiſhing for herrings, which come up the Channel in October. It is 26 miles SSW. of Launceſton, and 243 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

PADUA, an ancient, large, and celebrated city of Italy, with a univerſity. It is capital of the Paduano, but is much leſs conſiderable than it was formerly; for great part of the circuit within the walls is unbuilt, and the town in general ſo thinly inhabited, that graſs is ſeen in many places in the interſtices of the ſtones with which the ſtreets are paved. The houſes are built on piazzas, which, when the town was well inhabited, and in a flouriſhing ſtate, may have had a magnificent appearance; but they now rather give it a gloomy air. The ſtreets, alſo, in general, (although there is a great number of beautiful buildings) are narrow, dark, dirty, and ill-paved. Padua contains 26 pariſh churches, 41 convents, 4 hoſpitals, 9 ſquares, 7 ſtone bridges, and 7 gates. The Franciſcan church is dedicated to St. Anthony, accounted the great patron of the city. "The body of this holy perſon," ſays Dr. Moore, "is incloſed in a ſarcophagus, under an altar in the middle of the chapel, and is ſaid to emit a very agreeable and refreſhing flavour. Pious Catholics believe this to be the natural effluvia of the ſaint's body; while heretics aſſert, that the perfume (for a perfume there certainly is) proceeds from certain balſams rubbed on the marble every morning, before the votaries come to pay their devotions. I never preſume to give an opinion on conteſted points of this kind; but I may be allowed to ſay, that if this ſweet odour really proceeds from the holy Franciſcan, he emits a very different ſmell from any of the brethren of that order whom I ever had an opportunity of approaching." The walls of this church are covered with votive offerings of ears, eyes, arms, legs, noſes, and every part almoſt of the human body, in token of cures performed by this ſaint; for whatever part has been the ſeat of the diſeaſe, a repreſentation of it is hung up in ſilver or gold, according to the gratitude or wealth of the patient. Near this building is a place, called the School of St. Anthony, where many of his actions are painted in freſco; ſome of them by Titian. The univerſity, formerly ſo celebrated, is now, like every thing elſe in this city, on the decline. Here is a cloth manufactory; and it is ſaid, that the inhabitants of Venice (the nobles not excepted) lately wore no other cloth than what was made here. The city, however, ſwarms with beggars, who aſk charity in the name of St. Anthonio. Padua is ſeated on the rivers Brenta and Bachiglione, in a fine plain; and is about 7 miles in circumference, 22 miles W. of Venice. Lat. 45. 22. N. lon. 12. 1. E.

PADUANO, a ci-devant province of Italy, in the territory of Venice, bounded on the N. by the Treviſano. Its ſoil is well watered, one of the moſt fertile in Italy, and is about 35 miles in length, and 28 in breadth, Padua is the capital.

Padworth, Berks, near Aldermarſton. Padyngen, Surry, in Abinger pariſh.

PAEFENHOFFEN, a town in the dept. of Lower Rhine, ſeated near the river Motter, 8 miles W. of Haguenau.

Pagen, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Pageſtreet, Middl. E. of Edgworth. Pagham, Suſſex, SW. of Arundel. Paglesham, Eſſex, E. of Stambridge. Pagnort, Yorkſ. a mile from Barnesley.

PAGO, an iſland of Dalmatia, in the Adriatic, 20 miles long and 6 wide. It was, till of late, ſubject to the Venetians. The air is cold and the ſoil barren; but it is well-peopled, and contains ſalt-works. Lat. 44. 42. N.

Pagrave, Magna and Parva, Norfolk, near Swaffham. Pailington, Warwickſh. N. of Harborough.

PAINBOEUF, a town in the depart. of Lower Loire, ſituated at the mouth of the river Loire. It is a very conſiderable ſea-port, whence all the ſhips belonging to Nantes take their departure, and where they anchor on their arrival; but at the beginning of this century, was only a village. It is 20 miles W. of Nantes.

Painpill, Dorſetſh. Pains, Suſſex, between Cuckfield and Ditchling. Pain's Caſtle, Radnorſh. Painsford, Devonſh. in Aſhprington pariſh. Pain's-Hill, Surry, near Cobham. Painſley, Staff. NW. of Leigh.

PAINSWICK, a town of Glouceſterſhire, has a conſiderable manufacture of broad cloths for the army, and for the India and Turkey trade; and hence is brought a ſtone, remarkable for its beauty and neatneſs, for the pavement of floors. It is ſituated in a fine healthy air, on a brook which runs into the Stroud, 7 miles SE. of Glouceſter, and 101 W. by N. of London. Market on Tueſday.

PAISLEY, a large manufacturing town of Renfrewſhire, in Scotland. It contains ſeveral everal broad and regular ſtreets, which ave names deſcriptive of the various em-loyments of the inhabitants; ſuch as ilk-Street, Cotton-Street, Lawn-Street auze-Street, Inkle-Street, &c. in which re many good houſes. The principal anufactures are in ſilk and thread gauze, hich are ſo neat and beautiful, that they ave been diſplayed at court in the birth-ay dreſſes. The extenſive cotton-works ere employ, not only numbers of wo-en, but even of very young girls. one of the principal manufacturers, ho have become opulent, have built egant houſes for their reſidence; and n idea of their great ſucceſs may be rmed from this circumſtance, that they ave been known to pay to the people ey employ 500l. a week. "A fertile ountry," obſerves a late writer, "cheap bour, a ſober and ſteady people, abun-ance of coal, and water-carriage, were rcumſtances that firſt invited Engliſh anufacturers to ſettle in this country; nd the juſtneſs of their views have been lly evinced by the moſt proſperous ſuc-eſs." At preſent the ſilk branch, which r ſome years paſt out-did that of Spital-elds, is on the decline, but the muſlin as come in its room, and the thread ma-ufacture has conſiderably increaſed. ere are alſo conſiderable tan-works, me ſoap and candle-works, a manufac-ure of ribbons, and another of inkle or ape. According to a calculation made 1784, the manufactures of Paiſley, in ilk-gauze, lawn, linen-gauze, and white ewing thread, amounted to the value of 79,185l. 16s. 6d. and 26,484 perſons ere employed in carrying them on. The agnificent abbey for which Paiſley was nce noted, is now partly in ruins; but here is a chapel here entire, which is amous for a ſurpriſing echo. The flap f a door produces the effect of thunder; nd a melodious tune delights the ear ith the idea of celeſtial harmony. Paiſ-ey is ſuppoſed to contain about one-hird of the number of the inhabitants f Glaſgow; but it ſtands on nearly as much ground. It is ſituated on the river art, 6 miles W. of that city.

PAITA, St. MICHAEL DE, a town f Quito, in S. America, founded by rancis Pizaro, in 1531, and containing bout 200 families. The bay or harbour s, a very ſecure anchoring place, the eſt, indeed, on the caſt, and is fre-uented by all veſſels coming from the orth, which are bound to Callao. Paſ-engers alſo, from Acapulco or Panama, isembark here, and travel by land to Lima, here being a tolerably good road, parallel to the coaſt, with a number of towns and villages for the accommodation of travellers. Here is a ſmall fort, ſur-rounded with a brick wall, and mounted with 8 pieces of cannon, but neither ditch nor outwork. Paita has been often taken by the Engliſh, and particu-larly by Commodore Anſon, in 1741, who plundered and burnt the town, be-cauſe the governor refuſed to ranſom it Lat. 6. 12. S. lon. 81. 19 W.

PALACIOS, a town of Leon.

Pakefield, Suffolk; near the ſea, S. of Leoſtoff. Pakenham, Suffolk, 3 miles from Bury. Pakenhill, Glouceſterſ. in the pariſh of Stroud. Pakington, Wor-ceſterſhire, near Bromſgrove.

PALAIS, LE, a town of France, ca-pital of Belleiſle, ſituated on the coaſt. It contains about 500 houſes. Lat. 47. 18. N. lon. 3. 2. W.

PALAIS, ST. a town in the dept. of the Lower Pyrenees, giving name to a mountainous country, which produces ſcarcely any thing but millet, oats, and fruits. This town and diſtrict, with thoſe of St. Pied de Port, forms nearly the whole of the late province of Lower Navarre, annexed to France by Henry IV. who held it in right of his mother, Jeanne d'Albret. The town of St. Pa-lais is ſeated on the river Bidouſe, 15 miles SSE. of Bayonne.

PALAMBAM, a town and kingdom on the E. part of Java, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, about 50 miles from the ſea. The Dutch, who have a fort here, purchaſe large quantities of pepper at a low price. Lat. 2. 35. S.

PALAMCOTTA, or TINEVELLEY, a town and province in the Carnatic, 74 miles SSW. of Madura.

PALAMOS, a ſea-port of Catalonia.

PALANKA, a town of Bulgaria; a town of Beſſarabia, ſituated on the Dnei-ſter, and a caſtle of Hungary, 22 miles NE. of Gran.

PALATINATE OF THE RHINE, or LOWER PALATINATE, an electorate of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, adjoining France, the electorate of Mentz, the biſhopric of Worms, the duchy of Wurtemburg, &c. Its greateſt extent is about 80 miles, and the prin-cipal rivers are the Rhine and the Neckar. It is a very fertile country, though ra-ther mountainous, abounding with fine vineyards, fields, foreſts, meadows, gar-dens, rivers, and lakes. Heidelberg is the principal town, but Manheim is the electoral reſidence.

PATALINATE,

PALATINATE, UPPER, a part of Bavaria, bounded on the W. and NW. by Franconia, on the E. and NE. by Bohemia, and on the S. by the duchy of Neuburg and Lower Bavaria. In 1714, it was ceded, by the peace of Baden, to the Elector of Bavaria. Amberg is the capital.

Palatine Town, in Carlow, Leinſter, ſo called from a colony of induſtrious people, who were driven from their native country, by the perſecuting arms of Lewis XIV. of France.

PALAZZUOLO, a town in the Breſſan, Italy; and a town in the Val di Noto, Sicily.

PALENCIA, a town of Leon.

PALERMO, anciently PANORMUS, a rich and beautiful city of Sicily, in the Val di Mazara; the ſeat of the viceroy, and capital of the iſland. It is ſituated near the extremity of a kind of natural amphitheatre, formed by high and rocky mountains; but the country that lies between the city and theſe mountains, is one of the richeſt and moſt pleaſant ſpots in the world; the whole appearing a magnificent garden, filled with fruit trees of every ſpecies, particularly oranges, lemons, and Indian figs, and watered by clear fountains and rivulets, that form a variety of windings through this charming plain. The inhabitants are eſtimated by Mr. Brydone, at 150,000. Two great ſtreets interſect each other in the centre of the city, where they form a handſome ſquare, called the Ottangalo, adorned with elegant uniform buildings. From the centre of this ſquare is ſeen the whole of theſe noble ſtreets, and the four great gates of the city which terminate them. Theſe gates are each at the diſtance of about half a mile, the diameter of the city being no more than a mile. They are elegant pieces of architecture, richly adorned; particularly the Porta Nuova, and the Porta Felice, terminating the great ſtreet called the Corſo, that runs from SW. and NE. The Porta Felice opens to the Marino, a beautiful walk, that conſtitutes one of the great pleaſures of the nobleſſe of Palermo. It has on one ſide the wall of the city, and on the other the ſea, whence there is always an agreeable breeze. In the centre of the Marino is an elegant kind of temple, which, in the ſummer, is made uſe of as an orcheſtra. The concert does not begin till the clock ſtrikes midnight; the flambeaux are extinguiſhed at the Porta Felice, where the ſervants wait for the return of the carriages; the company therefore generally continue an hour or two in darkneſs, except when it is moonlight. The concert finiſhes about two in the morning. Many of the churches of Palermo are very rich and magnificent. The cathedral is a large, ancient, Gothic ſtructure, ſupported within by 80 columns of oriental granite, and divided into a great number of chapels, ſome of which are extremely rich, particularly that of St. Roſolia, the patroneſs of Palermo, who is held in great veneration. The monuments of their Norman kings, ſeveral of whom are buried here, as alſo of the emperors Henry V. and Frederic II. are of the moſt beautiful porphyry, ſome of them near 700 years old. The church of the late Jeſuits is equal in magnificence to moſt of the ſtructures in Italy. The Chieſa-del-Palazzo is entirely encruſted over with ancient Moſaic, and the vaulted roof is all of the ſame. "But it is endleſs," ſays Mr. Brydone, "to talk of churches, here are upward of 300." Palermo is crowded with ſtatues of ſaints reigns and tutelar ſaints, placed in ſmall courts and ſquares upon pedeſtals of colloſſal proportion and taſteleſs form. In the ſtreets the women hide their heads in black veils; a very ancient mode of dreſs in this iſland. The city is well lighted with reverberating lamps, and, in wet weather, moveable wooden bridges are provided for croſſing the kennels, which then become rapid torrents. The harbour is very dangerouſly open to the ſouth and ſea from the NE. quarter, and, even at the anchoring place, ſhips lie in peril whenever a weſterly wind blows, as it ruſhes with great impetuoſity through the valley of Colli between the mountains. Properly ſpeaking, Palermo has two harbours; one made in the year 1405, which ſerves for barks, and the other, finiſhed in 1590, capable of receiving veſſels of war, at the entrance of which a light is fixed. Indeed this city has ſuffered greatly at different periods by earthquakes or inundations. About a mile from Palermo is a celebrated convent of Capuchins, in which is a vault made uſe of as a receptacle for the dead. It conſiſts of four wide paſſages, each about 40 feet in length, into which the light is admitted by windows at the ends. Along the ſides of theſe are niches, in which the bodies are ſet upright, clothed in coarſe garments, with their heads, arms, and hands bare. They are prepared for this ſituation by broiling them 6 or 7 months upon a gridiron, over a ſlow fire, till all the fat and moiſture are conſumed. The ſkin, which looks like pale-coloured leather, remains entire, and the character of the countenance countenance is in ſome degree preſerved. Except the b dies of two reputed ſaints, one of which had been there 150 years, and the other 100, they are all of modern date, as appears by an inſcription on a ſmall piece of paſteboard hung to the arms of every corpſe, ſignifying the name of the perſon, and the time of his deceaſe. In ſome of the higher niches they are laid out at full length, and at the top are children of 6 or 7 years of age. On the doors are handſome trunks, containing the bodies of perſons of diſtinction, the keys of which are kept by the relations. Here are ſome manufactures of ſilk and tuffs, and they export in good years about 10,000 bales of raw ſilk. Palermo is the ſee of an archbiſhop, and contains a univerſity. It is ſeated on the NW. ſide of the iſland, at the bottom of the bay of the ſame name, 162 miles S by W. of Naples, and 235 S. by E. of Rome. Lat. 38. 15. N. lon. 13. 23. E.

PALESTINE, a country of Turkey in Aſia, ſo called from the Philiſtines, who inhabited its ſea-coaſt. It is alſo called Judea, from the Patriarch Judah; the Land of Canaan, and the Promiſed Land. From its having been the ſcene of the birth, miniſtry, and death of Jeſus, it has been ſuperſtitiouſly denominated the Holy Land. It is divided from Syria on the N. by Mount Libanus, or Lebanon; from Arabia Deſerta on the E. by the mountains of Seir; and it has the deſerts of Arabia Petrea on the S. and the Mediterranean on the W. In length it is about 170 miles, but its breadth varies from 58 to 22. It is, in general, a fertile country, abounding, where cultivated, with corn, wine, oil, pulſe, fruits, ſilk, cotton, tobacco, drugs, and aromatic herbs; and it might ſupply the neighbouring country with all theſe, as it anciently did, were the preſent inhabitants equally induſtrious. The fields and woods abound with flowers of every ſpecies. The parts about Jeruſalem, its capital, are the moſt mountainous and rocky; but they feed numerous herds and flocks, and yield plenty of honey, with excellent wine and oil; and the valleys produce large crops of corn. The climate is exceedingly good.

PALESTRINA, anciently PRÆNESTE, a town of Italy, in the Compagna-di-Roma, near which formerly ſtood a temple dedicated to Fortune, and another to Hercules.

PALESTRINA, one of the largeſt and moſt populous of the iſlands called the Lagunes, near Venice.

Palgrave, Suff. near Diſs in Norfolk.

PALICATA, a ſea-port on the coaſt of Coromandel, where the Dutch have a factory. It is 25 miles N. of Madras.

Pallas Inn, in King's County, Leinſter.

Palling, Norfolk, on the coaſt, NE. of Hickling. Pallington, Dorſetſh. a hamlet of Affpiddle.

Pallis, in Limerick, Munſter.

PALLISER ISLANDS, a group of iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean, the largeſt of which is about 15 miles long, and 9 broad. Lat. 15 to 16. S. lon. 146 to 147. W.

PALMA, formerly called CAPRARIA, from the great number of goats bred here, one of the Canary Iſlands, about 60 miles in circumference. The ſoil is fertile in corn, wine, ſugar-canes, and fruits, and here are quadrupeds and birds of all kinds. It has a handſome town of the ſame name, with a ſafe harbour, much frequented by ſhipping of different nations for wines, theſe being reckoned equal to Malmſey; 12,000 pipes, at leaſt, are exported annually to the W. Indies, and elſewhere. Lat. 28. 36. N. lon. 18. W.

PALMA NUOVA, a town of Friuli, ſeated on a canal which communicates with the Lizonzo, 55 miles NE. of Venice.

PALMA, a town of Portugueſe Eſtramadura, ſeated on the river Cadaon, 18 miles E. of Setuval.

PALMA, a town of Cordova, in Spain.

PALMA, a town of Lavora; and a town of Calabria Ultra; both in Naples.

PALMA, a ſea port of Mazara, Sicily.

PALMA DI SOLO, a ſeaport town of Sardinia, on the S. coaſt.

PALMAS, one of the Philippine Iſlands, SE. of Mindanao.

PALMAS, CAPE, a promontory of Guinea, on the Grain Coaſt. Lat. 4. 28. N. lon. 5. 34. W.

PALMAS, or CIVIDAD DE LAS PALMAS, a large ſeaport town in the Iſland of Canary, capital of that and of all the iſlands, with a good harbour, defended by a citadel. The inhabitants, who are, in general, rich, are about 120,000 in number.

PALMELA, a town of Portugueſe Eſtramadura, 6 miles N. of Setuval.

Palmer's-Bay, Kent, near the North Foreland. Palmer's-Green, Middleſex, near Southgate.

PALMERSTON'S ISLAND, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Capt. Cook, in 1774, and viſited by him in his laſt voyage. It conſiſts of a group of ſmall

ſmall iſlands, about 10 in number, connected by a reef of coral rocks, and lying in a circular direction. This place admits of no anchorage, nor are there any inhabitants on it, though it abounds with cocoa-nuts, ſcurvy-graſs and the wharra-tree. It does not exceed a mile in circumference, and is not elevated more than 3 feet above the level of the ſea. It conſiſts entirely of a coral ſand, with a ſmall mixture of blackiſh mould, which appeared to be produced from decayed vegetables. "Notwithſtanding this poor ſoil," ſays Captain Cook, "it is covered with a variety of trees and buſhes. At one part of the reef, which looks into, or bounds the lake that is within, there was a large bed of coral, almoſt even with the ſurface, which afforded, perhaps, one of the moſt enchanting proſpects that nature has any where produced. Its baſe was fixed to the ſhore, but reached ſo far in, that it could not be ſeen; ſo that it ſeemed to be ſuſpended in the water, which deepened ſo ſuddenly, that at the diſtance of a few yards, there might be 7 or 8 fathoms. The ſea was at this time quite unruffled; and the ſun, ſhining bright, expoſed the various ſorts of coral in the moſt beautiful order; ſome parts branching into the water with great luxuriance, others lying collected in round balls, and in various other figures; all which were greatly heightened by ſpangles of the richeſt colours, that glowed from a number of large clams, which were every where interſperſed. But the appearance of theſe was ſtill inferior to that of the multitude of fiſhes, that glided gently along, ſeemingly with the moſt perfect ſecurity. The colours of the different ſorts were the moſt beautiful that can be imagined; the yellow, blue, red, black, &c. far exceeding any thing that art can produce. Their various forms, alſo, contributed to increaſe the richneſs of this ſubmarine grotto, which could not be ſurveyed without a pleaſing tranſport, mixed, however, with regret, that a work ſo ſtupendouſly elegant, ſhould be concealed in a place where mankind could ſeldom have an opportunity of rendering the praiſes juſtly due to ſo enchanting a ſcene." With reſpect to the animal creation, the moſt ſingular that Captain Cook obſerved, were ſome large eels, beautifully ſpotted, which, when followed, would raiſe themſelves out of the water, and endeavour, with an open mouth, to bite their purſuers. There was alſo a brown ſpotted rock fiſh, about the ſize of a haddock, ſo tame, that inſtead of ſwimming away, it would remain fixed, and gaze at them. Had they been in want, a ſufficient ſupply might have been had; for thouſands of the clams already mentioned, ſtuck upon the reef, ſome of which weighed 2 or 3 pounds. Lat. 18. 8. S. lon. 162. 57. W.

Palmerſtown, in Dublin, Leinſter, 5 miles from the metropolis.

PALMYRA, formerly a magnificent city of Syria, capital of a kingdom, of which Zenobia was queen, who held it out a long time againſt the Romans, but was at length taken captive by the Emperor Aurelian, and led in triumph through the ſtreets of Rome. The ſtupendous ruins of this city were viſited by Meſſrs. Wood and Dawkins, in 1751, and a ſplendid account of them, illuſtrated by plates, was publiſhed by Mr. Wood, in 1753. This place, called by the Arabs, Tadmor in the Deſert, appears to have been built originally by Solomon; but the architecture of its admired remains is probably Grecian, coeval with the time of the Seleucidæ. The preſent inhabitants, conſiſting of 30 or 40 families, have erected their mud cottages within the ſpacious court of a magnificent temple of the ſun. Palmyra is ſituated in the midſt of a large ſandy plain, ſurrounded on 3 ſides by a long chain of mountains, 90 miles E. of Damaſcus. Lat. 33. 20. N. lon. 38. 50. E.

PALNAUD, a diſtrict of Hindooſtan, included in the Carnatic, though ſituated between Golconda and the Guntoor Circar, S. of the river Kiſtna. It is about 70 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. Zimerycotta is the capital.

PALOS, a town of Andaluſia, with a tolerable tide harbour, at the mouth of Rio Tinto. Columbus ſet ſail from here on his firſt adventurous voyage, in 1492.

PALOS CAPE, a promontory of Murcia, S. of the town of Palos, and 18 miles E. of Carthagena.

PALOTTA, a town of Lower Hungary.

PALTA, or JAMDRO, a famous lake of Thibet, lying about 24 miles to the S. of Laſſa. According to the Lama's map, it is 105 miles in circumference; and in the midddle of it is one large iſland. On the W. ſhore of this iſland, or rather congeries of iſlands, is a monaſtery, and the ſeat of the Lamiſa Tarcepamo, or the Great Regenerate, in whom the Thibetians think that a divine ſpirit is regenerated, as in the Great Lama. The word Lama ſignifies a prieſt, or miniſter of religion, and Lamiſa is the the feminine of Lama. This lake is 12 miles S. of the river Burrampooter, or Sanpoo.

Palterton, Derbyſhire, S. of Bolſover. Paltons, Hants, NE. of the New-Foreſt.

PALUDA, a town of Erzerum, ſeated near the Euphrates, and inhabited by Mahometans and Chriſtians. The prince is, in ſome reſpects, independent of the Grand Signior.

Pamber, Hampſh. N. of Baſingſtoke. Pamel-Bridge, Suſſex, near Winchelſea.

PAMIERS, a town in the dept of Ariege, ſeated on the river Arriege, 8 miles NNW. of Foix.

Pamington, Glouceſ. near Tewkeſbury.

PAMPANGAN, a town and extenſive province of Lucon, one of the Manilla iſlands, ſituated on the E. coaſt in lat. 15. N.

PAMPELLONNE, a town in the department of Tarn, 12 miles N. of Alby.

PAMPELUNA, a town of Spain, capital of Upper Navarre. Its ſquares are handſome and adorned with ſhops full of rich merchandiſe. It is ſeated on the river Arga, 42 miles S. of Bayonne, and 172 NNE. of Madrid. Lat. 42. 47. N. lon. 1. 35. W.

PAMPELUNA, a town of S. America, in New Granada, famous for its mines of gold, and numerous flocks of ſheep. It is 200 miles S. of Maricaibo, and 300 NE. of Popayan. Lat. 6. 30. N. lon. 70. 30. W.

Pamphil, Dorſetſhire, near Winborn. Pampiſford, Cambridgeſ. near Whittleſford. Pampocalia, Yorkſ. SW. of Wetherby. Pan, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

PAN, or PAHAN, a ſea-port on the E. coaſt of Malacca, capital of a kingdom of the ſame name. It is remarkable for a great number of elephants, and for the plenty of pepper it produces. Lat 3. 15. N.

PANAMA, a city of S. America capital of a juriſdiction of the ſame name, with ſtraight and broad ſtreets, and elegant public buildings. The merchandiſe of Chili and Peru is brought to this place, particularly the gold and ſilver, and all the commodities brought up the river Chagre. The ſhips unload at a ſmall iſland, 3 miles from this place, becauſe the water is ſo ſhallow as not to admit them to come nearer. Old Panama was burnt by Captain Morgan, a buccaneer, in 1670, and the preſent town has been built 4 miles diſtant from it, in a more advantageous ſituation. The province contains 3 cities, 12 villages, and a great number of rancherias, or aſſemblages of Indian huts. Here are alſo ſeveral gold mines, but they are neglected for the ſake of the pearl fiſhery on the coaſt. It ſtands on a bay of the ſame name. Lat. 8. 48. N. lon. 80. 15. W.

PANARIA, one of the Lipari Iſlands, barren, and very inconſiderable being, only 5 miles in circumference. It is 8 miles NNE. of Lipari, and 30 N. of Sicily.

PANAY, an iſland of the Philippines, of a triangular form, lying E. of Paragua. It is 180 miles in circumference, and is the moſt populous and fertile of them all. It is watered by a great number of rivers and brooks, and produces vaſt quantities of rice. The number of Indians tributary to the Spaniards is about 17,000.

Panborough, Somerſetſ. W. of Wells. Pancras, a village of Middleſex, a little to the NW. of London. The burying ground here is remarkable for being the principal place of interment for the Romaniſts. At a public houſe near it, there is a medicinal ſpring. Here is an hoſpital for inoculation, to which is now added the ſmall-pox hoſpital formerly at Clerkenwell. Here alſo is the Veterinary College eſtabliſhed in 1791, for the improvement of farriery, and the treatment of cattle in general. The noble ſtables and anatomical theatre are finiſhed, but the preſent college is only a temporary building.

Pancras-Wick, Devonſ. near Bradworthy. Panfield, Eſſex, near Bocking and Braintree.

PANGO, a town and diſtrict of Congo, in Africa, on the river Barbela.

Pangborn, Berkſhire, by the Thames, NW. of Reading. Pangden, Suſſex, SW. of Ditchling.

PANJAB, a country of Hindooſtan, being that which is watered by the 5 eaſtern branches of the Indus. It was the ſcene of Alexander's laſt campaign, and the ne plus ultra of his conqueſts. It forms a ſquare of about 250 miles, and includes the whole ſoubah of Lahore, and a great part of Moulton Proper. To the lower part of Moulton it is flat and marſhy, and inundated, like Bengal, by the periodical rains which fall during our ſummer.

Pannal, Yorkſ. near Knareſborough. Pannanach Wells, a village of Aberdeenſhire, ſituated a little below the waterfall, called the Lin of Dee, in the valley of Glenmuick. It is noted for its mineral waters, which are of a diuretic quality.

PANNIPUT, a town of Delhi, in Hindooſtan. In a plain near this town, a battle was fought in 1761, between an army of 200,000 Mahrattas, and Abdallah, king of Candahar, at the head of 150 000 Mahometans, when the former were totally defeated. They loſt the flower of their army, with their beſt generals, and the number of priſoners taken was almoſt incredible. From that period, the power of the Mahrattas has been ſenſibly on the decline. Panniput is 50 miles NW. of Delhi.

Panſanger, 2 miles NW. of Hertford. Panſton, Northumberland, S. of Learmouth. Pant, a river in Eſſex, which falls into Blackwater Bay.

PANTALARIA, an iſland in the Mediterranean, between Sicily and the coaſt of Tunis, about 25 miles in circumference, and containing 3000 inhabitants. It abounds in cotton, fruits, wine, capers, olives, and figs; but the inhabitants import their corn from Sicily. It belongs to the king of Naples. Lat. 36. 55. N. lon. 12. 31. E.

Panteage, Monmouthſ. N. of Pontipool. Panley, Glouceſterſhire, NE. of Newent. Panton, Lincolnſ. near Ancaſter.

PANUÇO, a town, province, and river of Mexico, with a biſhop's ſee. Here are veins of gold, and ſalt-works, which are the principal riches of the inhabitants. It is ſeated near the Gulf of Mexico, in lat. 23. 0. N. lon. 98. 9. W.

Panxford, Norfolk, between Norwich and South Walſham.

PA OOM, a ſmall iſland of the New Hebrides, S. of Mallicollo.

PAPA, a town of Hungary, 45 miles W. of Buda.

Papacaſtle, Cumberland, a hamlet of Bridekirk. It is pleaſantly ſituated on an eminence, within a mile of Cockermouth; and the Derwent meanders beautifully through the intervening vale.

PAPOUL, ST. a town in the dept. of Aude, ſeated on the river Lembe, 15 miles WNW. of Carcaſſone.

PAPPENHEIM, a town and county of Aichſtatt, Franconia.

Papplewick, Nottingh. near Newſted. Here are ſome large cotton-mills. Papworth, Agnes and Evered, 11 miles W. of Cambridge. Papworth, Nether, Huntingdonſhire, between Great Paxton and Hilton.

PARA, or BELEM, a town, river, and juriſdiction in Braſil, on the N. ſide of the river Orellana. This government comprehends that part of Guiana which belongs to the Portugueſe, and extends 600 miles from E. to W. and 200 from N. to S. Lat. 1. 30. S.

PARACLETE, THE. See QUINCEY.

Paracomb, Devonſhire, near Comb-Martin.

PARAGUA, the moſt weſterly of the Philippine Iſlands, 180 miles in length, and 40 in breadth. The Spaniards have a fort here, but the king is ſaid to be tributary to Borneo.

PARAGUAY, a large country of S. America, in the government of Buenos Ayres. It contains 6 provinces; namely, Paraguay Proper, Parana, Guaria, Uraguay, Tucuman, and La Plata, from which the whole country is alſo called La Plata, and has numerous lakes and rivers. Of the latter, the 3 principal are the Paraguay, Uraguay, and Parana, the united ſtreams of which form the celebrated Rio-de-la-Plata. Theſe rivers annually overflow their banks; and, on their receſs, leave them enriched by a ſlime, that renders the ſoil extremely fertile. This vaſt country is far from being wholly ſubdued, or planted by the Spaniards; many parts being ſtill unknown to them, as well as to every other European nation. The principal province of which we have any knowledge is that which is called La Plata, toward the mouth of the river of that name. This province, with all the adjacent parts, is one continued plain for ſeveral hundred miles; extremely fertile, and producing cotton in great abundance, tobacco, and the valuable herb called Paraguay, which is peculiar to this country, and the infuſion of which is drunk in all the Spaniſh provinces of S. America, inſtead of tea. They have alſo a variety of fruits, and very rich paſtures, or plains, full of horſes, mules, black cattle, and herds of ſheep; but the country has but few woods or foreſts. The air is remarkably ſweet and ſerene. The Spaniards diſcovered this country, by ſailing up the Rio-de-la-Plata in 1515, and founded the town of Buenos Ayres, on the S. ſide of the river. In 1580 the Jeſuits were admitted into theſe fertile regions, where they afterwards founded, at the commencement of the 17th century, and with the permiſſion of Philip III. the famous miſſions of Paraguay; which were a number of colonies, each governed by two Jeſuits, one of whom was rector, and the other his curate. They undertook not only to make proſelytes to the church, but to open a new ſource of wealth to the mother country. To this end they repreſented, that they ought to be independent of the Spaniſh governors; and that as the vices of the Europeans might contaminate their new converts, and deſtroy ſtroy the great objects of their miſſions, no other Spaniards ſhould be permitted to enter the country. To theſe terms the court agreed; they conſenting to a certain capitation tax on the natives, and to ſome other ſtipulations in favour of the crown. In proceſs of time, the Jeſuits, by the moſt wonderful addreſs and perſevering patience, and without the leaſt degree of force, acquired the moſt abſolute dominion, both eccleſiaſtical and civil, over the natives, whom they even inſtructed in military diſcipline. In 1757, the king of Spain exchanged the colonies on the E. ſhore of the river Uraguay for the Portugueſe colony of St. Sacrament, which cauſed that river to become the boundary of the reſpective poſſeſſions of the two crowns. This produced an inſurrection of the Indians, who were defeated by the Spaniſh governor, with the loſs of 2000 of them killed. In 1767, the court expelled the Jeſuits from S. America, and the natives, in courſe, were put upon the ſame footing with the other Indians of the Spaniſh part of that vaſt continent.

PARAIBA, a commercial town and juriſdiction of Braſil, on the S. bank of a river of the ſame name, navigable for veſſels loaded with 6 or 700 hogſheads of ſugar, and which runs into the Atlantic, about 20 miles below the town. The ſoil is pretty fertile, producing ſugar-canes, cattle, tobacco, cotton, and Braſil wood, &c. The town of Paraiba is about 60 miles N. of Fermambuco.

PARAMARIBO, the principal town, and ſeat of government, in the province of Surinam, in S. America. It is a very flouriſhing and lively place, every thing that can indicate wealth and affluence being obſervable here. The carriages and dreſs of the richer inhabitants are truly magnificent; ſilk embroidery, Genoa velvets, and gold and ſilver lace, being daily worn, and even the maſters of trading ſhops appear in buttons and buckles of ſolid gold. The ſtreets are generally crowded with planters, ſailors, ſoldiers, Jews, Indians, and negroes; while the river, which has a very noble appearance, is covered with barges, canoes, &c. conſtantly paſſing and repaſſing, often accompanied with bands of muſic; the ſhipping alſo, in the road, adorned with their different flags, guns firing, &c. not to mention the many groups of boys and girls, playing in the water, altogether form a truly pleaſing appearance, and add not a little to the gaiety and variety of objects which ſo agreeably arreſt the attention of a curious ſtranger. The ladies are uncommonly elegant in their dreſs, and keep their houſes and furniture extremely clean. They uſe the fineſt linen, exquiſitely well waſhed with Caſtilian ſoap, which can only be reſembled to mountain ſnow, and which, in compariſon, would make the beſt bleached linen in Europe, appear like canvas. The town is very extenſive, and remarkably clean, and the houſes (which are about 1400 in number) are extremely well built. All the ſtreets are perfectly ſtraight, and ſome of them, at leaſt, a mile long; they are all paved, or laid with ſand and ſhells mixed, which bind together and grow hard, partly reſembling the walks in a garden or pleaſure-ground. Rows of orange trees, lemons, ſhaddocks, and tamarinds, are planted on each ſide, at the diſtance of 10 or 12 feet from the houſes, and which, in the months of May and June, diffuſe a moſt delicious fragrance. The warehouſes, for the ſtoring of goods, and the gardens that adjoin the houſes, include more ſpace than is uſually allowed in towns, which impreſſes the ſpectator with an idea that he is in a fine, extenſive village. Lat. 5. 48. N. Lon. 55. 11. W.

PARANA, a province of Paraguay, ſo named from a large river, which riſes in about lat. 18. S. and uniting with the Paraguay, in lat. 28. S. and afterwards with the Uraguay, forms the Rio-de-la-Plata.

Parbold, Lancaſhire, NW. of Wigan.

Parcaſſick, Monmouthſ. N. of Cheſtow.

PARCHIM, a town of Mecklenburgh.

PARDO, a royal palace near Madrid.

Pardſhaw, or Pardſey, Cumberland, a hamlet of Dean, near the Lake of Lowſwater, 4 miles from Cockermouth.

PARENZO, a ſea-port of the late Venetian Iſtria.

PARGA, a ſea-port of the late Venetian Albania, oppoſite the Iſland of Corfu, and 26 miles W. of Arta. It is inhabited by Greeks and Albaneſe, and is ſeated on a rock.

Parham, Suffolk, on the river Ore, near Framlingham. Parham, Suſſex, near Amberley.

PARIA, or NEW ANDALUSIA, a country of Terra Firma, E. of Cumana, and NE. of the river Oronoko. Between the continent and the iſland of Trinidad, is a large bay, called the Gulph of Paria.

PARIA, a diſtrict of La Plata, in S. America, abounding in all kinds of cattle.

PARILLA, or SANTA PARILLA, a town of Peru, in the audience of Lima, 50 miles S. of Truxillo.

PARIS, the capital of France, one of the largeſt, fineſt, and moſt populous cities of Europe. The river Seine, which croſſes it, forms 3 ſmall iſlands, called the Iſland of Louviers, the Notre Dame, and the Palace, which laſt is the ancient city of Paris. The iſland of the Palace takes its name from a building which was formerly the reſidence of the kings, and afterwards was reſigned to the parliament. Clovis I. after the defeat of Alaric, made Paris the capital of his kingdom. Its circuit was much extended by Philip Auguſtus. It was greatly embelliſhed by Francis I. and his ſucceſſors. The inhabitants are computed to be 800,000. It is 2 leagues in diameter, and 6 in circumference, including the ſuburbs. It is ſuppoſed to contain, 875 ſtreets, and 24,000 houſes, among which are many five, ſix, and even ſeven ſtories. The rivers Yonne, Marne, and Oiſe, by their junction with the Seine, convey to Paris the commodities of Burgundy, Champagne, and Picardy; and this laſt river furniſhes it with the riches of Normandy, and the ſea, which is at the diſtance of 42 leagues. By means of the Loire, the Allier, and the canals of Orleans and Briare, and by the Vienne, it has communications with the other parts of the country. There are nine principal bridges in Paris, two of which occupy the whole breadth of the Seine; namely, the Pont Neuf and ci-devant Pont Royal; to which may be added the unfiniſhed ci-devant Pont Royal; to which may be added the unfiniſhed ci-devant Pont de Lewis XVI. begun in 1787. The Pont Neuf, the fineſt and moſt frequented of all the bridges, is 1020 feet long, by 72 broad, and has 12 arches; 7 of which are on the ſide of the Louvre, and 5 on the ſide of the ſtreet Dauphine. In the ſecond arch of this bridge, on the ſide of the Louvre, is the Chateau de la Samaritaine (the Woman of Samaria) a ſmall timber building of 3 ſtories, conſtructed, in 1712, on piles, and lately repaired. In the inſide is a pump, which raiſes the water of the river, to diſtribute it by pipes to the Louvre, the Tuileries, &c. The other bridges are Pont St. Michel, Pont au-Change, le-Petit-Pont, Pont-Notre-Dame, Pont-de-la-Tournelle, Pont-Marie, and the Pont-Rouge. This laſt, which is a timber-bridge, painted red, is the point of communication between the Iſle-du-Palais and Iſle St. Lewis. The public fountains are very numerous, and on ſome of them is diſplayed very elegant ſculpture. The public places, ſquares, &c. are alſo numerous and elegant. The fineſt are the Place-Dauphin, of a triangular form, built, and ſo named, by Henry IV. in memory of the birth of Lewis XIII.; the Place Royale, in which was the equeſtrian ſtatue of Lewis XIII. in bronze; the Place-Vendome, a ſquare with the angles truncated, in which was the equeſtrian ſtatue, in bronze, of Lewis XIV. in a Roman habit; the Place-des-Victoires, of a circular form, in which was a ſtatue of the ſame king, crowned by the heathen goddeſs Victory, with this inſcription, Viro Immortali; and the Place-de-Lewis XV. of an octagon form, in which was an equeſtrian ſtatue, in bronze, of that monarch. This ſquare, which is now called the Place-de-la-Revolution, was the fatal ſcene of the execution of the unfortunate Lewis XVI. and afterward of his unhappy conſort, Marie Antoinette, the former on the 21ſt of January, and the latter on the 16th of October, 1793. There are 3 triumphal arches, erected to Lewis XIV. and known by the names of Porte St. Bernard, Porte St. Denis, and Porte St. Martin. The moſt intereſting of the manufactures of Paris is that of the Gobelins (ſo called from a family of celebrated dyers, ſettled in this city in 1540) in which tapeſtries are made after the pictures of the greateſt maſters, to ſuch perfection, that one repreſenting Lewis XV. a whole length, framed, and placed among the maſterpieces of painting, was taken, for many days, by multitudes of viſitors, for a finiſhed piece. The manufacture of plate-glaſs likewiſe merits attention. The cathedral of Notre-Dame, a Gothic ſtructure, is one of the largeſt in Europe, and contains 45 chapels. Next to the cathedral, the moſt diſtinguiſhed churches were St. Sulpice, St. Euſtache, St. Gervais, St. Etienne-du-Mont, the old one of St. Genevieve, the new one of St. Genevieve (now called the Pantheon), thoſe of St. Severin, St. Roch, and Val-de-Grace. The firſt college in Paris was that of the Four Nations, called alſo Mazarin, from the name of the cardinal, its founder. There were lately 6 academies in Paris; namely, the French academy, founded by the cardinal Richelieu; that of Inſcriptions and Belles Letters, by Lewis XIV.; that of the Sciences; and thoſe of Painting and Sculpture; Architecture; and Chirurgery. Among the public libraries, that that lately called the king's, holds the firſt rank, in reſpect both to the extent of the buildings, and the number of the volumes. The other libraries are thoſe of St. Genevieve, the College of Mazarin, St. Victor, of the Doctrinaires, of the Advocates, and of the Faculty of Medicine. That of St. Germain-des-Prés, one of the richeſt in France, containing between 15 and 20,000 manuſcripts, and near 100,000 volumes, is open every day to men of letters. The Royal (now National) Obſervatory is built of free-ſtone, as neither iron nor wood form any part of the erection. The Botanical Garden is extenſive. The four principal palaces are the Louvre, the Tuileries, the Palais-Royal, now le Palais d'Egalité, and the Luxemburg. The Louvre is diſtinguiſhed into the Old and New. The Old Louvre was begun by Francis I. in 1528; and the grand gallery, 1362 feet long and 30 broad, which joins it to the Tuileries, was begun under Charles IX. and finiſhed by Lewis XIV. who likewiſe built, in 1665, the New Louvre. But it is ſtill an unfiniſhed ſtructure. In ſome of the apartments, the ancient academies, viz. the French Academy, for the improvement of the French language; the Royal Academy of Inſcriptions and Belles Lettres; the Royal Academy of Sciences; and the Royal Academy of Paintings and Sculpture; have held their ſittings: and in others are the work-ſhops and lodging-rooms of artiſts. The Tuileries, begun in 1564, by Catharine of Medicis, continued by Henry IV. and completed by Lewis XIV. takes its name from its ſituation in a place in which were formerly many tile-kilns (tuileries) which, for three or four centuries, furniſhed the greateſt part of the tiles uſed in Paris. The riding-houſe, belonging to it, is the place choſen by the national aſſembly for their ſittings, when they removed from Verſailles in 1789. The garden of the Tuileries, in front of the palace, and on the banks of the Seine, is unqueſtionably the fineſt public walk in Paris. The Palais Royal, in the interior, has been recently embelliſhed with many beautiful buildings, with ſhops, coffee-houſes, and a garden, which render it like a perpetual fair, and one of the moſt pleaſing walks in the city. The gardens of the palace of Luxemburg alſo form a fine promenade. The Hotel-des-Invalides, for the wounded and ſuperannuated ſoldiery, is a magnificent ſtructure, built by Lewis XIV.; as is the Military School, in the Champ-de-Mars, which was founded by Lewis XV. Here are alſo grand theatres. The Monnoie, or Mint, is an elegant building, ſituated on that ſide of the Seine, which is oppoſite the Louvre. The Hotel-de-Ville, or Guildhall of the city, is an ancient ſtructure, in the Place-de-Greve, which was heretofore the common place of execution. Before the revolution, Paris was the ſee of an archbiſhop, and contained 51 pariſh churches, 21 parochial, 17 collegiate churches; among which were 13 chapters, 40 chapels, 3 abbeys, 32 priories, and 50 convents for men, eccleſiaſtical and ſecular; 7 abbeys, 6 priories, and 53 convents for women; 12 ſeminaries, and 16 hoſpitals, 6 of which were appropriated to deſerted children. Paris forms, with a ſmall diſtrict round it, one of the departments of France, and is 245 miles SE. of London, 625 NW. of Vienna, and 630 NE. of Madrid. Lat. 48. 50. N. lon. 2. 25. E.

Park, Dorſetſh. in the pariſh of Broad Windſor. Park, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Park, Staffordſ. near Oſweſtry. Park, Weſtmorl. S. of Croſby Ravenſworth. Parkbury, Herts, near Colney-Street. Park-End, Glouceſ. in Hareſfield pariſh. Park-Farm Place, Kent, in Eltham pariſh. Park Gate, Middleſex. W. of Muſwell-Hill.

PARKGATE, a ſea-port of Cheſhire, from whence packet boats regularly ſail to Ireland. It is ſeated on the NE. coaſt of the river Dee, 12 miles NW. of Cheſter, and 194 NW. of London.

Park, Great, Leiceſ. between Aſhby-de-la-Zouch and Stanton-Harold. Park-Hall or Priory, Eſſex, near St. Oſyth. Park-Hall, Eſſex, SE. of Epping. Park-Hall, Northumb. near Caſtle Bromwich. Park-Hall, Shropſhire, N. of Oſweſtry. Park-Hall, Staffordſhire, SE. of Bucknell. Parkham, Devonſhire, W. of Monkleigh. Parkhead, Northumberl. near Harbottle-Caſtle. Parkhill, Staffordſhire, NW. of Uttoxeter. Parkhouſe, Yorkſhire, near Giſborough. Parkhouſe, Hants, E. of Lemington. Parklathes, Nottinghamſ. in Kellam lordſhip. Park, New, Lancaſhire, near Ormſkirk. Park of the Hay, Yorkſhire, between Boroughbridge and Knareſborough. Parkpill, Monmouthſhire, near Caerleon. Parkſton, Dorſetſhire, 2 miles from Pool. Parkſtreet, Herts, S. of St. Albans. Parlieu, Hants, NW. of Chriſtchurch. Parlington, Yorkſhire, between Leeds and Tadcaſter.

PARMA, an ancient, populous, and handſome town of Italy, capital of the duchy of the ſame name, with a citadel and a univerſity. It has a magnificent cathedral, and the largeſt and moſt beautiful opera-houſe in Italy, which will contain 12,000 ſpectators. The ſtreets are ſtraight and broad, and the houſes well-built, and, for the moſt part, painted. The principal ſtreets meet in the centre, where they form a handſome ſquare. The dome, and the church of St. John, are painted by the famous Correggio, who was a native of this place. Don Carlos, king of the two Sicilies, carried away a library from this place to Naples, which contained 18,000 volumes, and a very valuable cabinet of curioſities, as alſo the rich collection of medals. In 1741, by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, the duchies of Parma, Placentia, and Guaſtalla, were given to Don Philip, brother to Don Carlos above mentioned. The number of inhabitants is eſtimated at 40,000. The principal trade of the place conſiſts in ſtockings, and ſome other articles in ſilk, and it has lately been celebrated for its beautiful printing, from the preſſes of Bodoni. It is ſeated on the river Parma, 64 miles SSE. of Milan. Lat. 44. 50. N. lon. 10. 30. E.

PARMA, the duchy of, a province of Italy, bounded on the N. by the Po, on the NE. by the Mantuan, on the E. by the duchy of Modena, on the S. by Tuſcany and Genoa, and on the W. by Genoa and the territory of Pavia. Under this name are commonly included the duchy of Parma Proper, the duchy of Placenza, and the duchy of Guaſtalla. The air is very wholeſome, and the inhabitants often live to a great age. The ſoil is fertile in corn, wine, oil, hemp, cheſnuts, and fruits; the paſtures feed a great number of cattle and ſheep, whoſe wool is excellent, and the cheeſe is in high eſtimation. Here are ſome conſiderable mines of copper and ſilver, and plenty of truffles. In 1345, the pope granted this duchy to his natural ſon, Peter Aloyſius, or, Farneſe, the founder of the family of Farneſe. Elizabeth Farneſe, the only heireſs of the laſt duke, becoming queen of Spain, obtained Parma and Placenza for her ſons, and ſo it was ſettled at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle.

Parmſted, Kent, near Kingſton.

PARNASSO, anciently PARNASSUS, a celebrated mountain in Livadia, in Greece. It has two heads, one of which was formerly famous for being conſecrated to Apollo and the Muſes, and the other to Bacchus. It is the higheſt in Greece, and from the top of it is a proſpect as far as Corinth. Here alſo is a fine fountain, ſuppoſed to be the ancient Caſtalia. It is 8 miles N. of Livadia.

Parndon, Great and Little, Eſſex, between Nettleſwell and Roydon. Parham, Dorſetſ. 5 miles N. of Bridport.

PAROS, an iſland of the Archipelago, one of the Cyclades, about 36 miles in circumference, and containing about 1500 families. The ſoil is well cultivated, and the paſtures feed a great number of flocks. Their trade conſiſts in wheat, barley, wine, pulſe, and calicoes; and in fine white marble alſo, which has long been in eſtimation for ſculpture. Before the war of Candy, it produced a great deal of oil, but the Venetian army burnt all the olive trees. They have a great number of partridges and pigeons, which they ſell very cheap. This iſland was anciently dedicated to Bacchus, on account of its excellent wines. The famous Chronicle of Paros, at Oxford, was brought from hence in 1627, by Thomas Howard, earl of Arundel, who, in 1667, made a preſent of it to the univerſity of Oxford. The inſcription on it purports to have been made 264 years before the Chriſtian æra, and contains a ſpace of above 300 years. It lies W. of Naxia.

PAROS, a town of the Archipelago, capital of the Iſle of Paros; anciently it was the largeſt town of the Cyclades, but it is at preſent much reduced. The walls of the caſtle are built of ancient pieces of marble, moſt of the columns of which are placed length ways. Some of them that ſtand upright, ſupport cornices of amazing ſize. The natives build their houſes with marble, which they find ready cut to their hands. Their fields likewiſe are incloſed with friezes, altars, and baſſo-relievos; however, the Engliſh, French, and Venetians, have carried away the fineſt pieces they could meet with. The inhabitants are ſo ignorant now, that, inſtead of great ſculptors, and ſkilful architects, they have nothing but carters of mortars and ſalt-cellars. Paros is ſeated on the ſouthern coaſt of the iſland, in lat 37. 8. N. lon. 25. 44. E.

Parr, Lancaſ. 3 miles from Preſcot.

PARRAMATTA, a town or ſettlement of Engliſh convicts, in New S. Wales. It is ſeated at the head of the harbour of Port Jackſon, 11 miles W. of Sydney-Cove, between Roſe Hill and the landing-place in the creek which forms the head. In November 1791, near 1000 acres of land were either in cultivation, or cleared for that purpoſe. The ſoil, in moſt places, was found to be remarkably good, want cultivation only to be fit for any uſe, for the ground that has been the longeſt in cultivation bears the beſt crops. Lat. 33. 50. S. lon. 151. 39. E.

PARRET, a river of Somerſetſhire, which riſes in the ſouth part of the county, receives the Ordred, Ivel, and Thone, and enters the Briſtol Channel at Bridgewater-Bay. The tide ruſhes up this river with prodigious velocity and roaring.

Parret, North and South, near Crewkern and the ſource of the Parret. Parret, South, Dorſetſ. near Beminſter. Parrocks, Kent, in Graveſend pariſh. Parrys, Eſſex, near North Weald. Parſonby, Cumb. in the pariſh of Plumbland, near Aſpatria. Parſon Drove, Camb. near Wiſbeach. Parſon's Green, Middl. in Fulham pariſh. Parſon's-Street, Middleſex, near Hendon.

Parteen, in Clare, Munſter, pleaſantly ſeated on the Shannon.

PARTENKIRCH, a town of Freyſing, Bavaria.

PARTHENAY, a town in the dept. of Two Sevres, ſeated on the river Thoué, 17 miles SSW. of Thouars.

Partington, Cheſhire, NW. of Altringham. Partney, Lincolnſ. N. of Spilſby.

PARTON, a ſea-port of Cumberland, with a harbour lately improved by act of parliament, ſo as to be capable of receiving ſmall veſſels carrying coals, &c. to Ireland. It ſtands near Moreſby, 3 miles N. of Whitehaven.

Parton, Cumb. a hamlet in Thurſby pariſh. Partridge-Green, Suſſex, in the pariſh of Eaſt Grinſtead. Parwick, Derbyſhire, in Aſhborn pariſh.

PARYS, a mountain, part of the mountain of Tryſclwyn, in the Iſle of Angleſey, famous for a copper mine, probably the largeſt bed of ore of that metal hitherto diſcovered in the world. It is not wrought in the common manner of ſubterraneous mines, but, like a ſtone quarry, open to day; and the quantities of ore raiſed are prodigious. The ore is poor in quality, and very abundant in ſulphur. The pureſt part is exported raw to the melting works at Swanſea, and other places: the moſt impure is firſt calcined and deprived of moſt of its ſulphur on the ſpot. Quantities of nearly pure copper are obtained from the waters lodged beneath the bed of ore, by the intervention of iron. A lead ore, rich in ſilver, is alſo found in this mountain. The health and population of Angleſey have received a great increaſe from the diſcovery of this copper mine, on March 2, 1768; a day which has been ever ſince obſerved as a feſtival by the miners. An idea of the prodigious wealth of theſe mines may be formed, by conſidering that the Macclesfield company have had at once 14,000 tons of ore upon bank, and the Rev. Edward Hughes, 30,000. The whole of the treaſure is the property of Sir Nicholas Bayley and Mr. Hughes.

PAS, a town in the dept. of the Straits of Calais, 12 miles SW. of Arras.

PAS DE CALAIS, or STRAITS OF CALAIS, one of the departments of France, containing the late diſtricts of Pays Reconquis, and the Boulonnois, in Picardy, and part of Artois. Arras is the capital.

Paſhey, Suſſex, near Tiſehurſt.

PASSAGES, LOS, a ſea-port of Spain, in the territory of Guipuſcoa. The harbour is very ſpacious within, though narrow at the entrance, and remarkably ſecure from all winds. It is 3 miles E. of St. Sebaſtian.

Paſſage, Cornwall, by Helford Haven. Paſſage, Glouceſterſh. by Tewkeſbury.

PASSAGE, in Cork, Munſter, oppoſite Great Iſland, on which the town of Cove is ſituated. Large veſſels are lightened here before they can go up to the city of Cork, the channel higher up admitting only thoſe of 150 tons, when laden, though it ſtretches from ſhore to ſhore, above a mile.

PASSAGE, in Waterford, Munſter, ſituated on the N. ſide of a ſteep hill. Here is an excellent road, where 500 ſail of ſhips may ride ſafely, and which is the ſtation of the packet-boats from Waterford to Milford-Haven.

PASSARO, a town of Noto, in Sicily.

PASSARO, CAPE, anciently called PACHINUS, the SE. point of the Iſland of Sicily. It is not a peninſula, as is commonly repreſented in the maps, but a wretched barren iſland, about a mile round; with a fort, to protect the neighbouring country from the incurſions of the Barbary corſairs, who are often very troubleſome on this part of the coaſt. This iſland and fort are ſeparated from the reſt of Sicily by a ſtrait of about half a mile broad. Lat. 36. 35. N. lon. 15. 22. E.

PASSARO, a cape of Janna, in Greece, between the Gulfs of Armiro and Zeton.

PASSARUAN, a town and kingdom of Java, on the NE. coaſt, trading in cotton. It is 30 miles W. of Panarucan.

PASSAU, an ancient, handſome, and celebrated city in the circle of Bavaria. The houſes are well built, and the cathedral is thought to be the fineſt in Germany. It is divided into four parts, namely, the town of Paſſau, Inſtadt, Iltzſtadt, and the quarter wherein the biſhop's palace is ſeated. It is ſeated on the Danube, at the confluence of the rivers Inn and Ilz, 62 miles E. by S. of Ratiſbon, and 135 W. of Vienna.

PASSAU, THE BISHOPRIC OF, a territory of Germany, in the circle of Bavaria, and lying between Lower Bavaria, Auſtria, and Bohemia. Its largeſt extent is no where above 20 miles; and it has no conſiderable place except Paſſau, the capital. The biſhop is a prince of the empire, only dependent on the ſee of Rome.

Paſſelows, Eſſex, in Dagenham pariſh. Paſſelows, Eſſex, near High Ongar. Paſſemers, Eſſex, near Parndon. Paſſenham, or Paſham. Northamptonſ. on the Ouſe, oppoſite to Stony Stratford.

PASSER, a river of Germany, which runs into the Adige, in the county of Tyrol.

Paſs if you can, in Dublin, Leinſter, N. of Finglaſs. Paſs if you can, and Paſs of Kildare, in W. Meath, Leinſter.

PASSIGNANO, a town of Perugiano, ſeated on the N. coaſt of the lake.

PASTO, or ST. JUAN DE PASTO, a town of Popayan, Terra Firma, ſeated in a fine, fertile valley, watered by ſeveral rivers. It is 80 miles NNE. of Quito.

Paſton, Norf. NE. of North Walſham, near the ſea. Paſton, Northamp. N. of Peterborough. Paſton, Northumb. on the borders of Scotland, near Harelaw Hill.

PASTRANA, a town of New Caſtile.

PATAGONIA, or LAND OF MAGELLAN, the moſt ſouthern part of S. America, extending from the Atlantic to Chili, and the S. Pacific Ocean, and from the 36th to the 54th deg. of S. lat. A race of people have been diſcovered here, who, leading an unreſtrained and ſavage life, are reported to be of a gigantic ſtature. "They are ſuppoſed," ſays Dr. Robertſon, "to be one of the wandering tribes, which occupy that vaſt, but leaſt known region of America, which extends from the river De-la-Plata to the Straits of Magellan. Their proper ſtation is in that part of the interior country which lies on the banks of the river Negro; but in the hunting ſeaſon they often roam as far as the ſtraits which ſeparate Terra del Fuego from the main land. The firſt accounts of this people were brought to Europe by the companions of Magellan, who deſcribed them as going naked, notwithſtanding the inclemency of the climate, above eight feet high, and of ſtrength in proportion to their uncommon ſize. Some of the inhabitants ſeen by Captain Byron, in the year 1764, were certainly about ſeven feet in height. Captains Wallis and Carteret, in 1766, found ſome of them to be from ſix feet, to ſix feet five and ſeven inches in height; but that of the greateſt part was from five feet ten inches to ſix feet. Mr. de Bougainville ſaw none below five feet ten inches, and none above ſix feet two inches; but the people of the Etoile had ſeen, in a preceding voyage, ſeveral that were ſix feet four inches and a half high. The leaſt of thoſe whom Giraudais ſaw, in 1766, were above five feet eleven inches high. M. Duclos Guyot, in the ſame year, ſaw none that wanted more than half an inch of meaſuring ſix feet. In the interior parts of the country, according to Mr. Falkner, there are tribes of a ſtill greater ſize. The great Cacique Cangapol, meaſured above ſeven feet in height; and the ſame gentleman had ſeen Indians of the tribe of the Puelches, more than an inch or two taller than Cangapol. Their colour is a kind of bronze. They are all painted, and clothed nearly in the ſame manner: the circles round the two eyes are ſome white and red, and ſome red and black. Their teeth are as white as ivory, remarkably even and well ſet, but their hair is ſtraight, and nearly as harſh as hog's briſtles. They have no other clothing than ſkins of the guanaco, which they wear with the hair inward, together with a piece of leather uſed as an apron. This ſeemingly barren country produces, however, good paſtures; and numerous droves of wild horned cattle and horſes, firſt brought hither by the Spaniards, now cover the face of it. To the N. of La Plata it is covered with wood; but not a ſingle tree or ſhrub, fit for any mechanical purpoſe, is to be ſeen in all the country ſouthward of that river. Nothing is related concerning the productions of the earth.

PATANE, a kingdom of Malacca, on the eaſtern coaſt, ſubject to Siam. The inhabitants are partly Siameſe, Chineſe, Malays, and Europeans; but they are all accounted very voluptuous. The air is wholeſome, though very hot, and they have no ſeaſons but the winter and ſummer; the former of which is more properly the rainy ſeaſon, and holds about 8 months, during the ſhorteſt of our days. The woods abound with elephants, and many wild animals. The Siameſe cultivate the land, and the Chineſe are artiſans. The principal town of the ſame name has a harbour, and contains between 7 and 8000 inhabitants. Lat. 6. 15. N.

PATAY, a town in the dept. of Loiret, near which the Engliſh were defeated by the the French, under the celebrated Maid of Orleans, in the year 1429. It is 24 miles NNW. of Orleans.

Patcham, Suſſex, E. of Arundel-Foreſt. Patcham, Suſſex, W. of Lewes. Patching, Suſſex, E. of Stening.

Patenham, Bedfordſhire, near Odehill. Pathead, a manufacturing village of Fifeſhire, adjoining Kirkcaldy. Pathlow, Warwickſhire, a hundred in the Conqueror's time, but now only a liberty containing ſeveral towns, between Warwick and Alceſter. Patley-Bridge, Yorkſhire, W. riding, over the Nid by Netherdale. Patmer-Hall, Herts, N. of Biſhop's-Stortford.

PALMOS, an iſland of the Archipelago, now called Patino, ſituated on the coaſt of Natolia, between the Iſles of Samos and Nicaria. It is about 20 miles in circumference, and one of the moſt barren heaps of rocks in the Archipelago. A few valleys only are capable of ſome cultivation. It abounds, however, with partridges, rabbits, quails, turtles, pigeons, and ſnipes. In the midſt of the iſland riſes a mountain, terminated by the convent of St. John, which, with its irregular towers and maſſy appearance, one might well imagine to be a citadel. The inhabitants of this convent are, in reality, the proprietors of the country; but their domains would be inſufficient for their maintenance, were it not for the poſſeſſion of ſome lands in the neighbouring iſles, and the certain tribute they derive from the ſuperſtition of the Greeks. The abbot pays annually 1000 crowns to the grand ſignior, beſides preſents to the captain pacha. Theſe monks, called Caloyers, are ſpread over all Greece. Scarce any of them can read, and yet they all underſtand how far the empire of ſuperſtition can extend over ignorant minds. They keep their credulous countrymen in the moſt abſolute ſubjection. They are even accomplices in their crimes, the profits of which they ſhare, and ſometimes engroſs. Not one of the piratical veſſels is without a Caloyer, in order to give them abſolution in the very inſtant of committing the moſt dreadful crimes. Cowardly and cruel, theſe wretches never fail to maſſacre the crews of the veſſels that fall into their power; and, after plundering them, they ſink the captured ſhip, that not a trace of their outrages may be left; then, inſtantly proſtrating themſelves before the prieſt, a few words preſently reconcile them to the Deity, quiet their conſcience, and encourage them to the perpetration of future crimes, in thus affording what they deem a certain remedy againſt future remorſe. The inhabitants of Patmos are moſtly Greek Chriſtians ſailors, or ſhip-builders; they ſail as far as Venice, whither they carry cotton, &c. ſtockings of their own manufacture. The hermitage of the Apocalypſe is ſituated on the declivity of a mountain, between the convent and the port of Scala. It leads to their church, which is ſupported againſt a grotto in the rock; and if we may believe the inhabitants, was the aſylum of John, during his exile at Patmos. Here they ſay, he wrote the Book of the Revelation and they pretend to ſhow the very chinks in the rocks through which the Holy Spirit breathed his inſpiration. The fragments of this rock they affirm to be a certain ſpecific againſt a thouſand diſorders, and particularly againſt evil ſpirits. The Greek monks do not fail to vend this remedy as well as the abſolutions, nor do they bluſh at this ſcandalous traffick. It is 16 miles SW. of Samos. Lat. 37. 24. N. lon. 26. 24. E.

PATNA, a city of Hindooſtan Proper, capital of Bahar, and the reſidence of a governor. It is an extenſive and populous place, built on an eminence, on the S. bank of the Ganges; and is fortified in the Indian manner, with a wall and ſmall citadel. In this citadel were confined the priſoners taken by Meer Coſſim, nabob of Bengal, in 1764, by whoſe order they were maſſacred. Near Patna, in the ſame year, a battle was fought between the troops of Sujah Dowlah, nabob of Oude, and a diviſion of the Britiſh army, under Major Monroe, when the former were defeated. The Engliſh loſt 2 officers killed, 6 or 7 wounded, about 60 Europeans, and 600 ſeapoys. The enemy left full 7000 behind them, 130 pieces of cannon, all their tents, baggage, &c. together with ſome camels and elephants. Sujah Dowlah fled to one of his moſt diſtant cities. The buildings of Patna are high, but the ſtreets are narrow, and far from clean. It is a place of conſiderable trade, and is ſuppoſed to be the ancient Palabothra. It 250 miles NW. of Calcutta. Lat. 25. 35. N. lon. 85. 21. E.

Patney, Wilts. E. of the Devizes.

Patow-Beacons. Hampſhire, W. of the Candovers.

PATRAS, a ſea-port in the Morea, with a Greek archbiſhop's ſee. It is pretty large and populous, and the Jews, who are one third of the inhabitants, have four ſynagogues. There are ſeveral handſome moſques and Greek churches. The Jews carry on a great trade in ſilk, leather, coarſe oil, honey, wax, cheeſe, tobacco, wheat, and manna. There are lofty cypreſs trees, and excellent pomegranates, citrons, and oranges. It is ſeated on the declivity of a hill, near the ſea, 20 miles SW. of Lepanto.

PATRICIA, a town of Italy, in the Campagna of Rome, 8 miles E. of Oſtia.

PATRIMONY OF ST. PETER, or THE PATRIMONIO, a province of Italy, in the pope's territory, ſituated S. of the Orvietan and Umbria, W. of the Sabina and Campagna di Roma, and with the Mediterranean on the SW. It is about 43 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. The country is fertile in corn and fruits, and produces a conſiderable quantity of alum. The principal places are Viterbo, Monte Fiaſcone, Bolſena, Civita Caſtellana, and Civita Vecchia.

Patrick's, St. in Waterford, Munſter. Patrick's Iſle, St. on the coaſt of Dublin, Leinſter, oppoſite Balruddery. Patrick's Well, St. in Limerick, Munſter.

Patrick Brumpton, Yorkſhire, W. of Bedall. Patrickſborn, Kent, SE. of Canterbury.

PATRINGTON, (ſuppoſed to be the Prætorium of Ptolemy) a town in the E. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on a river that runs into the Humber, 20 miles ESE. of Hull, and 191 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

Patſhall, Staffordſhire, 5 miles NW. of Wolverhampton. Patſwick, Eſſex, NW. of Coggeſhal.

PATTA, or PATI, an iſland on the E. coaſt of Africa, near the mouth of a river of the ſame name, inhabited chiefly by Arabians. The Engliſh, Portugueſe, and Indians, trade here for ivory and ſlaves. Lat. 1. 50. S.

Patterdale, a recluſe valley of Weſtmorland, near Ulles Water. Patteſhall, Northamptonſhire, near Bugbrook. Patteſley, Norfolk, near Oxwich.

PATTI, a town and gulf of Demona, in Sicily, 32 miles W. of Meſſina.

Pattingham, Staffordſ. near Patſhall.

PAU, a large ill-built town in the dept. of the Lower Pyrenees, with manufactures of cloth, linen, &c. The hams cured here are highly eſteemed. It was the ancient reſidence of the kings of Navarre, and, before the revolution, the capital of Bearn. It was alſo the ſeat of a parliament, and contained a univerſity, an academy of ſciences, and ſeveral convents. It is ſituated on an eminence near the Gave de Pau, 34 miles SE. of Dax.

Paverel, Eſſex. Paul, Yorkſhire, in Holderneſs, on the Humber, SSW. of Headon.

PAVIA, an ancient and celebrated town of Milan, in Italy, and capital of the Paveſan, with a celebrated univerſity. In 568, Pavia was taken by the Lombards, and became the capital of their kingdom, which terminated with Didier, in 774, who was made priſoner by Charlemagne. The Paveſan, or duchy of Pavia, is bounded on the N. by the Milaneſe, on the E. by the Lodeſan, and Placentia, on the S. by Genoa, and on the W. by the Lumellin and Tortoneſe. It is ſituated in a beautiful plain, on the river Teſino, 17 miles S. of Milan. Lat. 45. 13. N. lon. 9. 15. E.

PAUL, ST. a town in the dept. of the Straits of Calais, 16 miles NW. of Arras; alſo a town in the reſpective departments of Upper Vienne, Var, (which laſt is 5 miles W. of Nice) Mont Blanc, Tarn, and Gard.

PAUL, ST. a town and government of Braſil, in the captainſhip of St. Vincent, in a charming climate, about 36 miles from the ſea. It is a kind of independent republic, originally compoſed of Portugueſe malefactors and the banditti of ſeveral nations. However, they pay a tribute of gold to the king of Portugal. It is ſurrounded by inacceſſible mountains, and thick foreſts. Lat. 23. 25. S. lon. 45. 52. W.; alſo an iſland in the Indian Ocean. Lat. 37. 51. S. lon. 61. 2. E.

PAUL-DE-FENOUILLEDES, a town in the dept. of the E. Pyrenees, 18 miles WNW. of Perpignan.

PAUL-TROIS CHATEAUX, ST. a town in the depart. of Drome, 12 miles S. of Montelimar.

PAULA, a town of Calabria Citra.

Pauleſpury, Northamp. 4 miles from Luffield. Paulet, Somerſ. near Fairfield. Paulholm, Yorkſ. near Headon. Paulton, Cornw. near St. Breage. Paulton, Somerſetſ. NW. of Frome. Paunkin, Dorſetſ. near Beminſter. Paunſton, Devonſ. in the pariſh of S. Sidenham. Paunſley, Glouceſterſ. 4 miles from Newent. Paunton, Great and Little, Lincolnſhire, on the river Witham, S. of Grantham.

PAVOASSAN, a town of Africa, capital of the Iſle of St. Thomas, ſeated on the ſea-ſide, with a good harbour. It lies under the equinoctial, in lon. 8. 30. E.

PAUSILIPPO, a mountain of Italy, near Naples, celebrated for a grotto, which is a ſubterraneous paſſage through the mountain,

tain, near a mile in length, about 20 feet in breadth, and 30 in height. People of faſhion generally drive through this paſſage with torches; but the country people find their way, without much difficulty, by the light which enters at the extremities, and at two holes pierced through the mountain, near the middle of the grotto, which admit light from above. On this mountain alſo, is the celebrated tomb of Virgil, overgrown with ivy, and ſhaded with branches, ſhrubs, and buſhes; an ancient bay-tree overhanging it.

PAUZK, a town of Pruſſian Pomerelia, 24 miles NW. of Dantzick.

Pawton, Cornwall, near Lawhitton. Paxford, Glouceſ. near Camden. Paxton, Great, Huntſ. E. of the Ouſe, NE. of St. Neot's. Paxton, Little, Huntſ. W. of the Ouſe, near Hale Weſton. Paynton, Devonſhire, near Torbay.

PAZ, LA, a city, mountainous province, and archbiſhopric, in the government of Buenos Ayres, in S. America, 180 miles ESE. of Arequipa.

PAZZANO, a town of Calabria Ultra.

PEAK, a mountain in Derbyſ. which gives name to a diſtrict parted from Staffordſhire by the Dove, and having the Derwent on the E. both which rivers have their riſe in the Peak. It is a rocky, rough, and barren tract, but abounds in mines of lead, iron, coals, antimony, quarries of millſtones, whetſtones, &c. and the vales feed conſiderable numbers of cattle and ſheep. It is much viſited on account of its extraordinary caverns, perforations, and other curioſities; and the "Wonders of the Peak," have been celebrated both in proſe and verſe.

Peak, Hants, NW. of Eaſt Mean.

Peak, in Cork, Munſter, near Aghabollogue. At this place a great number of ſubterraneous rooms or caverns were diſcovered in 1755, ſome of which contained conſiderable quantities of human ſkeletons.

Peak Dean, Suſſex, S. of Chittingley. Peak Foreſt, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Peakirk, Northamp. between Paſton and Market-Deeping. Peamont, Devonſhire, in Exminſter pariſh. Pearching, Suſſex, N. of New Shoreham.

PEARL ISLANDS, iſlands lying in the Bay of Panama, ſubject to Spain. The inhabitants of that town have plantations in them, from which they are ſupplied with fruit, garden-ſtuff, and other proviſions.

Peaſmerſh, Suſſex, near Rye. Peathfoot, or Pegſworth, Northumberland, near Morpeth.

PEATHS, or PEESE, as it is pronounced, a vaſt chaſm in the mountains at the NE. part of Berwickſhire, more than 160 feet deep. Over this chaſm, a large bridge of four arches has been lately built, which, from its vaſt height, greatly reſembles an ancient Roman aqueduct.

Peatling, Great and Little, Leiceſterſhire, NE. of Lutterworth. Pebworth, Glouceſ. N. of Camden. Peckforton, Cheſhire, in Bunbury pariſh. Peckham, Kent, in Hadlow pariſh. Peckham, Surry, in the pariſh of Camberwell; a noted fair on Auguſt 21ſt. Peckham, Eaſt, or Great, and Weſt, or Little, Kent, near Weſt Malling. Peckham Rye, Surry, S. of Peckham. Peckleton, Leiceſterſhire, NE. of Hinckley. Peckmanſton, Kent, near Newchurch.

PECQUENCOURT, a town in the dept. of the North, ſeated on the river Scarpe, 5 miles E. of Douay.

PEDEE, GREAT, or YADKIN, a river which riſes in N. Carolina, near the borders of Virginia, in ſeveral ſmall ſtreams, and entering S. Carolina, takes the name of Pedee, and enters the ocean, after a ſouth-eaſterly courſe, 6 miles below George-Town.

PEDEE, LITTLE, a river of S. Carolina, which falls into the Great Pedee, 16 miles below Queenborough.

PEDENA, a town of Iſtria.

PEDIR, a town of Sumatra, 20 miles E. of Achen.

Pedmandow, Cornwall, between the Land's-End and Whitſand-Bay. Pedmerſh, Eſſex, near Halſted. Pedmore, Worceſterſhire, near Stowbridge.

PEDRO, POINT, a cape, on the N. coaſt of Jamaica, in lon. 78. 12. W.

PEDRO, ST. one of the Marqueſa Iſlands; alſo a town of Tlaſcala, in Mexico, and of Sana, in Truxillo; a town of E. Florida, a town of Cuba, a town of Beira, and a town of Arragon.

Pedumſack, Durham, near Hunſterworth. Pedwardine, Herefordſhire, near Brampton-Brian.

PEEBLES, an ancient town, the capital of Peebleſhire, has a manufacture of carpets and ſerges, and a weekly market for corn and cattle. It is ſeated on a ſmall river called Peebles, which ſoon after joins the Tweed, 20 miles S. of Edinburgh.

PEEBLESHIRE, or TWEEDALE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. and NE. by Edinburghſhire, on the E. by Selkirkſhire, on the SE. and S. by the counties of Selkirk and Dumfries, and on the W. by that of Lanerk. It is 25 miles long from N. to S. and from 10 to 18 broad. In this country there is not much arable land, yet they ſow ſome oats and barley. Its hills (among which are the rugged and healthy mountains of Tweedſmuir, in the S. of the county) abound with ſalubrious ſprings, and between them are fertile, well-watered valleys, which feed numbers of ſheep and cattle. There are few plantations, except round particular houſes. The principal rivers are the Tweed, Lynne, and Yarrow.

PEEL, or PEEL TOWN, in the Iſle of Man, was anciently called HOLM TOWN, from a ſmall iſland cloſe by it, naturally very ſtrong, with a fort, now uſed as a priſon for offenders againſt the eccleſiaſtical laws: it has no harbour, but a road, with from 7 to 10 feet water, on the W. coaſt, in lat. 54. 13. N.

Peel-Heath, Middleſex, between Collon-Green and Cowley.

PEER, a town and county of Liege.

Peggleſworth, Glouceſterſhire, in Dowdeſwell pariſh.

PEGNAFIEL, a town of Old Caſtile.

PEGNA MACOR, a town of Beira.

PEGNARANDA, a town of Old Caſtile, and a town of Leon.

Pegton, or Pigden, Northumberland, NW. of Morpeth.

PEGU, a conſiderable kingdom of India, lying to the SE. of Bengal. It is bounded on the N. by Aracan and Ava, on the W. by part of Aracan and the Bay of Bengal, on the E. by the kingdoms of Laos and Siam, and on the S. by the Bay of Bengal. It has a town of the ſame name, 70 miles within land, above 20 miles in circumference, but at preſent not one-twentieth part is inhabited; as it was ruined by the king of Burmah, who, in 1751, reduced this, till then, independent kingdom, to the ſtate of a dependent province. The products of this country are timber for building, elephants, elephants' teeth, bees-wax, ſtick-lac, iron, tin, petrolium, rubies, diamonds, and ſapphires. The rubies are the beſt in the world, but the diamonds are ſmall. They have alſo ſaltpetre, and plenty of lead, of which they make their money. The country abounds with elephants, buffaloes, goats, hogs, and other animals; and deer and game are in great plenty. It is very fruitful in corn, roots, pulſe, and fruits. They wear no European commodities but hats and ribbands; but they have cottons, ſilks, and ſilver, from Bengal, and the neighbouring countries. The inhabitants are but thinly clad, and they wear neither ſhoes nor ſtockings. The women are much fairer than the men, ſmall, and ſhapely. There are a vaſt number of temples in this country, but moſtly of wood, which are varniſhed and gilt. The inhabitants are partly Peguers, and partly Bramas, or Burmahs, who are at preſent maſters of the country; they are diſtinguiſhed from each other by their dreſs and features. The prieſts, who are called Talepoy, or Talapoins, obſerve celibacy, and eat but once a day. They wear a long frock girt with a leather thong four inches broad, at which hangs a bag for receiving alms. They have no ſtipends, and in caſe the few acres, which every one who builds a temple beſtows for their maintenance, be not ſufficient, they ſend novices abroad to beg alms. They have idols in their temples, with very large ears, in ſitting poſture, like taylors. In the low flat part of the country, which is liable to be overflowed, they build their houſes upon ſtakes, and in time of inundations communicate with each other by boats. The city of Pegu, in 1600, was one of the largeſt and moſt populous in Aſia, but being beſieged, in 1692, by the kings of Aracan and Tangue, the king was obliged to ſubmit for want of proviſions. Since that time Pegu ceaſed to be the royal city. It is ſtill, however, the ſeat of the vice-roy, governing for the king, who reſides at Ava. Lat. 18. 5. N. lon. 96. 42. E.

Pehembury, Devonſ. NW. of Honiton.

PEINA, a town of Hildeſheim, Lower Saxony.

PEIPUS, or TCHUDSKOI, a large lake of Ruſſia, between the government of Peterſburgh and Riga, 64 miles in length, and from 8 to 24 in breadth. It has a communication with the Lake of Wertzerwe; and the river Narova iſſues from this lake, by which it has a communication alſo at Narva, with the Gulf of Finland.

PEISHORE, or PITSHOUR, a conſiderable city of India, in the country of Cabul, 50 miles NNW. of Attock.

PEKIN, the capital city of the empire of China, ſituated in a fertile plain. It obtained this name, which ſignifies the Northern Court, to diſtinguiſh it from Nanking, or the Southern Court, where the emperors formerly reſided. It is an exact ſquare, and divided into two parts; namely, that which contains the emperor's palace, which is in the New City, or Tartar City, ſo called becauſe it is inhabited by Tartars, ever ſince they conquered the empire. The other, called the Old City, is inhabited by the Chineſe. The circuit of both together, is 52 Chineſe lays, each of which contains 240 geometrical paces. The gates of this city are lofty and well arched, ſupporting buildings of 9 ſtories high; the loweſt of which is for the ſoldiers, when they come off guard. The gates are 9 in number, and before each is an open ſpace, which ſerves for a parade. The ſtreets are perfectly ſtraight, moſt of them three miles in length, and about 120 feet wide, with ſhops on both ſides; but the houſes are poorly built, and have only a ground-floor. The concourſe of people in the ſtreets is prodigious; here are alſo vaſt numbers of horſes, camels, mules, aſſes, and carriages. It is ſingular, however, that no women are ever ſeen; although the number of women in China, as well as in every other country, is ſuperior to that of the other ſex. All the riches and merchandiſe of the empire are continually pouring into this city. There are always hackney horſes and chairs, in various parts, which ſtand ready to be hired for a trifle. All the great ſtreets are guarded by ſoldiers, who patrole night and day, with ſabres hanging from their girdles, and whips in their hands, to correct, without diſtinction, all ſuch as excite quarrels, or make diſturbances. The little ſtreets, have lattice-gates at their entrance into the great ſtreets, which are ſhut up at night and guarded by ſoldiers, who ſuffer no aſſemblies in the ſtreets at that time. The emperor's palace is of vaſt extent, and ſurrounded by a brick wall, with pavilions at each corner, encompaſſed by galleries ſupported by columns. Thoſe who have computed the compaſs of this city a different way, obſerve, that the two cities, without the ſuburbs, are 18 miles in circumference, and that the number of inhabitants is, at leaſt, 2,000,000: that the walls of the Tartar city are ſo high, that they cover the town, and are broad enough for 12 horſemen to ride eaſily abreaſt; and there are ſtrong towers a bow-ſhot diſtance from each other. The walls of the immenſe palace of the emperor, including that and the gardens, are upwards of four miles in circumference; the architecture is entirely different from that of the Europeans, and the ſtructures are covered with tiles of a ſhining beautiful yellow. The palace never fails to ſtrike beholders, by its extent, grandeur, and the regular diſpoſition of its apartments. It preſents a prodigious aſſemblage of vaſt buildings, extenſive courts, and magnificent gardens. The temples and the towers of this city are ſo numerous, that it is difficult to count them. Proviſions of all kinds are exceedingly plentiful, they being, as well as the merchandiſe, chiefly brought from other parts by means of canals, which are always crowded with veſſels of different ſizes. No police can be more active. It is rare, in a number of years, to hear of houſes being robbed, or people aſſaſſinated. An earthquake, which happened here in 1731, buried above 100,000 perſons in the ruins of the houſes. In this city a Ruſſian church is eſtabliſhed, with a ſeminary, in which the ſtudents are permitted to reſide, for the purpoſe of learning the Chineſe language. Since this eſtabliſhment, many intereſting publications have made their appearance at Peterſburg, relative to the laws, hiſtory, and geography of China, tranſlated from the originals publiſhed at Pekin. Lat. 39. 54. N. lon. 116. 30. E.

of

Pele, Lancaſhire, N. of Wigan. Pele, Lancaſhire, W. of Warrington.

PELEGRINO, MOUNT, a promontory on the N. coaſt of Sicily, about two miles W. of Palermo. The proſpect from it is beautiful and extenſive.

PELEW ISLANDS, a cluſter of iſlands in the N. Pacific Ocean, lying between 130. and 136. deg. E. lon. and 5. and 9. N. lat. They were probably firſt diſcovered by the Spaniards of the Philippines, and by them called the Paloo Iſlands, from the tall palm trees that grow there in great numbers, and which, at a diſtance, have the appearance of maſts of ſhips; the word palos, in the Spaniſh language, ſometimes ſignifying a maſt. There is, however, ſome reaſon to ſuppoſe that no European had ever landed upon them, before the Antelope, a packet belonging to the Eaſt-India Company, and commanded by Captain Wilſon, was wrecked there in 1783. The captain found the natives ſimple in their manners, delicate in their ſentiments, friendly in their diſpoſition, and, in ſhort, a people that do honour to the human race. The aſtoniſhment which thoſe, who firſt diſcovered the Engliſh, manifeſted on ſeeing their colour, plainly ſhowed, that they had never before ſeen a white man. The cloaths of the ſtrangers alſo puzzled them exceedingly; for it was a matter of doubt with them, whether theſe and their bodies did not form one ſubſtance. When the captain's brother was deputed to wait upon the king, who reſided on an iſland at ſome diſtance from that on which they had ſaved their lives, he accidentally pulled off his hat, at which the gazing ſpectators were all ſtruck with aſtoniſhment, as if they thought it had formed a part of his head. They had no idea of the nature of powder and ſhot, and were exceedingly amazed on ſeeing its effects The weapons uſed in their battles were bamboo ſpears, about 12 feet long, with the pointed end exceedingly hard, and barbed tranſverſely They had alſo bamboo darts pointed with the wood of the betel-nut tree, which is very hard and heavy; with ſhorter ones for diſtant marks, which are thrown by means of a ſtick, with a notch in it, wherein the head of the dart is fixed. With reſpect to property in theſe iſlands, a man's houſe or canoe, is conſidered as his own, as is alſo the land allotted him, as long as he occupies and cultivates it; but, whenever he removes with his family to another place, the ground reverts to the king, who gives it to whom he pleaſes, or to thoſe who ſolicit to cultivate it. The country is well covered with timber-trees, the trunks of which furniſh the natives with canoes, ſome large enough to carry 30 men. Yams and cocoa-nuts, being their chief articles of ſubſiſtence, are attended to with the utmoſt care. The other trees were the ebony; a ſpecies of manchineel; a tree that, being pierced with a gimlet, there ran from it a thick liquid, of the conſiſtence of cream; and a ſingular tree, like a cherry-tree, but with leaves reſembling a myrtle, ſo extremely hard, that few of the tools which the Engliſh had could work it, the wood breaking their edges: the colour of the interior was like mahogany. They had alſo the cabbage-tree: a tree whoſe fruit nearly reſembled an almond; the wild bread fruit tree; plantains, bananas, Seville oranges, and lemons. Their common drink was the milk of the cocoa-nut; on particular occaſions, adding certain ſweetmeats and a ſweet beverage obtained by the aid of a ſyrup, extracted either from the palm-tree or the ſugar-cane. No quadrupeds were ſeen, except ſome browniſh grey rats in the woods, and a few meagre cats in ſome of the houſes. They had plenty of common cocks and hens, which though not domeſticated, yet loved to get near their houſes and plantations. The houſes are raiſed about three feet from the ground, the foundation beams being laid on large ſtones, whence ſpring the upright ſupports of their ſides, which are croſſed by other timbers grooved together, and faſtened, by wooden pins, the intermediate ſpace being cloſely filled up with bamboos and palm tree leaves; and the inſide is without any diviſion, forming one great room. As to domeſtic implements they have little baſkets, very nicely woven from ſlips of the plantain-tree, and wooden baſkets, with covers, neatly carved, and inlaid with ſhells. No one ever ſtirs abroad without a baſket, which uſually contains ſome betel-nut, a comb, a knife, and a little twine. The beſt knives are made of a piece of the large mother-of-pearl oyſter, ground narrow, and the outward-ſide a little poliſhed. The combs are made of the orange-tree, of which there a few of the Seville kind; the handle and teeth are faſtened in the ſolid wood. The fiſhing-hooks are of tortoiſe-ſhell; and twine, cord, and fiſhing-nets, are well manufactured from the huſks of the cocoa-nut. Of the plantain-leaf are formed mats, which ſerve the people as beds. They alſo uſe a plantain-leaf at meals, inſtead of a plate; and a ſhell of a cocoa-nut, which they poliſh very nicely, ſupplies the place of a cup. There are veſſels of a kind of earthen-ware, of a reddiſh-brown colour, in which they boil their fiſh, yams, &c. A bundle of cocoa-nut huſks, tied together, ſerves them for a broom, and thick bamboos, with bores five or ſix inches in diameter, are their buckets, or ciſterns. The ſhell of the tortoiſe is here remarkably beautiful; and the natives have diſcovered the art of moulding it into little trays, or diſhes and ſpoons. Some of the women have alſo bracelets of the ſame manufacture, and ear-rings inlaid with ſhells. The natives, in general, are a ſtout people, rather above the middling ſtature, and of a very deep copper colour. Their hair is long, and generally formed into one large looſe curl round their heads. The men are without clothes; the women wear two little aprons, one before, the other behind. Both men and women are tattooed, and their teeth are made black by art. The men had their left ear bored and the women both; with beads or leaves wore in the perforated ear. The cartilage between the noſtrils was alſo bored, in both ſexes, through which they often put ſome ſprig, bloſſom, or ſhrub. Both ſexes are very expert at ſwimming, and the men are ſuch admirable divers, that they will readily fetch up any thing from the bottom of the ſea which attracts their notice. The conduct of theſe people toward the Engliſh was uniformly courteous and attentive, accompanied with a politeneſs which ſurpriſed thoſe who were the objects of it. Such an opinion had the king of the iſland entertained of the Engliſh, that on at their departure, he ſuffered his ſecond ſon, Lee Boo, to accompany them to England, where this amiable youth died of the ſmall-pox, in 1784, at about 20 years of age. Theſe iſlands are encircled on the W. ſide by a reef of coral.

part

Pelham-Aurſa, or Brent, Pelham Furneux, and Pelham-Stockin, Herts, on the borders of Eſſex, towards Clavering. Pelin, Cornwall, S. of Leſtwithiel.

PELISSA, a town and country in Hungary, 15 miles N. of Buda.

Pell, Suſſex, on the coaſt, by Bexill. Pellemountain, Cornwall, W. of Trerife. Pelles, Cornwall, near Padſtow-Haven. Pelos, Durham, near Cheſter-le-Street. Pelſhall, Staff. N. of Walſal. Pelſton, Shropſhire, N. of Newport. Pelton, Durham, near Cheſter-le-Street.

PEMBA, a province of Congo, in Africa. Banza, or St. Salvador, is the capital.

Pemberton, Lancaſhire, near Wigan.

PEMBRIDGE, a ſmall town of Herefordſhire, with a manufactory of woollen cloth. It is ſeated on the river Arrow, 15 miles NNW. of Hereford, and 145 WNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

PEMBROKE, the county town of Pembrokeſhire, is well-built and well-inhabited, with two churches and a cuſtom houſe, and, next to Carmarthen and Brecon, the richeſt town in S. Wales. Here are merchants who employ near 200 ſail on their own account. It is ſituated in one of the moſt pleaſant parts of Wales, on two ſmall rivers that run into Penermouth (the innermoſt creek of Milford Haven, and which forms the W. ſide of a promontory) 10 miles SE. of Haverfordweſt, and 256 W. by N. of London. Market on Saturday.

PEMBROKE, a town of New Hampſhire.

PEMBROKESHIRE, the moſt weſtern county of S. Wales, 35 miles in length, 18 in its mean breadth, and ſurrounded on all ſides by the ſea, except on the NE. and E. where it is bounded by Cardiganſhire and Carmarthenſhire. It is divided into 7 hundreds, which contain 7 market-towns, 145 pariſhes, about 2300 houſes, and 25,900 inhabitants. The principal rivers are the E. and W. Cledhue. A great part of the county is plain, and tolerably fertile, conſiſting of rich meadow and arable land. One part alone is mountainous, extending from the coaſt, near Fiſhguard, to the borders of Carmarthenſhire. This, however, yields good paſture for ſheep, horned cattle, and goats, with which the county in general abounds; as alſo with wild fowls of various kinds, ſome of which are ſeldom ſeen in any other part of Britain. There is probably more rain here than in any other part of the kingdom, brought by weſterly winds from the Atlantic Ocean. The only manufactures of the county conſiſt of a cotton-mill, near Haverfordweſt, which employs about 150 perſons; a forge at Blackpool, and ſome iron and tin works on the Tivy. The county-town is Pembroke.

Pembury, Kent. Pen, Somerſetſ. NE. of Wincaunton. Penalib, S. of Monmouth, on the Wye.

PENALVA, a town of Beira.

PENAUTIER, a town in the depart. of Aude, 4 miles NW. of Carcaſſonne.

Penbrook, Dorſetſ. in the pariſh of S. Perrot. Penchir, Durham, near Houghton-le-Spring. Pencle, Staff. near Newcaſtle-under-Line. Pencomb, Heref. SW. of Bromyard. Pen-Court, Kent, near Hollingbourn. Pencoyd, Heref. W. of Roſs. Pencoyd, Monmouthſ. E. of Caerleon. Pencreek, Cornwall, near Leſkard. Penden, Cornwall, near Leſkard. Penden, and Pendene-Vowe, Cornwall, on the N. coaſt, near Morvath. Here is an unfathomable cave under the earth, into which the ſea flows at high water. Pendennis, Cornwall, at the mouth of Falmouth-Haven, is a peninſula of one mile and a half in circumference, on which Henry VIII. erected a caſtle, oppoſite to that of St. Maw's, on the other ſide of the bay, which he alſo built. Some additional works were alſo made by Queen Elizabeth. It is one of the largeſt caſtles in the kingdom, and is built on a high rock. It is ſtronger by land than St. Maw's, being regularly fortified, and having good outworks. Pendennock-Point, Cornwall, N. of the Lizard. Pender, Cornwall, near St. Burien. Pend-Hill, Surry, in Blechingley pariſh. Pendle Foreſt and Hill, Lanc. near Clitheroe. Pendleton, Lancaſ. W. of Pendle-Hill. Pendock, Worceſ. NW. of Tewkeſbury. Pendomer, Somerſetſ. between Crewkern and Melbury. Pendragon-Caſtle, Weſtm. S. of Kirby-Steven, on the Eden. Pendreſtone, Cornwall, near Bliſland, NE. of Bodmin.

PENEMUNDER, a town and fort in the iſland of Uſedom, Upper Saxony.

Penfoot, Cornwall, SW. of Launceſton. Penford, Staffordſh. E. of Codſall. Pengelly, Cornwall, in the pariſh of Breage. Pengerſick, Cornwall, E. of Mount's Bay.

PENGUIN

PENGUIN ISLAND, a ſmall iſland near the Cape of Good-Hope, a little to the N. of Table Bay; an iſland near the S. coaſt of Newfoundland; and an iſland in Adventure-Bay, New Holland.

PENGUIN ISLAND and BAY, on the coaſt of Patagonia. Lat. 47. 48. S.

Pengwenyon-Point, Cornwall, SE. of Mount's-Bay.

PENHA-GARCIA, a town of Beira.

Penhale, Cornwall, W. of St. Denis. Penhall, Cornwall, SE. of Padſtow-Haven. Penhill-Beacon, Yorkſ. near Middam. Penhow, Monmouthſ. S. of Strogle-Caſtle. Penhurſt, Suſſex, W. of Battle. Penihout, Carmarthenſ. Peniburſt, Radnorſhire.

PENICHE, a town of Portugueſe Eſtramadura, with a citadel and harbour.

PENICK, a town of Schonberg, Upper Saxony, with a manufacture of woollen ſtuffs, and a pottery.

PENISCOLA, a town of Valencia, on a high point of land, ſurrounded on three ſides by the Mediterranean.

Peniſtreet, Merionethſhire, in Trawſfinwydd. Penk, a river in Staffordſhire, which runs into the Saw, about a mile below Stafford. Penkenell, Cornw. SE. of Truro. Penketh, Lancaſhire, SW. of Warrington.

PENKRIDGE, a town of Staffordſhire, formerly large and handſome, but now greatly reduced. It is 6 miles S. of Stafford, and 129 NW. of London. Market on Tueſday. A fair on Sept. 2, and a great horſe fair on Oct. 10th.

Penland, Heref. S. of Kington. Penlene, Cornwall, NE. of Botteux-Caſtle. Penlet-Point, Cornw. W. of Plymouth-Harbour. Penley, or Pentley, Hertfordſ. NW. of Berkhampſtead, near Tring. Penley. Wilts, by Weſtbury. Penmachno, Carnarvonſhire.

PENMAEN MAWR, a mountain of Carnarvonſhire, 1545 feet high, and overhanging the ſea at ſo vaſt a height, that few are able to look down the dreadful ſteep. On the ſide next the ſea, a road is cut out of the rock, which winds up a ſteep aſcent, and is ſecured by a ſubſtantial wall, breaſt high, along the brink of the frightful precipice. To this great and uſeful work the city of Dublin largely contributed, it being in the high road to Holyhead. Here the ſea is ſeen daſhing its waves 40 fathoms below, while the mountain riſes as high above the traveller's head. This road was long, narrow, bad, and ſtony, but ſince 1772, it has been made better and wider, and defended from the preciſice by the wall above-mentioned. The wall before was very ſlight, in ſome parts about a yard high, and in other parts there was only a bank, that ſcarcely roſe a foot above the road.

Penman Roſs, a mountain in Denbighſhire. Penmorfa, Carnarvonſ. Penmynydd, Angleſea, about 2 miles S. of Plas Gwyn. It was once the reſidence of the anceſtors of Owen Tudor, ſecond huſband to Catharine of France, queen dowager of Henry V.; a marriage which reſtored the Britiſh race of princes in this kingdom, on the acceſſion of Henry VII. grandſon to Owen Tudor, who was the lineal deſcendant of Cadwallader, the laſt king of the Britons. The door of the gateway, part of the houſe, and the great chimney-piece of the hall, the remains of this reſidence, with ſome coats of arms, dates of buildings or repairs, and the initial letters of the names of the owners, are yet to be ſeen in the farm-houſe. Penn, Bucks, 2 miles from High Wycomb. Penn, Nether and Over, Staff. near Wolverhampton. Pennant, Cornwall, in St. Clere pariſh.

PENNAR, a river of Hindooſtan, which riſes in the kingdom of Myſore, and watering Gooty, Gandicotta, Cuddapah (the circar of which it croſſes, as well as the Carnatic) and Nellore, falls into the Bay of Bengal, at Gangapatnam, about 12 miles E. of Nellore.

Pennard, E. and W. Somerſetſh. near Glaſtonbury. Pennervaen, a mountain, very ſteep in its aſcent, with a ſharp ſummit, a little S. of Brecknock. Pennigent Hill, Yorkſ. NE. of Settle.

PENNINGTON, a town of New Jerſey.

Pennington, Hants, near Ringwood. Pennington, Lanc. near Ulverſton. Peniſton, Yorkſ. W. Riding, N. of Middop.

PENNON-DE-VELEZ, or VELEZ-DE-GOMERA, a ſea-port of Fez, with a good harbour, in poſſeſſion of the Spaniards. It is ſituated on a rock near the coaſt of the Mediterranean, 75 miles E. of Ceuta.

PENNSYLVANIA, one of the United States of N. America, bounded on the E. by New York and Jerſey; on the W. by ſtates not ſettled; on the N. by ſeveral Indian nations; and on the S. by Delaware and Maryland. It extends 250 miles from E. to W. and 140 from N. to S. By means of the Delaware, and other navigable rivers, large ſhips come up into the heart of the country. The ſoil is, in ſome places, a yellow or black ſand; in ſome, loamy gravel; and in others a fat and fruitful mould, eaſy to be cleared. It is well watered with rivers, and produces every thing which can render life agreeable, ble, in the utmoſt plenty. The climate is very agreeable, and the air ſweet and clear. The produce of this country is corn, cattle, timber, pot-aſhes, wax, ſkins, and furs; and they export to the W. India iſlands, ſalted beef, pork, horſes, pipe-ſtaves, and fiſh; taking in return ſugar, rum, and molaſſes. This country was granted to the celebrated William Penn, the quaker, ſon of Sir William Penn, by King Charles II. in conſideration of ſundry debts due to him from the crown. When he went to America, he purchaſed the ſoil, at a very low rate, of the Indians, (who had conceived a very favourable opinion both of him and his deſigns,) expending alſo large ſums in tranſporting his followers, and ſupplying them with all neceſſaries. His lands alſo were ſold at a very eaſy purchaſe, and he gave the ſettlers a noble charter of privileges. By this means the country was ſoon changed from a wilderneſs to a garden, and it is now one of the moſt flouriſhing provinces in the new world. The Germans compoſe a quarter, if not a third part of, the inhabitants of Pennſylvania; in 1787, the whole number of inhabitants were reckoned at 360,000: they are now much more numerous, and are all diſtinguiſhed for their temperance, induſtry, and economy. Philadelphia is the capital.

Penny-well, Herts, near Watford.

PENOBSCOT, a bay of N. America, on the S. coaſt of Main, at the mouth of the river Penobſcot, in lat. 43. 55. to 44. 30. N. and lon. 68. 40. to 69. W. It is long and capacious, and lined with a cluſter of ſmall iſlands. On its W. coaſt are mountains of the ſame name. The river Penobſcot is navigable for veſſels of 100 tons, to the falls, which are 50 miles from the ſea.

Pen-Park-Hole, Glouceſ. 3 miles from Briſtol and the Severn, in Weſtbury pariſh. Penpoll, Cornwall, E. of Bodmin. Penpont, Cornw. SE. of Padſtow-Haven. Penpurgh, Northumb. by Whitfield.

PENRISE, a ſea-port of Glamorganſhire, with a good harbour for ſhips. It is 20 miles SE. of Carmarthen, and 219 W. of London. Market on Thurſday.

*PENRITH, a large well-built trading town of Cumberland, with noted tan-works, and ſome manufactures of check and cotton. It has a ſpacious market-place, and is a great thoroughfare on the poſt-road between London and Glaſgow. It is ſeated under a hill, near the river Peterel, and the conflux of the Eſkmot and Lowther, 18 miles S. of Carliſle, and 289 NNW. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday. Fair on Whit-Tueſday.

Penrith, Old, Cumb. in Lazenby pariſh, 5 miles from Penrith, and 13 from Carliſle. It was formerly a Roman ſtation, and here are ſtill to be ſeen great ruins of a town. Penroſe, Cornw. near Helſton. Penroſe, Cornw. at the Land's End. Penroſe, Heref. N. of Pembridge. Penroſe, Monm. N. of Ragland Caſtle. Penruddock, Cumberland, in Greyſtock pariſh.

PENRYN, a neat town of Cornwall, with a conſiderable trade in drying and vending pilchards, and in the Newfoundland fiſhery. It has a good cuſtom-houſe and quay, and is ſituated on an eminence, ſurrounded with gardens and orchards, at the mouth of a navigable river, near Pendennis Caſtle, 2 miles NNW. of Falmouth, and 260 WSW. of London. Markets on Wedneſday, Friday, and Saturday.

PENSACOLA, the principal town of W. Florida, ſeated on a bay of the Gulf of Mexico, which forms an excellent harbour, ſafe from all winds, with 4 fathoms water at the entrance, gradually deepening into 7 or 8. Lat. 30. 32. N. lon. 87. 12. W.

PENSANCE, or PENZANCE, a well-built populous town of Cornwall, with many ſhips belonging to it, and a conſiderable trade. The harbour, however, is not fit for large veſſels, being almoſt dry at low water. In 1595, it was burnt by the Spaniards, who, in four galleys, ſurpriſed this part of the coaſt, and ſet ſeveral villages and farms on fire; but it was afterwards rebuilt, and made one of the coinage towns. It is ſituated on a creek, at the bottom of Mount's Bay, 10 miles E. of Senan, at the Land's End, and 286 WSW. of London. Market on Thurſ.

Penſand, Cornw. S. of Stratton. Penſax, Worc. in Lindridge pariſh.

PENSBURY, a town of Pennſylvania, where the celebrated Mr. Penn reſided. It is ſituated on a ſmall creek of the Delaware.

Penſet-Chaſe, Staff. SW. of Wolverhampton.

PENSFORD, a town in Somerſetſhire, noted for its hats and bread; it has alſo a manufactory of cloth. It is ſeated on the river Chew, 7 miles SSW. of Bath, and 117 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Pen's-Green, Surry, between Peckham and Beckenham. Pen's-Place, Hertfordſ. on Aldeſham-Common. Penſham, Worc. near near Perſhore. Penſherſt, Cornw. NE. of Bodmin. Penſherſt, or Penchaſter, Kent, 3 miles SW. of Tunbridge. Penſherſt-Halymote, alias Otford Wild, Kent, near Penſherſt. Penſignance, Conrwall, near Redruth. Penſthorp, Norfolk, near Fakenham. Penterry-Chapel, Monm. NW. of Chepſtow.

PENTHIEVE FORT, in the dept. of Morbihan, ſituated on the peninſula of Quiberon; it is waſhed by the ſea on the E. and W. ſides.

Pentbrant-Mon, Angleſea, 5 miles W. of Beaumaris. Pentire, Hill, Fort, and Point, Cornwall, near the entrance of Padſtow Haven. Pentire, E. and W. Cornwall, on the Briſtol Channel, near Crantock, SE. of Penhale.

PENTLAND FRITH. See ORCADES.

PENTLAND-SKERRIES, three ſmall rocky iſlands, on the N. coaſt of Scotland, 4 miles NE. of Duncanſby Head. On the largeſt of theſe two light houſes were erected in 1794.

PENTLAND-HILLS, a ridge of mountains, in Edinburghſhire, extending about 10 miles from SW. to NE.

Pentlow, Eſſex, on the Stour, between Long Melford and Clare. Pentney, Norf. on the river Lyn, between Seche and Caſtleacre. Penton-Graſton, Hampſ. near Weyhill. Penſey Mewſey, Hampſ. near Andover. Pentregayer, Shropſ. W. of Oſweſtry. Pentrepant, Shropſ. N. of Oſweſtry. Pentridge, Derbyſ. SW. of Alfreton. Pentridge, Dorſetſ. by Cranborn-Chace. Pentry, Carmarthenſhire. Pentvan, Cornwall, W. of Trewardreth-Bay. Pentwynbarth Hill, Monmouthſhire, W. of Caerleon. Penwoſe, Cornwall, SE. of Padſtow-Haven. Penwarn, Cornw. W. of Trewardreth-Bay. Penwarren, Cornwall, near Helford-Haven. Penworthan, Lancaſ. on the Ribble, near Preſton. Penyard Caſtle, Heref. near Roſs. Penny-Clawth, Monm. E. of Ragland-Caſtle.

PENZENSKOE, one of the 41 governments of the Ruſſian empire, formerly a province of Kaſan; and bounded by the government of Simbirſkoe on the E. Its capital, Penza, is ſeated on the river Sura, where it receives the rivulet Penza. Lat. 32. 35. N. lon, 45. 45. E.

Peover, Upper and Nether, Cheſh. E. and NE. of Northwich.

Pepenbury, or Pembury, Kent, 8 miles SE. of Tunbridge. Pepbull, Cheſhire, W. of Macclesfield. Pepingſtraw, Kent, in Offham pariſh. Peplow, Shropſh. S. of Hodnet. Pepperharrow, Surry W. of Godalmin. Pepperhill, Shropſhire, near Patſhall in Staffordſhire. Peppering, Suſſex, SE. of Arundel. Pepperneſs Kent, the S. point of Sandwich-Haven. Pepperſtock, Bedfordſ. near Luton-Hoo. Peppeſham, Suſſex near Haſtings.

PEQUIGNY, a town in the dept. of the Somme, memorable for an interview and treaty between Edward IV. of England, and Louis XI. of France in the year 1474. It is ſeated on the river Somme, 15 miles SE. of Abbeville.

PERA, a ſuburb of Conſtantinople, where the foreign ambaſſadors uſually reſide. It is inhabited by Greek and other Chriſtians, and they ſell wine there as publicly as in any other part of Europe, which is not allowed in the city.

Peramarvorthal, Cornwall, N. of Peryn. Peramuthno, Cornw. E. of Mount's Bay. Peran-in-the-Sands, Cornw. NE. of St. Agnes. It has from time to time been almoſt overwhelmed with the ſea ſand driven into it by the NW. winds, ſo that the inhabitants were obliged once to remove their church.

PERAY, ST. a village in the dept. of Ardeche, ſeated on the Rhone, oppoſite Valence.

PERCASLAW, a town of Ruſſia, in Kiof.

PERCHE, a ci-devant province of France; it now forms, with part of Normandy, the department of Orne.

Percy Lodge, Bucks, near Colnbrook. Pere St. Monm. S. of Chepſtow.

PEREKOP. See PRECOP.

PERECZAS, a town of Upper Hungary, capital of a county of the ſame name.

PERGA, a town of Turkiſh Albania, on the coaſt of the Mediterranean.

PERGAMO, an ancient decayed town of Natolia, inhabited by about 3000 Turks, and a few families of poor Chriſtians. This city was anciently the capital of a kingdom, which began in the year 470, from the building of Rome, and continued 152 years; when the laſt king, Attalus III. dying without children, left the Roman people his heirs. Here the manufacture of parchment was firſt invented.

PERIGORD, a ci-devant province of France, now forming the department of Dordogne.

PERIGUEUX, an ancient town, the capital of the department of Dordogne. Here are the ruins of a temple of Venus, and an amphitheatre. It is famous for its partridge-pies, which are ſent all over Europe, and is ſeated on the river Ille, 50 miles SW. of Limoges.

PERIM, an iſland in the Red Sea, ſituated between the two points which include clude the Straits of Babelmandel; it is about 5 miles in length and 2 in breadth. The channel which divides it from the African coaſt, though 14 or 15 miles acroſs, is but little frequented, on account of the numerous rocks and ſhoals which obſtruct it; ſo much ſo, as to render it neceſſary for veſſels that attempt it, to ſteer cloſe under the weſtern point of the iſland. The breadth of the other channel is leſs than two leagues, and this ſpace cannot be navigable, nor is the deep water any where at ſo great a diſtance from the iſland, as to be out of the reach of its batteries, whether erected on the ſhore, or on artificial projections within the ſea, if ſuch ſhould be found neceſſary to ſecure the entire command of the paſſage. It is a low, rocky ſubſtance, deſtitute of water, but plenty of it, of a very good quality, may be procured from the oppoſite main. The harbour, which is in the ſhape of a horſe-hoe, is excellent.

Perivale, Middleſex, the modern name given to a ſmall village, formerly called Little Greenford, or Ganford, N. of Great Ealing and Caſtlebar-Hill; but more properly is a rich vale of corn land, extending from Heſton to Harrow-on-the Hill and Pinner. Perlethorp, Nott. in Edenſtow pariſh.

Permondley, Northumb. NE. of Kirkhaugh.

PERMSKOE, one of the 41 governments of Ruſſia, formerly a province of Kaſam. It is divided into two provinces; namely, Perm, the capital of which is of the ſame name, ſeated on the river Kama, where it receives the Zegocheckha, in lat. 57. 40. N. lon. 54. 6. E. and Catharinenburgh, the capital of which, of the ſame name, is ſeated not far from the ſource of the river Iſſel, in lat. 56. 36. N. lon. 60. 30. E.

PERNAMBUC. See OLINDA.

PERNE, a town in the depart. of the Mouths of the Rhone; and a town in the dept. of the Straits of Caſais.

PERNO, a town of Nyland, Sweden.

PERNOV, a town in the government of Riga, ſituated on a river near the Baltic.

PERONNE, a conſiderable town in the depart. of Somme, ſeated on the river Somme, 27 miles SW. of Cambray, and 89 E. by N. of Paris.

Perroſe, Cornwall, SW. of Camelford.

PEROUSA, a town of Piedmont, in the diſtrict of the Four Vallies, to one of which it gives name.

PERPIGNAN, a conſiderable town in the dept. of the Eaſtern Pyrenees, and late a province of Rouſſillon, with a univerſity. It is ſeated on the river Tet, (over which it has a handſome bridge) 3 miles from the ſea, and 26 miles S of Narbonne.

Perrot, South, Dorſetſh. 2 miles NW. of Cheddington. Perry, Huntingdonſ. in the pariſh of Great Stoughton. Perry-Bar Staff. N. of Birmingham. Perry-Bridge, Somerſetſhire, S. of Wrinton. Perry-Court, Kent, near Cliff. Perry-Court, Kent, near Preſton. Perry-Court, Kent, near Wye. Perry-Hall, Staff. near Perry-Bar. Perry-Hill, Surry NW. of Guilford. Perry-Street, Kent, near Sydenham. Perry Wood, Staff. near Birmingham. Perſe Bridge, Durham, on the Tees, W. of Darlington.

PERSEES, a people of Perſia, now ſcattered into different parts, but chiefly in the E. Indies. They were worſhippers of fire, or at leaſt they look upon that as an emblem of the Supreme Being. They are otherwiſe called Guebres. On the conqueſt of Perſia, by the Mahometans, they removed to India. Zoroaſter was the original founder of their ſect. They regard it as a great crime to extinguiſh fire of any kind; and have lamps in their temples, which, they aſſert, have burnt for many ages.

Perſendrove, Cambridgeſhire, W. of Wiſbeach.

PERSEPOLIS, ſuppoſed to be anciently the capital city of Perſia, properly ſo called. It was taken by Alexander the Great, who was perſuaded, when in liquor, by the courteſan Thais, to ſet it on fire. It is thought to be the ſame as what is now called Kilmanar, of which there are magnificent ruins now remaining. There are inſcriptions, in characters, and in a language that now cannot be read, and which ſhow that this place muſt be extremely ancient; almoſt all parts of the ruins are full of ſculptures, repreſenting men and beaſts. It is 50 miles NE. of Schiras, and 200 SE. of Iſpahan.

Perſhal, Staffordſ. near Eccleſhal.

*PERSHORE, a neat old town of Worceſterſhire, containing 2 churches and about 800 houſes. It is a conſiderable thoroughfare in the lower road from Worceſter to London, and has a manufacture of ſtockings. It is ſeated on the N. ſide of the Avon, near its junction with the river Bow, 9 miles ESE. of Worceſter, and 102 WNW. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

PERSIA, a large kingdom of Aſia, conſiſting of ſeveral provinces, which, at different times, have had their particular kings kings. Its power and extent have greatly varied both in ancient and modern times, and its preſent boundaries are not exactly known, eſpecially towards Ruſſia, Tartary, and India. In the general outline, it is bounded on the N. by Ruſſia, the Caſpian Sea, and independent Tartary; on the E. by India; on the S. by the Arabian Sea, and the Perſian Gulf; and on the W. by Georgia, Armenia, Curdiſtan, and Arabia. Perſia is divided into the following provinces; Schirvan; Adirbeitzan Ghilan; Mezanderan, with Taberiſtan; Perſian Irak, or ancient Parthia; Chuſiſtan; Farciſtan; Kerman, or Kerliſtan; Mecran; Segeſtan; Sableſtan; and Choraſan; including Afterbat and Dageſtan. Candahar is generally conſidered as a province of Perſia, although it is now an independent kingdom. The chief rivers are the Tygris and Amuc. In the N. and E. parts, it is mountainous and cold, in the middle and SE. parts ſandy and deſart; and in the S. and W. level and extremely fertile, though for ſeveral months very hot. The ſoil produces corn, and all ſorts of culinary herbs, plants, roots, and pulſe, and the country abounds with poultry and game, generally very thin, white, and good. They have cotton in great abundance, and among other domeſtic animals, camels, buffaloes, oxen, ſheep, goats, and horſes, wonderfully gentle, ſprightly, ſlender, and finely proportioned, the beſt travellers in the Eaſt; mules in great requeſt, and aſſes of the Arabian breed, reckoned the beſt in the world. In ſeveral places naptha, a ſort of bitumen, riſes out of the ground, and they have mines of gold, ſilver, iron, Turkey-ſtones, and ſalt, but the firſt two of theſe are not worked, on account of the ſcarcity of wood. They have a great deal of cotton cloth, ſome pearls, and a large quantity of ſilk, beſide manufactures of ſilk, and very fine carpets. They have alſo the various ſorts of fruits, fairer and better than the choiceſt Europeans; excellent wine, and a great number of mulberry-trees, with the leaves of which they feed the ſilk-worms; likewiſe dates, piſtachio-nuts, and trees which produce manna. They are generally Mahometans, of the ſect of Ali. Iſpahan is the capital.

PERSIAN GULF, a large gulf of Aſia, between Perſia and Arabia Felix. The entrance near Ormus is not above 30 miles over, but within it is 180 in breadth, and the length, near Ormus to the mouth of the Euphrates, 420 miles.

Perſtat, Hampſh. near Rumſey. Pertenhall, Bedfordſ. near Swineſhead.

*PERTH, a very handſome town of Scotland, capital of a county of the ſame name, containing about 11,000 inhabitants. It conſiſts, chiefly, of one wide ſtreet, well paved, but ill built; from which two others branch off, at right angles, on each ſide. The kings of Scotland before James II. in 1437, were crowned at Scone, and generally reſided at Perth, as the metropolis of the kingdom. The town is ſuppoſed to have increaſed one-third in buildings, ſince the year 1745. The manufacture of linen and cotton here is very conſiderable, 150,000l. being annually exported, with about 50,000l. worth of ſalmon, and 10,000. worth of wheat and barley. Perth is agreeably ſeated (with a beautiful approach to it,) on the weſtern bank of the Tay, which is here croſſed by an elegant ſtone bridge of 9 arches, (to which the tide comes up, the river being navigable for ſmall veſſels,) 38 miles NNW. of Edinburgh.

Perthuser-Chapel, near Monmouth.

PERTHSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by the ſhires of Inverneſs and Aberdeen; on the E. by Angusſhire and the Frith of Tay; on the SE. and S. by the counties of Fife, Kinroſs, Clackmannan, and Stirling; and on the W. by Dumbartonſhire and Argyleſhire. It extends about 60 miles from N. to S. and upwards of 50 from E. to W. The northern diſtrict, called Athol, is uncommonly wild and mountainous; the 5 others, viz. Braedalbane, Gowrie, Monteith, Stormont, and Strathern, are more champaign, and fertile in corn and paſture.

PERTH AMBOY, a ſea-port in the county of Middleſex, and ſtate of New Jerſey, ſituated on a neck of land, included between the river Raritan and Arthur Kull Sound. It lies open to Sandy Hook, has one of the beſt harbours on the continent, and is 25 miles SW. of New York.

Perton, Staffordſhire, near Wolverhampton.

PERTUIS, a town in the department of the Mouths of the Rhone, 10 miles N. of Aix.

Pertwood, Wilts, NW. of Hindon.

PERU, a large country of S. America, bounded on the N. by the river of Guayaquil, which divides it from New Granada; on the S. by the depopulated territory of Atacama, which parts it from Chili; on the E. by a horrible deſart of more than 500

500 leagues in extent, which ſeparates it from the provinces of Paraguay and Buenos Ayres; and on the W. by the Pacific Ocean. Its extent from N. to S. is from 420 to 450 leagues, and from E. to W. from 100 to 120 leagues. It was ſtripped of the kingdom of Quito, which has generally been conſidered as a part of it, in 1718, and of thoſe provinces, at the diſtance of 40 leagues E. of Lima, which, towards the E. now conſtitute the vice-royalty of Buenos Ayres, in 1778. It ſcarcely ever rains in this country, and they hardly know what lightning and thunder are, unleſs toward the tops of the mountains, the tops of which are covered with ſnow to a very great height; among them are ſeveral volcanoes, which burn continually, and ſometimes ſuch torrents of water fall down from thence, as overflow the country for a conſiderable ſpace. Earthquakes are ſo very common here in the valleys, that the inhabitants reckon from them as a ſeries of dates. The beſt houſes are made of a ſort of reeds, like bamboo-canes, and covered with thatch, or palm-leaves. They have a kind of galleries or balconies, but there is no walking along the floors without making the whole ſtructure ſhrink or ſhake. Here are large foreſts on the ſides of the mountains, which advance near the ſea; but the trees are different from thoſe in Europe. The birds are much ſuperior to the European for the beauty of their plumage; but their notes are diſagreeable. There are few birds near the ſea, and the monkeys alſo keep at a diſtance from it. The bird called the toucan, which is remarkable for having a bill as large as its body, is called the preacher by the Spaniards, though it is as mute as a fiſh. It has been generally ſaid there are lions here, but that which they call ſo, is more like a wolf than a lion, and never attacks man. The tigers are ſaid to be as large and as fierce as thoſe of Africa, though not of the ſame colour; however, there are but very few of them. Serpents are very common, and ſeveral ſorts of them dangerous; particularly the rattle-ſnake, which does not get away from men like the reſt. There are ſeveral inſects like thoſe in Europe, but they are vaſtly larger. The earth-worms are as long as a man's arm, and as thick as his thumb; there are alſo ſpiders covered with hair, and as large as a pigeon's egg. The bats are of a monſtrous ſize, and will ſuck the blood of horſes, mules, and even of men who ſleep in the fields; and they have entirely deſtroyed the great cattle, which the miſſionaries had introduced into a country N. of Peru. The famous bird called a condor, or condor, is, perhaps, the largeſt in the world; for it is ſaid to make nothing of carrying off ſheep and heifers. The animal called the guanaco, or camel ſheep, is peculiar to S. America, and has ſomething of the ſhape of a camel, but without any bunch on its back. There are alſo two other animals pretty nearly like the guanaco, in ſhape, viz. the vicuna and the lama, which laſt, the Indians uſe as a beaſt of carriage, for any load under a hundred weight. The two former are alſo of great ſervice in mines, carrying metals in ſuch rugged roads as would be impracticable to any other beaſt. Peru is partly inhabited by the Spaniards, who conquered it, and partly by the native Americans. The latter, who live among the foreſts, form, as it were, ſo many ſmall republics, which are directed by a Spaniſh prieſt, and by their governor, aſſiſted by the originial natives, who ſerve as officers under them. They go naked, and paint their bodies with a red drug, called rocu. Their ſkins are of a red copper colour; and they have no beards, nor hair on any part of their bodies except their heads, where it is black, long, and coarſe. From a mixture of the native Americans and Spaniards, ariſes a third kind, called Meſtics, who are accounted illegitimate; however, they have all the privileges of Spaniards, and are the perſons who carry on trades; as the former think it beneath them to meddle with any thing of this ſort. Theſe Meſtics behave in a more tyrannical manner over the real Americans, than even the Spaniards themſelves. They have a great number of fruits, plants, and trees, not known in Europe; the Spaniards alſo have introduced here many herbs, plants, and trees from Europe, which thrive very well, and produce delicious fruits. A great part of the territory of Peru is occupied either by barren and rugged mountains; by ſandy plains, which reach from one extremity of the coaſt to another; or by lakes of many leagues in extent, ſome of which are ſituated on the very ſummits of the mountains. The breaks, however, and the valleys, which enjoy the benefit of irrigation, preſent an extenſive range of delightful plains, filled with cities and towns, the climate whereof is highly ſalubrious and agreeable. Its commerce has been conſiderably augmented, ſince the arrival of merchant veſſels from Spain, by Cape Horn, has been permitted, and ſince the removal of thoſe reſtrictions, by which the province was oppreſſed in the time of the gallеons, and the fairs of Porto-Bello and Panama. The manufactures conſiſt almoſt entirely of a few friezes, worn by Indians and negroes; and there are ſome manufactures of hats, cotton cloths, drinking glaſſes, &c. but inconſiderable in number. The mines are, in fact, the only ſource of the riches of Peru. In 1790, 534,000 marks of ſilver, and 6038 of gold, were ſmelted and refined in the royal mint of Lima; and, in the ſame year, 5,162,239 piaſtres, in both materials, were coined there. About half of the ſilver, which is annually ſmelted and coined in this province, is extracted from the mines of Gualgayoc and Paſco; the former in the diſtrict of Truxillo, and the latter ſituated at the northern extremity of the Pampas de Bombon. The mine of Guantajaya, in Arequipa, and that of Guarochiri, in Lima, do not, however, flouriſh in proportion to the richneſs and abundance of their metals; this ariſes from the difficulty of procuring neceſſaries for working, ſubſiſtence, &c. The fiſhery is excluſively in the hands of the Indians, but theſe being unſkilful mariners, and unprovided with proper boats and fit inſtruments, venture but a ſmall diſtance out to ſea. Hence a ſcarcity and dearneſs of fiſh is experienced in Lima, and in all the places along the coaſt. The bad and uneven roads, together with the delay and expence of carriage, almoſt entirely obſtruct the internal commerce of this province, and render the ſubſiſtence of the inhabitants precarious, and dependant on foreign aid. Peru is governed by a viceroy, and is divided into the archbiſhopric of Lima, and the biſhoprics of Arequipa, Cuſco, Guamanga, and Truxillo; each of which is ſubdivided into juriſdictions. Lima is the capital.

PERUGIA, a town in the pope's territories, capital of Perugiano. It is a handſome and populous city, with a univerſity, and three academies. The churches, and many other buildings, public and private, are very handſome. It is 75 miles N. of Rome.

PERUGIA, a lake of Italy, 8 miles from the city of that name, in the province of Perugiano. It is almoſt round, about 10 miles in diameter, and contains three iſlands. It was formerly called Lacus Thraſimenus, near which the conſul Flaminius was defeated by Hannibal.

PERUGIANO, a province in the pope's territories, E. of Tuſcany, about 25 miles in length, and nearly as much in breadth. The air is very pure, and the ſoil fertile in corn and good wine. The capital is Perugia.

Peryton, Somerſetſ. near Wellington.

Pery-Town, Kent, near Weſtwell.

PESCARA, a town and river of Abruzzo Citra.

PESCHIERA, a town in the Veroneſe.

Peſcotter, a river in Cardiganſh. which runs into the Tavy, oppoſite Iſtrodefyne.

PESENAS, a town in the dept. of Herault, ſeated on the river Herault, 12 miles NE. of Beziers.

Peſnall, Suffolk, W. of Yoxford.

Peſſebury, Hertfordſhire, near Sawbridgworth.

PEST, a free town of Hungary, capital of a county of the ſame name, ſeated on the E. ſide of the Danube, oppoſite Buda.

Peſton, Shropſ. near Chirbury.

PETCHE-LI, a province of China, the chief in the whole empire; bounded on the E. by the Yellow Sea; on the N. by the great wall; on the W. by Chan-ſi and on the S. by Chang-tong and Honan. It contains Pekin, the principal city in the empire, on which 140 towns depend beſides a vaſt number of villages. The air is temperate, unleſs when the wind blows from the N. and there is a rainy ſeaſon in ſummer; but it ſeldom rains very long, or at any other time. The ſoil is fertile, and produces the various ſorts of corn; and there is plenty of cattle, pulſe, and fruit. They have alſo mines of coal, which is their only fuel. There is a great variety of animals, of which a ſort of cat is moſt remarkable, it having long hair about its neck and head, like the lion, and hanging ears. All the riches of China are brought into this province, particularly to Pekin.

Petches, Eſſex, by Tinchingfield.

PETER AND PAUL, ST. or PETROPAULOWSKOI, a town and port of Kamtſchatka, in the Ruſſian government of Irkutzk. The town conſiſts of ſome miſerable log-houſes and a few conical huts. Capt. King places it in lat. 53. 0. 38. N. and lon. 158. 43. E.

*PETERBOROUGH, an ancient city of Northamptonſhire, with ſome woollen manufactures of cloth and ſtockings. It is ſo named from a monaſtery dedicated to St. Peter, founded here in the year 65[illegible] by Peada, ſon of Penda, king of Mercia. It is not a large place, having but one pariſh-church, beſides the cathedral, but the market-place is ſpacious, the ſtreets are regular, and there is a handſome market-houſe, over which are kept the aſſizes and quarterly ſeſſions. It has a ſeparate juriſdiction extending over 32 towns and hamlets hamlets, wherein the magiſtrates appointed by royal commiſſion, are veſted with the ſame power as judges of aſſize. The cathedral, formerly a monaſtery, is a moſt noble ſtructure, full of curious work. The W. front, which is 156 feet in breadth, is reckoned the moſt ſtately of any in England. It is ſeated on the river Nen, (over which it has a wooden bridge, and which is navigable to Northampton, by barges laden with coals, corn, malt, timber, &c.) 80 miles SSW. of Boſton, and 81 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

Peterborough, in Monaghan, Ulſter.

Peter-Church, Herefordſ. on the river Doier, in the Golden Vale. Petterley, Bucks, in Miſſenden pariſh.

PETER-LE-PORT, ST. a town in the SE. part of Guernſey, conſiſting of one long, narrow ſtreet. It is defended by two caſtles, the Old Caſtle and Cornet Caſtle; the latter is ſituated on a rock, ſeparated from the land by an arm of the ſea, 600 yards wide, and not fordable but at low water in great ſpring tides. Here is a good road for ſhipping; and the pier, a noble work, formed of vaſt ſtones joined together with great art and regularity, affords not only ſecurity to veſſels, but a pleaſant and extenſive walk to the inhabitants, with a fine proſpect of the ſea and the neighbouring iſlands.

PETERHEAD, a handſome town of Aberdeenſhire, ſituated near the mouth of the river Ugie, with an excellent harbour, defended by a new pier. A conſiderable trade is carried on, both in the fiſhery, and to the Baltic for the productions of the North. Here is alſo a manufacture of ſewing thread. The mineral ſpring here, of a powerful diuretic quality, and the ſea-bathing, bring a great reſort of company. It lies a little to the N. of Buchanneſs, 24 miles NE. of Aberdeen.

Peter's St. Kent, in Thanet Iſle. Peter's St. Suffolk, S. of Bungay. Peter's St. Worceſ. near Droitwich. Peter's-Chapel-in-the-Wall, St. Eſſex, at the mouth of Blackwater river.

PETERSBURGH, a town of Virginia, ſeated on an unhealthy ſpot, on the S. ſide of the river Appamatox, 18 miles S. of Richmond.

PETERSBURGH, the metropolis of the empire of Ruſſia, in the government of the ſame name, is ſeated on the river Neva, near the Gulf of Finland, and is built partly upon ſome iſlands in the mouth of that river, and partly upon the continent. So late as the beginning of this century, the ground on which Peterſburgh now ſtands was only a vaſt moraſs, occupied by two ſmall fiſhermen's huts. The Czar Peter the Great, firſt began to build here in the year 1709, erecting a ſmall tent or hut for himſelf, and ſome wretched wooden hovels. At firſt, being deſigned only for a place of arms in the Swediſh war, the public edifices and private houſes were built only with timber, the town had no other fortifications than a mean rampart of earth, nor were the ſtreets paved. But after the victory of Pultowa, and the conqueſt of Livonia, Peter determined to render this infant city the capital of his vaſt empire. Upon this, he ordered the citadel to be built with ſtone, the admiralty to be walled in with the ſame materials, and all the buildings to be erected in a handſome and more durable manner, and gardens to be laid out. In 1714, he removed the council to Peterſburgh, and elegant houſes were erected, in a ſtraight line, for the public offices, which, in 1718, were alſo tranſlated hither. In Peter's time, this city became gradually large and ſplendid, and having received additional improvements from his ſucceſſors, it is now juſtly ranked among the largeſt and moſt elegant cities of Europe. At preſent, it is about 6 Engliſh miles in length, and as many in breadth, but it has neither gates nor walls. The ſtreets, in general, are broad and ſpacious; and three of the principal ones, which meet in a point at the admiralty, are at leaſt two miles in length. Moſt of them are paved, but a few are ſtill ſuffered to remain floored with planks; and, in ſeveral parts of this metropolis, wooden houſes, ſcarcely ſuperior to cottages, are diſguſtingly blended with the public buildings. The brick houſes are ornamented with a white ſtucco, which has miſtakenly led ſeveral travellers to ſay, that they are built of ſtone. The manſions of the nobility are vaſt piles of building, furniſhed with great coſt, in the ſame elegant ſtyle as at Paris or London; they are ſituated chiefly on the S. ſide of the Neva, either in the admiralty quarter, or in the ſuburbs of Livonia and Moſcow, which are, indeed, the fineſt parts of the city. The views upon the banks of the Neva exhibit the grandeſt and moſt lively ſcenes imaginable. That river is, in many places, as broad as the Thames at London: it is alſo deep, rapid, and as tranſparent as cryſtal; and its banks are lined on each ſide with a continued range of handſome buildings. On the N. the fortreſs, an academy of ſciences, and the academy of arts, are the moſt ſtriking objects. On the oppoſite ſide are the imperial palace, the admiralty, the manſions of many of the Ruſſian nobles, and the Engliſh line, ſo called becauſe (a few houſes excepted) the whole row is occupied by Engliſh merchants. In the front of theſe buildings, on the S. ſide, is the quay, which ſtretches for 3 miles, except where it is interrupted by the admiralty; and the Neva, during the whole of that ſpace, has been embanked, by order of the late empreſs, by a wall, parapet, and pavement of hewn granite. Peterſburgh, although it is more compact than the other Ruſſian cities, and has the houſes, in many ſtreets, contiguous to each other, yet ſtill bears a reſemblance to the towns of this country, and is built in a very ſtraggling manner. It has been lately incloſed within a rampart, the circumference of which is 14 miles. Notwithſtanding all the improvements it has received by ſucceeding ſovereigns, and particularly the late empreſs, who may, without exaggeration, be called its ſecond founder, it is ſtill, as Mr. Wraxall obſerves, "only an immenſe outline, which will require future empreſſes, and almoſt future ages, to complete." From its low and marſhy ſituation, it is ſubject to inundations, which have occaſionally riſen ſo high, as to threaten the town with a total ſubmerſion. The oppoſite diviſions of Peterſburgh, ſituated on each ſide of the Neva, are connected by a bridge on pontoons, which, on account of the large maſſes of ice driven down the ſtream from the Lake Ladoga, is uſually removed when they firſt make their appearance; and, for a few days, till the river is frozen hard enough to bear carriages, there is no communication between the oppoſite parts of the town. The number of inhabitants is eſtimated at 126,700. The value of the exports in Britiſh ſhips, in 1777, amounted to 1,508,782l. ſterling; and the goods imported in the ſame year, were eſtimated at 423,942l. Peterſburgh is 540 miles NNE. of Warſaw. Lat. 59. 56. N. lon. 30. 25. E.

PETERSBURG, a town of Oſnaburg, in Weſtphalia; alſo a town in the reſpective ſtates of Virginia, Pennſylvania, Georgia, and Kentucky, in N. America.

PETERSFIELD, a populous borough of Hampſhire, being a great thoroughfare on the road from London to Portſmouth. It is ſeated on the river Loddon, 18 miles NE. of Portſmouth, and 53 SW. of London. Mark. on Saturday.

Peter's Green, Herts, in the road from Kempton to Luton. Peterſham, Doriſ. near Winborn Minſter.

PETERSHAGEN, formerly HOCKELEVE, a town of Minden, in Weſtphalia.

Peterſham, Surry, on the Thames, on the S. ſide of Richmond-Hill, near 10 miles WSW. of London. Peterſton, Monm. SW. of Newport-Haven. Peterſtow, Herefordſh. W of Wilton-Caſtle.

PETERWARADIN, a fortified town of Sclavonia, ſituated on the Danube, 38 miles NW. of Belgrade. It is chiefly remarkable for the ſignal victory obtained near it, over the Turks, by Prince Eugene, in 1716.

Peteſtree, Suffolk, E. of Dalinghe. Peteſworth, Kent, near Bradhurſt. Petham, Kent, S. of Canterbury. Petham-Court, Kent, near Eynsford. Pethangh, Suffolk, S. of Debenham.

PETHERTON, SOUTH, a town in Somerſetſhire, anciently called PEDRED'S TOWN, from the river Pedred, now Parrot, on which it ſtands. Ina, the Weſt Saxon king, had a palace here. It is 18 miles S. by W. of Wells, and 133 W. by S. of London. Mark. on Tuel.

PETHERTON, NORTH, a town of Somerſetſhire, 8 miles NE. of Taunton, 18 NW. of S. Petherton, and 140 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Petherwick, or St. Petrock, Little, Cornwall, near Padſtow-Haven. Petherwin, North, Devonſ. near Warrington. Petherwin, South, Cornwall, SW. of Launceſton.

PETIGLIANO, a town of Tuſcany.

PETIGUAVAS, a ſea-port of St. Domingo, ſeated on a bay at the W. end of the iſland, 200 miles E. of Jamaica. Lat. 18. 27. N. lon. 72. 25. W.

Petley Wood, Suſſex, E. of Battle. Peton, Shropſhire, near Corſham Caſtle.

PETRIKOW, or PETERKAU, a commercial town of Siridia, in Poland.

PETRINIA, a ſtrong town of Croatia.

Petſwell, Eſſex, near High Ongar. Pett, Kent, near Little Chart.

PETTAPOLLY, a ſea-port town, ſituated on the coaſt of Coromandel, in the circar of Guntoor, where the Dutch have a factory. Lat. 15. 49. N. lon. 80. 46. E.

PETTAIW, a town of Stiria, ſeated on the river Drave.

Petterel, a river in Cumberland, which runs into the Eden, near Carliſle. Petterel Wrey, Cumb. by Petterel river and Inglewood Foreſt. Pett Houſe, Kent, near Sevenoaks.

Pettigoe, in Donegal, Ulſter.

Pett-Level, Suſſex, S. of Winchelſea.

Petton,

Petton, Devonſ. NE. of Bampton. Petton, Shropſ. near Baggeley. Petts, Kent, near Charing. Pett's, or Pott's Court, Kent, near Bapchild.

PETTYCUR, a ſmall harbour of Fifeſhire, about a mile W. from Kinghorn, at the entrance of the Frith of Forth. It is the uſual landing-place of the paſſengers from Leith, on the oppoſite ſhore. A baſin has lately been conſtructed here.

PETWORTH, a populous, handſome town in Suſſex, pleaſantly ſeated near the river Arun, 12 miles NE. of Chicheſter, and 49 SW. of London. A conſiderable market on Saturday.

Pevenſey, or Pemſey, Suſſex, SE. of Beachy Head. It was anciently a famous haven, but is now acceſſible only by ſmall boats, that crowd up a little rill to it. William the Conqueror is ſaid to have firſt landed here. Pever, a river in Cheſhire, which runs into the Weever, near Northwich. Peverel-Point, Dorſetſhire, by Swanwich Bay. Pevington, Kent, S. of Lenham, in Pluckley pariſh. Pewet-Iſland, Eſſex, between Harwich and Gunfleet.

Pewſey, Wilts, near Manningford.

Pewſham Foreſt, Wilts, near Chippenham. Pexhall, Cheſhire, W. of Macclesfield. Peyſmore, Berks, SW. of Iſley. Peyton, Suffolk, in Boxford pariſh.

PEZARO, PESARO, or PESANO, a large town of Urbino, ſituated at the mouth of the Foglia, on the Adriatic. The ſtreets are paved with bricks, and the harbour is excellent. The environs produce figs and olives, which are in great eſtimation. It is 15 miles NE. of Urbino.

PFAFENHOFFEN, a town of Upper Bavaria, ſituated on the river Ilm, and a town of the Upper Palatinate; both in the circle of Bavaria: alſo a town of Wirtemburg, in Suabia; and a town in the dept. of the Lower Rhine.

PFIRT, or FORETTE, a town in the dept. of Upper Rhine, 10 miles W. of Baſil.

PFORTZHEIM, a town of Baden, in Suabia.

PFREIMB, a town of Leuchtenburg, in Bavaria.

PFULLENDORF, an imperial town of Suabia, formerly governed by its own counts.

PHANAGORA, a town of Aſia, ſituated on the E. ſide of the Strait of Caffa, in Kuban, a diſtrict of the government of Caucaſus, 60 miles E. of Theodoſia.

Pharaby, in Cork, Munſter, 3 miles NW. of Glanworth.

PHAROS, a ſmall iſland in the Mediterranean Sea, oppoſite Alexandria, in Egypt, the ſpace between which and the continent forms a ſpacious harbour. It has a communication with the continent by a ſtone cauſeway and bridge. It formerly had an exceedingly high tower upon it, called the Pharos, whence the iſland took its name. On the top of it were lights for the direction of ſhips.

PHARZA, anciently PHARSALIA, a town of Turkey, in Europe, in Janna, the ancient Theſſaly; famous for the deciſive battle fought in its plains, between Julius Cæſar and Pompey. It is an archiepiſcopal ſee, and is ſeated on the river Enipeus, 10 miles S. of Lariſſa.

PHASIS, or PHASE, a large river of Aſia, which croſſes the country of Mingrelia, and runs into the Black Sea.

PHEASANTS-ISLE. See FAISANTS.

PHENICIA, a country of Turkey, in Aſia, extending from Arabia Deſerta to the Mediterranean; bounded on the N. by Syria Proper, and on the S. by Paleſtine. The principal towns are Tripoly, Damaſcus, and Balbec. It is but a ſmall territory, but has been greatly celebrated for being the inventor of navigation, and, according to ſome, of letters. Its inhabitants were the firſt, which we have any account of, that traded with Britain for tin. They frequently ſent colonies to different parts of Europe and Africa, where they founded conſiderable towns.

Philack, Cornwall, on St. Ives Bay.

PHILADELPHIA, called by the Turks ALLAHIJAH, an ancient city of Natolia. It contains about 11,000 inhabitants, among whom are 2000 Chriſtians, who form four churches or congregations. It is ſeated at the foot of the mountain Tmolus, 40 miles ESE. of Smyrna.

PHILADELPHIA, the capital of Pennſylvania, and latterly of all the United States of N. America, is ſituated on a neck of land at the confluence of the rivers Delaware and Schuylkill. The length of the city from E. to W. that is from the Delaware to the Schuylkill, upon the original plan, is 10,800 feet, and the breadth, N. and S. is 4837 feet. Not two fifths of the plot covered by the city charter, are yet built upon. The inhabitants, however, have not confined themſelves within the original limits of the city, but have built N. and S. along the Delaware, 2 miles in length. The circumference of that part of the city which is built, if we include Kenſington on the N. and Southwark on the S. is about 5 miles. Market Street is 100 feet wide, and runs the whole length of the city from river to river. Near the middle of it, it is interſected at right angles by Broad Street, 100 feet wide, running nearly N. and S. quite acroſs the city. Between the Delaware and Broad Street, are 10 streets, nearly equidiſtant, running parallel with Broad Street; and between Broad Street and the Schuylkill, are 9 ſtreets, equidiſtant from each other. Parallel to Market Street are 8 other ſtreets, running E. and W. from river to river, and interſecting the croſs ſtreets at right angles. All theſe ſtreets are 50 feet wide, except Arch Street, which is 65 feet wide, and all the ſtreets which run N. and S. except Broad Street, are alſo 50 feet wide. There were 4 ſquares of 8 acres each, one at each corner of the city, originally reſerved for public uſes: and in the centre of the city, at the interſection of Market Street and Broad Street, is a ſquare of 10 acres, reſerved in like manner, to be planted with rows of trees for public walks. Moſt of the houſes have a ſmall garden and orchard; and from the river are cut ſmall canals, equally agreeable and beneficial. The wharfs are fine and ſpacious; the principal one is 200 feet wide, the water of which is ſo deep, that a veſſel of 500 tons burden may lay her broadſide to it. The ware-houſes are large, numerous, and commodious; and the docks for ſhip-building are ſo well adapted to their purpoſes, that 20 ſhips have been ſometimes ſeen on the ſtocks at a time. This city was founded in 1682, by the celebrated William Penn, a Quaker, who, in 1701, granted a charter, incorporating the town under the government of a mayor, recorder, 8 aldermen, 12 common council-men, a ſheriff, and clerk. The quakers, from this period, acquired a political conſequence in the weſtern hemiſphere; while their brethren in Europe were, and ſtill continue, excluded from ſharing in the full right of citizenſhip, by partial and impolitic laws. Philadelphia, in 1749, numbered 2070 houſes, and about 11,600 inhabitants. In 1792, it contained 5000 houſes, in general, handſomely built of brick, and about 40,000 inhabitants. The ſtate-houſe is a magnificent building erected in 1735. In 1787, an elegant court-houſe was built on the left of the ſtate-houſe: and on the right a philoſophical hall. South of the ſtate-houſe is the public gaol, built of ſtone, one of the moſt elegant and ſecure ſtructures of the kind in America. Here, likewiſe, is a public obſervatory, and ſeveral other public buildings. A univerſity was founded here during the war: its funds were partly given by the ſtate, and partly taken from the old college. The places ſet apart for public worſhip, are 26 for Chriſtians of different denominations, and a ſynagogue for the Jews. In 1786, 910 veſſels were entered at the cuſtom-houſe in Philadelphia; and in 1787, the number was 780. The principal exports are wheat, flour, Indian corn, flax-ſeed, beef, and rice. Philadelphia is 97 miles SW. of New-York, 356 SW. of Boſton, and 118 N. of the entrance of the Delaware into the Atlantic Ocean. Lat. 39. 57. N. lon. 75. 8. W

PHILIP ISLANDS, two iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Hunter in 1791, and named after Arthur Philip, Eſq. governor of New S. Wales. They are about 5 miles aſunder; but almoſt joined together by a long ſandy ſpit, above water, which reaches, for about two thirds of the diſtance from the eaſternmoſt, or largeſt iſland, to the moſt weſterly, which is the ſmalleſt. They are covered with ſhrubs, have few tall trees on them, and the land is low. The eaſtern iſland is in lat. 8. 6. N. lon. 140. 3. E.

PHILIPPI, an ancient town of Macedonia, ſeated on the confines of Romania, 10 miles from the Gulf of Conteſſa, and 67 E. of Salonichi. It was enlarged by Philip, father of Alexander the Great, who gave it his own name. It was near this place, commonly called the plains of Philippi, where Caſſius and Brutus, two of the aſſaſſinators of Cæſar, were defeated by Mark Anthony and Auguſtus. It is an archbiſhop's ſee, but greatly decayed, and badly peopled. An amphitheatre, and ſeveral other monuments of its ancient grandeur, remain. Lat. 41. 13. N. lon. 24. 25. E.

PHILIPPINE, or MANILLA ISLANDS, a very large cluſter, or group of iſlands, in the Eaſtern Indian Sea, firſt diſcovered by Magellan in 1521. They are ſaid to be 1200 in number, of which 5 or 600 are of importance. The air is very hot and moiſt, and the ſoil fertile in rice, and many other uſeful vegetables and fruits. The trees are always green, and there are ripe fruits all the year. There are a great many wild beaſts and birds, quite unknown in Europe. The inhabitants are not all of one original. The principal of theſe iſlands are Manilla, or Luconia; Mindanao; Samar, or Tandey, ſometimes called Philippina; Maſbate; Mindoro; Luban; Paragoia, or Paragua; Panay; Leyta; Bohol; Sebu, Cibau, or Zebu, Negro Negro's Iſland; St. John's and Xolo, or Sooloo. In the year 1564, Don Louis de Valaſco, viceroy of Mexico, ſent Michael Lopez Delagaſpes thither with a fleet from Mexico, and a force ſufficient to make a conqueſt of theſe iſlands, which were named the Philippines, in honour of Philip II. then on the throne of Spain. They have ever ſince remained ſubject to that crown. Lat. from 6. 30. to 18. 15. N. lon. from 113. 13. to 127. 13. E.

PHILIPPINES, NEW, otherwiſe called PALAOS, iſlands in the E. Indian Sea, between the Moluccas, the old Philippines, and the Ladrones. They are ſaid to be 87 in number, but they are little known to Europeans.

PHILIPPOLI, a conſiderable town of Romania, founded by Philip, father of Alexander the Great. It is 90 miles WNW. of Adrianople.

PHILIPS-NORTON, a town of Somerſetſhire, 7 miles S. of Bath, and 104 W. of London. Market on Friday.

PHILIPS, ST. a town of Mechoacan, in Mexico.

PHILIPSBURG, a town of Spire, circle of Upper Rhine: alſo a town of Jerſey; and a town of New York, both in N America.

PHILIPSTADT, a town of Wermeland, in Sweden, ſeated in the midſt of a rocky country, abounding in iron mines, between two lakes. In 1775, it was totally deſtroyed by fire, but has been ſince rebuilt. It is 30 miles NE. of Carleſtadt, and 130 NW. of Stockholm.

Philipſton, or Philiſton, Dorſetſ. near Winborn-All Saints.

PHILIPSTOWN, the county town of King's County, in Leinſter, 17 miles N. of Maryborough, and 38 SSW. of Dublin.

PHILIPVILLE, formerly called CORBIGNY, a town in the department of the Ardennes, 25 miles SE. of Mons, and 125 N. by E. of Paris.

Phillis Court, Oxfordſh. near Henley-upon-Thames. Philly, Cornwall, on a branch of Falmouth-Haven.

PIACENZA. See PLACENZA.

PIANEZZA, a town of Piedmont.

PIANOSA, an iſland of Tuſcany, 7 miles SSW. of the iſland of Elba.

PIAVA, a river which riſes in the Tyrolele, croſſes the Feltrin and Treviſan, and runs into the Adriatic, 16 miles NE. of Venice.

PIAZZA, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto, almoſt in the centre of the iſland; alſo a town of Principato Citra.

PICARDY, a ci-devant province, of France, on the Engliſh Channel, NW. of Champagne. It forms the department of Somme, the department of the Aiſne, and part of the department of the Straits of Calais. The land is in general, fertile, particularly in corn.

Pichcote, Bucks, NW. of Ayleſbury. Pichford, Shropſ. near Condover. Pickarſdane, Kent, a valley below Wye-Down. Pickenham, N. and S. Norfolk, SE. of Swaffham.

PICKERING, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated in a vale, to which it gives name It has an old caſtle in which a court is kept for the hearing of all cauſes under 40 ſhillings, in the diſtrict called the Honour or Liberty of Pickering. It is 26 miles NE. of York, and 223 N. by W. of London. A plentiful market for corn on Monday.

Pickering Grange, Leiceſ. near Huckleſcot. Pikeſtock, Shropſhire, between Drayton and Newport. Picket, Dorſetſ. in the pariſh of South Perrot. Picketh-End, Herts, NW. of Hemel Hempſtead. Pickets, or Newbury, Herts. in Aldenham pariſh. Pickhall, or Pickbill, Yorkſhire, NW. of Thirſk. Pickhill, Middleſex, in the pariſh of Waltham Croſs. Pickle-Scot, Shropſ. near Shrewſbury. Pickmere, a river in Cheſhire. Pickmere, Cheſhire, by Great Budworth. Pickrells, Eſſex, near Fyfield. Pickwell, Leic. near Burrow, S. of Melton-Mowbray. Pickwell, or Pidekeſwell, Devonſ. near Barnſtaple. Pickwick, Wilts, NW. of Corſham. Pickworth, Linc. near Fokingham.

PICO, an iſland the moſt populous of the Azores, about 45 miles in circumference. The mountain which gives name to the iſland, and which terminates, like Teneriffe, in a peak, reputed by ſome writers equal to it in height, is filled with caverns, which vomit out flames, ſmoke, and aſhes. The cattle here are various, numerous, and excellent in their ſeveral kinds; and the vine and its juice are in equal perfection. Beſides cedar and other timber, there is a kind of wood, ſolid, hard, and veined, which, when finely poliſhed, reſembles a rich ſcarlet tabby. This tree is felled only for the king's uſe, and grows the more beautiful the longer it is kept. The inhabitants live wholly on the produce of the iſland, in great plenty and comfort. Lat. 38. 29. N. lon. 28. 21. W.

Picotes, Herts, near Biſhop-Stortford. Picton, Cheſ. on the Gowy, near Delamere Foreſt.

PICTS WALL, a famous barrier, built, by the Romans, againſt the Picts, of which ſome ſmall remains are yet viſible. It began at the entrance of Solway Frith, in Cumberland, and running by Carliſle, was continued from W. to E. acroſs the N. end of the kingdom, as far as Newcaſtle, and ended at Tinmouth. It was firſt built of earth by the Emperor Adrian, in 123; Severus afterwards built it of ſtone, with turrets at every mile; and Ætius, the Roman general, rebuilt it of brick, in 430. It was 8 feet thick, 12 feet high, and about 100 miles in length. There are many Roman coins and other antiquities found near it.

Piddinghoe, Suſſex, near Newhaven. Piddington, E. of Durham. Piddington, Oxf. SE. of Biceſter. Piddle, or Trent, a river of Dorſetſ. which diſcharges itſelf into the ſea a little below Wareham. Along this river are ſituated Piddle Hinton, Piddle-Muſterton, Piddle-Parva, Piddle Town, which had formerly a market, Piddle-Trenthide, &c. Pidle, Worceſterſ. near Fladbury, on the banks of the Avon, about a mile E. of Perſhore. Pidle, North, E. of Worceſter. Pidley, Huntingdonſ. near Somerſham.

PIEDMONT, a principality of Italy, ſo named from its being at the foot of the Alps; it is bounded on the N. by Savoy; on the E. by the duchies of Milan and Montferrat; on the S. by the county of Nice, and the territory of Genoa; and on the W. by France. It was formerly a part of Lombardy, but is now ſubject to the king of Sardinia. It is about 120 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It contains many high mountains, among which are rich and fruitful valleys, as fertile and pleaſant as any part of Italy. In the mountains are mines of ſeveral kinds, the foreſt afford a great deal of game, and the rivers abound with excellent fiſh. The inhabitants carry on a great trade in raw ſilk; and the country produces alſo plenty of corn, rice, wine, fruits, hemp, flax, and cattle. It contains a great number of cities and towns, almoſt united to each other by villages. There are above 30 rich abbeys in Piedmont, beſides a great number of priories, commanderies, and monaſteries. The principal rivers are the Po, the Tanaro, the Sturia, and the Doria. Turin is the capital of this country, and of all the dominions of the king of Sardinia.

PIENZA, a populous town of Tuſcany.

PIEPUS. See PEIPUS.

Piercefield, Monm. near Chepſtow.

PIERRE LE-MOUTIER, ST. a town in the dept. of Nievre, ſeated in a bottom, near a lake, 12 miles S. of Nevers.

PIERRE, ST. a ſmall iſland near the coaſt of Newfoundland, ceded to the French by the peace of 1763, for drying and curing their fiſh. They were diſpoſſeſſed of it by the Engliſh in 1793. Lat. 46. 39. N. lon. 56. 0. W. Alſo a town in the reſpective departments of the Tarn, Straits of Calais, Vendée, Rhone and Loire, Dordogne, Calvados, Lozere, Upper Saone, and the Channel; and a town of Lower Charente, in the iſland of Oleron, PIETOLA, or ANDES, a hamlet of Mantua, the birth place of Virgil.

PIGEON ISLAND, a ſmall iſland about 8 miles from the coaſt of Malabar, and 15 from the town of Onore. Alſo an iſland near Ceylon, 10 miles N. of Trincomale.

PIETRO, ST. anciently Hieracum, an iſland about 7 miles SW. of Sardinia, it is about 15 miles long and 3 broad. Alſo 2 towns of Corſica, and 3 towns of Otranto, in Naples.

Pigborn, Yorkſhire, NW. of Doncaſter. Pigions, Suſſex, E. of Petworth, Pigmarſh, Surry, near Mitcham.

PIGNEROL, a ſtrongly fortified town of Piedmont, capital of the four valleys, and conſidered as the key of Italy. It is ſituated near the Cluſon, 10 miles SW. of Turin.

PIGNAN, a town in the dept. of Herault, 4 miles W. of Montpellier; and a town in the dept. of the Var.

Pigſhall, Northumb. W. of Newcaſtle. Pigſtreet, Glouceſ. in the pariſh of Stanley-Kings. Pikale, Linc. E. of Spalding. Pilbury-Grange, Derbyſhire, SW. of Bakewell. Pile of Foudray, Lancaſ. near Fourneſs and Walney Iſle. Pilton, Linc. SW. of Kirton. Pilkington and its Park, Lanc. S. of Bury. Pill, Corno. SE. of Leſtwithiel. Pill, Devonſ. near Yarneſcomb.

PILKOPEN, a town of Samland, in Pruſſia, ſituated on a mountain, 30 miles N. of Koningſberg. Here was formerly an idol, called Pilkob, which the ancient Pruſſians worſhipped.

PILL, a ſmall town of Somerſetſhire, with a road for ſhipping, at the mouth of the Avon, about 4 miles below Briſtol. The moſt beautiful and romantic proſpects are preſented in continual and ſtriking changes, in navigating the intervening channel. Here rich plantations and beautiful lawns riſe upon the view; fertile fields and woods, in ſome parts clothe the hills to their very ſummits; while in others, the lofty rocks riſing at once from the oppoſite ſides of the river, preſent the awful appearance of the moſt tremendous precipices, and ſeem to mock every attempt of f art to reduce their ſavage aſpect. Yet, t the baſes of theſe precipitous rocks, long the banks of this extraordinary hannel, where the river and tide find their nuous way through chaſms and fiſſures f the mountains, and where the largeſt eſſels appear diminutive from the gran- eur and ſublimity of the ſurrounding enery, the ſeamen find the neceſſary ac- ommodations for mooring, hauling, &c. i the maſſive bolts and rings, which ave been fixed in the rocks.

Pill, Somerſetſ. S. of Shepton-Mallet. Pilamountain, Cornw. NW. of Crantock t. Michael. Pilland, Devonſhire, in ilton pariſh. Pillaton, Cornwall, by iver river, SE. of St. Ive's. Pillaton-hall, Staffordſhire, between Penkridge nd Cannock.

PILLAU, a conſiderable ſea-port of amland, in Pruſſia, with broad ſtrait treets, and houſes built and furniſhed in he Dutch taſte. It is defended by ſtrong, andſome, and regular fortifications, and as a good harbour. Veſſels of great urden take in their loading here, as here is not ſufficient depth of water to arry them up to Koningſberg. It is ſituated on a tongue of land, which pro- jects into the Baltic, at the entrance of the Friſch Haff, 22 miles SW. of Ko- ningſberg.

Pill-Bridge, Somerſ. over the Ivel, near Ilcheſter. Pillerton, Nether and Over, Warwickſ. SW. of Kington. Pilleſdon, Dorſetſ. SW. of Beminſter. Pilleſgate, Northamptonſhire, near Burghley-Houſe. Pilley, Hants, in the New Foreſt. Pilling-Hall, and Moſs, Lancaſhire, between Garſtang and the ſea. In 1745, a part of Pilling-Moſs was obſerved to riſe to a ſurpriſing height; after a ſhort time it ſunk as much below the level, and moved ſlowly towards the S. ſide, and in half an hour's time it covered 20 acres of land. A man going over the Moſs, eaſtward, when it began to move, perceiving, to his great aſtoniſhment, that the ground under his feet moved ſouthward, he turned back ſpeedily, and eſcaped being ſwallowed up. A family was driven out of their dwelling-houſe, which was quite ſur- rounded, and tumbled down. The im- proved land adjoining that part of the Moſs which moved, was a concave, cir- cular tract, of nearly 100 acres; and this was well nigh filled up with moſs and water, to the depth, it was thought, in ſome parts, of five yards.

Pilltown, in Waterford, Munſter.

PILNITZ, a town of Meiſſen, in Upper Saxony. It is 7 miles SE. of Dreſden.

PILSEN, a town of Bohemia, capital of a circle of the ſame name, particularly rich in ſheep. It is 44 miles SW. of Prague.

Pilſley, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Pilſley, Derbyſhire, N. of Alfreton.

PILSNA, a town of Sindomir, in Poland.

PIETEN, a town of Courland, capital of a fertile territory of the ſame name.

Pilton, Devonſh. adjoining Barnſtaple. Pilton, or Pilkton, Northamp. on the Nen, between Oundle and Thrapſton. Pilton, Rutland, near Luffenham. Pilton, Somerſetſh. 2 miles from Shepton-Mallet. Pimpern, Dorſetſ. 2 miles from Blandford; formerly of note, as it gave name to the hundred. Pinbury, Glouc. near Dunteſbourn. Pinchbeck, Lincolnſ. on Boſton Dyke. Pincheley, Cornwall, E. of Bodmin. Pinchingthorp-Hall, Yorkſ. NE. of Stokeſley. Pinchpoles, Eſſex, near Manenden. Pichpool, Glouc. in Winruſh pariſh. Pindale End, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Pines, Devonſ. near Exeter.

PINE ISLAND, a ſmall iſland in the Gulf of Mexico, near the S. coaſt of W. Florida. Lon. 88. 18. W. Alſo a ſmall iſland near the coaſt of Terra Firma. Lon. 77. 30. W.

PINES, ISLE OF, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, off the S. end of New Ca- ledonia, about 14 miles over, in a SE. and NW. direction. It is high, and re- markable in the middle, being quite a pointed hill, ſloping toward the extremi- ties, which are very low. The low land has many tall pine trees upon it. Lat. 22. 38. S. lon. 167. 43. E.

PINHEL, a town of Beira.

Pinhoo, Devonſ. near Exeter. Pinkeneſs, 3 miles from Glouceſter. Pinkie, a village of Edinburgſhire, near Muſſelburgh. Pinley, Warwickſh. between Henley-in-Arden and Warwick. Pinley, Warwickſh. SE. of Coventry.

PINNEBURG, a town and lordſhip of Holſtein, in Lower Saxony.

Pinnels, Wilts, near Caln. Pinnenden, or Pickenden-Heath, Kent, near Maid- ſtone. Pinner, Middleſex, 2 miles NW. of Harrow. Pinnock, Glouceſterſhire, near Winchcomb. Pinnock, St. Corn- wall, SW. of St. Neot's. Pinnow-Hill, Yorkſhire, NW. of Kighley.

PINOS, an uninhabited iſland, near the S. coaſt of Cuba, mountainous and cover- ed with pines. It is 25 miles in length, and 15 in breadth, and abounds with ex- cellent paſtures. Lon. 83. 10. W.

PINSK, a town of Bizeſc, in Ruſſian Lithuania, ſeated on a river of the ſame name name. It was formerly a conſiderable place, but has been almoſt ruined by the Coſſacs. The chief manufacture is dreſſing Ruſſian leather.

Pinſwell, Glouceſterſhire, in Cubberly pariſh. Pinvin, Worceſterſ. near Perſhore. Pinxton, Derbyſ. E. of Alfreton.

PIOMBINO, a ſea-port, principality, and gulf of Tuſcany. Lat. 42. 57. N.

Pipe, N. Hereford. Pipe, Warwickſhire, in the precincts of Erdington. Pipe, Staffordſhire, NW. of Lichfield. Pipe Hill, Staffordſhire, near Lichfield.

PIPERNO, a town in the Campagna of Rome, 9 miles NNW. of Terracina.

Pipleton, Worceſterſ. near Perſhore.

PIPLEY, a town of Bengal, 22 miles NE. of Balaſore; a town of Hindooſtan, in the Baglana country; and a town of Hindooſtan, in the country of Berar.

Pippenford, Suſſex, W. of Aſhdown-Foreſt. Pipwell, Northamptonſhire, N. of Rothwell.

PIQUE MONTVALLIER, the higheſt mountain of the Pyrenees. It is in the form of a pike, as its name imports, and may be ſeen 50 miles off. Lon. 0. 22. W.

PIRMASENS, a town of Hanau Lichtenberg, Upper Rhine.

PIRANO, a ſea-port of the late Venetian Iſtria.

Pirgo, Eſſex, near Havering-Bower. Piricroft, Warw. near Tamworth, Pirie, or Pery, a manor adjoining the city of Worceſter. Pirie, or Pury-Barr, and Hall, Staffordſhire, SE. of Weſt-Bromwich. Piriton, or Pirton, Hertfordſ. W. of Ickleford, and NW. of Hitchin.

PIRITZ, a town of Pruſſian Pomerania.

PIRNA, a commercial town of Meiſſen, in Upper Saxony, ſituated on the Elbe, 11 miles SE. of Dreſden.

Pirton, Oxfordſhire, near Watlington. Pirton, Worceſterſhire, W. of Perſhore. Pirton, or Parton, Glouceſterſ. a hamlet to Churchdown. Pirton, Glouceſterſhire, in Lidney pariſh. Pirton Paſſage, Glouceſterſ. over the Severn, to Berkeley.

PISA, an ancient, large, and handſome city of Italy, in Tuſcany, and capital of the Piſano, with a univerſity. The town is ſeated on the river Arno, 10 miles diſtant from the ſea, in a very fertile plain. The river runs through Piſa, and over it are three bridges, of which that in the middle is conſtructed with marble. The city does not contain at preſent above 16,000 inhabitants, although they were computed formerly at 100,000; and graſs is ſaid to grow in the principal ſtreets. The cathedral is a magnificent ſtructure, and on the right ſide of the choir, is the leaning tower, ſo much talked of. The grand duke's palace, and the exchange, are magnificent buildings, worth notice. The Piſans were formerly a free, commercial people, and maintained long and bloody wars againſt the Florentines, who at laſt ſubdued them. The neighbourhood of Leghorn, formerly of little or no trade, but now the chief port in the Mediterranean, has contributed greatly to the decay of Piſa. Between Piſa and Leghorn is a canal 16 Italian miles in length. It is 10 miles N. of Leghorn. Lat. 43. 43. N. lon. 10. 17. E.

PISANO, a territory of Italy, and one of the fineſt countries in Tuſcany. It lies along the Mediterranean ſea, and is about 47 miles in length, and 25 in breadth.

PISCATAWAY, or PISCATAQUAY, a river of N. America, which runs into the Atlantic, between the diſtrict of Maine and New-Hampſhire; its mouth is 60 miles N. of Boſton: alſo a town of Virginia, and a town of Maryland.

PISCO, a town of Peru, in the audience of Lima, with a road well ſheltered from the uſual winds, and capacious enough to hold a royal navy. Here are about 500 families, among whom there are few whites. It is ſeated in a country fertile in excellent fruits and good wine, which they ſend to the reſt of the Spaniſh ſettlements, about one mile from the ſea, (formerly it was on the coaſt,) and 110 SSE. of Lima.

PISELLO, the moſt northren cape of Natolia, in Aſia, which projects into the Black Sea, oppoſite the Crimea.

Piſford, Northamp. between Northampton and Harborough.

PISHOUR, See PEISHORE.

Piſhill, or Puſhill, Oxfordſhire, SE. of Britwell. Piſſingford Bridge, Eſſex, over the Roding, near Stapleford. Piſted, Kent, near Rodmerſham.

PISTOYA, a handſome and conſiderable town of Tuſcany, with a biſhop's ſee. It contains 27 churches, and 36 convents, beſides palaces; the ſtreets are large and handſome, the houſes being generally well-built; but notwithſtanding this, it is almoſt deſerted, in compariſon of what it was formerly; for there are now only 5000 inhabitants. Theſe are loaded with taxes, and meſtly very poor. Here is an Academy of Sciences, founded in 1745. It is ſeated near the river Stella, 20 miles NW. of Florence.

Piſtre, Suffolk, near Ludham.

PITCAITLY WELLS, ſaline ſprings, near Perth, in Scotland, whoſe waters are deemed beneficial in ſcorbutic caſes.

Pitcomb, Glouceſterſ. near Painſwick.

Pitchley, Northamp. S. of Kettering

Pitcomb,

Pitcomb, Somerſ. E. of Caſtle-Cary. Pitſhali, Upper and Lower, Surry, NW. of Haſlemere. Pitſield's Ferry, Eſſex, over the Lea, by Waltham-Abbey.

PITHEA, a ſea-port of W. Bothnia, ſeated at the mouth of a river of the ſame name, 80 miles SW. of Tornea. Lat. 65. 18. N.

Pitleſden, Kent, near Tenterden. Pitmead, Wilts, near Warminſter. Pitminſter, Somerſetſ. S. of Taunton. Pitney, Somerſetſ. W. of Somerton.

PITSCHEN, a town of Brieg, in Sileſia.

Pitſey, Eſſex, in little Bradfield. Pitey, Eſſex, E. of Vange-hall, near North Benfleet, gives name to a creek of the Thames.

PITSHOUR. See PEISHOUR.

Pitſton, Bucks, near Ivingo. Pitt, Hampſhire, NW. of Wincheſter.

PITTENWEEM, a ſea-port of Fifeſhire, ſeated on the N. coaſt of the Frith of Forth, 21 miles NE. of Edinburgh.

Pitton, Wiltſhire, between Winterlow and Clarendon Park.

PITTSBURGH, or FORT-PITT, a town of Pennſylvania, beautifully ſituated on the weſtern ſide of the Allegany mountains, on a point of land near the confluence of the rivers Allegany and Monongahela. The town is laid out on William Penn's plan; is a thoroughfare for the vaſt number of travellers from the eaſtern and middle ſtates to the ſettlements on the Ohio; and increaſes greatly. This was formerly a French fort, called Du Queſne, but was abandoned by their troops in 1758, on the approach of General Forbes, and its name changed to that of Pitt, in honour to the illuſtrious miniſter by whom the war was then directed. At this place, the Allegany firſt takes the name of Ohio. It is 320 miles W. of Philadelphia. Lat. 40. 26. N. lon. 79. 48. W.

PITTSFIELD, a town of Maſſachuſetts.

PITTSYLVANIA, a town and county of Virginia.

PIURA, a town and juriſdiction of Truxillo, in Peru.

Pixam, near Worceſter. Pixton, Somerſetſhire, near Taunton.

Pizhanger, Middleſ. SE. of Perriwale.

PIZZIGHITONE, a town in the Cremoneſe.

PIZZO FERRATO, a town of Abruzzo Citra.

PIZZO DI GOTTO, a town of Demona, in Sicily, 6 miles S. of Melazzo.

Place-Houſe, Kent, near Greane Iſland.

PLACENTIA, a ſea-port of N. America, in Newfoundland, with a harbour, much frequented by ſhips employed in the cod fiſhery. The entrance of it, however, is ſo narrow, that only one ſhip can paſs at a time, but the water is deep enough for the largeſt, and it is capacious enough to hold 150 ſail, which can fiſh there, ſecure againſt all winds, and as quietly as in a river. Near it is the Great Strand, a drying place for fiſh, lying between two very ſteep hills, and large enough to dry fiſh ſufficient to load three ſcore veſſels. There is alſo another called the Little Strand. It is ſeated on a bay on the S. part of the iſland, in lat. 47. 15. N. lon. 55. 10. W.

PLACENZA, or PIACENZA, a populous town of Italy, capital of a duchy of the ſame name, with a biſhop's ſee, and a citadel. The public buildings, ſquares, and fountains, are beautiful, the ſtreets are broad and ſtraight, and one, in particular, called the Stradone, is reckoned the largeſt and handſomeſt in Italy, being 3000 feet in length. It contains, beſides the cathedral, 1 collegiate, 12 parochial, and 38 other churches; 8 abbeys, 16 convents, and a univerſity, with about 20,000 inhabitants, of whom 2000 are eccleſiaſtics. It is pleaſantly ſituated in a well-cultivated country, on the river Po, 32 miles NW. of Parma.

PLACENZA, THE DUCHY OF, extends about 30 miles long from N. to S. and from 8 to 15 broad from E. to W. and is politically annexed to the duchy of Parma. It is very fertile and populous, and contains mines of iron, copper, and vitriol, with ſalt ſprings, from which they make very white ſalt. Its principal rivers are the Trebia and Nurra.

PLAINFIELD, a town of Connecticut.

Plainfield, or Fairfield, Somerſetſ. near Quantocks-Heads. Plainmeller, Northumberland, near Haltweſtel.

PLAINVILLE, a town in the dept. of the Oiſe.

PLAISANCE, a town in the depart. of Gers.

Plaiſtow, Eſſex, in the pariſh of Weſt-Ham. Plaiſtow, Kent, near Bromley. Plaiſtow, Suſſex, near Michelham Park. Planers or Palſters, Kent, in Shoreham pariſh.

PLANIEZ, an iſland near Marſeilles.

Planke, or Plankeford, Northumberl. S. of Beltingham.

PLANO, an iſland in the bay of Alicant.

Plardwick, Staff. E. of Forton. Plaſby Shropſ. between Alſtretton and Wenlock.

PLASENCIA, a town of Spaniſh Eſtremadura, ſeated on the river Xera, 95 miles WSW. of Madrid.

PLASENTIA, a town of Guipuſcoa.

Plaſby-Caſtle, Eſſex, on the Weſtern ſide of the county, SE. of High-Eaſter.

It

It was the ſeat of the High Conſtable of England, from the earlieſt times of that office to the year 1400. At preſent nothing remains of this fortreſs but a mount, bounded by a high rampart and ditch on the W. ſide, a brick bridge over it, and part of a gate.

PLASSENDAL, a fortreſs 3 miles E. of Oſtend.

PLASSEY, THE PLAINS OF, in Hindooſtan Proper, and in the ſoubah of Bengal, diſtant from Moorſhedabad about 25 miles S. and from Calcutta 70 N. Near this place, Colonel Clive, in 1757, totally defeated the vaſt army of the nabob Surajah Dowlah; a victory which laid the foundation of the preſent Britiſh empire in India.

PLATA, an iſland on the coaſt of Quito, in Peru, ſurrounded by inacceſſible rocks. It is about 5 miles long, and 4 broad.

PLATA, a rich and populous town of Peru, capital of the province of Los Charcas, with an audience. It has mines of ſilver, which they have left off working, ſince thoſe of Potoſi have have been diſcovered. It is ſeated on the river Chimao, 500 miles SE. of Cuſco. Lat. 19. 16. S. lon. 63. 40. W.

PLATA, or RIO-DE-LA-PLATA, a large river of S. America, which is formed by the union of the three great rivers, the Paraguay, Uraguay, and Parana. It was diſcovered in 1515, by Juan Diaz deSolis, a Spaniſh navigator, who imprudently going aſhore with 10 men, they were all murdered by the ſavages. It croſſes Paraguay, and enters the Southern Ocean, in lat. 35. S. It is 150 miles broad at its mouth; at Monte Video, above 100 miles higher up the river, the land is not to be diſcerned on either ſhore, when a veſſel is in the middle of the channel, and at Buenos Ayres, 200 miles higher ſtill, the oppoſite ſhore is not to be diſcerned from that town. This river, for near 200 leagues (from the conflux of the Paraguay and Parana, to its mouth) is interſperſed with delightful iſlands; it abounds with ſurpriſing plenty and variety of fiſh, the water is clear, ſweet, and wholeſome, and the banks are frequented by a great number of very beautiful birds. It ſometimes overflows its banks, and fertilizes the adjoining lands, like thoſe of Egypt.

PLATA, LA, a province and archbiſhopric of S. America, in the government of Buenos Ayres. It is divided into 14 juriſdictions, and is ſituated on both ſides the river Plata, extending 900 leagues from N. to S. and 100 from E. to W. The climate is very moderate and healthy, but the country is generally infeſted by ſerpents.

Platford, Hants, NW. of Wherwell. Platford, Wiltſhire, E. of Downton.

PLAUEN, or PLAN, a town of Mecklenburgh; a town in the Vogtland, and a town of Schwaitzburg, both in Upper Saxony; and a town in the middle Marche, of Brandenburg.

PLAUER SEE, a lake in Mecklenburg, about 20 miles in circumference.

Plauſworth, a colliery 2 miles and a half from Durham. Plaxtole, Kent, 3 miles SW. of Wrotham. Playford, Suffolk, near Woodbridge. Pleaden, Suſſex, N. of Rye. Plealey, Shropſ. W. of Condover. Pleaſley, Derbyſ. NW. of Mansfield. Pledgden or Priſon Hall, Eſſex, in Henham pariſh, near Clavering.

PLEISSEN, a lordſhip of Heſſe Rhinfels, circle of Upper Rhine.

Plemſton, Cheſhire, on the Gowy, NW. of Tarven.

PLESCOP. See PSCOP.

Pleſh-Bridge, Cornw. between Leſkard and Launceſton. Pleſhet-Park, Suſſex, NE. of Lewes. Pleſhey, Eſſex, 7 miles N. by W. of Chelmsford.

PLES, or PSZCZYNA, a town of Ratibor, in Sileſia.

PLESSIS-LES-TOURS, a ci-devant royal palace of France, near Tours, in the department of Indre and Loire. It was built by the profligate and ſuperſtitious Louis XI. who died here in 1483, notwithſtanding he had the precaution to be covered all over with relics, and would never permit Vincent de Paul (who was ſent for from Italy on purpoſe) to be out of his ſight.

Pleſſy, Northumb. near Stannington.

PLETTENBURG, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia, governed by its own magiſtrates.

Plewland, Yorkſ. near Partington.

PLEYBURGH, a town in Carinthia.

Plint, Cornwall, NW. of Weſt-Low.

PLOCKSKO, a town of Maſſovia, in Poland, capital of a palatinate of the ſame name. The churches are magnificent, and richly ornamented. It is ſituated upon a hill, near the Viſtula, 64 miles WNW. of Warſaw.

PLOEN, a town of Holſtein, capital of a principality of the ſame name, inveſted with the ſame rights as Lubec, from which city it is diſtant 23 miles NNW.

PLOERMEL, two ſmall towns in the dept. of Morbihan.

Plucklay,

Pluckley, Kent, 4 miles and a half from Aſhford.

PLUDENTZ, a town and county in the Tyrol, ſituated on the Ill.

Plumber, Dorſetſ. on the river Direliſhe, 3 miles and a half from Lidlinch. Plumford, Kent, in Oſpring pariſh. Plumland, Cumb. on the river Elen, oppoſite Aſpatria. Plumley, Cheſh. near Northwich. Plumpton, Comberl. E. of Inglewood-foreſt, in Lazonby pariſh. Plumpton, Lancaſhire, by Ulverſton. Plumpton, Lancaſhire, W. of Kirkham. Plumpton, Suſſex, SE. of Dickling. Plumpton, Warwickſhire, E. of Kingſbury. Plumpton-Tower, Yorkſhire, near Knareſborough. Plumſted, Kent, near Woolwich: ſaid formerly a market. Plumſted Magna and Parva, NE. of Norwich. Plumſted, Norfolk, S. of Baconſthorp. Plumtree, E. of Nottingham. Plungar, Leiceſ. W. of Belvoir-Caſtle. Plurinden, Kent, near Wood-Church.

PLURS, or PIURO, formerly a large and flouriſhing town of the Griſons country, containing three churches, many large houſes, a ſtone bridge over the river Maira; but it was totally overwhelmed by the fall of Mount Conto, under which it was imprudently built, in Auguſt 25, 1618. When this terrible cataſtrophe happened, the cloud of duſt and rubbiſh was ſo great, as to cover the heavens like ſmoke, and even to extend as far as Chiavenna, from which town the ſpot, formerly occupied by Plurs, is about four miles diſtant. Parts of the ancient walls, and the ruins of a country-houſe, are, at preſent, the only remains of its former exiſtence.

Pluſh, Dorſetſ. by Buckland-Newton. Plufterwyne, Glouceſterſ. in Woolaſton pariſh.

PLUVIERS, or PITHIVIERS, a town in the dept. of the Loiret, 20 miles ENE. of Orleans.

Plym, a river of Devonſhire, which riſes in Shepiſtor pariſh, and after a courſe of 7 miles, becomes navigable for ſmall veſſels near Plympton; two miles below which, it runs into Plymouth Sound.

*PLYMOUTH, a large and populous ſea-port of Devonſhire, from a mere fiſhing town is become one of the largeſt in the county, and one of the chief naval magazines in the kingdom, owing to its excellent port or harbour, which is capable of ſafely containing 1000 ſail. There are, properly ſpeaking, however, 3 harbours, viz. Catwater, Sutton, Pool, and Hamoaze. The firſt is the mouth of the Plym, and affords a ſafe and commodious harbour for merchants' ſhips, but is ſeldom entered by ſhips of war. The ſecond is frequented by merchant ſhips only, and is almoſt ſurrounded by the houſes of the town. It is in itſelf well calculated to give complete protection to ſuch ſhips as are moored in it, and has lately been farther ſecured by an extenſive pier. The third inlet, which is the mouth of the Tamar, is the harbour for the reception of the Britiſh navy, being fitted out with moorings for near a hundred ſail, and having good anchorage for a much greater number. It is defended by a fort on St. Nicholas Iſland, and other forts, mounted with near 300 guns, and particularly by a citadel, erected in the reign of Charles II. between the ſea and the town, which contains a large ſtore-houſe, and 5 regular baſtions. This laſt is ſituated on the hill, called the Haw, which overlooks the town, and is a good land-mark for mariners. What is called THE DOCK, is a ſeparate town, ſituated about 2 miles up the Hamoaze, and is now nearly as large as Plymouth itſelf. Here are two docks, the one wet, the other dry, built in the reign of William III. and two others, which have been built ſince, hewn out of a mine of ſlate, and lined with Portland ſtone. Plymouth Dock is furniſhed with large magazines, ſtorehouſes, &c. containing arms, ſtores, and all things neceſſary to equip a fleet. Here are alſo ſpacious and commodious barracks, for the marines, with houſes for the officers, clerks, &c. The town is well ſupplied with freſh water, firſt brought hither, from a place 7 miles off, at the coaſt of Sir Francis Drake. It has a good pilchard fiſhery, drives a conſiderable trade to the Straits, and to Newfoundland, and is ſeated between the mouths of the rivers Plym and Tamar, 43 miles SW. of Exeter, and 216 W. by S. of London. Lat. 50. 22. N. lon. 4. 10. W. Markets on Monday, Thurſday, and Saturday.

PLYMOUTH, a ſea-port of Maſſachuſets, in N. America, ſeated at the S. end of Plymouth-Bay, 15 miles SE. of Boſton. It is the firſt town that was built in New England.

PLYMPTON, a populous town of Devonſhire, ſeated on a ſtream, which about a mile below, runs into the river Plym, 5 miles E. of Plymouth, and 218 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Plympton, St. Mary's, near Plympton. Plymtree, Devonſ. E. of Bradninch.

PLYNLIMMON, or SNOWDON, a very high high mountain in Cardiganſhire, on the borders of Montgomeryſhire. On its E. ſide riſe the Severn and Wye; and from the W. ſide flow the Ryddal and Yſtwith.

Po, a large and celebrated river of Italy, which has its ſource at mount Viſo, in Piedmont. It runs through Monferrat, the Milaneſe, and Mantua; thence it paſſes to the borders of the Parmeſan, and a part of the Modeneſe; and having entered the Ferrareſe, it divides itſelf at Ficheruolo, and enters the Adriatic by a number of mouths. It paſſes by Moncalier, Turin, Caſal, Cremona, Ferrara, &c. In its courſe it receives ſeveral rivers, and often overflows its banks, doing a great deal of damage; the reaſon of which is, that moſt of thoſe rivers deſcend from the Alps, and are increaſed by the melting of the ſnow.

Pockley, Yorkſ. NE. of Helmſley.

POCKLINGTON, a town of the E. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on a ſtream which falls into the Derwent, 14 miles SE. of York, and 196 N. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

POCOMOCK, a river in Maryland which empties itſelf into the Cheſapeak, bay, in lat. 37. 50. N and lon. 75. 50. W.

PODENSTEIN, a town of Bamberg, in Franconia.

PODENSAC, a town in the dept. of the Gironde.

Podick, Old and New, Norfolk, in the Fens, W. of Downham.

PODLACHIA, a palatinate of Poland, N. of that of Lublin. Bielſk is the capital.

Podmore, Staffordſhire, in the manor of Sugnell.

PODOLIA, a province of Poliſh Ruſſia, S. of Volhinia and the Ukraine. The river Dnieſter runs along the ſouthern borders, and the Bog croſſes it almoſt entirely from NW. to SE. It is divided into the Upper and Lower, or the palatinate of Podolia, of which Kaminieck is the capital; and that of Bracklaw. It is a very fertile country, and abounds with a fine breed of horſes and horned cattle.

Poe, a river of Tyrone, in Ulſter, which runs into the Shrule, about a mile and a half N. of Omagh.

Poſſil. or Poughill, Cornw. near Stratton. Poick, or Powick, S. of Worceſter, on the oppoſite ſide of the Severn. Pointington, Somerſetſh. NW. of Milbourn-Port. Pointon, Cheſhire, near Stopford, Point Pleaſant, Surry, by Wandſworth. Point Pleaſant, Surry, near Kingſton-upon-Thames.

POGGIO, a town of Tuſcany, 8 miles SE. of Florence, where the grand duke has a palace. Alſo two towns of Genoa.

POGGIOBONZI, a town of Tuſcany.

POINT DE GALLE, a town and cape of the iſland of Ceylon, on the SW. coaſt, in a large bay. It was taken by the Dutch in 1640. Lat. 6. N.

POIRINO, or POVERINO, a town of Chieri, Piedmont, 15 miles SE. of Turin.

POISSY, a town in the department of Seine and Oiſe, ſeated near the edge of the foreſt of St. Germain, 3 miles NNW. of St. Germain.

POITIERS, an ancient town, capital of the department of Vienne. It would be one of the moſt conſiderable places in France, were its population in proportion to its extent; but it includes a number of gardens and fields within its circuit; and the inhabitants are eſtimated at 21,000. It has ſeveral Roman antiquities, particularly an ampitheatre, which is partly demoliſhed. There is alſo a triumphal arch, which ſerves as a gate to the great ſtreet. The principal manufactures are ſtockings, woollen caps, gloves, and combs. Vipers are found in the environs in ſuch numbers, that they are exported even to Venice, to make treacle. In 1356, a memorable battle was fought near this town, between the Engliſh and French, in which the latter were defeated. The Engliſh army, which amounted to only 16,000 men, was commanded by Edward the Black Prince; that of the enemy, commanded by King John, was eſtimated at 60,000. King John and his ſon Philip were both taken priſoners and brought to England. This town is ſeated on a hill, on the river Clain, 52 miles SSW. of Tours.

POITOU, a ci-devant province of France, lying S. of the Loire. E. of the ſea, and W. of Marche and Berry; it is fertile in corn and wine, and feeds a great number of cattle, particularly mules. It now forms the three departments of Vendee, Vienne, and the Two Sevres.

Pokenborn, Cornwall, near St. Earth.

Pokington, Somerſetſ. NE. of Ilminſter.

POL, ST. See PAUL, ST.

POLA, an ancient, decayed town of Iſtria, with about 800 inhabitants. Here are the ruins of a Roman amphitheatre, and a triumphal arch. It is ſeated at the bottom of a deep bay, and has a ſpacious harbour, 44 miles S. of Trieſte.

POLACHIA. See PODLACHIA.

POLAND, a large country of Europe, bounded on the W. by Pomerania, Si-leſia

leſia, and Moravia; on the S. by Hungary and Moldavia; on the N. by Pruſſia, Courland, and Ruſſia; and on the E. by Ruſſia. Poland, in its utmoſt latitude, included formerly 18 provinces; viz. Great Poland, containing the palatinates of Poſnania, Kaliſh, Siradia, Leuczicz, and Rawa; Cujavia, containing the palatinates of Brſeſkic and Wladiſlaw; Maſſovia, containing the palatinates of Cracow, Sandomir, and Lublin; Podlachia, or the palatinate of Bielſk; Little or Red Ruſſia, containing the palatinates of Chelm, Belez, and Lemburg, Podolia and Kiof, containing the palatinates of Podolia and Bracklaw; the palatinate of Kiob and Volhinia. Beſides theſe, Lithuania has been conſidered as a part of Poland; as likewiſe Samogitia and even Courland. The late government was monarchical and ariſtocratical; all the acts of ſtate being in the name of "the king and republic of Poland." The king was the only elective ſovereign in Europe: he was choſen by a general diet, called together by the archbiſhop of Gneſna, who is the chief miniſter of the republic during the interregnum. After his coronation, the king might diſpoſe of the vacant benefices, and the offices both civil and military. He had a ſettled revenue of 40,000l. a year, but could not, by his own authority, raiſe any new taxes, or change any law. The ariſtocracy conſiſted in the ſenate and general diet. The ſenate was compoſed of the biſhops, great officers, palatines, and governors of towns, who, with the king, regulated the affairs of the kingdom, ſo as to prevent him from doing any thing againſt the liberty of the country. The general diets, which were aſſemblies of all the nobility, met every two years, or oftener when there was any important affair on the carpet. The Poles, or Polanders, are large and robuſt. The peaſants are poor, miſerable, ſlowniſh, and mere ſlaves to the nobleſſe. The Poliſh towns are moſtly built of wood, and the villages, conſiſt of mean huts. The nobles have from time immemorial reſided in their ſeats or caſtles, in their own villages, maintaining themſelves by agriculture, breeding of bees, grazing, and hunting. Such was the ſtate and conſtitution of Poland, before the memorable year 1772, when a partition of the country, projected by the king of Pruſſia, was effected by that monarch, in conjunction with the empreſs of Ruſſia and Maria Thereſa, empreſs of Germany. By this partition, Great Poland, Poliſh Pruſſia, (the cities of Dantzic and Thorn excepted) and part of Lithuania, were annexed to Pruſſia; Little Poland and Red Ruſſia, to Auſtria; and the remaining, and greater part of Lithuania, Courland, Poleſia, Podolia, Volhinia, and the palatinate of Kiof, were ſeized by Ruſſia, ſo that only Samogitia, Maſſovia, and Podlachia, were left to conſtitute the kingdom of Poland. Of theſe diſmembered countries the Ruſſian part is the largeſt, the Auſtrian the moſt populous, and the Pruſſian, the moſt commercial. The population of the whole amounts to near 5,000,000; the firſt containing 1,500,000, the ſecond 2,500,000, and the third 860,000. The three partitioning powers, moreover, forcibly effected a great change in the conſtitution. By this the houſe of Saxony, and all foreign princes, who might be likely to give weight to Poland by their hereditary dominions, were rendered incapable of filling the throne; the faineſt proſpect of an hereditary ſovereignty was removed; the exhorbitant privileges of the equeſtrian order were confirmed in their utmoſt latitude; and the prerogatives of the crown ſtill further diminiſhed. In 1791, the king and the nation, in concurrence, almoſt unanimouſly, and without any foreign intervention, eſtabliſhed another conſtitution. By this the broils of an elective monarchy, by which Poland, on almoſt every vacancy of the throne, had been involved in the calamities of war, were avoided, the throne being declared hereditary, in the houſe of Saxony. The rights and privileges of all orders in the republic, (the king, the nobles, the citizens, and the peaſants,) were alike equitably conſulted. In a word, it was not, on the one hand, the haughty deſpot dictating a conſtitution to his people, nor on the other, a proud ariſtocracy, or a mad democracy, that wreſted from their ſovereign his juſt prerogatives; but it was the univerſal wiſh of the nation, the ſentiment that inſpired which, was univerſal happineſs. A few of the nobility, however, diſcontented at the ſacrifices of ſome of their privileges, repaired to the court of Ruſſia; and their repreſentations concurring with the ambitious views of the empreſs, ſhe ſent an army into Poland, under pretence of being guarantee of the conſtitution of 1772. Her interference was too powerful to be reſiſted, and this new conſtitution was overthrown. But the principal object for which the Ruſſian army entered Poland was not yet attained. The empreſs had planned, in conjunction with the king of Pruſſia, a ſecond partition of this unhappy country, which actually took place in 1793. By this the empreſs obtained nearly the remaining part of Lithuania, with the palatinates of Podolia, Kiof, and Bratzlaw. Beſide the voiwodſhips, or provinces of Poſen, Gneſen, Kaliſh, Siradia, Wielun, Lenſchitz, Cujavia, Doorzyn, Rawa, part of Plotſk, &c. with the city and monaſtery of Czentſtokow (the Loretto of Poland) and its rich treaſures, the king of Pruſſia obtained the great object of his wiſhes, the cities of Dantzic and Thorn. Some attempts were made, by a few patriotic noblemen, to deliver their country from its oppreſſors, and they were at firſt ſucceſsful; but the brave Koſciuſko being taken priſoner, and his army defeated, no further efforts were made. Koſciuſko was carried into Ruſſia, and the king formally reſigned his crown at Grodno, in 1795. Since then the country has undergone a farther partition, and is now entirely ſwallowed up by the rapacity of the dividers of the ſpoil. Poland therefore is at preſent a country, but no nation; and the indignant Pole, in reviewing its paſt hiſtory and preſent ſtate, may exclaim with a ſigh, "Such things were."—By the conſtitution, of 1772, the Romiſh religion is declared the eſtabliſhed; but although the Diſſidents continue excluded from the diet, the ſenate, and the permanent council, they are capable of ſitting in the inferior courts of juſtice, and enjoy the free exerciſe of their religion. The univerſities of Poland, are Cracow, Wilna, and Poſen. The air is generally cold, and they have but little wood; however, it yields ſuch plenty of grain, that near 4000 veſſels and floats, moſt of which are laden with corn, annually paſs down the Viſtula to Dantzic: 80 or 90,000 oxen are alſo driven every year out of Poland. They alſo export large quantities of leather, furs, hemp, flax, linſeed, hops, ſaltpetre, honey, wax, tallow, hides, ſhip and houſe timber, pitch, pot-aſh, horned cattle, horſes, and other commodities, but theſe are greatly over-balanced by the imports; namely, wine, ſpices, cloths, ſilk, ſtuffs, fine linen, plate-copper, braſs, ſteel, furs, &c. they have alſo mines of ſalt, of great depth, out of which they dig rock-ſalt. The principal rivers are the Dnieper, the Viſtula, the Bug, the Dniemen, the Dneiſter, and the Bog. Warſaw is the capital.

Podolia,

Polbrook, Northamp. by Oundle. Polder's Farm, Kent, near Sandwich. Pole, Cumberl. S. of Penrith. Pole, Kent, in Southfleet. Polebill, Herts, E. of Hodſon.

POLERON, one of the ſpice Iſlands in the Indian Ocean, producing nutmegs, and till lately held by the Dutch. It is 60 miles S. of Ceram.

POLESIA, a name given to the palatinate of Brzeſe, in Lithuania.

POLESINO-DE-ROVIGO, a diſtrict in the ci-devant territory of Venice, between the Ferrareſe and Paduan. It is about 43 miles in length, and 12 in breadth, and is very fertile in corn and paſtures. Rovigo is the capital.

Poleſworth, Warwickſ. SE. of Tamworth. Polgreen, Cornwall, 4 miles W. of St. Columb. Polhampton, Hampſ. E. of Overton. Polharma, Cornw. SW. of Leſtwithiel.

POLICANDRO, an iſland in the Archipelago, and one of the Cyclades; about 20 miles in circumference. The inhabitants are very poor, there being only a few villages and a caſtle, but no harbour; and the ſurface in general is rocky, and the ſoil ſhallow, yet it produces corn and wine ſufficient for the inhabitants. It lies between Milo, Sikino, Paros, and Antiparos.

POLICASTRO, a town and Gulf of Principato Citra.

POLIGNANO, a town of Bari, Naples, ſeated near the ſea.

POLIGNI, a town in the dept. of Jura, 16 miles SW. of Dole.

Poling, Suſſex, SE. of Arundel. Pollington, a little N. of Dorcheſter.

POLIZZI, a town of Mezzara, in Sicily.

Polkeryes, Cornwall, near Fowey. Pollington, Yorkſ. near Snaith.

POLLOCK, 2 towns in N. Carolina.

POLLOCKSHAWS, a conſiderable manufacturing town of Renfrewſhire, ſeated on the river White Cart, 5 miles E. of Paiſley.

Polmarique, Cornwall, E. of Padſtow-Haven. Polmere, Cornw. at the bottom of Trewardreth Bay. Polnam, or Polruan, Cornw. E. of Fowey Haven.

Polomorgan, Cornwall, S. of Bodmin.

POLORE, a town of Hindooſtan, in the Carnatic, 26 miles SSW. of Arcot.

POLOTSK, a town, capital of a government in Ruſſian Lithuania, on the Duna, 168 miles SE. of Riga, by the government of which it is bounded on the NW.

Polperry, Cornw. a harbour between two hills, W. of Killagarth, by Talland Point, where plenty of fiſh are taken. Polres, Kent, in Harbledown pariſh. Polrudden, Cornwall, W. of Trewardreth-Bay. Near it is dug the beſt freeſtone in the country. Under Polrudden-Hill is a deep cave. Polſden, Surry, near Mickleham and Leatherhead. Polſgrove, Hants, between Fareham and Portſmouth.

Polſham,

Polſham, Somerſetſhire, SW. of Wells. Polſted, Suffolk, SW. of Hadley. Polſted, Surry, in Compton pariſh.

POLTEN, ST. or ST. HYPOLITE, a town in the archduchy of Auſtria.

Pollerworgy, Cornw. W. of Camelford. Poltimore, Devonſ. near Exeter. Polton's, Kent, near Aſhe. Polverbach, S. of Shrewſbury. Polwhele, Cornwall, NE. of Truro.

POLYSTILLO. See ABDERA.

POMEGUE, one of the three ſmall iſlands of Marſeilles, near the iſland of If.

POMERANIA, a province of Germany, a the circle of Upper Saxony, with the title of a duchy. On the N. it has the Baltic, on the E. Pomeralia, and on the W. Mecklenburg. One part of it belongs o the king of Pruſſia, and the other to he Swedes. It is watered by ſeveral ivers, of which the Oder, the Pene, the Lega, the Perſanet, the Wipper, the Kolp, and the Lebo, are the moſt conſiderable. The air is pretty cold, but ompenſated by the fertility of the ſoil, hich abounds in paſtures and corn, of hich a great deal is tranſported into foreign countries. The geeſe are remarkably large; and in general, the dried Pomeranian geeſe, hams, ſauſages, and ſalmon, paſs for the beſt in Germany. It a flat country, about 250 miles in ngth, and 75 in breadth. It contains any lakes, woods, and foreſts, and has veral good harbours, particularly Stetin d Stralſund. It is divided by the Oder, to the Hither and Farther Pomerania; d the river Pene, for a conſiderable rt of its courſe, ſeparates the territories Sweden and Pruſſia in this duchy. etin is the capital of the Pruſſian part, d Stralſund of the Swediſh.

POMERELIA, a late diſtrict of Poland, ving Pruſſia on the E. Pomerania on e W. the Baltic on the N. and Poland the S. It has been lately ſeized by e king of Pruſſia, and now forms a rt of Southern Pruſſia. Dantzick and argard are the principal places.

Pomeroy, in Tyrone, Ulſter.

POMONA. See MAINLAND.

Ponallon, Cornwall, E. of Boſcaſtle. nd, Cornwall, near Plymouth. Pond, iddleſex, NE. of Hounſlow. Ponder's-d, Middleſex, in Enfield pariſh, on the nks of the New River, near Edmonton.

PONDESTURIA, a town of Montſerrat.

PONDICHERRY, a town of Hindooſ, about 4 leagues in extent, the houſes which are as regularly laid out as if had been all built at once. The Europeans build with bricks, but the Indians uſe only wood, in the manner which we call lath and plaſter. In 1693, this town was taken by the Dutch, who erected 7 regular baſtions here, and other fine fortifications, ſo as to render it one of the moſt complete fortreſſes in India. It was ceded, however, to the French by the treaty of Ryſwick, in 1697, (for the trifling ſum of 5000l.) who, thereupon, made it the chief ſeat of their Eaſt-India Company. The Engliſh took it in 1761, and deſtroyed the fortifications, but reſtored it to the French by the treaty of Paris, in 1763. In 1793 it was again taken by the Engliſh. It is ſituated on the coaſt of Coromandel, 75 miles SSW. of Madras. Lat. 11. 56. N. lon. 80. 0. E.

PONDICO, a ſmall uninhabited iſland of the Archipelago, 2 miles N. of Negropont.

Pond Street, Middleſex, near Hampſtead Ponds.

PONFERRADA, a town of Leon.

Pongbill, Podbill, or Pobill, Devonſ. N. of Crediton.

PONS, a town in the department of Lower Charente, with a mineral ſpring, 10 miles SSE. of Saintes.

PONS, ST. DE THOMIERS, a town in the dept. of Herault, ſeated in a valley, wherein are fine marble quarries, 21 miles NW. of Narbonne; alſo a town of Catalonia.

Pons Belli, Yorkſhire, E. Riding near Aldby. Ponſonby, Cumberland, near Gosforth, by the river Calder. Pont, a river in Northumberland, which runs into the German Ocean at Blythe's Newk.

PONT-A-MOUSSON, a conſiderable town in the dept. of Meurthe. It had once a univerſity, which was removed in 1768 to Nancy. It is ſeated on the river Moſelle, which divides it into two parts, 12 miles NNW. of Nancy.

PONT-ARLIER, a town in the department of Doubs, ſeated on the river Doubs, near Mount Jura.

PONT-AUDEMER, a town in the department of the Eure, 13 miles NW. of Louviers, and 85 NW. of Paris.

PONT DE CE, a town in the department of Maine and Loire, ſeated on the river Loire, 3 miles SSW. of Angers.

PONT-DE-L'ARCHE, a town in the department of Eure, 5 miles N. of Louviers, and 62 NW. of Paris.

PONT-DE-VAUX, a town in the dept. of Ain, ſeated on the river Reſſouſſe, 16 miles NW. of Bourg-en-Breſſe.

PONT-DE-VESLE, a town in the department of Ain, with a manufactory of ſtuffs called Auguſtines, and alſo of tapeſtry for the coverings of arm-chairs and ſofas, of the ſame kind as thoſe of Aubuſſon. It is ſeated on the river Veſle, 12 miles NNW. of Bourg.

PONT-DU-GARD. See GARD.

PONTE-DE LIMA, a town of Douro, Portugal, ſeated on the river Lima, 13 miles NW. of Braga, and 190 N. of Liſbon.

PONTEBA, or PONTE IMPERIAL, a town of Carinthia.

PONTEBA VENETA, a town of Friuli.

PONTEFRACT, or POMFRET, in the time of the Saxons called KIRKBY, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſituated in a rich ſoil, noted for its nurſery grounds, and large plantations of liquorice and ſkirworts. Its caſtle, now in ruins, has been the ſcene of various tragical events in the Engliſh hiſtory. Richard II. after being depoſed, was ſtarved or tormented to death here; and here Anthony, earl of Rivers, and Sir Richard Grey, were murdered by order of king Richard III. It is ſituated at the conflux of the rivers Are and Dun, 22 miles SSW. of York, and 175 NNW. of London. A great ſhow of horſes begins on February 5. Market on Saturday.

Pontesbury, and Pontesford, Shropſ. on the Mele, SW. of Shrewſbury.

PONTE-STURA, a town of Montferrat, ſeated at the confluence of the Stura and Po.

PONTE-VEDRA, a town of Spain, in Galicia, ſeated almoſt at the mouth of the river Leris; it is famous for its fiſhery of ſardins (a kind of pilchards) which makes its principal riches.

PONT-GIBAUT, a town in the dept. of Puy de Dome. Near this place is the village of Rore, with a ſilver mine, and a vinous fountain of mineral water. It is 10 miles WNW. of Clermont.

PONTHIEU, before the revolution, a ſmall country in Picardy, ſituated between the rivers Canche and Somme.—Abbeville was the capital.

Pontiland, or Pont-Eland, Northumberland, 6 miles NW. of Newcaſtle.

PONTIVY, a ſmall town in the dept. of Morbihan, with a manufacture of linen. It is ſeated on the river Blavet, 26 miles N. of Vannes.

PONT-L'EVEQUE, a town in the dept. of Calvados, ſeated on the river Tonque, 10 miles N. of Liſieux.

PONTOISE, a town in the department of Seine and Oiſe, built in the form of an amphitheatre. It was taken by the Engliſh in the year 1346 by a ſingular ſtratagem. The ground being covered with ſnow, the aſſailants dreſſed themſelves in white, with ladders painted white, and ſcaled the walls before the centinels could perceive their approach. Charles VII. however, retook it by ſtorm in 1432. It is ſeated on an eminence, on the rivers Oiſe and Vienne, 17 miles NW. of Paris.

PONT-ORSON, a town in the dept. of the Channel, ſeated on the river Couſnon, with a tide harbour, near the ſea, 20 miles SSE. of St. Malo.

PONT-REMOLI, a town of Tuſcany.

PONT ST. ESPRIT, a ſmall, ill-built town in the dept. of Gard. It is ſeated on the river Rhone, over which is a fine ſtone bridge, built in the middle of the thirteenth century; it conſiſts of 19 great, and 4 ſmall arches. The extreme lightneſs of the ſtructure, compared with the depth, rapidity, and width of the river, fills the mind with aſtoniſhment. To facilitate the paſſage of the water in time of floods, apertures have been made through each pier, about 6 feet above the common level of the river; and to leſſen the extreme rapidity of the Rhone, the bridge is not built in a right line, but in the form of a curve. Pont St. Eſprit is 17 miles S. of Viviers.

PONT ST. MAXENCE, a town in the dept. of Oiſe, ſeated on the river Oiſe, 5 miles N. of Senlis.

PONT-SUR-SEINE, a town in the department of Aube, ſeated on the river Seine, 4 miles NNE. of Nogent-ſur-Seine, and 55 SSE. of Paris.

PONT-SUR-YONNE, a town in the dept. of Yonne, ſeated on the river Yonne, 8 miles NNW. of Sens.

PONTYPOOL, a town in Monmouthſhire, noted for a manufactory of japanned ware. It is ſeated on the river Avon, which turns ſeveral mills for the working of iron plates, 15 miles SW. of Monmouth, and 146 W. by N. of London. Market on Saturday.

PONT-Y-PRIDD. See TAAFE.

PONZA, or PONTIA, a ſmall iſland on the coaſt of Naples, in the Gulf of Gaeta, belonging to the duchy of Parma.

POOL, a town of Dorſetſhire, conſiſting of about 1000 houſes, moſtly built of ſtone, but low. The harbour here is one of the beſt in the Channel for merchant ſhips, admitting veſſels of 400 tons burden up to the quay, and the ground is every where ſoft. Pool roſe firſt into conſequence, when the ancient town of Wareham fell to decay. It now ranks pretty high among the Engliſh ſea-ports, and its trade and population are rapidly increaſing.

increaſing. Two hundred and thirty ſail of ſhipping, burden 21,301 tons, and employing about 1500 men, belong to this port. Of theſe, about 140 ſhips are employed in the foreign trade, and in the Newfoundland fiſhery, which is the principal branch of buſineſs here, as alſo to the Baltic, Norway, America, Portugal, Greenland, &c. and the remainder in its fine coaſting trade, (particularly in corn and coals,) and in fiſhing. The cuſtoms, in 1770, amounted to 13,747l. Near the mouth of the harbour is a bank, from which vaſt quantities of oyſters are carried, to be fattened in the creeks of Eſſex and the Thames. It is ſituated upon a peninſula, projecting into a capacious bay, called Luxford Lake, or Pool Harbour, which branches into many creeks, and forms ſeveral iſlands, 40 miles WSW. of Wincheſter, and 105 SW. of London. Markets on Monday and Thurſday.

Pool, Devonſhire, in Tiverton pariſh. Pool, Cornw. in Minhenoit pariſh. Pool, Yorkſhire, E. of Otley. Pool, or Pole-Cains, Wilts. NE. of Malmſbury.

Pooles, Cheſhire, 3 townſhips N. of Namptwich. Pooley, Weſtmorl. at the foot of Ulleſwater, has a ſmall market for fiſh. Pool-Hall, Cheſhire, N. of Stanney. Pool Houſe, Eſſex, NW. of Mapleſted. Pool, South, Devonſhire, in Slapton pariſh. Pools-Hole, Derbyſhire, in the Peak, near Buxton. Pooly, Warwickſ. near Polefworth. Poolbank, Weſtmorland, in Croſtwaite pariſh, 6 miles from Kendal. Here is a remarkable cavern, called Fairy-Hole, from which a ſtream of water iſſues after a fall of rain.

POONAH, a ſmall and mean-built town of Hindooſtan, in Viſiapour, capital of the Weſtern Mahrattas. It is 30 miles E. of the Gauts, and 75 SE. of Bombay.

Poonings, or Poynings, Suſſex, E. of Stening.

POORANDAR, a fortreſs of Viſiapour, in Hindooſtan, where the archives of government are kept. It is ſeated on a mountain, 20 miles SSE. of Poonah.

POOR-HEAD, a bold and lofty cape, near Kinſale Harbour, in Cork, Munſter.

Poorſtock, Dorſetſhire, N. of Bridport.

Pooton, N. and S. Dorſetſ. near Beminſter.

Pooton Lancelot, Cheſhire, near Eaſtham.

POPA MADRE. SEE MADRE DE POPA.

POPAYAN, a province of Terra Firma, waſhed on the W. by the South Sea, and bounded on the E. by New Granada, and by Quito on the S. It is about 440 miles long, and from 70 to 240 broad. The temperature and ſoil vary according to the ſituation of the country, in the plains, or on the ſides of the mountains. In ſome places it is rather cold than hot, and in others the reverſe; while at Popayan, the capital, there is a perpetual ſpring throughout the year. It is more ſubject, however, to tempeſts of thunder and lightning than any other of the known parts of America, and frequent damages are done here by earthquakes. In general, the ſoil produces a great abundance of grain and fruits, and breeds vaſt numbers of cattle and ſheep, ſome of which are ſold in the towns, and others are driven to Quito. Popayan is one of the beſt trading countries in Terra Firma. It has a tranſitory commerce with Carthagena, when the galleons arrive there: as alſo a reciprocal one with Quito, ſending thither horned cattle and mules, and receiving cloths and baize in return. Its active commerce conſiſts in dried beef, ſalted pork, roll-tobacco, hogſlard, rum, cotton, ribbons, and other ſmall wares.

POPAYAN, the capital of the province of the ſame name, is the conſtant reſidence of the governor, who is always chief magiſtrate or corregidor. The magiſtracy, or corporation, as in all other cities of this country, conſiſts of regidores, who are perſons of diſtinction, with the corregidor at their head; and from them are annually choſen two ordinary alcades, for maintaining order in the city. Popayan is the ſee of a biſhop, and contains ſeveral convents and a univerſity. The inhabitants are about 25,000. It is 190 miles NNE. of Quito.

POPE, DOMINIONS OF THE, or the ECCLESIASTICAL STATE, a country of Italy, bounded on the N. by the territories of Venice, on the E. by the Adriatic, on the SE. by the kingdom of Naples; and on the S. and SW. by the Mediterranean, Tuſcany, and Modena; extending from SW. to NE. 240 miles, and about 60 in its mean breadth. It is divided into the following provinces: the Campagna of Rome; St. Peter's Patrimony; Umbria, or Spoleto; Ancona; Urbino; Romagna; the Bologneſe; the Ferrareſe; the Orvietan; Sabina; duchy of Caſtro; county of Caſtello; and territory of Perugia. Some authors have obſerved, that conſidering the pope's dominions generally conſiſt of a fertile and excellent ſoil; that his harbours, both on the Gulf of Venice and the Mediterranean, are advantageouſly ſituated for trade; that he receives conſiderable ſums from Spain, Germany, &c. which might be ſuppoſed to be no ſmall eaſe to his ſubjects; that his country is viſited by foreigners of diſtinction, who cauſe much wealth to circulate; the pontifical government ſeems well calculated for happineſs, and the country might be ſuppoſed to be very flouriſhing. But the very reverſe of this is the caſe. The country is ill cultivated, and thin of inhabitants, the Bologneſe alone excepted. Trade and manufactures are but little encouraged; and were it not for the fertility of the ſoil, which furniſhes the inhabitants with dates, figs, almonds, olives, and other fruits, which grow ſpontaneouſly, the indolence of the inhabitants is ſuch, that they would be abſolutely ſtarved. This indolence is not wonderful, ſince they know, that the more they acquire, the more will be demanded of them. Their numerous holidays are great impediments to the exertions of induſtry; and the number of young ſturdy beggars, who ſtroll about as pilgrims, inſtead of increaſing the common ſtock by their induſtry, lie as a dead weight on their fellow-ſubjects. Various other cauſes might be mentioned, as the multitude of hoſpitals and convents; the inconceivable wealth which lies uſeleſs in theſe convents, and in the churches; the inquiſition, and the rigour of the papal government. Hence it is, that in no part of Europe are to be found people more wretched than the pope's ſubjects. The pope, according to the ancient canon law, is the ſupreme, univerſal, and independent head of the church, and inveſted with ſovereignty over all Chriſtian ſovereigns, communities, and individuals. His arrogant pretenſions are ſo well known, that it is needleſs to expatiate upon them. The reformation begun by Luther diſpelled the deluſion in many parts of Europe; and the progreſs of learning, and the ſpirit of free enquiry, has enlightened many even of the Romiſh countries, where the papal political ſyſtem is treated with contempt. The origin of this monſtrous uſurpation, which for ages held the Chriſtian world in the moſt degrading ſubjection, belongs more properly to eccleſiaſtical hiſtory. The pope has the title of Holy Father, and Holineſs, and he is elected at every vacancy, from among the cardinals, each of whom is ſtyled his Eminence; and their number was fixed by Sixtus V. at 70, but this number is ſeldom complete. Every nation of the Roman Catholic religion has a cardinal for its protector. Beſide the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, the pope is poſſeſſed of the duchy of Benevento, in the kingdom of Naples, worth about 6000 crowns a year. The annual revenue of the pope is computed to be 8,700,000 ſcudi, or upward of 2,000,000l. ſterling. This pontiff bears arms, and, as an emblem of his paſtoral office, the crozier, or crook, forms a part of the inſignia. His military force is inconſiderable. His body-guard conſiſts of 40 Swiſs, 75 cuiraſſiers, and 75 light horſe. His naval force conſiſts of a few gallies, ſtationed at Civita Vecchia. Rome is the capital.

POPERINGUE, a town of Flanders county, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, 6 miles NNW. of Ypres.

Pope's, Herts, in the pariſh of Hatfield-Biſhop's. Pope's-Hall, Kent, near Hartlip. Pope's-Hole, Surry, on the river Wey, in Frenſham pariſh. Popball, Suſſex, W. of Haſlemere. Popham, Hampſhire, between Baſingſtoke and Oldſtoke. Poplar, Middleſex, ſo called from the trees of that name with which it once abounded, is ſituated on the Thames, E. of Limehouſe, in the pariſh of Stepney. It contains upwards of 1000 houſes.

POPO, or PAPA, a territory of Guinea, on the Slave Coaſt, about 8 leagues in extent. The ſoil is flat and ſandy, without either hills or trees, and the inhabitants have ſcarce any houſes to dwell in, beſide the king's village, which is ſituated in an iſland in the midſt of a river. Their chief trade is in ſlaves.

Poppleton, Upper and Nether, York. E. of Heſley-Moor. Popſhall, Kent, near Coldred.

PORCAH, a Dutch town of Travancore, in Hindooſtan, ſituated on the coaſt of Malabar, 75 miles NW. of Travancore.

PORCO, a town and juriſdiction of La Plata, in S. America, ſituated on the W. of Potoſi, and extending about 20 leagues. Here is the mountain of Porco, from whoſe mine the Yncas extracted all the ſilver for their expences and ornaments; it was accordingly the firſt worked by the Spaniards after the conqueſt. It is about 25 leagues diſtant from the city of La Plata.

Porkellys, Cornwall, W. of Penryn. Porkington, Shropſ. NW. of Oſweſtry. Pork, Old, Durham, N. of Biſhop-Auckland. Porkthorp, York ſhire, W. of Kilham. Porlait, or Porloyd, a river in Carnarvonſ. Porland, alias Poringland, Great and Little, S. of Norwich.

PORLOCK, a town in Somerſetſhire, with a quay and ſmall pier, and a few veſſels uſually employed in fetching coals and lime from Wales. In the centre of the bay is a decoy for catching wild-fowl. It is ſeated on the Briſtol Channel, at the bottom

ottom of a commodious bay, 14 miles l. by W. of Dulverton, and 167 W. of ondon. At preſent there are only three narkets in a year, viz. on Thurſday be- ore May 12th, Thurſday before October th, and Thurſday before November 12th; ut formerly a market was held here eve- y Thurſday.

PORRENTRUI, a neat and populous own of Germany, in the circle of the Jpper Rhine, capital of the dominions of he biſhop of Baſle, and the principal lace of his reſidence. The epiſcopal alace (which has been lately repaired nd augmented) ſtands upon an eminence verlooking the town. It is 22 miles NW. of Baſle.

PORSELON, or PORSELOUC, a rich nd commercial town of Siam, ſurround- d with baſtions, conſtructed by ſome French engineers. It is ſituated on a arge river which runs into the Gulph of iam, in lat. 17. 48. N. and lon. 100. 49. E.

Porſton, Dorſetſhire, between Cerne-Abbey and Dorcheſter.

Port, in Donegal, Ulſter.

PORTADOWN, a ſtown in Armagh, Ulſter, where the linen manufacture is carried on pretty extenſively. It is pleaſantly ſituated on the river Bann, into which the canal of Newry falls within a mile of this place 65 miles from Dublin.

Port Aethwy, Angleſea, the moſt general ferry into the iſland, where there is annually a paſſage of cattle of from 12 to about 15,000 heads, excluſive of multitudes of ſheep and hogs. The remaining ſtock of cattle in the iſland is computed at 80,000. In 1770, upwards of 90,000 buſhels of corn were exported from this ferry.

*PORTAFERRY, a town of Down, in Ulſter. Heretofore a pretty briſk trade was carried on in this place, and between 30 and 40 veſſels belonged to its port. From the high lands about Portaferry there are very fine proſpects over the whole lake of Strangford, the circumjacent country, the ſea, and the Iſle of Man. It is ſeated on the rapid ferry of Strangford, 80 miles from Dublin.

PORTALEGRA, a town of Alentejo, 30 miles NNW. of Elvas, and 90 NNE. of Liſbon.

*PORTARLINGTON, a town partly in King's and partly in Queen's County, Leinſter, pleaſantly ſeated on the river Barrow, 36 miles SW. of Dublin.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, a ſea port of St. Domingo, ſituated on the W. coaſt, in a country producing cotton, indigo, ſugar, and coffee. It was taken by the Engliſh in 1794. Lat. 18. 40. N. lon. 72. 10. W.

Portberry, Kent, in the pariſh of Boughton Aluph. Portbury, Somerſetſ. SW. of Briſtol. Portcheſter, Hants, at the upper end of the harbour of Portſmouth, between Fareham and Portſea Iſland. Port Chapel, Cheſhire, NE. of Macclesfield. Port Curno, a little cove at the Land's-End.

Port Dandy, ſituated in one of the Copland Iſlands, in Down, Ulſter.

Port-Elliot, Cornwall, SE. of Leſkard. Portenſcale, Cumberl. between the Lakes of Keſwick and Baſſingthwaite, on the S. ſide of the Derwent. Porters, Eſſex, near the Thames, NE. of Leigh. Porters, Eſſex, near Bradfield Magna. Porters, Eſſex, NE. of Barking. Porteſton, Devonſhire, NW. of Modberry. Portgate, Northumberland, NE. of Hexham.

PORT GLASGOW. See GLASGOW PORT.

Port-Glenone, in Antrim, Ulſter, 105 miles from Dublin. It is pleaſantly ſeated on the river Bann, over which there is a bridge at the end of the town, which unites the counties of Antrim and Derry.

Porthilly, Cornwall, a fiſhing harbour on the E. ſide of Padſtow-Haven. Betwixt this and Portkern, there is a great cave under a mountainous rock, through which, it is ſaid, the ſea ebbs and flows near half a mile in length. Porthilly, Cornwall, at the mouth of Trewardreth Bay. Porthsini-kraw, Monmouthſhire, between Caerleon-Bridge and Chriſtchurch.

PORT HUNTER BAY, a bay in the Duke of York's Iſland.

PORTICI, a town and royal palace of Lavora, in Naples, 2 miles E. of the capital, in a charming ſituation on the ſea-ſide. It is enriched with a vaſt number of fine ſtatues, and other remains of antiquity, taken out of the ruins of Herculaneum and Pompeia.

Portington, Yorkſhire, NE. of Howden. Portinſhal, Cumb. in the pariſh of Kirkbridge. Portiſſick-Haven, Cornw. NE. of Padſtow Haven. Portkern, or Portquin, Cornwall, a fiſhing cove E. of Portiſſick.

PORTLAND, a peninſula in Dorſetſhire, 3 miles S. of Weymouth, nearly 7 miles round, and exceedingly ſtrong both by nature and art. It is ſurrounded by inacceſſible rocks, except at the landing place, where there is a ſtrong caſtle, called Portland Caſtle, built by King Henry VIII. There is but one church in the iſland, and that ſtands ſo near the ſea, that it is often in danger from it. The whole peninſula is little more than one continued rock of white free-ſtone, about 9000 tons of which are exported annually. It was firſt brought into repute in the reign of James I. and is now uſed in London, Dublin, and other places, for building the fineſt ſtructures. The inhabitants are about 1300.

PORTLAND, a ſea port of N. America, capital of Cumberland county, in the province of Main. It is ſeated on a peninſula, on which formerly ſtood part of Falmouth, and has an excellent harbour.

PORTLAND ISLANDS, a cluſter of iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean. They are low, and covered with wood; the centre one in lat. 2. 38. S. lon. 149. 8. E.

Portlecomb, Devonſ. joins to S. Pole.

Portlevan, Cornwall, S. of Breage.

Portlidge, or Poderidge, Devonſ. E. of Hartland Point.

PORTLOCK. See PORLOCK.

PORT L'ORIENT. See ORIENT.

PORT LOUIS, a town in the dept. of Morbihan, with a good harbour, which is a ſtation for part of the navy, and the Eaſt-India Company's ſhips belonging to France. It is ſeated at the mouth of the river Blavet, 3 miles S. of L'Orient.

PORT LOUIS, a French fortreſs on the SW. coaſt of St. Domingo; and a ſea-port on the W. coaſt of Guadaloupe.

PORT LOUIS. See FRANCE, ISLE OF.

Portluny, Cornwall, E. of Gwindreth Bay.

PORT-MAHON, a ſea-port town on the SE. coaſt of the iſland of Minorca, built originally by Mago, the Carthaginian. The town is not large, but commercial and rich, with narrow, unpaved ſtreets; and the harbour, &c. is one of the beſt in the Mediterranean. Lat. 39. 52. N. lon. 4. 30. E.

Port-Ninian, one of the Copland Iſles, in Down, Ulſter.

PORTO. See OPORTO.

PORTO-BELLO, a ſea-port town of Panama, with houſes moſtly built of wood, but, in ſome, the firſt ſtory is of ſtone, and the remainder of wood. It is a very unhealthy place, and is inhabited chiefly by mulattoes. It conſiſts of one principal ſtreet, with others croſſing it; it has alſo two ſquares, a great church, and two convents. At the time of the great fair, however, it is one of the moſt populous places in the world, the merchants often paying 1000 crowns for lodging in a middling chamber, with a cloſet, during the fair, and four, five, or ſix thouſand, for a lodging in larger houſes. Columbus diſcovered the harbour in 1502, and, from its extent, depth, and ſecurity, named it Porto-Bello, or the Fair Harbour. Its mouth is well defended by Fort St. Philip, or Iron Caſtle; and nearer the town is another large caſtle, and a ſmall fort. All theſe were partly demoliſhed, and the town was taken by Admiral Vernon, with only ſix ſhips of war, in 1739. It is ſituated on the northern coaſt of the iſthmus of Darien, 60 miles N. of Panama. Lat. 9. 33. N. lon 79. 45. W.

PORTO-CAVALLO, a ſea-port of Terra Firma, on the Caracca's coaſt. Lon. 64. 30. W.

PORTO-FARINA, a ſea-port of Tunis.

PORTO-FARRAIO, a very ſtrong ſea-port town of the Iſle of Elba, with a good citadel. It is ſeated on a long, high, ſteep point of land, to the W. of the bay of the ſame name, which is defended by two forts. Lat. 42. 53. N. lon. 10. 38. E.

PORTO GALLETO, a ſea-port of Spain, in the Bay of Biſcay, 8 miles N. of Bilboa.

PORTO-GRUARO, a town of Friuli.

PORT-JACKSON. See JACKSON, PORT.

Portskewet, Monm. SE. of Chepſtow.

PORTO-LONGONE, a ſmall, but ſtrong ſea-port town, on the SE. coaſt of the Iſle of Elba, with a good harbour, and a fortreſs built upon a rock, almoſt inacceſſible. The king of Naples puts a garriſon here, though the place belongs to the prince of Piombino. It is 2 miles SE. of Porto Ferraio.

Porton, Wilts, between Newton-Tony and Saliſbury. Porton, N. and S. Dorſet. near Poorſtock.

PORTO-PEDRO, a ſea-port of Majorca.

PORTO-PRAYA, a town on the E. ſide of St. Jago, one of the Cape de Verd iſlands, ſituated on a ſharp rock, in a bay of the ſame name. Here is a good harbour, ſeldom deſtitute of a conſiderable number of foreign ſhipping. The outward-bound Guinea and India ſhips, whether Engliſh, French, or Dutch, generally touch here for water and refreſhments, but few of them call on their return to Europe. While the mariners and paſſengers are on ſhore, the whole coaſt reſembles a fair, every place being filled with hogs, bullocks, fowls, goats, figs, plantains, and cocoa-nuts, which the natives exchange for ſhirts, drawers, handkerchiefs, breeches, hats, waiſtcoats, and all manner of clothing. There is a fort on the ſum-mit

mit of a hill, that entirely commands the harbour, which, were it properly mounted with cannon, and ſufficiently garriſoned, would be a place of great ſtrength. Lat. 14. 54. N. lon. 23. 37. W.

PORTO-RICO. See JUAN DE PUERTO-RICO.

PORTO-SANTO, an iſland of the Atlantic, on the coaſt of Africa, the leaſt of the Madeiras, not much exceeding 5 leagues in compaſs. It produces wheat and corn in abundance; it alſo breeds oxen, wild hogs, and rabbits in incredible numbers. The moſt valuable articles of commerce, however, are the gum, called dragon's blood, honey, wax, and fiſh. It has one good harbour, and good mooring in a bay, where ſhips going or returning from India, ſtop to refit and refreſh, which, indeed, is all the trade the inhabitants enjoy. Lat. 32. 58. N. lon. 16. 20. W.

PORTO-SEGURO, a government on the coaſt of Braſil, in the juriſdiction of Bahia. It is a fertile country, and the capital, of the ſame name, is built on the top of a rock, at the mouth of a river, with a ſafe and convenient harbour, in lat. 16. 45. S.

PORTO-VECCHIO, a ſea-port in a bay on the E. coaſt of Corſica. Lat. 41. 42. N.

PORTO VENERO, a ſea port of Genoa.

*PORT-PATRICK, a ſea-port of Scotland, in Wigtonſhire, confined by the ſea on one ſide, and on the other by overhanging rocks and hills. Formerly the harbour was a mere inlet between two ridges of rocks, which ran into the ſea, and was only fit for receiving flat-bottomed boats; but now there is one of the fineſt quays in Britain erected here, with a reflecting lighthouſe, and above a dozen trading veſſels, of from 40 to 60 tons burden, ſail and return regularly. A number of veſſels alſo come occaſionally from other ports. It is much noted for its ferry to Donaghadee, in Ireland, from which it is about 20 miles diſtant. It is computed that 11,000 head of cattle, and 2000 horſes are annually imported from Ireland to this place. Here are four elegant packet-boats for the conveyance of the mail and the accommodation of paſſengers; and the mail coaches now go regularly from London and Edinburgh to Port-Patrick on the one ſide, and between Dublin and Donaghadee on the other. The imports and exports have greatly increaſed of late years. The population of the pariſh amounts to upwards of 1000. It is about 107 miles SW. of Edinburgh, and 487 NW. of London.

Port-Raman, ſituated in one of the Copper Iſlands, in Down, Ulſter.

PORTREE, a town on the Iſland of Skye, one of the Scotch Hebrides. The inhabitants trade chiefly in black cattle, ſmall horſes, and kelp.

Port Renard, in Limerick, Munſter.

PORT-ROYAL, a ſea-port of Jamaica. It was once one of the fineſt and moſt flouriſhing ſea port towns in America, abounding in riches and trade, but on June 9, 1692, it was deſtroyed by a dreadful earthquake, which ſeemed to ſhake the very foundations of the iſland, and which buried nine-tenths of the town 8 fathoms under water; in 1702, it was laid in aſhes by a terrible fire; in 1722, it was reduced to a heap of rubbiſh, by one of the moſt dreadful hurricanes and inundations of the ſea ever known; and, in 1744, it again ſuffered greatly by a hurricane. Warned by theſe extraordinary calamities, which ſeemed to mark out this place as a ſpot devoted to deſtruction, the cuſtom-houſe and public offices were removed by an act of aſſembly, and no market ſuffered to be held here for the future. It contains, at preſent, about 200 houſes laid out in 3 handſome ſtreets, with ſeveral croſs lanes, a fine church, a navy-yard, an hoſpital, and barracks for a regiment of ſoldiers. It is built on a ſmall neck of land, which juts out ſeveral miles into the ſea, and is defended by a ſtrong fort, kept in good repair, which has a line of near 100 pieces of cannon. The harbour is one of the beſt in the world, and 1000 ſhips may ride therein, ſecure from every wind that can blow. It is 6 miles SE. of Spaniſh-Town, and as much by water, but 20 by land, SW. of Kingſton. Lat. 18. 0. N. lon. 76. 40. W.

PORT-ROYAL, an iſland on the coaſt of S. Carolina, the ſpace between which and the neighbouring continent, forms one of the moſt commodious harbours in thoſe parts. It is 12 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. The town on the N. ſhore is called Beaufort. Lat. 32. 24. N. lon. 80. 10. W.

PORT-ROYAL, in Nova-Scotia. See ANNAPOLIS.

PORT-SANDWICH, a harbour in the Iſland of Mallicollo, in the S. Sea.

Port St. Ann, in Down, Ulſter.

PORT ST. MARY'S, a ſea-port of Spain, in Andaluſia. The Engliſh made a deſcent here in 1702, with a deſign to beſiege Cadiz, but without ſucceſs. It is 10 miles NE. of Cadiz.

Portſdown, Hants, 4 miles from Portſmouth.

PORTSEA, an iſland of Hants, about 14 miles in circuit, between Portſmouth Harbour and Langſtone Harbour. It is a low tract, ſeparated from the main land by a ſhallow creek, over which is a bridge. At the SW. extremity of it is ſituated the town of Portſmouth; adjoining to which is the town of Portſea, built on Portſmouth Common, on condition, that if the enemy ſhould land, the houſes were to be thrown down without compenſation to the owners.

Portſham, Dorſetſhire, 2 miles from Abbotſbury. Portſholm, or Portmead, near Huntingdon, encompaſſed with the Ouſe. Portſlade, Suſſex, E. of New Shoreham.

Port Slaty, ſituated in one of the Copland iſlands, in Down, Ulſter.

* PORTSMOUTH, a town of Hampſhire, ſituated on the Iſland of Portſea. It was anciently defended by a wall of timber, covered with earth; a baſtion to the NE.; and two forts of hewn ſtone at the mouth of the harbour, begun by Edward IV. and augmented by Henry VII. Queen Elizabeth fortified it with new works. King Charles II. directed great alterations, eſtabliſhed new wet and dry docks, ſtorehouſes, rope-yards, &c. and raiſed ſeveral forts after the modern manner; which works were augmented in the reign of James II. Succeeding princes have made great additions ſince to their ſtrength, extent, and magnificence, ſo that it is now juſtly conſidered as the moſt regular fortreſs in Britain. Within theſe few years, government has bought more ground for additional works, and it may be made impregnable by land as well as ſea, ſince a ſhallow water may be brought quite round it. The leaſt number of men employed continually in the yard is 1000. The docks and yards reſemble diſtinct towns, &c. under a government ſeparate from the garriſon. Here is alſo a fine arſenal for laying up the cannon. The harbour is one of the fineſt in the world, as there is water ſufficient for the largeſt ſhips; and it is ſo very capacious, that the whole Engliſh navy may ride here in ſafety. The principal branch runs up to Fareham; a ſecond to Portcheſter; and a third to Portſea-Bridge. Beſides theſe branches, there are ſeveral rithes, or channels, where the ſmall men of war ride at their moorings. Oppoſite the town is the ſpacious road of Spithead, where the men of war anchor when prepared for actual ſervice. It has one church and two chapels, one in the garriſon, and one in a part of the town, called the Common, for the uſe of the dock. It is 20 miles SE. of Wincheſter, and 72 SW. of London. Lat. 50, 47. N. lon. 1. 1. W. Markets on Tueſday, Thurſday, and Saturday.

PORTSMOUTH, a town of N. America, the largeſt in the ſtate of New Hampſhire, ſituated at the mouth of Piſcataqua River. Its harbour, which is one of the fineſt on the continent, is well defended by nature both againſt ſtorms and an enemy, and it has a lighthouſe at the entrance. Alſo a town in Virginia, a town in N. Carolina, and a ſea port town on the W. coaſt of the iſland of Dominica, near the northern extremity.

PORTSOY, a handſome ſea-port of Banffſhire, about 6 miles N. of Cullen. It has ſeveral fiſhing and trading veſſels, with ſome manufactures of ſnuff and ſewing thread.

PORTUGAL, the moſt weſtern country of Europe, about 400 miles in length, and 130 in its mean breadth, bounded on the W. and S. by the Atlantic Ocean, and on the E. and N. by Spain. Though Spain and Portugal are in the ſame climate, yet the air of the latter is much more temperate than that of the former, on account of the neighbourhood of the ſea. Corn is not very plentiful in this country, becauſe the inhabitants do not attend much to huſbandry; for this reaſon they import Indian corn from Africa, which is made uſe of by the peaſants here inſtead of wheat. There is a great number of barren mountains; and yet they have plenty of olives, vineyards, oranges, lemons, nuts, almonds, figs, and raiſins. They have ſome horned cattle, whoſe fleſh is generally lean and dry. They alſo make a great deal of ſalt with the ſea-water, eſpecially in the Bay of St. Ubes, whence a great deal is exported. The Portugueſe ſhipping little frequent the other countries of Europe or the Levant, their voyages lying rather to Braſil, and their different colonies on the coaſt of Africa, from which laſt they chiefly import negroes, gold, and ivory. They receive from their foreign ſettlements ſugar, tobacco, rum, cotton, indigo, hides, Braſil and other woods for dying, and many excellent drugs. Beſide theſe, they import gold and ſilver, with diamonds and other precious ſtones from America. The annual produce of gold in Braſil, may be eſtimated, without exaggeration, at near two millions ſterling. The fleet which goes every year to Braſil, generally ſails and returns in 7 or 8 months.

months. They trade likewiſe to their Eaſt India ſettlements of Goa, Diu, and Macao; but this traffic, once ſo important and conſiderable, is now greatly declined. The horſes of Portugal were formerly in great eſteem, but the inhabitants are now o fond of mules, that horſes are ſcarce. Towards the frontiers of Spain there are mountains in which they formerly got gold and ſilver; and the river Tajo was anciently noted for its golden ſands; but ow the Portugueſe do not think them worth minding. There are alſo mines of ron, tin, lead, with ſome quarries of marble. The principal rivers are the Tajo, he Douro, the Guadiana, the Minho, he Mondego, and the Lima. Portugal is livided into ſix provinces, namely, Eſtramadura, Beira, Entre Minhoe Douro, Traos-Montes, Alentejo, and Algarva. The government is monarchical; but the royal uthority is bounded by the fundamental aws of the kingdom; for the ſovereign annot raiſe any more taxes than were ettled in 1674. Portugal was anciently alled Luſitania; but by a writing now xtant, dated 1069, it appears that the ame of Portugal was then uſed for the hole kingdom. It is probably derived rom a town on the river Douro, anciently called Cale, oppoſite to which the inabitants afterwards built another town, aming it Portucale, now the flouriſhing ity of Oporto. In Portugal are about 00 convents, moſtly very rich; it alſo ontains one patriarch, three archbiſhops, nd ten biſhops, beſides others in America, Africa, the Eaſt Indies, &c. The ortugueſe are indolent, and ſo fond of uxury, that they moſtly ſpend their wealth n the purchaſe of foreign merchandiſe. Liſbon is the capital.

Portumna, in Galway, Connaught, 74 miles from Dublin. It is ſeated on the iver Shannon, where it falls into Lough Derg.

Port-wood-Hall, Cheſhire, by Stockport. Poſcomb, between Thame and Watlington.

POSEGA, a town and county of Sclavonia.

Poſide, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Poſiers, Kent, near Borden. Poſlingford, Suffolk, N. of Clare.

POSNANIA, or POSEN, a town and palatinate of Great Poland, annexed to the Pruſſian dominions in 1773. It contains ſeveral churches and convents, and has a conſiderable trade with Germany, being a ſtaple town. The biſhop's ſee is the moſt ancient in Poland. It is ſeated on the river Warta, 27 miles W. of Gneſna, and 145 WNW. of Warſaw.

Poſterwood, or Poſtern, Derbyſ. near Belper. Poſt-Down, Hants. Poſt-Houſe, Yorkſ. N. of Wakefield. Poſtling, Kent, N. of Hithe. Poſtlip, Glouc. in Winchcombe pariſh. Poſton, Heref. near Peter-Church. Poſtwick, SE. of Norwich, on the Yare.

POTENZA, a town of Baſilicata, in Naples, built on the ruins of an ancient town, which was deſtroyed in the year 1250.

Poteſgrave, Bedfordſh. near Woburn. Potford, E. and W. Devonſ. near Hartland. Potheridge, Devonſhire, near Great Torrington. Potnol, Surry, near St. Ann's-Hill.

POTOMACK, a fine river of N. America, navigable near 300 miles. It riſes in the NW. part of Virginia, and ſeparates that ſtate from Maryland, through almoſt its whole courſe, till it enters the Cheſapeak, between Smith's Point and Point Look-out.

POTOSI, a town of S. America, in the juriſdiction of La Plata, and government of Buenos Ayres, containing about 60,000 Indians, and 10,000 Spaniards, many of whom are poſſeſſed of immenſe fortunes. There is the beſt ſilver-mine in all America, in a mountain in form of a ſugar-loaf, the colour of whoſe ſoil is of a reddiſh brown. Silver has been as common in this place as iron is in Europe; however, it is almoſt exhauſted; at leaſt they get but little from it, in compariſon of what they did formerly; and the mountain itſelf is ſaid to be little better than a ſhell. The country about this place is ſo naked and barren, that they are obliged to get their proviſions from the neighbouring provinces. It appears from the public accounts, that ſilver to the value of 9,282,382l. ſterling, has been annually taken from theſe mines. Here is always a great demand for European goods. It is ſeated at the bottom of the mountain of Potoſi, 170 miles SSE. of La Paz.

Potterels, Herts, near N. Mims. Pottern, Wilts, near Devizes. Potter-Newton, Yorkſ. N. of Leeds. Potters-Bar, Middleſex, 3 miles N. of Barnet. Potters-Brinton, Yorkſhire, E. of Sherborn. Potters-Crouch, Herts, SW. of St. Alban's. Potterſpery, Northamptonſ. NW. of Stoney-Stratford. Potters-Row, Eſſex, near Great Braxted. Potters-Row, Eſſex, near Harlow-Buſh and Park. Potterton, Yorkſ. near Abberforth. Pottoe, Yorkſ. N. Riding, near Wharlton-Caſtle. Potton, Lancaſhire, by the ſea, NW. of Lancaſter.

POTTON, a town of Bedfordſhire, well well watered and pleasantly situated, though in a sandy, barren soil, 12 miles E. of Bedford, and 48 N. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Pottrose, a river in Cumberland, that runs into the Irthing above Over Denton.

POTZDAM, a town in the Middle Marche of Brandenburg, Upper Saxony, partly rebuilt by the late king of Prussia, for the owners, with new, regular, and grand buildings, instead of the old houses which formerly stood there. The palace, or pleasure seat, of the king of Prussia, is very curious and magnificent, and built upon a beautiful spot. Here is also an important foundry for arms, and some manufactures of silk, velvet, and other stuffs. Its garrison is generally composed of the king's guards, both horse and foot, with other battalions. Potzdam is seated upon an island, about 10 miles in circumference, which is formed by the rivers Spree and Havel, 15 miles SW. of Berlin.

POUGHKEPPSIE, a town of N. America, capital of Duchess County, in the state of New York. It is situated on the E. side of Hudson's River, N. of Wappinger's Creek.

POUGUES, a village in the dept. of Nievres, noted for its mineral waters. It is 6 miles N. of Nievres.

Povington, Dorsetshire, W. of Corfe-Castle. Povington, Dorsets. W. Tineham parish, in Purbeck Isle; Luckford Lake rises near it.

Pouladuff, E. and W. in Cork, Munster, about a mile N. of Ross. Here are two remarkable great holes in the ground, about 80 yards deep, into which the sea flows by subterranean passages.

Poulshot, Wilts, by Devizes. Poulston-Bridge, Cornwall, on the Tamar, E. of Launceston.

POULTON, a town of Lancashire, commodiously situated for trade, near the mouth of the river Wyre, just by the Skippon which runs into it, and communicating also by a canal with all the late inland navigations, 18 miles SW. of Lancaster, and 231 NNW. of London. Market on Monday.

Poulton, S. of Chester. Poulton, Chesh. W. of Liverpool Haven. Poulton, Wilts, by Marlborough. Poulon Court, Glouc. near Awre. Poundhill, Surry, S. of Blechingley. Poundon, Bucks. in Twyford parish. Pounstock, NE. of Bottreaux-Castle. Pouppol, Isle of Wight, in E. Medina.

POURZAIN, a town in the depart. of Puy-de-Dome, 36 miles N. by E. of Clermont, and 190 S. of Paris.

Powder-Batch, Shropshire. Powderham-Castle, Devonshire, between Exmouth and Topsham; a noble seat, which, from the Belvidere, a building erected near it, exhibits a prospect, which, though it may be surpassed in greatness of extent, yet, for a command of objects, a full and uninterrupted view of beautiful scenery in the diversified country around it, is undoubtedly the first in the western counties.

Powerscourt, in Wicklow, Leinster, a romantic spot among the mountains, about 10 miles from Dublin, near the Dargle and Waterfall. Powerstown, in Kilkenny, Leinster.

Powick, three miles S. of Worcester. Powke-Hill, Staff. near Bentley. Powley, Westmorl. S. of Penrith. Powmall, Cheshire, SE. of Altringham. Powmethall, Essex, E. of Saffron-Walden. Pownsey, Sussex, near Buckstead. Pownsford, Somersets. NW. of Pitmister. Powsey, Cheshire, E. of Frodsham. Poxwell, Dorsets. by Weymouth. Poyle, Surry, E. of Farnham. Poyles, Kent, near Borden. Poynton, Linc. SE. of Fokingham.

PRABAT, a town of Asia, in Siam.

PRADES, a town in the depart. of the Eastern Pyrenees, seated on the river Tet, 22 miles WSW. of Perpignan.

PRAGILAS, a town of Piedmont.

PRAGUE, a city of Germany, in the circle of Schlan, capital of the kingdom of Bohemia. It comprehends three towns, the Old, the New, and the Little Town, and is about 15 miles in circumference, being built upon seven mountains. Here are 92 churches and chapels, with about 40 cloisters. The inhabitants are estimated at 83,000, of whom about 12,000 are Jews. The river Moldaw, or Muldaw, runs through the town, and separates the Old from the New. There is a handsome bridge of 18 arches over it, built with freestone, 1770 feet in length, and 35 in breadth, having a strong tower at each end. The Old Town is very populous; the houses are wholly built of stone, for the most part, three stories high, and the streets, in general, narrow. There are two large structures, one of which is the old palace, where the ancient kings resided. The finest ornament of this part is the university, frequented by a great number of students. The Jesuits had a magnificent college here; and it is here the Jews reside, where they have 9 synagogues. The New Town surrounds the Old, and contains fine structures, handsome gardens, and large streets. The little town was built on the spot where where there was a foreſt; and there is a poplar-tree yet ſtanding, which they affirm has grown there about 1000 years. The principal buildings are the Royal Caſtle, the Radſhin, and the Strawhouſe. The firſt of which contains a hall, 100 paces long, and 40 broad, without any pillar to ſupport the roof. The country round it is fertile and pleaſant. Prague was taken by ſtorm, by the French, under Marſhals Belleiſle and Broglio, in 1741, but they were ſoon cooped up by the Auſtrian forces, and after enduring great hardſhips from famine, and making a brave defence, they partly found means to eſcape, and partly obtained a free retreat. In 1744, the Pruſſians made themſelves maſters of this capital, but quitted it again the ſame year. They beſieged it again in 1757, but without ſucceſs. It is 175 miles SSE. of Dreſden, 158 SSE. of Berlin, and 235 NNW. of Vienna. Lat. 50. 5. N. lon. 14. 50. E.

PRANDNITZ, a town of Bohemia.

PRATO, a town of Italy, in Tuſcany.

PRATOLINO, a palace in Tuſcany, with fine gardens, grottos, and waterworks.

PRAYA, a ſea-port town of the iſland of Tercera, containing a church, 4 convents, 3 hoſpitals, and about 3000 inhabitants. It is defended by walls and fortifications.

PRECOB, or PEREKOP, a town of the Ruſſian empire, in the province of Taurida, or Crim Tartary; ſeated on the iſthmus that joins that peninſula to the continent.

PRECOPIA, a town of Servia, formerly the capital of Dardania.

Predannor-Point, Cornwall. N. of the Lizard. Prees, Shropſ. near Whitchurch. Pree Wood, Hertfordſ. W. of St. Alban's. Pregeer, Cornwall, near Lawhitton.

PREGEL, a river of Pruſſia, which runs into the Friſche Haffe, below Konigſberg.

PREGNITZ, a town of Culmbach, in Franconia, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, which runs into the Rednitz, 10 miles NW. of Nuremburg.

Premadart, Cornw. N. of Weſtlow.

PREMESLAW, a town in Auſtrian Poland, 20 miles ESE. of Lemburg.

Prendick, Northumberl. near Alnham. Prene, Shropſhire, S. of Acton-Burnel-Caſtle.

PRENSLOW, an independent town of the Ucker Marche, in Brandenburg, capital of the country, ſeated on the lake and river Ucker. It is noted for its trade in corn, cattle, and tobacco, and alſo for its manufacture of cloth.

Prenton, Cheſhire, near the Bebingtons, in Wirral.

PRESBURG, or POSEN, a free and royal city, capital of Lower Hungary; like Vienna, it has ſuburbs much larger, and more magnificent than itſelf. In this city the ſtates of Hungary have held their aſſemblies, ſince 1723, and in the cathedral the ſovereign is crowned. In the caſtle, which is a grand Gothic ſtructure, are depoſited the regalia of Hungary, conſiſting of the crown and ſceptre of Stephen, their firſt king. The view from this caſtle is very extenſive, commanding the vaſt and fertile plains of Hungary. The Lutherans form a church here. Preſburg is pleaſantly ſeated at the foot of a mountain, on the Danube, 32 miles ESE. of Vienna. Lat. 48. 14. N. lon. 17. 11. E.

Preſbury, Glouceſterſhire, 2 miles N. of Cheltenham. It has a medicinal ſpring ſimilar to that of Cheltenham.

*PRESCOT, a pretty large, but not populous town of Lancaſhire, 8 miles E. of Liverpool, and 195 NNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Preſcot, Glouceſterſhire, 2 miles from Winchcomb.

PRESENZANO, a town of Lavora, Naples.

Preſhoe, Hants, N. of Biſhop's Waltham. Preſhut, Wiltſhire, on the Kennet, near Selkley.

PRESIDII (STATO DIGLI) a ſmall diſtrict of Tuſcany, ſubject to Naples. Orbitello is the capital.

PRESOVIA, a town of Little Poland, ſeated on the Viſtula, 20 miles E. of Cracow.

Preſſan, Northumberl. by Learmouth. Preſtbury, Cheſhire, by Macclesfield.

*PRESTEIGN, a town of Radnorſhire, ſeated near the ſource of the Lug, in a rich valley. It is the handſomeſt, and beſt built town in the county, with paved, regular ſtreets: and here the aſſizes are held, and the county goal is kept. The market is remarkable for barley, of which they make a great deal of malt. It is 36 miles WNW. of Worceſter, 149 NW. of London. Market on Saturday. A noted fair on St. Andrew's day, O. S.

Preſtend, Oxf. near Benſington. Preſthope, Shropſ. S. of Wenlock. Preſtoke, Lanc. SE. of Bolton. Preſton, near Buckingham. Preſton, Cheſhire, NE. of Frodſham. Preſton, Devonſ. S. of Chudleigh. Preſton, Dorſetſ. E. of Winborn-Minſter. Preſton, Dorſetſ. near the ſea, between Weymouth and Poxwell. Preſton, Durh. S. of Stockton. Preſton, Durh. on the Tees, N. of Yarum. Preſton, Glouceſ. 3 miles miles SW. of Ledbury. Preſton, Glouceſ. 2 miles from Cirencester. Preſton, Hants, NW. of Chriſtchurch. Preſton, Herefordſ. near Mockas. Preſton, Herefordſ. SE. of Ambreley. Preſton, Herts, NE. of King's Walden. Preſton, Kent, in Shoreham pariſh. Preſton, Kent, 1 mile S. of Feverſham.

* PRESTON, a large and handſome town in Lancaſhire, pleaſantly ſituated on an eminence near the river Ribble, which is navigable here for ſmall veſſels, and communicating alſo with all the late inland navigations. It has a large market-place, the ſtreets are open, large, and well paved, and the houſes are well built. Here is a court of chancery held, and the other officers of juſtice for the county palatine of Lancaſter. It is noted for the defeat of the adherents of the Stuarts here, by the royal forces, in 1715. It is 21 miles S. of Lancaſter, and 214 NNW. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Friday for proviſions, and a conſiderable one on Saturday for linen cloth and other commodities. Fairs, on March 27th for three days, Sept. 7th, and the firſt Saturday after Jan. 6th. Every 20th year, a guild or jubilee is held here, which begins in the latter end of Auguſt, and continues about a month. The laſt was held in 1782.

Preſton, Middl. near Kingſbury-Green. Preſton, 2 miles from Northamp. Preſton. Northumb. near Tinmouth and Alnwick. Preſton, Rutland, a mile N. of Uppingham. Preſton, Somerſ. SW. of Bath. Preſton, Suff. NE. of Lavenham. Preſton, Surry, near Banſtead. Preſton, Suſſex, N. of Brighthelmſtone. Preſton, Suſſex, NW. of Goodwood. Preſton-Bagot, Warwickſ. near Henly-in-Arden. Preſton-Barnaby, Somerſetſ. by Yeovil. Preſton-Boats, E. of Shrewſbury. Preſton Brockhurſt, Shropſhire, near Albrighton. Preſton-Condover, Hampſh. SW. of Baſingſtoke. Preſton Capes, Northampton, N. of Aſhby-Canons. Preſton-Chapel, Weſtmorl. SE. of Kendal. Preſton-Patrick, Weſtmorl. in Holme pariſh. Preſton-Scar, Yorkſ. near Middleham, remarkable for its extenſive proſpects. Preſton, Eaſt, Suſſex, NE. of Arundel-Haven. Preſton-Gaglin, Yorkſ. SW. of Pontefract. Preſton-Gobolds, Shropſ. W. of Shrewſbury. Preſton, Great, Yorkſ. SE. of Leeds. Preſton-Hall, Kent, by Aylesford. Preſton Howes, Suſſex, NW. of Pevenſey Haven. Preſton, Little, Yorkſhire, SE. of Leeds. Preſton, Long, Yorkſ. S of Settle. Preſton-Montford, Shropſ. W. of Shrewſbury. Preſton-on-Stour, Glouceſ. 9 miles from Campden.

Preſton-Pans, a village of Haddingtonſhire, in Scotland, noted for its ſalt-works, and for the defeat of the royal army, under Sir John Cope, by the adherents of the family of Stuart, under Prince Charles, in 1745. Preſton-Parva. Northamp. by Preſton-Capes. Preſtwich, Lanc. near Mancheſter. Preſtwick, Northumb. in the manor of Eland. Preſtwold, Leic. near Loughborough. Preſtwood, Staff. SW. of Aſhborn. Preſtwood, on the Smeſtal, a mile below King's Swinford. Pretons, Eſſex, near the Hanningfields. Preve Park, Hants, near Baſingſtoke.

PREVESA, a ſea-port of Turkey, in Europe, in Albania, anciently called Nicopolis, built by Auguſtus, after the battle of Actium. It has been held by the Venetians ſince 1684, and is ſeated on a mountain, on the Gulf of Larta, in lat. 39. 14. N.

PREUILLY, a town in the depart. of Indre and Loire, ſeated on the river Claiſe, near which there are mines of iron. It is 18 miles S. of Loches.

PRIAMAN, a Dutch ſettlement on the W. coaſt of Sumatra, a little S. of the equator.

Prickleball, Middleſex, between E. Barnet and Chipping-Barnet. Prickwillow, Camb. NE. of Ely, on the ſame river. Priddle, or Piddle, a river in Dorſetſhire, riſing near Alton, and falling into Poole-Haven, near the mouth of the Frome. Priddy, Somerſetſ. between Wells and Charter-Houſe. Prideaux, Great, Corn. near Padſtow. Prideaux, Hert, Corn. SW. of Leſtwithiel. Prieſt-Holm, a ſmall iſland near the NE. coaſt of the Iſle of Angleſea, 5 miles NE. from Beaumaris. Prieſthouſes, Norfolk, S. of Downham.

Prieſt's-Leap, in Cork, Munſter, a rugged and dangerous paſſage from the S. part of Bantry to the N. whence the road into the county of Kerry leads over Mangerton, the loftieſt mountain in Ireland.

Priglas, Kent, in Pembury pariſh. Prigney, Glouceſ. between Glouceſter and Painſwick.

PRIMCHALE, a town of Yorkſhire, near Knareſborough-Foreſt. Market diſuſed.

Primroſe-Hill, Middleſex, an eminence between Kilburn and Hampſtead, called alſo Greenbury-Hill.

PRINCE OF WALES, CAPE, the moſt weſtern extremity of all America. Lat. 65. 46. N. lon. 168. 5. W.

PRINCE OF WALES'S ISLANDS, a congeries of iſlands, ſuppoſed to extend from New Holland to New Guinea. They were diſcovered by Captain Cook.

PRINCE

PRINCE'S ISLAND, an iſland on the W. coaſt of Africa, 90 miles in circumference, diſcovered in 1471. The air is wholeſome, and the land fertile, in the various tropical productions. On the N. coaſt is a town, containing about 200 houſes, and a good harbour. It is ſubject to Portugal. Lat. 1. 49. N. lon. 6. 40. E.

PRINCE'S ISLAND, a ſmall iſland in the Straits of Sunda, near the NW. extremity of the Iſland of Java. It is very woody, and not much cleared. The inhabitants are Javaneſe, whoſe rajah is ſubject to the ſultan of Bantam; and their cuſtoms are ſimilar to thoſe of the natives about Batavia. It is viſited by European ſhips for wood, water, and turtle, which latter is got here in great abundance. The beſt anchoring place is in lat. 6. 41. S. lon. 105. 17. E.

Princetborp, Warwickſ. two miles S. of Wolſton, near Dunſmore-Heath.

PRINCETON, a village in the ſtate of New Jerſey, noted for a large college, a handſome ſtone edifice, founded in 1738, and called Naſſau Hall. It is 52 miles from New York, and 48 from Philadelphia.

PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY'S ISLAND, an Iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, lying WNW. of Tench's Iſland. It is pretty high, and ſeems to be about 70 miles in circuit. It is well wooded, and there were a number of clear cultivated tracts, on which ſomething was growing that had the appearance of Indian corn, or ſugar-cane. Several large and well-conſtructed houſes were ſeen among the trees. This iſland has a luxuriant and picturеſque appearance, and is ſuppoſed to be fertile and well peopled. The natives were quite naked, and ſeem to be the ſame ſort of people of thoſe of the Tench's Iſland, and their canoes of the ſame conſtruction. It was diſcovered by Captains Ball and King in 1790. A high mountain, riſing in the centre of it, was called Mount Philip. Lat. 1. 32. S. lon. 149. 30. E.

PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY'S ISLAND, an Iſland of the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Wallis in 1767. Lat. 9 0. S. lon. 141. 6. 6. W.

PRINCE WILLIAM'S SOUND, an inlet on the NW. coaſt of America, diſcovered by Captain Cook in 1778. The men, women, and children, are here all clothed alike. Their ordinary dreſs is a ſort of looſe robe, which ſometimes reaches only to the knees, but generally down to the ancles. They are compoſed of the ſkins of various animals, and are commonly worn with the hairy ſide outward. The men often paint their faces of a black colour, and of a bright red, and ſometimes of a blueiſh or leaden hue; but not in any regular figure. The women puncture or ſtain the chin with black, that comes to a point in each of their cheeks. Their canoes are of two ſorts; the one large and open, the other ſmall and covered. The framing conſiſts of ſlender pieces of wood, and the outſide is compoſed of the ſkins of ſeals, or other ſea animals, ſtretched over the wood. Their weapons, and implements for hunting and fiſhing, are the ſame as thoſe uſed by the Eſquimaux. Our knowledge of the animals of this part of the continent is entirely derived from the ſkins that were brought by the natives for ſale. Theſe were principally of bears, common and pine martins, ſea-otters, ſeals, racoons, ſmall ermines, foxes, and the whitiſh cat, or lynx. The birds found here were the halcyon, or great king-fiſher, which had fine black colours; the white-headed eagle; the humming-bird; geeſe; ſmall ducks; and black ſea-pyes, with red bills, like thoſe they had ſeen at Van Diemen's Land and New Zealand. Few vegetables of any kind were obſerved here, and the trees that chiefly grew about the Sound were the Canadian ſpruce pine, ſome of which are of conſiderable ſize. Lat. 60. to 61. N. lon. 147. 0. W.

PRINCIPATO CITRA, a province of Naples, bounded on the N. by Lavora and Principato Ultra; on the E. by Baſilicata; and on the S. and W. by the Mediterranean; about 65 miles in length, and from 12 to 30 in breadth. The ſoil is fertile in wine, corn, oil, ſaffron, and ſilk; and they have ſeveral mineral ſprings. The principal towns are Salerno, Amalfi, and Sorrento.

PRINCIPATO ULTRA, a province of Naples, bounded on the N. by Lavora and Moliſo; on the E. by Baſilicata and Capitanata; on the S. by Principato Citra; and on the W. by Lavora; about 50 miles in extent from E. to W. and 30 from N. to S. The principal towns are Benevento, Avelino, and Conza.

Prinknaſh, 3 miles SE. of Glouceſter. Prior's-Court, Worceſterſ. near Powick. Prior's-Hall, Eſſex, in Widdington pariſh. Prior's-Leigh, Shropſ. SE. of Wellington. Priory, Herts, SE. of Hitchin. Priory, Kent near Bilſington. Priſall, Lancaſ. NW. of Kirkham. Priſco, Lancaſhire, W. of Garſtang. Priſley-Hill, Rutlandſhire, near Thorp.

PRISRENDI, a town of Servia.

PRISTINA, a large town of Servia.

Priſton, Yorkſhire, NW. of Midlam.

Priſweſton,

Priſweſton, Shropſhire, near Chirbury. Prittlewell, Eſſex, S. of Rochford.

PRIVAS, a town in the dept. of Ardeche, ſeated near the confluence of 3 ſmall rivers, 16 miles N. of Viviers.

Probus, Cornwall, NE. of Truro.

PROCIDA, an iſland in the Gulf of Naples, ſix miles in circumference. It abounds in pheaſants and partridges, and yields plenty of fruits and wine. The inhabitants are about 4000. The capital, of the ſame name, is ſituated on the S. coaſt, on a high craggy rock, by the ſea ſide.

PROM, a town of Ava, ſituated on the river Ava, in lat. 23. N.

Prombill, or Brombill, Kent and Suſſex, 3 miles SW. of Lyd. Proſpect-Houſe, Eſſex, near Woodford-Row. Proſpect-Place, Surry, between Wimbledon and Kingſton, 8 miles from London.

Proſpect-Hall, in Waterford, Munſter, near the Ferry point of Youghall. Proſpect-Hall, in Kerry, Munſter, by the Lake of Killarney. Proſpect-Mount, in Kildare Leinſter, near Rathangan, on the oppoſite ſide of the canal. Proſperous, in Kildare, Leinſter, 16 miles from Dublin. It has a manufacture of cotton.

PROVENCE, a ci-devant province of France, on the Mediterranean, having Piedmont on the E.; and the Rhone, and the country of Venaiſſin, on the W. The air is very different; for near the Alps it is cold, on the ſea-coaſt hot, and in the middle temperate. In that which was called Upper Provence, the ſoil is fertile in corn and paſtures: but in the lower, it is dry and ſandy. It produces, however, wine, oil, figs, almonds, prunes, and pomegranates, eſpecially along the ſea-coaſt from Toulon to Nice. There are orange and citron trees in the open fields; and many medicinal plants, mineral-waters, and mines of ſeveral kinds. It now forms the departments of Var, the Lower Alps, and the Mouths of the Rhone.

PROVIDENCE, the moſt flouriſhing town in the ſtate of Rhode Iſland, has a conſiderable manufactory of cloth, and a large foreign and domeſtic trade. It contains 700 houſes, and upwards of 4300 inhabitants. Here is a noble college called Rhode Iſland College; alſo an elegant church for the Baptiſts; two for the Congregationaliſts; with others for other denominations. Providence is ſeated on both ſides of the river of the ſame name, about 36 miles SW. of Boſton.

PROVIDENCE, a river of N. America, which riſes in Maſſachuſets, and falls into Briſtol Bay a little below the town of Providence, in Rhode Iſland.

PROVIDENCE, one of the Bahama Iſlands, in the Atlantic Ocean, the ſecond in point of ſize, but the beſt and moſt improved of thoſe that are planted by the Engliſh. They import proviſions from Carolina, which they lay up in ſtore-houſes, for the uſe of ſuch ſhips as put in here. The iſland produces peas, Indian wheat, ſalt, and Braſiletto wood: and fiſh of various kinds are found in the greateſt plenty on the coaſt. It is about 30 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. Lat. 25. 2. N. lon. 77. 20. W.

PROVIDENCE, a ſmall iſland in the Atlantic Ocean, which the Engliſh buccaneers formerly fortified, and defended againſt the Spaniſh guarda coſtas. It is about 150 miles E. of the Moſquito ſhore. Lat. 13. 25. N. lon. 80. 44. W.

PROVINS, a town in the depart. of Seine and Marne, famous for its mineral-waters, and excellent conſerves of roſes. It was of note in the time of Charlemagne; but though large, it is not populous. It is 47 miles SE. of Paris.

PRUCK, a town of Stiria.

Pruddo-Caſtle, Northumb. near the Tyne, 8 miles W. of Newcaſtle. Praſted, Norfolk, NW. of Hickling.

PRUSSIA, a large country of Europe, bounded on the N. by the Baltic and Samogitia, on the E. by Lithuania, on the S. by Poland, and on the W. by Pomerelia; about 180 miles in length, and near 100 in breadth, where broadeſt. It is a very fertile country, producing a great deal of flax, hemp, and corn; and the ſea, rivers, and lakes ſupply them with great plenty of fiſh. Pruſſia alſo abounds with flocks, and herds, and fine horſes. Its chief commodities are wool, honey, wax, pitch, pit-coal, hops, and buck wheat. Here is plenty of game, as white and common hares, elks, deer, roebucks, and wild boars; but the foreſts are, at the ſame time, infeſted with lynxes, wolves, foxes, bears, wild aſſes, and uri, a ſpecies of buffalo. The hides of theſe laſt, which are extremely thick and ſtrong, are ſold to foreigners at a great price. Here is neither ſalt, wine, nor minerals, but yellow amber (for the ſake of procuring which the Romans penetrated into and ſubdued this country) is found in great quantities on the Samland ſhore. There are ſeveral large lakes, beſides the rivers Viſtula, Pregel, Memel, &c. About 4 months of the year are temperate, warm, and pleaſant; but the autumns are often wet, and the air in winter is cold, piercing, and ſevere. The manufactures in glaſs, linen, cloth, metals, &c. are rapidly increaſing. The inhabitants

inhabitants are a mixture of native Pruſſians, (who appear to be genuine Germans) Lithuanians, and Poles. The Teutonic order had ſovereignty in Pruſſia about 300 years; after which Pruſſia was added to the dominion of the electoral houſe of Brandenburg, and in 1704 it was raiſed to a kingdom, by the Elector Frederick, who, with his own hands, put the crown on his head, and on that of his conſort, at Konigſberg. Pruſſia is divided into three parts, Samland, Natangen, and Oberland. Konigſberg is the capital.

PRUTH, a river which riſes in Red Ruſſia, in the Carpathian Mountains, r in the SW. part of the new kingdom of Galicia, croſſes part of Lemburg, afterard runs through all Moldavia, and alls into the Danube near Renay, in Beſrabia.

PRZEMISLAU. See PREMESLAW.

PRZEMYSL, a town of Lemburg, Poand, 37 miles W. of Lemburg.

PSKOF, or PLESKOF, a government nd large town of Ruſſia. The governent, once a republic, was formerly inluded in that of Novogorod. The town ſ ſeated on the river Velika, at the exremity of the Lake Piepus, 80 miles S. f Narva, and 136 SSW. of Peterſburgh.

Publow, Somerſetſ. NE. of Pensford. ckeridge, Herts, N. of Ware. Puckton, Somerſ. NE. of Ilminſter. Puckburch, Glouceſ. 7 miles E. of Briſtol. t was once the reſidence of ſome of the eſt Saxon kings, of whoſe great buildgs ſome ruins are yet viſible. Here ing Edmund was ſtabbed with a dagger y an outlawed robber. Puckſton, Soerſetſhire, W. of Wrinton.

PUDDAR, or PADDAR, a river of Hinoſtan, which riſes in the SE. part of gimere, and dividing the provinces of utch, and Guzerat, falls into the Gulf of utch, 30 miles S. of Janagur.

Pudding-Norton, Norfolk, SE. of Fakenham. Puddington, Bedfordſ. 4 miles rom Harold. Puddington, on the Dee, W. of Cheſter. Puddington, Devonſ. ear Cruwys-Morchard. Puddlebridge, Devonſ. in Colliton pariſh. Puddlebinton, Dorſetſ. SE. of Cerne Abbey. Puddleſton, Heref. E. of Leominſter. Puddleton, 5 miles NE. of Dorcheſter. Puddle Trenchard, Dorſet. 2 miles NE. of Cerne Abbey. Pudlicot, Oxfordſhire, near Chadlington. Pudſey, Eſſex, in Canewden pariſh. Pudſey, Yorkſhire, W, of Leeds.

PUEBLA, a town of Eſtramadura; a town of Galicia; and a town of Grenada; all in Spain.

PUELA-DE-LOS-ANGELOS, a town of Mexico, capital of the province of Tlaſcala, 60 miles ESE. of Mexico.

PUEBLO NUEVO, a town of Veragua, ſeated on a bay of the S. Sea, 200 miles S. by W. of Panama.

PUENTE-DEL-REYNA, a town of Navarre, 9 miles SSW. of Pampeluna.

PUENTE-DE-ARCOBISBO, a town of New Caſtile, ſeated on the river Tajo, 50 miles WSW. of Toledo.

PUERTO BELLO, PUERTO RICO, &c. See PORTO BELLO, PORTO RICO, &c. and for all names, which, in the Spaniſh language, ſignify a port, ſee PORTO; for although that word is not Spaniſh, but Italian, the Engliſh have adopted it both in writing and pronunciation.

PUFFIN ISLAND, on the coaſt of Kerry, in Munſter, 4 miles S. of Brea-Head, is ſteep and craggy, and has a remarkable opening or gap in its higheſt part. It is much frequented by the fowl called puffins, and is well ſtocked with rabbits.

PUGLIA, LA, the modern name of the ancient Apulia, containing the three provinces of Capitanata, Bari, and Otranto, on the N. and NE. ſide of the kingdom of Naples.

Pulborough, Suſſex, NE. of Hardham. Pulford, S. of Cheſter, on the river Alen. Pulham E. and W. Dorſetſ. NE. of Buckland Abbas. Pulham, St. Mary, Norfolk, N. of Harleſton. Pull, Somerſetſ. near Sedgmore. Pully, S. of Shrewſbury. Pullox-Hill, Bedfordſhire, near Silſoe.

PULO-CANTON, an iſland of Cochin-China, in lat. 15. 10. N. lon. 109. 35. E.

PULO-CONDORE. See CONDORE.

PULO-DINNING, a ſmall Dutch E. India iſland, near the peninſula of Malacca.

PULO-TIMOAN, a pretty large iſland on the E. coaſt of Malacca. It is mountainous and woody, but produces rice, and the cabbage and cocoa-nut trees, in great plenty. Ships often touch here for taking in wood, water, and other refreſhments, and there is great plenty of green turtles. Commodore Byron land here in 1765. Lat. 3. 12. N. lon. 104. 25. E.

PULO-WAY, an iſland near Sumatra, peopled by men baniſhed from Achen, from which it is diſtant about 9 leagues. Lat. 5. 50. N. lon. 95. 39. E.

Pulſath, Cornw. SW. of Jacobſtow.

Pulters, Herts, near Hinxworth. Pulton, Glouceſterſhire, N. of Cricklade.

PULTOWA, or POLTOWA, an indifferently built town of Ruſſia, in the government of Ecaterinoſlay, rendered famous by the deciſive battle which was fought here, in 1709, between the Czar Peter Peter I. and Charles XII. king of Sweden, wherein the latter was totally defeated, wounded, and obliged to fly into Turkey: 8000 men were left dead on the field, and the remaining 16,000 compelled to ſurrender at diſcretion. It is 100 miles SW. of Belgorod. Lat. 49. 26. N. lon. 34. 25. E.

PULTUSH, a town of Maſovia, in Poland.

Pulweſton, Northumberl. near Wark-Caſtle.

PUNA, an iſland in the South Sea, about ſixty miles in circumference, and containing about three hundred inhabitants, chiefly Caſts and Spaniards. Its only town, which is of the ſame name, and conſiſts of about fifty houſes, under a lieutenant and a prieſt, is ſituated on the NE. coaſt, at the head of a harbour, where there is very good anchorage for large ſhips. This iſland lies at the entrance of the Bay of Guiaquil, 90 miles N. of Paira. Lat. 3. 17. S. lon. 81. 6. W.

Punchardin, Devonſ. NW. of Barnſtaple. Punchin End, Herts, between Hemſted and Berkhamſted. Punknoll, Dorſetſ. in Portiſham pariſh. Punknor, Dorſetſhire, by Abbotſbury. Punſburn, Herts, in Hatfield pariſh, near Cheſhunt-Common. Punſonby, or Ponſonby, Cumb. between Egremont and Ravenglaſs.

PUNTA-DEL-GUDA, the capital town of St. Michael, one of the Azores, with a harbour and citadel.

PURBECK, ISLE OF, a healthy tract of Dorſetſhire, with a deep clay ſoil, to the S. of Pool Bay; about 10 miles long, and 6 over. It is nearly inſulated by the ſea, the river Frome, and Luxford Lake, and has been long famous for its ſtone, which is in great demand for both paving and building. The principal quarries lie at its eaſtern extremity, near Swanwick, whence the ſtone is exported. It is of the calcareous kind, diſtinguiſhed into numerous ſorts, the fineſt of which take a poliſh, and deſerve the name of marble. Theſe are nearly black; and ſome abound in ſhells, and are uſed for chimney-pieces, hearths, &c. Tobacco-pipe clay is dug up in ſeveral parts of this iſland; the fineſt is near Corfe-Caſtle, of which much is exported, particularly for the Staffordſhire potteries. Purbeck contains 2 hundreds, 1 town, and 9 pariſhes.

Purbright, Surry, in Woking pariſh. Purfleet, Eſſex, on the Thames, 19 miles from London; has ſome very extenſive lime works, alſo a conſiderable public magazine for gunpowder, which is depoſited in ſeveral detached buildings that are all bomb-proof. Purford, Surry, near Byfleet and Newark, by the river Wey. In this pariſh is a lake, 2 miles about, called Sheer Water Lake. Purland, Somerſetſhire, near Hettercomb. Purleigh, Eſſex, N. of Cold-Norton. Purley, Berks, NW. of Reading.

PURRYSBURG, a town of S. Carolina, built and peopled by a colony of Swiſs from Neufchatel, under the conduct of a Monſieur Purry. It is ſeated on the river Savannah, 64 miles WSW. of Charleſton.

Purſer's-Croſs, Middleſ. in Fulham pariſh. Purſlow, Shropſ. near Clunbury. Purſton, Great and Little, Yorkſ. NW. of Pontefract. Purton, Purton-Hill, and Purton Stoke, Wiltſhire, near Cricklade and Wootton-Baſſet. Puſey, Berks, E. of Farringdon. Puſland, or Poſtlinch, Devonſ. near the mouth of the Yalme.

PUTALA, or PUTOLI, a mountain of Great Thibet. See LASSA.

Putley, Glouceſterſ. in the pariſh of Morton-Valence. Putley-Chapel, Herefd. near Marclay-Hills. Putlee, Glouceſterſ. in Standiſh pariſh. Putnam, Herts, 4 miles NW. of Tring. Putney, a large village of Surry, ſeated on the Thames, 5 miles WSW. of London. Puttenham, Surry, 3 miles NW. of Godalmin. Putteridge, or Poderick, Herts, 5 miles NNE of Dunſtable. Putton, Dorſetſhire, on the coaſt, between Fleet and Radipole. Putſwood, Kent, near Oſpringe.

PUY, LE, a populous town in the depart. of Upper Loire, ſeated on the mountain Anis, near the river Loire, 40 miles NNE. of Mende. It has manufactures of lace and ſilk ſtuffs.

PUY-CERDA, a conſiderable town of Spain, in Catalonia, capital of Cerdagne. It is 45 miles NW. of Girona.

PUY-DE-DOME, a depart. of France, part of the late Auvergne, and comprehending almoſt all Limagne, a territory about 12 leagues long, by 6 broad, one of the moſt pleaſant and fertile in France; in which are ſeen, under the ſame point of view, orchards, meadows, vineyards, and arable land, in a word, every kind of cultivation imaginable. The borders of this baſin, or circular plain, are mountainous, now covered with habitations, herds, and flocks; but once ſo many volcanoes which exhibited to the inſpection of the learned the moſt extraordinary phenomena. Clermont is the capital.

PUY-EN-ANJOU, a town in the depart of Maine and Loire, 10 miles SW. of Saumur, and 160 SW. of Paris.

PUY-LAURENS, a town in the dept. of Tarn, 8 miles SW. of Caſtres, and 23 E. of Toulouſe.

PUZZOLI, a celebrated, but now inconſiderable town of Italy, ſituated on the Bay of Naples. The temple of Jupiter Serapis in this town is accounted a very intereſting monument of antiquity; being quite different from the Roman and Greek temples, and built in the manner of the Aſiatics; "probably," ſays Dr. Moore, "by the Egyptian and Aſiatic merchants ſettled at Puzzoli, which was the great emporium of Italy, till the Romans built Oſtia and Antium." The ruins of Cicero's villa, near this place, are of ſuch extent, as to give a high idea of the wealth of this great orator.

PWLLHELLY, a large town in the S. part of Carnarvonſhire, ſeated on the ſea-ſide between two rivers, 6 miles E. of Newin, and 243 NW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Pyddington, Northamp. NW. of Oulney. Pykeden, Northumberl. in Mitford manor. Pyle, a river of Monmouthſ. which runs into the Olwy, 2 miles NE. of Uſk. Pyle, Cheſhire, in Delamere-Foreſt. Pyle, Cheſhire, near Delamere-Foreſt. Pymore, Dorſetſhire, a little N. of Bridport. Pynham, Suſſex, near Arundel.

PYRAMIDS OF EGYPT, ſtructures formerly counted one of the Seven Wonders of the World. Theſe ſurpriſing monuments of antiquity, which baffle the researches of the deepeſt antiquary, to fix with preciſion their origin, are built upon a rocky bottom, at the foot of the high mountains which run along the ancient courſe of the Nile, and ſeparate Egypt from Lybia. Various have been the conjectures how and when they were built, yet no two authors agree exactly about them; however, this is certain, that they are extremely ancient, and that there is no account in any author of credit, when or for what reaſon they were founded: moſt imagine they were deſigned for tombs, though there is no diſcoverable entrance into two of them. There are many of theſe edifices at a greater diſtance in the deſert, of which very little notice is taken by travellers. The principal pyramids are ESE. of Gize, a village on the weſtern ſhore of the Nile. There are 4 of them that deſerve the attention of the curious; for though there are 7 or 8 others in the neighbourhood, they are nothing in compariſon of the former: the two largeſt pyramids are 500 feet in perpendicular height. The plain they ſtand on is a continual rock, almoſt covered with a moving ſand, in which are great numbers of ſhells and petrified oyſters. The moſt northern of theſe great pyramids is the only one that is open; and thoſe who enter it, and clamber up to a ſort of room, find a tomb, or ſarcophagus, which ſhows by its dimenſions, that men were of the ſame ſize then as now. The external part is chiefly built of great ſquare ſtones, of an equal ſize, without either lime or cramps of any metal. This pyramid is three hours journey from Old Cairo, and the entrance into it is on the N. ſide. The opening leads ſucceſſively to five different paſſages, which, though running upward, downward, and horizontally, tend all toward the S. and terminate in two chambers, the one underneath, and the other in the centre of the pyramid. In the upper chamber is the ſarcophagus juſt mentioned; it is of granite, and if ſtruck with a key, ſounds almoſt like a bell. The aſcent to the top of the pyramid on the outſide is by ſteps, which are the height of each ſtone, the lowermoſt of which is 4 feet high, and 3 broad; but they were not originally deſigned for this purpoſe. The baſe at the N. ſide of it is 693 feet, and as the pyramid is exactly ſquare, the other ſides muſt be of the ſame length. If we imagine 4 equilateral triangles, mutually inclining till they all meet in a point at the top, we ſhall then have a true notion of the dimenſions and figure of this pyramid; the perimeter of each triangle comprehending 2079 feet, and the perimeter of the baſis 2772 feet. Whence the whole area of the baſe contains 480,049 ſquare feet, or 14 acres and ſomewhat more. However, the top does not end in a point, but in a little flat, or ſquare, where ſome imagine the Egyptian prieſts made their aſtronomical obſervations. One of the pyramids, about 150 feet high, is built with bricks of uncommon dimenſions, ſuppoſed by ſome to have been the work of the enſlaved Iſraelites; who, according to Joſephus, where obliged, under Pharaoh, to cut canals for the Nile, build walls, and erect pyramids.

PYRENEAN MOUNTAINS, or PYRENEES, mountains which divide France from Spain, and extend from the Mediterranean to the ocean, being about 212 miles in length. They have different names, according to the different places in which they ſtand. There are only 5 paſſages over them from one country to the other; the 3 principal of which are from St. Sebaſtian to St. Jean de Luz, from Pampeluna to St. Jean de Luz, and from Jonqueira to Perpignan. Theſe mountains yield great quantities of timber, with abundance of pitch and tar.

PYRENEES, EASTERN, a department of France, W. of the Mediterranean, and containing the late province of Rouſſillon. Although great part of it is mountainous, it is fertile; producing corn, excellent wines, olives, oranges, and leather of a ſuperior quality. Perpignan is the chief town.

PYRENEES, LOWER, a department of France, bounded on the S. by Spain, and on the W. by the Atlantic; it is compoſed of the provinces of Bearn, Navarre, and part of Gaſcony. Pau is the capital. See NAVARRE.

PYRENEES, UPPER, a department of France, bounded on the N. by the dept. of Gers, and on the E. by the dept. of Upper Garonne; it is compoſed chiefly of the late province of Bigorre. It produces excellent horſes and good partridges. Its valleys are very fertile; fur niſhing rye, millet, Spaniſh corn, an flax. The mountains have mines of lead iron, and copper, and quarries of ſtate fine marble and jaſper. Tarbes is th capital.

PYRMONT, a town and county o Weſtphalia. At a little diſtance fro it are mineral waters, of a vinous, aci taſte, well known throughout Europ and much frequented. It is 12 mil SW. of Hameln, and 40 SW. of Ha nover.

PYRNA, a town of Meiſſen, in Upp Saxony. Near it is a very fine quarry ſtone, which is tranſported to differe places by the river Elbe, on which it i ſeated, 10 miles SE. of Dreſden.

PYSECK, a town of Prachin, in Bo hemia.

Pyworthy, Devonſhire, near Houl worthy.

QUACKENBRUCK, a town of Weſtphalia, in Oſnaburg.

QUADAY, or CUADAC, a ſea-port of Aſia, in Tonquin, ſeated on a river of the ſame name.

QUADIN, a town in Upper Egypt, ſeated on the Nile, between Eſne and Dander. It is remarkable for a great number of valuable and ancient monuments.

Quadrage, Devonſhire, in the pariſh of Houlſworthy. Quadring, Lincolnſhire, SE. of Dunnington. Quare, Wilts, on the Madder, near Wilton. Quainton, Bucks, NW. of Ayleſbury.

QUAKU, or QUAQUA, a diſtrict of Acambou, in Guinea, on the Gold Coaſt. The manufacture of cotton habits, called Quaqua gowns, forms a conſiderable branch of trade here.

Quamy, Camb. near Mildenhall-Fen.

QUANG-SI, an inland province in the S. of China, ſituated to the NE. of Tonquin. It produces plenty of rice, being watered by ſeveral large rivers. The ſouthern part is a flat country, and well cultivated; but the northern is full of mountains covered with trees. It contains mines of all ſorts; and particularly a gold mine. They have a particular tree, of whoſe pith they make bread; and there are little inſects which produce white wax. A prodigious number of wild animals, curious birds, and uncommon inſects are found here. The capital is Quiſ ling, or Kouei-ling.

QUANG-TONG, QUAMTUM, or CAN TON, a province of China, bounded o the E. by Kiang-Si and Fokien, on the S by the ocean, and on the W. by Tonquin and Quang-ſi. It is diverſified by valley and mountains, and yields two crops o corn in a year. It abounds in gold, jew els, ſilk, pearls, tin, quickſilver, ſugar braſs, iron, ſteel, ſaltpetre, ebony, and ſe veral ſorts of odoriferous wood; beſid fruits of all ſorts. They have lemons o the ſize of a man's head; and another for which grows out at the trunk of the tree whoſe rind is very hard, and contains great number of little cells full of an ex cellent yellow pulp. They have alſo tree, whoſe wood is remarkably hard an heavy, and thence is called iron wood and a prodigious number of ducks, whoſe eggs they hatch in ovens. A great num ber of ſmall barks are loaded with th ducks, and carried to feed on the ſ ſhore, where, at low water, they f ſhrimps, oyſters, and other ſhell-fi Theſe ſmall fleets generally go in comp nies, and the ducks mix together on t ſhore; but when night approaches, th are collected together by beating on basin; they immediately form themſelve into different flocks, and each returns t the veſſel it belongs to. The mountain are covered with a ſort of oſier, whi cro creep along the ground, and are ſo tough that they make baſkets, hurdles, mats, and ropes of them. Canton is the capital.

Quantock Hills, in Somerſetſ. Quantock's Head, E. and W. Somerſetſ. near Watchet. Quarendon, Bucks, in Bearton pariſh, Aylesbury-Vale. Quarendon, Leic. 1 miles N. of Mountſorrel. Quarington, 1 miles SE. of Durham. Quarington, Lincolnſ. near Sleaford. Quarington, or Quatherington, Kent, in Merſham pariſh. Quarleſton, Dorſetſ. SW. of Blandford. Quarley, Hants, NW. of the Wallops. Quarndon, near Derby. Quarnford, Staffordſ. in Alſtonfield pariſh Quarr, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle, a little E. of Hayroſt. Quarr, Iſle of Wight, between Newport and St. Helen's. Quarry Hill, 1 miles from Durham.

QUARTEN, a town of Swiſſerl. near Walſenſtadt Lake, 5 miles E. of Glarus.

Quat, Shropſhire, on the Severn, E. of Chelmarſh. Quatford Shropſhire, on the Severn, a mile below Bridgnorth.

QUEBEC, a large and handſome city of America, the capital of Lower Canada, founded by the French in 1608. It is built on a rock, and is divided into the upper and lower town. The river, which, from the ſea hither, is about 4 or 5 leagues broad, narrows all of a ſudden to the breadth of a mile. The harbour is ſafe, ſpacious, and commodious, and about 7 fathoms deep. It is flanked by two baſtions, that are raiſed 25 feet from the ground, which is about the height of the tides at the time of the equinox. The caſtle ſtands on the brow of a rugged hill, 300 fathoms above the town. The fortifications are irregular, yet the place, from its ſituation, is capable of making a ſtout defence. The lower town is chiefly inhabited by merchants, whoſe trade is conſiderable. The nobleſt ſtructure in the whole city is the palace where the governor reſides. In 1711, a body of land forces, under Brigadier-general Hill, were ſent with a deſign to conquer Canada; but the expedition failed through the raſhneſs of the admiral in ſailing too near the Seven Iſles, ſeveral ſhips being loſt, with a number of ſailors. In 1755, it ſurrendered to the Engliſh, after a victory obtained by the brave General Wolfe, who fell in the engagement. It is ſituated at the confluence of the rivers St. Lawrence and St. Charles, in lat. 46. 55. N. and lon. 70. 31. W.

QUEDA, a kingdom of Aſia, on the W. coaſt of Malacca, tributary to Siam. The principal town, however, which is of the ſame name, is ſubject to the Dutch. Here are mines of tin and lead, of which metal they export large quantities to Perſia, Arabia, and India. It has a good harbour, and is 300 miles WNW. of the city of Malacca. Lat. 6. 40. N.

Quedgley, 3 miles S. of Glouceſter.

QUEDLINGBURG, a town of Halberſtadt, Upper Saxony, with a famous abbey, whoſe abbeſs is a princeſs of the empire. The inhabitants live by brewing, huſbandry, and feeding of cattle. It is 7 miles SSE. of Halberſtadt.

* QUEENBOROUGH, an ancient, but poor town of Kent, in the Iſle of Shepey, ſituated at the mouth of the river Medway. The chief employment of the inhabitants is oyſter-dredging, oyſters being here in great plenty, and of a fine flavour. It is 15 miles NW. of Canterbury, and 48 E. of London. Markets on Monday and Thurſday, if not diſuſed.

Queen-Camel, Somerſetſhire.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE'S ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Wallis in 1767. It is 6 miles long and 1 wide. Lat. 19. 18. S. lon. 138. 4. W.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE'S SOUND, a Sound at the N. extremity of the ſouthern iſland of New Zealand, near Cook's Strait, lying in lat. 41. 0. S. and lon. 184. 19. E. The climate here is much more mild than at Duſky Bay; and though there is not ſuch plenty of wild fowl and fiſh, that defect is amply compenſated by a greater variety and abundance of excellent vegetables. Moſt of the hills about the Sound conſiſt of an argillaceous ſtone, of a greeniſh grey, or blueiſh, or yellowiſh brown colour. A green talcous, or nephritic, which the jewellers call jadde, is likewiſe very common here, together with hornſtone, ſhingle, ſeveral ſorts of flinty ſtones and pebbles, ſome looſe pieces of baſaltes, ſtrata of a compact mica, or glimmer, with particles of quartz. Hence Captain Forſter thinks there is great reaſon to ſuppoſe, that this part of New Zealand contains iron ore, and perhaps ſeveral other metallic bodies. The country here is not ſo ſteep as at Duſky Bay, and the hills near the ſea ſide are, in general, of an inferior height, but covered with foreſts equally intricate and impenetrable. The dogs here are of the long-haired ſort, with pricked ears, and much reſemble the common ſhepherd's cur; but they are very ſtupid.

QUEEN'S COUNTY, a county in Ireland, in the province of Leinſter, about 28 miles ſquare; bounded on the N. by W. by King's county and part of Tipperary, on the E. by Kildare and part of Carlow, and on the S. by Kilkenny. It was formerly full of woods and bogs, but is now much improved. It contains 50 parishes, about 15 048 houses, and 82,000 inhabitants. Maryborough is the capital.

Queen-Court, Kent, near Otpringe. Queen-Hill, Worcest. by the Severn, S. of Upton. Queen-Lodge, or Manor, Wilts, in Clarendon-Park. Queen Moor, Somersetshire, near Weston. Queen-Park, Warwickst. W. of Kenilworth.

QUEEN'S FERRY, a town of Linlithgowshire, seated on the Frith of Forth, where it is not more than 2 miles wide. It is a much frequented ferry, and is 9 miles W. of Edinburgh.

Queen-Island, one of the Blasquet-Islands, on the coast of Kerry, Munster.

Queinton, Glouc. 5 miles N. of Campden. Queinton, Upper and Lower, Glouc. in Queinton parish. Quekes, Kent, in Thanet Isle, near Bichington. Quenbery, Herts, NW. of Bishop's Stortford. Quenby, Leicest. near Bilsdon. Quendon, Essex, near Newport. Queniborow, Leicest. SE. of Mountsorrel, Quenington, Gloucest. 2 miles from Fairford, Quenny, a river in Shropshire. Quenock-Chapel, Monmouthshire, N. of Caerleon.

QUENTIN, ST. a town in the dept. of Aisne, with a considerable manufactory of lawns and cambrics. Near this place, in 1557, the Spaniards gained a signal victory over the French, and afterwards took it by storm. It is seated on an eminence, near the Somme, 21 miles S. of Cambray, and 83 N. by E. of Paris.

QUERCI, a ci-devant province of France, divided into the Upper and Lower, and fertile in corn, wine, and fruits. It now forms the department of Lot.

QUERFURT, a town of Upper Saxony, capital of a county of the same name.

QUERKEINESS, or KERKEINESS, anciently CERCINA, two islands on the coast of Tripoli, containing several villages.

Quern, Glouces. by Cirencester.

QUESNOY, a small, but strongly fortified town, in the depart. of the North. It was taken by the allies, under the Duke of Ormond and Prince Eugene, in 1712, and retaken by the French the same year. It is seated in an extensive plain, on the little river Ronelle, 9 miles SSE. of Valenciennes.

Quetbiock, Cornwall, E. of Lesskard. Quevington, Glouces. near the Coln and Fairford.

QUIBO, or QUEYPO, a town of Costa Rica, in Mexico, near the S. Sea.

QUIBERON, a small peninsula in the dept. of Morbihan, to the N. of Belle-Isle; also a small island, called the Point of Quiberon, separated from the peninsula by a channel: the sea next it is called the Bay of Quiberon. It is remarkable for an ill-conceived and unfortunate expedition against France, of English troops and emigrants, in 1795. A terrible slaughter was made of these last devoted men, who seem, on this occasion, to have formed the forlorn hope; they were pushed foremost in attack, and left behind in retreat.

Quickbury, Essex, W. of the Rodings. Quickswood, Herts, by Baldock. Quidenham, Norfolk, by E. Harling. Quidhall, 5 miles from Cambridge.

QUILLEBEUF, a small town in the dept. of Eure, seated on the river Seine, 8 miles SW. of Caudebec, and 22 W. of Rouen.

QUILMANCI, a town and river of Zanguebar, on the coast of Melinda, subject to the Portuguese. Lat. 3. S.

QUILOA, a kingdom on the coast of Zanguebar, near the mouth of the Coare, extending about 60 leagues from N. to S. They all speak the Arabic language. It is fertile, abounding in all the necessaries of life, but tributary to the Portuguese. Lat. of the principal town, situated near the mouth of the Cuare, 8. 50. S. lon. 39. 9. E.

QUILON. See COULAN.

QUIMPER, a town in the dept of. Finisterre, seated on the Oder, 30 miles SSE. of Brest. Large barks may come up to this town at high water.

QUIMPERLE, a town in the dept. of Finisterre, seated on the river Isette, 8 miles NW. of L'Orient.

Quin, in Clare Munster.

QUINCEY, a town in the depart. of the Seine and Marne, 6 miles SW. of Meaux.

QUINCEY, a village in the dept. of Aube, situated on the little river Arduſſon, near Nogent upon the Seine, and at no great distance from the city of Troyes. In this parish, is the foundation or convent of The Paraclete, a place interesting to the readers of English poetry, as it will ever recall the delightful epistles of Pope and Cauthorn. Mr. Pope's description, however, is only ideal and poetical, there being neither rocks nor pines to be seen here; nor is it a kind of ground (being in a vale) which ever seemed to encourage such objects. The superstructure of the Paraclete is, probably, not the same as the twelfth century produced; but the vaulted part, part, as the arches are all pointed, are imagined, with reaſon, to be ſuch. A ow building, adjoining, has, however, narks of real antiquity, and ſeems to ave been the public hall where Abelard gave his lectures; for, in the walls on ach ſide, are ſmall horizontal apertures, hat have ſtrong appearances of benches. n the abbatial vault, which, being ſmall, s much crowded, the bones of the unfor- unate lovers, Abelard and Eloiſa, are de- oſited; by theſe, Eloiſa appears to have een much taller than Abelard. In the onvent are, or lately were, only twen- y two ſiſters.

QUINCEY, a town in the dept. of Doubs, 12 miles SW. of Beſançon.

QUINTIN, a town in the dept. of the Forth Coaſt, 8 miles SW. of St. Brieux, nd 200 W. of Paris.

Quintin-Bay, in Down, Ulſter, near Donaghadee Harbour. Quintin-Caſtle, n Down, Ulſter, 2 miles S. of Portaferry.

Quinton, Northamp. near Sacy Foreſt.

QUIRIEU, a town in the dept. of Iſere, 2 miles E. of Lyons.

QUIRIMBA, or QUERIBA, a cluſter of ſlands on the coaſt of Zanguebar, fertile n fruits and paſtures. Lat. 11. 40. S.

QUISTELLO, a town of Mantua.

QUITEVA, or KITEA, a town of Da- ah, a country of Africa, partly depend- nt on Morocco.

QUITO, a town of S. America, capital f an audience, ſeated in a pleaſant valley, etween two chains of the Andes, on igher ground than the reſt of habitable eru, being above 300 yards higher than he level of the ſea. It is a biſhop's ee, and contains ſeven convents and university. All ſorts of merchandiſe nd commodities are exceedingly dear, on ccount of the difficulty of bringing them ither. The inhabitants amount to be- ween 50 and 60,000. Lat. 0. 13. S. on. 77. 50. W.

QUITO, an audience in the viceroyalty f Terra Firma, S. America, lying be- ween two chains of the Andes, and ounded on the N. by Popayan, and on he W. by the Pacific Ocean; its extent is not known. The lands are generally well cultivated, and there are a great number of towns and villages inhabited by the Spaniards, or native Americans. Every village is adorned with a large ſquare, and the church ſtands on one ſide of it. The ſtreets are generally ſtraight, and reſpect the four quarters of the world; and, indeed, all the roads are laid out in a line, croſſing each other, inſomuch that the general aſpect of the country has the appearance of a large garden. It might be imagined this is a very hot country; but it ſtands ſo high, and ſo near the mountains, perpetually covered with ſnow, that the air is very temperate. There are no noxious ani- mals; for the tigers and ſerpents are be- low in the foreſts. They have no vi- cunas, or guanacoes here, but they have an animal of the ſame kind, called by the natives lamas. They have the va- rious ſorts of materials proper for dying, and ſeveral ſorts of fruits and plants, which have been brought from Spain, beſide thoſe that naturally grow here. They have alſo imported beeves and ſheep. In the N. part they get a great deal of gold. The commerce here is principally carried on by Europeans. This province conſiſts of 9 juriſdictions: Ibar- ra; Otabala; Quito; Latacunga; Rio- bamba; Chimbo, or Guaranda; Guaya- quil; Cuerca; and Loja. After the con- queſt by the Spaniards, Quito was an- nexed to Peru; but a new government having been ſince erected at Santa Fé de Bagoda, it was diſmembered from Peru and annexed to New Granada.

QUIXOS, a diſtrict of Quito, in S. America.

QUIZAMA, a maritime country of Africa, in Angola, ſtretching along the river Coanza. It is mountainous, and little cultivated; but the Portugueſe get here abundance of honey, wax, and ſalt.

QUIZINA, or TEUSIN, a chain of mountains in Fez, above 90 miles in extent.

Quabley Green, Hampſh. 4 miles from Biſhop's Waltham.

QUOJA, an inland country of Africa, lying about 100 miles N. of the coaſt of Guinea. It is ſaid to extend from Sierra Leone to the Grain Coaſt, and to contain, beſides Quoja Proper, the kingdoms of Bolm, Gilo, Quilligia, and Carredahu.

RAAB, or GYOR, a town of Hungary, ſeated near the confluence of the rivers Danube, Raab, and Rabnitz, 55 miles SE. of Vienna.

RAARSEY, one of the Weſtern Iſlands of Scotland, E. of Skye. It is 7 miles long, and 3 broad. The ſoil here is fitter for paſture than agriculture. There is plenty of wood on it, and a good quarry of ſtone.

RABASTENS, a town in the dept. of the Upper Pyrenees, 10 miles NNE. of Tarbe.

RABAT, a town of Morocco, ſituated on the coaſt of the Atlantic, oppoſite Sallee, near the mouth of the river. The Europeans have had, at intervals, ſeveral factories here; and Rabat is now the moſt proper place for trade of any on this coaſt. The inhabitants are much employed in making gruzes and ſilk ſtuffs.

Rabbit Iſland, in Kerry, Munſter, W. of Innisfallen. It is chiefly remarkable for its quarries of good lime ſtone.

Rabley-Heath, Herts, near South Mims. Raby, Cheſhire, between the Dee and the Merſey. Raby Caſtle, Durham, by Staindrop; an irregular magnificent pile, of great ſize, built by John de Neville, about the year 1738, and now the reſidence of the Earl of Darlington. It is an entire embattled fortreſs, with ſeveral great ſquare towers, and is ſurrounded by a foſs, and a fine parade, garniſhed with battlements. Raby-Cotes, Cumberl. N. of the Holm.

Racahill, in Limerick, Munſter.

RACHORE, a city and diſtrict of Hindooſtan, ſubject to the nizam of the Deccan. It is ſeated in the country of Golconda, on the S. bank of the Kiſtna, 70 miles SW. of Hydrabad.

Rackenford, Devonſhire, NW. of Tiverton. Rackham, Suſſex. Rackheath, near Norwich.

RACLIA, a ſmall iſland of the Archipelago, near that of Nio. It is only inhabited by two or three monks, who take care of a few ſheep and goats.

RACONIGI, a town of Savigliano, in Piedmont, 8 miles NE. of Saluzzo.

Racoole, in Dublin, Leinſter, 7 miles from the metropolis.

Racton, Suſſex, NW. of Chicheſter. Radborn, Wilts, between Wotton-Baſſet and Highworth. Radbrook, Glouceſt. in Queinton pariſh. Radburn-Hall, near Derby. Radcot-Bridge, Oxf. in Langford pariſh.

Raddinſtown, in Meath, Leinſter.

Raddon, or Redden, Somerſetſ. E. of Frome. Raddon, Devonſhire, in Shobrook pariſh. Radfield Chapel, Kent, in Bapchild pariſh. Radford, near Nottingham. Radford, Nott. in Worksop pariſh. Radford, Warwickſ. near Coventry. Radford Simely, Warwickſ. near Offchurch.

RADICOFANI, a town of Tuſcany.

Radigundes, Kent, near Dover. Radipole, Dorſetſ. 2 miles from Melcomb-Regis. Radleſton, Dorſetſ. near Bradford. Radley Hall, Berks, by Abingdon. Radley-Hall, Eſſex, W. of Terling.

RADMANSDORF, a town of Carniola.

Radmill, Suſſex, S. of Lewes. Radmore, Staffordſhire, in Cannock Foreſt. Randage, Bucks, E. of Stoken-Church. Radneſtock, Somerſetſ. between Gedney-Moor and Mendip. Radnor, Cheſhire, on the Dane, oppoſite to Congleton.

*RADNOR, NEW, a very ancient town of S. Wales, in Radnorſhire, formerly the county-town; but the aſſizes are now held at Preſteign. It has one extraordinary privilege, that of keeping a court of pleas for all actions, without being limited to any particular ſum. It is ſeated near the ſpring head of the river Somergil, or Hendwell, (which riſes in the Hendwell pool, and empties itſelf into the Lug, a little below Preſteign) 24 miles NW. of Hereford, and 156 WNW. of London. Market on Saturday. The principal fair on St. Luke's Day, O. S.

RADNORSHIRE, a county of S. Wales, 25 miles in length, and 22 in breadth; bounded on the E. by Shropſhire and Herefordſhire; on the W. the SW. and S. by Cardiganſhire and Brecknockſhire; and on the N. by Montgomeryſhire. It is divided into 6 hundreds, which contain 4 market towns, 52 pariſhes, about 3166 houſes, and 18,960 inhabitants. The E. and S. parts of this country are tolerably level, and productive of corn; the other parts are rude and mountainous, devoted chiefly to the rearing of horned cattle, ſheep, and goats. The NW. angle is an abſolute deſert, and almoſt impaſſable. Radnor is the county-town, but the aſſizes are held at Preſteign.

RADOM, a town of Sandomirz, in Poland.

Radon Park, Yorkſhire, near Bowland Foreſt.

RADSTADT, a town of Saltzburg, in Bavaria.

Radſtock, Somerſetſhire, NE. of Midſummer-Norton. Radſtone, Northamp-

N. of

N. of Brackley. Radway, Warwickſ. on the ſkirt of Edgehill. Radwell, Bedfordſhire, near Bletſoe. Radwinter, Eſſex, near Colcheſter. Ragby, Yorkſ. SE. of Wakefield. Ragdale, Leiceſterſ. NW. of Melton-Mowbray.

RAGGIVOLO, a town of Mantua.

RAGHLIN, an iſland on the W. coaſt of Donegal, in Ulſter. Lat. 54. 36. N.

Ragilbury, Somerſetſ. W. of Stanton-Drew.

Ragland-Caſtle, Monmouthſ. on the Kilney river, N. of Uſk; a very large and noble ruin, more perfect than ruins of this kind commonly are. Two or three ſides of its large octagonal tower are ſtill remaining. Ragley, Warwickſ. near Alceſter. Ragnell, Nottinghamſ. in Dunham manor.

RAGNITZ, a town of Pruſſian Lithuania, ſituated on the river Memmel, 56 miles ENE. of Konigſberg.

RAGUSA, a town in Val-di-Noto.

RAGUSA, a city of Dalmatia, capital of the Raguſan, with a harbour. It is about 2 miles in circumference, is pretty well built, and has an inacceſſible mountain on the land ſide, and on the ſide of the ſea a ſtrong fort. This place is diſtinguiſhed by the fineneſs of its manufactures, and the citizens are all traders. It is a republic, and has a doge, like that of Venice, who continues only a month in office. During his adminiſtration, he lives in the palace, wears a long ſilk robe with white ſleeves, and receives 5 ducats a month. It is 60 miles NW. of Scutari. Lat. 42. 58. N. lon. 18. 10. E.

RAGUSAN, THE, a ſmall territory in Dalmatia, in Europe, containing 4 towns, and a few ſmall iſlands in the Adriatic. The language in common uſe is the Sclavonian, but moſt of the citizens ſpeak the Italian. Before the preſent war, it was a republic, under the protection of the Turks and Venetians. Raguſa is the capital.

Rahenny, in Dublin county, near the ſea, 4 miles N. of the metropolis. Rahoth, in Down, Ulſter.

RAJAPOUR, a town of Hindooſtan, ſituated on the coaſt of Concan, 6 miles N. of Gherinh.

RAJEMAL, a town of Bengal, formerly a place of great trade, but now in a ruinous ſtate. It is ſeated on the W. bank of the Ganges, 190 miles N. by W. of Calcutta.

RAIN, a town of Upper Bavaria, taken by the Engliſh and Imperialiſts in 1704.

RAINFELDEN, a town in the Archduchy of Auſtria.

Rainſborough, Northamp. near Charlton. Rainford, Lancaſhire, between Weſt Darby and Wigan. Rainham, a village of Eſſex, about a mile from the Thames, where there is a ferry to Erith, in Kent. The marſhes in this neighbourhood are uncommonly fine, and covered with prodigious numbers of cattle. It is 15 miles E. of London. Rainham, Kent, 4 miles E. of Rocheſter. Rainham-Hall, Norfolk, between Lytcham and Fakenham. Rainham, Sts. Margaret, Martin, and Mary, Norfolk, W. of Rainham-Hall. Rainhill, Lancaſ. near Preſcot. Rainton, Yorkſ. S. of Thirſk.

RAINY, or LONG LAKE, a lake of N. America, NW. of Lake Superior. It is nearly 100 miles long, but in no part more than 20 miles wide.

Raiſgill-Hall, Weſtmorland, between Langdale and Sunbiggin, on the rivulet Raiſebeck, near where it falls into the Lune.

RAKESBURG, a town of Stiria.

RAKONITZ, a town and circle of Bohemia, 24 miles W. of Prague.

RAKOW, a town of Sandomerz, in Poland, where the Socinians had formerly a college and printing-houſe.

Raleigh, Devonſ. near Barnſtaple.

Rallibane, in King's County, Leinſter.

RAMADA, or NEW SALAMANCA, a town of St. Martha, Terra Firma, 90 miles E. of St. Martha.

RAMANANCOR. See RAMISSERAM.

RAMBERT-DE-JOUX, ST. a town in the dept. of Ain, 18 miles SSE. of Bourg en Breſſe.

RAMBERVILLIERS, a town in the dept. of the Voſges, 19 miles NNE. of Mire-court.

RAMBOUILLET, a town in the dept. of the Seine and Oiſe, 27 miles SW. of Paris.

Rame, Cornw. near Mount-Edgcumb. Here is a promontory called Ram-head, which ſerves as a ſea-mark; it lies a little SW. of Plymouth. Rame, Cornwall, NW. of Penryn.

Ram Iſland, in Lough-Neagh, Leinſter.

RAMERU, a town in the department of Aube, 18 miles NNE. of Troyes.

Rameſhead, Hants, S. of Portſmouth.

Ramicael, in Dublin, Leinſter.

RAMILLIES, a village in the late Auſtrian Brabant, memorable for a battle fought here, May 23, N. S. 1706, between the allies, under the Duke of Marlborough and the Marſhal d'Auverquerque, and the French, under Marſhal Villeroy and the Elector of Bavaria. The latter loſt all their baggage and artillery, about 120 ſtandards, 600 officers, and 6000 private ſoldiers, beſides about 8000 killed and wounded. The loſs of the former did not exceed 3000 men. It is 18 miles N. of Namur.

RAMISSERAM, an iſland in the Indian Sea, between Ceylon and the coaſt of Madura, about 30 miles in circumference. The ſoil is ſandy. It contains a few villages and a pagoda. Lat. 9. 18. N. lon. 79. 22. E.

RAMLA, anciently Arimathea, a poor village of Paleſtine, with a manufacture of ſoap, which is ſent into all parts of Egypt. It is 18 miles NW. of Jeruſalem.

RAMMEKENS, a fortreſs of Zealand, on the Iſle of Walcheren, 3 miles E. of Fluſhing.

RAMMELBERG, a town of Mansfeld, in Upper Saxony. There is a large and lofty mountain of the ſame name, in which there is a rich mine of lead, copper, zink, vitriol, yellow ochre, &c. near Goſlar.

Rampiſham, Dorſetſhire, a mile and a half from Wroxhall. Rampton, Camb. near Cottenham. Rampton, Notting. NE. of Tuxford. Ramſbury, Wilts, on the Kennet, between Newbury and Marlborough. Ramſdean, Hampſhire, W. of Petersfield. Ramſden, Oxfordſ. between Charlbury and Witney. Ramſdon, Bellhouſe, Cray, and Heath, Eſſex, near Bellericay.

* RAMSBURY, a ſmall town in Wiltſhire, noted for its fine beer. In the time of the Saxons it was the ſee of a biſhop, firſt united to Shirborn, and afterwards tranſlated to Old Sarum. It is ſeated on the Kennet, between Newbury and Marlborough, 46 miles E. of Briſtol, and 69 W. of London.

RAMSEY, a town of Huntingdonſhire, formerly famous for its wealthy abbey, and hence called Ramſey the Rich. Part of the gate-houſe yet remains, with a neglected ſtatue of Ailuin, the founder, the epitaph of whoſe tomb is reckoned one of the oldeſt pieces of Engliſh ſculpture extant. Ailuin is therein ſtyled kinſman of the famous king Edward, alderman of all England, and the miraculous founder of this abbey. It is ſeated on the fens, among rich ground, proper for tillage and paſture, and near the meers of Ramſey and Whitleſey, which abound with fowl, and excellent pikes and eels, 12 miles NNE. of Huntingdon, and 69 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

RAMSEY, an iſland of S. Wales, on the coaſt of Pembrokeſhire, about 2 miles in length, and a mile and a half broad. About the beginning of April, ſuch numerous flocks of migratory birds, of ſeveral ſorts, reſort hither, as would appear incredible to thoſe who have not ſeen them. Among them are the eligy, called in Cornwall, a kiddaw, and in Yorkſhire, a ſcout, razor-bill, puffin, and harry-bird. Theſe two laſt breed in the rabbit holes, but the two former on the bare rocks, without any ſort of neſt. Near it are ſeveral ſmall ones, known by the name of the Biſhop and his Clerks. It is 4 miles SSW. of St. David's.

RAMSEY, a town on the NE. coaſt of the Iſle of Man, with a ſpacious haven, in which the largeſt ſhips may ride at anchor, with ſafety from all winds but the NE. and then they need not be embayed. Lat. 54. 18. N.

Ramſey, Eſſex near Harwich. Ramſey, Eſſex, an iſland near St. Oyth's.

RAMSGATE, a ſea-port of Kent, in the Iſle of Thanet, where two very ſubſtantial ſtone piers have been lately built for the ſecurity of the harbour, which is now capable of receiving 200 ſail of ſhips. Ramſgate has ſome trade to the Baltic, and is much reſorted to as a bathing place. It is 6 miles S. of Margate.

Ramſgill, Yorkſ. W. Riding, in Netherdale. Ramſholt, Suffolk, near Woodbridge. Ramſide, 2 miles from Durham. Ramſide, Lancaſhire, between Barohead and Foulney-Iſle. Ramſmill, Yorkſhire, W. Riding, N. of Langſtrethdale-Chace. Ramſor, Staffordſh. near Wotton-under-Wever.

Ramullin, in Donegal, Ulſter.

RANAI, or ORANAI, one of the Sandwich Iſlands, in the N. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Cook, about 8 leagues W. of Mowee. The country to the ſouth is high and craggy; but the other parts have a better aſpect. It produces very few plantains and bread-fruit trees, but abounds in yams, ſweet potatoes, and taro. The inhabitants were about 20,000.

Ranby, Nottinghamſ. in the parishes of Blithe and Babworth.

RANCHERIA, a town of St. Martha, in S. America.

Rand, Lincolnſhire, near Wragby.

RANDALSTOWN, a town in Antrim, Ulſter, 88 miles N. of Dublin.

Ranby, Lincolnſhire, NW. of Horncaſtle.

RANDERS a town of N. Jutland, trading in leather gloves, earthen ware, and ſtrong trong beer. It is ſeated near the mouth of the river Gulden, on the Baltic, 20 miles E. of Viborg. Near it is a plentiful ſalmon fiſhery.

Randon Batail, Northumb. in Hertheved manor. Randwick, Glouceſterſ. 3 miles NW. of Stroud. Ranebill, St. Somerſetſhire, W. of Crewkern.

Ranelagh, in Wicklow, Leinſter. Ranelagh, a mile S. of Dublin.

Rangeworthy, Glouceſterſhire, 3 miles from Wickware, and 3 from Thornbury, Rankesborow-Hill, Rutland NW. of Catmoſs-Vale. Ranmer, Surry, a range of hills near Box-hill, from which there are very extenſive views.

RANNOCH LOCH, a lake in the N. of Perthſhire, about 8 miles in length, to the E. of George's Town, and S. of Loch Erichd.

Ranow, Cheſ. W. of the Shire ſtones, by Macclesfield-Foreſt. Ranſkill, Nottinghamſ. in Blithe pariſh.

RANSTADT, a town of Stolberg, Upper Rhine.

RANSTADT, or ALT RANSTADT, a town of Leipſic, Upper Saxony, 6 miles W. of Leipſic.

RANSTADT, or MARK RANSTADT a town of Merſburg, Upper Saxony, 6 miles WSW. of Leipſic.

Ranſton, Dorſetſhire, near Shrowton.

RANTAMPOUR, a town and circar of Agimere, 86 miles E. of the city of Agimere.

Ranting Wheel, a rock in Strongford-Bay, in Down, Ulſter, occaſioning an eddy-tide, or whirlpool, very dangerous for boats at the entrance of the bay. It lies near Quintin-Point, and is moſtly under water.

Ranton, Staffordſhire, SE. of Eccleſhal.

RANTZAU, a county of Holſtein.

Ranworth, Norfolk, on the Bure, oppoſite Ludham, SE. of Wrexham-Bridge.

RAOLCONDA, a town of Golconda, near which are ſome diamond mines. It is 60 miles NW. of Rachores.

RAON L'ETAPE, a town in the dept. of the Voſges, 8 miles N. of St. Dieg.

RAPALLO, a town and bay of Genoa.

*RAPHOE, a town in Donegal, Ulſter, 107 miles NNW. of Dublin.

RAPPERSCHWELL, a ſmall rebulic and town of Swiſſerland. It is under the protection of the cantons of Zurich and Bern, and is governed by a great and little council, conſiſting of 48 members. Its territory is about a league in circumference, and comprehends three pariſhes, on the N. ſide of the Lake of Zurich. The town is ſeated on a neck of land, which advances into the lake, and over which is a bridge near 1850 paces long, built by the Counts of Habſpurg, in 1358. It contains 200 burghers, and about 1000 inhabitants, who are moſtly of the church of Rome. It is 12 miles SE. of Zurich.

RAPOLPTEIN, a town in the dept. of the Upper Rhine, called in French Ribau-Pierre. It is 8 miles N. of Colmar.

RAPOLLA, a town of Baſilicata.

RAPPAHANNOC, a river of N. America, which riſes in the NE. mountains of Virginia, and running ESE. falls into the Bay of Cheſapeak, about 26 miles S. of the mouth of the Potomack. It is deep near the ſea, and up to Fredericſburg, 110 miles from its mouth, it affords 6 feet depth of water.

RARITAN, a river of N. America, in New Jerſey, which paſſing by Brunſwick and Amboy, mingles with the Arthur Kull Sound, and helps to form the fine harbour of Amboy.

RASCIA, a territory in the N. part of Servia, which takes its name from the river Raſca. It is ſubject to Auſtria.

Raſdale-Abbey, Yorkſhire, N. Riding, S. of Danby-Park.

RASEBORG, a ſea-port of Nyland, in Finland, 30 miles SE. of Abo.

*RASEN, a town of Lincolnſhire, commonly called Market-Raſen, to diſtinguiſh it from Eaſt, Weſt, and Middle Raiſin, in its neighbourhood. It is ſeated on a branch of the river Ankam, which has lately been made navigable for ſloops of 50 tons to Glandford Bridge, and for boats to Biſhop's Bridge, 14 miles NE. of Lincoln, and 150 N. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Raſgill, Weſtmorland, near Shap.

Raſharkean, in Antrim, Ulſter.

Raſhley, Devonſhire, SW. of Chimleigh. Raſhton, Shropſhire, near Wrekin-Hill. Raſkill, Yorkſ. NE. of Boroughbridge.

RASOCALMO, a cape of Sicily on the N. coaſt, near a town of the ſame name, to the W. of Cape Faro, and N. of Meſſina.

RASTADT, a town of Baden, in Suabia. It is remarkable for a treaty of peace concluded here between the Imperialiſts and French, in 1714.

Raſthorp, Yorkſhire, E. Riding, near York-Woulds. Raſtrick, Yorkſhire, N. of Huthersfield.

RASY. See RAARSEY.

Ratyb, 3 miles from Leiceſter, ſuppoſed to be the Rata of Antoninus. A Roman camp was lately diſcovered here, in 1778. It is very perfect as well as the vallum or rampart, and forms a parallelogram of about 280 yards long by 156 broad.

broad. Ratcliff, Lancaſhire, near Bury. Ratcliff, Nott. near Worksop. Ratcliff, Nott. upon the Soar, near its conflux with the Trent. Ratcliff-upon-Trent, SE. of Nottingham. Ratcliff-upon-Wreath, Leiceſterſhire, E. of Mountſorrel.

Rathangan, a thriving village in Kildare, Leinſter, ſeated on the N. bank of the Grand Canal. Rathbeag, in Kilkenny, Leinſter. Rathbraud, in Wicklow, Leinſter. Rathbride, in Kildare Leinſter.

Rathby, Lincolnſ. SW. of Louth.

Rathclare, and Rathclairn, both in Cork, Munſter, Rathconnel, in Kildare, Leinſter. Rathcool, ſee Racoole.

RATHCORMUCK, a town of Cork, in Munſter, 111 miles SSW. of Dublin.

Rath Crayhan, in Roſcommon, Connaught, near Elphin. Rath Down, otherwiſe called the Grounds, are ſhelves or banks of ſand, ſituated along the coaſt in the Iriſh Channel, which appear dry even at high water, yet between them and the ſhore, the water is 7 fathoms deep. Rathdowny, in Queen's County, Leinſter.

*RATHDRUM, a town of Wicklow, in Leinſter, noted for its monthly market for flannels. It is 25 miles S. of Dublin.

Rather, or Neither, a river in Yorkſ. which runs into the Dent, below Sedbergh.

RATHENAU, a town in the Middle Marche, Brandenburg.

Rathfarnham, a pleaſant village in Dublin, Leinſter, 2 miles S. of the metropolis. Rathfran, in Mayo, Connaught.

*RATHFRILAND, a town of Down, in Ulſter. It is ſeated on a riſing ground, having four large ſtraight roads leading up to it, and entering in the town, 57 miles N. of Dublin.

*RATHKEAL, a town of Limerick, in Munſter. It is ſeated on the river Deel, 108 miles SW. of Dublin.

Rathmelton*, a village of Donegal, in Ulſter, ſeated on Lough Swilly, 192 miles NNW. of Dublin.

Rathmill, Yorkſ. in Giggleſwick pariſh.

Rathmines, a village of Dublin, in Leinſter, one mile S. of the metropolis. Rathmolion, and Rathmore, both in Meath, Leinſter. Rathmoylan, a pariſh in Waterford, Munſter, on the coaſt of which there are ſeveral caves and ſubterraneous paſſages. Rath-Owen, in Weſt Meath, Leinſter. Rathronan, in Waterford, Munſter. Rathſallagh, in Wicklow, Leinſter. Rathſherkin, in Antrim, Ulſter. Rathvilly, in Carlow, Leinſter.

RATISBON, a town of Sileſia, capital of a principality of the ſame name. It is ſeated on the river Oder, in a country fertile in corn and fruits, 15 miles NE. of Troppaw, and 142 E. of Prague.

RATISBON, or REGENSBERG, an imperial city of Bavaria, anciently the ſeat of the dukes, with a biſhop's ſee, whoſe biſhop is a prince of the empire. It is full of gentry, and in it there are very handſome ſtructures, particularly ſix monaſteries. The town-houſe is magnificent, in the hall of which the general diet of the empire has conſtantly met, ever ſince 1662, with only two interruptions; in 1713, when it was transferred for ſome time to Augſburg, on account of the plague; and in 1742, for a few years to Frankfort. It is an important ſtaple for ſalt, and large quantities of corn, wood, proviſions, &c. are ſhipped for Vienna. It is ſeated on the Danube, over which is a ſtone bridge of 15 arches. The inhabitants, in general, are Proteſtants, as all the magiſtrates muſt be. It is 56 miles NNE. of Munich. Lat. 48. 56. N. lon. 11. 47. E.

Ratley, near Buckingham. Ratley, Warwickſhire, near Edgehill. Ratling Court, Kent, near Nonington. Ratling hope, Shropſ. near Alſtretton.

Ratoath, in Meath, Leinſter.

RATOLFZEL, a town of Auſtrian Suabia, ſeated near the W. end of the Lake of Conſtance.

Ratſey, Yorkſ. E. Riding, near Watton.

Ratten, Suſſex, in Willingdon pariſh.

RATTENBERG, a town in the Tirol.

Rattendon, Eſſex, near Billericay. Ratten-Row, Northumberland, NW. of Caſtleſide, near Smallburn. Ratten-Row, Cumberland, in Caldbeck pariſh. Rattleſden, Suffolk, 4 miles W. of Stow-Market.

RATZEBURG, a town of Lower Saxony, ſeated on an iſland, in the midſt of a lake, about 30 miles in circumference; the banks of which are abrupt, and pleaſantly feathered with wood. The town belongs partly to the duchy of Mecklenburg Strelitz, and partly to that of Saxe Lawenburg. The principality of Ratzeburg extends about 10 miles each way, between Mecklenburg and Saxe Lawenburg, and is ſubject to Mecklenburg Strelitz. Ratzeburg is 20 miles S. of Lubec.

RATZIA. See RASCIA.

RAVA, or RAWA, a town and palatinate of Poland. The caſtle is appropriated for the reception of ſtate priſoners. The houſes are built of wood, and the town is ſeated in a moraſs, proceeding from the river Rava, by which it is ſurrounded. It is 55 miles SSW. of Warſaw.

RAVENGLASS

RAUCOUX, a village of Liege.

Rauderſide-Hill, Cumberland, on the Peterel. N. of Penrith.

RAVELLO, a ſea-port of Principato Citro.

Ravendale, Lincolnſ. between Thongcaſter and Saltfleet Haven.

RAVENGLASS, a well-built town in Cumberland, with a good harbour for ſhipping. It is ſeated between the rivers Irt and Eſk, (which, with the ſea, encompaſs three parts of it). The principal trade is fiſhing. It is 24 miles S. of Cockermouth, and 284 NNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

RAVENNA, an ancient and celebrated city of Romagna, in the pope's territory, with two academies, ſeveral churches and colleges, and 24 convents. It was formerly a city of great ſplendour, and very conſiderable, but it is now comparatively mean having ſuffered greatly ſince the times of the Romans and Goths (when it ſtood on the Adriatic, and had a celebrated harbour,) by the ſea, withdrawing from it, at leaſt, 3 miles; the houſes are moſtly old and ruinous, and all parts have a melancholy appearance. It ſtill, however, contains about 14,000 inhabitants, and is moſt remarkable, now, for the excellent wine produced in its neighbourhood. Theodoric, king of the Goths, reſided here, as did, afterwards, the exarchs of the Greek emperors. In the ſixth century, when there were three popes at the ſame time, one lived at Ravenna. The mauſoleum of Theodoric is ſtill to be ſeen here; it is remarkable for being covered by a ſingle ſtone, 28 feet in diameter, and 15 thick. This city is ſeated on the river Montone, 37 miles SE. of Ferrara, and 162 N. of Rome.

Ravenpike-Hill, Lancaſhire, NW. of Bolton.

RAVENSBERG, a county of Germany, in Weſtphalia, S. of the diſtricts of Minden and Oſnaburg, N. of Paderborn, and E. of Munſter. The ſoil is ſandy, in ſome parts, but, in others, produces corn, flax, and hemp. It takes its name from an ancient caſtle and town, 15 miles SSE. of Oſnaburg, and had formerly counts of its own. It is, at preſent, ſubject to the king of Pruſſia, and is dependant on the regency of Minden.

RAVENSBURG, a free and imperial town of Germany, in the circle of Suabia. It is well-built, and the public ſtructures are handſome. The inhabitants are partly Proteſtants, and partly Romaniſts, the magiſtracy being ſhared between them. It is ſeated on the river Cheuſs, 15 miles NW. of Lindaw.

Ravenſburn, a river in Kent, which runs into the Thames, between Deptford and Greenwich. Ravenſcroft, Cheſhire, NE. of Kinderton.

Ravenſdale, in Louth, Leinſter.

Ravenſden, NE. of Bedford. Ravenſfield, Yorkſ. NE. of Rotherham. Ravenſthorp, Northamptonſ. near Daventry. Ravenſworth-Caſtle, Durham, S. of Newcaſtle-upon-Tyne. Ravenſworth-Caſtle, Yorkſhire, NW. of Richmond. Raventon, Lancaſhire, between Wigan and Blackburn. Ravenwick, ſee Renwick. Raveſton, or Raunſton, Buckinghamſhire, near Oulney. Raughton, Cumb. in Dalſton pariſh, near Roſe Caſtle.

Ravill-Water, a river in Antrim, Ulſter. Ravilly, in Carlow, Leinſter.

Ravingham, Norfolk, W. of Hadſco. Ravingſtondale, Weſtmorland, W. of Pendragon-Caſtle, near Orton. Raumur, Suſſex, N. of Chicheſter. Raunds, Northamp. S. of Thrapſton. Raunſton, Derbyſhire, SE. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch.

RAVENSTEIN, a town of Brabant, capital of a county of the ſame name, which includes 14 towns and villages. It is ſituated on the S. ſide of the Meuſe, 5 miles WNW. of Grave. Alſo a town of Erzgeburg, and a town of Further Pomerania, both in Upper Saxony.

RAUVER, (ſuppoſed to be the Hydraſtes of Alexander) a river of Hindooſtan Proper, which riſes on the borders of Thibet, and falls into the Indus, after having received the united waters of the Chelum and the Chunaub, in the country of Lahore, about 28 miles NE. of Moultan.

Raw, Durham, on the coaſt, near Hartlepool. Rawcliff, Yorkſ. W. Riding, S. of Galtres Foreſt. Rawcliff, Upper and Lower, Lancaſh. on the river Wyre, near Garſtang. Rawden, Yorkſ. on the Aire, NW. of Leeds. Rawmarſh, Yorkſ. NE. of Rotherham, near the river Dun. Rawreth, Eſſex, near Wickford, SE. of Billericay. Rawſton, Derbyſhire, SW. of Aſhborn. Rawſton, Dorſetſhire, near Pimpern. Rawthwaite, Cumberland, S. of Ierby.

Ray, in Donegal, Ulſter.

Raydon, Hampſhire, in the New Foreſt.

Rayeſley, Shropſhire, near Bridgenorth Foreſt.

RAYLEIGH, or RALEIGH, a town in Eſſex, conſiſting chiefly of one broad handſome ſtreet. It is ſituated upon the creek called Hadley-Bay, which parts it from Canvey-Iſland, 13 miles SE. of Chelmsford, and 34 NNE.

REA REA REA

Red-Croſs, in Wicklow, Leinſter.

Red Deer-Park, Lincolnſhire, near the Bithams and Withams. Reddich, Cheſhire, 8 miles from Stockport. Reddich, Worceſterſhire, near Bromsgrove, with a conſiderable manufactory of needles, wherein upwards of 2000 perſons are employed. Reddington, Somerſetſhire, W. of Wivelscomb. Redford, Devonſhire, E. of Plymouth-Haven.

REDFORD, EAST. See RETFORD.

Redgate, Rutland, near Uppingham.

Redgate, in Clare, Munſter.

Redgrave, Suffolk, NE. of Buddeſdale, Redgewell, Eſſex, SW. of Clare. Redgwells, Herts, W. of the Pelhams. Redhall, Yorkſ. NE. of Leeds. Red-Hall, Yorkſhire, near Yarum. Redham, Norfolk, on the Yare, 3 miles from Yarmouth.

REDHEAD, a promontory of Angusſhire, S. of Montroſe. On it are the ruins of an ancient caſtle, almoſt ſurrounded by the ſea.

Red Hill, in Cavan, Ulſter.

Red-Hill, Kent, near Romney-Marſh, Red-Herſe-Vale. Warwickſ. a fruitful pleaſant tract, S. of the Avon, and E. of Edghill. It is ſo called from the figure of a horſe, cut on the ſide of a hill, near Tyſoe, out of red-coloured earth, the teaches that form it are cleanſed and kept open by a neighbouring freeholder, who enjoys lands by that ſervice. Redouſe, Yorkſ. W. Riding, near Hampall Priory. Red-houſe, NW. of York, on the Ouſe. Redbugh, Durham, on the Tyne, near Newcaſtle. Reding, Kent, near Appledore. Redings, Cheſhire, N. of Altrincham. Rediſh, Lancaſ. N. of Stopford. Redker, Yorkſ. in Cleveland, S. of the Tees-Mouth. Redland, Glouceſterſhire, near Briſtol, in the pariſh of Weſtbury-upon-Trin. Redlands, or Knacker's Hole, Dorſetſhire, N. of Melcombegis. Redlane, Dorſetſhire, half a mile SW. of Todbere. Redlinch, Somerſetſhire, 2 miles from Bruton. Redingfield, Suffolk, near Eye. Redlington, Norfolk, between North-Walſham and the ſea.

Red-Lion, in Kildare, Leinſter.

Redmain, Cumberland, 2 miles NE. of Cockermouth, on the oppoſite ſide of the Derwent, Redman, Hants NW. of Weyhill. Redmarſhall, Durham, W. of Stockton. Redmile, Leiceſterſ. N. of Belvoir-Caſtle. Redmore Plain, Leiceſ. 8 miles from Market-Boſworth, the ſcene of the deciſive battle between the houſes of York and Lancaſter, where Richard III. was killed. Rednall, Shropſhire, E. of Oſweſtry. Rednell, Norfolk, E. of Harlaſton. Redneſs, Yorkſhire, W. Riding in Marſhland, on the S. ſide of the river Ouſe.

REDON, a ſmall town in the dept. of Iſle and Vilaine. It ſerves as a mart for the commerce of Rennes, and is ſeated on the river Vilaine, 20 miles E. of Vannes, and 225 W. by S. of Paris.

REDONDE LA, a town of Spain, in Galicia, with a noted fiſhery for anchovies. It is ſituated on the W. coaſt, 15 miles N. of Tuy.

REDONDO(O), a town of Alentejo.

REDONDOS, a town of Beira.

RED-RUSSIA, or LITTLE RUSSIA, a late province of Poland, E. of Little-Poland: it was formerly governed by its own dukes, but on the deceaſe of the laſt duke, in 1340, king Caſimir laid claim to it by right of conſanguinity, and rendered it, from thence forward, a province of Poland. It included the palatinates of Chelm, Belcz, and Lemburg, and was named Red Ruſſia, from the colour of the hair of its inhabitants. See GALICIA.

REDRUTH, a town of Cornwall, ſituated among extenſive tin-works, 12 miles N. by E. of Helſtone, and 262 W. by S. of London. Market diſuſed.

RED-SEA, a ſea celebrated in ancient hiſtory, which extends in a direction from N. to S. dividing Aſia from Arabia. It is ſeparated from the Mediterranean on the N. by the Iſthmus of Suez, and communicates by the Straits of Babelmandel, on the S. with the Arabian Sea, and the Indian Ocean.

Redſham, Great and Little, Suffolk, between Halesworth and Beccles. Redſtone Paſſage, Worceſterſ. over the Severn, near Hartlebury-Caſtle. Redſtreet, Staff. near Talk-on-the-Hill. Redway, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Redwick, Glouceſterſ. on the Severn, a hamlet to Henbury, Redworth, Durham, between Biſhop-Auckland and Darlington. Reed, Suffolk, S. of Bury.

REES, a conſiderable town of Cleves.

Reeth, Yorkſ. near Barnard-Caſtle.

REGEN, a town in the circle of Bavaria, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, which riſes on the borders of Bohemia, and runs into the Danube near Ratiſbon. It is 40 miles E. of the laſt mentioned city.

REGENSPERG, a handſome town of Zurich, capital of a bailiwick of the ſame name, with a ſtrong caſtle. It is ſeated on a rock, which is part of Mount Jura, 10 miles NW. of Zurich.

Regill, Weſtmoreland, NE. of Shap.

REGGIO, a large and populous ſea-port town of Calabria Ultra, with ſome manufactures of ſtockings, gloves, waiſtcoats of ſilk or thread, &c. It contains two colleges and 7 convents, and is ſituated in a country which produces dates, oranges, citrons, with ſome ſugar-canes, on the Strait of Meſſina, 12 miles SSE. of Meſſina, and 190 S. by E. of Naples.

REGGIO, a city of Italy, capital of a duchy of the ſame name, included in that of Modena. It was deſtroyed by Alarick, and rebuilt by Charlemagne. In the cathedral are many capital paintings and ſculptures; and the town contains 16 convents. The inhabitants, who are about 18,000, carry on a great trade in ſilk. It is 15 miles WNW. of Modena.

REGINA, a town of Calabria Citra.

REGMALARD, a town in the dept. of the Orne.

REGNY, a town in the dept. of the Rhone, and Loire, 7 miles and a half of Roanne.

REICHENAU, an iſland in the circle of Suabia, in the Zeller Lake, (a branch of the Lake of Conſtance) about 3 miles long and 1 broad. It contains about 1600 inhabitants, all Romaniſts; 3 pariſhes, 1 village, and a celebrated abbey of Benedictines, and abounds with vines and other fruit trees. It is 4 miles W. of the city of Conſtance, and belongs to the biſhop of that place.

REICHENAU, a town in the country of the Griſons, ſeated upon the conflux of the two branches which form the Rhine. At this place is a curious wooden bridge of a ſingle arch, covered like that of Schaffhauſen, and conſtructed upon nearly the ſame plan. The ſpan of the arch is 220 feet in length. Reichenau is 7 miles SW. of Coire.

REICHENAU, a town in the archduchy of Auſtria, a town in the Vogtland, Upper Saxony, and a town of Chradim, in Bohemia.

REICHENBACH, a river of Swiſſerland, which riſes at the foot of Mount Wetterhorn, and falls into the river Aar, near Meyringen.

REICHENBACH, a town of Schweidnitz, in Sileſia, with manufactures of linen, canvas, and fuſtian; alſo a town of Veldentz, in the circle of Upper Rhine.

REICHENBACH, a town of Voigtland, in Upper Saxony, the inhabitants of which are moſtly clothiers and dealers in cloth, who dye a moſt beautiful ſcarlet.

REICHENBERG, a town of Boleſlaw, in Bohemia, with a conſiderable manufacture of cloth; alſo a town of Stiria, and a town and caſtle of Catzenelnbogen, in the circle of Upper Rhine.

REICHENFELLS, a town and caſtle of Reuſſen, in Upper Saxony, and a town of Carinthia.

REICHENHALL, a town of Upper Bavaria, ſituated on the Sala, 9 miles SW. of Saltzburg. It has a very rich ſalt ſpring, the water of which is partly boiled here, and partly conveyed by means of leaden pipes, to the diſtance of 12 miles, towards Traunſtein, and there boiled and exported.

REICHENSTEIN, a town in the archduchy of Auſtria; a town of Weſtphalia, belonging to a branch of the houſe of Salm; and a town of Prachalitz, in Bohemia.

REICHSHOFEN, a town in the dept. of the Lower Rhine, 9 miles N. of Haguenau.

REIFFENBERG, a town of Heſſe-Caſſel.

REIFFERSCHEID, a town and county of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine.

REIGNAC, a town in the dept of the Gironde, 9 miles NE. of Blaye.

REILLANNE, a town in the depart. of the Lower Alps.

REIN, a town of Stiria, 9 miles NW. of Gratz, and another town of Stiria, ſituated on the Save, 20 miles SE. of Cilley.

REINECK, a town or ballgraviate in the circle of the Lower Rhine, between Juliers and Cologna, 14 miles NNW. of Coblentz.

REINSBERG, or RHINSBERG, a town in Middle March of Brandenburg.

REITZBERG, a town and county of Weſtphalia, ſubject to Pruſſia.

Reiſt, in Waterford, Munſter.

Relly, near Durham. Relubas, Cornw. S. of St. Earth. Remington, Northumb. in the barony of Veley, near Craſter.

REMIREMONT, a town in the dept. of the Voſges, ſeated on the river Moſelle, 11 miles SSE. of Epinal.

Remirſton, Norfolk, N. of Hingham. Remneham, Berkſhire, near Henly-upon-Thames. Remney, or Rumney, a river of Wales, which riſes upon the borders of Brecknockſhire, and paſſing along the E. border of Glamorganſhire, which it ſeparates from Monmouthſhire, falls into the Severn a little below Cardiff. Rempſton, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle, E. of Corfe. Rempſton, or Rempeſton, S. of Nottingham.

REMY, ST. a town in the dept. of the Mouths of the Rhone, 10 miles NE. of Arles. A triumphal arch here, and a mauſoleum in the neighbourhood, diſplay the tale of the Auguſtan age. The firſt is not entire; but the latter is in the beſt ſtate of preſervation. Alſo a town in the dept. of Puy de Dome; and a town in the dept. of the Marne, 6 miles S. of St. Vitry.

taſte

Rendcomb, Glouceſterſ. 6 miles N. of Cirencester. Rendham, Suffolk, near Saxmundham. Rendleſham, Suffolk, on the river Deven, oppoſite Ufford. Renden-Dover, Buckinghamſhire, near Ayleſbury.

RENDSBURG, a ſtrongly-fortified town of Holſtein, containing about 3600 inhabitants. It is ſituated on a canal which communicates with the Baltic, 15 miles W. of Kiel.

RENFREW, a town of Scotland, and the capital of ſhire of the ſame name, with ſome inconſiderable manufactures of thread. The magiſtracy of it is compoſed of a provoſt, 2 bailiffs, and 16 counſellors. It contains, about 260 families, and is ſeated on the S. ſide of the river Clyde, 7 miles W. of Glaſgow.

RENFREWSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the W. and N. by the Frith of Clyde, on the E. by Lanerkſhire, and on the S. and SW. by Ayrſhire. The N. parts towards the Clyde are fertile, with ſome gentle uplands; thoſe to the S. and W. are more barren, mountainous, and mooriſh. This country was the paternal inheritance of the Stuarts, before they aſcended the throne, and ſtill gives title of baron to the Prince of Wales.

Renhold, 6 miles E. of Bedford.

RENNES, an ancient, large, and populous city in the dept. of Iſle and Vilaine, and ci-devant capital of Bretagne, containing 8 pariſh churches beſides the cathedral and ſeveral convents. The inhabitants are eſtimated at 55,000. Its ſtreets, in which are many good houſes, areas, &c. are as ſtraight as a line; but they are in general narrow and dark. The grand quare, in which are the Palace of Juſtice, and the Hotel-de-Ville, is very elegant. It is ſeated on the river Vilaine, which divides it into two parts, 58 miles N. of Nantes.

RENS, or REES, a town of Cologne, ſituated on the Rhine, 5 miles S. of Coblentz. Hard by it, in the Rhine, is to be ſeen the Konigſtahl, or Thronus Regalis, a very curious piece of antiquity, conſiſting of a round vault, built of free ſtone, and reſting upon 9 ſtone pillars, one of which ſtands in the middle. This vault, which is 60 feet in circumference, is furniſhed above with ſeven ſeats. The aſcent to it is by ſtairs of ſtone, conſiſting of 28 ſteps, and it has two ſtout doors. Here the electors formerly held their conſultations, concerning the election of a king and emperor, previous to the election day at Frankfort, and the election itſelf was ſometimes performed at this place. Henry VII. was elected here, in the year 1308, and in 1388, the Electoral league was eſtabliſhed here. Maximilian I. was the laſt emperor that was brought hither.

RENTI, a town in the dept. of the ſtraits of Calais, ſeated on the river Aa, 9 miles SSW. of St. Omer.

Renton, NE. of Durham. Renteſcombe, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle, a mile W. of Worth. Renwick, Cumberl. on the river Raven, near Croglin and Ouſby.

REOLLE, a town in the dept. of Gironde, ſeated on the river Garonne, 25 miles SE. of Bourdeaux.

REORTHE, LA, a town in the dept. of La Vendee.

REPEHAM, a town of Norfolk, trading largely in malt. It is ſeated on the river Eyne, over which it has a ford, 10 miles NW. of Norwich, and 109 NE. of London. Market on Saturday.

Repham, NE. of Lincoln. Reppis, Norfolk, near Ludham. Reppis, N. and S. Norfolk, SE. of Cromer. Reprin, Cornwall, NE. of Leſtwithiel. Repton, Derbyſhire, NE. of Burton, near the confluence of the Dove and Trent. It had a priory, and was anciently a large town where ſeveral of the Mercian kings were buried.

REQUENA, a town of New Caſtile.

Reſcoſe, Cornw. SE. of Tregony.

RESHD, a populous and commercial city of Perſia, capital of Ghilan, containing about 2000 houſes, but diſperſed without regularity. It is ſituated on a river on or near the SW. coaſt of the Caſpian Sea, in lat. 37. 30. N. lon. 50. E.

Reſingham, Northumberland, near the confluence of the Read and the Tyne. It has many inſcriptions, and other remains of antiquity, copied by Sir Robert Cotton and Warburton, and to be ſeen in Camden's hiſtory, from ſome of which it appears that its pagan inhabitants worſhipped a god called MOGON. Reſkymer, Cornw. SE. of Helſton.

RESOLUTION ISLAND, one of the Society Iſlands, in the S. Pacific Ocean. Lat. 17. 24. S. lon. 141. 15. W.

Reſton, N. and S. Linc. SE. of Lowth.

*RETFORD, or REDFORD, EAST, a pretty, large, well-built town of Nottinghamſhire, on the great North-road, and on the E. ſide of the river Idle, over which there is a bridge to Weſt-Retford. The principal trade is in hops and malt.

The

The canal from the Trent to Chesterfield, passes near this place. It is 30 miles N. of Nottingham, and 144 N. by W. of London. Market on Saturday. Redford, West, communicates with E. Redford, by a stone bridge over the Idle.

RETHEL, a town in the depart. of the Ardennes, formerly capital of a small district, called the Rethelois. It is 20 miles NE. of Rheims, and 108 NNE. of Paris.

RETIMO, a town of the island of Candia, with a bishop's see, a citadel, and a harbour, scarcely deep enough at present for small craft, though ships of war were once laid up here. All along the shore there is a rich and beautiful view of gardens, whose fruits are well tasted. The silk, wool, honey, wax, laudanum, and oil, produced here, are preferred to all others. It is seated on the N. coast of the island, 40 miles W. of Candia.

RETUSARI, a small island in the gulph of Finland, on which the town of Cronstadt stands.

RETZ, a town in the Upper Palatinate of Bavaria.

REVEL, a town in the dept of Upper-Garonne, 21 miles NW. of Carcassone.

REVEL, an opulent and well-fortified city of Russia, capital of the government of Revelskoi, formerly one of the Hans Towns. The harbour is spacious and convenient, and a part of the Russian fleet is usually stationed in it. The houses are well built, mostly of brick, and the citizens have very pleasant gardens without the walls. There is a college here with four professors. It is a place of considerable trade, and there are two great fairs every year, in May and September, much frequented by English and Dutch merchants. It is seated on the Gulf of Finland, partly on a mountain, 144 miles N. of Riga, and 164 WSW. of Peterſburg. Lat. 59. 20. N. lon. 23. 57. E.

REVELLO, a town of Saluzzo, in Piedmont, situated near the Po, on the top of a very high mountain, fortified both by art and nature.

Revely, Northumberland, SW. of Hebborn. Revely, Great and Little, Huntingdonshire, near Upwood. Revel's Hall, Herts, near Ware-Park. Revelstoke, Devonshire, near Plympton. Revet, Kent, 2 miles and a half NW. of Dover.

REVERO, a town of Mantua.

Reuswick, Cumberland, near Kirk-Oswald. Reusam, Northumberland, in the manor of Seaton Delaval.

REUSS, a river of Switzerland, which rises from a lake of Mount St. Gothard, and crossing the canton of Uri, flows through the lake of the cantons to Lucerne, and afterwards falls into the Rhine, 2 miles N. of Killingham, in the county of Baden.

REUSSEN, a princely county in the Vogtland, Upper Saxony, divided among several branches of the house of Reuss.

REUTLINGEN, a free, imperial town of Wirtemberg, in Suabia. It is adorned with one parochial church, an hospital, a grammar-school, and an orphan-house. Both the magistrates and burgesses are Lutherans. It is seated on a small river which runs into the Neckar, 32 miles NNW. of Ulm.

Rew, Dorsetshire, near Buckland-Abbas. Rewe, Devonsh. SW. of Bradninch. Rewley, in the suburbs of Oxford. Rey, a river in Wilts, which runs into the Thames, at Cricklade. Rey, Northumb. near Catchaside.

REY, a town of Irac-Agemi, in Persia, under the Macedonian kings called Europus, and afterwards Arsacia, about 129 miles E. of Amadan. It contained at one time, under the caliphs of Babylon, 100,000 houses, and a great number of mosques, colleges, and other magnificent buildings; but it is now mostly in ruins.

REYGNY, a town in the department of the Rhone and Loire, 7 miles E. of Roanne.

REYNA, a town of Andalusia.

REYNEL, a town in the dept. of the Upper Marne, 13 miles and a half NE. of Chaumont.

REZAN, or RIAZAN, a government of Russia, bounded on the N. by the government of Vladimirskoi; it was formerly a province of the government of Moscow. The country is populous and fertile in corn, and had formerly its own princes. Rezan is the capital.

RHAYADERGOWY, a town of Radnorshire, seated in a hilly country, on the river Wye, 18 miles NW. of Radnor and 177 WNW. of London. Market on Wednesday.

Rhaytylarfard, Carnarvonshire.

RHE, a very populous island on the W. coast of France, comprised in the dept. of La Vendée, from the coast of which, and that of Lower Charente, it is separated by the Straits of Breton about 7 miles wide. It is about 16 miles in length and three in breadth. Its products are very bitter wine, and abundance of salt. The inhabitants make excellent brandy, and the liquor called anisette. Their principal food is fish, and and ſhell-fiſh are plentiful on the coaſt. The principal town is St. Martin de Rhe.

RHEIMS, a large, ancient, and celebrated city, in the dept. of the Marne, containing about 30,000 inhabitants. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of an archbiſhop, who was the firſt duke and peer of France, and always crowned the king. The principal church, built before the year 406, is a very curious Gothic ſtructure. In the church of St. Remy, (under the altar of which the corpſe of St. Remiſius is preſerved in a magnificent ſhrine,) was lately kept, La ſainte Ampoule, a vial filled with a red, congealed liquor, always uſed in the coronation of the kings of France, who, ſince Clovis, have been ſucceſſively crowned at Rheims. The remains of an amphitheatre, a caſtle, a triumphal arch, and 3 gates of the city, which, to this day, bear the names of Pagan deities, viz. the Sun, Mars, and Ceres, are among the remarkable monuments of the Romans, ſtill preſerved here. Rheims is a long, narrow city, with low houſes, but the grand ſquare is very magnificent. There are conſiderable manufactures of flannel, coverlets, and other woollen and ſilk ſtuffs; and their wine and gingerbread are excellent. It is ſeated in a plain, ſurrounded by hills, on the river Vele, 75 miles ENE. of Paris.

RHEIN, a town of Pruſſia, 60 miles SE. of Koningſberg.

RHEINTHAL, a valley in Swiſſerland, between the canton of Appenzel and the territory of St. Gall on the one ſide, and the Rhine on the other; about 30 miles in length, and from 3 to 8 in breadth. It is fertile, and produces excellent wine. The inhabitants, who are about 13,000, are partly Proteſtants and partly Romanſts, and are governed by a bailiff who is appointed, alternately, by the cantons of Zurich, Lucern, Schweitz, Glarus, Uri, Underwalden, Zug, and Berne.

RHEINWALD, a valley in the country of the Griſons, about 20 miles in length. It is ſo called from the Hynder Rhine, which riſes on Mount Vogelſberg, and runs through the valley.

RHENEN, a town of Utrecht, ſituated on the river Leck, 20 miles NNE. of Bois le Duc.

RHINE, a great river of Europe, which riſes in three ſtreams, in the Griſon Alps, which unite into one. The principal branch deſcends from the mountain of St. Gothard, and paſſes through the lakes of Conſtance and Zell. After it has croſſed part of Germany and the Netherlands, watering Baſil, Huninguen, Straſburg, Worms, Mentz, Coblentz, Bonne, Cologne, Duſſeldorf, Rees, Emmerick, &c. it divides itſelf into two branches, one of which preſerves the name of the Rhine, and loſes itſelf in the ſands W. of Leyden. The other takes the name of the Lech, or Leck, and falls into the Merwe, 5 miles NW. of Dordrecht.

RHINE, LOWER, a circle of the empire of Germany, bounded by the circles of Weſtphalia, Upper Rhine, Franconia, Suabia, and by the duchy of Luxemburg, and France. It contains the electorates of Mentz, Treves, and Cologne, the palatinate of the Rhine, and ſome ſmaller ſtates. The elector of Mentz is the director.

RHINE, LOWER, a depart. of France, having the Rhine to the E. and forming the northern part of the ci-devant Alſace. Straſburg is the capital.

RHINE, UPPER, a dept. of France, S. of the dept. of the Lower Rhine. Colmer is the capital.

RHINE, UPPER, a circle of the empire of Germany, divided into two parts, the Upper and Lower. The lower part comprehends the territories of the landgraves of Heſſe-Caſſel, Heſſe-Darmſtadt, and Heſſe-Rhinfeldt; the counties of Naſſau, Solms, Hanau, Iſenburg, Seine, Wied, Wingeſtein, Aatzfield, and Waldeck, with the abbeys of Fulda and Hirſchfeld, and the imperial towns of Francfort, Fridburg, and Wetzlar. The upper part of the circle of the Upper Rhine lies to the W. of that river, and comprehends the biſhoprics of Baſle, Straſburg, Spire, and Worms, with the duchy of Deux ponts; the counties of Sponheim, Sarbruck, Falkenſtein, and Linange, and the imperial towns of Worms and Spire. The ſummoning princes are the biſhop of Worms and the elector palatine.

RHINE, PALATINATE OF THE. See PALATINATE.

RHINEBERG, a town of Cologne, ſituated on the Rhine, 44 miles NNW. of Cologne. It was taken by the allies in 1703, and afterwards diſmantled.

RHINEBRUCK, a town of Treves, ſituated on the Rhine.

RHINECK, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of the Rheinthal, ſeated on the Rhine, near its junction with the Lake of Conſtance.

RHINFELDT, or RHEINFELDEN, a ſmall, but ſtrong town of Auſtrian Suabia, the beſt of the four foreſt towns. It is ſeated on the S. ſide of the Rhine, over which it has a handſome bridge, 9 miles SSE. of Baſle.

RHINFALS, a town, fortreſs, and county of Catzenelnbogen, in the circle of Upper Rhine, near St. Goar, and 15 miles S. of Coblentz. It is built on a craggy rock, and commands the whole breadth of the Rhine. Veſſels that paſs here are obliged to pay a conſiderable toll.

RHINLAND, a diſtrict of S. Holland, which lies on both ſides the Rhine. Leyden is the capital.

RHINTHAL. See RHEINTHAL.

RHIN ZABERN, or SAVERNE, a town of Spire, in the circle of Upper Rhine.

RHODE ISLAND, one of the United States of N. America, bounded on the N. and E. by Maſſachuſets, on the S. by the Atlantic, and on the W. by Connecticut. Theſe limits comprehend what has generally been called Rhode Iſland and Providence Plantations. It is divided into 5 counties, which contain 29 townſhips. It is as healthful as any part of N. America, but is principally a country for paſture, and not for grain, the farmers here, raiſing great numbers of the fineſt and largeſt neat cattle in America. They alſo export large quantities of excellent butter and cheeſe. In the rivers and bays are plenty of cod, halibut, mackarel, and other fiſh, to the amount of more than 70 different kinds. Providence and Newport are the two chief towns. About 600 veſſels enter and clear annually, at the different ports of this ſtate.

RHODE ISLAND, an iſland of N. America, in the ſtate of the ſame name. It is about 13 miles long from N. to S. and 4 miles wide, and is divided into three townſhips, Newport, Portſmouth, and Middleton. The ſoil is of a ſuperior quality. This iſland is a noted reſort of invalids from the ſouthern climates. It is exceedingly pleaſant and healthful, and celebrated for its fine women, ſo that travellers have called it, with propriety, the Eden of America.

RHODES, an iſland of Aſia, on the S. ſide of Natolia, and in the Mediterranean Sea, about 40 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. The air is good, and the ſoil is extremely fertile in excellent corn, from the numerous ſprings which water it, although it is, in itſelf, dry and ſandy, but badly cultivated. It is famous for having been the reſidence of the knights of Jeruſalem till the year 1523, when the Turks got poſſeſſion of it. The principal town is of the ſame name, and is an archbiſhop's ſee; it has a good harbour, with a narrow entrance between two rocks, on which are two towers. Here, in all probability, ſtood the famous Coloſſus, a ſtatue of bronze, 70 cubits high. It was reckoned one of the ſeven wonders of the old world, for a ſhip, with all its ſails, might paſs between the legs. It was thrown down by an earthquake, 56 years after it was firſt erected; and when the Saracens became maſters of this iſland in the year 665, near 900 years after its fall, they knocked it in pieces, with which they loaded 900 camels. The knights of Jeruſalem took it from the Saracens in the year 1309, and kept it till it was taken from them by the Turks. It is inhabited by Turks and Jews, for the Greeks and other Chriſtians are obliged to live in the ſuburbs. The number of inhabitants, in the whole iſland, is eſtimated at about 36,500. Lat. 36. 24. N. lon. 28. 25. E.

Rhodes, Lancaſhire, NW. of Manchester. Rhodley, Northumberland, near Morpeth.

RHONE, a large river of France, which riſes in the Alps, at the eaſtern extremity of the Valais, flows through the lake and city of Geneva, and ſeparating the departments of Mont-Blanc and Iſere from that of Ain, it flows to Lyons, Vienne, Valence, Avignon, and Arles, below which it empties itſelf into the Mediterranean by ſeveral mouths.

RHONE AND LOIRE, a department of France, bounded on the E. by the river Rhone, and on the W. by the departments of the Puy de Dome and the Allier. It is compoſed of the ci-devant Lyonnois, Forez, and Beaujolois. Lyons is the capital.

RHONE, MOUTHS OF THE, a dept. of France, E. of the dept. of Gard, from which it is ſeparated by the river Rhone, and on the N. by the Venaiſſin. It is formed of the weſtern part of Provence. Aix is the capital.

Rhos Fair, Cardiganſhire.

RHYNDS, or RINNS, of GALLOWAY, the weſtern diviſion of Wigtonſhire, in Scotland, almoſt entirely cut off from the remainder of the county by Loch Ryan and Glenluce-Bay.

RHYNEY. See RUMNEY.

RIALEXA, or REALEJO, a town of Mexico, in Nicaragua, ſeated on a bay of the South Sea, at the mouth of a ſmall river of the ſame name, 18 miles NW. of Leon. Here is a good harbour; but the air is very unwholeſome, on account of the moraſſes.

Riall, Northumb. SW. of Kirkheaton. Riall, Yorkſhire, SE. of Headon.

RIAZAN. See REZAN.

RIBADAVIA, a town of Spain, in Galicia, ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Minho and Avia, in a territory that produces the beſt wine in Spain, 23 miles NE. of Tuy.

RIBADEO, a town of Spain, in Galicia, with a fine harbour, defended by two caſtles. It is ſituated near the mouth of the river Eo, 15 miles NE. of Mondonedo.

RIBAGNAC, a town in the dept. of the Dordonne.

RIBAUVILLER, a town in the dept. of the Upper Rhine, 7 miles and a half N. of Colmar.

Ribbesford, Worceſterſ. a mile S. of Bewdley.

RIBBLE, a river which riſes in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, runs acroſs Lancaſhire, and falls into the Iriſh ſea, a few miles below Preſton.

Ribby Cumwray, Lancaſ. in Kirham pariſh, Amounderneſs. Ribcheſter, Lanc. on the Ribble, NE. of Preſton; it was once a very conſiderable town of the Danes and Saxons, as well as a ſtation of the Romans.

RIBEIRA GRANDE, or ST. JAGO, a town in St. Jago, the principal of the Cape-de-Verd Iſlands, with a good harbour: it is ſituated between 2 high mountains, on the only river in the iſland, which runs only about a league in its whole courſe. It is the ſee of a biſhop, and reſidence of the governor; and contains a cathedral, two convents, and between 4 and 500 houſes. The latter, except the governor's, are only of one ſtory, and are covered with branches and leaves of the cocoa-nut trees. Lat. 15. 0. N. lon. 23. 24. W.

RIBEMONT, a town in the department of Aiſne, ſeated upon an eminence, near the river Oiſe, ſeven miles SE. of St. Quentin.

Ribleton, Lancaſhire, near Preſton.

RIBNITZ, a town of Mecklenburg.

Riborough, Great and Little, Norfolk, on the river Winſder, SE. of Fakenham. Ribſton-Hall, Yorkſ. E. of Knareſborough. Ribton, Cumb. 4 miles W. of Cockermouth, and 4 E. of Workington, on the oppoſite bank of the Derwent. Riby, Lincolnſ. near the Limberghs. Richal, Yorkſ. near Selby. Richborough, Kent, near Sandwich.

Richardſtown, in Kildare, Leinſter.

RICHLAND, a county of S. Carolina.

RICHELIEU, a town in the depart. of Indre and Loire, founded by Cardinal Richelieu in 1637. The ſtreets are as ſtraight as a line, and it contains a handſome ſquare, with an elegant palace and extenſive park. It is ſeated on the rivers Amable and Vide, 9 miles E. of Loudun, and 152 SW. of Paris.

Rich Hill, in Armagh, Ulſter.

Richell, Eſſex, NW. of Hatfield-Regis.

RICHENVFIR, a town in the dept. of the Upper Rhine, 6 miles NNW. of Colmar.

Richmond, a populous village in Surry, anciently called Sheen, but Henry VII. gave it the name of Richmond, from that diſtrict in Yorkſhire, whereof he had been earl. Here was a palace the favourite reſidence of Queen Elizabeth, and in which ſhe cloſed her illuſtrious career; it is ſtill diſtinguiſhed by its beautiful royal gardens, which, in the ſummer ſeaſon, are open to the public; and in theſe is a noble obſervatory, built by the late Sir W. Chambers in 1769. In this, among other fine inſtruments, are particularly to be noticed a mural arch of 140 degrees and 8 feet radius; a zenith ſector of 12 feet; a tranſit inſtrument of 8 feet, and a 10 feet reflector by Herſchel. The preſent palace, which is finely ſituated, is a very plain edifice, built by the Duke of Ormond, who had obtained a grant of ſome lands about Richmond from King William III.; but, on that duke's attainder, it devolved to the crown. An elegant ſtone bridge, of 5 ſemicircular arches, was erected over the Thames here, in 1777. Near this village alſo is an extenſive royal park. It is 9 miles WSW. of London.

Richmond Hill, its ſummit is a moſt delightful ſpot, commanding a truly beautiful, luxuriant, and diverſified proſpect, (deſervedly celebrated by the ſweet poet, "who ſung the ſeaſons and their change," by Dr. Smollett, and by other writers of genius, "ſenſibly alive to the beauties of nature,") of the "Enchanting vale of Thames," with the royal palaces, magnificent ſeats, glittering towns, charming pleaſure-grounds, hills, groves, ſwelling lawns, meadows, paſture grounds, corn-fields, &c. &c. on its banks. The landſcape from this favourite ſituation, exhibits a picture of the moſt elegant ſimplicity, nature decorated with the greateſt neatneſs, the moſt exquiſite embelliſhments of rural ſcenery; in ſhort, an elyſium, charming the eye with undeſcribable variety. It takes in a view, more or leſs diſtant of the city of London, of Windſor Caſtle, Hampton Court, Peterſham, Eſher, Ham, Harrow, Highgate, Hampſtead, with other parts of Middleſex and Surry.

RICHMOND, a large town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, containing many handſome houſes, built of free-ſtone, with a flouriſhing manufactory of yarn ſtockings, and of woollen knit caps for ſeamen. It is pleaſantly ſeated on the river Swale, over which it has a ſtone bridge, 40 miles NW. of York, and 230 NNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

RICHMOND, a town of N. America, capital of the ſtate of Virginia. It has an elegant ſtate-houſe, and ſtands on the N. ſide of James River, at the foot of ſome falls, which are ſeven miles in length; to obviate the inconvenience of which, a canal has been lately undertaken. It is 60 miles N. by W. of Williamſburg.

RICHMOND, a town of Rhode Iſland, and of Staten Iſland, New York; alſo a town of the iſland of St. Vincent, in the Weſt Indies; and a county in the reſpective States of S. Carolina, Virginia, and Georgia.

RICHMONDSHIRE, a diſtrict in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, included in the duchy of Lancaſter. It was formerly a county of itſelf, and contains many towns and villages. Alan, one of William the Conqueror's generals, was rewarded with this earldom, including all the NW. part of Yorkſhire, towards Lancaſhire. He built a large caſtle here, the tower whereof yet ſtands. It abounds in romantic ſituations, and is noted for the neatneſs and induſtry of the inhabitants, who manufacture knit ſtockings and other coarſe goods. Many lead mines are wrought in this diſtrict, of which Richmond is the capital town.

Richmondton, Linc. near Boſton. Richa, Monm. on the Ebwith, W. of Caerleon. Rickardſcot, Staff. W. of the Penk, by Coppinhall. Rickerby, Cumb. near Carliſle. Rickinghall, Upper and Lower, Suffolk, near Botteſdale. Ricklemarſh, Kent, by Blackheath. Rickling, Eſſex, N. of Quendon.

RICKMANSWORTH, a town of Hertfordſhire, ſituated in a low, black, moriſh ſoil, on a river from Cheſham that runs into the Coln here, together with the Gade, (altogether forming a rich pool of water, to which its name, Rickmearſworth, in old records ſeems to allude,) 9 miles SSW. of St. Alban's, and 18 NW. of London. A conſiderable market for wheat (which is brought hither from the ſeveral mills on its ſtreams) on Saturday.

Rickneſs, Hertfordſ. N. of Ware Park. Rickton, Shropſ. on the Rea, near N. Cleubury. Ricot, Oxf. 3 miles SW. of Tame. Ridale, or Riſdale, a river in Yorkſhire, which runs into the Swale below Richmond. Riddings, Cheſhire, near Altringham. Riddleſton, E. and W. NE. and N. of Keighley. Ride, Iſle of Wight, oppoſite Portſmouth and Goſport. Ride, Kent, near Harty, in Sheppey Iſle. Rideniſſe, Glouc. in Nibley pariſh. Ridſen, Warw. N. of Kenilworth-Chaſe. Ridge, Cheſhire, near Macclesfield. Ridge, Herts, near S. Mims. Ridge, Staffordſhire, near Bloreheath. Ridge-Hall, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Ridge-Hill, Herts, near Barnet Common. Ridge-Lane, Warw. in the pariſhes of Oldbury and Merevale. Ridgemond, Bedfordſhire, E. of Woburn. Riding, Durham, between Kibbleſworth and Urpeth. Ridlambope, Durham, near Blanchland in Durham. Ridley, a river in Northumberland. Ridley, Cheſhire, near Bunbury and Ridley-Pool. Ridley, Kent, 3 miles and a half N. of Wrotham. Ridley-Hall, Northumb. by Beltingham. Ridley-Hall, Northumb. W. of Allanton. Ridlington, Rutl. NW. of Uppingham. Ridmarley, Worceſ. S. of Malvern-Hills. Ridmer, or Redmire, Yorkſhire, NW. of Midlam. Ridware-Hampſtall, Staff. on the Blythe, between Rugeley and Yoxal. Ridgeware-Hall and Pipe, and Ridware-Maveſtin, Staff. near the Trent. Riecheſter, Northumberl. an old ſtation, the capital of the Otadini, and the Bremanium of the Romans. Rie-Hall, Eſſex, near Clavering.

RIETBERG, a town and county, about 18 miles in length, and 6 in breadth, of Weſtphalia, ſituated on the Ems, 12 miles WNW. of Padeborn.

RIETI, a town of Spoletto, ſeated near the Lake Rieti, 37 miles NE. of Rome.

RIEUX, the name of a town in the reſpective departments of Upper Garonne, Morbihan, Ille and Vilaine, Aude, and Lower Alps.

RIEZ, a town in the department of the Lower Alps. It is a ſmall, populous place, but was formerly much larger than it is at preſent. It is 35 miles NE. of Aix.

RIGA, a large, populous, and opulent city of Ruſſia, capital of the government of Riga, or Livonia. Next to Peterſburgh, it is juſtly conſidered as the moſt commercial town in the whole empire. The trade is chiefly carried on by foreign merchants, who are reſident in the town; but thoſe of the Engliſh factory enjoy the greateſt ſhare of the commerce. The principal exports are corn, hemp, flax, iron, timber, maſts, leather, tallow, &c.; its principal imports are ſalt, cloth, ſilks, wine, wine, grocery wares, and ſalted herrings. The maſts grow moſtly in the diſtricts which border on the Dnieper, and are ſent up that river to a landing-place, from which they are tranſported to the Duna; but they can only paſs the laſt-mentioned river in the ſpring, or about three weeks after the ſnow begins to melt, on account of the numerous ſhoals. They are then formed into floats of from 50 to 200 pieces, uſually from 70 to 80 feet in length, and deſcend the ſtream to Riga. The hemp, which is brought from the Ukraine and Poland, employs two years in its paſſage to Riga. It is conveyed in barks of from 2 to 300 tons burden. Within the fortifications are about 9000 inhabitants, and in the ſuburbs 15,000, excluſive of a garriſon of 1000 men. Here is a floating wooden bridge over the Dwina, or Duna, 40 feet in breadth, and 2600 in length. In the winter, when the ice ſets in, this bridge is taken to pieces and removed, and in the ſpring it is replaced. Riga was finally obliged to ſubmit to Peter the Great, in 1710. It is 5 miles from the mouth of the Duna, and 160 NE. of Konigſberg. Lat. 56. 58. N. lon. 24. 25. E.

RIGA, GOVERNMENT OF, now called Rizſkoi. See LIVONIA.

Rigby, Yorkſhire, SW. of Pontefract. Righton, Yorkſhire, NW. of Burlington.

RIGNAC, a town in the depart. of the Aveiron, 12 miles WNW. of Rhodez.

RIGNEY, a town in the reſpective departments of the Doubs, the Aube, and the Indre and Loire.

Rigſby, Lincolnſ. near Alford. Rigton, Yorkſ. NE. of Otley. Rigton, Yorkſ. SW. of Wetherby. Riball, Rutland, on the river Gwaſh, near Caſterton. Rill, Devonſhire, near Exmouth.

RILLY, a town in the depart. of the Marne, 6 miles S. of Rheims.

RILSK, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Kurſk, ſituated on the Sem, 52 miles WSW. of Kurſk.

Rillington, Yorkſ. E. of New Malton. Rilſton, Yorkſ. in Burnſal pariſh. Rimington, Lancaſhire, NW. of Coln.

RIMINI, anciently ARIMINIUM, a city of Italy, in Romagna, chiefly remarkable for many remains of antiquity, among which are a triumphal arch, erected to Auguſtus, part of an amphitheatre, and ſome ſtones with inſcriptions. It is ſeated on the river Marecchia, (the harbour of which is now ſo choked up with ſand, as ſcarcely to admit of ſmall barks) at ſome diſtance from the coaſt of the Adriatic, the ſea having receded from it, in lat. 44. 7. N.

RIMMEGEN, or REMISH, a town of Luxemberg, ſituated on the Moſelle, 24 miles NNE. of Thionville.

RIMONT, a town in the dept. of the Arriege.

Rimpton, Somerſ. SE. of the Camels. Rimſcomb, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle. Rimſwell, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, near Roſs.

Rinabally, in Cork, Munſter, about 3 miles S. of Carrigaline.

Rinborough, Yorkſ. SE. of Hornſey.

RINCOPING, or RINGKIOBING, a conſiderable ſea-port town of Ripen, in North Jutland, ſituated on the W. coaſt, in lat. 56. 7. N.

RINDOMS, a town of Catalonia, 11 miles NW. of Tarragona.

Rinegonagh, in Waterford, Munſter. Rinfad, a promontory which forms the E. of Killough-Bay, in Down, Ulſter.

Ringay, a river in Cheſhire.

Ringdufferin, in Down, Ulſter.

Ringfield, Suffolk, S. of Beccles.

Ringhaddy, in Down, Ulſter, N. of Killeleagh, on the ſide of Strangford Lake, is noted for its oyſters.

Ringland, Norfolk, near Taverham. Ringleſton, Kent, near Doddington. Ringleton, Kent, in Woodneſborough pariſh. Ringmer, Suſſex, NE. of Lewes. Ringmere-Pit, Norfolk, near Thetford and Kilverſton, a remarkable pool of 6 or 7 acres in extent, in form of an amphitheatre. Rings, Kent, near Woldham.

Ringroan, in Cork, Munſter.

Ringſhall, Bucks, in Ivingo pariſh. Ringſhall, Suffolk, SW. of Needham.

RINGSTED, a ſmall town and bailiwick of Zealand, in Denmark, in the great church of which ſeveral kings, queens, &c. lie buried, as Waldemar I. Waldemar II. Erick the Saint, Duke Knute the Saint, and other perſons of diſtinction. It is 29 miles SW. of Copenhagen.

Ringſted, Northamp. on the Nen, N. of Higham Ferrers. Ringſtead, Dorſetſhire, on the coaſt, NE. of Weymouth. It is divided into Eaſt, Weſt, and Middle, and is 2 miles S. of Oſmington. Ringſted, Great and Little, Sts. Andrews and Peter, Norfolk, N. of Snetſham, and near Houghton. Ringwold, Kent, near the ſea, five miles NE. of Dover.

RINGWOOD, a town of New Jerſey.

RINGWOOD, a pretty large, thriving town of Hampſhire, full of good houſes. It trades chiefly in leather, worſted knit ſtockings, druggets, and narrow cloths, and is ſituated on or near the Avon, 30 miles SW. of Wincheſter, and 91 SW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Rinmore, Devonſh. near Bigbery and Hope-Key. Rinſell, Eſſex, near Danbury.

*RINTELN, a town of Shawenburg, in Weſtphalia, with a univerſity, ſituated on the Weſer, 9 miles SSE. of Minden.

RIO GRANDE, a river of Terra Firma, which riſes almoſt under the equator, and running N. through Terra Firma, falls into the Gulf of Mexico, between Carthagena and St. Martha, in lon. 74. 40. W.

RIO GRANDE, a river of Africa, which runs from E. to W. and falls into the Atlantic Ocean in lat. 11. 0. N.

RIO GRANDE, a river of Braſil, which runs into the ſea in lat. 5. 45. S.

RIO GRANDE, a river of Jamaica, on the N. coaſt, which runs into the ſea, in lat. 18. 13. N. lon. 76. 14. W. alſo a town of Fernambuco, in Braſil.

RIO JANEIRO, a river of S. America, which riſes in the mountains W. of Braſil, and running E. through that country, falls into the Atlantic Ocean at the city of Rio de Janeiro.

RIO DE JANEIRO, a captainſhip of Braſil, ſo called from the river Janeiro, which runs through the middle of it. The rivers in this juriſdiction are but few, and only two of them large, on the banks of which the natives have many villages. At the mouth of the Janeiro, is ſituated the city of Rio de Janeiro, or St. Sebaſtian, its capital.

RIO DE JANEIRO. See ST. SEBASTIAN.

RIOM, a town in the dept. of Puy-de-Dome, 8 miles N. of Clermont, and 115 S. of Paris.

RIO NEGRO, a conſiderable river of S. America, which runs from near the river Oronoko, or one of its branches, in New Grenada, to the river Amazon, which it enters at or near Fort Rio Negro, ſituated in the government of Peru, in lat. about 3. 15. S. and lon. 62. 14. W.

RIO SECO, a town of Beira, on the borders of Spain and a town of Leon.

RIOBAMBA, a juriſdiction of Quito, in S. America. Its productions and manufactures excel all the reſt of the provinces of Peru. The whole country, indeed, is full of gold and ſilver mines. Its capital, of the ſame name, is about 90 miles S. of Quito.

RIOLI, a town of Capitanata.

RIOM, a town in the dept. of Puy-de-Dome, 8 miles N. of Clermont, and 115 S. of Paris; and a town in the dept. of the Cantal.

RIONS, a town in the dept. of Gironde, 15 miles SE. of Bourdeaux.

RIPA TRANSONE, a town of Ancona.

RIPAILLE, a town in the dept. of Mount Blanc, ſituated on the S. ſide of the lake of Geneva.

Ripe, Suſſex, SE. of Laughton.

RIPEN, a town (formerly very flouriſhing) and dioceſe of N. Jutland, ſituated on the W. coaſt, containing two colleges, a public library, and ſome trade in grain, horned cattle, horſes, &c. The harbour, (which will only admit of ſmall veſſels) lies at the mouth of the river Nipſaa, in lat. 55. 19. N.

Ripingale, Linc. near Bourn. Ripl, Worceſterſ. N. of Tewkeſbury.

*RIPLEY, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, noted for its plentiful production of liquorice. It is ſeated on the river Nyd, over which it has a bridge, 4 miles NW. of Knareſborough, and 211 N. by W. of London. Mark. on Friday.

Ripley, Derbyſhire, in Pentridge pariſh. Ripley, Hants. in Sopley pariſh. Ripley, Kent, 4 miles and a half S. of Sandwich. Ripley, Surry, in Send pariſh. Ripley-Court, Kent, in Weſtwell pariſh. Riplington, Hants, NW. of Maple-Durham. Riplington, Northumb. SW. of Morpeth. Riponden, Yorkſ. SW. of Halifax. Ripple, Eſſex, E. of Barking. Ripplingham, Yorkſ. NW. of Hull.

*RIPPON, a well-built, populous town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, with a market-place, reckoned by ſome the fineſt ſquare of the kind in England, and adorned with a curious obeliſk. It had once a flouriſhing woollen manufactory, and is ſtill a ſtaple for wool, which is bought up here every week by the clothiers of Leeds, Wakefield, Halifax, &c. but it is moſt noted for its manufacture of hardware, particularly ſpurs. Its magnificent church, adorned with 3 lofty ſpires, is both parochial and collegiate, (having a dean and chapter, and ſending a proctor to the convocation of the province of York) and is the only one that is ſo in England except that of Southwell, in Nottinghamſhire. Before the conqueſt, and ſome time after it, this place was governed by elders and a chief magiſtrate, called a wakeman or watchman. A conſiderable number of Saxon coins were found here in the year 1695, particularly the braſs coins called ſticcas, 8 whereof made a penny. A navigable canal comes up to the town. It is pleaſantly ſituated on the river Ure, or Aire, over which it has 2 ſtone bridges, 28 miles NW. of York, and 218 NNW. of London. Market on Thurſday. Fairs on Thurſday after June 24, Thurſday after March 21, on May 12, the firſt Thurſday in June, on Holy Holy Thurſday, and on the firſt Thurſday after Auguſt 22, and November 22.

Ripton, Abbot's, and Ripton King's, N. and NE. of Huntingdon. Riſborough, Yorkſ. SW. of Pickering.

RIQUIER, a town in the depart. of Somme, 5 miles NE. of Abbeville.

RISBOROUGH, MONKS, a town of Buckinghamſ. 7 miles S. of Ayleſbury and 37 WNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Riſborough, Prince's, Bucks, near Hamden-Magna. Riſbury, Heref. SE. of Leominſter. Riſby, Linc. near Burton-upon-Trent. Riſby, Suffolk, NW. of Bury. Riſby, Yorkſ. NW. of Hull. Riſel, Monmouthſ. NW. of Newport. Riſbungles, Suffolk, N. of Debenham. Riſing or Riſingham, Northumb. SE. of Hexham. Riſingarth, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs. Riſington, Great, Little, and Wick, S. of Stow-on-the-Would. Riſkington, Linc. N. of Sleaford. Riſkins, or Piercy Lodge, Bucks, near Colnbrook. Riſley, Bedfordſ. near Swineſhead. Riſley, Derbyſ. on the E. waſh, near Sandiacre, E. of Derby. Riſley, Lancaſh. N. of Warrington. Riſlip, Middl. between Uxbridge and Pinner. Riſſingdale, ſee Ravingſtondale. Riſton, Somerſetſ. near Taunton.

RITBURG, a town of Weſtphalia, capital of a county of the ſame name.

Ritherſthorp, NW. of Northampton. Riton, Warwickſh. near Weſton. Riton, Yorkſ. near Old Malton. Riton-upon-Dunſmore, Warwickſ. has a bridge over the Avon, NE. of Stoneley-Abbey.

RIVA, a town and river of Tirol.

RIVADEO. See RIBADEO.

RIVALTA, a town of Milan; and a town of Piedmont.

Rivaulx, Yorkſ. by Helmeſley. Rivenhall, Eſſex, by Witham. River, and its Park, Suſſex, NW. of Petworth. Riverhead, Kent, by Sevenoaks. Riverhill, Kent, SE. of Sevenoaks. Rivers, Kent, NW. of Dover. Riverſhall, Eſſex, between Boxted and Dedham.

Riverſtown, in Galway, Connaught. Riverſtown, in Cork, Munſter, near Glanmire.

RIVESALTES, a town in the dept. of the Eaſtern Pyrenees, 6 miles NNW. of Perpignan.

RIVOLI, a town of Piedmont; and a town in the Veroneſe.

Rixton, Lancaſ. near Ribcheſter.

ROA, a town in Old Caſtile, ſeated on the Duero.

Road, Somerſetſ. Roadgate, Yorkſ. W. Riding, near Helenſford. Roadnook, Derbyſ. in Scarſdale. Roake, Oxfordſ. a hamlet, partly in Benſington pariſh.

ROANNE, a town in the department of Rhone and Loire, ſeated on the river Loire. It is a convenient ſtaple for merchandiſe ſent from Lyons, down the Loire, and by the canal of Briare, into the Seine, and thence to Paris, Orleans, &c. Roanne is 45 miles NW. of Lyons, and 210 SSE. of Paris.

ROANOAK, an iſland near the coaſt of N. Carolina, at the entrance into Albemarle Sound. Lat. 35. 50. N.

ROANOAK, a long, rapid river of N. America, (formed in the ſouthern part of Virginia) by 2 principal branches; namely, Staunton River, which riſes in Virginia, and Dan River, which riſes in N. Carolina. This river is ſubject to inundations, and, on account of the falls, is navigable for ſhallops only, about 60 or 70 miles. It enters, by ſeveral mouths, into the W. end of Albemarle Sound.

Robarns, Surry, near E. and W. Horſley.

ROBBEN ISLAND, called ſometimes in Engliſh charts, Penguin Iſland, a barren ſandy iſland, about 6 miles in circumference, at the entrance into Falſe-Bay, near the Cape of Good Hope. Lat. 33. 50. S. lon. 18. 22. E.

Robb's-Croſs, Northumb. in Readſdale. Robert's-Caſtle, Yorkſh. near Knareſborough. Robert's-Hall, Lanc. E. of Hornby-Caſtle.

Robert's-Town, in Kildare, Leinſter. It is the ſtage between Sallins and Rathangan, on the Grand Canal, 21 miles from Dublin.

ROBIN-HOOD'S-BAY, a large populous village, ſituated on a bay of the ſame name, on the coaſt of the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, between Scarborough and Whitby. It is about one mile broad, and conſiſts chiefly of fiſhermen, who ſupply the city of York, and all the adjacent country, with herrings, and all ſorts of fiſh in their ſeaſon; they have alſo well-boats, wherein are kept large quantities of crabs, lobſters, &c.

Robin-Hood's-Butts, Yorkſ. two hills SW. of Robin-Hood's Bay. Robin-Hood's-Well, Yorkſ. between Pontefract and Doncaſter.

ROBINSON, a county of N. Carolina.

Robley-Heath, Herts, N. of Welwin. Robſſay, Dorſetſ. in Marſhwood-Vale and Whitchurch pariſh. Roborough, Devonſ. E. of Torrington. Robrindale, Lancaſhire, SE. of Hornby-Caſtle. Roby, Lanc. SE. of Weſt Darby. Rocadyne, Shropſ. near Wellington.

ROCCA-D'ANFO, a town in the Breſciano.

ROCCA, a town of Lavora, in Naples; a town of Iſtria; and a ſmall iſland in the Weſt-Indies, about 9 leagues W. of Orchilla. Alſo a town of Venetian Iſtria, and a town of Tuſcany, Friuli, Genoa, and Urbino Monaco, and two of Parma; a town of Calabria Ultra, near which is a celebrated coral fiſhery; a town of Abruzzo Citra, 2 towns of Lavora, 2 of Principato Citra, 1 of Baſilicata, 1 of Moliſo, and 1 of Calabria Citra.

ROCCA-MONSENA, a town of Lavora.

ROCCA-VECCHIA, a town of Lavora.

Roch, Cornwall, NW. of Leſtwithiel.

Roch, Worceſ. S. of the Foreſt of Wire.

Roch Abbey, Yorkſ. W. Riding, SE. of Rotherham, was ſituated among woods and rocks; in one of which is a cave, ſaid to have had a ſubterraneous paſſage formerly to a monaſtery in Tickhill Caſtle, about two miles diſtant. One ſide of the building, with ſome pillars and arches yet remain. Here is a neighbouring quarry, the ſtone whereof (called Roch Abbey ſtone) is ſo white and ſo beautiful, that maſons prize it above all others.

Rechcounel, in W. Meath, Leinſter, E. of Mullingar. Rochdale, in Louth, Leinſter.

Roch Court, Hants, by Fareham.

* ROCHDALE, a large, populous town in Lancaſhire, ſituated in a vale on the river Roche, ſurrounded by hills which abound in coals; it has flouriſhing manufactures of hats, bays, ſerges, and other woollen and cotton goods. Its manufactures, which have been much improved of late years, extend 8 or 10 miles N. of the town, which is 55 miles WSW. of York, and 195 NNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

ROCHDOWN, a town of Kentucky.

Roche, a river in Lancaſhire, which runs into the Irwell, at Pilkington Park, 3 miles SE. of Bolton.

ROCHE, a town of Savoy, with ſome trade in the tanning of leather and the making of ſhoes.

ROCHE, LA, an ancient town of Luxemburg, the capital of a county which comprehends 51 towns and villages. It is ſituated upon the Ourte, (with a caſtle on a rock, which commands the city, 28 miles S. of Liege. Alſo a town in the reſpective departments of the Correze, Seine and Oiſe, Nievre, Upper Loire, Puy de Dome, Higher Alps, Doubs, N. Coaſts, Upper Vienne, and 2 in the dept. of Dordogne.

ROCHE BERNARD, a town in the dept. of Morbihan, ſeated on the river Vilaine, 23 miles SSE. of Vannes.

ROCHE-CHOUART, a town in the department of Upper Vienne, 18 miles S. by W. of Limoges, and 183 S. by W. of Paris.

ROCHEFORT, a conſiderable ſea-port in the dept. of Lower Charente, with a deep commodious harbour, well ſheltered from all hurricanes. Here are alſo vaſt barracks, an armory, excellent docks, magazines, &c. for building, careening, and refitting ſhips of war, with a marine academy. The ſtreets are uniformly broad, and in ſtraight lines, and the houſes low, but regular. It is ſuppoſed to contain 10,000 inhabitants, but the air is unwholeſome, and the water of bad quality. It was founded by Louis XIV. in 1664, and is ſituated on the river Charente, about 6 leagues from its mouth, 21 miles S. by E. of Rochelle, and 127 SW. of Paris.

ROCHEFORT, a town of Luxemburg, capital of a conſiderable county, and of Neufchatel, in Switzerland; alſo a town in the reſpective departments of the Puy de Dome, Drome, Mayne and Loire, Morbihan, Seine, and Oiſe, and Jura.

ROCHEFOUCAULT, LA, a town in the dept. of Charente, 12 miles NE. of Angouleme.

ROCHELLE, a celebrated ſea-port town in the dept. of Lower Charente, before the revolution, the capital of Aunis, Its harbour is ſafe but not very deep, and the entrance to it is narrow. It contains about 15,000 inhabitants. It has 5 gates; the houſes are moſtly ſupported by piazzas, under which perſons may walk in all weathers; and the ſtreets, in general, are as ſtraight as a line. The inhabitants carry on a conſiderable trade to the French colonies in Africa and America, eſpecially in the articles of wines, brandy, ſugar, ſalt, paper, linen, and ſerges. In 1628. Louis XIII. took this town from the Huguenots, after a ſiege of 13 months. To prevent the Engliſh throwing in ſuccours by ſea, Cardinal Richelieu conſtructed a prodigious mole acroſs the mouth of the haven, 4482 feet in extent. Rochelle is ſeated on the ocean, 67 miles N. by E. of Nantes, and 220 SW. of Paris.

ROCHE POSAY, a town in the dept. of the Vienne, ſeated on the river Creuſe; it is chiefly remarkable for its mineral waters.

* ROCHESTER, an ancient, but little city of Kent, believed to have been a Roman ſtation, from the bricks in the wall, and the Roman coins and other antiquities tiquities that have been found here. It was formerly much larger than at preſent, having now only one pariſh church, beſides the cathedral; but it once had another, and of later times has been gradually increaſing by the addition of ſome new houſes and ſtreets on the high ſide of the town. It conſiſts chiefly of one principal ſtreet, which is paved. The houſes are generally inhabited by tradeſmen and inn-keepers; no ſort of manufactory being carried on here. It has two free-ſchools, the one called the King's, and the other the City School. There is here alſo an alms-houſe for ſix poor travellers, who are ſupplied with a ſupper, a bed, and breakfaſt, and with fourpence to carry them forward on their journey; but they are to ſtay no longer than one night; and it is remarkable, that an inſcription over the door intimates, that "rogues and proctors are excepted." The narrow ſtone bridge over the Medway, conſiſting of 21 arches, was built in the reign of Edward III. partly at the expence of Sir John Cobham and Sir Robert Knolles, out of the ſpoils they had taken in France. The corporation has juriſdiction over the great oyſteriſhery in the ſeveral creeks of the Medway, which is now in a flouriſhing ſtate. Rocheſter is parted from Stroud on the W. by its bridge, and is contiguous to Chatham on the E. It is 27 miles NW. by W. of Canterbury, and 30 SE. by E. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Friday, and a market for cattle the laſt Tueſday in every month.

ROCHESTER, a town of New York.

Rocheſter, Northumb. NW. of Otterburn, and near the ſource of the river READ. It has ſome Roman antiquities, as altars, inſcriptions, &c. Rocheſter-Caſtle, Monm. W. of Newport.

Rocheſtown, in Dublin, Leinſter.

ROCHE-SUR-YON, a town in the dept. of Vendee, ſeated on the river Yon, 20 miles NW. by W. of Luçon, and 202 SW. of Paris.

Rochſen, Wilts, N. of Ameſbury.

ROCHFORD, a town of Eſſex, which gives name to its hundred. It is ſituated near a ſtream, which opens into the Crowch, 16 miles SE. of Chelmsford, and 40 E. by N. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Rochford, Worceſ. NE. of Tenbury.

ROCHLITZ, a town of Leipſic, in Upper Saxony, with manufactures of cloth, ſtuffs, and linen, and copper mines in its vicinity. It is ſituated on the Mulda, 24 miles SE. of Leipſic.

Rock, Northumb. SW. of Dunſtaburgh Caſtle. Rockbear, Devonſhire in Fremington pariſh. Rock, Black, Cheſhire, on the coaſt SW. of Liverpool. Rock, Black, Cornw. in Falmouth-Haven.

ROCKBRIDGE, a county of Virginia, between the Allegany Mountains and the Blue Ridge. See CEDAR CREEK.

Rockborn, Hants, by Fordingbridge. Rockborn-Cheney, Wilts, SE. of Cricklade. Rocke, Worceſ. Rockells, Eſſex, SW. of Walden.

Rock, Corry, in Monaghan, Ulſter. Rockfield, in Roſcommon, Connaught. Rockhill, in Cork, Munſter.

Rockhampton, Glouceſ. 2 miles N. of Thornbury.

ROCKINGHAM, a town of Northamptonſhire, giving name to a foreſt, formerly one of the largeſt and richeſt of the kingdom; it extended near 14 miles in length, and 5 miles in breadth (as appears from a ſurvey made in 1641) but is now diſmembered into various parcels, by the interpoſition of fields and towns. Rockingham is ſeated on the river Welland, which falls into the Nen, 12 miles S. of Oakham, and 84 N. by W. of London. Market on Thurſday.

ROCKINGHAM, a town of Vermont, and a county of Virginia.

ROCKINGHAUSEN, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine, near Falkenſtein.

Rockins-Stairs, Kent, W. of the North Foreland.

Rockland, SE. of Norwich. Rockland, All Saints, or Minor, St. Andrew's, or Majors, St. Peter's, and Toſts, Norfolk, near Attleborough. Rockley, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Rockeley, Yorkſ. S. of Barneſley. Rockly-Hill, Dorſetſ. near Portiſham.

ROCQUIGNY, a town in the dept. of the Ardennes.

Rock-Savage, Cheſhire, on the Weever, near Halton. Rocliff, Yorkſhire, on the Ure, near Boroughbridge. Rocliff, Cumb. N. of the Eden, near Carliſle. Rocot Bridge, Oxfordſhire, over the Iſis, N. of Farringdon.

ROCOUX. See RAUCOUX.

ROCROY, a town in the department of the Ardennes, celebrated for the victory which the Prince of Condé, then Duke of Enghien, and only 22 years of age, gained here over the Spaniards in 1643. Nine thouſand Spaniards and Walloons are ſaid to have fallen in the battle, moſt of whom refuſed to take quarter. It is ſeated in a plain, ſurrounded by foreſts, 6 miles from the Maeſe, and 12 NW. of Mezieres.

RODANSEE,

RODANSEE, a lake in the Ucker Mark of Brandenburg, a little to the S. of Templin.

Rodborough, Glouc. near Stroud. Rodborn, Warw. between Southam and Daventry. Rodborn, Wilts, S. of Malmesbury. Roddam, or Rodham, Northumb. N. of Ingram. Rodden, Dorset. a mile and a half from Portisham. Roddeston, Northumberl. a forest in South Tindal. Roddington, Shropf. NE. of Chirbury. Roddington, Shropf. on the river Roddon, NW. of Wellington. Rode, Northamp. near Sacy Foreft. Rode, Somerfetf. near Frome. Rode-Hall, Cheshire, by Sandbach. Rode, North, Cheshire, SW. of Macclesfield. Rodeley, Leicef. 2 miles S. of Mount-Sorrel.

RODEMACHEREN, a town in the dept. of the Moselle, 11 miles S. of Luxemburg.

Rodenbury-Hills, Somerfetfhire, SE. of Frome. Rodefhall, Yorkf. S. of Bradford.

RODEZ, a town in the dept. of Aveiron, with manufactures of grey cloth and ferges, but chiefly noted for its four great annual fairs, where great numbers of mules are fold for Spain. It is fituated on a hill, at the foot of which flows the rapid river Aveiron, 30 miles NNE. of Alby.

Roding, the name of eight parifhes in the weftern part of Eſſex, diſtinguiſhed by the additional appellation of Abbots, Berners, Beauchamp, Eytherp, (once called Roding Grumbald's) High, Leaden, Margarets, and White. This part of the country is called the Rodings, and takes its name from the river Roding, which riſes near Canfield, and falls into the Thames below Barking. They are celebrated for excellent arable land. High Roding is the principal, and the higheſt up the river of all the Rodings, and the neareſt to Dunmow. Rodmarton, Glouceſterſhire, E. of Minching-Hampton. A great many Roman coins, urns, and pavements, have been found here. Rodmerſham, Kent, SE. of Sittingbourn. Roden, NE. of Shrewſbury.

RODOSTO, a trading town of Romania, with a harbour, and a Greek biſhop's ſee. It is ſeated on the N. coaſt of the Sea of Marmora, 62 miles S. by W. of Conſtantinople.

Rodſley, Derbyſhire, E. of Caſtleton. Rodwey, Somerſetſhire, near Ilminſter.

Roe, a river in the county of Donegal, which runs into Lough Foyle, 2 miles NW. of Limavaddy.

Roeburn, a river in Lancaſhire. Roe-hampton, a hamlet of Putney, finely ſituated between the Heath (at its weſtern extremity) and Eaſt Sheene. It has ſeveral elegant villas.

ROER, or RUER, a river of Weſtphalia, which riſes in the duchy of Juliers, paſſes by the town of that name, as alſo Ruremond, in Gueldерland, and a little after falls into the Maeſe. Alſo a river of Weſtphalia, which riſes near Winterberg, and falls into the Rhine, between Roeroot and Duyſberg.

ROEROOT, a town of Cleves, ſituated on the Rhine, 15 miles N. of Duſſeldorf.

Roeſborough, in Cork, Munſter. Roe-Green, in Tipperary, Munſter.

ROEUX, a town in the Straits of Calais, 20 miles E. of Arras.

ROEULX, a town of Hainault, 8 miles NE. of Mons.

Roe-Water, in Derry, Ulſter.

Regate, Suſſex, NW. of Midhurſt. Rogiate, Monmouthſ. near Caldicot.

ROHACZOW, a town of Minſk, in Lithuania, ſituated on the Dnieper.

ROHAN, a town in the department of Morbihan, 9 miles NNE. of Vannes.

ROHILCUND, or ROHILLA, a circar or territory of Hindooſtan, on the E. ſide of the Ganges, and NW. of the ſoubah of Oude. In 1773, this country was invaded by the Mahrattas, but the Britiſh troops, as allies of the Nabob of Oude, being called in by the Rohilla chiefs to their aſſiſtance, the enemy were driven back. For this ſervice, the prince of Rohilcund had agreed to pay the nabob 40 lacks of rupees; but the payment being evaded, the next year the Rohilla country was invaded by the Britiſh troops, conquered, and added to the ſoubah of Oude. Bercilly is the capital.

Rokely, Wilts, NW. of Marlborough.

ROKENHAUSEN, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine, 28 miles SW. of Worms.

Rokeſbridge, Somerſ. over the cut from the Axe to the Brent. Rokeſby, Yorkſ. between Barnard-Caſtle and Greatabridge. Rokeſby-Hall, Yorkſhire, SW. of Hatfield-Woodhouſe. Rokkeſton, near Bedford. Rokolt, Eſſex, near Stratford and Layton.

ROLDUC, called in the language of the country HERTOGENRODE, a town of Limburg, capital of a country, which includes ſeveral villages. It is 10 miles SW. of Juliers.

Rolleſby, Norfolk, SW. of Winterton-Neſs. Rollingſton, Dorſetſhire, NE. of Corfe. Rollrich-Stones, Oxfordſ. an ancient monument, conſiſting of a circle of ſtones

lones, ſtanding upright in the pariſh of Chipping-Norton, near Long Compton. t is the remains of a Britiſh temple, according to Mr. Toland, but Mr. Camden and Dr. Plot are of different opinions; in ſhort, antiquarians are not greed as to its particular deſignation. Falls, Eſſex, near Chigwell. Rolſton, Staffordſ. near Tutbury, and the confluence of the Dove and Trent. Rolvenden, Kent, two miles SW. of Tenterden.

ROM, or ROEM, an iſland on the W. oaſt of S. Jutland, between thoſe of Fanoe and Sylt. It is about 8 miles in ength, and 2 or 3 in breadth, and contains a few villages. Lat. 55. 9 N.

ROM, a town in the dept. of the Tenne.

ROMA, one of the Molucca iſlands, bout 30 miles in circumference, and 60 iles NE. from the iſland of Timor.

ROMAGNA, a province of Italy, ounded on the N. by the Ferrareſe, on the by the Adriatic, on the S. by Urbino nd Tuſcany, and on the W. by Bologna. t is about 45 miles in length and 30 in readth, and fertile in corn, wine, oil, uits, and paſtures; it has alſo mines, ineral waters, and ſalt-works, which ſt makes its principal revenue. In the ſth century, it fell under the dominion f the Oſtrogoths, whoſe king. Theoorick, in the year 493, made Ravenna is place of reſidence. In the following entury, the Goths being driven out by elisarius and Narſes, generals of the mperors of the eaſt, Ravenna became he reſidence of the emperor's exarch, till he Lombards made themſelves maſters f it, and diſpoſſeſſed the laſt exarchs. At length, in the year 755, Pepin, king f the Franks, having compelled Iſtulphus, king of the Lombards, to give up he whole exarchate, conferred it on the ee of Rome. Ravenna is the capital.

ROMAGNA, a town of Italy, in the lovareſe, ſituated on the Seſia.

ROMAGNE, a town in the reſpective epts. of the Mayne and Loire, and of he Meuſe.

ROMAIN MOTIER, a town and bailiick of Bern, in Switzerland.

Romanby, Yorkſhire, by Northallerton. Roman's-Leigh, Devonſhire, S. of South Moulton.

ROMANIA, anciently THRACE, called y the Turks Rumili and Icella, a proince of Turkey in Europe, bounded on he N. by Bulgaria, on the E. by the Black Sea, on the S. by the Archipelago, and the Sea of Marmora, and on the W. y Macedonia; being 200 miles in length, and 150 in breadth. It is fruitful in all kinds of grain, and remarkably good rice, as alſo in paſtures; and there are mines of ſilver, lead, and alum. Hæmus, which divides this country from Bulgaria, and Rhodope, are the principal mountains, extending, in long ridges, from the frontiers of Macedonia to the Black Sea. It is divided into three great governments, or ſangiacates.

ROMANO, a town of Italy in the Bergamaſco.

ROMANS, a town in the dept. of Drome, compared by Roſſio and other travellers, who have viſited Paleſtine, to Jeruſalem, for its ſituation and ſurrounding ſcenery. It is ſituated on the Iſere, 22 miles SW. of Grenoble.

Rombrook, or Romerick, Herts, near Ickleton. Rombrough, Suffolk, NW. of Haleſworth. Romden, Kent, near Smarden.

ROME, a famous city of Europe, founded 748 years before the Chriſtian æra. It was formerly three times as large as it is at preſent; and is now one of the largeſt and handſomeſt cities of Europe. It is divided into 14 quarters, or wards, called Riones, which contain 81 pariſhes, about 200,000 inhabitants, including ſtrangers, 2827 prieſts, 3847 monks, 1910 nuns, 1665 ſtudents, and 1470 paupers. The number of inhabitants has gradually increaſed during the whole of this preſent century. Some of the principal ſtreets are of conſiderable length, and perfectly ſtraight. That called the Corſo is the moſt frequented. Here the nobility diſplay their equipages during the carnival, and take the air in the evenings, in fair weather. The Strada-Felice, and the Strada-di-Porta-Pia, are alſo very long and noble ſtreets. There are no lamps lighted in the ſtreets at night; and all Rome would be in utter darkneſs, were it not for the candles which the devotees ſometimes place before the Madonas, or ſtatues of St. Mary; theſe appear glimmering, at vaſt intervals, like ſtars in a cloudy night. The footmen carry dark lanterns behind the carriages of people of diſtinction. Rome, at preſent, exhibits a ſtrange mixture of magnificent and intereſting, and of common and beggarly objects. The former conſiſt of palaces, churches, fountains, and, above all, the intereſting remains of antiquity. The latter comprehend all the reſt of the city. The church of St. Peter, in the opinion of many, ſurpaſſes, in ſize and magnificence, the fineſt monuments of ancient architecture. Its length is exactly exactly 730 feet; the breadth 520; and the height, from the pavement to the top of the croſs, which crowns the cupola, 450. The Pantheon is the moſt perfect of the Roman temples which now remain. "In ſpite," ſays Moore, "of the depredations which it has ſuſtained from Goths, Vandals, and Popes, it ſtill remains a beautiful monument of Roman taſte. The pavilion of the great altar, which ſtands under the cupola of St. Peter's, and the four wreathed pillars of Corinthian braſs, which ſupport it, were formed out of the ſpoils of the Pantheon, which, after all, and with the weight of 1800 years upon its head, has ſtill a probability of outliving its proud, capacious rival." From the circular form of this temple, it has obtained the name of the Rotundo. Its height is 150 feet, and its breadth nearly the ſame. There are no windows; the central opening in the dome admitting a ſufficiency of light. The rain which falls through this aperture immediately drills through holes, which perforate a large piece of porphyry, that forms the centre of the pavement. Being converted into a Chriſtian temple, the Pantheon, originally erected to the honour of all the gods, is now dedicated to Mary, and to all the martyrs and ſaints. As the Pantheon is the moſt entire, the Amphitheatre of Veſpaſian is the moſt ſtupendous monument of antiquity in Rome. About one half of the external circuit ſtill remains; from which a pretty exact idea may be formed of the original ſtructure. According to a computation of Mr. Byres, it could contain 85,000 ſpectators. The Campidoglio is an elegant ſtructure, raiſed on part of the ruins of the ancient Capitol. The ancient Forum is now a cow-market; and on the top of the beautiful column of Trajan, 120 feet high, is the ſtatue of St. Peter, inſtead of that of Trajan, &c. The Romans ſay, that the church of St. John Lateran is the moſt ancient of all the churches of Rome, and the mother of all the churches in Chriſtendom. To this temple every new pope conſtantly goes firſt, in a magnificent proceſſion, to take poſſeſſion of his ſee. The church of the Holy Croſs of Jeruſalem, celebrated for its magnificent columns of granite, &c. was built by Conſtantine. The pope has three ſuperb palaces, of which the principal is the Vatican, near St. Peter's church, ſaid to contain upwards of 4400 apartments. The library of this palace is the largeſt and moſt complete in the world; rich, eſpecially in manuſcripts in all languages, and of all ages, of which there are ſaid to be about 4000. In Rome, the connoiſſeur will meet with innumerable paintings by the greateſt maſters, and with the chef-d'œuvres of ſculpture, &c. The caſtle of St. Angelo is ſaid to ſerve more to keep the city in awe, than to repel any foreign attack. Rome is ſeated on the river Tiber, which runs through part of it, in lat. 41. 54. N. lon. 12. 55. E.

ROMHILD, a town of Henneburg, in Franconia.

*ROMNEY, NEW, a town in Kent, once a very large place, containing five churches, a priory, and an hoſpital, with a good harbour; but ſince the ſea retired from it, in the reign of Edward I. it is much reduced. The two great meetings for all the Cinque Ports are held here on the Tueſday after St. Margaret's Day. It is ſeated on a hill, in the middle of the marſh of the ſame name, 2 miles and a half NNE. of Lydd, and 71 SE. of London. Market on Saturday.

ROMNEY-MARSH, a tract of land, 10 miles long and 8 broad, which occupies the moſt ſouthern part of Kent, between Dungeneſs and Rye Haven. It contains, in this compaſs, between 40 and 50,000 acres of firm, fruitful land, ſuppoſed to be the richeſt paſture in England. Cattle are fattened here to an extraordinary ſize, and many bullocks are ſent hence to the London market, but it is deemed a very unhealthy tract. It has two towns and 19 pariſhes, which were incorporated in the reign of Edward IV. by the name of a bailiff, 24 jurors, and the commonalty of Romney-Marſh.

Romney, Old, a mile and a half W. of New Romney.

ROMONT, or RODMONT, a town and bailiwick of Friburg, in Switzerland, ſeated on a mountain, 10 miles SW. of Friburg.

ROMORANTIN, a town in the depart. of Loir and Cher, containing about 7000 inhabitants. Here are ſome manufactures of fine ſerges and cloths. It is ſeated on the brook Morantin, (which loſes itſelf in the Sandre), 11 miles S. of Orleans.

Rompney, Monmouthſ. NE. of Cardiff.

Rompney, a river of Glamorganſhire.

ROMSEY. See RUMSEY.

Romſley, Shropſhire, NE. of Cleburv.

RONALDSHA, SOUTH and NORTH, the one the moſt ſoutherly, and the other the moſt northerly of the Orkney Iſlands.

RONCIGLIONE, a town and county in the Patrimonio.

RONDA, a town of Granada, ſituated n a craggy rock, near the Rio Verde, 5 miles W. of Malaga.

Rondbay, Yorkſ. NE. of Leeds.

RONNEBURG, a town of Altenburg, n Upper Saxony.

Rook's-Hill, Suſſex, N. of Chicheſter. ookſley, Kent, near Foot's Cray. Rook's-leſt, Surry, near Godſtone. Rookwood-hall, Eſſex, near the Rodings. Rope, heſhire, near Hamptwich. Ropeſley, incolnſhire, W. of Fokingham. Rope-y, Hampſ. NE. of Alresford. Ropſton, orkſ. near Hornſey-Beck.

ROQUEBUNE, a town in the dept. f the Var, 4 miles W. of Frejus; and town of Monaco.

ROQUECOURBE, a town in the dept. f the Tarn.

ROQUEFEUIL, a town in the dept. f the Aude.

ROQUEFORT, a town in the dept. of e Aude.

ROQUEFORT-DE-MARSAN, a town n the dept. of Landes, ſeated on the iver Douze, 12 miles NE. of Mont-de-arſan.

ROQUELAURE, a town in the dept. f Gers.

ROQUEMAURE, a town in the dept. f Gard, ſeated on the W. ſide of the hone, 6 miles N. of Avignon.

Roridge, Devonſ. W. of Yarnſcomb.

ROSANA, a river in the Tyroleſe, hich runs into the Inn, near Landeck.

ROSAS, a town in Catalonia, with a ood harbour, defended by a fort. It is ated near the Mediterranean, on the ay of the ſame name, 22 miles NE. of irionne.

ROSBACH, a town of Saxne, in Weſt-halia; alſo a village in Thuringia, here, on the 5th of November, 1757, bout 25,000 Pruſſians, led by the king n perſon, gained a complete victory ver 50,000 French and Auſtrians, com-anded by the prince of Saxe Hilburg-auſen and the prince of Soubize. About 000 of the allies were killed and 6000 aken priſoners.

Roſberkin, in Kilkenny, Leinſter.

ROSCHILD, an inconſiderable town of Denmark, in the Iſle of Zealand, with a ſmall univerſity. It was once the re-idence of the king of Denmark, and n the great church are ſeveral tombs of he kings. In 1658, a famous treaty of peace was concluded here. It is ſeated at the bottom of a ſmall bay, among plantations of tobacco, 16 miles W. of Copenhagen.

ROSCOMMON, a county of Ireland, in the province of Connaught, about 47 miles in length, and from 9 to 29 in breadth; it is bounded on the E. by the counties of Leitrim, Longford, and Meath; on the N. by Sligo and Leitrim; on the S. by Galway; and on the W. by part of Galway and Mayo. It is a fruitful country, and, by the help of good huſbandry, yields excellent corn. It contains 50 pariſhes, about 17,140 houſes, and 86,000 inhabitants. Here are ſome extenſive bogs, and but few hills. The principal town is Athlone, but the aſſize-town is Roſcommon.

*ROSCOMMON, the ſhire-town of the county of Roſcommon, in Connaught 69 miles WNW. of Dublin.

*ROSCREA, a thriving town of Tipperary, in Munſter, 59 miles from Dublin.

Roſcrow. See Ruſhcrow. Roſe-Aker, Lancaſhire, N. of Kirkham. Rose-Aſh, Devonſ. SE. of S. Moulton.

ROSEAU, a town in the W. coaſt of the iſland of Dominica.

Roſeburn, Northumberl. S. of Whitchester, and W. of Rutcheſter. Roſe-Caſtle, Cumberl. near Dalſton, on the Calder, a magnificent ſeat of the biſhops of Carliſle.

ROSEBRUGGE, a town of Flanders county.

Roſeden, Northumberland, near Ilderton and Rotham. Roſegill, Weſtmorl. in the pariſh of Shap. Roſe-Hall, Herts, SW. of King's Langley. Roſeland, Cornwall, a fruitful vale between a creek of Falmouth Haven and Tregony.

Roſenellis, in Queen's County, Leinſter.

ROSENFELD, a town of Wurtemburg.

ROSES. See ROSAS.

ROSETTA, a town in Egypt, called by the natives, RASCHID, founded in the 8th century. It is near two miles in length, has no ſtreets perfectly ſtraight, nor any remarkable ſquares, but the houſes, built with terraces, and ſtanding aſunder, have an air of neatneſs and elegance. They have a great manufactory of ſtriped and other coarſe linens; but its chief buſineſs is the carriage of goods hence to Cairo; for all European merchandiſe is brought hither from Alexandria by ſea, and carried by boats to Cairo; as all the productions of Egypt are brought to the port of Alexandria. The Europeans have their vice-conſuls and factors here. The country to the N. has pleaſant gardens, full of orange, lemon, and citron trees, and almoſt all ſorts of fruits, with a variety of enchanting groves of palm-trees with flowers ſcattered among them; and when the fields are green with rice, it adds greatly to the beauty of the country. The rice ſown round it, is, by very rigorous laws, appropriated to the uſe and conſumption of Conſtantinople only. It is ſeated on the weſtern branch of the river Nile, 25 miles NE. of Alexandria, and 90 NNW. of Cairo. Lat. 31. 22. N. lon. 3. 45. E.

of

ROSHACH, a town of Swiſſerland, in the territory of the abbot of St. Gall, ſituated near the Lake of Conſtance, 7 miles ENE. of St. Gall.

ROSHAAN, a country of the Farther India, between Meckley and Aracan, about 120 miles in length, and 80 in breadth.

ROSINNE, a town of Samogitia, where the provincial diet and court of judicature are held.

ROSIERE, LA, a ſmall iſland near the SW. coaſt of Jerſey.

ROSIERS-AUX-SALINES, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, formerly celebrated for its ſalt-works. The works that king Staniſlaus conſtructed here are much admired. It is ſeated on the river Meurthe, 9 miles SE. of Nancy.

Roſineton, Yorkſ. between Doncaſter and Bautre. Roſteſtall, Cornw. near the Land's End.

Roſlee, in Sligo, Connaught.

Roſleſton, Derbyſ. in the pariſh of Walton-upon-Trent. Roſley, or Roſely, Glouc. in Withington pariſh. Roſley-Hill, Cumb. noted for its annual fair on Whit-Monday.

Roſmanaher, in Clare, Munſter.

Roſmaund, NE. of Hereford. Roſmoran, Cornw. NE. of Penzance.

ROSOY, a town in the dept. of Seine and Marne, 15 miles S. of Meaux.

Roſs, Eſſex, in Debden and Walden pariſhes.

*ROSS, a fine, populous, and trading town of Herefordſhire, noted in Camden's time for a manufacture of iron ware, but now chiefly famous for its cyder. Here the celebrated Mr. John Kyril (Pope's Man of Roſs) had his reſidence, and died in 1724, aged 90, with the bleſſings of all, rich and poor. He conſtructed a fine broad cauſeway, at the W. end of the town; he alſo raiſed the ſpire of the church upwards of 100 feet, and ſunk a reſervoir for the uſe of the inhabitants of the town. It is commodiouſly ſeated on the river Wye, 12 miles SE. of Hereford, and 115 W. by N. of London. Its market, which is on Thurſday as well as its fairs, on July 20th, Thurſday after October 10th, and Dec. 11th, are well ſtored with cattle, and other proviſions. There is alſo a great additional market on the firſt Thurſ. after the 10th of March.

ROSS, or ROSS CARBERRY, a ſmall town of Cork, in Munſter, ſeated on a bay of the ocean, 20 miles SW. of Kinſale, and 152 from Dublin.

*ROSS, or NEW ROSS, a trading town of Wexford, in Leinſter, ſeated on the river Barrow, which is navigable for large veſſels up to the quays, and forms a fine harbour. Its principal exports are butter and beef. It has a ferry acroſs the river to Roſs-Ibracan, a ſmall hamlet of Kilkenny, and is about 8 miles N. by E. of Waterford, and 67 S. by W. of Dublin.

Roſſal, Yorkſ. on the Derwent, NW. of Wilton. Roſſal, Up and Down, NW. of Shrewſbury, on the Severn.

ROSSANO, a town of Calabria Citra, with an archbiſhop's ſee. It is 3 miles from the Gulf of Venice, and 27 N. by E. of Coſenza.

ROSSANO, a town of Calabria Ultra.

Roſſe, Northumberl. S. of Holy-Iſland. Roſſe, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, near the ſea. Roſſe-Hall, Lancaſ. by the ſea, W. of Garſtang. Roſſendale, Lancaſ. on the Irwell E. of Blackbourne. Roſſey, Suſſex between Horſham and Iſield.

Roſs-Iſland, in Killarney Lake, Munſter, contains about 100 acres.

ROSS-SHIRE, a county of Scotland bounded on the N. by Sutherlandſhire; on the W. by ſea; on the S. by Invernesſhire; and on the E. by the Frith of Murray and Dornock, and the county of Cromarty. From N. to S. it extends near 60 miles, and upwards of 70 from E. to W. The NW. part of this county is deſolate and dreary, preſenting nothing to the eye but vaſt piles of rocky mountains, with ſummits broken, and aſpiring into every form. The E. ſide feeds great numbers of black cattle, horſes, goats, and deer, has woods of fir of great extent, and is fruitful in corn and herbs. It has alſo abundance of land and ſea fowl, and is well ſupplied with fiſh, particularly herrings, in the extenſive locks and bays found on the coaſts. In the woods is the beautiful bird called Capercailzie, or Cock of the Wood; it is of a bright azure colour, and almoſt as large as a common turkey. On the tops of the mountains is found the ptarmigan, a ſimple bird, not quite the ſize of a partridge. It is often indebted for its ſafety to its grey colour, which reſembles the ſtones among which it lodges. In winter its colour changes to a pure white like the ſnow, in which it often buries itſelf. The inhabitants of the he W. and S. parts ſpeak the Erſe lan-guage, which is alſo underſtood on the E. coaſt, where, however, Engliſh is gene-rally ſpoken. The principal towns are Cain, Dingwall, and Fortroſe. The iſland of Lewis is included in this county.

Roſtellan, in Cork, Munſter.

ROSTOCK, a trading town of Meck-lenburg, formerly one of the Hanſeatic towns, with a good harbour. It is the beſt town in this country, containing 8 Gothiſh churches, with a univerſity and ſe-veral handſome public buildings. It is divided into three parts, the Old, the New, and the Middle Town. Both the civil and criminal juriſdiction are veſted in its own magiſtracy, yet they annually pay 55 rix-dollars as an urbor, or origi-nal tribute to the dukes, as alſo the ſum of 600 florins, in conſideration of the grant of an exciſe. It is ſeated on a lake near the river Varne, which carries large boats, about 3 miles, from the Baltic, 12 N. of Guſtrow, and 34 SW. of Stral-ſund.

ROSTOV, a town of Ruſſia, in the go-vernment of Yaroſlaff.

*ROSTREVOR, a village of Down, in Ulſter, ſeated on Carlingford-Bay, and well defended from the ſeverity of the weather and open ſea. At the lower end of it is a ſmall quay for ſhips, which ride at anchor a few yards from the ſhore. Here is alſo a ſalt-work, and a pottery for white earthen-ware.

ROTA, a town of Andaluſia, ſeated at the N. entrance of the Bay of Cadiz.

ROTENBERG, a town of Lucerne, in Switzerland; alſo a town and lordſhip of Bavaria; a town of Auſtrian Suabia; a town of Verden, in Weſtphalia; two towns of Spire and Heſſe, in the circle of Upper Rhine; a town of Magdeburg, in Lower Saxony; a town of Croſſen, in Upper Saxony; and a town in the archduchy of Auſtria.

ROTH, a town of Anſpach, in Fran-conia, with manufactures of ſtockings, Spaniſh lace, and ſtuffs; and a river of Sua-bia, which runs into the Danube, SW. of Leipheim.

Rothal Chapel, Shropſhire, NW. of Church-Stretton. Rothamſtead, Hert-fordſ. W. of Wheathamſtead.

ROTHBURY, a town of Northumberl. ſeated on the river Coquet, 9 miles SW. of Alnwick, and 302 N. by W. of Lon-don. Market diſcontinued.

Rothby, Lincolnſ. NW. of Spilſby.

ROTHENBURG, a town of Luſatia, ſituated on the Neiſſe; a town and terri-tory of Franconia, near the Tauber; and a town of Magdeburg, in Lower Saxony.

ROTHENFELS, a town of Wurzburg, in Franconia, ſituated on the Maine; and a caſtle and county in Suabia.

Rother, a river which riſes in Suſſex, forms the boundary between that county and Kent, for a ſhort ſpace, and then en-ters the Engliſh Channel at Rye. Rother, a river of Derbyſhire and Yorkſhire, which runs into the Don at Rotherham.

ROTHERHAM, a neat town in the W. Riding of Yorkſ. with a large iron manu-facture, for which it was famous, even in Leland's time. It is ſeated on the ri-ver Don, at its conflux with the Rother, 6 miles NE. of Sheffield, and 160 N. by W. of London. Market on Mon-day. Fairs on Whitmonday and Dec. 1ſt.

Rotheras, near Hereford. Rother-bridge, Suſſex, N. of Battel. Rotherby, Leiceſ. W. of Melton-Mowbray. Ro-therfield, Suſſex, at the ſource of the Ro-ther, NW. of Burwaſh-Downs. Rother-field, Greys, and Peppard, Oxfordſ. near Henley-upon-Thames. Rotherſton, Cheſ. NW. of Knottesford. Rotherwick, Hants, W. of Hartley-Row.

ROTHSAY, a town of Scotland, capital of the Iſle of Bute, ſituated on the NE. coaſt of the iſland, with an excellent har-bour and pier. Here is an ancient caſtle, once a royal reſidence, which gives the title of duke to the Prince of Wales, as it long did, before the union, to the heirs apparent of the crown of Scotland. It is 70 miles W. of Edinburgh.

ROTHWELL, or ROWELL, a town of Northamptonſhire, chiefly noted for its fine market-houſe. It is ſeated on the ſide of a rocky hill, plentifully ſupplied with ſprings of pure water, 15 miles NNE. of Northampton, and 79 NW. of London. Market on Monday, and a noted horſe-fair on Trinity Monday.

Rothwell, Lincolnſ. SW. of Thongcaſ-ter. Rothwell, Yorkſ. between Wakefield and Leeds. Rotington, Cumb. N. of St. Bees, near the Bluff promontory, or great cliff, called St. Bees Head. It abounds with ſeveral ſorts of ſea fowl; plenty of excellent ſamphire grows here.

ROTTERDAM, a city and celebrated ſea-port of Holland, next to Amſterdam the moſt conſiderable place in the United Provinces, for ſize, the beauty of its buildings, trade, and opulence. There are ſo many fine deep canals here, that the largeſt ſhips may conveniently unload at the very doors of the warehouſes. The town is governed by a regency, conſiſting of 24 counſellors, out of which are elect-ed 4 burgomaſters, a grand bailly, and 7 echevins. It is more frequented by the British merchants than Amſterdam, becauſe the ice goes away ſooner, and a ſingle tide, in two or three hours, will carry a veſſel out into the open ſea. The principal public buildings are, the town-houſe, the bank, the Eaſt and Weſt-India Houſes, the arſenal, and the College of Admiralty. On the eaſt ſide of the city is a large baſon and dock, for building and launching veſſels employed in the ſervice of the Admiralty, and the Eaſt-India Company. Here is an Engliſh Preſbyterian church, which being of the eſtabliſhed religion, the miniſter is paid by the States; and which is not the caſe with the Preſbyterians in England and Scotland, they make uſe of an organ. Here is alſo an Engliſh epiſcopal church, whoſe miniſters is paid partly by a ſalary from the Engliſh government, and partly by a ſubſcription of the congregation. Some of the houſes are built in the old Spaniſh ſtyle, with the gable ends embattled in front; but there is a conſiderable number of modern brick houſes, which are very lofty and ſpacious, particularly on that magnificent quay called the Bomb-Tees. On this quay is a handſome Jewiſh ſynagogue. The ſtatue of Eraſmus, in bronze, ſtands in an open place, at the head of one of the canals; and in a narrow ſtreet, leading from the ſtatue to the great church, is ſtill ſhown the houſe in which he was born, with an inſcription in front, to his honour. Rotterdam is ſeated on the river Rotter, at its confluence with the Maeſe, 13 miles S. of the Hague, and 30 SSW. of Amſterdam. Lat. 51. 55. N. lon. 4. 26. E.

ROTTERDAM, or ANAMOOKA, one of the Friendly Iſlands, in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Taſman in 1643. Lat. 20. 15. S. lon. 174. 35. W.

Rotterſtridge, Suſſ. near Petworth. Rottingdean, Suſſex, pleaſantly ſituated on the coaſt, 4 miles from Brighton, and much reſorted to of late, from its increaſing accommodations for ſea-bathing.

ROTWEIL, an imperial city in Suabia, ſituated on the Neckar, 44 miles SSW. of Stuttgard. The inhabitants are moſtly Roman Catholics.

Roubirie, Northumberland, in Warkworth manor: had formerly a market. Rouceby, N. and S. Lincolnſhire, W. of Sleaford. Rouely, or Rotheley, Northumberland, NW. of Morpeth.

ROUEN, a city, the capital of the dept. of Lower Seine, before the revolution, the capital of Normandy, and the ſee of an archbiſhop. It contains upwards of 7000 houſes, and 36 pariſh churches. The ſtreets, however, are narrow, crooked, and dirty, and the houſes are moſtly of wood. Notwithſtanding this diſagreeable appearance, it is one of the moſt opulent, commercial, and important places in France. It is 2 leagues and a half in circuit; and (its ſix ſuburbs included) is computed to contain 73,000 inhabitants. The principal public buildings are, the Great Hall of the Palace, in which the late Parliament of Rouen met; the Old Caſtle; and the principal church, near which is a public library. In the market place is a ſtatue of the celebrated Maid of Orleans, who was burnt here by the Engliſh, for a witch. The linens of Rouen, particularly what are called the Siameiſe, are much eſteemed. There are alſo manufactures of cloth, and a manufactory of oil of vitriol, the only one in France. The ſuburb of St. Sever, ſituated on the other ſide of the Seine, communicates with the city by a bridge of boats which riſes and falls with the tide, and is made to open ſo as to admit the paſſage of ſhips. This bridge is paved, and is 270 paces long. Rouen is ſeated on the river Seine, 50 miles SW. of Amiens, and 70 NW. of Paris. Lat. 49. 27. N. lon. 1. 10. E.

ROVERE, a town in the Treviſan.

ROVEREDO, a town in the Tyroleſe, with a conſiderable trade in fine ſilk.

ROUERGUE, a ci-devant province of France, 75 miles in length, and 50 in breadth; not very fertile, but producing much wood, feeding a number of cattle; and having mines of copper, iron, alum, vitriol, and ſulphur. It now forms the department of Aveiron.

Rougham, Lancaſhire, near Cartmel.

Rougham, Norf. NE. of Caſtle-Acre.

Rougham, Suffolk, 4 miles E. of Bury.

Roughbarrow, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Rough-Hedge, Eſſex, S. of Colcheſter. Roughton, Lincolnſ. S. of Horncaſtle. Roughton, Norfolk, S. of Cromer.

Roughty Bridge and River, in Kerry, Munſter; the latter runs into the Kenmare.

ROVIGNO, a town of Iſtria, with good harbours, and quarries of fine ſtone. It is ſeated in a territory which produces excellent wine, 32 miles S. of Capo d'Iſtria.

ROVIGO, a town of Italy, the capital of Poleſine-de-Rovigo, ſeated on the river Adigetto, 37 miles SW. of Venice; alſo a town in the Vicentin, ſituated on the Adige.

Roulſton, Nottingh. by the Trent, SW. of Newark. Rounam-Paſſage, Somerſetſ. over the Avon, to the Briſtol Hot-Wells. Roundatton, Shropſ. NW. of Bridgenorth.

ridgenorth. Roundway, or Roundaway, Wilts, E. of Devizes. Adjoining this village, are Roundway Downs, remarkable for a battle fought between the Parliamentarians and Charles I. They are also noted for the variety and extensiveness of their views. Rouly, Yorkshire, N. Riding, W. of Mulgrave Caſtle. Rouſeſh, Worceſterſhire, between Perſhore and Alcheſter.

ROUSSELAER, a town in the late Auſtrian County, 10 miles NE. of Ypres.

ROUSSILLON, a ci-devant province of France, having Languedoc on the N. Catalonia on the S. and the Mediterranean on the E. It is about 50 miles in length, and 36 in breadth, and now forms the department of the Eaſtern Pyrenees.

Router, Derbyſhire, in the High-Peak.

ROWAN, a town of N. Caroiina.

Rowbarrow, Somerſetſ. N. of Axbridge. Rowcester, Staffordſ. NE. of Stoxeter, near the conflux of the Dove and Churnet. Rowcliff, Cumberland, at the mouth of the Eden. Rowcliff, Weſtmorland, near Kendal. Rowd, or Rowde, Wilts, near Chippenham. Rowdant, Suſſex, W. of East Grinſtead. Rowdel, Suſſex, near Waſhington. Rowdham, Norfolk, NE. of Thetford. Row, Eaſt, Yorkſ. near Whitby. Rowel, or Roell, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Hawling.

ROWEN, a town of Chrudim, in Bohemia.

ROWENSKO, a town of Boleſlaw, in Bohemia.

Rowſley, Derbyſ. in the High Peak, E. of Bakewell. Rowinton, Warwickſ. SW. of Wroxhall Park. Rowland, Derbyſ. in the High Peak, SE. of Tiddeſwell. Rowland-Caſtle, Hants. Rowley, Durham, W. of Lanchester. Rowley, Staffordſ. SE. of Hales-Owen. Rowley, Yorkſ. SW. of Beverley. Rowley-Green, Herts, between Elſtree and Barnet. Rowley-Park, Staffordſhire. S. of Paget's Bromley. Rowley-Regis, Staffordſhire, near Dudley-Caſtle. Roulſton, near Hereford. Rowlton, NW. of Hillaton. Rowlſton, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs. Rowlright, Great and Little, Oxfordſhire, N. and NW. of Chipping-Norton. Rownal, Staffordſ. S. of Cheadle. Rownd-Alne, Warwickſ. NE. of Alceſter. Rowner, Hants, between Titchfield and Goſport. Rowney, Somerſ. near Taunton. Rowſham, Bucks, NE. of Ayleſbury. Rowſham, Dorſetſ. E. of Beminſter. Rowſham, Oxfordſ. on the Cherwell, by Steeple-Aſton. Rowſton, SE. of Lincoln. Rowſton, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs. Rowth, Yorkſ. in the N. Riding of Holderneſs. Rowthorp, Derbyſ. NW. of Mansfield. Rowton, near Cheſter. Rowton, Shropſ. S. of Shefnal. Rowton, Shropſ. NE. of Bridgenorth. Rowton-Caſtle, SW. of Shrewſbury, near the Severn. Rowtore, Cornwall, SW. of Camelford. Row Urcot, Glouc. near Alverſton. Roxal, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Roxall, NW. of Warwick.

ROXBURGHSHIRE, a county of Scotland, ſometimes called Teviotdale, and containing the diſtricts of Teviotdale, Liddeſdale, Euſdale, and Eſkdale. It is bounded on the N. by Berwickſhire, on the E. and S. by the Engliſh counties of Northumberland and Cumberland, and on the W. by the ſhires of Dumfries and Selkirk. From N. to S. it extends near 30 miles, and about 18 from E. to W. The principal rivers are the Tweed, Teviot, and Liddel: the principal mountains are thoſe called the Cockraw, whence a range of high hills run weſtward, dividing Scotland from England, in many places impaſſable. The face of the country exhibits a rough, irregular appearance of moſſes, hills, and mountains, interſperſed with narrow valleys, well watered, and fertile in corn and oats. The hills, however, feed great numbers of ſheep and cattle. On its borders were the famous Battle, Battable, or Debateable Lands, claimed by the borderers of both nations. The principal towns are Jedburgh, Kelſo, Hawick, Melroſs, and Roxburgh, which laſt town, with its caſtle, is ſituated near the Teviot, 19 miles SW. of Berwick, and 32 SE. of Edinburgh.

Roxby, Lincolnſh. E. of Burton-upon-Trent. Roxby, Lincolnſhire, near Pickering.

ROXCESTER. See WROXETER.

ROXENT, or ROCA, CAPE, called by the Engliſh ſeamen the ROCK OF LISBON, a mountainous promontory in Portugal, at the entrance of the river Tajo, 22 miles W. of Liſbon. Lat. 38. 35. N. lon. 9. 35. W.

Roxey, Middleſex, near Harrow. Roxford, near Hertford. Roxham, Lincolnſhire, near Sleaford. Roxton, E. of Bedford. Roxwell, Eſſex, near Writtle.

Royal-Oak, in Carlow, Leinſter.

Royalton, Cornw. near Columb Parva.

ROYAN, a town in the department of Lower Charente, formerly very large, but now almoſt in ruins. It is ſeated at the mouth of the river Garounne, 18 miles SW. of Saintes.

Roycroſs, Cumberland, in Stainmore.

Roydon, Eſſex, SW. of Harlow, on the river Stort. Roydon, Eſſex, near Harwich. Roydon, Eſſex, between Radwinter and Stifted. Roydon, Norfolk, near Diſs. Roydon, Norfolk, in the Marſh Land. Roydon, Suffolk, near Southwold. Roydon Suffolk, SE. of Hadley. Roydon-Hall Kent, S. of Malling.

ROYES, a town in the department of Somme, where ſome mineral waters were diſcovered a few years ago. It is 24 miles SE. of Amiens, and 60 N. by E. of Paris.

Royes Hall, Eſſex, N. of Halſted.

*ROYSTON, a pretty conſiderable town of Hertfordſhire, part of which, however, is ſituated in Cambridgeſhire. It has very good inns, and is become more populous of late, on fixing the poſt road through it, which, before, ran through Barkway to Biggleſwade. In a cavern under the market-place is an ancient ſubterranean chapel, diſcovered a few years ago, and ſuppoſed to be of Saxon conſtruction. It had been dug out of the chalky rock, and the entrance was at the top. Royſton has given its name to a ſpecies of crow, called the Hooded or Grey Crow; a bird of paſſage, with ſome white on the breaſt and wings, that appears in this neighbourhood, and on the whole eaſtern coaſt. It is 22 miles S. by E. of Huntingdon, and 37 N. of London. A conſiderable market for barley, malt, &c. on Wedneſday.

Royſton, Yorkſhire, NE. of Barnſley. Royton, Kent, near Lenham. Royton. Lincaſhire, on the Irk, SE. of Rochdale. Ruabon, Denbighſhire, in North Wales. Ruan, Cornw. SW. of Great Columb. Ruan, Great and Little, Cornw. near the Lizard-Point. Ruan Lanithorn, Cornw. 3 miles from Tregony, Ruardine, Glouc. in the Foreſt of Dean.

RUATAN, or RATTAN, an iſland in the Bay of Honduras, producing logwood; it is about 30 miles in length, and 12 in breadth, and has a harbour capable of containing a large fleet of ſhips. It is ſurrounded, however, with rocks and ſhoals. Lat. 16. 20. N. lon. 90. W.

RUBIERA, a town of Modena.

Rucking, Kent, 5 miles NW. of New-Rumney. Ruckland, Lincolnſhire, NE. of Horncaſtle. Rudby, Yorkſ. SW. of Stokeſley. Ruddington, S. of Nottingham, half a mile W. of Flawford. Ruddle, Glouceſ. in Newnham pariſh.

RUDEN, a ſmall iſland, with a caſtle, on the coaſt of Pomerania, near the Iſland of Die. It was formerly much larger, as in the year 1264, it had two church villages, called Ruden and Carven.

RUDESTET, a town of Erfurt, Upper Saxony.

RUDISHEIM, a town of Metz.

Rudſen, Warwickſhire, W. of Coventry, Rudford, 4 miles NW. of Gloucester. Rudgway, Cornwall, SE. of St. Ives. Rudgwick, Suſſex, W. of Horſham. Rudhall, Herefordſhire, near Roſs. Rudham, E. and W. Norfolk, near Houghton-Hall. Rudheath, Cheſhire, near Northwich. Rudiard, Staffordſ. NW. of Leek.

RUDKIOBING, a ſea port on the W. coaſt of the Iſland of Langeland, in Denmark.

Rullam, Flintſ. in N. Wales. Rudland, or Ridland, a river in Northumberland, which runs into the Coquet, below Horklugh.

RUDOLFWERD, a town of Carniola.

RUDOLSTADT, a town of Schwartzburgh Rudolſtadt, in Upper Saxony.

RUDOW, or RUDAW, a town of Samland, in Pruſſia. In the neighbourhood many ancient monuments of Pagan idolatry are ſtill to be ſeen. It is alſo remarkable for a victory gained here by the knights of the Teutonic order, in 1370, over Kingſtud, great duke of Lithuania; in memory of which a ſtone pillar was erected, in a field near Tranſan, which is ſtill remaining. It is 18 miles NNW. of Konigſberg. Alſo a town of Natangen in Pruſſia.

Rudſton, Yorkſhire, NE. of Kilham. Rue, a river in Montgomeryſhire, which runs into the Severn near Berrue, about 3 miles S. of Welſhpool. Ruedock, a river in Merionethſhire, which runs into the Dee, near a ſmall village called alſo Ruedock, about a mile E. of Bala. Rue-Hill, Kent, near Wilmington. Ruerdean, Glouceſterſhire, 2 miles SW. of Mitchel Dean.

RUFFACH, a town in the dept. of Upper Rhine, 7 miles S. of Colmar.

RUFFEC, a town in the department of Charente, 24 miles N. of Angouleme.

Ruffins-Hall, Kent, near Aldington. Rufford, Nottinghamſ. NE. of Mansfield, on the river Maun. Rufford, Yorkſ. between Wetherby and York; where formerly was an abbey, but late the ſeat of Sir George Saville. Rufford-Chapel, Lancaſ. between Martot-Mere and the river Dowles.

RUFISCO, (by corruption from RIO FRESCO, a name given by the Portugueſe,) a town of Kayor, in Africa, ſituated on the ſea-coaſt. It carries on a conſiderable trade with the Europeans, in ſlaves, ſkins, gum, ivory, cotton, indigo, oſtrich feathers, &c.

Rugantyn

Rugantyn, Shropſ. SW. of Biſhop's Caſtle.

*RUGBY, a large town of Warwickhire, chiefly noted for its free-ſchool, nd for the great number of butchers in t. It is ſituated on the S. ſide of the Avon, near a navigable canal, by which t communicates with all the various amifications of the Grand Canal, 10 miles ESE. of Coventry, and 85 NNW. f London. Market on Saturday.

RUGELEY, a handſome, well-built, own of Staffordſhire, being a conſiderble thoroughfare on the road from Lonon to Lancaſhire and Cheſhire. It is ituated on a navigable canal, near the iver Trent, by which it communicates ith all the late inland navigations. 6 niles NW. of Litchfield, and 126 NW. f London. Market on Tueſday.

RUGEN, an iſland on the coaſt of Poerania, oppoſite Stralſund, about 23 niles in length, and 15 in breadth. It ontains 27 pariſhes, and abounds in corn nd cattle. The chief town is Bergen, he ancient name of which was GORA, ituated in the centre of the iſland, where he tribunals of Swediſh Pomerania are eld, in lat. 54. 23. N. and lon. 13. 0. E.

RUGENWALD, a town of Further Poerania, the chief place of the duchy of Venden. It is ſeated on the river Wiper, 8 miles from the Baltic, and 35 NNE. f Colberg.

Ruggeley, Northumb. near Alnwick.

Ruggeway, or Riggeway, Glouceſterſ. n Mingotsfield.

Ruggſborough, in Cork, Munſter.

Ruiſhton, Somerſetſh. Ruiton, Hants.

Ruleball, and Ruleball, Upper and Lower, ttaffordſ. near Gnoſtall. Rumbaldkirk, Yorkſ. on the Tees, NW. of Barnard-Caſtle, near a moor or common of the ame name.

RUMELIA, the name given by the Turks to Romania, and ſometimes to all heir European dominions.

*RUMFORD, a great thoroughfare own in Eſſex, in the road to Bury and Colcheſter. It is a hamlet to the pariſh f Hornchurch, and is 17 miles WSW. f Chelmsford, and 12 ENE. of London. Markets on Monday for hogs, on Tueſday for ſheep and lambs, and on Wedneſday for corn and proviſions.

Rumforth, Dorſetſ. SE. of Cranborn.

RUMILLY, a town in the department f Mont Blanc, 7 miles WSW. of Annecy.

RUMPHEY, or RHYNEY, See REMPHEY.

*RUMSEY, a pretty large old town in Hampſhire, with a manufactory of ſhalloons and ſacking, ſome trade in beer, and ſeveral paper and corn mills in its vicinity. The Saxon king Edward and his ſon Alfred were buried in the old church here. It is ſituated on the river Tees, or Teſt, in the road from Saliſbury to Southampton; 8 miles NNW. of Southampton, and 74 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Rumwell, Eſſex, NW. of Rayleigh.

Rumwood, Nottinghamſhire, in Sherwood-Foreſt. Runcton, E. and W. Yorkſ. S. of Yarum. Runfold, Surry, NE. of Farnham. Rungton, North, Norfolk, N. of Sechey. Rungton South, Norfolk, N. of Downham. Runhall, Norfolk, NE. of Hingham. Runham, Norfolk, NW. of Yarmouth.

RUNKEL, a town of Wied Runkel, in Weſtphalia, ſituated on the Lahn.

Runington, Northumb. SW. of Dunſtanburgh-Caſtle. Runkhorn, Cheſhire, near the mouth of the Merſey.

RUNNYMEAD, a celebrated mead, near Egham, in Surry, where king John, affrighted by the great army of the barons, who met him here, was compelled to ſign Magna Charta and Charta de Foreſta. It is now divided into ſeveral incloſures. See Wrayſbury.

Runſwick, Yorkſhire, a fiſhing town, 5 miles NW. of Whitby. Runthwaite, Weſtmorland, NW. of Howgill. Runton, Norfolk, near Cromer. Runton, Somerſ. W. of Wellington. Runton, E. and W. near Durham. Runton, N. Norfolk, near Lynn. Runwell, Somerſetſ. between Taunton and Wellington. Runwich, Glouceſterſ. NW. of Stroud. Runwich, alias Dipnell, Surry, NW. of Farnham.

RUPEL, a river of Brabant, formed by the union of the Senne, the Demer, and the Dyle. It runs from E. to W. and falls into the Scheld at Rupelmonde.

RUPELMONDE, a town of Flanders, in the county of Waes, ſeated on the river Scheld, oppoſite the mouth of the river Rupel, 8 miles SSW. of Antwerp.

RUPERT, a town of Vermont.

RUPERT, FORT, an Engliſh ſettlement on the E. ſide of the bottom of Hudſon's Bay. Lat. 51. 3. N. lon. 78. 55. W.

RUPPIN, or RAPIN, a town, capital of a duchy in the Middle Marche of Brandenburg. It is divided into the Old and the New. The Old was nothing but an ancient caſtle, well furniſhed; the late king of Pruſſia, before his father's death, residing there. New Rupin has gradually become a place of considerable trade; it has a manufactory of cloth, and is also noted for brewers. It is seated on a lake, 30 miles NNW. of Berlin.

RUREMONDE, or ROERMONDE, a town of Upper Guelderland, seated near the confluence of the rivers Maese and Roer, 13 miles S of Venloe. It was taken by the allies under the Duke of Marlborough, in 1702, and given up by the Dutch to the emperor, in 1716.

Rusale, Norfolk, NW. of Harleston. Ruscomb, Ruscomb Norbury, and Ruscomb Southbury, Berks. near Billingbear, and SE. of Sunning. Rusland, Lancashire, near the river Fosse, and Fourneis-Fells.

RUSH, a pretty large fishing town, in Dublin, Leinster, 13 miles from the metropolis. The ling cured here, and which is exported to foreign parts, has long been celebrated for it's superior flavour.

Rushall, Staffordshire, N. of Walsal. Rushal, Wilts, 4 miles from Netherhaven. Rusham, Norfolk, N. of Cattle-Acre. Rushbrook, Suffolk, SE. of Bury. Rushbury, Shropsh. near Bridgenorth. Rushcarack, Cornwall, E. of Padstow-Haven. Rushcrow, or Roscrow, Corn. NW. of Penryn. Rushden, Hertfordsh. NW. of Buntingford. Rushden, Northamptonsh. a mile from High-Ferrers.

Rusheen, in Kerry, Munster.

Rushford, or Rushworth, Norfolk, SW. of East Harling. Rushforth, or Rushworth, Yorksh. NW. of Bradford.

RUSHIN, a town in the Isle of Man, called also Castletown, and anciently Sodor.

Rushmere, Suffolk, NE. of Ipswich. Rushmere, Suffolk, SE of Beccles. Rushock, Worcest. SE. of Kidderminster. Rushpark, Yorksh. W. Riding, NE. of Sherborn. Rushpit-Wood, Rutland, E. of the Vale of Catmoss. Rushton, Chesh. near Torperley. Rushton, Cheshire, NE. of Congleton. Rushton, Dorsets. near Holmbridge, a hamlet to Worgret, near Warcham. Rushton, Dorsets. E. of Blandford. Rushton, Lancas. NE. of Blackburn. Rushton. Northamptonsh. by Pipwell. Rushton, James and Spencer, Staffordsh. NW. of Marbrook. Rushworth, Yorksh. SW. of Whitby. Ruskins, Buckinghamsh. by Colebrook.

Rusky Bridge, in Leitrim, Connaught.

Russper, Sussex, near Darking and Horsham. Russel, Rustnal, or Rustisal, Wiltshire, near Uphaven. Russel-Farm, Hertfordshire, near Watford.

Russel-wood, in Kildare, Leinster.

Rusthall, Kent, near Tunbridge Wells.

RUSSIA, a large empire, partly in Asia, and partly in Europe, bounded on the N. by the Frozen Ocean; on the S. by Great Tartary, the Caspian Sea, and Persia; on the E. by the N. Pacific Ocean; and on the W. by Sweden, Poland, and Lapland. There were three countries that had the name of Russia; namely, Red Russia; White Russia, which comprehends Lithuania; and Black Russia, which comprehends the governments of Kaluga, Moscow, Tula, Rezan, Volodimir, and Yaroslaf; and hence his imperial majesty takes the title of emperor of all the Russias. This empire, exclusive of the late acquisitions from the Turks and from Poland, may be likened to an oblong square, whose longest sides are about 2000 miles each. The seas of Russia are, the Baltic, the White Sea, the Frozen Ocean, the Black Sea, and the Caspian Sea. There are also five large rivers, namely, the Dnieper, Volga, Don, Dana, or Dwiner, and Oby. A country of such vast extent must lie in different climates, and the soil must be as different. The most fertile part is near the frontiers of Poland; insomuch that the inhabitants are able to supply their neighbours with corn; the N. part is not only more cold, but very marshy, and over-run with forests, inhabited chiefly by wild beasts. Beside domestic animals, there are wild beeves, rein-deer, martens, white and black foxes, weasels, ermines, and sables, whose skins make the best furs in the world. They had very few vines before Peter the Great caused them to be planted in different places. In Russia are large quantities of cotton and silk, with which they make the various sorts of stuffs; skins, furs, Russia leather, talc, tallow, hemp, Russia cloth, honey, wax, and almost all the merchandises of China, India, Persia, Turkey, and some European countries. This vast empire has been divided by the late empress into 42 governments: namely, Petersburgh, Olonetz, Wiburgh, Revel, Riga, Pskof, Novogorod, Tver, Smolensko, Polotsk, Mohilef, Orel, Kaluga, Moscow, Tula, Rezan, Volodimir, Yaroslaf, Vologda, Archangel, Kostroma, Nisnei Novogorod, Kasan, Simbirsk, Penza, Tambof, Voronetz, Kursk, Novogorod-Severskoi, Tchernigof, Kiof, Kharkof, Catharinenslaf, Caucasus, Saratof, Ufa, Viatka, Perm, Tobolsk, Kolyvan, Irkutsk, and the country of the Cossacks. The inhabitants, in general, are robust, great eaters, and fond of brandy. They use bathing bathing, but ſmoke no tobacco, leſt the ſmoke ſhould diſhonour the images of the ſaints, which they have in great veneration; however, they take a great deal of ſnuff, made of the tobacco brought from the Ukraine. They were formerly accounted the rudeſt, and moſt ignorant people in the world, and many of them are now little better. Formerly no Ruſſians were ſeen in other countries, and they ſeldom or never ſent ambaſſadors to foreign courts; but now they are more polite, and ſtudy the intereſt of different nations. They had no ſhips of war, or merchandiſe, before the reign of Peter I. but in the preſent reign, powerful Ruſſian quadrons have appeared, not only in the Baltic, but in the Black Sea, and in the Mediterranean. They have images in their churches; and the prieſts give a paſſport to thoſe that are dying, addreſſed to St. Nicholas, who is deſired to entreat St. Peter to open the gates of heaven, as they have certified that the bearer is a good Chriſtian. The church is governed by a patriarch, under whom are the archbiſhops and biſhops. Every prieſt is called a papa, or pope, of whom there were 4000 in Moſcow only. Formerly he was thought a learned man who could read and write; but Peter undertook to introduce arts and ſciences, and, in 1724, the firſt univerſity was founded that ever was in Ruſſia; and there is alſo an academy of ſciences at Peterſburgh, ſupplied with eminent profeſſors. With reſpect to dreſs, a long beard is in high eſtimation with the people of Ruſſia, notwithſtanding the efforts of their monarchs to root it out; and it is only thoſe depending upon government, in the army and navy, who have yet complied with the cuſtom and the wiſh of the court. Thoſe who retain their beards, retain likewiſe the ancient dreſs; the long ſwaddling coat, either of ſkins, or of coarſe cloth lined with ſkins; in winter, and in ſummer, of cloth only. About their middle they have a ſaſh of any colour; but what they moſt affect, is green or yellow. They wear trowſers inſtead of breeches and ſtockings; their limbs are, beſides wrapped in many folds of woollen ſtuffs to keep them warm, and above all they wear boots. Their ſhirts are faſhioned as women's, and their necks, expoſed to the cold, have become very hard and impenetrable, from this practice. Government continue to exert every nerve to compel their ſubjects to adopt the German dreſs. The clergy alone excepted, none can procure any place, or muſt expect any favour from court, upon other condition than baniſhing the Aſiatic ſheep-ſkin robes. The dreſs of the women is the reverſe of the men, both in faſhion and colour; every part of it being as ſhort and tight as decency will allow, and very gaudy. It is exactly the ſame with that of the Highland women in Scotland; both have the ſhort jacket, the ſtriped petticoat, and the tartan plaid; and both too, in general, have a napkin rolled about their head. The Ruſſian women are, however, far more rich in their attire; nor is gold lace wanting, any more than the art of painting, to complete the Ruſſian belle. The young generation are modernizing theſe antique veſtments; the ſtiff embroidered napkin is ſupplanted by one of flowing ſilk; the jacket and petticoat are of muſlin, or other fine ſtuffs; and the plaid is exchanged for a ſilk or ſatin cloak, in the cold ſeaſon, lined with fur. The richer claſs of females wear velvet boots. The dreſs of the higher ranks is after the French and Engliſh faſhion; and all muſt have a covering of fur ſix months of the year. Thus equipped, the prince and the peaſant are hurled in their chaiſes and ſledges through the dreary Scythian winter. The ſovereigns of Ruſſia are abſolute. They were formerly called Grand Dukes, which is ſtill the title of the apparent. They afterward aſſumed the title of czar, and, in the ſequel, that of emperor. The natives pronounce the word czar, like tzar, or zaar, and this, probably, by corruption, from Cæſar, or emperor; from ſome fancied relation to the Roman emperors; on account of which they alſo bear the eagle as a ſymbol of their empire. The firſt who aſſumed the title of czar, was Baſil, ſon of Baſilides, who freed his country from its ſubjection to the Tartars, about the year 1470.

RUSSIA, RED, or LITTLE. See RED RUSSIA.

RUSSIA WHITE. See WHITE RUSSIA.

Ruſlington, Suſſex, near Brighthelmſtone. Ruſton, Norfolk, W. of Weſt Dereham. Ruſton, York. by Pickering-Foreſt. Ruſton, Eaſt, Norfolk, between Walpole and the ſea. Ruſton, Parva, Yorkſhire, near Kilham. Rutcheſter, Northumb. NW. of Chollerton, the Vindobala of the Romans. Severus' wall runs on the middle of the E. rampart, and Adrian's vallum paſſes the diſtance of a chain to the S. of it. This fort was once very conſiderable, and the ruins are ſtill remarkable.

RUTHERGLEN, a town of Lanerkſhire, 2 miles SE. of Glaſgow.

* RUTHIN, a well inhabited town of Denbighſhire, noted for a large hoſpital, a free-ſchool, the ruins of a large caſtle, and the beſt market in the vale. It is ſeated on the river Cluyd, 15 miles SW. of Holywell, and 206 NW. of London. Market on Monday.

RUTIGLIANO, a town of Bari, Naples.

RUTLAM, a town of Malwa, in Hindooſtan.

Rutland, in Queen's County, Leinſter.

Rutland, in Donegal, Ulſter.

RUTLAND, the ſmalleſt county of England, about 26 miles in length, and 11 in breadth. It is ſuppoſed to have received its name from the red colour of the ſoil, which, in ſome parts, is a ſort of ruddle, ſtaining the fleeces of the ſheep. It is bounded on the W. by Leiceſterſhire; on the N. by Lincolnſhire, and part of Leiceſterſhire, and on the E. and SE. by Lincolnſhire and Northamptonſhire. It is divided into 5 hundreds, which contain 2 market-towns, 53 pariſhes, about 3260 houſes, and 20,000 inhabitants. The air is very good, and the ſoil, in general, fertile, yet very various; producing excellent corn, and feeding a great number of cattle and ſheep. The principal rivers are the Welland and the Guaſh, or Waſh, beſides which, it is extremely well watered by a number of ſmall rivers and brooks, which fall into them, and which afford plenty of excellent fiſh. Oakham is the county town.

RUTLAND, a town of Maſſachuſetts, a town and county of Vermont, and a ſmall iſland, with a village, near the W. coaſt of Donegal, in Ulſter. Lat. 54. 58. N.

RUTTUNPOUR, a city, capital of a territory of Hindooſtan, in Oriſſa, the reſidence of one of the Weſtern Mahratta chiefs. Lat. 22. 16. N. lon. 82. 36. E.

RUVO, a town of Bari, in Naples.

RUZA, a town of Moſcow, in Ruſſia, 48 miles WNW. of Moſcow.

Ryader, a river in Montgomeryſhire, which riſes, however, in Denbighſhire, but runs into the Tanot, near Llanyader, on the borders of Montgomeryſhire. Ryal, or Ryehall. Rutland, NW. of Stamford. Rydal, Yorkſ. N. R'ding, a fruiful vale, with above 20 churches, and between Hovingham, Hemſley, and Kirby-Moreſide. It is ſo called from the river Rye, Rhy, Ri'ale, or Ridale, which paſſes through it, and which runs into the Swale, near Richmond.

RYAN, LOCH, a lake of Scotland, at the NW. angle of Wigtonſhire. The ſea flows into it through a narrow paſs; and it was formerly crowded, in the ſeaſon, with ſhoals of herrings, that have for the preſent deſerted it.

RYDALE, a river of Cardiganſhire, which runs into the Iriſh Channel, near Aberyſtwith.

RYDAL-WATER, a lake of Weſtmorland, a little to the W. of Ambleſide. It is about one mile in length, ſpotted with little iſlands, and communicates by a narrow channel, with Grafmere-Water to the W. and by the river Rothay, with Windermere-Water to the S.

RYE, a town of New-York.

RYE, a reduced town of N. Jutland.

* RYE, a handſome, well built, and populous town in Suſſex, an appendage to the Cinque Port of Haſtings. Its port, however, had been long ſo choked up with ſand, that it could only admit ſmall veſſels. This inconvenience was remedied by an act of parliament, in 1761, and the harbour reſtored, by letting the ſea and tides through a canal up to Winchelſea Wall, ſo that veſſels of 300 tons burden may now ride here with ſafety and eaſe. It exports corn, malt, hops, timber, and wool, as alſo kettles, cannon, chimney-backs, &c. from the iron-works at Bakely, 4 miles to the NW. and at Breed; and its fiſhermen ſend conſiderable ſupplies of ſoles, turbot, plaice, &c. to the London markets. It is ſituated on the edge of a cliff (where a modern battery has been planted to annoy privateers) at the mouth of the Rother, with a delightful proſpect of the ſea, 34 miles SE. by S. of Tunbridge, and 63 SE. by S. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

Rye, or Ree, Herts, near Hodſdon.

* RYEGATE a town in Surry, with a market houſe, which was formerly a chapel dedicated to Thomas a Becket. It had alſo formerly a caſtle, called Holm-Caſtle, built in the time of the Saxons, ſome ruins of which are ſtill to be ſeen; particularly a long vault, with a room at the end large enough to hold 500 perſons, where (according to tradition) the barons, who took up arms againſt King John, held their private meetings. The neighbourhood abounds with fullers-earth and medicinal plants. It is charmingly ſituated in the vale of Holmſdale, 16 miles E. of Guilford, and 51 S. of London. Market on Tueſday, and a monthly one on Wedneſday.

Ryeland, Glouceſ. in Dimmock pariſh.

Ryelth, Shropſhire, W. of Biſhop's-Caſtle.

Ryerſh,

Ryerſh, Kent, by the Medway, a mile N. of Weſt Malling.

Ryewater, a river of Kildare, in Leinſter, which runs into the Liffy at Leixlip.

Ryefield, Middleſex, E. of Uxbridge.

Ryfield-Lodge, Hants, in the New Foreſt.

Rygbton, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, SE. of Hunanby. Rygbton, Yorkſ. N. of New Malton. Ryle, Dorſetſhire, a hamlet to Whitchurch. Ryle, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, SE. of Headon. Ryle, Great and Little, Northumb. near Ainham. Ryme intrinſica, Dorſetſ. half a mile W. of Yateminſter. Ryſe, Eſſex, part of the manor of Hatfield Regis. Ryſe, Yorkſ. W. of Hornſey.

RYSWICK, a large village in Holland, between the Hague and Delft, where the Prince of Orange lately had a palace. It is remarkable for a treaty concluded here in 1697, between the allies, conſiſting of Great Britain, Germany, Spain, and Holland, on the one ſide, and France, on the other.

Rythcr, Yorkſ. E. Riding, near Cawood. Ryton, Durham, near Newcaſtle. Ryton Nottinghamſhire, in the manor of Mansfield. Ryton Shropſhire, SW. of Tong-Caſtle. Ryton, Great and Little, Shropſhire, W. of Acton-Burnel-Caſtle. Ryton of the Eleven To, Shropſhire, ſo called from 11 pariſh churches in its view, ſtands between Shrewſbury and Oſweſtry.

RZECZICA, a town of Lithuania, capital of a territory of the ſame name.

RZEVA, a territory of Ruſſia, ſeated on the Volga, near its ſource.

RZEVA THE DESERT, a town of Ruſſia, in the territory of Rzeva.

SAABA, a town and diſtrict of Negroland, W. of Tombuctoo, ſituated on the river Senegal.

SAADA, a populous town of Yemen, in Arabia, capital of a diſtrict called SABAM, and the reſidence of a ſhiek. It has a manufacture of Turkey leather, and is 400 miles SSE. of Mecca.

SAAL, a river in the biſhopricks of Fulda and Wurzburg, which runs into the Maine near Gemunden; a river which riſes in the principality of Bayreuth, and runs into the Elbe; and a river which riſes in the archbiſhoprick of Saltzburg and runs into the Salzach.

SAAMI, a town of Negroland, ſituated about 12 miles from the mouth of the river Saami, where it diſcharges itſelf into the Gambia.

SAATZ, or ZATEC, a town and circle of Bohemia, (which laſt is alſo called Lucſko, and is very fertile) eſpecially in hops, the beſt in all Bohemia, ſituated on the Eger.

SABA, a pleaſant and fertile iſland of the Weſt Indies, about 12 miles in circumference, but being deſtitute of a port, its commerce is inconſiderable. It is inhabited by a few Dutch families from the Iſland of St. Euſtatia. The acceſs to it is by a road cut out of the rock, which one man only can mount at a time; and this road is plentifully ſtored with magazines of ſtones; with which arms alone the inhabitants repulſed the French buccaneers, in 1688. This iſland was taken by the Engliſh in 1781. The inhabitants raiſe ſome indigo and cotton, but their chief manufacture is ſhoes. It lies a little to the W. of St. Chriſtopher's. Lat. 17. 39. N. lon. 62. 12. W.

Sabbington, Bucks, W. of Tame.

SABEA, a town of Yemen, in Arabia.

SABI, a large, populous and commercial town, capital of a diſtrict of the ſame name, in the kingdom of Whidah, in Africa, ſituated on or near the river Euphrates, about 8 miles from the ſea. The Engliſh, French, and Portuguele, have factories here, and it is a ſort of an emporium, where every thing of European, Aſiatic, and African production, or manufacture, may be had at a reaſonable price.

SABIA, a country of Africa, near the Indian Sea of Sofala.

SABINA, a province in the Pope's Territory, bounded on the N. by Umbria, on the E. by Abruzzo Ultra, on the S. by the Campagni di Roma, and on the W. by the Patrimonio. It is about 30 miles in length, and from 15 to 22 in breadth, is watered by ſeveral ſmall rivers and abounds in oil and wine. Magliano is the capital.

SABIONCELLO, a town and peninſula, of Raguſa, in Dalmatia.

SABIONNETTA, a town and ſmall principality on the confines of Mantua and Cremona.

SABLE, a town in the dept. of Sarte, ſeated on the river Sarte, 25 miles NE. of Angers, and 135 SW. of Paris. In its neighbourhood are ſome quarries of black marble.

SABLE, CAPE, the moſt ſouthern point of Nova Scotia, in Acadia. Lat. 43. 24. N. lon. 65. 34. W.

SABLES, D'OLONNE, a town in the dept. of Vendee, with a port capable of containing veſſels of 150 tons. It is 21 miles nearly W. of Luçon.

SABLESTAN, a province of Perſia, on the frontiers of Hindooſtan; bounded on the N. and W. by Choraſan, on the E. by Candahar, and on the S. by Segeſtan. It is a mountainous country, and well watered. Boſt is the capital.

Sabrets, Eſſex, near Great Baddow. Sabridgeworth or Sawbridgeworth, Hertfordſhire, S. of Biſhop's Stortford.

SABU, or SABO, a diſtrict on the Gold Coaſt, extending about 5 miles on the coaſt, and 10 miles inland. The Dutch have a fort here called Fort Naſſau. The principal town is of the ſame name. Lat. 5. 6. N.

SACAI, a conſiderable ſea-port in the iſland of Niphon, in Japan, containing ſeveral handſome temples and palaces, as well without as within the city. It is 70 miles SW. of Meaco.

Saccam, or Sawcomb, Hertfordſhire, NW. of Wadeſmill.

SACHETTO, a town of Mantua.

SACILE, a town of Italy, in the Treviſan, ſituated on the Livenza. It is called the garden of Venice.

Sacy, or Sawſey Foreſt, 4 miles S. of Northampton, which, though only about a mile and a half long, and a mile over, affords a fine harbour for game. Sadbergh, Durham, on a rivulet that runs into the Tees near Stockton. Saddington, Leiceſ. NW. of Harborough. Saddle Back, Cumberl. a mountain on the E. ſide of Lorton Vale. Saddle-Tor, Devonſhire, near the hills, between Chegford and Aſhburton. Saddleworth, Yorkſhire, on the borders of Lancaſhire and Cheſhire. Saffron Garden, Eſſex, by Horndon.

SAFFI, AKSI, or AFFI, a trading town of Abda, in Morocco, long in the centre of the European commerce, but Mogadore is now the principal port. Here is a very fine road for ſhips in winter, except when the winds blow from the S. or SW. for veſſels are then ſure to be driven out to ſea. The environs are a dry and parched deſart. It is 16 miles S. of Cape Cantin.

SAGADAHOC, a diſtrict of New England, in the province of Main, ſuppoſed to extend from the river St. Croix, eaſtward, to that of Quenebec, weſtward; and to have the river St. Lawrence for its northern, and the Atlantic for it's ſouthern boundary.

SAGADAHOC, a river which runs into the Kennebec, in the country of Main, about 30 miles from its mouth.

SAGAN, a town and principality of Sileſia, ſubject to the Prince of Lobkowitz.

Sages, Glouceſterſhire, in Slimbridge parith.

SAGRES, a ſea-port of Algarve.

SAGUENAY, a river of Canada, which runs into the river St. Lawrence. It is navigable for the largeſt veſſels (according to Charlevoix), above 25 leagues from its mouth. It has (he adds), an excellent, deep, and ſpacious harbour, of a circular figure, well ſheltered, being ſurrounded at a diſtance with very high rocks, in lat. 48. 4. N. lon. 69. 40. W.

SAGUENAY, a diſtrict of Canada, bounded on the W. and SW. by the river of the ſame name, and on the SE. by the river St. Lawrence. It yields the greateſt plenty of marble of ſeveral kinds, ſo that even the houſes of private perſons are generally built with it.

SAHAGUN, a town of Leon, with a rich abbey, ſeated on the river Sea, 25 miles SE of Leon.

Saham, Norfolk, NW. of Watton.

SAHARA. See ZAHARA.

SAID, the ſouthern diviſion of Egypt, anciently called Thebais.

SAIDA. See SIDON.

SAILLY, a town in the dept. of the Moſelle, and a town in the department of the Somme.

SAINTES, the name of three ſmall iſlands in the W. Indies, between Guadaloupe and Dominica. Lat. 15. 57. N. lon. 61. 52. W.

SAINTES, a town in the dept. of Lower Charente; before the revolution the capital of Saintonge, and the ſea of a biſhop. Here are ſeveral monuments of antiquity, of which the moſt famous are the amphitheatre, the aqueducts, and the triumphal arch on the bridge over its river. It is ſeated on an eminence, near the Charente, 26 miles SE. of Rochefort, and 262 SSW. of Paris.

Scintfield, in Down, Ulſter; the linen manufacture is carried on here. St John's, in Roſcommon, Connaught. St. John's Town, in Longford, Leinſter. St. Kennis, in Kilkenny, Leinſter. St. Mullins, in Carlow, Leinſter.

SAINTONGE, a ci-devant province of France, S. of Poitou and Aunis, extending about about 70 miles in length, and 36 in breadth. The river Charente runs through the middle of it, and renders it one of the moſt fertile tracts in France; and they make the beſt ſalt here in Europe. It now forms the dept. of Lower Charente.

SAL, or SALT, an iſland of Africa, one of the Cape de Verds, about 40 miles in circumference. It is ſo called from the great quantity of beautiful ſalt made here, which is the chief production of the iſland, and is procured from the ſalt ponds, by the cryſtallization of the ſea-water, which overflows part of it from time to time. Notwithſtanding its apparent barrenneſs, bearing no trees nor verdure, except ſhrubs, it breeds an incredible number of goats, ſome aſſes, a few ſmall horſes, and a great variety of ſea fowls. A prodigious number of tortoiſes alſo lay their eggs here, which alone, would be ſufficient to maintain a number of inhabitants; yet all authors agree, that the iſland is deſolate and deſert. It is 300 miles W. of the coaſt of Africa. Lat. 16. 49. N. lon. 21. 59. W.

SALA, or SALBERG, a town of Weſtmanland, 28 miles W. of Upſal.

SALAMANCA, an ancient, large, rich, and populous city of Leon, in Spain, with a famous univerſity, conſiſting of 24 handſome colleges. The ſtructure, called the ſchools, where all ſorts of ſciences are taught, is very large and curious, and is built of freeſtone. The univerſity has 61 profeſſorſhips, without reckoning the anatomical theatre, and the college of the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin languages. There were formerly 7000 ſtudents, ſent from all parts of Europe; and there are now upward of 4000. The ſcholars are all clothed like prieſts, having their heads ſhaved, and caps thereon. Salamanca has a large public ſquare, and ſome fine fountains, but the ſtreets are narrow and dirty. The cathedral is one of the handſomeſt in Spain, and has a fine ſteeple. There are alſo 25 pariſh churches, 39 convents, 6 hoſpitals, and about 7000 houſes. It is ſeated partly in a plain, and partly on three hills, being ſurrounded by walls, without which is a fine Roman cauſeway, on the river Tormes, over which it has a bridge of 25 arches, and 300 paces long, built by the Romans. It is 37 miles SE. of Miranda, and 88 NW. of Madrid.

SALAMANCA, a town of Yucatan, in Mexico, 150 miles S. of Merida.

SALANCHE, a commercial town in the dept. of Mont Blanc, in the Upper Fauciguy, ſeated on a brook, which ſoon after falls into the Arve, 25 miles E. of Annecy.

SALANKEMEN, a town of Sclavonia.

SALBACH, a village in the margravate of Baden, where Marſhal de Turenne was killed, in 1675, as he was viewing the poſition of the enemy, and giving directions for erecting a battery. It is 2 miles NE. of Baden.

Salbridge, or Sawbridge, Warw. SW. of Willoughby. Salcomb, Devonſ. near the Channel, between Branſcomb and Sidmouth. Salcomb-Haven, Devonſhire, SW. of Dartmouth. Salcot, Verley, and Wigborough, Eſſex, near Toleſhunt and Weſt Merſey.

SALDANHA BAY, a bay of the Atlantic, on the S. coaſt of Africa, NW. of the Cape of Good Hope. Lat. 33. 9. S. lon. 17. 60. E.

Sale, Cheſhire, NE. of Altringham. Saleby, Lincolnſhire, N. of Alford.

SALECTO, a town of Tunis, ſituated on the E. coaſt, near the Mediterranean, in lon. 11. 3. E.

Salehurſt, Suſſex, W. of Ewhurſt.

SALEM, a ſea-port of N. America, in the ſtate of Maſſachuſetts, and capital of the county of Eſſex. It is the oldeſt town in the ſtate, except Plymouth, which was ſettled 8 years before, in 1620. It is noted for the building of ſhips and fiſhing ketches, and carries on a large foreign trade. It is 15 miles NE. of Boſton.

SALERNO, a town of Naples, capital of the Principato Citra, with a harbour, and a univerſity, much celebrated formerly for medicine. It is ſeated at the bottom of a bay of the ſame name, 27 miles ESE. of Naples.

SALERS, a town in the dept of the Cantal, 27 miles W. of St. Flour.

Salers-Hope, Heref. N. of Roſs. Saleſbury, Herts, NE. of Shenley. Saleſbury, Lancaſ. N. of Blackborn. Salford, Bedfordſhire, N. of Aſpley Guiſe. Salford, Lanc. near Manchester. Salford, Oxfordſ. NW. of Chipping-Norton. Salford, Somerſetſhire, on the Avon, between Bath and Briſtol. Salford-Abbot's, or Little, Warwickſhire, SW. of Bitford.

SAHLBERG. See SALA.

SALIES, a town in the dept. of Upper Garonne, 15 miles SW. of Rieux.

SALINAS, a town of Guipuſcoa.

SALINI, one of the Lipari Iſlands, in the Mediterranean, fertile in wine and fruits. It lies NW. of the Iſland of Lipari.

SALINS, a conſiderable town in the dept. of Jura, remarkable for its ſalt works, the largeſt of which is in the middle of the town, and for quarries of jaſper.

jaſper. It is 20 miles SSW. of Beſançon, and 200 SE. of Paris.

* SALISBURY, or NEW SARUM, a large and ancient city of Wilts, of which it is the capital. It is ſituated in a chalky ſoil, almoſt ſurrounded by the Avon and its contributary rivers, and is rendered particularly clean by a ſmall running ſtream flowing through every ſtreet. It has a fine cathedral, crowned by a ſpire, the moſt regular and elegant Gothic ſtructure in the kingdom, built in the form of a lanthorn. Its windows are ſaid to be as many in number as there are days in a year. The town-hall is a handſome building, and ſtands in a ſpacious market-place. Here are manufactures of flannels, linſeys, druggets, Saliſbury whites, parchment, hardware, bone-lace, and cutlery. The navigation from Chriſt-church comes within 2 miles of this city. It is 21 miles NE. of Southampton, and 83 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday. Fairs on January 6th, Tueſday after Epiphany, Lady Day, and the Monday before it, Whit Tueſday, Thurſday after Michaelmas, October 2d, and December 29th.

SALISBURY, a town in the reſpective ſtates of Connecticut, Maſſachuſetts, Maryland, N. Carolina, and the Delaware, in N. America.

SALISBURY CRAIG, a hill on the S. ſide of the city of Edinburgh, chiefly remarkable for a great precipice of ſolid rock, about a mile in length, and, in ſome parts, 100 feet high, which paſſes with ſome regularity along its brow.

Saliſbury-Hall, Eſſex, near Walthamſtow.

SALISBURY PLAIN, in Wiltſhire, extends 25 miles E. of Wincheſter, and 28 W. to Weymouth, and in ſome places it is from 35 to 40 miles in breadth. There are ſo many croſs roads in it, and ſo few houſes to take direction from, that Thomas, the eighth earl of Pembroke, planted a tree at the end of each mile ſtone from hence to Shaftſbury, as a guide to travellers. That part of it, which lies about the city, is a chalky down, like Eaſt Kent. The other parts are noted for feeding numerous flocks of ſheep, ſome of which contain from 3000 to 5000 each, and the farmers hereabouts have frequently two or three ſuch flocks. By folding the ſheep upon the lands, after they are turned up with the plough, they become very fruitful, and bear very good wheat and other grain. In this plain beſide the famous Stonehenge, are traces of many Romiſh and Britiſh camps, ſepulchres, &c.

Salkelds, Great and Little, Cumberl. N. of Penrith, are waſhed by the Eden. At the latter there is a circle of ſtones, 77 in number, each of them 10 feet high, and before them, at the entrance, ſtands a ſingle one, which is 15 feet high. They are thought to have been a Druidical work, and are called, by the country people, Long Meg and her Daughters. Within the circles are two heaps of ſtones, under which dead bodies are ſuppoſed to be buried. Mr. Camden thinks this tradition very probable, but his commentator is of opinion that the heaps of ſtones in the middle of the monument are no original part of it, but that having been gathered off the plowed lands adjoining, they have been thrown together here, as in a waſte corner of the field; and as to the great ſtones, he ſays they ſeem to be monuments, erected at the ſolemn inveſtiture of ſome Daniſh king, like Rollrich ſtones, in Oxfordſhire, and thoſe of Kongſtoten, in Denmark, and of Mooreſteen, in Sweden.

SALLENS, a neat and new-built town of Kildare, in Leinſter, ſeated on the banks of the Grand Canal, 14 miles from Dublin.

SALLEE, an ancient and conſiderable town of Benihaſſen, in the kingdom of Fez. Its harbour was formerly one of the beſt in the country, but now, on account of a bar that lies acroſs it, ſhips of 200 tons burden are forced to unload their guns and ballaſt before they can enter it. There are docks to build ſhips, but they are ſeldom uſed, for want of ſkill and materials; and as the land inſenſibly continues to accumulate, it is probable that, very ſoon, only veſſels with oars will be able to enter the river. The road can only be frequented in the fine ſeaſon, from the beginning of April to the end of September, for when the wind blows from the SSW. (which ſeldom, however, happens but in winter,) it is no longer ſafe; and, beſides, the ſhifting of the ſands of the bar renders the paſſage extremely difficult. Here is a battery of 24 pieces of cannon, which commands the road, and a redoubt which defends the entrance of the river. It is a large place, divided into the Old and New Towns, by the river Guiro. It has long been infamous for its pirates, which make prizes of all the Chriſtians' ſhips that come in their way, except there is a treaty to the contrary. It is ſeated on the river Sallee, formed by the union

mion of two ſmaller ſtreams (the Guero and the Satta) 42 miles W. of Mequinez. Lat. 34. 0. N. lon. 6. 31. W.

SALLY, a town of Virginia, ſituated on the James River, 92 miles W. of Richmond.

SALLYCOE, a town of Georgia, in N. America.

Salley, Yorkſ. in Craven. Sallows, near Norwich.

SALM, a town and county of Germany, circle of Upper Rhine, inſulated in France, 24 miles WSW. of Straſburg.

SALM, a town and county of Germany, inſulated in Luxemburg, 38 miles N. of the city of Luxemburg.

SALMAISE, a town in the dept. of the Côte d'Or.

Salmeſton, Kent, near Margate. Salmondby, Lincolnſ. NE. of Horncaſtle. Salmons, Kent, near Penſhurſt.

SALO, a town in the Breſciano, ſeated near the Lake Garda.

SALOBREANA, a ſea-port of Grenada, in Spain, with a ſtrong caſtle, in which the Mooriſh kings formerly kept their treaſure. It carries on a great trade in ſugar and fiſh, and is ſeated on a rock, 12 miles SE. of Almunecar, and 36 S. of Grenada.

Salomon's Bridge, Suſſex, NW. of Petworth. Salom Wood, Huntingdonſ. near Old Weſton.

SALON, a town in the dept. of the Mouths of the Rhone, ſeated on the canal of Craponne, 20 miles NW. of Aix.

SALONA, anciently called AMPHISSA, a reduced ſea-port town of the late Venetian Dalmatia, celebrated as the retreat of the emperor Domitian. It was anciently a very conſiderable place, its ruins ſhowing that it was 10 miles in circumference. It is 6 miles N. of Spalatro.

SALONA, a town of Livadia, with a biſhop's ſee. The inhabitants are partly Greeks and partly Turks; but the Jews are not ſuffered to live here. It is ſeated on a mountain, on the top of which is a citadel, nearly 22 miles NW. of Livadia.

SALONICHI, formerly called THESSALONICA, a ſea-port of Turkey, in Europe, and the principal town in Macedonia, with an archbiſhop's ſee. It is large, populous, and rich, being about 10 miles in circumference. It is a place of conſiderable trade, which is carried on principally by the Greek Chriſtians and the Jews, the former of whom form 30 churches, and the latter as many ſynagogues. Here is a triumphal arch, almoſt entire, erected in honour of the Emperor Antoninus, with ſeveral churches of extraordinary beauty, now converted into Turkiſh moſques. That of St. Demetrius has in it above a thouſand pillars of jaſper, porphyry, &c. The principal merchandiſe is ſilk. It is ſeated at the bottom of a gulf of the ſame name, partly on the top; and partly on the ſide of a hill, near the river Varda, 50 miles NNE. of Lariſſa, and 270 W. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 40 41. N. lon. 22. 58. E.

SALOP. See SHROPSHIRE.

Salperton, or Cold-Salperton, Glouceſt. between Winchcomb and Northleach.

SALSES, a town, caſtle, and lake in the dept. of the Eaſtern Pyrenees, 10 miles N. of Perpignan.

SALSETTE, an iſland of Hindooſtan, lying off the coaſt of Concan, about 10 miles N. of Bombay. It is about 120 miles in circumference, and is fertile in rice, fruits, and ſugar-canes, beſides which, they have a trade in dried fiſh. It has ſubterraneous temples, cut out of the live rock, in the manner of thoſe of Elephanta. It is only ſeparated from Bombay by a channel half a mile over, which is fordable at low water. In 1750, the Mahrattas took it from the Portugueſe; and, in 1774, the Engliſh took it by aſſault from the Mahrattas, and have kept it ever ſince, agreeably to treaty. It is a moſt deſirable acquiſition to the Eaſt India Company, as the ſettlement of Bombay poſſeſſed no territory beyond the ſmall iſland on which it is ſituated, and depended on foreign ſupplies for ſubſiſtence.

SALSONA, a town of Catalonia.

Salſton, Camb. in a vale near Gogmagog-Hills. Salt, Staff. near Ingeſtre.

SALTA, a town of Tucuman, in S. America, which ſends large quantities of corn, wine, meat, hides, and other commodities to moſt parts of Peru. It contains about 400 houſes, 2 churches, and 4 monaſteries. The inhabitants have frequent wars with the Indians. They have about 500 men that bear arms, with thrice that number of ſlaves. It is 50 miles S. of St. Salvador. Lat. 25. 20. S. lon. 66. 30. W.

SALTASH, a town of Cornwall, trading principally in malt and beer. It conſiſts of 3 ſtreets, which are waſhed clean by every ſhower of rain. The harbour is capable of receiving veſſels of any burden. Here is a ferry over the Tamar to Plymouth Dock, the inhabitants of which generally come to this market by water, rather than go to Plymouth by land, as proviſions are much cheaper here; here; and the town boat, in which they go, brings home what they buy. It is ſeated on the deſcent of a ſteep hill, at the mouth of the Hamoaze, four miles and a half NW. of Plymouth, and 220 WSW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Saltbox, Suſſex, near Chicheſter. Saltburn, Yorkſ. in Cleveland, near Rochiff. Saltby, Leiceſ. near Belvoir.

SALTCOATS, a ſea-port of Ayrſhire, containing about 2325 inhabitants. It is one of the principal watering places in the county, (furniſhing accommodations in the ſeaſon for 3 or 400 ſtrangers,) has (and has long had) a manufacture of ſalt, of which about 2562 bolls are annually made here; a trade in coals, of which, to the average amount of 23,000 tons are dug yearly near the town, a manufacture of ſail-cloth, a rope-yard, and docks for building ſhips, not only for this port, but for other towns. It is ſituated on the Clyde, 10 miles NNW. of Ayr.

Saltcote, Cumberland, between Newton Marſh and Rabycote.

SALTEES, two ſmall iſlands on the coaſt of Wexford, in Leinſter, about 3 leagues and a half WSW. of Carnſore Point.

SALTEN, a town of Drontheim.

Salterford, Nottingh. in the foreſt, near Granby. Saltergate, Yorkſ. N. Riding, in Blackenmoor. Saltern, Devonſ. S. of Budley.

SALTFLEET, a ſea port of Lincolnſhire, 33 miles NE. of Lincoln, and 158 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

Saltfleetby, Eaſt, Middle, Weſt, or All Saints, Clement, and Peter, Linc. SE. of Saltfleet. Salt-Hill, a village of Berks, 22 miles from London, on the road to Bath. It is finely ſituated, and has ſome elegant inns. Salt Hill, Lincolnſ. SW. of Kirton. Saltborp, Wilts, SE. of Wotton Baſſet. Salt-Houſe, Norfolk, between Holt and the ſea.

Saltibridge, in Waterford, Munſter.

Saltley, Warw. NE. of Birmingham. Saltmarſh, Yorkſ. SE. of Howden. Salton, Yorkſhire, NE. of Hovingham. Saltorn-Load, Norfolk, a channel in the Marſh Land. Saltrey, Abbey, Breames, Grange, Judith, Mill, and Moins, Huntingdonſhire, S. and SE. of Conington. Saltrey, Common, and Drain, are E. of Conington. Saltrum, Devonſhire, in Plymſtock pariſh. Saltwater. Suſſex, SW. of Chicheſter. Saltwater Haugh, near Durham, is a remarkable ſalt-ſpring in the middle of the river Wear; to be ſeen chiefly in the ſummer, when the water falls to the ſide of the channel. It tinges the ſtones near it with a red colour, and when boiled, has produced a great quantity of bay ſalt. Saltwick, Northumb. near Stannington. Saltwood, Kent, a mile NW. of Hythe.

SALTZBURG, a well-fortified city of Bavaria, capital of a territory of the ſame name, under the archbiſhop of Saltzburg, who is a ſovereign prince. It is populous and well built, although the ſtreets are narrow and ill-paved. The archbiſhop's palace is a ſuperb ſtructure, and has a magnificent garden, adorned with ſtatues, and planted with uncommon trees. This is his ſummer houſe; but that for winter contains 163 apartments, all richly furniſhed, without reckoning the halls and galleries. The univerſity partly depends on the Benedictine monks, who have a fine library in their monaſtery. In 1737, a ſeparate college was built here for young gentlemen. The cathedral is built of freeſtone and marble, and contains five organs. New Saltzburg are ſome conſiderable ſalt-works. It is ſeated on the river Saltz, 45 miles S. by W. of Paſſaw, and 130 WSW. of Vienna.

SALTZBURG, THE ARCHBISHOPRIC OF, a county of Germany, W. of Auſtria, S. of Upper Bavaria, and N. of Carinthia. It is a mountainous country, but pretty fertile, and contains mines of copper, ſilver, and iron. No manner of grain is ſown here, but hay of a peculiar goodneſs is produced in every part. Here are conſiderable manufactures of ſteel and braſs, as appears from the aſtoniſhing number of ſwords, ſabres, muſkets, cannon, &c. which are to be ſeen in the armories all over the country. In the archbiſhopric are 6 cities, and 25 market towns. It extends 100 miles in length, and 60 in breadth. The principal town is of the ſame name. In 1732, above 30,000 Lutheran Saltzburghers withdrew, with their effects, from the archbiſhopric, diſperſing themſelves in the other Proteſtant countries, and even in the Britiſh colonies in America.

SALVADOR, a town of Congo, capital of the country of Pemba, with a large palace, where the king reſides, and a Portugueſe biſhop. It contains ſeveral churches, and about 40,000 inhabitants, of whom 4000 are white. The Portugueſe live in a quarter by themſelves. It is ſeated on a craggy mountain, in lat. 5. 50. S. and lon. 15. 30. E.

SALVADOR, ST. a large, populous, and handſome city of Braſil, formerly the reſidence ſidence of the governor, and containg ſeveral religious houſes. The inhaitants, who are deſcribed as voluptuous, roud, ignorant, and ſuperſtitious, carry n a conſiderable trade. The houſes are wo or three ſtories high, and the walls hick and ſtrong, being built of ſtone. The ſtreets are generally large and traight; yet moſt of them have ſo ſteep n aſcent, that they are impracticable to heel carriages. Here are alſo many ardens, full of a great variety of fruitrees, herbs, and flowers. The chief ommodities for exportation, are ſugar, bacco, woad for dyers, raw hides, talw, train oil, Braſil wood, balſam of apivi, ipecacuanha, and other drugs. t is ſeated on an eminence, 100 fathoms height, formed by the E. ſide of the ay of All-Saints, and the harbour is ift below it. Lat. 12. 45. S. lon. 40. 0. W.

SALVAGES, ſmall uninhabited iſlands, ing to the N. of the Canary Iſlands. at. 30. 11. N. lon. 17. 54. W.

SALVATERRA, a town of Portugal, in ſtramadura, 15 miles S. of Santarem.

SALVATERRA, a town of Beira.

SALVATIERRA, a town of Arragon.

SALVATIERRA, a town of Leon.

Salvington, Suſſex, in Terring pariſh.

Salutation, Yorkſ. N. Riding, between edal and Danby-Wiſk.

SALUZZO, a town of Piedmont, capiil of a marquiſate of the ſame name, with magnificent and rich cathedral. It is ated on an eminence, near the Po, 20 iles SSW. of Turin.

Salwarp, Worceſ. near Droitwich, by he river Salwarp, which runs into the evern, near Worceſter.

SALZA, GREAT, a town of Magdeburg, in Lower Saxony, noted for its alt-works.

SALZA, a town of Meiſſen, in Upper Saxony.

SAMAR, or TANDAY, one of the Philippine Iſlands, near the SE. extremity of Luzon, from which it is ſeparated by a narrow ſtrait. It is about 320 miles in circumference, and is full of craggy mountains, among which, however, are many valleys, extremely fertile in rice, yams, cocoa, gaby (a root ſo called), pepper, honey, wax, ſugar-canes, cabbages, Chineſe oranges, lemons, figs, and other kinds of fruit, little known in Europe. The woods ſwarm with birds of almoſt every deſcription, particularly the common fowl, with ſhorter legs than ours; among which is alſo a very ſmall bird, of the diminutive ſize of the waſp, with colours peculiarly vivid and beautiful, conſiſting of yellow, mixed with red and blue. Many kinds of monkeys, one of which is remarkably large, roebucks, wild buffaloes, and other quadrupeds, abound in the woods. The iron tree, ebony, and dying wood, grow in every part of the iſland, and gold duſt is found in its more interior regions. The natives, at leaſt, on the ſea coaſt, were formerly Mahometans, but the miſſionary Jeſuits have converted them to the religion and allegiance of Spain. Lat. 12. 15. N.

SAMARANG, a town on the NE. coaſt of the iſland of Java.

SAMARCAND, or SARMACAND, (called alſo MAWARALNAHR,) ſuppoſed to be the MARAKANDUS of the ancients, a very large and well-peopled city of Aſia, capital of a kingdom of the ſame name, in the country of the Uſbeck Tartars, with a famous academy of ſciences, to which the Mahometans reſort to ſtudy, from all the neighbouring countries. Many of the houſes are built of ſtone, and it is fortified with ſtrong bulwarks of earth. It was formerly the ſeat of Tamerlane the Great, as it now is of a Tartar prince, and carries on a great trade with Perſia, Hindooſtan, Chineſe Tartary, &c. The ſilk paper made here is in great requeſt throughout the Eaſt. The ſoil produces pears, apples, raiſins, and melons of an exquiſite taſte. It is pleaſantly ſeated on the river Sogde, 150 miles E. by N. of Bokhara. Lat. 39. 50. N. lon. 63. 20. E.

SAMBALLAS, ſeveral iſlands of America, on the N. coaſt of the iſthmus of Darien. None of them are inhabited, but they are all claimed by the Spaniards. In the long channel between the Samballas and the iſthmus, extending from Point Samballas to the Gulf of Darien, the ſea is navigable from one end to the other, affording good anchorage and ſhelter, let the wind blow from what quarter it will.

Samborn, Warwickſhire, near Great Coughton.

SAMBRE, a river of the Netherlands, which riſes in the department of Aiſne, and paſſing by Landrecy, Maubeuge, Charleroy, &c. falls into the Maeſe at Namur.

Samford, Dorſetſ. NE. of Everſhot. Samford, Somerſ. SW. of Bridgewater. Samford Arundel, Somerſ. SW. of Wellington. Samford-Bret, Somerſ. SW. of Quantock-Hills. Samford Courtenay, Devonſ. N. of Okehampton. Samford common ſort, and there are other birds beautiful and numerous, though not various. Goats, pigs, and European ſeeds, were left by Captain Cook; but the poſſeſſion of the goats ſoon gave riſe to a conteſt between two diſtricts, in which the breed was entirely deſtroyed. The inhabitants are undoubtedly of the ſame race that poſſeſſes the iſlands ſouth of the equator; and in their perſons, language, cuſtoms, and manners, approach nearer to the New Zealanders, than to their leſs diſtant neighbours, either of the Society or Friendly Iſlands. They are, in general, above the middle ſize, and ſtrong; they walk gracefully, run nimbly, and are capable of bearing great fatigue. Many of both ſexes are ſaid to have fine open countenances; and the women, in particular, have good eyes and teeth, with a ſweetneſs and ſenſibility of look, that render them very engaging. There is one peculiarity, characteriſtic of every part of this nation, that even in the handſomeſt faces there is a fulneſs of the noſtril, without any flatneſs or ſpreading of the noſe. They ſuffer their beards to grow, and wear their hair after various faſhions. The dreſs of both men and women nearly reſembles thoſe of New Zealand, and both ſexes wear necklaces of ſmall variegated ſhells. Tattowing the body is practiſed by every colony of this nation. The hands and arms of the women are alſo very neatly marked, and they have the ſingular cuſtom of tattowing the tip of the tongue. Like the New Zealanders, they have adopted the method of living together in villages, containing from 100 to 200 houſes, built pretty cloſely together, without much order, and having a winding path between them. They are generally flanked, toward the ſea, with detached walls, which are meant both for ſhelter and defence. Theſe walls conſiſt of looſe ſtones, and the inhabitants are very dexterous in ſhifting them ſuddenly to ſuch places as the direction of the attack may require. In the ſides of the hills, they have little caves or retreats, the entrance to which is ſecured by a fence of the ſame kind. Some of their houſes are large and commodious, from 40 to 50 feet long, and from 20 to 30 broad; while others are mere hovels. Their food conſiſts principally of fiſh and vegetables, to which they add the fleſh of dogs and hogs. The making of canoes, mats, &c. forms the occupation of the men; the women are employed in manufacturing cloth; and the ſervants are principally engaged in the plantations and fiſhing. They have various amuſements, ſuch as dancing, boxing, wreſtling, &c. Their agriculture and navigation bear a great reſemblance to thoſe of the South Sea iſlands. Their plantations, which are ſpread over the whole ſea-coaſt, conſiſt of the taro, or eddy root, and ſweet potatoes, with plants of the cloth-tree ſet in rows. The bottoms of their canoes are of a ſingle piece of wood, hollowed out to the thickneſs of an inch, and brought to a point at each end. The ſides conſiſt of three boards, each about an inch thick, neatly fitted and laſhed to the bottom part. Some of their double canoes meaſure 70 feet in length, 3 and a half in depth, and 12 in breadth. They make ſalt in great abundance, and of a good quality. As the iſlands are not united under one government, wars are frequent among them. The ſame ſyſtem of ſubordination prevails here as at the other iſlands, the ſame abſolute authority on the part of the chiefs, and the ſame unreſiſting ſubmiſſion on the part of the people. The government is monarchical and hereditary. At Owhyhee is a regular ſociety of prieſts living by themſelves, and diſtinct, in all reſpects, from the reſt of the people. Human ſacrifices are here frequent; not only at the commencement of a war, or ſignal enterpriſe, but the death of every conſiderable chief calls for a repetition of theſe horrid rites. Yet, apart from theſe obſervances, they are acknowledged to be of the moſt mild and affectionate diſpoſition. They live in the utmoſt harmony and friendſhip with each other; and in hoſpitality to ſtrangers they are not exceeded even by the inhabitants of the Friendly Iſlands, when their reſentment is not kindled by injury. Their improvements in agriculture, and the perfection of their manufactures, are certainly adequate to the circumſtances of their ſituation, and the natural advantages which they enjoy.

Dorcas,

Sandwich, and its Bay, Dorſetſ. S. of Purbeck Iſland; ſee Swanwich. Sandy, Somerſetſ. near Yeovil. Sandy Acre, E. of Derby. Sandy-Capel, Surry, by Esher. Sandy-Hill, Dorſetſ. near Curſe Caſtle. Sandy-End, Middleſex, between Chelſea and Fulham.

SANDY HOOK, a ſmall iſland near the coaſt of New Jerſey, about 7 miles S. of Long Iſland. It was formerly a peninſula, but the ſea broke through the iſthmus, and formed it into an iſland, in in the winter between the years 1777 and 1778.

Sandy-Lane, Oxfordſhire, between Iſlip and Wheatly. Sandy-Lane, Wilts, between Marlborough and Corſham. Sandy-Way, Cheſhire, SW. of Northwich. Sandy-Well, Glouc. in Dowdeſwell pariſh. Saneton, Lincolnſh. near Sawcliff. Sanford, Devonſ. N. of Crediton. Sanford Heath, Oxfordſ. N. of Chipping-Norton. Sangball, Great, near Cheſter. Sangball Maſſey and Parva, Cheſhire, between Mcoles and Overchurch. Sangbton, Cheſhire, between Tattenhall and Cheſter.

SANGUELOUK, a town of Siam.

SANGUESA, a town of Spain, in Navarre, ſeated on the river Arragon.

Sankey, Great and Little, Lanc. near Warrington.

SAN MATHEO, a town of Valencia.

SANORE-BANCAPOUR, a country of Hindooſtan, ſituated to the N. of Myſore, and S. of Viſiapour. The town and fortreſs of Sanore is ſituated on the river Toom, 110 miles SSE. of Viſiapour, in lat. 15. 39. N. and lon. 75. 44. E.

SANPOO. See BURRAMPOOTER.

SANQUHAR, a town or royal borough of Nithſdale, in the county of Dumfries, containing about 2600 inhabitants. It is chiefly remarkable for its coal trade, (the coals in this and the adjacent pariſh, ſupplying a large tract of country,) and a manufactory of knit worſted mittens and ſtockings, both coarſe and fine. Here are alſo ſome beds of fuller's earth and lime-ſtone. It is ſeated on the river Nith, 24 miles NNW. of Dumfries.

SANTA-CLARA, a ſmall iſland on the coaſt of Peru, in the Bay of Guyaquil.

SANTA-CRUZ, a town on the SW. coaſt of the Iſland of Teneriff, defended by four ſmall forts and ſeveral batteries. The town is very irregularly laid out, and contains about 300 houſes, built of ſtone. The principal ſtreet is broad, and has more the appearance of a ſquare than a ſtreet, with the governor's houſe at the upper end. Here is a church, and ſeveral convents. The road before the town is the principal one in the iſland for ſhelter, capacity, and the goodneſs of its bottom. It lies, however, entirely open to the SE. and S. winds; but theſe never continue long, and there is not an inſtance of a ſhip's driving from her anchors on ſhore. Lat. 28. 31. N. lon. 16. 31. W.

SANTA CRUZ, a town of Sus, on the coaſt of Morocco, with a large and ſecure harbour. It is ſeated on the Cape Aguer, or Ger, in lat. 30. 38. N. and lon. 10. 7. W.

SANTA CRUZ, a ſea-port of Cuba, on the N. ſide of the iſland, 50 miles E. of the Havannah. Lon. 81. 16. W.

SANTA-CRUZ-DE-LA-SIERRA, a town of S. America, capital of a province of the ſame name in the vice-royalty of Buenos-Ayres. The environs produce great quantities of honey and wax. Lat. 17. 46. S. lon. 65. 14. W.

SANTA-FE, a town of N. America, capital of New Mexico, ſeated near the Rio-del-Norte, 920 miles NNW. of Mexico. Lat. 36. 50. N. lon. 106. 35. W.

SANTA-FE-DE-BOGOTA, a town of S. America, capital of New Granada, with a univerſity. It is ſeated on the river Magdalena, in a plentiful country, abounding in corn, cattle, and fruit, with mines of ſilver in the mountains, 363 miles S. of Carthagena. Lat. 4. 9. N. lon. 73. 5. W.

SANTANDER, a ſea-port of Aſturias.

SANTAREN, a town of Portugal, in Eſtramadura, containing about 8000 inhabitants. It is ſituated in a country very fertile in wheat, wine, and oil, near the river Tajo, 45 miles NNE. of Liſbon.

SANTEE, a river of S. Carolina.

SANTEN, a town of Cleves, with fine walks, that run as far as Weſel, from which it is 5 miles diſtant to the W.

SANTILLANA, a ſea-port of Aſturias, capital of the eaſtern part of that province. It is 70 miles E. of Oviedo, and 200 nearly N. of Madrid.

Santon, Cumberland. near Penrith. Santon, Devonſ. in Branton pariſh. Santon, Lincolnſ. near Spittle-in-the-Street. Santon, Cumberland, in Irton pariſh. Santon-Houſe, Norfolk, near Brandon-Ferry.

SANTORIN, or ST. ERINI, (anciently called THERA and CALISTE, or the HANDSOME,) an iſland of the Archipelago, to the N. of Candia, and to the SW. of Nanphio. It is about eight miles in length, nearly as much in breadth, and almoſt covered with pumice ſtone, whence the ſoil, in general, muſt be dry and barren; it is, however, greatly improved, by the labour and induſtry of the inhabitants, who have turned the moſt ungrateful ſpot of ground in the world into a perfect orchard. It affords little wheat, but a great deal of barley and cotton, and a potent ſpirituous wine, of the colour of rheniſh, in profuſion; in the exportation of which, to all parts of the Archipelago, and even as far as Conſtantinople, as alſo in the manufactory of cotton, their trade principally conſiſts. Fruit is ſcarce, except figs, and they have neither oil nor wood. They kill their beeves but once a year, and then they put it in pickle. The inhabitants, alſo, who are all Greeks, are about 10,000 in number; though they are ſubject to the Turks, they chuſe their own magiſtrates. Pyrgos is the capital, beſides which there are four towns and five villages. They have but one ſpring in the iſland, for which reaſon they preſerve the rain-water in ciſterns. Lat. 36. 10. N. lon. 26. 1. E.

SANTOS, a fortified town in the government of St. Paul, in Brazil, ſituated on a river, about half a league in breadth and five fathoms deep, in a bay of the ſame name, about 51 leagues SE. of St. Paul.

SANTOS LOS, a town of Panama.

Santoſte-Ferry, Linc. from Yorkſhire to the Iſle of Axholm.

SANXAY, a town in the department of the Vienne, 6 miles NW. of Luſignan.

SAON, a town in the department of the Drome.

SAONA, an iſland near the S. coaſt of St. Domingo, in lon. 68. 58. W. It is about 18 miles long and 8 broad, and abounds with pleaſant woods and paſtures, though it is wholly uninhabited, or, at leaſt, only frequented by fiſhermen, at the time when the turtles come on ſhore to lay their eggs.

SAONE AND LOIRE, a department of France, S. of the dept. of Côte-d'Or, and W. of the dept. of the Jura. Maçon is the capital.

SAONE, UPPER, a dept. of France, ſo called from a conſiderable river which riſes near Darney in Mount Voſges, and paſſing by Gray, Auxonne, Chalons, Verdun, Maçon, &c. falls into the Rhone at Lyons. The capital is Veſoul.

SAORGIO, a fortified town of Nice, in Piedmont, ſituated on the ſummit of a rock, in the peninſula, almoſt ſurrounded by the rivers Roia and Bendola, 17 miles NE. of Nice.

Sapcote, Leiceſ. SE. of Hinckley. Saperton, Derbyſ. E. of Uttoxeter. Saperton, Glouceſterſhire.

SAPIENZA, three iſlands and a cape, with the circumjacent ſea, oppoſite Modon, near the S. coaſt of the Morea; they are very ſmall, and badly cultivated. Lat. 36. 50. N. lon. 21. 35. E.

Sapington, Kent, near Betham. Sapiſton, Suffolk, NW. of Ixworth. Sapley, and its Park and Heath, N. of Huntingdon.

SAP LE, a town in the department of the Orne.

Sapperton, Linc. W. of Fokingham. Sapy, Upper, Heref. N. of Bromyard. Sapy, Lower, or Sapy-Pitchard, Worceſ. N. of Bromyard.

SARACENS, the general name of a people, celebrated ſome centuries ago, who came originally from the deſerts of Arabia: Sarra, in their language, ſignifying a deſert. They were the firſt diſciples of Mahomet, and, within 60 years after his death, conquered a conſiderable part of Aſia, Africa, and Europe. They invaded France, and kept poſſeſſion of Spain till the year 1511, when they were finally expelled. They alſo maintained a war in Paleſtine a long time, againſt the Weſtern Chriſtians, and, at length, drove them entirely out of it; but now there are no people known by that name, for the deſcendants of thoſe who conquered Spain are called Moors.

SARAGOSSA, a large, handſome, well-built city of Spain, in Arragon, with an archbiſhop's ſee, a univerſity, founded in 1474, and a court of inquiſition. It was originally built by the Phœnicians, who called it Salduba; and the Romans ſent a colony here in the reign of Auguſtus, whence it had the name of Cæſar Auguſtus, which, by corruption, has been changed into Saragoſſa. It is adorned with many magnificent buildings, and they reckon here 17 large churches, and 14 handſome monaſteries, not to mention others leſs conſiderable. The ſtreets are long and broad, but ill-paved and dirty; and the houſes are from three to ſix ſtories high. The river Ebro runs acroſs the place, dividing it into two; and on its banks is a handſome quay, which ſerves for a public walk. The Holy-ſtreet is ſo large and broad, that it may be taken for a ſquare; and here they have their bull-fights. In this ſtreet are the houſes of ſeveral noblemen's families, particularly that of the viceroy. The cathedral is a large, but irregular Gothic building; but the fineſt church here is the collegiate one of Nueſtra Signora del Pilar, both for its ſuppoſed miraculous image, and alſo for its valuable treaſures. This celebrated Madona, or image of St. Mary and the infant, ſtands on a marble pillar, and with its ornaments is immenſely rich; the crown being full of precious ſtones of an ineſtimable price; ſcarce any thing is to be ſeen but gold and jewels, which, with the ſilver lamps, wax lights, &c. dazzle the beholder's eye, and a vaſt number of devotees reſort in pilgrimage thither.

hither. The town-houſe is a ſumptuous ſtructure; in the hall are the pictures of all the kings of Arragon, and in the corner of it a St. George on horſeback, with a dragon of white marble under him. Saragoſſa is ſeated in a large plain, rendered extremely fertile in fruits, &c. by the winding of the Ebro, on which it ſtands, and over which it has two bridges, one of ſtone, the other of wood, (which latter has been thought the moſt beautiful of its kind in Europe,) 180 miles nearly W. of Barcelona, and 160 NE. of Madrid. Lat. 41. 53. N. lon. 0. 28. W.

SARAMON, a town in the department of the Gers.

SARATOF, or SARATOVSKI, a government of Ruſſia, divided into 12 diſtricts, of which that of the ſame name is the principal. It was formerly a province of Aſtracan.

SARATOF, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of the ſame name, ſeated on the Volga, 392 miles SE. of Moſcow. Lat. 51. 30. N.

SARATOGA, a town of New York, ſituated on the river Hudſon, where, in 1777, a Britiſh army, under Gen. Burgoyne, ſurrendered to the Americans, under General Gates, on a capitulation, whereby they were to have a free paſſage to Great Britain, on condition of not ſerving againſt America during the war. It is 28 miles N. of New York.

SARBRUCK, a town of Treves.

SARBRUCK, or SARBOURG, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, ſeated on the river Saare, 38 miles E. of Nanci.

SARDAM, or SAENREDAM, a ſea-port of N. Holland, where formerly were vaſt magazines of timber for building ſhips, and naval ſtores, with a prodigious number of ſhipwrights. Here is ſtill ſeen the hut in which Peter the Great, czar of Ruſſia, reſided, while he worked as a ſhipwright in this town. It has been ſaid, that the ſhip-builders of Sardam would undertake, on two month's notice, to build a ſhip of war every week during the year. Sardam is ſeated on the river Wye, 7 miles NW. of Amſterdam.

SARDINIA, an iſland of the Mediterranean, 142 miles in length from N. to S. and 60 in its mean breadth from E. to W. It was originally peopled by the Phœnicians and Greeks, and called by the latter Ichnuſa, Sandialotis, and Sardo. The ſoil is fertile in corn and wine, and there are a great number of oranges, citrons, and olives. On the coaſt is a fiſhery for anchovies and coral, of which they ſend large quantities to Genoa and Leghorn. Beeves and ſheep are numerous, as well as horſes, which are very good for labour and the road. They are fed in the little iſlands about it, which abound in game; and in that of Aſinaria are great numbers of turtles. The air is reckoned very unhealthy, from the marſhy land. The inhabitants were formerly accounted rude and barbarous, and the Romans baniſhed their ſtate priſoners to this iſland; but they are much more civilized ſince, and enjoyed great liberty, till an inquiſition was eſtabliſhed at Saſſari. As the inhabitants are not very induſtrious, the land is not ſufficiently cultivated; nor do they pay much attention to trade. It contains mines of ſilver, lead, ſulphur, and alum; and they make a good deal of ſalt. In 1708, this iſland was taken by the Engliſh for Charles III. and allotted to the emperor by the treaty of Utrecht, in 1713; but, in 1720, it was ceded to the duke of Savoy, as an equivalent for Sicily. The royal revenue is inconſiderable, after the charges of the army and civil officers are deducted. The king of Sardinia keeps his court at Turin, the capital of his Piedmonteſe territories; but he has a viceroy at Cagliari, which is the capital of this iſland.

SARDO, or SART, a decayed town of Turkey in Aſia, in Natolia. It was formerly called Sardis, and was capital of Lydia, and the ſeat of the famous king Crœſus. It now contains only a few poor huts. However, here is a large caravanſary, where there are handſome lodgings for travellers, it lying in the great road from Smyrna to Aleppo; and the Turks have a moſque, which was formerly a Chriſtian church. The inhabitants are now almoſt all ſhepherds, who feed their flocks in the neighbouring plains. There are alſo a few Chriſtians, who employ themſelves in gardening. It is about 30 miles ENE. of Smyrna.

Sardon, Great and Little, Staffordſ. SW. of Cank. Sareſden, Oxfordſhire, in Churchill pariſh.

SARGANS, a town of Zurich, capital of a mountainous, but fertile county of the ſame name, about 15 miles in extent every way. It is governed by a bailiff ſent by the eight cantons alternately. The inhabitants are partly Calviniſts and partly papiſts. It is ſituated on the top of a hill, near ſome mineral ſprings, 46 miles ESE. of Zurich.

SARGEL, a ſea-port of Tremeſen, ſeated on the ſea coaſt, 25 miles from Algiers. Lat. 36. 30. N. lon. 2. 15. W.

SARGUEMINE, a town in the dept. of Moſelle, ſeated on the river Sare, 9 miles N. of Sarbruck.

SARK, or SERK, a little iſland, on, or near the coaſt of France, about two miles long, and nearly as much wide, and containing about 300 inhabitants. The air is ſerene and remarkably healthful, and the ſoil, though generally hot and ſandy, affords all neceſſaries for its inhabitants, particularly apples, of which they make excellent cyder, turnips, carrots, and other roots, with moſt kinds of grain. Their paſture, though ſhort, is exceedingly ſweet, and therefore they have very fine mutton; they have alſo milk and butter, but their cheeſe generally comes from England. Ducks, mallards, woodcocks, teal, &c. abound here, and, at ſome ſeaſons, the cliff-pigeons almoſt cover the iſland. Of rabbits they have great plenty, and alſo a variety of ſea-fiſh. The only manufacture of the iſland is knitting of ſtockings, gloves, waiſtcoats, with which they trade to Briſtol and ſome of the weſtern ports, and return with neceſſaries, having ſeveral ſmall veſſels for that purpoſe.

SARK, LITTLE, a very ſmall iſland, ſituated a little to the S. of Sark.

SARK, a river which riſes in the E. part of Dumfrieſſhire, and, for ſeveral miles, forms the boundary between England and Scotland. It is formed of two branches, the White and Black, and runs into the Eden, below Milner-Hill, or about 4 miles below Carliſle.

SARLAT, a town in the dept. of Dordogne, 27 miles SE. of Perigueux.

SARAT LOUIS, a fortified town in the dept. of Moſelle, ſeated in a peninſula formed by the river Sare, 32 miles ENE. of Mentz.

Sarneſfield, and Sarneſfield-Coffen, Heref. near Webley. Sarney, N. and S. Glouceſ. near Cirenceſter. Sarnfolgrin, Carnarvonſhire.

SARNO, a town of Principato Citra, 10 miles NW. of Salerno. The environs produce, annually, about 4000 pounds weight of the fineſt and beſt wound ſilk in the kingdom.

SARNO, or SAFATA, a ſmall river of Naples, which riſes near a town of the ſame name, and runs into the Mediterranean, about 10 miles SSE. of Naples.

SAROS, a town of Hungary, noted for a poiſonous ſpring in its neighbourhood. It is 6 miles NW. of Eperies.

SARPEN, a town of Chriſtianſand, in Norway, near which is a dreadful cataract or waterfall, the noiſe of which is plainly heard at the diſtance of 20 miles. It drives 17 mills, and is 10 miles WSW. of Frederickſtadt.

Sarre, or Sarr-Street, Kent, in the Iſle of Thanet. Sarret, Herts, N. of Watford.

SARRE, a river of France, which riſes in the dept. of the Voſges, and paſſing by Sarbruck, Sar Louis, Sarbruck in Treves, falls into the Moſelle, a little above Treves.

SARREAL, a town of Catalonia, ſeated on the river Francoli. In the neighbourhood are quarries of alabaſter, ſo tranſparent that they glaze their windows with it.

SARRI, a town of Corſica, 11 miles N. of Ajaccio.

SARSANA, a town of Genoa, ſituated on the river Magra, 45 miles ESE. of Genoa.

SARSINA, a town of Romagna.

SARTE, a dept. of France, S. of that of Orne, and E. of that of Mayenne. It takes its name from a river which riſes near Sees, in the dept. of Orne, and paſſing by Alençon, Frenay le Vicomte, Le Mans, &c. where it becomes navigable, joins the Mayenne near Angiers, 4 miles below which the united ſtreams fall into the Loire. The capital is Mans.

SARUM, NEW. See SALISBURY.

SARUM, OLD, an ancient borough of Wilts, which, though now reduced to a ſingle farm-houſe, ſtill ſends two members to parliament; theſe are choſen by the proprietors of certain adjacent lands. It once covered the ſummit of a high ſteep hill; but there is nothing now to be ſeen of it but ſome ſmall ruins of a caſtle, with a double intrenchment, and a deep ditch. The tracts of the ſtreets and cathedral may be pretty diſtinctly traced out by the different colour of the corn growing where once the city ſtood. It is about a mile N. of Saliſbury.

SARVERDEN, a town in the dept. of Moſelle, ſeated on the river Sare, 10 miles NNW. of Sarbruck.

SARWAR, a town and county of Hungary, 48 miles SE. of Vienne.

SASERAM, a large town of Hindooſtan, in the country of Bahar, ſeated near a great lake, 55 miles SE. of Benares.

SASSARI, a city of Sardinia, capital of the territory of Lugari, and the occaſional reſidence of the viceroy. It contains near 30,000 inhabitants, and is famous for a fountain called Roſſel, which is ſaid to be much more magnificent than the beſt at Rome. The inhabitants, indeed, have the following proverb, Chi none vidde Roſſel, non vidde mondo: he that has not ſeen Roſſel, has not ſeen the world. It is ſeated in a plain, 6 miles NNE. of Algiers, in lat. 40. 46. N. and lon. 8. 39. E.

the

SAS-VAN-GHENT, a town of Dutch Flanders, ſmall, but regularly fortified. It has five ſluices, and is ſeated on a canal, which communicates with the Scheld and with the Ghent, 8 miles N. of that city.

SASSUOLO, a town of Modena.

SATABAGO, a province of Aſiatic Turkey. S. of Imiretta.

SATALIA, or ANTALIA, a ſea-port of Caramania, large, ſtrong, and divided into three towns. Here is a ſuperb moſque, which was formerly a Chriſtian church. The country about it is fertile; and the citrons and oranges are excellent. The inhabitants trade in wool, cotton, goat's hair, agaric, gum tragacanth, opium, and bees' wax. It is 134 miles S. of Kiutaja, and 265 S. by E. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 37. 1. N. lon. 32. 21. E.

Saterleigh, Devonſ. on the Bray, SW. of South Moulton. Saterthwaite, Lanc. in the NW. angle of it, between the rivers Foſſe and Thuſton.

SATGONG, or SATAGONG, an inconſiderable village in the ſoubah of Bengal. In the 16th century, however, it was a large, trading city, in which the European traders had their factories. It is ſeated on a creek of the Hooghly River, about 4 miles NW. of Hooghly.

Satridge, Herts, NE. of Thundridge. Satron, Yorkſ. E. of Swaledale.

SATTARAH, a town of Viſiapour, in Hindooſtan, formerly capital of the Mahratta ſtate. It is ſituated near the ſource of the Kiſtnah, 50 miles S. of Poonah.

SAVA, a town of Arabian Irac, in Perſia, 60 miles S. of Caſbin.

SAVAGE ISLAND, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, apparently overrun with woods and buſhes. It is about 30 miles in circumference, and was diſcovered and ſo named by Captain Cook, from the rude, inhoſpitable behaviour, of the inhabitants, in 1774. Lat. 19. 1. S. lon. 169. 37. W.

SAVANNAH, a town of N. America, in the ſtate of Georgia, of which it was formerly the capital. It is regularly built in the form of a parallelogram, and is ſeated on a ſandy bluff, with banks at leaſt 60 feet high, on the S. ſide of the river Savannah, 17 miles from its mouth, and 117 SE. of Auguſta. Lat. 32. 0. N. lon. 81. 12. W.

SAVANNAH, a river of N. America, which forms a part of the diviſional line that ſeparates the ſtate of Georgia from that of S. Carolina. It is formed by the union of the Tougoloo and Keowee, and is navigable for boats of 100 feet keel from Auguſta to Savannah, and thence for veſſels of 300 tons burden, to its entrance into the Atlantic Ocean, at Tybee-Bar, in lat. 32. 2. N. and lon. 81. W. where it has 16 feet water at half tide.

SAVATOPOLI, or SEBASTOPOLIS, anciently DIOSCURIAS, a town of Mingrelia, ſituated on the Black Sea.

SAVE, a river of Germany, which riſes in Carniola, and runs into the Danube, at or near Belgrade.

SAVERNAY, a town in the department of the Lower Loire, 18 miles NW. of Nantes.

SAVENDROOG, a fortreſs of Myſore, in Hindooſtan, ſituated on the top of a vaſt rock, riſing half a mile in perpendicular height, from a baſe of above eight miles in circumference; and divided at the ſummit by a chaſm, which forms it into two hills. Theſe, having each their peculiar defences, form two citadels capable of being maintained independently of the lower works. Walls, croſs-walls, and barriers have alſo been erected at every acceſſible place. On Dec. 10th, 1791, Colonel Stuart encamped within three miles of the rock, and on the morning of the 21ſt, at 11 o'clock, the Britiſh ſoldiery made themſelves maſters of a fortreſs which had hitherto been conſidered as impregnable. It is 18 miles W. of Bangalore, and 47 NE. of Seringapatam.

SAVERDUN, a town in the dept. of Arriege, ſeated on the river Arriege, 15 miles NW. of Mirepoix.

Savernake Foreſt, Wilts, SE. of Marlborough, about 12 miles in compaſs, and the only privileged foreſt for hunting that is poſſeſſed by a ſubject. It is plentifully ſtocked with large deer, and adorned with many delightful walks and viſtas, (cut through the woods and coppices.) 8 of which meet in a point near the centre.

SAVERNE, or ZABERNE, a town in the dept. of Lower Rhine, 18 miles NW. of Straſburgh, and 120 E. of Paris.

SAVERNE DU RHINE, or RHEINZABERN, a town of Spire, 21 miles SSW. of Manheim.

Saveſton, Hampſhire, NE. of Quarley-Hill. Saughe, a river in Carnarvonſhire, which runs into the Iriſh Channel, S. of Ticmor Point. Saviors, St. Cornw. near Foy. Saviour's, St. Cornw. near Padſtow-Haven.

SAVIGLIANO, a town and fertile diſtrict of Piedmont, about 8 miles ESE. of Saluzzo. Alſo a town of Bari.

Saul, Glouceſterſhire, 4 miles from Newnham, and 6 from Durſley. Saul, or Sell, Norfolk, between Aleſham and Foulſham. Saulden, Bucks, in Murſley pariſh, near Fenny Stratford. Sauldon, Devonſ. NE. of Stratton, and near the Tamar.

SAULGEN, a town and county in Auſtrian Suabia.

SAULIEU, a town in the department of Côte-d'Or, where anciently was a college of the Druids; a wood in which they performed their ſacrifices, and the ruins of a temple dedicated to the Sun, are yet viſible. It is 30 miles W. of Dijon, and 142 SE. of Paris.

SAMUR, a town in the department of Maine and Loire; before the revolution, capital of the Saumurois. Here is a famous bridge over the Loire, built in 1768; it conſiſts of 12 elliptic arches, each 60 feet in diameter. Saumur is 22 miles SE. of Angers, and 160 SW. of Paris.

Saunby, Nottinghamſ. SW. of Gainſborough, in Lincolnſhire.

SAUNDER'S ISLAND. See SIR CHARLES SAUNDER'S ISLAND.

Savock, a river in Lancaſhire, which runs into the Ribble, near Lea, 3 miles below Preſton.

SAVOLAX, a diſtrict of Finland, bordering on Ruſſia, about 200 miles in length and 100 in breadth. It is full of woods, lakes, and moraſſes, and is but thinly inhabited.

SAVONA, a conſiderable town of Genoa, and, next to Genoa, the beſt in the republic. It contains ſeveral fine churches, and other well-built ſtructures. The Genoeſe, fearing that it would hurt their trade, ruined the harbour, or, at leaſt, rendered it unfit for large veſſels. The country about it is well cultivated, and abounds in ſilks, and all ſorts of fruits. It is ſeated on the Mediterranean, 20 miles SW. of Genoa.

SAVONIERS, a town of France, in the department of Indre and Loire, ſituated on the Cher, 8 miles SW. of Tours. Near it are certain caverns, remarkable for their petrifactions.

SAVOY, a ci-devant duchy of Europe, anciently called Sabaudia, and now forming the department of Mont-Blanc. In 1792, this country was over-run by the French, the people receiving them as friends rather than as enemies; and, in the ſame year, it was decreed by the national convention, that it ſhould be an 84th department of France, by the name of Mont-Blanc. See BLANC, MONT.

SAVU, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, about 24 miles in length, dependent on the Dutch Eaſt-India Company. The Dutch, however, have not taken poſſeſſion of it, but they ſend ſloops to trade with the natives, for vegetables, fruits, fowls, fleſh, and other proviſions to ſupply the inhabitants of their Spice Iſlands. Lat. 10. 35. S. lon. 122. 30. E.

Sautby, a river in Carmarthenſhire, which runs into the Muthey, near Llangadock.

SAUVES, a town in the department of Gard, 12 miles SW. of Alais.

SAUVETERRE, a town in the department of Lower Pyrenees, 17 miles NNW. of Pau.

SAUVETERRE, a town in the department of Aveiron, 14 miles SW. of Rhodez.

*SAWBRIDGEWORTH, a town of Hertfordſhire, 4 miles S. of Biſhop's-Stortford, and 26 N. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Sawcemeres, Eſſex, W. of Maunden. Sawcliff, Linc. SE. of Burton-upon-Trent. Sawcot, Kent, near Cranbrook. Sawdon, Yorkſhire, in Pickering-Foreſt. Sawley, Derbyſ. on the Trent, SE. of Derby. Sawley, Yorkſ. SW. of Rippon. Sawley Abbey, Yorkſ. SW. of Giſburn. Sawſthorp, Lincolnſhire, N. of Spilſby. Sawſton, Cambridgeſhire, at the foot of Gogmagog-Hills. Sawtree, St. Andrew, Judith, and All-Saints, Huntingdonſhire, E of the Giddings. Saxay, Yorkſhire, SW. of Stokeſley. Saxby, Leiceſterſh. S. of Waltham-in-the-Would. Saxby, Lincolnſh. SE. of Spittle-in-the-Street. Saxby, Lincolnſhire, SW. of Barton-upon-Humber. Saxdale, Nottinghamſ.

SAXENHAGEN, a town of Schawenburg, in Weſtphalia, 50 miles NW. of Hanover.

Saxham, Cambridgeſh. near Newmarket-Heath. Saxham, Great and Little, Suffolk, W. of Bury. Saxilby, NW. of Lincoln, on the Foſs-Dyke. Saxlingham, Norfolk, W. of Holt. Saxlingham, Nethergate and Thorp, Norfolk, W. of Loddon.

*SAXMUNDHAM, a town of Suffolk, containing about 400 pretty good houſes, but the ſtreets are narrow and not paved.

It

it has no particular manufacture, and is ſituated upon a hill, between Woodbridge and Yoxford, in the road to Haleſworth, 19 miles NE. of Ipſwich, and 89 NE. of London. Market on Thurſday.

SAXONY, UPPER, one of the nine circles of the German empire. It is bounded on the E. by Pruſſia, and a part of Poland and Sileſia; on the S. by Bohemia and Franconia; on the W. by the circle of the Upper Rhine, and that of Lower Saxony; and on the N. by the Baltic, and the circle of Lower Saxony. The elector of Saxony was formerly the director, but as the whole circle now is moſtly Lutheran, eight aſſeſſors are deputed to the imperial chambers, of which the elector of Saxony names two, the elector of Brandenburgh two, and the other ſtates name the reſt. It comprehends the electorate of Saxony, or Saxony Proper, the principality of Anhalt, the landgravate of Thuringia, the marche of Brandenburg, and the duchy of Pomerania; and theſe are ſubdivided into many diſtricts.

SAXONY, LOWER, one of the nine circles of the German empire, is bounded on the N. by the Baltic and the duchy of Sleſwick; on the W. by the German Ocean and the circle of Weſtphalia; and on the S. and E. by the circle of the Upper Rhine, and the circle of Upper Saxony. The directors of this circle are the dukes of Magdeburg, Bremen, and of Brunſwick-Lunenburg. It comprehends the archbiſhopric of Magdeburg, the biſhopric of Hildeſheim, the archbiſhopric of Bremen, the biſhoprics of Halberſtadt, Schwerin, Ratzburg, Lubec, and Sleſwick; the duchies of Brunſwick Lunenburg, Lawenburg, and Mecklenburg: the principality of Verden; the counties of Reinſtein and Blauburg; the free-cities of Hamburg, Lubec, Goſlan, Mulhauſen, and Northauſen, SAXONY, PROPER, or THE ELECTORATE OF SAXONY, in the circle of Upper Saxony, compoſed of the duchy of Saxony, the greater part of the margraviate of Miſnia, a part of the Vogtland, and the N. part of Thuringia, Luſatia, and a part of the county of Henneburg. It is about 75 miles in length, and 63 in breadth, is cut into two unequal parts by the river Elbe, and is a very fertile and trading country, abounding in mines.

Saxted, Suffolk, near Framlingham. Saxthorp, Norfolk, NW. of Aleſham. Saxton, Yorkſhire, near Aberforth. Saxby, Leiceſterſhire, NW. of Melton-Mowbray.

SAYBROOK, a town of Connecticut, in N. America, originally built by the agent of Lord Viſcount Say and Seal. It is ſituated on the W. ſide of the river Connecticut, near its mouth, 15 miles W. of New London.

SAYCOCK, one of the iſlands of Japan, divided from Niphon by a narrow channel. The Dutch factors are permitted to reſide in the little iſland of Diſnia, which is on the W. ſide of it. Lat. 34. 0. N. lon. 132. 28. E.

SAYD. See SIDON.

SAYN, a town of Treves, 6 miles N. of Coblentz. It is ſituated on a river of the ſame name, which runs into the Rhine, about 5 miles below Coblentz.

SAYN, a county of Weſtphalia, divided into 2 principal branches, Sayn Altenkirchen, and Sayn Hachenbach.

SAYPAN, or ST. JOSEPH, one of the Marian Iſlands, in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, about twenty miles in circumference, with a ſafe and commodious harbour, well ſheltered with wood, at the bottom of a ſteep bay, on its W. coaſt. The ſoil is fertile, the climate ſerene, and the country, either examined near, or at a diſtance, looks green, pleaſant, and beautiful, diverſified with hills and plains, and affording all the neceſſaries of life in the utmoſt plenty. Lat. 14. 50. N.

Say's-Court, Kent, near Deptford. Scadbury, Kent, in Chiſelhurſt pariſh. Scadbury, Kent, 8. of Graveſend. Scadham, or Stadham, Oxfordſ. near Chiſelhampton.

SCAGEN, a town at the extremity of N. Jutland, near a cape of the ſame name, 18 miles N. of Fladſtrand. Lat. 57. 46. N. lon. 10. 30. E.

SCAGERAC, or CATEGAT, a gulf of the N. Sea, between N. Jutland, Norway, and the iſlands of Zealand and Funen.

Scaggleſthorp, Yorkſhire, E. of New Malton.

SCALA, a town of Principato Citra, and a town in the iſland of Cephalonia.

SCALANOVA, a town of Natolia, the NEAPOLIS of the Mileſians, with a harbour on the ſea coaſt, 49 miles SSE. of Smyrna.

Scalby, Lincolnſhire, near Glanford-Bridge. Scalby, Yorkſhire, W. of S. Cave. Scalby, Yorkſ. near Scarborough. Scalby-Caſtle, Cumberland, 5 miles N. of Carliſle. Scaldwell, Northamptonſ. W. of Walgrave. Scale or Scalle, Cornwall, near Senan and the Land's-End. Scale, near Hertford. Scale, Lancaſhire, in Amounderneſs. Scale, Lancaſ. S. of Ulverſton.

SCALEA, a town of Calabria Citra.

Scaleby, Cumberl. near Stanwix and Kirklinton. Scalford, Leiceſterſ. NW. of Waltham-on-the-Would.

SCALITZ, or SCALA, a town of Hungary, 32 miles WNW. of Topoltzan.

Scalmarlin-Rocks, in Down, Ulſter. They are ſituated in Donaghadee-Harbour, and, though ſo ſmooth and flat that veſſels ſeldom ſuffer on them, are rather dangerous, being overflowed by the tide.

Scalme-Park, Yorkſ. between Sherborn and Selby.

SCALP, a curious chaſm, or fiſſure, in a ridge of mountains, 5 miles from Dublin, on the road to the Dargle and Waterfall. It ſeems as if by an extraordinary convulſion in nature, the mountain had been cracked acroſs, and torn aſunder, prodigious heaps of ſtones, of enormous ſize, having tumbled down into the rocky chaſm. It forms one of the moſt ſtriking curioſities in Ireland. By breaking down and levelling the prominences of the prodigious piles of maſſive rocks in the bottom, an eaſy and good road has been inſinuated through the rugged fiſſure.

SCAMINA, a town of Livadia, 20 miles N. of Athens.

Scamelſby, Lincolnſ. N. of Horncaſtle. Scampton, 4 miles from Lincoln.

SCANDAROON. See ALEXANDRETTA.

SCANDINAVIA, an ancient general name for that traſt of Europe, which contains Sweden, Denmark, and Norway, with the ſeveral iſlands in the Baltic.

SCANIA. See SCHONEN.

Scar, in Wexford, Leinſter.

SCARA, a town of W. Gothland, formerly the reſidence of the kings of Gothland. It is ſeated S. of the lake Wenner, 66 miles NE. of Gottenburg.

SCARBOROUGH, an ancient, large, and well built town, in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſheltered from the N. and NE. winds by a high, ſteep rock, near which are huge, craggy cliffs, almoſt inacceſſible. On the top of this rock is a large green plain, of about 19 acres, with a little well of freſh water ſpringing out of the rock. A noble large caſtle was erected here by King Henry II. which is now moſtly in ruins. This place is greatly frequented on account of its ſpa well, the waters of which are a compound of vitriol, iron, alum, nitre, and ſalt, and are both purgative and diuretic, as alſo for ſea-bathing, on which account it is much improved of late years, in the number and beauty of its buildings. The ſpring was under the cliff, part of which fell down in December 1737, and the water was loſt; but, in clearing away the ruins to rebuild the wharf, it was recovered, to the great joy of the town. Here are aſſemblies and balls, in the ſame manner as at Tunbridge. Scarborough has a very convenient pier harbour, (reckoned the beſt, for veſſels in ſtreſs of weather to put into, between Newcaſtle and the Humber,) poſſeſſes a conſiderable ſhipping-trade, and ſupplies York, and other places, with cod, mackarel, turbot, pickled herrings, &c. It is romantically ſituated, in the form of a half moon partly ſurrounded by the ſea, 36 miles NE. by E. of York, and 237 N. of London. Markets on Thurſday and Saturday.

SCARBOROUGH, a town and fort of Tobago, taken from the French, by ſtorm, by the Engliſh general, Cuyler, April 15, 1793.

Scarcliff, Derbyſ. near Bolſover.

SCARDONA, a town of Dalmatia.

Scarefbrick, Lancaſhire, near Martos-Meer and the ſea. Scarle, North, Lincolnſ. SW. of Lincoln. Scarle, South, Nottinghamſ. in the pariſh of Newark-on-Trent.

SCARLINO, a town of Tuſcany.

Scarning, Norf. SW. of E. Dereham.

SCARO, a town of Santorin, in the Archipelago.

SCARPANTO, anciently CARPATHUS, an iſland of the Archipelago, and one of the Sporades, lying to the SW. of the Iſle of Rhodes. It is about 18 miles in length, and 6 in breadth. It abounds in cattle and game, and has mines of iron, quarries of marble, with ſeveral good harbours, and particularly one at its principal town on the W. coaſt. The inhabitants are moſtly Greeks.

SCARPE, a river of France, which riſes near Aubigny, in the dept. of Calais, waſhes Arras, Douay, and St. Amand, and runs into the Scheld at Mortagne, 7 miles SSE. of Tournay.

Scarrington, Nottinghamſ. between Normanton and Nottingham. Scarſdale, a rich, fruitful tract, in the NE. part of Derbyſhire, ſurrounded by barren rocks and mountains. Scarthingwell, Yorkſ. near Sherborn. Scartho, Lincolnſ. S. of Grimſby. Scaſcal, Cumberland, NW. of Ravenglaſs.

Scarva, in Down, Ulſter, on the Newry ſewry canal, 67 miles from Dublin. Scarwagh Paſs, in Down, Ulſter. Scarawalſh, in exford, Leinſter.

Scafworth, Nottinghamſ. by the Idle, . of Bawtree.

Scatrick, an iſland in Strangford Lake, D , Ulſter. Scattery, an iſland of Cerry, Munſter, in the Shannon.

Scauden, Northumberl. in the barony f Wark. Scawpwick, Lincolnſ. S. of Ieeton. Scawſby, Yorkſ. W. of Donſter. Scechefley, Leiceſ. by Hinckley. Scarborough, or Scorborough, Yorkſ. NE. Weighton.

SCHAFFHAUSEN, a town of Swiſſerand, capital of a canton of the ſame ame, ſituated on the N. ſhore of the hine, near a celebrated cataract. It as formerly an imperial town, governed y an ariſtocracy, but was admitted a ember of the Helvetic confederacy in 01; its territory formed, or lately did, e twelfth canton in rank. The inhaitants of this town are computed at 00; but the number of citizens or urgeſſes (in whom the ſupreme power timately reſides) is about 1600. From eſe are elected 85 members, who form e great and little council; the ſenate, r little council of 25, being intruſted ith the executive power, and the great ouncil (including the ſenate) finally deiding all appeals, and regulating the ore important concerns of government. he town is tolerably well built, and is uch noted for its wooden bridge over he Rhine. The river being extremely apid here, had already deſtroyed ſeveral one bridges of the ſtrongeſt conſtruction, when, in 1754, Ulric Grubenman, carpenter of Tuffen, in Appenzel, undertook to throw a wooden bridge of a ngle arch, over the river, which is near 00 feet wide. The magiſtrates, however, required that it ſhould conſiſt of wo arches, and that he ſhould, for that urpoſe, employ the middle pier of the ld bridge. He has done ſo; but has ontrived to leave it a matter of doubt, whether the bridge is ſupported by the niddle pier, or not. A man of the lighteſt weight feels it almoſt tremble nder him; yet waggons heavily laden aſs over it continually without danger. t is what the Germans call hangewerk, r hanging bridge; the ſides and top of t are covered; the road, which is almoſt evel, is not carried, as uſual, over the op of the arch, but (if the expreſſion may be uſed) is let into the middle of it, and there ſuſpended. The ingenious architect, however, was totally unacquainted with the theory of mechanics. Veſſels that go down the Rhine pay a toll here. The inhabitants are about 7000. Schaffhauſen is 22 miles N. by E. of Zurich. Lat. 47. 43. N. lon. 8. 41. E.

SCHAFFHAUSEN, the ſmalleſt canton of Swiſſerland, bounded on the N. and W. by Suabia; on the E. by part of Suabia, and the biſhopric of Conſtance; and on the S. by the Rhine. It is about 5 leagues in length, and 3 in breadth, and contains 17 pariſhes and 10 bailiwicks. The revenues of the ſtate are not very conſiderable, as will appear from the ſalary of the burgomaſter, or chief of the republic, which barely amounts to 150l. a year. The reformation was introduced here in 1529. The clergy are ſupported by the ſtate; but their income is barely ſufficient for their maintenance, the greateſt ſalary being only 100l. and the leaſt 40l. per annum. The profeſſors of literature alſo, who are taken from the clergy, are paid by government; and a ſchool is ſupported at the public expence. Sumptuary laws are in force here, as well as in moſt parts of Swiſſerland; and no dancing is allowed except upon particular occaſions. The paſtures are good, and they export wine; corn is moſtly procured from Suabia. The population of the canton, without including the town of Schaffhauſen, is eſtimated at 23,000.

SCHALHOLF, or SKAALHOLT, a town of Iceland, the ſee of a biſhop, (to which belong 163 churches) with a college, a cathedral, and a ſchool. Lat. 64. 40. N. lon. 22. 20. W.

SCHAMACHYA, a town of Perſia, capital of Shirvan. It was formerly very large, but is now decayed, above 6000 houſes having been thrown down by an earthquake. It has, however, very large manufactories of ſilks and cottons, and is ſeated on the W. ſide of the Caſpian Sea, 250 miles NNE. of Tauris. Lat. 40. 50. N. lon. 50. 4. E.

SCHANTZ STERNEY, a fortreſs in Carelia, ſeated on the river Neva, a little to the eaſtward of Peterſburgh.

SCHARDING, a town of Bavaria, ſeated on the river Inn, 7 miles S. of Paſſaw.

SCHARNITZ, a town in the Tyroleſe, ſituated on the confines of Bavaria, near a mountain paſs of conſiderable importance.

SCHAWENBURG, a territory of Weſtphalia, about 30 miles in length, and 10 in breadth; ſubject partly to the Landgrave of Heſſe, partly to the Duke of Brunſwick Lunenburg, and partly to the Count of Lippe.

SCHELD,

SCHELD, one of the moſt conſiderable rivers of the Netherlands, which riſes about 8 miles N. of St. Quintin, in the department of Aiſne, and paſſing by Cambray, Bouchain, Valenciennes, Condé, Tournay, Oudenarde, Ghent, Dendermond, and Antwerp, divides itſelf into two branches below Fort Lillo. One of theſe, called the Eaſtern-Scheld, flows by Bergen-op-Zoom; the other, the Weſtern-Scheld proceeds to Fluſhing, and both forming ſeveral iſlands, empty themſelves into the German Ocean.

SCHELLA, a town of Hungary, ſeated on the river Waag, (near a volcano, that burns continually) 25 miles NE. of Preſburgh.

SCHELLENBURG, a town of Berſchtodſgaden, in Bavaria, famous for the defeat of the French and Bavarians, in 1704, by the Engliſh and Imperialiſts, under the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Lewis of Baden. The former were very ſtrongly intrenched. It is 22 miles SSW. of Ingoldſtadt; alſo a town of Erzgeburg, in Upper Saxony, and a town in the duchy of Weſtphalia.

SCHELLING, an iſland of W. Frieſland, at the entrance of the Zuyder-Zee, between Vly Iſland and Ameland.

Schelly, Suſſex, NE. of Horſham.

SCHEMNITZ, a town of Hungary, one of the ſeven mountain towns, defended by three caſtles, and containing a college, and a royal mine office. In largeneſs, and number of mine-works, it ſurpaſſes all the other mine-towns in Hungary. The gold and ſilver mines here ſtill produce a conſiderable quantity of ore. The workmen are in number above 5000. The yearly charges to the crown, of the mine-works here, amount to above 500,000 guilders. It is 14 miles S. of Kremnitz, and 92 E. of Vienna.

SCHENING, a town in E. Gothland. The annual fair here, on the 29th of July, is reckoned one of the greateſt in the whole kingdom. It is ſeated in a fertile country, on the river Skena, 8 miles SSE. of Vaſtena, and 17 SW. of Linkoping.

SCHENCK, or SCHENKENSHANS, a ſtrong fortreſs of Guelderland, ſituated in an angle of the Betuwe, (where the Rhine divides itſelf into two branches, called the Wahal and the Rhine, two miles and a half N. of Cleves. It completely commands the two ſtreams, and is conſidered as the centre of communication between Germany and Holland.

SCHENECTADY, a town of New York, ſituated in a fertile ſoil, on the Mohawk's river, 18 miles NW. of Albany.

SCHENINGEN, a town of Wolfenbottle, large and opulent, but now very much declined.

SCHER, a town of Suabia.

SCHERDING, a town of Upper Bavaria, ſituated on the Inn, 6 miles S. of Paſſaw.

SCHESBURG, a town of Tranſilvania, 47 miles ESE. of Coloſvar.

SCHEVE, a town of N. Jutland.

SCHEVELING, a village of Holland, agreeably ſituated, about one league NW. from the Hague.

SCHIEDAM, a town of S. Holland, ſeated on the canal called the Schie, which communicates with the Maeſe, a little below the town, 4 miles W. of Rotterdam.

Schilceſter, or St. Oſwald's, in the Pict's Wall, near Caſtle-Steeds, above the conflux of the N. and S. Tyne. Schillington, Northumberland, in the manor of Heppal.

SCHILTACH, a town of Wurtemburg.

SCHINZNACH, a town of Bern, celebrated for its tepid mineral waters.

SCHIRAS, a large and conſiderable city of Perſia, capital of Fariſiſtan, extending about three miles in length from E. to W. but not ſo much in breadth. The houſes are built of bricks dried in the ſun, and the roofs are flat and terraced. It contains 15 handſome moſques, tiled with ſtones of a bluiſh green colour, and lined within with black poliſhed marble. Here are alſo about 20 delightful public gardens, with trees, the largeſt of the kind, perhaps, in the world; and fruits almoſt of every kind, beſide various beautiful flowers; but there are not many grand bazars, nor fine baths. Moſt of the buildings, indeed, are in ruins, and the ſtreets are narrow and dirty. The country about Schiras is ſurpriſingly fertile, producing the fineſt horſes, the beſt paſtures, and ſheep, whoſe tails weigh 18 or 20 pounds each. The wines of Schiras are reckoned the beſt throughout the Eaſt. It is about 190 miles S. of Iſpahan.

SCHIRVAN, part of the ancient ALBANIA, a province of Perſia, bounded on the N. by Dageſtan, on the E. and SE. by the Caſpian Sea, on the SW. by Erivan, and on the W. by Georgia. It extends about 50 leagues in length, and 30 in breadth, and has a very fertile ſoil, producing great quantities of rice, wheat, and barley. Here are alſo vaſt quantities of pheaſants and other wild fowls, with abundance of hares and foxes that run in herds, in the night time, about the villages, making a doleful noiſe. The inhabitants abitants uſe buffaloes (which they feed ith fenugreek) inſtead of horſes, and ake them draw in the ſame manner. amachie is the capital.

SCHLESTADT, a town in the dept. Lower Rhine, ſeated on the river Ill, 3 miles SSW. of Straſburg.

SCHLEUSSINGEN, a town of Henninn, in Franconia, ſeated on the river hleus.

SCHMIEDEBERG, a town of Jauer, in leſia; a town of Meiſſen, in Upper xony.

Scholeſmore, Yorkſ. SW. of Bradford.

SCHOMBERG, a town of Treves; a wn of Olmutz, in Moravia; and a town Schweidnitz, in Sileſia.

SCHONECK, a town of Vogtland, in per Saxony.

SCHONEN, SCANIA, or SKONE, a proce of Sweden, on the Sound, S. of land and Smaland, and W. of Blekin- and the Baltic. It is about 65 miles ength, and 48 in breadth, and is a very el, fertile, and pleaſant country, conaing more fine ſeats and well-built ns than any other province in the gdom; and, indeed, from its many adntages, it may be called the ſtorehouſe l granary of Sweden. Lunden is the ital.

SCHONGAW, a town of Upper Bava, ſeated on the Lech, 90 miles W. of tzburg.

SCHOONHOVEN, a town in S. Hold, with a very commodious haven, ated on the river Lech, in which there an excellent ſalmon-fiſhery, 10 miles . of Dort.

SCHORNDORF, a town of Wurtemrg, noted for its ſalt-ſprings. It is 16 les E. of Stutgard.

SCHOUTEN, an iſland in the Eaſtern dian Sea, about 120 miles in circumence, diſcovered by William Schouten, Dutchman, in 1616. Lat. 0. 50. S. n. 135. 25. E.

SCHOWEN, an iſland in Zealand, lyg between the Iſlands of Goree and Beland; it is about 15 miles in length, d 6 in breadth. Ziriczee is the capil.

SCHUT, a large iſland of Hungary, a ttle below Preſburg, in the river Danbe, about 80 miles in length, and 10 its mean breadth. There is another land of the ſame name, ſeparated from e above by a branch of the Danube, bout 20 miles in length, and 5 in readth.

SCHWABACH, a town of Anſpach, in ranconia.

SCHWARTZEMBURG, a lordſhip of Franconia; a town of Erzgeburg, in Upper Saxony; and a town and bailiwick of Berne, in Swiſſerland.

SCHWARTZ, a town in the Tyrol, famous for its mines of different metals; it is ſeated on the river Inn, 14 miles ENE. of Inſpruc.

SCHWARTZBURG, a town in Thuringia, giving name to a principality which is divided between the two principal branches of Schwartzburg Sonderſhauſen and Schwartzburg Rudolſtadt. It is ſeated on the river Schwart, 22 miles SE. of Erfurt.

SCHWARTZENBURG, a town and bailiwick of Berne, and a town and lordſhip of Franconia.

SCHWEIDNITZ, a city of Sileſia, capital of a province of the ſame name, (S. of the principalities of Lignitz and Breſlaw) in which are 14 towns, with flouriſhing linen and woollen manufactures. It is the handſomeſt town of Sileſia, next to Breſlaw. The ſtreets are large, the church elegant, and the houſes well built. The royal palace here has been turned into a convent. All the magiſtrates are Romaniſts, but moſt of the inhabitants are Proteſtants, who have a church without the town, as alſo a public ſchool. It is ſituated on the river Weiſtritz, 22 miles SW. of Breſlaw.

SCHWEINFURT, or SUIRFORD, an imperial town of Franconia, with a palace, where the ſenators meet, who are twelve in number. The environs abound in cattle, corn, and excellent wine, and the inhabitants, who are Proteſtants, carry on a large trade in linen and woollen cloth, gooſe-quills, and feathers. It is ſeated on the river Maine, over which it has a ſtone bridge, 25 miles NNW. of Bamberg.

SCHWEITZ, a canton of Swiſſerland, bounded on the N. by the canton of Zurich; on the E. by the bailiwick of Gaſter, and the canton of Glarus; on the S. by the canton of Uri; and on the W. by the cantons of Lucerne, Zug, and Zurich. This canton, with that of Uri and Underwalden, threw off the yoke of Auſtria, January 13, 1308. In 1315, having given the Auſtrians a total overthrow at Morgarten, they formed a perpetual alliance, which was the grand foundation of the Helvetic confederacy. The name of Schwetzerland, Switzerland, or Swiſſerland, which originally comprehended only the three cantons mentioned above, was afterward extended to all Helvetia. The governments of Schweits and Uri contain, including including their territories, purchaſed and acquired, about 50,000 inhabitants, hardy, warlike, and diſtinguiſhed for the purity of their morals. The ſame kind of ſoil, and the ſame productions, are common to the two cantons. The country in general is rugged and mountainous, yet interſected with fertile valleys; it conſiſts chiefly of paſture, raiſes little corn, and has no wine: but this ſoil, naturally barrén, has been improved by the natives to an aſtoniſhing degree of fertility. The government is democratic, every male 16 years old having a vote in the landesgemeine; but the ordinary regency conſiſts of 60 counſellors, with a landgamman as preſident, viz. ten from each of the ſix quarters into which this country is divided. Out of this council the principal officers are elected. The Romiſh religion is here excluſively eſtabliſhed.

SCHWEITZ, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of the canton of the ſame name, containing one large magnificent church, and three convents. It is ſeated in a fertile country, on the ſlope of a hill, near the Waldſtætter lake, 10 miles ESE. of Lucerne.

SCHWELM, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia, ſituated on a rivulet of the ſame name, near ſome medicinal ſprings, 22 miles NE. of Cologne.

SCHWERIN, a city of Lower Saxony, capital of the duchy of Mecklenburgh Schwerin, the uſual reſidence of the dukes of the Schwerin line. It is divided into four parts; namely, Schwerin, the New Town, the Iſland of Schelf, and the Moor. The cathedral is a fine Gothic pile, with a lofty ſpire. The ducal palace and gardens are pleaſantly ſituated on an iſland in the lake, and have a communication with the town by a draw bridge. It is ſituated on a pleaſant lake of the ſame name, abounding in fiſh, and which almoſt ſurrounds the town, 34 miles ESE. of Lubeck.

SCHWINBURG, a town of Denmark, on the SE. coaſt of Funen.

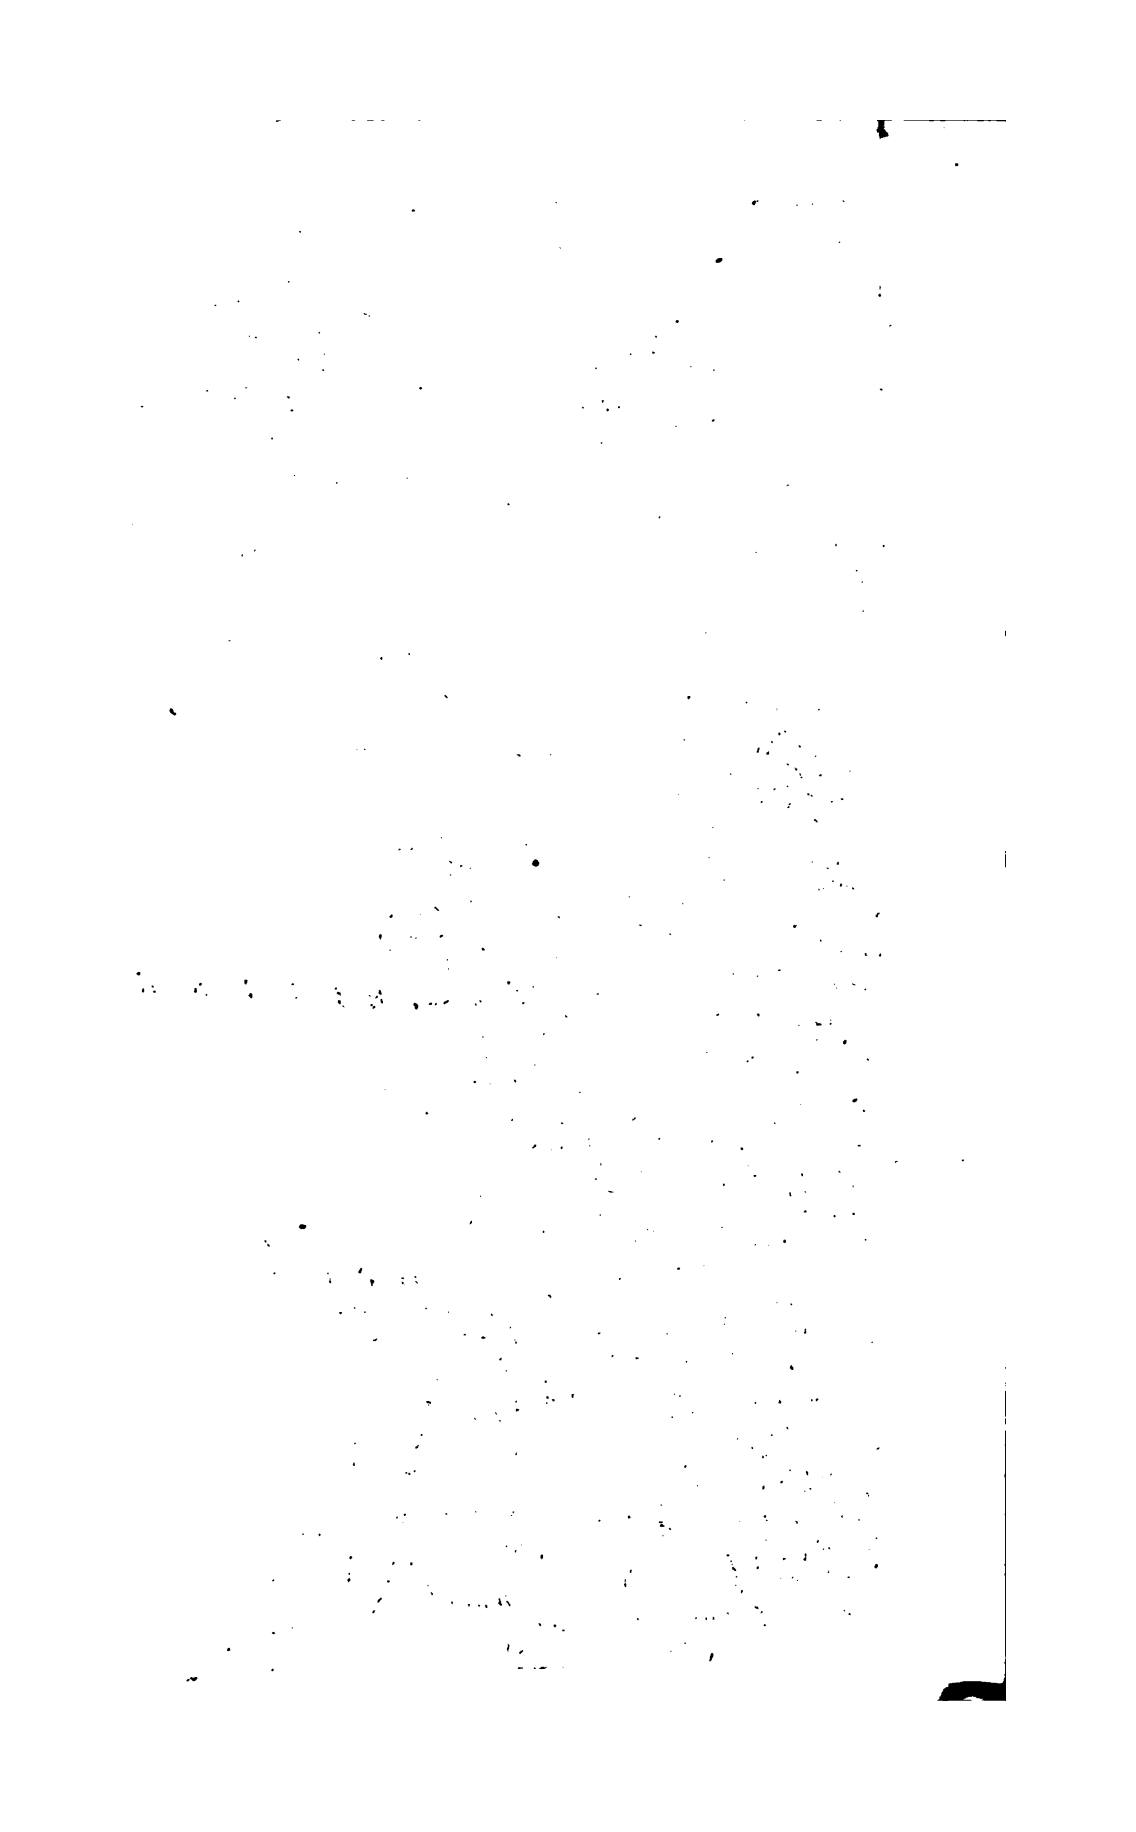
SCIATI, a ſmall iſland of the Archipelago, about 18 miles N. of Negropont.

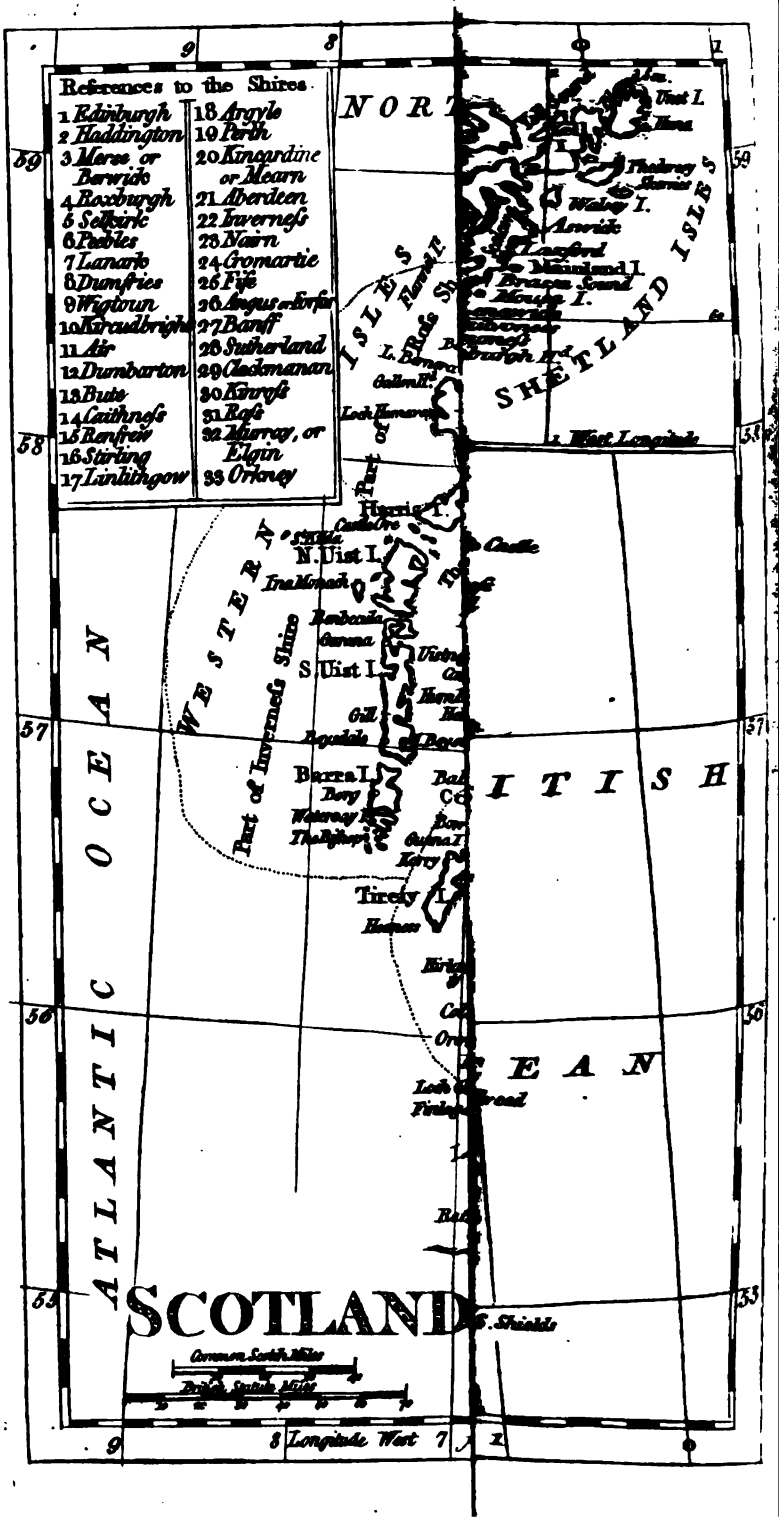
Scilly, in Cork, Munſter, near Kinſale. The inhabitants are the deſcendants of an Engliſh colony, who firſt ſettled here after the defeat of the Spaniards, in the reign of Elizabeth. They have ſeveral fiſhing-veſſels, and annually take great quantities of fiſh, which they cure for foreign markets and home conſumption. As they ſeldom marry out of the village, they are generally related to each other.

SCILLY, a cluſter of iſlands and rocks, which lie almoſt 10 leagues to the W. of the Land's-End, in Cornwall, and are eaſily diſcerned from it. Of theſe, only five or ſix are inhabited. They are ſuppoſed formerly to have produced much tin, but are now chiefly known as a reſort of ſea-fowl, and a place of ſhelter for ſhips in bad weather. They are ſaid to be 145 in number. The inhabitants principally ſubſiſt by fiſhing, burning kelp, and acting as pilots. They have wild-fowl of all ſorts, and tame fowl, puffins, and rabbits in great number. The chief of the iſlands is St. Mary's, which is near 10 miles in circumference, and has a good port. This iſland, which is the largeſt and beſt cultivated, contains more and richer inhabitants than all the reſt put together. It is defended by a caſtle built by Queen Elizabeth, and ſeveral ſtrong batteries, one of which towards the ſea, is mounted with 64 pieces of cannon, ſome of them 18 pounders. Here is alſo a guard-houſe, barracks, a ſtore-houſe, with a company of ſoldiers, a maſter-gunner, and ſix other gunners. In Sampſon Iſland, which is the ſmalleſt, only one family lives, which goes to the place of worſhip in the other iſlands, the only communication being by a boat. In St. Mary's, and in two or three other of the largeſt iſlands, are various antiquities, particularly the remains of a temple of the Druids, and ancient ſepulchres; but the greateſt ornament of this iſland is the light houſe, 51 feet high, the gallery of which is four. The laſh-lights are 11 feet 6 inches high, and 3 feet 2 inches broad. It ſtands on high land, and is a very fine column. The Scilly rocks have been deſtructive to numbers of ſhips entering the Channel. One of the moſt diſaſtrous events of this kind happened October 22d, 1707, when three men of war, under Sir Cloudeſley Shovel, were loſt, with all their crews. Lat. 49. 56. N. lon. 6. 41. W.

SCILLY, a group of iſlands or iſlets in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Wallis, in 1767, and deſcribed as extremely dangerous. Lat. 16. 28. S. lon. 155. 30. W.

SCIO, or CHIOS, one of the moſt beautiful and pleaſant iſlands of the Archipelago, near the coaſt of Natolia, to the S. of Merelin, and to the NE. of Samos. It is about 32 miles in length, and 15 in breadth; a mountainous country, yet pleaſant, there being fruits of various kinds growing in the fields, ſuch as oranges, citrons, olives, mulberries, and pomegranates. Large quantities of pleaſant wines are produced here.





References to the Shires
1 Edinburgh
2 Haddington
3 Merse or Berwick
4 Roxburgh
5 Selkirk
6 Peebles
7 Lanark
8 Dumfries
9 Wigtoun
10 Kircudbright
11 Air
12 Dumbarton
13 Bute
14 Caithness
15 Renfrew
16 Stirling
17 Linlithgow
18 Argyle
19 Perth
20 Kincardine or Mearn
21 Aberdeen
22 Inverness
23 Nairn
24 Cromartie
25 Fife
26 Angus or Forfar
27 Banff
28 Sutherland
29 Clackmanan
30 Kinross
31 Ross
32 Murray, or Elgin
33 Orkney
NORT
ISLES
SHETLAND ISLES
Part of Ross Sh.
Part of Inverness Shire WESTERN Harris I.
N. Uist I.
S. Uist I.
Barra I.
Tiresy I.
ITISH
EAN
ATLANTIC OCEAN SCOTLAND
Common Scotch Miles
British Statute Miles
Longitude West
West Longitude

re, which they export to the neighbour-g iſlands; but their principal trade is in k manufactured into velvet, damaſk, d other ſtuffs, deſigned for Aſia, Egypt,
d Barbary. They have alſo ſome com-erce in wool, cheeſe, figs, maſtick, turntine, honey, and wax. The women e accounted more polite than in other rts of the Levant; their dreſs is odd, t very neat. The partridges are tame, ing ſent every day into the fields, and the evening they are called back with whiſtle. The town of Scio is large, aſant, and well built, the houſes being autiful and commodious; ſome of em are terraced, and others covered th tiles. The ſtreets are paved with rge ſtones. The Venetians, while they d this iſland in their poſſeſſion, made a eat many alterations for the better.
he caſtle is an old citadel, built by the noeſe. The harbour of Scio is the ndezvous of all ſhipping, that go to or me from Conſtantinople, and will hold leet of fourſcore veſſels. They reckon ly 10,000 Turks, and 3000 Latins, but 0,000 Greeks, on this iſland. Scio is a ſhop's ſee, and is ſeated on the ſea ſide, miles SSW. of Smyrna.

Sciredun, Devonſhire, on the Dart, beween Dartmore and Aſhburton.

SCIROS, an iſland of the Archipelago, the W. of Metelin, about 15 miles in ngth, and 8 in breadth. It is a mouninous country, but has no mines, and ntains about 300 families. Their cheeſe, hich is made of the milk of goats and eep mixed together, and the wine, are xcellent. They alſo collect large quanities of wax, and ſome maſtic. There is ut one town on the iſland, which is of the me name, and is built on a rock, which ns up like a ſugar-loaf, about 10 miles om the harbour of St. George, in lat.
. 54. N. The inhabitants are Greeks,
e cadi being the only Turk among them.

SCITUATE, a town of Maſſachuſetts, the S. coaſt, and a town of Conneccut.

SCLAVONIA, a country of Europe, ſiated S. of Hungary, and between the vers Drave and Danube on the N. and ve on the S. It is divided into ſix unties, and is ſubject to the houſe of uſtria. It was formerly a kingdom, nd extends about 150 miles in length, nd from 25 to 45 in breadth, from the ontiers of Croatia to Belgrade. It is a ne, level, fruitful country, where culti-ated, and the natives, in general, are a rave, hardy race, ſoldiers from their cra-le. The eaſtern part, which is called Ratzia, and the inhabitants Ratzians, form a particular nation, and are of the Greek church. The language of Sclavo-nia is the mother of four others, namely, thoſe of Hungary, Bohemia, Poland, and Ruſſia.

Scoggerbar, Cumberl. in Bootle pa-riſh, near the ſea. Scole, Norfolk. Scoles, Yorkſ. SW. of Halifax.

Scone, or Scoone, a village of Perthſhire, ſeated on the E. ſide of the river Tay, N.
by W. of Perth. Here is the ancient royal palace of Scone, in which the kings of Scotland were crowned, in the celebrated ſtone chair, which is now in Weſtminſter Abbey.

SCOONIE, a town of Fifeſhire, 10 miles
SW. of St. Andrew's, and 17 NNE. of Edinburgh.

SCOPIA, or USCUP, a town of Turkiſh Servia, ſituated on the river Vardar, on the confines of Boſnia.

SCOPOLO, an iſland of the Archipelago, at the entrance of the Gulf of Salo-nichi. It is about 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth, is very fertile, produces plenty of good wine, and contains 12,000 inhabitants, who are almoſt all Greeks.

Scornſton, Norf. S. of Worſted. Scor-ton, Yorkſ. NE. of Catterick. Scoſton, Nottingh. on the Ryton, NE. of Worklop.
Scotby, Cumb. adjoining Kirkbride, near Carliſle. Scotfield, Bedfordſ. NW. of Baldock, Scotfield, Staffordſ. NE. of Tam-worth. Scotford, S. of Lancaſter. Scotgrove, Kent, by Aſh. Scothorn, NE. of Lincoln. Scotnorp, Yorkſ. SE. of Settle.

SCOTLAND, or NORTH-BRITAIN, the moſt northern of the two kingdoms into which the iſland of Great Britain was formerly divided. It is bounded on all ſides by the ſea, except towards the S. and SE. where it is joined to England. The iſlands, alſo, on its weſtern coaſt, called the Hebrides, or Weſtern Iſlands, and thoſe to the NE. called the Orkney and Shetland-Iſlands, appertain to Scotland.
From N. to S. Scotland extends about 270 miles, and from E. to W. in ſome parts 150 miles, but in others only 30.
Excluſively of the iſlands, Scotland ſeems to be naturally divided into three large diſtricts. The North diviſion is formed by a chain of lakes, which croſs the country from the Frith of Murray, to the iſland of Mull. The Middle diviſion is bounded on the S. by the Friths of Forth and Clyde, and the great canal by which they are united; and, on the S. ſide of this boundary is the South diviſion. The Northern diviſion is chiefly an aſſemblage of vaſt dreary mountains; not, however, without

without some fertile valleys on the northern and eastern shores. The Middle division is traversed, in different directions, by many great ranges of mountains; and though cultivation here is also found, especially on the eastern shore, yet of this division, as well as of the former, it may be observed, that the arable land bears but a small proportion to the mountainous and barren tracts. However, the eastern coast of the Middle division, and the whole of the Southern, has a great resemblance to England, and with respect both to the general aspect of the country, and to the progress of cultivation, exhibits every kind of rural variety. The rivers of Scotland, are, in general, remarkable for their rapidity, and yield abundance of salmon, trout, and other excellent fish; the principal are the Spey, Don, Tay, Tweed, Clyde, Forth, the Northern Dee, the Esk, Annan, Nith, and Southern Dee; and the lochs, or lakes, are numerous and extensive. The climate is very various, in different places. The northern extremity, which is in the same latitude with some parts of Norway, is extremely cold; but the frosts are far from being so intense here as in parts of the continent equally as far to the north. For this advantage, Scotland is indebted to an insular situation. Its west coast is subject to frequent rains in the summer, and to sudden changes of weather. In many places on the eastern shore, and in the whole South division, the climate is not inferior to the north part of England; and, in general, the air of Scotland is very healthy. The products of the country are grain, flax, woods of oak and fir, coal, lead, iron, free-stone, lime-stone, slate, the most beautiful marble, fine rock-crystals, pearls, variegated pebbles, kelp, &c. It feeds vast heards of cattle and flocks of sheep; they are both small, but much valued for the delicacy of their flesh; and the fleece of the latter emulates the finest Spanish wool. It is in the high grounds that the cattle are so diminutive; for, in many parts of the country, the horses and cows are not excelled in size and beauty by those of the English breed. Among the wild animals are the roe, stag, fox, badger, otter, hedge-hog, rabbit, weasel, mole, and other small quadrupeds. Among the feathered race, are the capercailzie, or cock of the wood, the eagle, falcon, partridge, quail, snipe, plover, black-game, and grouse, &c. The fisheries in the surrounding seas are of great national importance, and will become a real source of wealth to the nation, when increasing commerce shall enable the inhabitants to form roads, erect villages, and open canals, in the remote parts of the country. The trade and population of most of the great towns have considerably increased of late years. The western shores, however, are annually drained of their inhabitants by the emigration of individuals. Scotland was an independent kingdom till James VI. was called to the throne of England; and in the reign of Queen Anne, one of his successors, both kingdoms were united under the name of Great Britain. Sixteen peers are elected to represent the nobility, and 45 commoners to represent the counties and boroughs in the same parliament with that of England. There are five universities in Scotland, viz. St. Andrews, Glasgow, Edinburgh, New Aberdeen, and Old Aberdeen. Scotland is divided into 33 counties, namely, Shetland and Orkney, Bute, Caithness, Sutherland, Ross, Cromarty, Nairne, Inverness, Murray, Banff, Aberdeen, Kincardine, Angus, Perth, Fife, Kinross, Clackmannan, Stirling, Dumbarton, Argyle, Renfrew, Ayr, Wigton, Kirkcudbright, Dumfries, Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, Lanerk, Linlithgow, Edinburgh, Haddington, and Berwick. The established religion is the Presbyterian, and the capital is Edinburgh.

Scotland, Dorsets. a mile N. of Corfe Castle. Scotland-Green, Middlesex, E. of Ponder's End. Scotney, Kent, near Lyd. Scotney, Kent, near Lamberhurst. Scots, Suffolk, near Aldborough. Scot's-Hall, Kent, near Canterbury.

Scot's-House, in Cavan, Ulster.

Scotsland, Surry, near Godalmin.

Scotstown, in Monaghan, Ulster.

Scotswood, Northumberland, 2 miles from Newcastle. Scotter, Lincolnshire, 7 miles NNE. of Gainsborough. Scotto, Norfolk, SW. of Wursted. Scotton, Yorkshire, near Knaresborough. Scowden, Dorsets. in Purbeck Isle.

Scraba, a fruitful hill, in Down, Ulster, plowed nearly to its summit. Scraby, in Cavan, Ulster.

Scrafield, Lincolnshire, E. of Horncastle. Scraptoft, near Leicester. Scrayton, West, Yorks. W. of Midlam. Scrateage, Middlesex, by Osterley-House. Scranton, Yorks. NE. of Bedall.

Screen, in Meath, Leinster.

Screven, Yorks. near Knaresborough.

Screveton, Nottinghams. near Sibthorp.

Scrivelsby-Hall, Linc. by the river Witham, near Horncastle. This manor is held by grand serjeantry, viz. to attend on the coronation days, on a good war-ar-horſe, in preſence of the ſovereign, challenge any one that diſputes the ght to the crown. Scroby, Nottingh. Bautree, in the road from London to ork. Scropton, SW. of Derby, by the love.

Scrotaglisy, in Kerry, Munſter.

Scrotby, Norfolk, S. of Winterton-eſs. Sculcoates, Yorkſhire, a ſuburb Hull. Sculpius, Eſſex, in Finching-ld.

SCUDENES, an iſland of Norway, about miles in circumference, 18 miles NW. Stavanger.

SCURGULO, a town of Capitanata.

SCURRIZANO, a town of Capitanata.

SCUTARI, a town of Turkey in Eu-pe, capital of Upper Albania, the re-ence of a beglerbeg, a Greek arch-ſhop, and a Latin biſhop, and an-ently the reſidence of the kings of Il-ricum. It is ſeated on a lake to which gives name, 54 miles SE. of Raguſa.

SCUTARI, a large and handſome town Turkey in Aſia, in Natolia, with a ell-frequented harbour. It is ſeated on e E. ſide of Conſtantinople, of which is looked upon as a ſuburb, being di-ctly over againſt it. It contains the rand Signor's ſeraglio, and a very ndſome moſque, and is built on the le of a hill.

SCYLLA, a rock, near the Faro of eſſina, on the coaſt of Calabria, oppo-e the celebrated Charybdis; which, ough the terror of ancient mariners, d the theme of poets, on account of great whirlpool, is now, comparatively eaking, no longer formidable. This ck is about a mile from the entrance of e Faro, and forms a ſmall promontory, hich runs a little out to ſea, and meets e whole force of the waters as they me out of the narroweſt parts of the raits. The head of this promontory the famous Scylla. "It muſt be owned," ys Mr. Brydone, "that it does not together come up to the formidable de-ription that Homer gives of it; the ading of which (like that of Shake-eare's Cliff) almoſt makes one's head ddy. Neither is the paſſage ſo won-rous narrow and difficult as he makes it. deed, it is probable, that the breadth it is greatly increaſed ſince his time, the violent impetuoſity of the current; nd this violence too muſt always have iminiſhed, in proportion as the breadth the channel increaſed. Our pilot ſays, ere are many ſmall rocks that ſhow eir heads near the baſe of the large es. Theſe are probably the dogs that are deſcribed as howling round the mon-ſter Scylla. There are likewiſe many ca-verns that add greatly to the noiſe of the water, and tend ſtill to increaſe the hor-ror of the ſcene. The rock is near 200 feet high. There is a kind of caſtle, or fort on its ſummit; and the town of Scylla, or Sciglio, containing 3 or 400 inhabitants, ſtands on its S. ſide, and gives the title of prince to a Calabreſe family.

Seaborough, Somerſetſ. S. of Crew-kern. Seabrabam, or Sebergham, Highbound and Lowbound, Cumberland, near Wigton. Seachurch, Eſſex, near Canvey-Iſle. Seacroft, Yorkſ. NE. of Leeds.

SEAFORD, a ſmall ſea-port, or fiſhing town in Suſſex, built moſtly of Stone and ſlate. It is one of the Cinque Ports, and is 8 miles SSE. of Lewes, and 59 S. by E. of London. Market diſuſed.

Seaford, in Down, Ulſter.

Seal, Derbyſhire, near Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Seal, Devonſ. E. of Okehamp-ton. Seal, Kent, 2 miles N. of Seven-oaks. Seal, Surry, E. of Farnham. Seal, Suſſex, near Stening. Seales, Wiltſhire, near Mere. Seamelly, Lincolnſ. NE. of Hornaſtle. Seamer, a river in York-ſhire. Seamer, Yorkſ. NW. of Stokeſ-ley. Seamer, Yorkſ. SW. of Scarbo-rough. Seamer-Hall, and Beacon, Yorkſ. N. of Scarborough.

Seapatrick, in Down, Ulſter

Sea-Salter, Kent, near the ſea, 4 miles NE. of Feverſham. Seaſcales, Cumb. in Gosforth pariſh. Seaſey, Yorkſ. SE. of Thirſk. Seaſun, Staffordſ. W. of Wol-verhampton. Seatborn, Yorkſhire, in Holderneſs. Seatmorthow, or Seckmurthy, Cumb. in the pariſh of Cockermouth.

SEATON, or PORT-SEATON, a ſea-port of Haddingtonſhire. Here is a ruinous palace in which Mary Queen of Scots reſided after her return from France. In the chapel are ſeveral curious marble monuments. It has a conſider-able trade in ſalt and coal, and is ſitu-ated on the Frith of Forth, 9 miles E. of Edinburgh.

Seaton, a river in Cornwall, which riſes about 4 miles NE. of Leſkeard, and after a courſe of near 12 miles, runs into the Engliſh Channel, 3 miles E. of Loo. The town of the ſame name, at its mouth, has, according to tradition, been ſwallowed up in the encroachments of the ſea. Seaton, Cumberland, near the ſea, S. of Ravenglaſs. Seaton, Cumb. in Bootle pariſh, Seaton, Cumb. near Workington. Here are very extenſive iron-works on the Derwent, and near it there is a conſiderable ſalmon fiſhery.

Seaton,

Seaton, Durham, in Seham parish. Seaton, Northumberland, by the sea, E. of Alnwick. Seaton, Northumb, between Morpeth and the sea. Seaton, Yorkl. NW. of Holm, in Spalding-Moor. Seaton, Yorks. in Holderness, near Hornsey-Meer. Seaton Carey, Durham, by the sea. S. of Hartlepool. Seaton Delaval, Northumb. by the sea, N. of Tinmouth. Seavensdale or Shewesfield Castle, Northumberl. on the Picts-Wall, near Busy-Gap. Seawell, Staffordf. NE. of Wolverhampton.

SEBASTIA, a town of Palestine, the remains of the ancient city of Jamaira. It is 34 miles NNE. of Jerusalem.

SEBASTIAN, St. a town of Guipuscoa, in Spain, with a good and well-frequented harbour, secured by two moles, on which redoubts are planted, and within which only one ship can pass at a time. The streets are long, broad, and straight, and paved with white flag-stones. The houses are handsome, the churches neat, and the environs pleasant. It carries on a great trade, and is very populous, as several families are obliged to live in the same house. Their greatest trade consists in iron and steel, which some affirm to be the best in Europe; they also deal in wool, which comes from Old Castile. On August 3d, 1794, this place was invested by the republican troops, and capitulated on the following day. The garrison, consisting of 2000 men, surrendered prisoners of war: 180 pieces of brass cannon were taken, with considerable magazines and stores. It is situated at the mouth of the Gurumea, with a delightful prospect of the sea on one side, and a distant view of the Pyrenean mountains on the other, 50 miles NNE. of Bilboa.

SEBASTIAN, ST. or RIO-DE-JANEIRO, a large, well built, and populous city and sea-port of Brasil, in S. America, capital of the province of Rio Janeiro, and of late years, and at present, of all Brasil. The city is well-designed, and about 8 miles in circuit. The houses in general are of stone, two stories high; every house having, after the manner of the Portuguese, a little balcony before its windows, and a lattice of wood before the balcony. The streets are straight and of a convenient breadth, intersecting each other at right angles. It stands, however, upon low ground, which was formerly swampy, and surrounded by hills of vast height, which exclude the benefit of the refreshing sea and land breezes; so that it is, of course, suffocatingly hot, and unhealthy, in the summer. The different mechanics carry on their business in distinct parts of the town; particular streets being set apart for particular trades. On th S. side of a spacious square is the palace of the viceroy. There are no manufactures here, but much gold is brought from the mines, and plenty of diamonds, topazes, and amethysts. Forty thousand negroes are annually imported, to work in the mines, on the king's account. This port is a very good place for ships to put into, that want refreshment; all sorts of provisions, except wheaten bread and flour, may be easily procured; as substitute for bread, there are yams and cassava in plenty. The country round the town is beautiful in the highest degree, the wildest sports being varied with a greater luxuriance of flowers, both in number and beauty, than the best gardens in England. Upon the trees and bushes sit an almost endless variety of birds, especially small ones, many of them covered with the most elegant plumage; there is a great variety of insects, some of them very beautiful, and much more nimble than those of Europe and the gardens produce melons, oranges, lemons, citrons, plantains, bananas, apples, cocoa-nuts, the prickly pear, yam, cassava, and some European fruits. Lat. 22. 50. S. lon. 42. 48. W. Also a town in the island of Tercera, situated between mountains, about half a mile from the sea; and a town of Carthagena and Peruyan, both in S. America; a town of Algarva, in Portugal; and a town in the dept. of Lower Loire, 8 miles SE. of Nantes.

SEBENICO, a sea-port of Dalmatia, capital of a county of the same name, with a bishop's see, defended by four citadels and a castle. It is seated near the mouth of the river Cherca, in the Adriatic, 25 miles NW. of Spalatro.

SEBU, a river of Africa, which passes by the city of Fez, and runs into the Atlantic a little below Marmora SEBURG, a town in the dept. of the North, 12 miles S. of Conde.

SECHURA, a town of Truxillo, in S. America, situated on a river of the same name, about a league from the Pacific Ocean, and 10 leagues SSE. of Paita.

SECHY, or SEECHING, a town in Norfolk, seated on a small navigable river near which there are rich pastures for cattle, 4 miles S. of King's Lynn, and 93 NNE. of London. A considerable market on Tuesday, and one once a fortnight for the sale of fat bullocks.

SECKAW

SECKAW, two towns of Stiria.

SECKENHEIM, or SOBERNHEIM, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine.

SECKINGEN, a town of Auſtrian Suabia. It is one of the foreſt towns, and has a large ſquare, and an ancient and noble foundation for ladies. It is ſeated on the Rhine, by which it is ſurrounded, 14 miles E. of Baſle.

SECLIN, a town in the department of the North, 5 miles. S. of Liſle.

Seckington, Warwickſhire, near Tamworth. Seckington, Leiceſterſhire, near Higham. Secomb, Cheſhire, SW. of Liverpool Haven.

SECONDIGNY, a town in the dept. of the Two Sevres.

SEDAN, a conſiderable town in the department of the Ardennes, with a ſtrong caſtle, a well-furniſhed arſenal, a foundry of cannon, and a manufacture of black cloths of a ſuperior quality. The celebrated Marſhal Turenne was born in the caſtle. It is ſeated on the river Maeſe, 18 miles SE. of Rocroy, and 35 NNE. of Paris.

Sedbergh, Yorkſ. on the river Rother, W. of Kirby Lonſdale. Sedbury-Park, Yorkſ. near Richmond. Sedcop, Kent, 5 miles beyond Eltham, near Chiſelhurſt. Sedeſtern, Norfolk, SW. of Walſingham. Sedgbarrow, Worceſterſ. S. of Eveſham. Sedgbrook, Lincolnſ. N. of Grantham. Sedghill, Wiltſhire, between Wardour-Caſtle and Gillingham-Foreſt.

SEDGFIELD, with a rectory valued at from 7 to 800l. a year. It is ſituated at ſome diſtance from the Tees, E. of Biſhop-Auckland.

Sedgford, Norf. by Snetſham. Sedgley, Staffordſ. near Dudley, S. of Wolverhampton. Here is a conſiderable manufacture of coarſe iron-work, ploughſhares, horſe-ſhoes, bolts and hinges for doors, bars for windows, buckles, nails, &c. employing not leſs than 2000 men and boys. In this pariſh is a fat ſhining coal, which burns with a ſilent bright flame into white aſhes; ſome prefer it before Cannel-coal. Sedgmoor, Somerſ. a tract N. of the Parret, between King's-Weſton and Bridgewater, is memorable for the defeat of the Duke of Monmouth and his party, in 1685, by the forces of King James II. The duke was taken near Ringwood in Hants, as he lay hid in a ditch, covered with fern. Sedgwick-Park, Suſſex, 3 miles SE. of Horſham. Sedleſcomb Suſſex, 3 miles from Battel. Seegrave, Wilts, near Chippenham. Seen, Wilts near Devizes.

SEER, a ſea-port and principality of Oman, in Arabia, on the Perſian Gulf.

SEEZ a town in the department of Orne, late the ſee of a biſhop. It is 12 miles N. of Alençon, and 102 W. by S. of Paris.

Segary, Wiltſhire, on the Avon, SE. of Malmſbury.

SEGEBORG, a town of Holſtein.

SEGELSBURG, a town of Bremen.

SEGESTAN, a province of Perſia, anciently Drangiana, bounded by Koraſan on the N. by Candahar and Sableſtan on the E. by Mecran on the S. and by Kerman, Farſiſtan, and Couhóſtan on the W. The country is, in general, mountainous; the plains are barren, covered with a fine ſand, which is ſometimes raiſed by the winds in ſuch a degree, as to overwhelm whole caravans, and the valleys are the only habitable parts. Zereng is the capital.

SEGESWAR, a town of Tranſylvania, capital of a county of the ſame name.

Seggerſtonhaugh, NW. of Durham. Seggeſwick, Weſtmorland, on the Can, S. of Kendal. Segbill, Northumberl. near Tinmouth.

SEGNA, a town of Morlachia, with a good harbour. It is a free port and town, under the protection of Auſtria, and is ſeated on the coaſt of the Adriatic, 100 miles NNW. of Spalatro.

SEGNI, a town in the Campagna-di-Roma, where organs are ſaid to have been invented.

SEGORBA, a town of Valencia, containing from 5 to about 6000 inhabitants. The fountain here is a great curioſity; its water is wholeſome, clear, and well taſted; it does not breed either reptiles or flies, and is remarkable for petrifying the roots and branches of the trees which grow by its ſide, and even the channels through which it paſſes. Segorba is ſurrounded by well-cultivated gardens, the climate is mild, and the country is fertile in corn, wine, and every kind of fruit. Near it there are quarries of fine marble. It is ſeated on the river Morviedro, 27 miles NW. of Valencia, and 150 E. of Madrid.

SEGNITZ, a town of Anſpach, in Franconia.

SEGONZAC, a town in the department of the Charente, 15 miles W. of Angouleſme.

SEGOVIA, a city of Spain, in Old Caſtile, the ſee of a biſhop, containing 27 churches, 24 convents, and about 8000 houſes. Here the beſt cloth in Spain is made, from the fine Spaniſh wool, ſo much eſteemed in other countries. The manufacturing of this is one part of their trade; in 1785, however, the number of their looms, formerly ſo numerous, did not exceed 250; another is that of very fine paper. The cathedral, which is a mixture of the Gothic and Mooriſh architecture, ſtands on one ſide of the great ſquare, and contains the ſtatue of Mary in maſſy ſilver. The alcazar is a well-preſerved edifice, and was formerly the reſidence of the Gothic kings. It is ſeated in the higheſt part of the town, is covered with lead, and has 16 rooms richly adorned with tapeſtry, a great deal of gilding, and fine ornaments of marble and porphyry. The royal chapel is magnificently gilded, and embelliſhed with fine paintings. The mint is ſurrounded by a river, on which are mills employed in coining, and by which every thing is done almoſt inſtantaneouſly. This mint was for ſome time the only one in Spain; of late another has been eſtabliſhed at Seville. The aqueduct is one of the moſt aſtoniſhing and beſt preſerved of the Roman works; it is 3000 paces in length, and is ſupported by 177 arches of a prodigious height, conſiſting of two rows, riſing majeſtically one above the other. Its ſolidity, which has braved upwards of 16 centuries, ſeems inexplicable, on obſerving the ſimplicity of its conſtruction, and comparing the ſlender baſe with the wonderful height. Segovia is ſeated on a mountain between two hills, (which ſingular ſituation of the city renders an aqueduct neceſſary,) 45 miles NW. of Madrid.

SEGOVIA, a conſiderable town of Luçon, in the Manilla Iſlands, founded in 1598; the ſee of a biſhop defended by a fort and garriſon. It is ſituated near the N. coaſt, 250 miles N. of Manilla.

SEGOVIA, a town of Terra-Firma, in Venezuela, ſeated near a mountain, where there are mines of gold, 15 miles from Tucuyo. Lat. 7. 55. N. lon. 67. 30. W.

SEGOVIA, NEW, a town of Mexico, in Nicaragua, 70 miles NNE. of Leon.

SEGRA, a river of Spain, which riſes in the Pyrenees, and runs SW. through Catalonia, paſſing by Balaguer, Lerida, and Mequinez, where it falls into the Ebro.

SEGRE, a town in the department of the Mayne and Loire, 18 miles NW. of Angers.

Segrave, Leiceſterſ. SE. of Loughborough. Segſhill, or Sexhill, on the Foſſe-Way, 7 miles N. of Leiceſter. Segton, Lancaſhire, on the Alt, by Croſby.

SEGUR, a town in the dept. of the Correze, and a town in the dept. of the Aveiron.

SEGURA, a town of Portugal, in Beira.

SEGURA, a town of Guipuſcoa, a town of Spaniſh Eſtramadura; a town of Arragon; a town of Murcia; and a town of Tlaſcala, in Mexico.

SEGURA, a river of Spain, which riſes in the SW. part of Murcia, croſſes that province and the S. part of Valencia, and falls into the Mediterranean, 16 miles SSW. of Alicant.

Seham, Durham, by the ſea, S. of Sunderland.

SEHARANPOUR, a town and diſtrict of Delhi, in Hindooſtan, between the Jumnah and the Ganges, 86 miles N. of Delhi.

SEHESTEN, a town of Natangen, in Pruſſia.

SEIHCES, a town in the dept. of the Maine and Loire, 11 miles NE. of Angers, and a town in the dept. of the Lot and Garonne, 8 miles SW. of Lauzun.

Seifincot, Glouceſterſ. 4 miles from Stow, and 6 from Campden. Seighford, NW. of Stafford.

SEIGNELAY, a town in the dept. of the Yonne, 6 miles N. of Auxerre.

SEIKS, THE, a numerous nation of Hindooſtan Proper, conſiſting of ſeveral ſmall independent ſtates, that have formed a kind of federal union. They poſſeſs the whole of Lahore, the principal part of Moultan, and the W. part of Delhi. This tract extends about 400 miles from NW. to SE. and is from 100 to 200 broad, in general, although in the part between Attock and Behker, (that is along the Indus) the extent cannot be leſs than 320. Their capital is Lahore. We know but little concerning the ſtate of this government, but it is repreſented as being mild. In their mode of making war, they are unqueſtionably ſavage and cruel. Their army conſiſts almoſt entirely of horſe, of which they are ſaid to be able to bring at leaſt 100,000 into the field. The Seiks, like the Hindoos, moleſt not others in matters of faith, and require only a conformity in certain ſigns and ceremonies; but, unlike the Hindoos, they admit proſelytes, although thoſe from among the Mahometans are the leaſt eſteemed.

SEILHAC, a town in the department of the Correze, 6 miles N. of Tulle.

SEILLE LA, or SELLE LA, a river of France, which runs into the Moſelle, at Metz, another, which runs into the Saone, aone, in the dept. of the Saone and oire; and another which runs into the cheldt, about 6 miles above Valenciennes.

SEINE, a river of France, which riſes bout 2 leagues S. of St. Aigny le Duc, the dept. of Côte d'Or, and, flowing y Chatellon, Bar, Troyes, Nogent, Meun, Paris, St. Germain, Rouen, Cauchec, &c. falls into the Engliſh Chanel at Havre-de-Grace.

SEINE LA, a town in the dept. of the ar, ſituated on a tongue of land, which ms into the ſea, about 4 miles S. of oulon.

SEINE AND MARNE, a department of rance, S. of the departments of Oiſe d the Aiſne, and W. of the dept. of e Marne and the Aube; it is part of hat was formerly called the Iſle of rance and Brie. Melun is the capital.

SEINE AND OISE, a dept. of France, . of the dept. of Loiret, and S. of the ept. of the Oiſe; formed of what, bere the revolution, was termed Vexin rançois, Mantois, and Gatinois Franois, all included in the government of e Iſle of France. Verſailles is the pital.

SEINE, LOWER, a dept. of France, ounded on the N. and W. by the Engſh Channel, and on the E. by the epts. of the Somme and the Oiſe. It a part of ancient Normandy. Rouen the capital.

SEINSHEIM, a town and lordſhip of ranconia, united to the country of hwartzenburg.

SEIK, or HOR, a mountain in Arabia Petræa, which formerly bounded Judea on the S. and ſeparated it from dumea. It is now called Sardenny, nd is about 140 miles E. of Cairo, in gypt.

Seiſden, Staffordſhire, SW. of Wolverampton.

SEISSAN, a town in the department f the Gers, 9 miles S. of Auch.

SEISSEN, a town of Erzgeburg, in pper Saxony.

Seiſton, NE. of Leiceſter. Seiſton, ottinghamſ. near Stoke. Seckford and 'ark, Suffolk, SW. of Woodbridge. 'elaby, Durham, S. of Staindrop.

SEL LE, a town in the department f the Ille and Vilaine, 14 miles S. of ennes.

SELAM, a town of Yucatan, in N. merica, ſituated near the ſea-coaſt, bout 45 miles NW. of Merida.

Selatten, Shropſhire, NW. of Oſwettry.

SELBE, a river in the Iſle of Man which runs into the Iriſh Sea, in Ramſey harbour.

Selborn, Hampſhire, near Liphook.

SELBURY-HILL, in Wiltſhire, near the village of Kennet, and half a mile from Aubury, in the road from Marlborough to Bath, is an artificial, high, round hill, raiſed by human hands, but for what purpoſe is unknown. It is the largeſt and moſt uniform barrow in this county, if not in all England.

SELBY, a ſmall, but populous town, in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, famous for being the birth-place of Henry I. whoſe father, William the Conqueror, built an abbey here, whoſe abbots were mitred. It has ſeveral merchants and ſome trade, and is ſeated on the river Ouſe, which is here navigable for veſſels of a conſiderable ſize, (a canal alſo communicating from hence with the rivers Aire and Calder) 12 miles S. of York, and 182 N. by W. of London. Market on Monday.

SELEFKIAH, or ITSCHIL, anciently SELEUCIA, a town of Caramania.

SELENGINSK, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Irkutſk, ſituated at the conflux of the Selenga (a river which runs into the Baikal Lake, 50 miles WNW. of Verchnei Udinſk) and the Chilok, 84 miles SE. of Irkutſk. The adjacent country yields a very great plenty of rhubarb.

SELESTRIA, a town of Caramania.

SELEUCIA ILBER, an ancient town of Syria, on the ſea-coaſt, N. of Antioch.

Selham, Suſſex, SW. of Petworth. Selhurſt, Suſſex, NW. of Arundel.

SELIGENSTAD, a town of Mentz.

SELIVRIA, or SELIMBRIA, a ſea-port town of Romania, ſeated on the N. ſide of the Sea of Marmora, 34 miles W. of Conſtantinople.

* SELKIRK, the county-town of Selkirkſhire, containing about 1000 inhabitants in the town, beſides 700 in the country part of the pariſh. Here is a manufacture of boots and ſhoes, which has been long eſtabliſhed, and another of inkle. Some trophies brought away from Floddon Field, by the citizens of Selkirk, have ſurvived the ruſt of time, or the effects of negligence, and are ſtill preſerved here. It is ſeated on the river Ettrick, 25 miles SSE. of Edinburgh.

SELKIRKSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by Edinburghſhire, and Berwickſhire, on the E. by Roxburghſhire, on the S. by Dumfrieſſhire, and on the W. by Peebleſſhire. It is about 24 miles long, and from 8 to 15 wide. It is a hilly country, yielding paſture to innumerable flocks of ſheep and black cattle, but the valleys bear good crops of hay and corn. The rivers abound with fiſh, and the woods with game and birds, both of ſong and of prey. The principal rivers are the Tweed, the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Gala.

SELLE, LA. See SEILLE, LA.

SELLES, a town in the department of Loir and Cher, ſeated on the river Cher, 21 miles S. of Blois, and 105 SSW. of Paris.

Selleth-Hall, Lancaſhire, W. of Kirby-Lonſdale. Selley, Shropſ. SW. of Clun Caſtle. Sellindge, Kent, by the Stour, 3 miles and a half NW. of Hithe. Selling, Kent, 2 miles and a half SE. of Feverſham. Sellingthorp, Yorkſhire, near Driffield. Selmſton, Suſſex, W. of Pevenſey-Marſh. Selſcomb, Suſſex, NE. of Battel. Selſey, Suſſex, a peninſula on the Channel, SE. of Thorney Iſle. Here was formerly a little city, which was ſwallowed up by the encroachments of the ſea. Selſide, or Selſted-Hall, Weſtm. N. of Kendal. Selſton, Nottinghamſ. SW. of Mansfield.

Sellock, Herefordſ. NW. of Roſs.

SELTZ, a town in the dept. of Lower Rhine, ſeated on the Rhine, 270 miles E. of Paris. Lat. 48. 53. N. lon. 8. 12. E.

Selwood, Somerſetſhire, in the E. part of the county, was formerly a foreſt, about 15 miles in length, and 6 in breadth. The neighbouring country was called Selwoodſhire, and the chief town Frome-Selwood. Selworthy, Somerſetſhire, between Minehead and Porlock. Semeley, Wiltſhire, near Wardour-Caſtle.

SEMENDRIAH, a town of Servia.

Semer, Suffolk, N. of Hadleigh.

SEMIGALLIA, the NE. part of the duchy of Courland, extending about 110 miles in length, and from 10 to 25 in breadth. It is ſurrounded by the reſt of Courland, except on the N. where it is ſeparated from Ruſſia, (to which, however, it is now ſubject) by the river Dwina. Mittaw is the capital.

SEMINARA, a town of Calabria Ultra.

SEMOY, a town of Luxemborg, 5 miles NW. of Ching; alſo a river which riſes near Arton, in Luxemburg, and paſſing by Ching, Bouillon, &c. runs into the Meuſe, near Chateau Renard, in the dept. of the Ardennes.

SEMPACH, a lake of Swiſſerland, in the canton of Lucern, about 6 miles long, and 2 broad. The banks on each ſide ſlope gently to the edge of the water, and are prettily chequered with wood. The town of the ſame name is ſeated on the lake, 7 miles NW. of Lucern. Near this place, in 1386, was fought the great battle which eſtabliſhed the liberty of the Swiſs, and in which Leopold duke of Auſtria was defeated and ſlain.

Sempringham, Linc. near Folkingham.

SEMUR-EN-AUXOIS, a town in the dept. of Côte d'Or, with a manufacture of woollen cloth. It is ſituated on a rock, near the river Armançon, 30 miles WNW. of Dijon, and 135 SE. of Paris.

SEMUR-EN-BRIENNOIS, an ancient town in the dept. of Saone and Loire, 12 miles S. of Charolles, and 175 SSE. of Paris.

SENAN, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Koeitcheou, 845 miles SSW. of Peking. It is ſurrounded on all ſides by mountains, and the inhabitants hold little communication with the reſt of the Chineſe.

Senan, Cornwall, 5 miles from St. Burien, the moſt weſtern pariſh in the kingdom. Senbury, Glouceſ. near Campden. Sence, a river which riſes in Leiceſterſhire, and paſſes through Warwickſhire. Send, Surry, near Woking.

SENECA, a lake in the State of New York, about 25 miles long, and 2 or 3 wide; 22 miles S. of Lake Ontario; alſo a river which runs from the above lake to the Oſwego river, falls into the Anker, oppoſite Atherſtone.

SENEF, a town of Brabant, 13 miles ENE. of Mons. It is famous for a drawn battle fought here, in 1674, between the French, under the Prince of Condé, and the Dutch and allies, under William prince of Orange.

SENEGAL, or SENEGAMBIA, a country of Africa, between the rivers Senegal and Gambia, in which are included many kingdoms and ſtates.

SENEGAL, a large river of Africa, which riſes in the interior country, but in what part can only be conjectured; it overflows, however, like the Nile, and, indeed, much about the ſame time of the year. It is 40 days before it comes to the height, when the river overflows its banks, and the channel is difficult to find by thoſe who go up it in boats. The French once ſent 80 men up this river, who rowed 1000 miles, undergoing great hardſhips, inſomuch that only five returned back alive; their boat once ſtuck faſt on the tops of trees, and they got it off with a great deal of difficulty. From the lake Benin, (the furtheſt that Europeans have penetrated) it is 800 leagues to the mouth of f this river, which is laid down in lat. 15.). N. It ſtretches by a number of windngs to a prodigious length from E. to W. nd is believed to ſeparate the country of ne Negroes from the moors of Zahara, or ne Deſert.

SENEGAL, an iſland of Africa, ſituated the river Senegal, near its mouth; bout a mile and a quarter in length, and alf a mile in breadth. The inhabitants, ho are about 3000, live chiefly on fiſh nd maize. Lat. 16. 5. N.

Sener-Caſtle, Cornwall, W. of Trevalin.

SENEZ, a town in the dept. of Lower lps, 49 miles NW. of Nice.

SENETENBERG, a town in the archchy of Auſtria, a town of Koningratz, Bohemia; and a town of Meiſſen, in pper Saxony.

SENGLEA, a town of the iſland of alta, divided by a canal from Vittorio. It contains about 4000 inhabitants.

SENGWARDEN, a town of Kniphauen, in Lower Saxony.

Senhampton, Glouceſter, near Winchmb.

SENINGHAM, a town in the dept. of the raits of Calais, 9 miles W. of St. Omer.

SENLIS, a town in the dept. of Oiſe, tely the ſee of a biſhop, and noted for its thedral, which has one of the higheſt eples in France. It is ſeated on the deivity of a hill, by the river Nonette, alſt ſurrounded by a large foreſt, 20 miles NW. of Meaux, and 27 NNE. of Paris.

SENNAR, a large town of Africa, in ubia, capital of a kingdom of the ſame me, which lies on the banks of the ile, between Egypt and Abyſſinia. It 5 miles in circumference, and very poulous, containing near 100,000 inhabitts. The houſes are all one ſtory high, t roofed, and very ill built, but the burbs contain only cottages, covered ith reeds. The king's palace is ſurunded by high walls, of bricks dried in e ſun, but is only a confuſed heap of ildings. The heats are exceſſive, and the rainy ſeaſon the air is extremely wholeſome. There is a market every y in the week, in the middle of the wn, where they ſell all ſorts of proſions and goods. They have alſo a arket near the king's palace, where aves are ſold: the females fit on one le, and the males on another: the gyptian merchants buy great numbers them every year. Their horned cattle e very large and fat, but the common eat ſold in the market is camel's fleſh. heir religion is Mahometaniſm. They are an ignorant, ſuperſtitious, and yet a cunning ſort of people. The women who can afford it, have ſlight garments of ſilk, and wear rings of various metals on their hair, arms, legs, ears, and fingers. Their legs are naked, and they have only a ſingle ſole faſtened to their feet with ſtrings. Other women and girls have clothes wrapped round them from the waiſt to the knees. The men go almoſt naked. According to Mr. Bruce, their trade is not great; they have no manufactures, and the principal article of conſumption is blue cotton cloth from Surat. Formerly, when the ways were open, and merchants travelled in caravans with ſafety, Indian goods were brought to Sennar from Jidda, and then diſperſed over the black country. The return was made in gold, in powder called tibbar, civet, rhinoceros' horns, ivory, oſtrich feathers, and, above all, in ſlaves and glaſs, more of which were exported from Sennar than from all the reſt of Africa put together. But this trade is almoſt deſtroyed: ſo is that of the gold and ivory. However, the gold ſtill keeps up its reputation of being the pureſt and beſt in Africa, and is therefore bought at Mocha, to be carried to India, where it all at laſt centres. Sennar is ſeated on an eminence, on the W. ſide of the river Nile, in lat. 13. 34. N. lon. 33. 30. E.

SENS, an ancient and conſiderable town in the dept. of the Yonne; before the revolution, it was the ſee of an archbiſhop, and contained 16 pariſh churches, and 14 abbeys and convents. It is ſeated on the Yonne, at its confluence with the Vanne, 60 miles SE. of Paris. Here were interred the dauphin and dauphineſs, parents of Louis XVI. Alſo a town in the dept. of Saone and Loire, 18 miles E. of Chalons, and a town in the dept. of Ille and Vilaine, 14 miles NNE. of Rennes.

SEPULVEDA, a town of Old Caſtile.

SERAJO. See BOSNA SERAJO.

SERAMICA, a river of Surinam, in S. America, which runs into the Atlantic, in lat. 5. 54. N. lon. 55. 38. W.

SERAMPOUR, a town of Bengal, ſeated on the river Hooghly, 12 miles S. of the town of Hooghly. It was a Daniſh ſettlement, and carries on a conſiderable trade.

SERAVALLE, a town in the Milaneſe.

SERCELLI, a ſea-port of Algiers.

SERCHIO, a river of Italy, which riſes in Modena, and croſſing the territory of Lucca, falls into the Tuſcan ſea, 4 miles NNW. of Piſa.

SERDOB, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Saratov. It is ſituated on the Donetz, near its ſource, 72 miles NW. of Saratov.

SERDOBOL, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Wiburg, ſituated on the lake Ladoga, 60 miles NNE. of Wiburg.

Sereby, Lincolnſhire, near Glandford Bridge.

SEREGIPO-DEL-REY, a ſea-port of Braſil, in S. America, capital of a diſtrict. It is ſituated on a river of the ſame name, near the coaſt of the Atlantic, about 100 miles NE. of St. Salvador. Lat. 11. 42. S. lon. 39. 46. W.

SERENA, a town of Spaniſh Eſtramadura, a river of Chili, which runs into the S. Pacific Ocean, near Quimbo.

SERENT, a town in the dept. of the Morbihan, 14 miles NE. of Vannes.

SERFO, or SERPHO, anciently SERIPHUS, an iſland of the Archipelago, about 8 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. It is full of rugged and ſteep mountains, in which, however, are mines of iron and loadſtone. The produce is but ſmall, yet the onions are in great eſteem. The ancient Romans made this a place of baniſhment. The inhabitants are all Greeks; they have but one town, called St. Nicholo, which is a poor place. Lat. 37. 8. N. lon. 24. 50. E.

SERINGAPATAM, a city of Hindooſtan, lately capital of the kingdom of Myſore. It is ſituated in an iſland of the river Cauvery. This iſland is a beautiful ſpot, containing elegant buildings, ſquares, groves, and gardens. The mauſoleum of Hyder Ali is one of the moſt magnificent objects of this place: it is ſituated on the S. angle of the iſland, near an elegant palace of Tippoo Sultan's, and is ſurrounded by a grove of beautiful cypreſs trees. In 1792, Lord Cornwallis laid ſiege to this city, and compelled Tippoo, ſovereign of Myſore, to ſign a treaty, by which he made a ceſſion of about one-third of his dominions to the E. India Company, and their allies, the Mahrattas, and the nizam of the Deccan; and agreed to pay 3 crores and 30 lacks of rupees, towards the expences of the war. It is 230 miles WSW. of Madras. Lat. 12. 31. N. lon. 70. 46. E.

Serlby, Yorkſhire, near Bautre. Serleby, Nottinghamſ. near Blithe.

SERONGE. See SIRONG.

SERPA, a town of Alentejo.

SERQUEUX, a town in the department of the Upper Marne, 3 miles N. of Bourvonne.

SERRES, a town in the dept. of Upper Alps, 15 miles SW. of Gap.

SERRET, a town of Natolia.

SERVERETTE, a town in the dept. of the Lozere.

SERVIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by the rivers Danube and Save, which ſeparate it from Hungary and Sclavonia; on the E. by Walachia and Bulgaria; on the W. by Boſnia and Dalmatia; and on the S. by Albania and Macedonia. This country conſtitutes the W. part of the ancient Myſia. It was formerly divided into Servia Proper and Raſcia, but at preſent is divided into four ſangaicates, the names of which are Belgrade, Semendriah, Scupia, and Cratowo. Belgrade is the capital.

SERVIAN, a town in the dept. of the Herault, 6 miles NE. of Beziers.

SERVIERE, a town in the dept. of the Lozere, and a town in the dept. of the Correze, 14 miles SE. of Tulle.

SERVULO, a caſtle, ſeated upon a high mountain, 4 miles from Trieſte. Near it is the mouth of a famous cavern, in which the ſparry exudations have formed a great variety of figures of blue and white colours.

SESIA, a river of Italy, which riſes in the Alps, on the borders of the Valais, and runs into the Po, a little below Caſal.

SESSA, a town of Principato Citra.

SESTO, a town in the Milaneſe.

SESTOS, a caſtle in Romania, ſeated on the Strait of the Dardanelles, about 24 miles SW. of Gallipoli, and oppoſite Abydos.

SESTRI-DI-LEVANTE, a town of Genoa.

SESTRI-DI PONENTE, a town of Genoa.

SETCHEOU, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Koeitcheou.

Setchfield, Hampſhire, NW. of the New Foreſt.

SETCHUEN, a province of China, having Chenſi on the N. and the kinguom of Thibet and other countries on the W. It is famous for its rhubarb, and the root fou-lin, which the Chineſe phyſicians introduce into all their preſcriptions.

Setcop, Kent, 3 miles from Eltham.

Sething, Norfolk, between Bungay and Norwich.

SETIMO, a town of Piedmont.

SETINES. See ATHENS.

SETLEDGE, a river of Hindooſtan, the moſt eaſterly branch of the Indus. At Firoſepour, about midway between its ſource and the Indus, it receives the Beyar, a river which riſes in the Labore country. It riſes in the Thibet, and runs into into the Indus, S. of Moultan, near Veh: It had once a fine harbour, till choked up with the ſand.

Seton, Devonſ. between Axmouth and Branſcomb. Setteſley Paſſage, Glouceſterſhire, over the Severn to Chepſtow.

SETTLE, a pretty good town in the W. Riding of Yorkſ. ſeated on the river Ribble, over which it has a ſtone bridge, at the foot of the hills, which part this county from Lancaſhire, 60 miles NNW. of York, and 235 NNW. of London. A weekly market on Tueſday, and one on every other Monday for cattle.

Settlewood, Glouceſterſhire, a hamlet to Hawkeſbury. Settrington, Yorkſ. near New Malton.

SETUVAL. See St. UBES.

Seven Churches, in King's County, Leinſter. SevenChurches; ſee Glendalough.

SEVASTOPOL, a town of Tauris, in Ruſſia, ſituated on the Black Sea, 80 miles S. of Perekop.

Seven, a river in Yorkſ. which runs into the Derwent, between Cotehouſe and Wickham.

Seven Hills, Yorkſhire, N. Riding, between Applegarth and New Foreſt.

SEVEN ISLANDS, a cluſter of iſlands to that number, in the Frozen Ocean, lying in lat. 80. 31. N. lon. 18. 48. E. Among theſe iſlands, the Race-horſe and Carcaſs veſſels, under Captain Phipps, were ſurrounded by the ice, from the 31ſt of July to the 10th of Auguſt, in the year 1773, when a briſk wind at NNE. accompliſhed their deliverance, and ſaved them from the dreadful proſpect of periſhing by the winter polar cold.

Seven Miles Dyke, Cambridgeſhire.

* SEVENOAKS, a town of Kent, ſo named from ſeven very great, high oaks which were near it when it was firſt built. Here is an hoſpital for the maintenance of aged people, with a free-ſchool, firſt erected by William Sevenoaks, lord mayor of London in 1418, who is ſaid to have been a foundling, charitably educated by a perſon of this town. It is a great thoroughfare on the road to Rye, and is ſituated near the river Darent, 7 miles NW. of Tunbridge, and 23 SE. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Seven Stones, Cornw. at the rocks, between Land's End and Scilly.

SEVER, St. a town in the department of Landes, ſeated on the river Adour, 20 miles E. of Dax: alſo a town in the department of Calvados; a town in the department of Indre; and a town in the dept. of the Upper Pyrenees.

SEVERINA, St. a town of Calabria Ultra.

SEVERINO, St. two towns of Principato Citra; and a town of Ancona.

SEVERN, a river of England, which riſes near Plynlimmon-Hill, in Montgomeryſhire, when taking a north-eaſterly direction it enters Shropſhire. It is navigable in its whole courſe through this county, and entering Worceſterſhire, runs through its whole length. In its courſe it waters Welſh Pool, Shrewſbury, Bridgenorth, Worceſter, Tewkeſbury, Glouceſter; and entering the ſea, its mouth is called the Briſtol Channel. A communication between this river and the Thames, the Trent, the Dee, the Merſey, and other rivers, has been lately opened by a number of different canals.

SEVERN, THE VALE OF, a ſpacious and extenſive vale in Glouceſterſ. which borders both ſides of the river Severn. Its fertile paſtures furniſh the kingdom with that cheeſe for which the county is ſo juſtly famous. In this vale, the air is ſo mild, even in winter, that it ſeems to enjoy a different climate from that of the Cotſwold Hills.

SEVERN, a river of Maryland, which enters Cheſapeak Bay, by a broad mouth, a little below Annapolis.

SEVERNDROOG, a ſea-port town of Hindooſtan, ſituated on an iſland or peninſula, in the Concan county, 68 miles S. of Bombay; near which was a fort that belonged to Angria the Pirate, which was taken by Commodore James, in 1756.

Severn Stoke, or Stoke-upon-Severn, Worceſterſ. N. of Upton.

SEVERO, St. a town of Capitanata.

SEVERUS' WALL, commonly called GRAHAM'S DIKE, in the W. of Scotland. It is a work of the Romans, and ſuppoſed to be done by the emperor whoſe name it bears, to prevent the incurſion of the Picts and Scots. It began at Abercorn, on the Frith of Forth, 4 miles NE. of Linlithgow, and ran W. acroſs the county to the Frith of Clyde, ending at Kirkpatrick, near Dumbarton.

SEVILLE, a diſtrict of Andaluſia, called alſo Lower Andaluſia, extending from Eſtramadura and Cordova to the Atlantic and the Straits of Gibraltar; about 120 miles in length, and from 70 to 110 in breadth.

SEVILLE, an ancient city, (in Latin HISPALIS, which the Arabians pronounced IXHILLA, and the Caſtillians SEVILLA) capital of Andaluſia, one of the moſt conſiderable in Spain, and the ſee of an archbiſhop. It is of a round form, and takes up more ground than Madrid, although it does not contain ſo many inhabitants. The Moors built an aqueduct here, ſtill to be ſeen, extending 6 miles in length. The cathedral is the largeſt Gothic building in Spain, and is ſuppoſed by ſome travellers to be the largeſt church in the world, next to St. Peter's at Rome; the ſteeple is of very curious workmanſhip, and extremely high, conſiſting of three towers, one above another, with galleries and balconies. Of the convents, which are 77 in number, that of St. Francis is the moſt curious, adorned with a very handſome public ſquare, in the midſt of which is a fine fountain. It contains 160 monks, beſide 140 lay brethren. The univerſity of Seville conſiſts of many colleges; the profeſſors enjoying rich penſions. Near the cathedral is the royal palace, called Alcazar, which was partly built after the antique by the Moors, and partly in the modern taſte by king Pedro; it is a mile in extent, and flanked by large ſquare towers, built with ſtones taken from the ancient temple of Hercules, ſaid to be the original founder of the city. The exchange is a ſquare building, of the Tuſcan order, each front 100 feet in length, and 3 ſtories high. The ſuburbs, of which there are ſeveral, ſtands on the other ſide of the river. In this ſuburb the houſe of the Inquiſition is placed, and here are the public walks where the inhabitants go to take the air. The town-houſe is adorned with a great number of ſtatues, and there is a large ſquare before it, with a fine fountain in the middle. In this city are 29 pariſh churches, and 24 hoſpitals richly endowed. An academy of the belles lettres was founded here in 1730. Under the Moors, Seville contained 600 000 inhabitants, and in the time of Ferdinand and Iſabella, 6000 looms were employed here; but at preſent, there are ſcarcely 400 manufactures. Its ſituation near the ſea, renders it ſtill, however, one of the moſt commercial towns of Spain. The E. and W. India companies have their houſes here, where they are obliged to regiſter themſelves and their merchandiſe. Their ſhips, indeed, ſtop in the harbour of Cadiz, but their lading is carried thence to Seville; and there all the gold and ſilver is coined, there being above 600 men employed in the mint. The country about it is extremely fertile in corn, wine, &c. and there is abundance of oil; for to the W. of the river is a grove of olive trees, 30 miles in length. The Spaniards commonly ſay, Quen no ha viſto Sevilla, no ha viſto maravilla; He who has not ſeen Seville, has not ſeen a wonder. It is ſituated on the river Guadalquiver, over which it has a long bridge of boats, 45 miles from the ſea, 112 W. of Granada, and 212 S. by W. of Madrid. Lat. 37. 32. N. lon. 5. 34. W.

Sevinghampton, Wilts, near Highworth. Sevington, Kent, by the Stone, 2 miles SE. of Aſhford. Sevington, Wilts, N. of Steeple-Aſhton. Sevington, Abbots, Mary and Michael, Somerſetſhire, near Ilminſter and South Petherton. Sevion, or Senion, or Sevion, a river in Flintſhire, which runs into the Clwyd, near Ragland.

SEVERS, THE TWO, a department of France, part of the late Poitou, ſo named from two rivers, one of which flows W. by St. Maixent and Niort into the Bay of Biſcay, oppoſite the iſle of Rhe, and the other takes a NW. direction, paſſes by Cliſſon, and enters the river Loire, oppoſite Nantes. This department lies W. of the department of Vienne, and E. of the department of La Vendee. Niort is the capital.

Sevynvey, a river in Pembrokeſhire, which runs into the Clethy, near Llanhadon.

SEWAD, a country of Cabul, in India, on the W. ſide of the Indus. It is mountainous, and full of ſtrong paſſes.

SEWALICK, MOUNT, a chain of mountains in Aſia, ſtretching between Lahore and Thibet. At Hurdwar, the Ganges ſeems to force its way through this ridge into the plains of Hindooſtan.

Sewards, Kent, near Lees Court. Sewardſtone, Eſſex, in the pariſh of Waltham-Holy-Croſs. Sewcot, Oxf. NE. of Iſlip. Sewdley, Glouc. near Wirtcomb, on a brook that runs into the Avon. Sewerby, Yorkſ. a tract between Burlington and Flamborough Head, where a great number of goats are kept. Sewſtern, Leic. near Buckminſter. Sexbow, Yorkſ. N. Riding, N. of Wharleton-Cattle.

SEYSSEL, a town in the dept. of Ain, divided into two parts by the Rhone, which here begins to be navigable. It is 14 miles NNE. of Belley.

SEZANNE, a town in the department of Marne, plundered and burnt by the Engliſh in the year 1423. It is 27 miles NNW. of Troyes, and 65 SSE. of Paris.

Sezay, Yorkſ. SE. of Thirſk. Shabery, Shropſ. on the Rodden, SE. of Wem. Shackelwell, Middl. a hamlet of Hackney. Shackleford, Surry, W. of Godalming. Shackleford, Surry, near Working. Shadſtones, Eſſex. E. of Chelmsford. Shadbrook, Suffolk. Shaddingfield, Suffolk, 3 miles

l miles from Beccles. Shadforth, E. of Durham. Shadoxherſt, Kent, 3 miles nd a half S. of Aſhford. Shadwell, hropſ. SW. of Biſhop's Caſtle. Shadwell, Yorkſ. NE. of Leeds.

*SHAFTSBURY, or SHAFTON, an ancient town of Dorſetſhire, containing bout 320 houſes, many of which are of ee-ſtone, a neat town-hall, where the uarter ſeſſions are held, a free-ſchool, nd ſeveral remains of antiquity. Water ſo ſcarce here, that they are obliged to ring it from a great diſtance, in pails, or horſes. They enjoy, however, a whole-me air, and have a very extenſive proſpect over the counties of Dorſet, Somerſet, and Wilts. It is ſituated in the orthern extremity of the county, on a gh hill, difficult of acceſs, except on e E. 25 miles W. by S. of Saliſbury, nd 102 W. by S. of London. A conſiderable market on Saturday.

Shakerley, Lancaſ. NE. of Leigh. Shakerſton, Leiceſ. NW. of Boſworth. Shaklebury, Yorkſhire, SW. of Rumildkirk. Shalborn, Wiltſhire, near Great edwin. Shalcroſs, Derbyſhire, in the igh Peak. Shalden, Hampſhire, NW. Alton. Shales, Weſtmorl. on the orbeck, W. of Orton. Shaley, Yorkſ. W. of Halifax. Shalfleet, Hants, Iſle Wight, in W. Medina. Shalford, ſſex, on Blackwater, NW. of Bocking. halford, Surry, a mile from Guilford. Shallagham-Bridge, in Donegal, Ulſter, hallee, in Tipperary, Munſter. Shallington, Berks, E. of Farringdon. hallowford, NW. of Stafford, by the ow. Shalmsford and Shalmsford-Street, ent, near Chartham. Shamley-Green, urry, near Weſt Horſley. Shanagolden, or Shanegolden, in Limeck, Munſter. Shamballymore, in Cork, lunſter. Shane's Caſtle, in Antrim, Ulſter. Shane-Inn, in Kerry, Munſter. hanedrum, or Shandrum, in Cork, lunſter.

Shanfield, Suffolk, S. of Beccles.

Shangenagh, in Dublin, Leinſter.

Shankling, Iſle of Wight, near Bonchurch. Shankton, Leiceſterſ. 4 miles om Harborough.

SHANNON, the largeſt river in Ireland, nd one of the fineſt in the Britiſh Iſles, lling nearly from N. to S. 200 miles, nd expanding in its courſe, in many aces, into deep and ſpacious lakes. It ſes from Lough Lean, in the county of eitrim, and paſſing by Leitrim, Carrick, aneſborough, Athlone, Killaloe, Limeck, &c. runs into the Atlantic, between erry Head and Cape Lean. From Limerick to the Atlantic, it is navigable for the largeſt veſſels. At ſome diſtance above Limerick, and a little below Killaloe, there is a ledge of rocks which interrupts the navigation of this fine river. Here, however, there is a valuable eel and ſalmon fiſhery; and from Killaloe to Carrick-on-Shannon, near its ſource, there is an inland navigation, which promiſes the greateſt advantages to the riſing proſperity of Ireland.

Shannon-Bridge, in Galway, Connaught. Shannon-Bridge, in King's County, Leinſter. Shannon Grove, in Limerick, Munſter. Shannon-Park, in Cork, Munſter. Shanrahan, in Waterford, Munſter.

Shap, Weſtmorland, at the ſource of the Loder, between Orton and Penrith. It had once a famous abbey, built in 1119, of which little remains, except a tower and the ruins of an old bridge. A more ancient and permanent monument of human induſtry, appears in ſome great ſtones, like pyramids, which are placed in almoſt a direct line, for a mile together, at 8, 10, and 12 yards diſtance from each other, and are of ſuch immenſe weight, that no carriages, now in uſe, could ſupport them. It was, probably, a place of druidical worſhip.

SHAPPINSHA, one of the Orkney Iſlands, lying NE. of Mainland, or Pomona, with about 80 boats belonging to it, moſt of which are employed in fiſhing. In the ſummer they burn kelp, which produces, in ſome ſeaſons, upwards of 3000 tons, bringing near 9000l. to the inhabitants.

Shapwick, Dorſetſ. near Blandford, on the Stour. Shapwick, Somerſetſ. W. of Glaſtonbury. Sharwick-Hall, Lancaſ. NW. of Ormſkirk. Shardington, Great and Little, Glouceſterſhire, near Badgeworth. Shareſhill, Staffordſhire, 2 miles from Cannock. Sharington, Norfolk, W. of Holt. Sharlow, SE. of Derby, near the Dove. Sharnbrook, Bedfordſ. near Balnhurſt. Sharnburn, or Sherborn, Norfolk, E. of Snelſham. Sharncote, Wilts, NW. of Cricklade. Shaunford, Leiceſterſ. SE. of Aſton Flamvil. Sharnbull, Dorſetſhire, near Knoll and Buckland-Abbas. Sharp, or Thorncliff, Staffordſ. NE. of Leek. Sharpenhoe, Bedfordſhire, N. of the Sundons. Sharperton, Northumberland, near Harbottle-Caſtle. Sharpham, Somerſetſhire, near Glaſtonbury. Sharphill, Yorkſ. on the Ouſe, SE. of Selby. Sharpnor-Caſtle, Iſle of Wight, a mile W. of Yarmouth. Sharp's Place, Kent, S. of Sevenoaks. Sharſted, Kent, by Doddington. Shatſham, Hants, near Titchfield. Shatticsbrook, brook, Berks, W. of Windſor. Shatton, Cumberl. near Cockermouth. Shatton, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Shaucomb, Iſle of Wight, SW. of Weſtover. Shaufleet, Iſle of Wight, SW. of Newton. Shavington, Cheſhire, near Webbenbury. Shavington, Shropſhire, NW. of Drayton. Shauler, Iſle of Wight, by Newport-Haven. Shaulſton, NW. of Buckingham. Shavon, Northumb. NW. of Alnwick.

SHAVOYA, a country of Morocco, S. of Fez and W. of Tedla, inhabited by mountaineers, who are chiefly robbers.

Shaw, Berks, near Newbury. Shaw, Devonſhire, N. of Plympton. Shaw, Wilts, N. of Swindon. Shaw, Wilts, in Melkſham pariſh. Shawborn, Berks, S. of Hungerford. Shawcroſs, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Shawdon, Northumb. W. of Alnwick. Shawel, Leicetterſ. S. of Lutterworth. Shawford, Hants, on the Itching, 2 miles below Wincheſter. Shawford, Herts, NW. of St. Alban's. Shawford, Staffordſ. SE. of Eccleſhall. Shaw's, Cumberland, in the pariſh of Lanercoſt. Shaxton, Leiceſterſ. E. of Hog's-Norton. Shay-Chapel, Lancaſhire, SE. of Rochdale. Sheabridge, Staffordſ. between Whitmore and Newcaſtle-under Line. Sheales, Kent, near Maidſtone. Sheane, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina.

Sheap, a river in Down, Ulſter.

Shearhampton, Glouceſ. in Henbury pariſh. Shebbear, Devonſ. NW. of Hatherleigh. Sheeles, Wilts, in the pariſh of Mere. Sheen, Eaſt, Surry, a hamlet in the pariſh of Mortlake, ſeated on an eminence near the Thames, between Richmond and Roehampton. Sheen, Weſt, Surry, a hamlet in the pariſh of Richmond. Here Henry V. founded a convent of Carthuſians, within the walls of which Perkin Warbeck ſought an aſylum. An ancient gateway, the laſt remains of this priory, was taken down in 1770; and the whole hamlet, conſiſting of 18 houſes, was at the ſame time demoliſhed, and the ſite of it made into a lawn, and added to the king's incloſures.

Sheep-bridge, in Down, Ulſter, over the river Newry.

Sheepcoat, Middleſ. near the Bedfonts. Sheepball, Hertfordſ. SE. of Stevenage. Sheepſhead, Leiceſ. 3 miles from Loughborough.

Sheep-Land, in Down, Ulſter, near Gun's Iſland, in Strangford-Bay. Sheep's-Head Point, in Cork, Munſter, forms the S. entrance of Bantry-Bay.

Sheepſhide, Herts, SW. of Biſhop's-Hatfield.

SHEEPWASH, a ſmall town of Devonſhire, 12 miles S. of Biddeford, and 205. W. by S. of London. Market diſuſed.

Sheepy, Great and Little, Leiceſterſ. S. of Hog's-Norton.

SHEERNESS, a fort in Kent, ſeated on the northern point of the Iſle of Sheppey, at the W. Swale, or the principal mouth of the river Medway, 3 miles N. of Queenborough. The buildings belonging to it make a neat little town; and there is alſo a dock-yard, and a chapel. Here is a fort built by king Charles II. after the inſult of the Dutch, and in the room of that demoliſhed at Queenborough, with a line of cannon facing the water ſide, which contains good apartments for the officers of the ordnance, navy, and garriſon. An excellent ſpring was lately diſcovered here, before which the yard and garriſon were ſupplied with freſh water from Chatham. It is reckoned one of the moſt unhealthy ſpots in the kingdom.

Sheefky Mountains, in Cork, Munſter, in the barony of Carbery.

Sheet, Hants, near Petersfield.

*SHEFFIELD, a large, thriving, and populous town, in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, long celebrated for its various hardware manufactories, which conſiſt particularly of ſteel cutlery wares, plated goods, and various tools. It has been a ſtaple for knives, or whittles, and ſies, above 300 years. It is reputed to excel Birmingham in this ſort of wares; as that does this town in locks, hinges, nails, and poliſhed ſteel. Here are about 600 maſter cutlers, incorporated by the ſtyle of the cutlers of Hallamſhire, of which this is reckoned the chief town. By the Don, which is navigable within five miles of the town, it receives iron from Hull, and conveys thither its manufactures for exportation, which are not confined to the town, but extend ſeveral miles over the country, employing not leſs than 40,000 perſons. Its neighbourhood abounds with coal, and there are ſome mines of alum. Here are alſo lead-works and a ſilk-mill. It is in a hilly ſituation, and is chiefly ſupplied with water by pipes from the high ground. A new market-place has been lately erected here by the Duke of Norfolk, on a commodious plan of ſhambles, ſtrongly incloſed; and a large and elegant infirmary has been lately completed. In the old parts of the town the ſtreets are narrow; the the new parts, however, are more commodious, and the ſurrounding country affords a rich and beautiful variety of landſcape. It is ſeated on the rivers Don and Sheaf, 34 miles N. of Derby, and 161 NW. by N. of London. A large market on Tueſday, particularly for corn. Fairs on Tueſday after Trinity Sunday and November 28th.

SHEFFIELD, a town of Maſſachuſetts.

Sheffield, Suſſex, by Fletching. Sheffield-Mill, Berks, on the Kennet, 9 miles from Reading. Sheffield-Place, Suſſex, midway between E. Grinſtead and Lewes.

SHEFFORD. See SHELFORD.

Shefford, Magna, Berks, 4 miles SE. of Lambourn.

SHEFNAL, a ſmall town of Shropſhire, 9 miles NE. of Bridgenorth, and 136 NW. of London. Market on Friday.

Shelbred, Suſſex, W. of Fernhurſt.

Shelburgh, Yorkſ. N. of Doncaſter.

SHELBURNE, a flouriſhing new town of Acadia, in the province of Nova Scotia, ſituated at Port Roſeway, on the SE. coaſt, 90 miles SW. of Halifax. It extends about two miles on the water-ſide, and one mile back, with wide ſtreets croſſing each other at right angles. The harbour is deep, capacious, and ſecure. About a mile from Shelburne, and ſeparated from it by a ſmall river, is the Black-Town, containing about 1200 free blacks, that ſerved on the royal ſide during the American war. Lat. 43. 50. N. lon. 65. 15. W.

Shelburne, in Wexford, Leinſter.

Shelderton. Shropſ. SW. of Onybury.

Sheldeſley, or Sheldeſley-Waſh, and Sheldeſley, Great or Beauchamp, Worc. on oppoſite ſides of the river Teme, NE. of Clithero.

Sheldicks, Northumb. S. of Alnwick.

Sheldon, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak.

Sheldon, Kent, by Deal.

Sheldon, Warwickſhire, near Coleſhill.

Sheldon, Wilts, near Chippenham.

Sheldon-Moor, Durham, SW. of Biſhop-Auckland.

SHELDRAKE, a river of Canada, which empties itſelf into the river St. Lawrence, in lat. 50. 20. N. and lon. 64. 50. W.

Sheldwich, Kent, 3 miles S. of Feverſham.

Shele, a river in Northumberland, which runs into the Tyne, near its head, below Butterhaugh.

Shele-Hall, Northumberl. SW. of Dilſton.

Shelf, Yorkſ. in the pariſh of Halifax.

Shelfbanger, Norfolk, N. of Diſs.

Shelfield, Staffordſ. NE. of Bloxwich.

SHELFORD, a town of Bedfordſhire, ſituated between two rivulets, which unite their ſtreams a little below the town and fall into the Ouſe, 9 miles S. of Bedford, and 41 N. of London. Market on Friday.

Shelford, Nottingh. 2 miles from Bingham.

Shelford, Magna, Cambridgeſ. NW. of Linton.

Shelford, E. or Parva, SE. of Shelford Magna.

Shelaks, Shropſ. NE. of Knoking-Caſtle.

SHELLA, a decayed town of Morocco, 4 miles E. of Salee. It contains many Mooriſh tombs, held in great veneration, and is conſidered as a ſacred aſylum, only to be entered by Mahometans.

Shelland, Suffolk, by Stow-Market.

Shelley, Eſſex, contiguous to Ongar, and only parted from Fyfield by the Rothing.

Shelley, Suffolk, S. of Hadley.

Shelley, Yorkſhire, near Bradford.

Shellow-Bowel, Eſſex, S. of the Rodings, near Roxwell.

Shelſey; ſee Sheldeſley.

Shelfwell, Oxfordſhire, S. of Mixbury.

Shelton, Bedfordſ. the moſt northern village in the county.

Shelton. Norfolk, on the Waveney, near Taſborough.

Suelton, Nottingh. between Bingham and Newark.

Shelton, Shropſ. W. of Shrewſbury.

Shelton, Staffordſ. near Newcaſtle-under-Line.

Shelton, Upper, and Lower, Bedfordſ. near Tilbrook.

Shelvingborow, Kent, near Barham-Downs.

Shelvington, E. and W. Dorſetſ. in Potiſham pariſh.

Shelvock, Shropſ. between Shrewſbury and Oſweſtry.

Shelwich, near Hereford.

Shelwood, Surry, SW. of Ryegate.

Shene, Staffordſ. S. of Longnor.

Shenfield, Eſſex, adjoining Brentwood.

Shengay, Camb. on the river Cam, oppoſite to Clopton, NW. of Royſton.

Shenington, Glouceſterſ. near Tewkeſbury.

Shenley, Bucks, three miles from Fenny-Stratford, in the road from London to Cheſter.

Shenley-Brockend, Bucks, in Shenley pariſh.

Shenſton, Staffordſhire, E. of Walſal.

Shenton Leiceſ. near Boſworth.

Shenton, Shropſ. N. of Great Wenlock.

Shenton, Shropſ. NW. of Drayton.

Shepardine, Glouc. on the Bank of the Severn, N. of Oldbury.

Shepemeadow, Suffolk, between Beccles and Bungay.

Sheperton, Middleſex, on the Thames, oppoſite to Walton.

Shepewaſh, SE. of Lincoln.

Shepewaſh, Northumberl. on the Wanſbeck, between Morpeth and the ſea.

Shepherd's-Buſh, Middleſ. between Kenſington Gravel-Pits and Acton.

Shepherd's-Forſtal, Kent, near Sheldwich.

Shepherd's-Heath, Camb. between Orwell and Foulmere.

SHEPHERD'S

SHEPHERD'S-TOWN, a town of Virginia.

Shepbove, Hants, S. of Odiam. Shepiter Devonſ. near Mevychurch. Shepley, Durham, near Eggleton. Shepley, Yorkſ. W. of Barneſley.

SHEPHERD ISLES, a cluſter of ſmall iſlands in the S. Sea, to the ſouthward of Malicollo. They are conſidered by ſome as belonging to the New Hebrides. Lat. 17. 0. S. lon. 168. 50. E.

SHEPPEY, an iſland of Kent, in the mouth of the Thames, ſeparated from the main land by a branch of the Medway, called the Eaſt Swale. It yields plenty of corn, and feeds numerous flocks of ſheep. A great number of marine botanical plants grow in the ſalt marſhes.

Shepſcombe, Glouceſ. in Painſwick pariſh. Shepton, Dorſetſ. SE. of Bridport. Shepton Beauchamp, Somerſ. NE. of Ilminſter.

* SHEPTON-MALLET, a town of Somerſetſhire, containing, with its populous pariſh, above 500 houſes and 9000 inhabitants, but the ſtreets are very narrow, ſteep, and irregular. It has a flouriſhing manufacture of ſecond-cloths, the principal material of which is fine Engliſh wool. In this, at preſent, about 4000 hands are daily employed; beſides which, there is a conſiderable manufacture of knit ſtockings. It is ſituated among hills, well-watered with rivulets for the clothiers' buſineſs, 17 miles SW. of Bath, and 114 W. of London. Market on Friday.

Shepton-Montague, Somerſ. S. of Bruton. Shepway, Kent, near Maidſtone. Shepway Croſs, Kent, between Weſtenhanger and Hithe. Sherbarn, near Durham. Sherbarn, Yorkſ. SW. of Scarborough. Sherbarn; ſee Sharnburn.

* SHERBORN, an ancient, large, and well inhabited town of Dorſetſhire, containing about 2000 inhabitants. It has a conſiderable manufacture of ſilk-throwing, as alſo of buttons, bone-lace, and haberdaſhery wares, and had formerly a great trade in medley cloth. It is very pleaſantly ſeated and watered by the river Parrot, which divides it into two parts. 40 miles W. by S. of Saliſbury, and 118 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

SHERBORN, a populous, well-inhabited town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, noted for its free-ſchool, as alſo for its orchards of a fine plum for preſerving, called wine ſour, which cannot be cultivated in any other place, and for its cherry orchards. A very high raiſed Roman way runs from hence to Aberford, which is four miles diſtant. It is ſituated at the conflux of the Wherfe and Ouſe, with a harbour for barges, 11 miles SW. of York, and 181 N. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Sherborn, Glouceſterſ. 3 miles from North Leech. Sherborn, Hants, near Eaſt Wortham. Sherborn, Oxfordſhire, 6 miles from Wallingford. Sherborn, SW. of Warwick. Sherborn Monks, or Weſt, and St. John's, Hants, N. of Baſingſtoke.

SHERBOROUGH, an Engliſh ſettlement in Guinea, at the mouth of Sherborough River, 100 miles SE. of Sierra-Leone. Lat. 6. 0. N. lon. 11. 0. W.

Sherbroke, Derbyſ. SE. of Bolſover-Caſtle.

SHERBURNE, a town in Nantucket.

Sherdelow, Bucks, in Amerſham pariſh. Shere, Surry, on the river Wey, near Albury. Shereford, Norfolk, near Fakenham. Sherenewton, Monmouthſ. W. of Chepſtow. Sherenton, E. of Glouceſter. Sherefby, Leiceſterſhire, NE. of Lutterworth. Sherfield, Hants, near Baſingſtoke. Sherfield, Hants, W. of Rumley. Sherford, Devonſ. by the ſea, SW. of Dartmouth. Sherford, Warwickſhire, in Burton-Haſtings pariſh. Sherford-Bridge, Dorſetſhire, leads to Purbeck Iſle. Sheriff-Hales, Staffordſ. NW. of Tong-Caſtle. Sheriff Hutton, near York.

Sheriff Muir, a heath in Perthſhire, near the Grampian Mountains, famous for an undeciſive battle, fought here in 1715, between the royal army, under the Duke of Argyle, and the Pretender's forces, under the Earl of Mar.

Sheriffs-Naunton, Worceſ. N. of Perſhore. Shering, Eſſex, NW. of Harlow. Sheringham, Norfolk, by the ſea, W. of Cromer. Sherington, Bucks, near Newport-Pagnel. Sherington, Warwickſhire, NE. of Brailes. Sherington, Wilts, near the Wilbourn, E. of the Deverels.

Sherkin Iſland, in Cork, Munſter, SW. of Baltimore-Bay.

Shermanbury, Suſſex, W. of Twineham. Sherotten, Durham, near Hartlepool. Sherſton, Somerſetſ. W. of Somerton. Sherſton, Wilts, SW. of Malmſbury. Sherſton, Yorkſ. E. of Wakefield. Sherſton-Rock, Glouceſ. in the Severn, near Ault-Paſſage. Sherwell, Devonſhire, NE. of Barnſtaple. Sherwood, a celebrated and extenſive foreſt, taking in almoſt all the W. part of

of Nottinghamſhire. It is now ſtript of its woods, but, in ſome parts of it, coal is obtained. Here are alſo ſeveral parks and fine ſeats.

Sherwood, in Carlow, Leinſter.

Shete, a river in Kent, which runs into the Medway, Twyford Bridge. Shetford, Oxfordſhire, near Swacliff. Sheve, or Shelve, Shropſhire, near Stiperſtones-Hill. Sheviock, Cornwall, near Trematon-Caſtle.

SHETLAND, the general name of a cluſter of iſlands, which lie about 100 miles NNE. of Caithneſsſhire, between 59. 56. and 61. 11. N. lat. They are reckoned to be forty-ſix in number, beſides forty ſmaller, called Holms, which produce paſture, and as many barren. The names of the principal are Mainland, Yell, Unſt, Fula, and Phederfroy. The deſcription already given of the largeſt, or MAINLAND, may be applied to the others, as to the particulars of climate, inhabitants, &c. and the ſame may be ſaid of the ORCADES. In all theſe iſlands the Aurora Boreales, or Merry Dancers, as they are called by the inhabitants, are very remarkable. They are the conſtant attendants of clear evenings, and prove great reliefs amid the gloom of the long winter nights. They commonly appear at twilight near the horizon, of a dun colour, approaching to yellow; ſometimes continuing in that ſtate for ſeveral hours, without any apparent motion; after which they break out into ſtreams of ſtronger light, ſpreading into columns, and altering ſlowly into ten thouſand different ſhapes, varying their colours from all the tints of yellow to the moſt obſcure ruſſet. They often cover the whole hemiſphere, and then make the moſt brilliant appearance. There is no light-houſe in all theſe iſlands, nor is there any chart of the country extant, that can be depended upon. So many ſhips, indeed, have been loſt on the E. coaſt of Shetland, eſpecially within the laſt 20 years, that it may be of eſſential ſervice to recommend the erection of a light-houſe, on Noſs, a ſmall iſland, E. of Breſſay. Of theſe, ſome of the moſt remarkable caſes are the following.—In 1775, a Liverpool ſhip, only 2 men ſaved out of 24. In 1776, the Ceres, of London, a Greenland ſhip, loſt with her whole crew. In 1779, a Dutch Greenland ſhip loſt, only one of the crew ſaved. In 1780, a Ruſſian man of war, of 36 guns, only five men ſaved. In 1786, the Concordia, a Daniſh Eaſt-India ſhip, with a valuable cargo, outward-bound, only 15 of the crew ſaved. In 1789, a Dutch Greenland ſhip, only five of the crew ſaved. Shetland, with Orkney, forms one of the counties of Scotland. Lerwick is the capital.

Shibden, Yorkſhire, NE. of Halifax. Shibden, Yorkſ. near Barden-Tower and Chace. Shide, Iſle of Wight, in Weſt Medina. Shidfield, Hants, in Droxford pariſh.

*SHIELDS, S. and N. two very populous ſea-port towns, one in the county of Durham, and the other in Northumberland, remarkable for being the mart where ſhips take in their loading of coal, and where they make large quantities of ſalt, as alſo of glaſs. They are ſeated on the oppoſite ſides of the river Tyne, where there are conſtantly immenſe fleets of ſhipping, 10 miles E. of Newcaſtle.

SHIFNAL. See SHEFNAL.

Shifford, Oxfordſ. between Bampton and the Iſis. Shilbottle, Northumberl. between Warkworth and Alnwick. Shilbrook, Cheſhire, SE. of Northwich. Shilburnhaugh, Northumberland, near Yarrow. Shildon, Devonſhire, near Columbſtock. Shildraw, Durham, W. of Lumley Caſtle.

Shillelagh, in Wicklow, Leinſter; formerly noted for its timber and oak ſaplings.

Shillingford, Berks, in Benſington pariſh. Shillingford, Devonſ. between Exeter and Chudleigh. Shillingham, Cornwall, near Trematon Caſtle. Shilling-Park, Suſſex, E. of Blackdown-Hill. Shillingſton, Dorſetſ. near the Stour and Hambledon and Hodde-Hills. Shillington, Durham, NE. of Darlington. Shilton, Berks, 2 miles from Burford. Shilton, Devonſ. in Modbury pariſh. Shilton, Nottinghamſhire, S. of Newark. Shilton, Oxfordſ. S. of Burford. Shilton, Warwickſhire, near Coventry. Shilvington, Northumb. SW. of Morpeth. Shimpling, Norfolk, near Diſs. Shimpling, Suffolk, by Lavenham.

SHIN, LOCH, a lake in the SW. part of Sutherlandſhire, about 4 miles long, and one and a half wide. From it there iſſues a rapid ſtream, which flows into the Frith of Dornock.

Shinfield, Berkſhire, near Swallowfield.

SHINGEN, a river iſland, formed by the mouths of the Zambeſa, near the coaſt of Monomotapa, in Africa, about 40 leagues in circumference.

Shingey-Hall, Cambridgeſ. near Sawbridgeworth. Shingham, Norfolk, between Swaffham and Downham. Shin- gle-

SHEPHERD'S-TOWN, a town of Virginia.

Shephove, Hants, S. of Odiam. Shepiſter Devonſ. near Mevychurch. Shepley, Durham, near Egglelon. Shepley, Yorkſ. W. of Barneſley.

SHEPHERD ISLES, a cluſter of ſmall iſlands in the S. Sea, to the ſouthward of Malicollo. They are conſidered by ſome as belonging to the New Hebrides. Lat. 17. 0. S. lon. 168. 50. E.

SHEPPEY, an iſland of Kent, in the mouth of the Thames, ſeparated from the main land by a branch of the Medway, called the Eaſt Swale. It yields plenty of corn, and feeds numerous flocks of ſheep. A great number of marine botanical plants grow in the ſalt marſhes.

Shepſcombe, Glouceſ. in Painſwick pariſh. Shepton, Dorſetſ. SE. of Bridport. Shepton Beauchamp, Somerſ. NE. of Ilminſter.

* SHEPTON-MALLET, a town of Somerſetſhire, containing, with its populous pariſh, above 500 houſes and 9000 inhabitants, but the ſtreets are very narrow, ſteep, and irregular. It has a flouriſhing manufacture of ſecond-cloths, the principal material of which is fine Engliſh wool. In this, at preſent, about 4000 hands are daily employed; beſides which, there is a conſiderable manufacture of knit ſtockings. It is ſituated among hills, well-watered with rivulets for the clothiers' buſineſs, 17 miles SW. of Bath, and 114 W. of London. Market on Friday.

Shepton-Montague, Somerſ. S. of Bruton. Shepway, Kent, near Maidſtone. Shepway Croſs, Kent, between Weſtenhanger and Hithe. Sherbarn, near Durham. Sherbarn, Yorkſ. SW. of Scarborough. Sherbarn; ſee Skarnburn.

? SHERBORN, an ancient, large, and well inhabited town of Dorſetſhire, containing about 2000 inhabitants. It has a conſiderable manufacture of ſilk-throwing, as alſo of buttons, bone-lace, and haberdaſhery wares, and had formerly a great trade in medley cloth. It is very pleaſantly ſeated and watered by the river Parrot, which divides it into two parts. 40 miles W. by S. of Saliſbury, and 118 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

SHERBORN, a populous, well-inhabited town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, noted for its free-ſchool, as alſo for its orchards of a fine plum for preſerving, called wine ſour, which cannot be cultivated in any other place, and for its cherry orchards. A very high raiſed Roman way runs from hence to Aberford, which is four miles diſtant. It is ſituated at the conflux of the Wherfe and Ouſe, with a harbour for barges, 14 miles SW. of York, and 181 N. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Sherborn, Glouceſterſ. 3 miles from North Leech. Sherborn, Hants, near Eaſt Wortham. Sherborn, Oxfordſhire, 6 miles from Wallingford. Sherborn, SW. of Warwick. Sherborn Monks, or Weſt, and St. John's, Hants, N. of Baſingſtoke.

SHERBOROUGH, an Engliſh ſettlement in Guinea, at the mouth of Sherborough River, 100 miles SE. of Sierra-Leone. Lat. 6. 0. N. lon. 11. 0. W.

Sherbroke, Derbyſ. SE. of Bolſover-Caſtle.

SHERBURNE, a town in Nantucket.

Sherdelow, Bucks, in Amerſham pariſh. Shere, Surry, on the river Wey, near Albury. Shereford, Norfolk, near Fakenham. Sherenewton, Monmouthſ. W. of Chepſtow. Sherenton, E. of Glouceſter. Shereſby, Leiceſterſhire, NE. of Lutterworth. Sherfield, Hants, near Baſingſtoke. Sherfield, Hants, W. of Rumſey. Sherford, Devonſ. by the ſea, SW. of Dartmouth. Sherford, Warwickſhire, in Burton-Haſtings pariſh. Sherford-Bridge, Dorſetſhire, leads to Purbeck Iſle. Sheriff-Hales, Staffordſ. NW. of Tong-Caſtle. Sheriff Hutton, near York.

Sheriff Muir, a heath in Perthſhire, near the Grampian Mountains, famous for an undeciſive battle, fought here in 1715, between the royal army, under the Duke of Argyle, and the Pretender's forces, under the Earl of Mar.

Sheriffs-Naunton, Worceſ. N. of Perſhore. Shering, Eſſex. NW. of Harlow. Sheringham, Norfolk, by the ſea, W. of Cromer. Sherington, Bucks, near Newport-Pagnel. Sherington, Warwickſhire, NE. of Brailes. Sherington, Wilts, near the Wilbourn, E. of the Devereis.

Sherkin Iſland, in Cork, Munſter, SW. of Baltimore-Bay.

Shermanbury, Suſſex, W. of Twineham. Sherotten, Durham, near Hartlepool. Sherſton, Somerſetſ. W. of Somerton. Sherſton, Wilts, SW. of Malmſbury. Sherſton, Yorkſ. E. of Wakefield. Sherſton-Rock, Glouceſ. in the Severn, near Auſt-Paſſage. Sherwell, Devonſhire, NE. of Barnſtaple. Sherwood, a celebrated and extenſive foreſt, taking in almoſt all the W. part of Nottinghamſhire. It is now ſtript of its woods, but, in ſome parts of it, coal is obtained. Here are alſo ſeveral parks and fine ſeats.

of

Sherwood, in Carlow, Leinſter.

Shete, a river in Kent, which runs into the Medway, Twyford Bridge. Shetford, Oxfordſhire, near Swacliff. Sheve, or Shelve, Shropſhire, near Stiperſtones-Hill. Sheviock, Cornwall, near Trematon-Caſtle.

SHETLAND, the general name of a cluſter of iſlands, which lie about 100 miles NNE. of Caithneſsſhire, between 59. 56. and 61. 11. N. lat. They are reckoned to be forty-ſix in number, beſides forty ſmaller, called Holms, which produce paſture, and as many barren. The names of the principal are Mainland, Yell, Unſt, Fula, and Phederoy. The deſcription already given of the largeſt, or MAINLAND, may be applied to the others, as to the particulars of climate, inhabitants, &c. and the ſame may be ſaid of the ORCADES. In all theſe iſlands the Aurora Borealis, or Merry Dancers, as they are called by the inhabitants, are very remarkable. They are the conſtant attendants of clear evenings, and prove great reliefs amid the gloom of the long winter nights. They commonly appear at twilight near the horizon, of a dun colour, approaching to yellow; ſometimes continuing in that ſtate for ſeveral hours, without any apparent motion; after which they break out into ſtreams of ſtronger light, ſpreading into columns, and altering ſlowly into ten thouſand different ſhapes, varying their colours from all the tints of yellow to the moſt obſcure ruſſet. They often cover the whole hemiſphere, and then make the moſt brilliant appearance. There is no light-houſe in all theſe iſlands, nor is there any chart of the county extant, that can be depended upon. So many ſhips, indeed, have been loſt on the E. coaſt of Shetland, eſpecially within the laſt 20 years, that it may be of eſſential ſervice to recommend the erection of a light-houſe, on Noſs, a ſmall iſland, E. of Breſſay. Of theſe, one of the moſt remarkable caſes are the following.—In 1775, a Liverpool ſhip, only 2 men ſaved out of 24. In 1776, the Ceres, of London, a Greenland ſhip, loſt with her whole crew. In 1779, a Dutch Greenland ſhip loſt, only one of the crew ſaved. In 1780, a Ruſſian man of war, of 36 guns, only five men ſaved. In 1786, the Concordia, a Daniſh Eaſt-India ſhip, with a valuable cargo, outward-bound, only 15 of the crew ſaved. In 1789, a Dutch Greenland ſhip, only five of the crew ſaved. Shetland, with Orkney, forms one of the counties of Scotland. Lerwick is the capital.

Shibden, Yorkſhire, NE. of Halifax. Shibden, Yorkſ. near Barden-Tower and Chace. Shide, Iſle of Wight, in Weſt Medina. Shidfield, Hants, in Droxford pariſh.

SHIELDS, S. and N. two very populous ſea-port towns, one in the county of Durham, and the other in Northumberland, remarkable for being the mart where ſhips take in their loading of coal, and where they make large quantities of ſalt, as alſo of glaſs. They are ſeated on the oppoſite ſides of the river Tyne, where there are conſtantly immenſe fleets of ſhipping, 10 miles E. of Newcaſtle.

SHIFNAL. See SHEFNAL.

Shifford, Oxfordſ. between Bampton and the Iſis. Shilbottle, Northumberl. between Warkworth and Alnwick. Shilbrook, Cheſhire, SE. of Northwich. Shilburnhaugh, Northumberland, near Yarrow. Shildon, Devonſhire, near Columbſtock. Shildraw, Durham, W. of Lumley Caſtle.

Shillelagh, in Wicklow, Leinſter; formerly noted for its timber and oak ſaplings.

Shillingford, Berks, in Benſington pariſh. Shillingford, Devonſ. between Exeter and Chudleigh. Shillingham, Cornwall, near Trematon-Caſtle. Shilling-Park, Suſſex, E. of Blackdown-Hill. Shillingſton, Dorſetſ. near the Stour and Hambledon and Hodde-Hills. Shillington, Durham, NE. of Darlington. Shilton, Berks, 2 miles from Burford. Shilton, Devonſ. in Modbury pariſh. Shilton, Nottinghamſhire, S. of Newark. Shilton, Oxfordſ. S. of Burford. Shilton, Warwickſhire, near Coventry. Shilvington, Northumb. SW. of Morpeth. Shimpling, Norfolk, near Diſs. Shimpling, Suffolk, by Lavenham.

SHIN, LOCH, a lake in the SW. part of Sutherlandſhire, about 4 miles long, and one and a half wide. From it there iſſues a rapid ſtream, which flows into the Frith of Dornock.

Shinfield, Berkſhire, near Swallowfield.

SHINGEN, a river iſland, formed by the mouths of the Zambeſa, near the coaſt of Monomotapa, in Africa, about 40 leagues in circumference.

Shingey-Hall, Cambridgeſ. near Sawbridgeworth. Shingham, Norfolk, between Swaffham and Downham. Shin- glegle-Hall, Eſſex, near Epping. Shingles, Iſle of Wight, rocks in the ſea, off the W. corner. Shingley, Kent, in the pariſh of Goudhurſt. Shinkley, near Durham, on the Wear.

Shinrone in King's County, Leinſter.

Shinton, Shropſ. near Stottesdon. Shipborn, Kent, near Fair Lawn. Shipdam, Norfolk, NE. of Walton. Shipham, Somerſ. N. of Axbridge. Shiplake, Oxfordſ. by the Thames, two miles S. of Henley. Shipley, Derbyſ. near the Erwaſh, S. of Codnor Caſtle. Shipley, Northumberl. N. of Alnwick. Shipley, Shropſ. NE. of Bridgenorth. Shipley, Suſſex, W. of Grinſtead-Park. Shipley, Yorkſ. near the ſea, N. of Hornſey. Shipley, Yorkſ. N. of Bradford. Shipley, Yorkſ. S. of Almondbury.

SHIPPENSBURG, a town of Pennſylvania.

* SHIPTON, or SHIPSTON, a neat, little town in Worceſterſ. (inſulated, however, in Warwickſhire) which Camden calls an ancient market for ſheep. It has a declining manufacture of ſhags, and is ſeated on the river Stour, 11 miles SSW. of Stratford-upon-Avon, and 83 NW. of London. Market on Friday.

Shipton, Berks, near Abingdon. Shipton, Buckingh. near Quainton. Shipton, Dorſetſ. 2 miles NE. of Burton. Shipton, Hants, S. of Tidworth. Shipton, Shropſ. NE. of Purſlow. Shipton, Shropſ. NW. of Prior's Ditton. Shipton, Yorkſ. NW. of Market-Wighton. Shipton, near York. Shipton, NW. of York. Shipton, Moigne, Glouceſ. 3 miles S. of Tetbury. Shipton-Montacute, Somerſ. near Wincanton. Shipton, Olave and Solace, Glouceſterſ. E. of Doddeſwell. Shipton under-Wichwood, Oxfordſh. NE. of Burford. Shipton-upon-Charwell, Oxfordſ. NE. of Woodſtock. Shirborn, a river in Warwickſhire, which runs into the Sow at Whitby.

Shircock, in Cavan, Ulſter.

Shirehampton, Glouceſ. in the pariſh of Weſbury on Trin. Shire-Head, Lancaſ. in Amounderneſs, near the ſea. Shire-Oaks, Nottingh. a hamlet of Worksop. Shire-Oaks, Staff. between Walſal and Lichfield. Shire Oaks, Wilts, between Box and Coldaſton. Shirland, Derbyſ. in the pariſh of Alfreton. Shirley, Derbyſ. SE. of Aſhbourn. Shirley, Surry, E. of Croydon.

SHIRON, a town of Thibet, 120 miles N. of Catmandu.

Shirtlington-Hall, Northumb. S. of Beltingham.

SHIRVAN, or SCHIRVAN, a province of Perſia, bounded on the N. by Dageſtan, on the E. and SE. by the Caſpian Sea, on the SW. by Erivan, and on the W. by Georgia; about 150 miles in length, and 90 in breadth. The ſoil is extremely fertile. The inhabitants draw with buffaloes inſtead of horſes, feeding them with fenugreek. This country was part of the ancient Albania. Scamachie is the capital.

Shiſtock, or Shuſtoke, Warwickſ. NE. of Coleſhil. Shitlington, Bedfordſ. near Flitton. Shitlington, Yorkſ. W. of Wakefield. Shitterford, Staffordſ. W. of Kidderminſter. Shitteſtones-Hill, Shropſ. NE. of Ludlow. Shitterton, Dorſetſ. in the pariſh of Bere-Regis.

SHOALS, ISLES OF, in N. America, on the coaſt of New Hampſhire. They lie very conveniently for the cod-fiſhery, which was formerly carried on here to great advantage; but the inhabitants are now few and poor.

Shobden, Heref. N. of Pembridge. Shobnal, Staff. near Burton-upon-Trent. Shobrook, Devonſ. near Crediton. Shobury, N. and S. two villages in Eſſex, near the mouth of the Thames, and oppoſite the Buoy of the Nore. Hence a point of land called Shodbury-Neſs, which projects into the ſea. Shoelach, Cheſ. on the Dee, W. of Malpas. Shoflot, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Shofton, Northumberl. by the ſea, S. of Bamburgh.

SHOGLE, a large, but diſagreeable town of Syria, ſeated on the river Orontes, over which there is a bridge of 13 arches, 45 miles SW. of Aleppo. There is a good caravanſary here, where every traveller is ſupplied with a competent portion of bread, broth, and meat.

Sholand, Kent, near Newnham. Sholand, Surry, near Puttenham. Shooter's-Hill, a village of Kent, ſituated on a hill ſo called, 8 miles ESE. of London, beyond Blackheath, on the road to Dartford. From this hill there is a noble view of London, and into Eſſex, Kent, Surry, and even part of Suſſex. The Thames alſo makes a magnificent appearance from it. Shoot up-Hill, Middleſex, near Kilburn. Shopland, Eſſex, contiguous to South-Church, Prittlewell, Sutton, and Barling. Shoreham, Kent, by the Derwent, 4 miles NW. of Sevenoaks.

* SHOREHAM, a populous town of Suſſex, chiefly noted for ſhip building, having a tide harbour for veſſels of conſiderable burden, which is not ſafe, as the ſands are frequently ſhifting. It commands the mouth of the river Adur, commonly called New Shoreham, to diſtinguiſh it from the Old, which lies near it, and rd is now much decayed. It is 16 miles NW. of Newhaven, and 56 S. by W. London. Market on Saturday.

SHOREHAM, a town of Vermont.

Shorewell, N. and S. Iſle of Wight, in Weſt Medina. Shorland, Kent, by Eaſtchurch, N. of the Iſle of Sheppy. Shortland, Kent, in Pluckley pariſh. Shorlet-coat, Shropſ. near Bridgnorth. Shory, Heref. S. of Wigmore Caſtle. Shory, Northumb. on the South Tyne, near Ochcheſter. Shorne, Kent, 3 miles and a half SE. of Graveſend. Shortgrave, Eſſex, 2 miles from Saffron Walden. Shorty, Warw. near Coventry. Shotenden, Kent, near Lees Court. Shotery, Warw. near Stratford-upon-Avon. Shotley, Derbyſ. near Wirkſworth. Shotley, Suffolk, near Orwell-Haven. Shotover-Foreſt, and Hills, on the E. and NE. ſides of Oxford. It is noted for its large timber, for the beſt ochre in the world, for a ſort of earth which takes greaſe out of clothes, and for an excellent kind of tobacco-pipe clay. Shotover, Mill, Surry, near Haſlemere. Shotteſbrook, Berks, near Whitewaltham. Shotteſham, Suff. near Woodridge. Shotteſham, All-Saints, St. Olph, and St. Martin's, Norf. near Saxingham. Shotteſwell, Warwickſ. near Warmington. Shotton, Durham, NW. of Caindrop. Shotton, Durham, S. of Hardwick. Shotton, Northumb. E. of Oglebattle. Shotton, Shropſhire, S. of Wem. Shotwich, and Shotwick Townlet, NW. of Cheſter, on the Dee. Shouldby, Leic. near Grimſton and Saxilby. Shouldham, Norfolk, SE. of Seechy. Shoyſwell, Suff. E. of Burwaſh. Shranel, Worceſ. near Eveſham. Shrawarden, W. of Shrewſbury, near the Severn. Shrawley, Worceſterſ. W. of Omberſley, on the Severn. Shrawton, Wilts, NW. of Stonehenge. Shredicot, Staffordſ. NW. of Penkridge. Shrewley, Warw. in the pariſh of Hatton.

* SHREWSBURY, a large and flouriſhing town of Shropſhire, capital of the county, ſo called from the Saxon word Scrobbeſberig, which ſignifies a town built on a woody hill. It is well built, well lighted, and well paved, and contains about 2000 houſes, and 12,000 inhabitants. It is the chief mart for a coarſe kind of woollen cloth made in Montgomeryſhire, called Welſh webs, which are bought up in all parts of the country, as much as come to about 10001. a week, and dreſſed here, whence they are ſent for exportation, principally to America and Flanders. Much of the Welſh flannel is alſo bought at Welſhpool by the drapers of this place, which is indeed a common mart for all ſorts of Welſh commodities. It is alſo famous for its excellent brawn, which is ſent to various parts of the kingdom. One great ornament of this town is the Quarry, one of the fineſt promenades in England. It takes in 20 acres, is ſhaded with a double row of lime trees, and has a fine double alcove in the centre, with ſeats. About 20 veſſels are conſtantly employed on the river Severn, between Shrewſbury, Glouceſter, and Briſtol. Shrewſbury has been long famous for its excellent brawn, and from the plenty of ſalmon, other fiſh, and proviſions of all ſorts; is full of genteel families. It is beautifully ſituated in a ſort of horſe-ſhoe, formed by the river Severn, 36 miles W. of Lichfield, and 160 NW. of London. Lat. 52. 43. N. lon. 2. 41. W. Markets for corn, cattle, and proviſions, on Wedneſday and Saturday; and on Thurſday for Welſh cottons, friezes, and flannels. Fairs, on Saturday after March 15; Wedneſday after Eaſter week; Wedneſday before Holy Thurſday; July 3d; Auguſt 12th; October 2d; and December 12th.

SHREWSBURY, a large and populous town of New Jerſey, one of the oldeſt in the ſtate; alſo a river of New Jerſey, which runs into the ſea, 3 miles S. of Sandy Hook; a town of Pennſylvania; and a town of Maſſachuſetts.

Shrigleigh, Cheſhire, in Macclesfield Foreſt. Shripney, Suſſex, W. of Yapton. Shrivenham, Berks, near Highworth, in Wilts. Shropham, Norf. near Thetford.

SHROPSHIRE, or SALOP, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Cheſh. and a detached part of Flintſhire; on the E. by Staffordſhire; on the SE. by Worceſterſhire; on the S. by Herefordſhire; on the SW. by Radnorſhire; and on the W. by the counties of Montgomery and Denbigh. It extends upwards of 40 miles in length from N. to S. and is divided into 15 hundreds, which contain 16 market-towns, 170 pariſhes, 615 villages, and about 113,680 inhabitants. The air is ſalubrious, and not very ſharp, except on the hills. The ſoil is generally fruitful, eſpecially in the northern and eaſtern parts, which produce plenty of wheat and barley; but the ſouthern and weſtern being mountainous, are leſs fertile, yet yield ſufficient paſture for ſheep and cattle. There are mines of lead, copper, iron, limeſtone, freeſtone, pipe-clay, and inexhauſtible coal-pits. Over moſt of the coal lies a ſtratum of a blackiſh, hard, porous ſubſtance, containing great quantities of bitumen, which being ground to powder powder in horſe-mills, and boiled in copperas of water, a bituminous matter ſwims on the ſurface, that, by evaporation, is brought to the conſiſtence of pitch; or by the help of an oil diſtilled from the ſame ſubſtance, and mixed with it, may be thinned to a ſort of tar; both theſe ſubſtances ſerve particularly for caulking of ſhips, as well, if not better, than pitch and tar, it being leſs liable to crack. The wool of many parts of this country is remarkably fine. The principal rivers are the Severn, (which is navigable in every quarter of the county) and the Tend. The capital is Shrewſbury.

Shroughton, Northamptonſhire, 2 miles E. of Ayno. Shroughton, or Ewrin Courtney, Dorſetſ. E. of Stourminſter. Shrubb's-Hill, Surry, in Egham pariſh.

Shrule, in Mayo, Connaught.

Shuckborough, Upper and Lower, Warwickſ. SE. and E. of Southam. Shudely, Glouceſ. near Winchcomb. Shugborough, E. of Stafford. Shullington, Suſſex, N. of Michelgrove. Shurdington, Glouceſ. 5 miles from Cheltenham. Shurdington, Little and Great, Glouceſterſ. near Badgworth. Shurlach, Cheſhire, near Northwich. Shute, Devonſ. SW. of Axminſter. Shutford, Oxfordſ. SW. of Banbury. Shuthanger, Glouceſterſ. a hamlet in the pariſh of Turning. Shutlingbaw-Hill, Cheſhire, in Macclesfield-Foreſt. Shuttend, Staffordſ. near King's Swinford. Shuttington, Warwickſ. near Seckington. Shuttleworth, Lancaſ. NE. of Blackburn. Shuttleworth, Lower, Cheſhire, 3 miles from Macclesfield.

SIAM, a kingdom of Aſia, bounded on the N. by that of Ava, on the E. by Cambodia and Laos, on the S. by a gulf of the ſame name and Malaccha, and on the W. by the Bay of Bengal. It extends about 800 miles in length, and from 200 to 350 in breadth. It is divided into the Higher and Lower, and the ſoil produces plenty of rice, cotton, and a variety of fruits, different from thoſe in Europe. The animals are alſo particular to thoſe parts of the world. Some French authors, indeed, have extolled it as the fineſt and richeſt country in the world. The inhabitants, both men and women, go almoſt naked, except the wealthy, who wear rich garments. The king ſhows himſelf but once a year to the common people. He is proprietor of all the lands in the country, and no one can buy any merchandiſe till he has the choice of them. He generally keeps a numerous army, among which are 1000 elephants. It is a flat country, which, in the rainy ſeaſon, is overflowed; for which reaſon, moſt of the houſes are built on pillars, and they have no communication for ſome months but by boats. It conſiſts of cultivated and uncultivated land, moſt of it being of the latter, and covered with wood. There are mines of gold, ſilver, tin, and copper, and they have plenty of pepper, aloes, benjamin and muſk. The moſt profitable trees are thoſe which produce cotton, oil, and varniſh. The women are the only merchants in buying goods, the men being generally maintained by the induſtry of their wives. The Europeans that come there to trade, it is ſaid, generally take wives for the time they ſtay, who are more leſs in eſteem when the men are gone. The mandarins, that is, the principal men who daily attend the palace, are 3000 in number, and are whipt very ſeverely with ſplit rattans for the leaſt fault. Even the ladies are not exempted from this puniſhment; and they are ſo far from being aſhamed of it, that they expoſe their backs as they go along the ſtreets, to ſhow what they have undergone, thinking it an honour to be taken notice of by ſo great a king. The inhabitants have large round heads, little noſes, plump lips, and black ſparkling eyes. Both ſexes go bare-headed, and the men are of an olive colour, with little beards; but the women are of a ſtraw complexion, and ſome have their cheeks a little red. They have abundance of wild animals in the woods, as elephants, rhinoceroſes, leopards, and tigers. Their tame cattle are beeves, buffaloes, and hogs, of which they have plenty about their farms; beſide which, there are large and dangerous crocodiles, and ſerpents 30 feet long. Their temples and prieſts are very numerous: the latter are diſtinguiſhed from the laity by an orange coloured garment, and they keep their heads, beards, and eyebrows, cloſe ſhaved. The roofs of their temples are gilded, and moſt of their ſtatues, and other caſt works, are of gold; yet they have ſought of late, in vain, for mines either of gold or ſilver. They have ſchools for the education of their children, and there is ſcarce a man among them but what can read and write. Siam, Odlam, Juthia, or Juda, is the capital.

SIARA, a town and captainſhip on the coaſt of Braſil, in lat. 3. 15. S.

Sibbene, Northumb. W. of Fetherſton haugh. Sibberds, Ferris, Grove, and Lodge, Oxfordſ. near Swacliff. Sibberſ. SW. of Shrewſbury. Sibbertſwood, Sibbertſcold, Kent, NE. of Elham.

SIBERIA, a large country, comprehen-g in its moſt extenſive ſenſe, all the rthern part of the Ruſſian empire in ſia; but originally it denoted only the part of the government of Tobolſki. is bounded on the E. by the Eaſtern cean, on the S. by Tartary, on the W. Ruſſia, and on the N. by the Frozen cean. It is about 3000 miles in length om E. to W. and 1200 in breadth from to S. The S. part produces all the ceſſaries of life; but the N. part is exmely cold, almoſt uncultivated, and nſequently thin of people. The prinal riches of Siberia conſiſt of fine ſkins d furs. Tobolſki is the capital town, ere the viceroy reſides. The inhabits are principally of three ſorts, Pans, or the original natives of the coun; Mahometans; and Ruſſians. The mer dwell in foreſts in the winter, and the ſummer on the banks of rivers. heir garments are the ſkins of wild beaſts. h.y have bows, arrows, a knife, and a tle, in which all their riches conſiſt. hey make uſe of rein-deer and dogs, ſtead of horſes, to draw their ſledges. hey all live in huts, which they remove om place to place. Thoſe in the uthern parts are not much more poe; but they have horſes with which ey go a hunting, and their houſes, ough poor, are not ſhifted from place to ace. The Ruſſians ſettled here are much e ſame as in their native country. It is rough this vaſt tract of land the Ruſſian ravans travel every year, when they ry their merchandiſe to China. The incipal rivers are the Oby, Lena, Irtyſh, niſei, and Okota. The weſtern part of beria is compriſed in the Ruſſian governnts of Tobolſk and Kolyvan; all the ſtern part is contained in the governnt of Irkutzk; theſe are ſubdivided o ſmaller diſtricts. Siberia is the place which criminals, as well as perſons unr the diſpleaſure of the court, are comnly baniſhed.

Sibſon, Huntingdonſ. between Cheſterand Samford. Sibſton, Leic. W. of worth. Sibton, Suff. SW. of Yoxford. borp, Huntingdonſ. SE. of Spaldg. Sibthorp, Nottinghamſ. between ford and Normanton. Sibton, Sheales, thumberland, SW. of Hexham.

Sibu, one of the Manilla iſlands, about leagues in circumference. Its principroduction is the borona, a ſpecies of h which ſerves inſtead of rice; alſo on, tobacco, wax, and civet. Its ipal town, containing about 5000 s, is of the ſame name. Lat. 10. N. lon. 122. E.

SICAL, a town of Yucatan, in Mexico, ſituated on the N. coaſt, about 70 miles WNW. of Merida, ſituated on the Demer.

SICILY, an iſland of the Mediterranean Sea, almoſt in the form of a triangle, terminating in three points or capes; that which is neareſt Italy, is called Capo del Faro; that which regards the Morea, Capo Paſſaro; and the third, which points to Africa, Capo-di-Boco. Sicily is ſeparated from the kingdom of Naples by a narrow ſtrait, called the Faro, 7 miles acroſs; and as Meſſina is ſeated on it, it is called the Faro-di-Meſſina. The two kingdoms of Naples and Sicily have nearly the ſame climate, and the productions are much the ſame; but Sicily abounds much more in corn, particularly in the valleys of Noto and Mazara. The valley of Demona has more foreſts and fruit-trees than the two others. The quantity of corn and ſilk exported annually from this iſland is eſtimated at about 7 millions of ducats, of which, the article of ſilk produces one million. Sicily is divided into the valleys juſt mentioned, called Val-di-Demona, Val-di-Noto, and Val-di-Mazara. It is about 156 miles in length, and 85 in its mean breadth. Its produce not already mentioned, is wine, oil, ſilk, and excellent fruits. Sicily was originally planted by different colonies from Greece, but the Romans became its conquerors, and held it in ſubjection till the year 440, when the Vandals invaded this iſland. Theſe were driven away by Beliſarius, and it became a part of the eaſtern empire till the year 828. It was then conquered by the Saracens, who, in their turn, were driven out by Roger, the ſon of Tancred, a Norman prince, who took the title of Count of Sicily, in 1080. His ſon Roger united Sicily with Naples, and was crowned king of both Sicilies, in 1130. Charles, brother of St. Louis, conquered it from the Norman princes; but Peter, king of Arragon, claiming the kingdom, was received by the Sicilians with open arms, was crowned at Palermo, and tranſmitted Sicily to his deſcendants. Ferdinand V. united it with Naples. It is governed by a viceroy, who reſides at Palermo.

Sickling-Hall, Yorkſhire, W. of Wetherby. Sicklington, Upper, Yorkſhire, in Thornhill pariſh.

SIDDAPOUR, a town in the Myſore country.

Sidbury, Deveſ. N. of Sidmouth. Sidbury, Shropſ. near N. Cleabury. Sidcot, Somerſetſ. 16 miles from Briſtol, on the road to Exeter.

SIDDINGHAUSEN, a town of Paderborn, in Weſtphalia.

Siddington, Cheſhire, SW. of Macclesfield. Siddington, Glouceſ. a mile from Cirenceſter. Siddleham, Suſſex, N. of Selſey. Side, Glouceſ. adjoining Brimpſfield. Sidenhale, Warw. near Coventry. Sidenham, Kent, in Lewiſham pariſh. Sidenham, Oxfordſ. S. of Tame. Sidenham, North, Devonſhire, SE. of Lifton. Sidenham, South, Devonſhire, NW. of Taviſtock.

SIDEROCANSA, a town of Macedonia, 32 miles ESE. of Salonichi.

Sidewood-End, Surry, near Biſley. Sidington, Mary and Peter, Glouceſterſhire, by Cirenceſter. Sidlam, Surry, near Ryegate. Sidley, Suſſex, near Bexill. Sidmanton, Berks, near Newbury. Sidmanton, Hampſhire, near Kingſclere.

* SIDMOUTH, a ſea-port of Devonſ. ſituated, or rather emboſomed, between two hills, at the mouth of the river Sid, on a bay of the Engliſh Channel, 12 miles SE. of Exeter, and 158 W. by S. of London. It is a ſmall place, but was one of the moſt conſiderable towns in the county, before its harbour (now only frequented by fiſhing ſmacks) was choked up. As a watering-place, it is ſtill much frequented, the air being remarkably ſalubrious, and the ſituation well adapted to conſumptive invalids.

Sidney, Surry, near Awfold. Sidney, Suſſex, near Cuckfield.

SIDNEY COVE. See JACKSON, PORT.

SIDON, SAYD, or SEIDA, a ſea-port in Paleſtine, containing about 5000 inhabitants. It was anciently a place of great note, had an extenſive commerce, and is ſaid to be the place where glaſs was invented. Like all the other Turkiſh towns, it is ill built, and full of ruins, but has ſtill a conſiderable trade, and is the emporium of Damaſcus, and all the interior country. The French are, or were, till lately, the only Europeans here. The exports are ſilk, and raw and ſpun cottons. It is the reſidence of a Turkiſh baſhaw, and is 55 miles W. of Damaſcus.

SIDRA, an iſland of the Archipelago, lying between the Gulf of Napoli and that of Engia. Lat. 37. N. lon. 24. E.

SIDRA, a ſmall iſland, and a ſpacious gulf on the coaſt of Tripoly, anciently called Syrtis.

SIEGEBURGH, a town of Berg, in Weſtphalia.

SIEGEN, a town of Naſſau Siegen, in Weſtphalia, ſeated on a river of the ſame name.

SIENNA, a celebrated city of Italy, in Tuſcany, capital of the Sienneſe, containing about 17,000 inhabitants. It is upwards of 4 miles in circumference, and ſurrounded by an old wall. The Gothic cathedral is coated with a black and white marble, within and without, and the pavement is of Moſaic work. The houſes are of brick, and the ſtreets are paved with the ſame; and here is, or lately was, a famous univerſity, and an academy of the Intronati, founded in the 15th century. Sienna is adorned with a great number of palaces, fountains, and ſuperb churches, and with a magnificent hoſpital. The great area is round, and the houſes about it are of the ſame height, ſupported by piazzas, under which the people may walk in all weathers. In the middle is a baſin, which they can fill with water at any time, and repreſent a ſea fight with ſmall veſſels. The Italian language is taught here with ſuch purity, that a great many foreigners reſort to it on that account. Sienna was formerly a free republic, till conquered by the emperor, Charles V. in 1554, whoſe ſon, Philip II. king of Spain, ceded all parts, except the Stato-de-gli Præſidii, to Coſmo I. duke of Florence. It is ſeated on three eminences, in a healthy, fertile ſoil, 36 miles S. of Florence, and 105 N. by W. of Rome. Lat. 43. 10. N. lon. 11. 11. E.

SIENNESE, a duchy in Italy, on the Tuſcan Sea, about 55 miles in length, and as much in breadth. The ſoil is pretty fertile, eſpecially in mulberry trees, and there are ſeveral mineral ſprings. Sienna is the capital.

SIERRA LEONE, a large and fruitful country on the W. coaſt of Africa, ſo named, according to ſome authors, by the Portugueſe, on account of the mountains on this coaſt abounding with a great number of lions. Some extend its limits from the Grain Coaſt on the SE. to Cape Verga or Vega on the NW. that is, between 7 and 10 deg. N. lat. Others, however, confine the country between Cape Verga and Cape Tagrin.

SIERRA LEONE, called alſo RITONIS and TAGRIN, a great river of Africa, in the country of Guinea. Its ſource is not certain; but its mouth, in lat. 8. 15. N. lon. 12. 30. W. is 8 miles wide. In the open and plain country, on the banks of this river, the heat of the ſun, before the breeze ariſes, is almoſt intolerable; but as a refreſhing gale conſtantly ſprings up about noon, it renders the country very ſupportable. In 1791, an act of parliament ament was obtained, incorporating a mpany, called the Sierra Leone Comany, for the expreſs purpoſe of cultiting Weſt-India and other tropical proctions on the banks of this river, on nd purchaſed of the prince of the couy. The firſt ſettlers amounted to about 00 white perſons, beſide a number of ee blacks from Nova Scotia. The naves appeared to be extremely friendly, id a few natives, in 1792, had come work for the colony. On the ſetting of the rains, about the latter end of lay, the ſame year, a conſiderable dee of ſickneſs and mortality prevailed, caſioned chiefly by the inſufficiency of e temporary habitations, which could t be completed before the rains ſet in. hirty-five white perſons (of whom 14 ere ſoldiers) and many of the blacks, ed of this ſickneſs. The next year, e ſetting in of the rains was not proctive of the ſame fatal effects. The lonists were in good health, were all it into poſſeſſion of ſmall lots of land, id a new town, on a regular and exaded ſcale, was begun to be built. ſide the Nova Scotia blacks, a large rty of the natives were at work for the mpany, and the experiments in ſugar, tton, &c. appeared to be promiſing. he native chiefs and people continue to extremely friendly; and the comny's ſchools were regularly attended by wards of 300 children, who appear to ve made full as much improvement as common in European ſchools, under nilar circumſtances. The rice, cotton, id other articles in the company's plantions thrive exceedingly. The colony pears to be gradually improving and lvancing in every reſpect. The river ounds in fiſh, but is much infeſted ith alligators. The adjacent country oduces abundance of millet and rice; id the woods are filled with parrots various kinds, and other beautiful rds; ſerpents are found, ſome of very rge ſize; and numerous wild beaſts, ch as lions, tigers, elephants, wild boars, id monkeys.

SIERRA LEONE, or MOUNTAINS OF HE LIONS, mountains of Africa, which ivide Nigritia from Guinea, and are ſaid extend as far as Abyſſinia.

SIERRA MORENA, a chain of mountins in Spain, which divide Andaluſia om New Caſtile, and from a ſmall part f Eſtramadura.

SIFANTO, anciently SIPHNOS, an iſland f the Archipelago, to the W. of Paros. The air is ſo wholeſome here, that many of the inhabitants live to the age of 120, and their water, fruits, wild fowl, and poultry, are excellent, but more eſpecially the grapes. It is covered over with marble and granite, and they have lead mines, and yet it is one of the moſt fertile and beſt cultivated of theſe iſlands. The inhabitants employ themſelves in cultivating olive-trees and capers, and they have very good ſilk. They trade in figs, onions, wax, honey, ſtraw hats, ſeſamum, and calicoes. Here are 5 villages, and about 5000 inhabitants. Lat. 36. 37. N. lon. 25. 15. E.

Siffiverneſs, Herts, in Caldicot pariſh.

SIGEAN, a town in the dept. of the Aude, 9 miles S. of Narbonne. Near this place, Charles Martel defeated the Saracens in the year 1037.

SIGENBURG, a town of Upper Bavaria, ſituated on the Ambs.

SIGETH, a town of Hungary, 50 miles E. of Munkacs.

Sigelſthorp, Yorkſ. by Hornſey-Mere.

Sigbill, Northumb. SW. of Seaton Delaval.

Sigſton, Yorkſhire, 2 miles from Northallerton.

SIGTUNA and SIGTUND, towns of Upland, in Sweden.

SIGUENZA, a town in Old Caſtile, containing a cathedral, 3 churches, and between 7 and 800 houſes, with an univerſity, conſiſting of ſeveral colleges, founded in 1441, by Cardinal Ximenes. It is ſeated near the ſource of the river Henares, 60 miles NE. of Madrid.

Silcheſter, Hants, NE. of Kingſclere, a place of good repute in the time of the Romans, and where King Arthur was crowned, according to the Britiſh hiſtorians. Its ancient walls are yet in a great meaſure entire, and on the NE. ſide of it is a noble piece of antiquity, a Roman amphitheatre, exactly like that at Dorcheſter; it has, however, time out of mind, been converted into a yard for cattle, and a watering pond. Britiſh tiles, and Roman coins, are often dug up here. Sileby, Leiceſ. NE. of Mountſorrel. Sileby, Lincolnſhire, N. of Alford. Sileſburn, Warwickſhire, between Warwick and Alceſter.

SILESIA, a province or duchy of Germany, ſaid to contain (in the whole country) 180 cities and towns, 4000 villages, and 1,800,000 inhabitants. It is bounded on the N. by the marquiſate of Brandenburg and Poland, on the S. by Moravia and Hungary, on the E. by Poland, and on the W. by Lower Luſatia and Bohemia. It is about 274 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. The principal rivers are, the Oder, Viſtula, Neiſſe, Bober, Queis, Oppa, and Elſe. A long chain of mountains ſeparates Sileſia from Bohemia. There are mines of gold and ſilver; but they have not been worked for many years. There are alſo ſome precious ſtones, but too much time is required to obtain them. The higheſt mountain of Sileſia is called Zotenberg, ſituated in the principality of Schweidnitz, and is 104 miles in circumference. The moſt conſiderable ſilver mines, at preſent, are at Reitſtein, in the principality of Brieg. There are alſo mines of lead, copper, and iron, and quarries of various ſtones, beſides antimony, ſaltpetre, ſulphur, alum, vitriol, quickſilver, &c. The principal manufacture is linen cloth; and they have alſo ſome woollen manufactories and glaſs-houſes. They feed a great number of cattle, have large ſtuds of horſes, and plenty of the common ſorts of game in the woods. They have but few lynxes and bears, and fewer wolves, becauſe they give a ducat a head for every one that is killed. They have a great many lakes, full of pike, carp, and other good fiſh; alſo plenty of bees, which produce a great deal of honey and wax. They have wheat, barley, oats, millet-ſeed, and turnips, ſufficient for the uſe of the inhabitants; in ſome places they cultivate ſaffron; and the culture of ſilk is likely to be carried to its utmoſt extent. Their wine is very poor, and therefore they turn it moſtly into vinegar. Sileſia is divided into the Upper and Lower. In the Upper, the inhabitants are generally Romaniſts, ſpeaking the Polliſh language; and in the lower, almoſt all Proteſtants, and ſpeak their mother tongue. Sileſia is divided into 19 principalities, and 7 free ſtates, without comprehending the county of Glatz. The greater part of this country was ceded to the king of Pruſſia, in 1742, by the treaty of Breſlaw, the empreſs reſerving to herſelf only the principality of Teſchen; the part of the principalities of Troppau and Jaggerndorf beyond the Oppa; the part of the principality of Neiſſe, bordering on Moravia; and a ſmall diſtrict bordering on Moravia; with ſome frontier towns. Breſlaw is the capital of Pruſſian, and Troppau of Bohemian Sileſia.

Silforth, Yorkſhire, E. of Pickering-Foreſt.

SILISTRIA, or DRISTRA, a town of Bulgaria, ſeated near the Danube.

Silk, Lincolnſhire, S. of Sleaford. Silkeſton, Yorkſhire, SW. of Barneſley. Silkeſworth, Durham, SW. of Wearmouth. Silland, Dorſetſhire, SILLABAR, or CELLEBAR, a ſea-port of Sumatra, 50 miles SSE. of Bencooken.

SILLE-LE GUILLAUME, a town in the department of Sarte, 18 miles NW. of Le Mans.

Silleth, Cumb. in Abbey-Holm parish. Silmiſton, Suſſex. Silſden, Yorkſhire, near Holden-Beck. Silſey, Yorkſhire, NW. of Scarborough.

* Silſo, or Sivilſho, between Bedford and Luton.

Silton, Dorſetſhire, near Mere Silton, Dorſetſ. 2 miles and a half from Gillingham. Silton, Yorkſ. near Sigſton-Caſtle.

Silvermines, in Tipperary, Munſter, 77 miles from Dublin. Here are ſome lead mines, with a mixture of ſilver, which, with thoſe at Miltown, in Kerry, near the harbour of Caſtlemain, are the only ones in Ireland that are wrought to any conſiderable extent.

Silverſide, Cumberland, near Naworth-Caſtle. Silverſtreet, Herts, NW. of Theobalds. Silverton, Devonſhire, near Bradninch. Its rectory is reckoned the beſt living in the county. Silverton, Northamptonſhire, S. of Whittlewood-Foreſt. Silvington, Shropſhire, SE. of Brown-Clee-Hill.

SILVES, a town of Algarve, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, 15 miles ENE. of Lagos.

SIMANCAS, a town of Leon, ſituated on the Douro, 8 miles SW. of Valladolid.

SIMBIRSK, a government of Ruſſia, N. of the government of Saratov, and formerly a province of the kingdom of Caſan. The capital of the ſame name, is ſeated on the river Volga, 330 miles ESE. of Moſcow.

SIMMEREN, a town and duchy in the palatinate of the Rhine, 26 miles SSW. of Coblentz.

Simmington, Wilts, a mile SE. of Melkſham. Simondley, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Simondſborough, Dorſetſ. near Bridport, on the river Simene. Simonſburn-Caſtle, Northumb. SW. of Swinburn-Caſtle. Simondſhall, Glouceſterſ. in the pariſh of Wotton-under-Edge. Simondſide, Herts, by Hatfield. Simondſide-Hill, Northumb. NW. of Morpeth. Simon-Seat, Yorkſhire, N. of Barden-Tower.

SIMON'S, ST. See FREDERICA.

SIMONTORNYA, a town of Tolna, in Hungary, ſituated on the Sarand, 58 miles SSW. of Buda.

Simonſton, Lanc. near Hapton-Tower and Pendle-Hill. Simondſwood, Lanc. a foreſt SE. of Ormſkirk. Simpſon, Bucks, near Fenny-Stratford.

SINAI

SINAI, a mountain in Arabria Petræa, in a peninſula formed by the two arms of the Red Sea. The Mahometans hold it in great veneration; and here the Chriſtians have a monaſtery, which formerly contained a great number of monks, and there were a great number of little chapels and cells for hermits. The monaſtery is ſurrounded by a high wall, and thoſe that go in and out, are let down or drawn up in baſkets. It is 144 miles ESE. of Suez.

SINGAPORA, a promontory at the S. extremity of the peninſula of Malacca, which, with the Malacca coaſt, form the ſtrait of Singapore. Lat. 1. 10. N. lon. 103. 30. E.

SINDE. See INDUS and TATTA.

Sinderby, Yorkſ. W. of Thirſk. Sinſrop, Northumb. SW. of Hexham.

SINDY, a province of Hindooſtan, bounded on the W. by Makran, a province of Perſia; on the N. by the territories of the king of Candahar; on the NE. by thoſe of the Seiks; on the E. by the ſandy deſert; and on the SE. by Cutch. It extends along the courſe of the river Sinde, or Indus, from its mouth to the frontiers of Moultan. Reckoned that way, it is about 300 miles long; and its breadth, in its wideſt part is about 160. In many particulars of ſoil and climate, and in the general appearance of the ſurface, Sindy not a little reſembles Egypt; the lower part of it being compoſed of rich vegetable mould, and extended into a wide delta; while the upper part is a narrow ſlip of country, confined on the Perſian ſide by a ridge of mountains, and on the other by a ſandy deſert, the river Indus, equal at leaſt to the Nile, winding through the midſt of this level valley, and annually overflowing it. During great part of the SW. monſoon, or our ſummer quarter, which is the rainy ſeaſon in moſt other parts of India, the atmoſphere is here generally clouded, but no rain falls, except very near the ſea. Indeed, very few ſhowers fall during the whole year; and, at the time when Capt. Hamilton viſited Tatta, no rain had fallen for 3 years before. Owing to this, and the neighbourhood of the ſandy deſerts, which bound it on the E. and on the NW. the heats are ſo violent, and the winds from thoſe quarters ſo pernicious, that the houſes are contrived ſo as to be occaſionally ventilated by means of apertures on the tops of them, reſembling the funnels of ſmall chimneys. When the hot winds prevail, the windows are cloſely ſhut, by which the hotteſt part of the current of the air (that neareſt the ſurface) is excluded; and a cooler part, becauſe more elevated, deſcends into the houſe through the funnels. By this contrivance alſo, vaſt clouds of duſt are excluded; the entrance of which would alone be ſufficient to render the houſes uninhabitable. The roofs are compoſed of thick layers of earth inſtead of terraces. Few countries are more unwholeſome to European conſtitutions, particularly the lower part of the delta. The prince is a Mahometan, tributary to the King of Candahar. He reſides at Hydrabad, although Tatta is the capital. This province was conquered, in 1739, by Nadir Shah from the Great Mogul, and retained by Abdallah, when he ſeized the other provinces which compoſe the empire of Candahar. The Hindoos, who were the original inhabitants of Sindy, and were reckoned, in Captain Hamilton's time, to outnumber the Mahometans ten to one, are treated with great rigour by their Mahometan governors, and are not permitted to erect any pagodas, or places of worſhip; and this ſeverity drives vaſt numbers of them into other countries. The inland parts of Sindy produce ſalt, petre, ſal-ammoniac, borax, bezoar, lapis-lazuli, and raw ſilk. They have alſo manufactures of cotton and ſilk of various kinds; and they make fine cabinets, inlaid with ivory, and finely lacquered. They alſo export great quantities of butter, clarified, and wrapped up in duppas, made of the hides of cattle. The women wear hoops of ivory on both their arms and legs, and when they die, they are burnt with them. They have large black cattle, excellent mutton, and ſmall, hardy horſes. Their wild animals are deer, hares, antelopes, and foxes, which they hunt with dogs, leopards, and a ſmall fierce creature called ſhiahguſh.

SINGANFOU, or SINGAN, a city of China, of the firſt rank, capital of the province of Chenſi. Next to Pekin, this is the largeſt, and moſt populous, and commercial city of China, and was for ſeveral ages the ſeat of the Chineſe emperors. They breed up mules here in great numbers, and ſend them to Pekin. Lat. 34. 46. N. lon. 108. 13. E.

Singland, in Limerick, Munſter.

Singleſcale, Northampſ. by Thorney-Croſs and Can Water. Singleton, Suſſex, near E. and W. Dean. Singleton, Great and Little, Lancaſ. N. of Marton-Mere and Moſs.

SINGO, a town in Macedonia, ſituated on the Gulf of Monte Santo.

SINGOR, a ſea-port of Siam, on the E. coaſt of Malacca. Lat. 6. 40. N.

SINIGAGLIA, a ſea-port of Urbino, with two harbours, 28 miles ESE. of Urbino.

Sinkleborough, Bucks, in the pariſh of Great Horwood. Sinklees, Herts, near Watford. Sinnington, Yorkſhire, near Kirby-Moorſide. Sinodun-Hill, Berks, on the Thames, near Brightwell.

SINOPE, or SINOB, a ſea-port of Kiutaja, in Natolia, the birth-place of Diogenes, the famous cynic. The inhabitants, who are Turks, will not admit any Jews to reſide here, and the Greeks live in the ſuburbs. It is ſeated on an iſthmus of a peninſula, in the Black Sea, with two good harbours, 280 miles E. of Conſtantinople.

SINTZHEIM, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine, 13 miles SSE. of Heidelberg.

SION, or SITTEN, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of the Vallais, ſeated on a river of the ſame name, which ſoon after falls into the Rhone. It contains ſix churches, with ſome convents, a college, and no leſs than 3 epiſcopal palaces, all ſtanding one above the other. The higheſt, called Tourbillon, is old, ruinous, and deſerted. Near the ſecond, denominated Valeria, are the remains of the old cathedral, and a few houſes belonging to the canons. De Marjorei, the third, is the preſent epiſcopal palace, an edifice of ſtone, built in 1547; the apartments furniſhed with great plainneſs and ſimplicity. Sion was formerly the capital of the Seduni, who inhabited this country in the time of Julius Cæſar; and ſome Roman inſcriptions ſtill remain to atteſt its antiquity. Its biſhop is a prince of the empire. It is 48 miles S. of Berne.

SION, a famous mountain of Judea, ſituated on the S. ſide of Jeruſalem.

Sion Houſe, Middleſex, near the influx of the Brent into the Thames, between Brentford and Iſleworth. It is a noble, ſquare, ſtone building, finely finiſhed and furniſhed, now one of the ſeats of the Duke of Northumberland.

SIOTO, a river of the United States, in N. America, which riſes in the NW. territory, in lat. 40. 40. N. and lon. 83. W. and falls into the Ohio, 12 miles W. from Waſhington, in Kentucky.

SIOUT, OSIOT, or SCIOT, a large, populous, and well-built town in Egypt, with a lake dug near it, which ſerves to water the grounds. It has ſeveral moſques, and is the ſee of a Copti biſhop. Its ſituation on an artificial mount, denotes its occupying the ſite of an ancient city, thought to be Nicopolis, where the wolf was accounted a ſacred animal. Here are, accordingly, the ruins of an ancient amphitheatre, and ſome Roman ſepulchres. It is ſurrounded by pleaſant gardens, and fine palm trees, that bear the beſt dates in Egypt. This place is the rendezvous of thoſe that go in the caravan to Sennar, in Nubia. It is about 2 miles W. of the river Nile, and 157 S. of Cairo.

SIPHANTO. See SIPANTO.

SIPHNO, a town of the iſland of Naſſio, in the Archipelago.

Sipleigh, Devonſh. on the river Dart, near Aſhberton. Sipney, Bucks, in the pariſh of Burnham. Sipſon, Middleſex, in Harmondſworth pariſh.

SIRADIA, a town and palatinate of Great Poland, 100 miles NNW. of Cracow.

Sir Albert's Bridge, in Donegal, Ulſter, 120 miles from Dublin.

SIRE, a town of Abyſſinia.

SIRHIND, a very ancient city and diſtrict of Hindooſtan, in Delhi. M. Condamine ſays, that the art of weaving ſilk was brought back to Conſtantinople, in the 16th century, by the monks who returned from Sirhind (or Serinde, according to him:) for, although the art was brought into Europe under the Roman emperors, it had again been loſt during the confuſions that attended the ſubverſion of the weſtern empire. Procopius, alſo, takes notice, that in the time of Juſtinian, (the 16th century) ſilk was brought from Serinda, a country in India. Sirhind is 150 miles NW. of Delhi. Lat. 29. 35. N. lon. 75. 15. E.

SIR CHARLES HARDY'S ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Capt. Carteret in 1767. It is low, covered with wood, and pleaſant. Lat. 4. 41. S. lon. 153. 32. E.

SIR CHARLES SAUNDERS' ISLAND, in the South Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Wallis in 1767. It is about ſix miles long from E. to W. with a mountain in the centre. The natives were not numerous, and appeared to live in a wretched manner. Lat. 17. 28. S. lon. 151. 4. W.

SIRIAN, a ſea-port of Pegu, frequented by the French, Engliſh, and Dutch. It is 72 miles S. of Pegu.

SIRINAGUR, a large, rugged country of India, bounded on the N. and NE. by the Thibet Mountains; on the S. by Delhi and Rohilla; and on the NW. by Lahore.

SIRINAGUR,

SIRINAGUR, the capital of a country of the ſame name, in India, 200 miles NNE. of Delhi. Lat. 30. 50. N. lon. 78. 45. E.

SIRIUS ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean. Lat. 10. 52. S. lon. 162. 30. E.

SIRK, or SIERCK, a town in the department of the Moſelle, ſituated on, or near, the river Moſelle, 9 miles NNE. of Thionville.

SIRMICH, anciently SIRMIUM, a town and county of Sclavonia.

SIRONC, or SERONGE, a large town of Hindooſtan, in Malwa, 132 miles NE. of Ougein.

Siſerge, Weſtmorl. S. of Kendal. Siſewell, Suff. S. of Dunwich. Siſingherſt, Kent, near Cranbrook, was anciently written Saxenburſt. Siſland, Norfolk, near Lodden. Siſon Park, Rutland, near Grapthan.

SISSAC, a town of Baſil, in Swiſſerland, capital of the ſmall territory of Siſgow, 13 miles SE. of Baſil.

SISSOPOLI, a town of Romania, ſituated on the Black Sea, 75 miles NE. of Adrianople.

SISTERON, a town in the dept. of the Lower Alps, ſeated on the Durance, 30 miles NE. of Apt.

Siſton, a village in Glouceſterſhire, ſituated in a pleaſant vale, on a rivulet which runs into the Avon, 7 miles from Briſtol. Tin ore has been found here; and here is a manufactory of braſs, and another of alt-petre. Siſton, Glouceſterſ. in Kingſwood-Foreſt.

SIZZEK, a town of Croatia.

Sithny, Cornwall, near Helſton.

SITIA, a town on the N. coaſt of Candia, near a bay of the ſame name.

SITTART, a town of Juliers.

SITTER, a river of Swiſſerland, which riſes in the canton of Appenzel, and runs into the Thur, 9 miles SW. from St. Gall.

* SITTINGBURN, a town in Kent, which being a great thoroughfare on the road from Rocheſter to Canterbury, has many convenient inns. At one of theſe, viz. the Red Lyon, a gentleman of the name of Norwood, treated King Henry V. and his retinue, on his return from France, when wine was but 2d. a quart, and every thing elſe was ſo cheap in proportion, that the whole entertainment coſt but 9s. 9d. It is 11 miles SE. of Rocheſter, and 40 E. by S. of London, in the road to Canterbury.

Sivers, Mount, Yorkſhire, E. Riding, near Acomb.

SIVRAY, or CIVROY, a town in the department of Vienne, 25 miles S. of Poitiers.

SIWAS, a city of Caramania.

Sixill, Abbey and Grange, Linc. SE. of Market-Raiſin.

* SIX-MILE-BRIDGE, a ſmall town of Clare, in Munſter, 102 miles from Dublin.

Six-mile-Bridge, in Limerick, Munſter. Six-mile-Croſs, in Tyrone, Ulſter. Six-mile-Water, in Antrim, Ulſter. Six-mile-Water, in Cork, Munſter.

SIWAH, a town of Tripoli, on the frontiers of Egypt. Lat. 29. 45. N.

SIZUN, a town in the dept. of Finiſterre, 7 miles SE. of Landerneau.

Skaketlhorp, Yorkſ. near Old and New Malton. Skale Park, Yorkſhire, W. Riding, between Langſkethdale and Netherdale.

SKALHOLT, See SCHALHOLT.

Skalingdam, Yorkſ. N. Riding, SW. of Hinderwell. Skaneſton, Yorkſ. NE. of New Malton.

SKANDERBORG, a town of N. Jutland, where the kings of Denmark have a palace.

SKARA. See SCARA.

Skargil, Yorkſ. S. of Barnard Caſtle. Skarth, North, Lancaſ. by the ſea, SW. of Dalton-Caſtle. Skawton, Yorkſ. SW. of Helmeſley. Skeby, Yorkſhire, NE. of Richmond.

SKEEN, a town of Chriſtiana, in Norway, 38 miles SSW. of Chriſtiana. It is remarkable for its mines of iron and copper.

Skeffington, Leiceſterſ. near Billeſdon. Skefling, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, near Burſtal-Abbey. Skegby, Nottinghamſhire, near Mansfield. Skegby, Nottinghamſ. SE. of Tuxford. Skegnes, Linc. NE. of Wainfleet.

Skeheewrinky, in Cork, Munſter. Here is a large cavern, which, when well lighted up, has the appearance of a vaulted cathedral, ſupported by maſſy pillars; and the ſtalactites, ſpars, or calcareous cryſtals, form a very brilliant appearance.

Skelderſkew, Yorkſhire, in Cleveland. Skeldick, Lincolnſ. S. of Boſton.

SKELIG ISLANDS, off the coaſt of Kerry, in Munſter. They are three in number, and it is remarkable that the gannet never neſtles on any place in the S. of Ireland, but on one of theſe. A rock on the N. coaſt of the kingdom has the ſame peculiarity. The Great Skelig is 3 leagues from the ſhore, the others are but rocks of marble; 6 or 8 miles W. of Bray-Head.

Skell, a river in Yorkſhire, which runs into the Youre, near Rippon. Skellfleet, a river in Yorkſhire, which runs into the Humber, between Haxfleete and Bromfleete. Skellinthorp, 2 miles W. of Lincoln. Skelmerch, Weſtmorland, N. of Kendal. Skelmerſdale, Lancaſ. SE. of Ormſkirk. Skelton, Cumberl. NW. of Penrith. Skelton, Yorkſhire, on the Humber, SE. of Howden. Skelton, Yorkſ. on the Ure, NW. of Boroughbridge. Skelton, Yorkſ. on the river Marſk, W. of Richmond. Skelton, Yorkſhire, N. Riding, S. of the Foreſt of Galtres. Skelton, NW. of York.

SKELTON CASTLE, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, between Kirkleatham and the ſea. Market on Saturday.

Skemmingrane, Yorkſ. NE. of Giſborough. Skendleby, Lincolnſhire, NE. of Spilſby. Skenfrith-Caſtle, Monmouthſhire, on the Mynwy. Skern, a river in Durham, which runs into the Tees, at Croſtbridge. Skernwood, Northumberland, S. of Alnham.

SKENING. See SCHENING.

SKERRIES, a ſmall fiſhing town, ſituated on the coaſt of Dublin, in Leinſter, 17 miles from the metropolis. The Skerries-Iſlands, or rocks, are three in number, and remarkable for producing great quantities of the ſea-weed from which kelp is made.

Skethy, a river in Merionethſ. which runs into the Iriſh Channel, below Hirgum, W. of the Avon, or 3 miles NNW. from Barmouth. Skewers, Hants, near Baſing. Skewes and Skiberio, Cornwall, S. of Helſton.

* SKIBBEREEN, a town of Cork, in Munſter, where the clothing trade, and ſome of the linen manufactures, are carried on. It is ſeated on the river Ilen, 10 miles SE. of Bantry, and 161 from Dublin.

Skiborra, Shropſ. on the river Temde, S. of Clun-Caſtle. Skidbrook, Lincolnſ. S. of Saltfleet. Skidby, Yorkſ. near Hull.

SKIDDAW, a mountain of Cumberl. one of the moſt remarkable in the kingdom, being of above a thouſand yards perpendicular height from the ſurface of the Lake of Derwentwater, and upwards of 3000 feet above the level of the ſea. It is not difficult of acceſs in ſome parts, and is covered with graſs, which gradually grows coarſer in the aſcent. At the top, however, the atmoſphere is ſo rarified as to prevent vegetation. The whole top is, indeed, covered with a looſe, brown, ſlaty ſtone. It is ſix miles from Cockermouth, and Keſwick ſtands near the foot of it.

Skilgate, Somerſetſ. E. of Dulverton. Skiltes, Warwickſ. NW. of Henley in Arden. Skinburneſs, Cumberl. in Bonnet pariſh, near the ſea. Skinnand, Lincolnſ. near Boothby. Skinninggrove, Yorkſhire, near Whitby.

SKION, a town of Sweden, in Meſopadia, ſituated near the coaſt of the gulph of Bothnia, 30 miles S. of Hernoſand.

Skiplam, Yorkſhire, near Kirby-Moorſide. Skipneſs, a village in Argyleſhire, 22 miles N. of Campbeltown. Skippan, a river in Lancaſ. which runs into the Wire, near Thornton. Skipſey, Yorkſ. by the ſea, N. of Hornſey. Skipton, Yorkſ. near Thirſk.

SKIPTON, a pretty large, and tolerably well built town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire. It is concealed among precipices, and ſeated on the river Aire, in that rough, rocky, mountainous tract, called Craven, near a navigable canal, by which it communicates with all the inland navigations, 44 miles W. of York, and 231 N. by W. of London. A plentiful market on Saturday.

Skipwith, SE. of York. Skirbeck, Lincolnſ. near Boſton. Skircotes, Yorkſ. near Halifax. Skirid Fawr, Monmouthſ. a rocky mountain near Abergavenny.

Skirk, in Queen's County, Leinſter.

Skirlow, N. and S. Yorkſhire, in Halderneſs. Skirmingham, Durham, N. of Darlington. Skirbenbeck, Yorkſhire, near Wilton. Skirringham, Yorkſhire, on the Derwent, S. of New Malton. Skirton, near Lancaſter. Skirwith, Cumberl. near Kirk Oſwald. Skorborough, Yorkſ. NW. of Beverley. Skorton, Yorkſ. 4 miles E. of Richmond. Skoulton, Norfolk, E. of Watton. Skrekington, Lincolnſ. N. of Fokingham. Skreleſby, Lincolnſ. near Horncaſtle. Skremby, Lincolnſ. NE. of Spilſby. Skrenes, Eſſex, near Chelmsford. Skrimmerſton, Northumberl. 2 miles S. of Berwick.

Skull, in Cork, Munſter, near Skibbereen. Skull-Harbour, in Cork, Munſter.

Skulthorp, Norfolk, NW. of Fakenham. Skutterby, Cumberl. near Solway-Moſs.

SKYE, an iſland of Scotland, one of the largeſt of the Weſtern Iſlands, or Hebrides. It is near 50 miles in length, and, in ſome places, above 20 broad. The SE. end of this iſland is ſeparated from Invernelſhire (to which it belongs) by a narrow channel, the narroweſt part of which, cattle are made to ſwim acroſs. Here is, notwithſtanding ſome mountainous tracts, a great proportion of level ground, ground, with excellent paſturage. There are alſo numbers of deer, and different kinds of game, in this iſland, which abounds with limeſtone, marble, &c. The baſaltic columns, reſembling the Giant's Cauſeway in Ireland, are its greateſt curioſity. A cave, at the E. end of the iſland, afforded an aſylum, in 1746, to the diſappointed Pretender, and his faithful guide, for two nights. Many thouſands of black cattle are annually exported hence. Some ſmall horſes are bred, and a great quantity of kelp manufactured here. Portree is the principal place in this iſland.

Slyers, Yorkſ. near Halifax. Slyth, Suffolk, N. of Mendleſham. Slad, Glouceſ. in Painſwick pariſh. Slad, or Slade, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Miſerden. Sladborn, Yorkſ. W. Riding, near Bowland Foreſt. Slade, Devonſ. NE. of Plympton.

Slade Bay, in Waterford Harbour, Munſter.

Slaghwait, or Slawarth, Yorkſ. near Luthersfield. Slaitburn, or Slandburn, Yorkſ. near Barneſley. Slandbury, Devonſhire, near Barnſtaple.

Slane, in Meath, Leinſter.

Slanford, Nottinghamſ. near Edwalton. Slape, Dorſetſ. near Netherby. Slapton, Bucks, NE. of Aylesbury. Slapton, Devonſhire, SW. of Dartmouth.

SLATE, a peninſula of Skye, on the SE. ſide of the iſland, terminating in a rugged promontory, called the Point of Slate.

Slaty Port, a little port of Carrickfergus-Bay, in Down, Ulſter, ſo called from a ſlate quarry which joins it.

SLAVE-COAST, a tract in Guinea, on the Atlantic, ſituated between the Gold Coaſt and Benin, and comprehending the diſtricts of Ardra, Koto, Popo, and Whidah.

Slaugham, Suſſex, SE. of Horſham. Slaughden Vale, Suff. near Aldborough. Here is a commodious quay, with warehouſes for fiſh; and a little more to the S. are conveniencies for drying fiſh. The fiſhery, which is conſiderable in the ſeaſons for catching herrings and ſprats, is the chief employment of the inhabitants, as likewiſe of thoſe of Aldborough; and it is the only place in England for curing red ſprats. Slaughterford, Wiltſhire, S. of Caſtlecomb. Slaughterford, Upper and Nether, Glouceſterſhire, near Stow-in-the-Would. Slauſton, Leiceſ. S. of Halſton.

SLAWKAW, or SCHLAKENWALD, a town of Elnbogen, Bohemia.

SLEAFORD, NEW, ſo called to diſtinguiſh it from Old Sleaford, in the neighbourhood; a populous, thriving town in Lincolnſhire, continually improving in its buildings. It is ſeated on a ſmall, rapid ſtream, which drives ſeveral corn and fulling mills, &c. near the town, and ſoon after falls into the Witham, 18 miles S. of Lincoln, and 115 N. of London. Market on Monday. Its markets on Monday after Epiphany, Eaſter, and Whitſuntide, are equal to ſome great fairs. Fairs on Plow-Monday, Whit Monday, Auguſt 12th, and October 10th.

Sleady, Northumberland, S. of Dilſton. Sleap, Shropſhire, S. of Wem. Sleddale, Long, Weſtmorl. NW. of Kendal. Sleddale, Weſt, Weſtmorl. a mile and a half from Shap. Sledmerl, Yorkſ. E Riding, W. of Kilham. Sleelmere, Weſtmorl. N. of Kendal. Sleep, Dorſetſ. near Corfe-Caſtle, 4 miles E. of Wareham. Slegil, Weſtmorl. SW. of Appleby. Slekburn, Northum. near Bedlington. Sleningford, Yorkſ. SE. of Maſham. Slepe, Shropſ. on the river Terne, near High Ercol.

SLESWICK, a town of Denmark, containing about 5630 inhabitants. It is an irregular town of great length. The houſes are of brick, and, like all the other towns in this country, reſemble, in neatneſs and manner of building, thoſe of Holland. The inhabitants dreſs alſo like the Dutch; and many of them ſpeak their tongue, though the uſual languages are the German and Daniſh. It is ſituated on the Sley, which is now no longer a port, being choked up with ſand, 60 miles N. of Hamburgh. Lat. 54. 39. N. lon. 9. 38. E.

SLESWICK, or SOUTH JUTLAND, a duchy of Denmark, N. of Holſtein, from which it is moſtly ſeparated by the river Eyder. It contains ſeveral towns, and 1500 villages, and has from time immemorial been united to Denmark, but has ſometimes been given to the brother of the reigning king as a fief. In the laſt century, however, the duke, in poſſeſſion, attempted to become an independent prince, but in 1720 it was recovered to the crown. The governor and counſellors reſide at Gottorp. This duchy is about 72 miles in length, and from 30 to 56 in breadth; and is a level, fertile, populous, and well cultivated country. Sleſwick is the capital.

Slevien, Cornwall, between Mount's Bay and Land's-End. Sleveſholm Priory, Norfolk, in Methwold pariſh.

Slidery-Ford, a little river in Down, Ulſter, running into the inner bay of Dundrum. Slieve-Bingan, Croob, Donard, Na Boil-Trogh, Na Grideal, Neir, and and Sephin, or Snavan, mountains in Down, Ulſter. Slieve-Bloom, a range of mountains between the King's and Queen's Counties. Slieve Carmen, a name given to the mountains of Wicklow. Slieve-Miſt, a general name given to the mountains between the bays of Tralee and Caſtlemain, in Kerry, Munſter.

Sliſield, Surry, near Epſom.

SLIGO, a county of Ireland in the province of Connaught, about 32 miles in length, and 29 in its greateſt breadth; bounded on the W. by Mayo; on the N. and NW. by the Atlantic; on the E. by Leitrim; and on the SE. S. and SW. by Roſcommon and Mayo. It contains 39 pariſhes, about 11,500 houſes, and 60,000 inhabitants. Sligo is the only town of conſequence. There are, however, ſome conſiderable villages, in which the linen manufacture flouriſhes. The ſoil is in ſome parts good, in others coarſe, and, towards the coaſt, boggy.

* SLIGO, a town, the capital of the county of the ſame name, is ſeated on a river that runs into a bay of the ſame name, navigable for veſſels of 1200 tons, up to the quays. It has a conſiderable trade; the number of houſes in 1788 was 916, and the number of inhabitants about 8000. It is 96 miles NNE. of Killala, and 94 NNW. of Dublin.

Sliguff, in Carlow, Leinſter.

Slimbridge, a village of Glouceſterſ. The pariſh is 20 miles in circumference, and in it are about 1000 acres of land gained from the Severn. Slindon, Staffordſ. on the river Sow, near the Offleys. Slindon, Suſſex, near Yapton. Sline, Lancaſ. between Lancaſter and Ken Sands. Slinford, Suſſex, near Horſham. Slingley, NW. of Durham. Slingſby, Yorkſ. NW. of New Malton. Slipin, Durham, 5 miles from Darlington. Slipton, Northamptonſhire, near Boughton and Drayton.

SLONIM, a town of Novogrodeck, in Lithuania.

SLOOTEN, a town, the capital of Weſtergoe, in W. Frieſland, ſituated near a large lake called Slooter-mer, 3 miles from the Zuyder-Zee, and 18 NW. of Stenwick.

Slough, Bucks, 2 miles from Windſor. Slow-Houſe, Suſſex, near Cuckfield. Slowley, Norfolk, S. of Worſted. Slowley-Hill, Warwickſ. near Arley and Aſtley.

SLUCK, a town and duchy of Novogrodeck, in Lithuania, ſeated on the river Sluck, 67 miles ESE. of Novogrodeck.

Sluce, Suſſex, near Pevenſey-Haven.

SLUTTELBURG, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Peterſburgh, ſeated on the S. ſide of the Lake Ladoga.

Slutter, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

SLUYS, or ECLUSE, a town of Dutch Flanders, oppoſite the Iſle of Cadſan, with a harbour formerly capable of receiving 500 veſſels, but which has been daily growing worſe, ſo as to be capable of receiving ſmall veſſels only. It is 10 miles N. of Bruges.

SMALAND. See SMOLAND.

Smalborn, Northumb. W. of Elleſley. Smalborough, Norfolk, SE. of Worſted. Smalbridge, Suff. near Neyland. Smalfield, Surry, W. of Lingfield.

SMALKALD, a town of Hennenberg in Franconia, noted for the league of Proteſtant princes, in 1531, when Dr. Luther drew up a ſet of theological articles, which were afterwards confirmed by the Proteſtant teachers.

Smallberry-Green, Middleſex, between Brentford and Hounſlow. Smallbrook, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Smallburn, Wilts, near Warminſter. Small-Dale, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Small-Downs, Kent, between Thanet-Iſle and Deal. Smalley, Derbyſhire, S. of Codnor-Caſtle. Small-Hithe, Kent, near Tenterden. Smallmains, Kent, near Alkham. Small-Viſe, Staffordſhire, a hamlet of Saredon. Smallwood-Hall, Staffordſhire, N. of Needwood Foreſt. Smardale, Weſtmorland, SW. of Kirby-Stephen.

SMARDEN, a ſmall town in Kent, ſituated by the Medway, 10 miles SE. of Maidſtone, and 46 SE. of London. Market on Friday.

Smart's-Green, Glouceſterſ. in Nibley pariſh. Smavis, Yorkſ. near Tadcaſter. Smedmore, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle, near the Channel. Smeeth, Kent, in Aldington pariſh. Smeeton, Leiceſ. near Kibworth. Smercote, Warwickſ. in Bedworth pariſh.

Smerwick Village and Harbour, in Kerry, Munſter. Smerlagh River, in Kerry, Munſter.

Smeſtall, a river in Staffordſhire, which runs into the Stour, above Stourton-Caſtle. Smetesham, Cheſhire, NW. of Congleton. Smethcot, Shropſ. near Pelverbach. Smethels, Lancaſ. N. of Bolton. Smethick, Derbyſ. N. of Aſhby-de-le-Zouch. Smethwick, Cheſhire, near Sandbach. Smethwick, Staffordſ. NW. of Birmingham. Smeton, Great and Little, Yorkſ. on the Wiſk, N. of Northallerton. Smeton-Kirk, Yorkſhire, SE. of of Pontefract. Smitham, Surry, S. of Croydon.

Smithſborough, in Monaghan, Ulſter.

Smithby, Derbyſ. near Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Smith's-Hall, Eſſex, near Stonſon Maſſey. Smith's-Hall, Kent, in W. Farley.

SMITH'S ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Lieutenant Ball, in 1790. Lat. 9. 44. S. lon. 161. 54. E.

SMOLAND, or SMALAND, a province of Sweden, in which are 21 lakes, immenſe foreſts of pine and fir, and ſome iron-mines. The approach to the villages here is announced by groves of oak, beech, and birch, and by numerous plots, or parterres, of arable land among paſtures and rocks. An acre of land in this country has been frequently obſerved to be laid out with alternate ſlips of rye, barley, flax, and hemp; the intervals between, and around, ſown with graſs. In many parts, the trees are cut down and burnt, in order to manure the ſoil. This province is about 100 miles long, and 60 broad, and was formerly governed by kings of its own. It was formerly included in E. Gothland.

SMOLENSKO, a city of Ruſſia, capital of the government of the ſame name. It is built ſo as to extend over two mountains and the valley between them. It is ſurrounded by walls 30 feet high and 15 thick: the lower part of them is built of ſtone, the upper of brick, and their circumference is four miles and three quarters. They are ſurmounted by towers, three ſtories high, placed at the angles, between which are others of a ſmaller ſize; and in the plain, the walls are ſurrounded by a deep ditch and covered way. The houſes are moſtly of wood, and only one ſtory high. The city is divided through its whole length by one ſtraight, paved ſtreet, the others are circular, and floored with planks. The alternate riſing and ſinking of the walls, from the inequality of the ground, their Gothic architecture, and groteſque towers, the ſteeples riſing above the trees, which conceal the houſes from the ſight, the gardens, meadows, and corn-fields, within the walls, altogether form a truly ſingular, picturesque, and varied proſpect. Notwithſtanding its extent, however, it contains only about 4000 inhabitants, and has no proper manufactures, but carries on, with Dantzic, Riga, and the Ukraine, a pretty conſiderable traffic in linen, hemp, honey, wax, leather, furs, timber, hides, hog's briſtles, &c. It is ſituated on the Dnieper, 197 miles NE. of Novogrodeck, and 230 NNE. of Kiow. Lat. 54. 50. N. lon. 31. 22. E.

SMOLENSKO, a government of Ruſſia, on the frontiers of Lithuania. It contains White Ruſſia, properly ſo called.

SMOW, a noted cavern on the N. coaſt of Sutherlandſ. between Cape Wrath and Loch Eribol. It runs ſo far under ground, that its extremity, it is ſaid, could never yet be explored.

SMYRNA, or ISMIR, a conſiderable city and ſea-port of Natolia, ſituated on a ſpacious bay of the Mediterranean. The commodiouſneſs of the harbour (which is capable of containing the largeſt navy) has cauſed it to be rebuilt ſeveral times, after having been deſtroyed by earthquakes. It is the common rendezvous of merchants from all parts of the world, eſpecially of Engliſh, and the ſtaple of their merchandiſe. The whole town, indeed, is a continual bazar, or fair, where nothing is wanted for clothing, ſuſtenance, or pleaſure, as all the beſt commodities of Europe and Aſia are brought hither, and vended at cheap rates. The Turks have 19 moſques, the Greeks form 2 churches, the Jews 8 ſynagogues, the Armenians 1 church, and the Latins have 3 convents. There are 3 biſhops, one Greek, another Latin, and the third Armenian. The ſtreets are more open, better paved, and the houſes better built, than in other towns of this part of the continent. The ſtreet of the Franks is the fineſt in Smyrna, ſtretching along the harbour, and here the European conſuls live in great ſtate and magnificence. Smyrna is eight days journey from Conſtantinople by land, 25 days from Aleppo by the caravans, and 6 from Satalia. The caravans of Perſia often bring 200 bales of ſilk in a year, beſide drugs and cloth. The other commodities brought here, are thread made of goat's hair, cotton, yarn, cotton in bags, various kinds of drugs, and all ſorts of carpets. Moſt of the trade here, as well as in all Turkey, paſſes through the hands of the Jews, the Turks never tranſacting any bargain with Chriſtians. The Engliſh and Dutch factories have Proteſtant chapels; and taverns are as open here as in Europe. The territory about Smyrna is fertile, with fine olive trees and vines; and the wine is excellent. It is 176 miles SSW. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 38. 28. N. lon. 27. 25. E.

SNACKENBURG, a large trading town of Lunenburg Zell, 68 miles ENE. of Zell.

Snailwell, Cumb. near Newmarket.

SNAITH,

SNAITH, a little town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, but of good trade, from the navigation to it in boats. It is ſituated at the conflux of the rivers Aire and Don, 22 miles S. of York, and 174 N. by W. of London. Market on Friday.

Snape, Suffolk, S. of Saxmundham. Snape, Yorkſ. N. of Maſham. Snarehill-Houſe Norfolk, E. of Thetford. Snarford, Lincolnſ. between Market-Raiſin and Lincoln. Snargate, Kent, 4 miles NW. of New Romney. Snarſton, Leiceſ. between Swepſton and Hog's-Norton. Snave, Kent, 3 miles and a half NW. of New Romney. Snavewick, Kent, near Snave. Sneaton, Yorkſhire, near Whitby. Sned, Shropſhire, NW. of Biſhops-Caſtle.

SNEECK, a well-built town in Weſtergoe, in Weſt Frieſland, with an excellent Latin ſchool. It is ſituated near a lake of the ſame name, 8 miles S. of Franeker.

Sneem Iſland, in Kerry, Munſter.

Snelland, Lincolnſ. S. of Market-Raiſin.

Snelleſton, Cheſ. W. of Macclesfield.

Snelſhell, Bucks, near Whaddon. Snelſton, Derbyſ. near Aſhborn. Snelſton, Rutl. S. of Uppingham. Snenton, Nottinghamſ. in the pariſh of St. Mary, Nottingham. Snenton, Yorkſ. S. of Pickering-Foreſt. Snepe, Northumb. NW. of Billingham. Sneton-Thorp, Yorkſhire, between Newbiggin-Hall and Robin-Hood's-Bay.

SNETSHAM, a ſmall town of Norfolk, once a royal demeſne, with many privileges. It is ſeated on the little river Ingol, 10 miles N. by E. of Lynn Regis, and 111 N. by E. of London. Market on Friday.

SNIADIN, a town of Brzeſc, in Lithuania, ſituated on the Pruth. It is capital of Pocutia.

Snibſton, Leiceſ. SE. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Snidale, Yorkſ. SE. of Pontefract. Snileſworth, Yorkſ. S. of Stokeſley. Snipehouſe, Northumb. S. of Alnwick. Snitter, Northumb. a mile from Rothbury. Snitterby, Linc. SE. of Kirton, in Lindſey. Snitterfield, Warw. N. of Stratford-upon-Avon. Snitterley, Norfolk, W. of Clay. Snitterton, Norfolk, between Harpham and Lerling. Snodhurſt, Kent, partly in Chatham, and partly in the limits of Rochester. Snodland, Kent, by the Medway, 4 miles and a half NW. of Maidſtone. Snore-Hall, Norf. near the river Wiſſey, S. of Downham. Snoreham, Eſſex, adjoining Lachington. Snoring, Magna, and Parva, Norfolk, near Walſingham. Snotterton, Durham, near Staindrop. Snowden Hall, Heref. near the Golden Vale and the river Dore. Snowden-Pool, Staffordſ. W. of Patſhall.

SNOWDON, a famous mountain of Carnarvonſhire, in N. Wales, which occupies the centre of the county. Its name ſignifies literally the Hill of Snow, from ſnow and down. Eryri, the Welſh name, is derived from Mynyd Eryod, the Hill of Eagles. This is the moſt noted eminence in the whole region of the Welſh hills; its top, by way of eminence, is termed y Wyddfa; that is, the conſpicuous. On the top there are bogs, and two lakes that abound with fiſh, particularly the char and the guinard. Mr. Pennant ſays, "that the height of the mountain, reckoning from the quay of Carnarvon to its higheſt peak, is 3568 feet. It was held ſacred by the ancient Britons, as Parnaſſus was by the Greeks, and Ida by the Cretans." He found pieces of lava on this mountain, and, on the ſummit, groups of columnar ſtones of vaſt ſize, lying in all directions. From the ſummit may be ſeen a part of Ireland, of Scotland, and of Cumberland, Lancaſhire, Cheſhire, and all North Wales, the Iriſh and Britiſh ſeas, and a vaſt number of lakes. Such a beautiful diſplay of nature, at once aſtoniſhes and charms the beholder.

Snowſhill, Glouceſterſ. near Broadway. Snukebank, Northumb. between Alnwick and Rothbury. Snyte, a river which riſes in Leiceſterſhire, and paſſing through Nottinghamſhire, falls into the Dean at Shilton. Soak, Hampſhire, near Winchester.

SOANA, or SUANE, a decayed town of Tuſcany, in the Sienneſe.

SOANE, a river of Hindooſtan, which riſes on the ſouthern confines of Allahabad, iſſuing from the lake, that is the ſource of the Nerbudda, and after a courſe of about 1500 miles, falls into the Ganges a few miles W. of Patna.

SOBERNHEIM, a town of Sponheim, in the circle of Upper Rhine.

SOBIESLAU, a town of Bechin, in Bohemia.

SOCHEU, a town of China, in the province of Chenſi. Here is a temple dedicated to a blind man, ſaid to have been one of the greateſt politicians in China.

SOCIETY ISLES, a cluſter of iſles, diſcovered by Captain Cook, in 1769, and ſo named by him, becauſe they lie contiguous to each other. They are ſituated between the latitudes of 16. 10. and 16. 55. S. and between longitudes of 150. 57. and

7. and 152. W. They are ſix in number; namely, Huaheine, Ulietea, Otaha, Bolabola, Mauroua, and Toobaee. The ſoil, productions, people, their language, religion, cuſtoms, and manners, are nearly the ſame as at Otaheite. The ſoil is equally bountiful and fertile, and the inhabitants are as luxurious and indolent. A plantain branch is the emblem of peace among them, and changing names the greateſt token of friendſhip. Their dances, however, are more elegant; their dramatic entertainments alſo have ſomething of plot and conſiſtency, and they exibit temporary occurrences as the objects of praiſe or ſatire: ſo that the origin of ancient comedy may be fairly diſcerned among them. The inhabitants ſeemed to be ſtouter than thoſe of Otaheite, and the women were in general fairer and handſomer, though none were equal to ſome individuals. Thoſe of Ulietea, however, were ſmaller and blacker, and much leſs orderly. Mr. Banks found here only eleven new plants; but he obſerved ſome inſects, and a ſpecies of ſcorpion he had never ſeen before. Captain Cook put on ſhore a Cape ewe at Bolabola, where a ram had been previouſly left by the Spaniards; and alſo an Engliſh boar and ſow, with two goats, at Ulietea. If the valuable animals which have been tranſported thither from Europe, ſhould be ſuffered to multiply, no part of the world will equal theſe iſlands in variety and abundance of refreſhments for future navigators. Among theſe iſlands are ſeveral excellent harbours; the entrances into them, indeed, are generally narrow, yet, when a ſhip is once in, nothing can hurt her.

Sock, Somerſ. 3 miles from Yeovil. Sockburn, Durham, on the Tees, 4 miles SE. of Darlington. Sockbridge, Weſtmorland, on the Elmot, near Penrith. Sockneys, Suſſex, near Burwaſh and Salehurſt. Sockſbury-Hill. Suſſex, NE. of Rotherfield. Socomb, Kent, NW. of Wye.

SOCONUSCO, a diſtrict af Guatimala, in Mexico, S. of the diſtrict of Chiapa, on the N. Pacific Ocean. It is about 88 miles in length, and almoſt as much in breadth. It is ſheltered from the N. winds by high mountains, which renders the air exceedingly hot, and the country is not very healthful or fertile. The few Spaniards who were ſettled here are extremely rich. Great quantities of indigo and cocoa-nuts are raiſed here, which are ſent to all the other parts of Mexico.

SOCOTARA, a populous, fruitful iſland in the Arabian Sea, about 50 miles in length, and 20 in breadth. The capital, of the ſame name, is ſituated on a river near the ſea, in lat. 15. 24. N. The natives are Mahometans, with a mixture of Paganiſm. They trade to Goa, with the produce of their iſland, viz. fine aloes, frankincenſe, ambergreaſe, dragon's blood, rice, dates, and coral, which are tranſported from thence to many parts of India and all Europe. The ſultan is tributary to the princes of Arabia. The ſhore every where affords ſafe anchorage and good ports, and here are, in particular, two remarkably fine harbours, where ſhipping may ride ſecure from every wind that blows. Lat. 12. 15. N. lon. 54. E.

SODA, a town of Hedjas, Arabia.

Sodbury, Durham, near Darlington.

SODBURY, CHIPPING, an ancient town of Glouceſterſhire, containing ſeveral good inns, as it is a great thoroughfare on the road between Briſtol and Cirenceſter. It has a conſiderable market for corn, and the greateſt cheeſe market in England, except Atherſtone, in Warwickſhire. It is 15 miles ENE. of Briſtol, and 112 W. of London. Market on Thurſday. Fairs on May 23d and June 24th.

Sodbury, Little and Old, Glouceſterſ. a mile ENE. of Chipping Sodbury.

SOCORRO, a barren, uninhabited iſland in the N. Pacific Ocean, about 70 leagues W. from the coaſt of Mexico. Lat. 18. 30. N.

SODOM, formerly a city of Aſia, ſituated on a plain, now under water, in what is called the Dead Sea, or Lake Aſphaltites, in Judea.

Sodor, a little village in Icolmkill, one of the Weſtern Iſles of Scotland, near that of Mull.

SOEBORG, a town of Denmark, in the iſland of Zealand, 9 miles WNW. of Elſinore.

SOEST, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia. It was formerly imperial, and one of the Hanſe Towns, but ſince 1752 has been ſubject to the king of Pruſſia. Several of the ſucceſſors of the Emperor Charlemagne reſided here. It is 27 miles SE. of Munſter.

SOFALA, or QUITERVE, a kingdom of Africa, bounded on the E. by the Moſambique Sea, on the S. by Sabia, and on the N. and W. by the ſtates of Monomotapa. The inhabitants cultivate rice and millet, and eat the fleſh of elephants, large and ſmall cattle, and fiſh. They alſo make a ſort of beer of rice and millet; and other liquors of honey, palm, and fruits. Honey here is in ſuch plenty, that that a great part of it lies neglected. All the coaſters are deſcended from the Arabians, yet are commonly black, there being but few tawny or brown among them. Many learned men affirm, that Solomon had his gold from the mines in this country, and that the country of Sofala is the Ophir of the ancients, the gold here being generally allowed to be the fineſt and pureſt in all Africa. It is governed by a king, tributary to the Portugueſe, who built a fort at the principal town, which is of the ſame name, and of great importance for their trade to the E. Indies. It is ſeated in a ſmall iſland, near the mouth of a river. Lat. 20. 20. S. lon. 37. 30. E.

SOFIA, or SOPHIA, a commercial, populous, and well-built city of Turkey, in Europe, capital of Bulgaria, originally built by the Emperor Juſtinian, on the ruins of the ancient Sardica. The ſtreets, however, are narrow, uneven, and dirty. It is 164 miles WNW. of Adrianople.

SOFROY, a town of Chaus, in Fez, noted for a handſome moſque: the principal commerce is in oil. It is 22 miles E. of Fez.

SOGNO, a maritime province of Congo, in Africa. S. of the river Zaire. It is a dry, ſandy country, abounding in ſalt. The inhabitants are moſtly Chriſtians, converted by the Portugueſe. The capital, Banza Sogno, is a ſmall place; the Capuchins, however, form a church here.

SOHAM, (formerly called MONK's SOHAM, from its rich monaſtery, a town of Cambridgeſhire, celebrated for its cheeſe. It is ſeated on the river Cam, near Soham Meer, (which takes up 1000 acres of land) 5 miles SSE. of Ely, and 70 N. by E. of London. Market on Saturday.

Soham Earls, Suffolk, near Soham.

SOIGNIES, a town of Hainault, ſeated on the Senne, near a foreſt to which it gives name, 6 miles NNE. of Mons.

Soilwell, Glouceſterſ. in Lidney pariſh.

SOISSONS, an ancient city in the dept. of Aiſne, ſo named from the Sueſſiones, a people of ancient Gaul. It contains about 12,000 inhabitants, and was lately a biſhop's ſee, and the capital of a diſtrict called the Soiſſonois. The environs are beautiful, but the ſtreets are narrow, and the houſes ill built. Under the kings of the firſt race, it was the capital of a kingdom of the ſame name. The caſtle, however, here, though ancient, is not that in which thoſe princes reſided. It is ſeated on the river Aiſne, 30 miles W. by N. of Rheims, and 60 NE. of Paris.

SOLANDER ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean, near the S. coaſt of New Zealand. It is about a mile in circuit, and was diſcovered by Captain Cook, in 1770. Lat. 46. 31. S.

Solbe, Selby, or Selbe, a river in the Iſle of Man.

SOLEBAY. See SOUTHWOLD.

Soles, Kent, in Barfriſton pariſh. Selsby, Lincolnſ. N. of Alford.

SOLEURE, or SOLOTHURNE, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of the canton of the ſame name, containing about 4000 inhabitants. It was a principal town in the kingdom of Burgundy, and frequently the reſidence of its kings. Among the moſt remarkable objects of curioſity in this town, is a new church, which was begun in 1762, and finiſhed in 1772. It is a grand and elegant building, of the Corinthian and Compoſite orders, and coſt at leaſt 80,000l. though the revenues of the republic ſcarcely exceed 12,000l. a year. Soleure is the uſual reſidence of the French ambaſſador to the Cantons, and is ſeated on the Aar, which here expands into a noble river, 18 miles N. of Bern. Lat. 47. 15. N. lon. 7. 20. E.

SOLEURE, a canton of Swiſſerland, which holds the eleventh rank in the Helvetic confederacy, into which it was admitted in the year 1481. It is ſituated between the canton of Bern, and the canton and biſhopric of Baſil, and contains about 50,000 inhabitants. It is 35 miles in length, and from 12 to 24 in breadth. The ſoil, for the moſt part, is exceedingly fertile in corn; and the diſtricts within the Jura abound in excellent paſtures. The inhabitants export ſome corn, horſes, cattle, and ſkins. The ſovereign power reſides in the great council, which incluſding the ſenate, or little council of thirty-ſix, conſiſts of 102 members. The government is a complete ariſtocracy, and the inhabitants are almoſt all Roman Catholics.

Soley, Wilts, in Chilton-Foliot pariſh.

SOLFATRA, or LAGO-DI-BAGNI, a lake of Italy, in the Campagna-di-Roma, near Tavoli, formerly called Lacus Albulus. In this lake are ſeveral floating iſlands, which, however, are nothing but bunches of matted ſedge and herbage, adhering together by the bitumen which ſwims on the ſurface of the lake, and the ſulphur with which its waters are impregnated. Some of theſe iſlands are 12 or 15 yards long; the ſoil is ſtrong enough to bear five or ſix people, who, by a pole, may move to different parts of the lake, as if they were in a boat. The water

ater is chalky and ſulphureous; towards ıe ſurface ſcarcely lukewarm, but deeper, ıry hot, and continually boiling. Anently the waters of this lake had a high edical reputation, and now, bathing in , is remommended for a variety of cutaeous diſeaſes.

SOLFATARA, a mountain S. of the ty of Naples, in the Terra di Lavora, ith a cavity above a mile in length and eadth, which conſtantly ſmokes in the ay, and flames in the night. The king rives a conſiderable revenue from the anufactures of ſulphur, alum, and vi-iol, in this neighbourhood. The ground almoſt every where full of ſulphur, and ı digging ever ſo little a way into it, ıe ſoil will ſmoke. If opened to a conderable depth, the earth will be inſuportable from the heat and exhalations. lere is alſo a lake full of black, thick wa-r, which ſeems always to be boiling.

SOLFWITZBURG, or SYLVISBORG, a a-port of Blekingen, in Sweden.

SOLIHULL, a ſmall town in Warwick-ire, 6 miles W. of Coventry, and 107 W. of London. Market diſuſed.

SOLEMAN, a town of Tunis.

SOLINGEN, a town of Berg, in Weſt-halia.

SOLIKAMSK, a town of Perm, in Ruſ-a, famous for its ſalt-pits and good orks.

SOLMS, a principality of Germany, in he Weterau. The counts are divided ıto ſeveral branches.

SOLMS, or BURG SOLMS, a town of olms Braunfels, in the circle of the Up-er Rhine.

SOLOMAN ISLANDS, in the S. Pacific cean, ſaid to be in lat. about 8. or 10. eg. S. lon. 160. W.

SOLOR, an iſland in the Indian Ocean, . of Celebes, governed by its own king. at. 9. 0. S. lon. 123. 55. E.

SOLSONA. See SALSONA.

SOLTAU, a town of Lunenburg-Zell.

Solvath, Pembrokeſ. a ſmall harbour or ove, ſurrounded with high and barren ocks, near St. David's.

SOLWAY FRITH, a large arm of the ea, between Cumberland and Kircud-rightſhire. The narrow part of it, at boulneſs, is ſafely forded at low-water, vith a guide, although the current be extremely rapid.

SOLWAY MOSS, a large, black moraſs, n Cumberland, near the river Eſk, on the orders of Scotland. It conſiſts of 1600 ıcres of thin, peaty mud, with a cruſt too reak, in the drieſt ſummer, to ſupport a nan's weight. In December, 1769, being ſwoln by the heavy rains, it burſt through the ſhell of turf which covered it, and ſpread a black ſtream, filled with maſſes of peat, over 400 acres of cultivated land in the neighbouring valley, which it entirely filled up. On this occaſion, large horns of deer, and other ſubſtances were ejected.

Sambern, Upper and Lower, Hampſ. near Stockbridge.

SOMBRERA, a ſmall uninhabited iſland in the W. Indies. Lat. 18. 40. N. lon. 63. 25. W.

SOMBRERE CHANNEL, a channel between the Nicobar Iſlands.

Somegill, a river in Radnorſhire, which runs into the Lug, a little below Preſteign. Somerby, Lincolnſ. between Horncaſtle and Alford. Somerby, Linc. near Grantham. Somerby, Lincolnſ. near Gainſborough. Somerby, Lincolnſ. near Glandford Bridge. Somercotes, Derbyſhire, in Scarſdale, SE. of Alfreton. Somerfield, or Somerville, Kent, near Selling. Somerford, Cheſh. near Congleton. Somerford, Hants, near Chriſtchurch. Somerford, Staffordſ. on the Penk, near Brewood. Somerford, Great, Wilts, SE. of Malmſbury. Somerford, Little, Wilts, on the Iſis, near Cricklade. Somerhill, Kent in Tunbridge, pariſh, 3 miles from Maidſtone. Somer Houſe, Durham, between Darlington and Staindrop. Somerley, Suffolk, on the Yare, near Leoſtoff. Somerley Hall, or Somerleton, Suffolk, by Heringfleet. Somerſall-Hall, Derbyſ. in Scarſdale. Somerſall, Herbert, and St. Peter's, Derbyſ. near Boyliſton. Somerſcale, Yorkſ. near Barden Tower and Chace.

SOMERSETSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the NW. by the Briſtol Channel; on the N. by Glouceſterſhire, from which it is divided by the Avon; on the E. by Wiltſhire, on the SE. by Dorſetſhire, and on the SW. by Devonſhire. Its length, from NE. to SW. is about 65 miles, and its breadth, from E. to W. between 30 and 40. It is divided into 40 hundreds, which contain 3 cities, 33 market-towns, 482 pariſhes, about 56,000 houſes, and 300,000 inhabitants. The air, in the lower grounds, is univerſally mild, and generally wholeſome. The ſoil is various. The NE. quarter is in general ſtony, and poſſeſſes a lofty tract, called the Mendip Hills. Toward the centre of the county, where its principal rivers unite, are fens and marſhy moors of great extent. On the W. ſide is the ridge of the Quantock-Hills, with many downs and open heaths; and in the NW.

NW. corner, lies the black, ſteril region of Exmoor. The S. part towards Dorſetſhire, is high, but well cultivated; and throughout the county, eſpecially in its SW. quarter, vales of the greateſt fertility are interſperſed. The principal rivers are the Parret, Ivel, Chew, Axe, Thone, Brent, Exe, Frome, and Avon. The Mendip-Hills afford abundance of coal and minerals. Chedder is celebrated for its cheeſes. Cattle, nearly equal in ſize to the Lincolnſhire, are fed in the fine meadows about the head of the Parret. The beſt gooſe feathers for beds come from the Somerſet marſhes; the unfeeling inhabitants, however, often pluck the poor birds white yet living. Red and yellow ochre are found here, and cyder is a common product of this country; it has alſo a conſiderable ſhare in the manufacture of fine cloths, druggets, ſhalloons, knit ſtockings, &c.

Somerſham, Huntingdonſ. among the fens, NE. of St. Ives. Somerſham, Suffolk, S. of Needham.

* SOMERTON, a town of Somerſetſ. formerly a conſiderable place, from which the county took its name. The Weſt Saxon kings had a caſtle here, now demoliſhed, the conſtableſhip of which appears to have been a conſiderable truſt, for king John of France, who was removed from Hertford Caſtle, and priſoners of the higheſt rank, were committed to it. There is one county jail at Ilcheſter, and another at Somerton, and the aſſizes are held at Wells, although generally in the ſummer alternately with Taunton and Bridgewater. It contains at preſent, about 250 houſes, and 1500 inhabitants in the whole pariſh, and is chiefly noted for its large markets and fairs. It is ſeated on a branch of the Parret, 18 miles S. by W. of Wells, and 123 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tueſday for corn and cattle, and on every other Monday for lean cattle. The markets for beaſts are conſiderable. Fairs on Tueſday in Paſſion Week, Tueſday three weeks after ditto, Tueſday ſix weeks after ditto, and Tueſday nine weeks after ditto.

Somerton, Suffolk, NW. of Melford. Somerton-Caſtle, Lincolnſ. NE. of Beckingham. Somerton, E. and W. Norfolk, near Winterton Neſs.

SOMME, a department of France, bounded on the N. by the dept. of the Straits of Calais, and on the E. by the dept. of the Aiſne. It is ſo named from a river that riſes in the dept. of Aiſne, and watering St. Quentin, Peronne, Amiens, Abbeville, &c. enters the Engliſh Channel about 5 miles WNW. from St. Valery. Amiens is the capital.

Sommercotes, N. and S. Lincolnſ. on each ſide of Saltfleet. Sommeris, Bedfordſ. 2 miles NE. of Luton.

SOMMIERES, a town in the dept. of Gard, noted for a manufacture of thick ſerges, which bear its name. It is ſeated on the river Vidourle, 20 miles SSW. of Niſmes.

SONCINO, a town in the Cremoneſe.

SONDERSHAUSEN, a town of Schwartzburg, in upper Saxony. In the armory of the ruling prince, is an image of Patrich, one of the old Wendiſh idols.

SONDRIO, or SONDRIS, a town in the country of the Griſons, capital of the Valteline. It is ſaid to reſemble a deſerted place, having little trade or animation. In 1620, here was a dreadful maſſacre of the Proteſtants, which laſted three days; it began at Tirano, and extended to all the towns of the Valteline. Sondrio is built in a romantic ſituation, at the extremity of a narrow valley, on both ſides of the Malenco, a rapid torrent, which frequently overflows its banks, 15 miles SSE. Chiavenna.

SONERCON, or SUNNERGAUM, a village, once a large city of Hindooſtan, the provincial capital of the eaſtern diviſion of Bengal; famous for a manufacture of fine cotton cloths, before Dacca was built. It is ſeated on a branch of the Burrampooter, 15 miles SE. of Dacca.

SONNEBURG, a town in the archduchy of Auſtria, a citadel of which gives name to a country in the circle of Auſtria veſted in the houſe of Auſtria, and a town of Coburg, in Upper Saxony.

SONNENSTEIN, a fortreſs of Meiſſen, in Upper Saxony, near Pirna. Near this place a Saxon army, of 17,500 men, had encamped and entrenched in 1756, but being unable to paſs the Elbe into Bohemia, were compelled by the Pruſſians, who had blocked up the river at Ebenheit, to ſurrender priſoners at diſcretion.

SONORA, a province of New Navarre, in N. America, ſituated on the coaſt of the Gulf of California. It is but little known.

SOOLOA, an iſland of the Eaſtern Ocean, ſituated to the SW. of Mindanao, almoſt midway between that iſland and Borneo. It is about 80 miles long and 12 broad, and contains about 60,000 inhabitants, who are governed by a ſultan. The natives are Malays. It is a great mart, and the Engliſh Eaſt-India Company have a reſident here. Abundance of edible birds-neſts are found in the rocks of the neighbouring nuring ſea, but its principal production s ſago.

SOORANDUR, a town of Hindooſtan, n the Oriſſa country, ſituated near the iver Mahanada, 275 miles W. of Calutta.

SOPHIA. See SOFIA.

SOPHIANA, a town of Adirbeitzan, n Perſia.

Sopley, Hants, 2 miles from Chriſtburch.

SOPRON, or EDENBURG, a town and unty of Hungary, 29 miles SW. of rſtburg.

Sopworth, Wilts, SW. of Malmſbury.

Sorrell, Herts, near St. Albans.

SORA, a town of Lavora.

SORA, a town of Ratibor, in Sileſia.

Sorankes, Kent, in Stanſtede pariſh.

SORAW, an ancient town of Luſatia, ith manufactures in cloth, and a conſiderable trade in linen and yarn.

SORBONNE, a village in the dept. of e Ardennes, remarkable for being the rth-place of Robert de Sorbonne, confeſſor to St. Louis, who founded the celeated college at Paris, called after his me. It is 6 miles N. of Rethel.

SORIA, a town in Old Caſtile, ſituated ar the ſource of the Douro.

SORGUES. See VAUCLUSE.

SOROE, a town of Zealand, in Denark, noted for a royal academy, or gymſium. It is 35 miles SW. of Copenagen.

SORRENTO, a ſea-port town of Principato Citra, ſeated on the Bay of Naes.

SOSPELLO, a town of Nice.

Sotby, Lincolnſ. NW. of Horncaſtle.

Sotherton, Suffolk, near Blithborough.

Sotterley, Suffolk, near Beccles.

SOVANA, a town in Tuſcany.

SOUBISE, a town in the dept. of ower Charente, ſeated on an eminence, ar the river Charente, 3 miles W. of ochefort.

Sough-Hall, near Cheſter.

SOUILLAC, a town in the department Lot, ſeated on the river Boreſe, 32 les N. of Cahors.

SOUILLY, a town in the dept. of the euſe, 12 miles SSW. of Verdun.

Soulby, Weſtmorl. near Kirby Steven.

Souldern, Oxfordſhire, E. of Doddington.

Souldrop, Bedfordſ. NE. of Harrold. South-End, Warwickſ. between Aſtley and illington.

SOUND, THE, or ORESOUND, a ſtrait tween Sweden and Denmark, through ich ſhips uſually ſail between the ocean d the Baltic. It is about 4 miles broad, and here the Danes take toll of the merchant-ſhips that paſs. See ELSINORE.

SOUR, or SUR, a ſea-port of Syria, in the pachalic of Saida, or Acre, near the remains of the ancient and celebrated Tyre. It is now a village, ſituated on a peninſula, which projects from the ſhore into the ſea. This head of land is a ſolid rock, covered, however, with a brown cultivable earth, and forming a plain about 800 paces long by 400 broad. The iſthmus joining the plain to the continent is of pure ſea ſand; this difference of ſoil renders the inſular ſtate of the plain, before Alexander joined it to the ſhore by a mole, very viſible. On this iſthmus, the village of Sour is ſituated. In one point of the peninſula is a baſon, which was evidently a port formed by art, but is now ſo choked up, that children paſs it without being wet above the middle. Juſt without the walls of the ancient city, on the eaſtern ſide, is an ancient tower, which contains ſeveral wells of excellent water; they are about 15 cubits deep; and though the water does not riſe in them above eight inches, they are never dry. About the beginning of October, this water always becomes ſo muddy as to be unfit for uſe; but by throwing a few pitchers of ſea-water into the well, it ſoon recovers its tranſparency; this operation, which the inhabitants call the marriage of the ſea and land waters, gives occaſion to an annual feſtival, which is celebrated with muſic and dancing. The purple dye, ſo highly celebrated by the ancients, is now no longer known here; but a modern voyager, the Abbe Mariti, informs us, that when he viſited Tyre, walking on the ſea-ſhore, his guide ſhowed him a ſpecies of murex, which emitted a beautiful purple fluid; but the uſe of it as a colour, is unknown to the Arabs. Here are only 50 or 60 poor families, who live on the produce of their little grounds and gardens, and a trifling fiſhery. At the SE. corner are the ruins of a Chriſtian church. It is 18 miles S. of Saida, and 80 NNW. of Jeruſalem.

SOURE, or SURE, a river which runs from E. to W. through Luxemberg, and falls into the Moſelle, a little above Treves.

SOURNIA, a town in the dept. of the eaſtern Pyrenees, 21 miles W. of Perpignan.

SOUSE, or SUSA, a town of Tunis, one of the beſt in the country, capital of a province of the ſame name. It is a place of ſome trade for oil and linen, and has a good harbour. It is 54 miles S. of Tunis.

SOUTCHEOU, a city of the firſt rank, in the province of Kiangnan, in China, beautifully and agreeably ſituated on a river which communicates with the Lake Tai. It is extolled by the Chineſe as an earthly paradiſe, for the delightfulneſs of the adjacent country, &c. The brocades and embroidery made here are highly eſteemed.

Soutern Caſtle, near York.

SOUTERRAINE, a town in the dept. of Creuſe, 12 miles W. of Gueret.

South, Suſſex, near Beachy-Head. South-Acre, Norfolk, near Caſtle-Acre.

* SOUTHAM, a town of Warwickſhire, with a conſiderable market for cattle. It is ſeated in a fertile ſoil, 8 miles SE. of Warwick, and 83 NW. of London. Market on Monday. Fair on July 10th.

Southam, Glouceſ. in Cleve pariſh, rendered remarkable for the antique houſe belonging to this tithing, which is a low building, in the ſtyle of the age of Henry IV. The hall floor is of painted brick, brought from Hales-Abbey, in high preſervation, on which are many curious devices.

* SOUTHAMPTON, formerly called HANTUN, a town of Hampſhire, ſituated on a fine inlet of the ſea, called Triſſanton-Bay, or Southampton-Water, deep enough for ſhips of 1500 tons burden, or rather for the largeſt ſhips. The two principal rivers that flow into it (the Itchen and the Teſt, Teſe, or Anton) admit ſmall craft ſome way up the country. The town is ſituated between theſe two rivers. It was formerly a port of great commerce, and ſtill poſſeſſes a reſpectable trade in French and Port wines, and in the Newfoundland fiſhery; having a particular connection, moreover, with Guernſey and Jerſey. The veſſels employed in foreign commerce are about 30, and in the coaſting-trade upwards of 100. Here alſo are manufactures of ſilk and carpets. The new church here is much admired, being chiefly deſigned by Mr. Reevely, from various ancient temples in Italy and Greece, and much above the general character of Engliſh buildings. The roof is ſaid to be the moſt maſterly performance of the kind in the world. It is a faſhionable place of reſort for ſea-bathing; and it was on this beach that the Daniſh king Canute gave that ſtriking reproof to his paraſitical courtiers; when the diſobedient tide waſhed his feet and wetted his robes. Two miles from this town is Woodmills, where there is a curious manufactory of ſhip-blocks, from which the royal dock-yards are ſupplied. Southampton is 12 miles SSW. of Winchester, and 75 WSW. of London. Markets on Tueſday, Thurſday, and Saturday.

SOUTHAMPTON, THE COUNTY OF. See HAMPSHIRE.

SOUTHAMPTON, a county of Virginia.

South Aſh, Kent, by Wrotham. Southbrent, Somerſetſ. Southbridge, Norfolk, NW. of Hingham. Southbrook, or Waters, Suſſex, W. of Sedgwick-Park. Southburn, Yorkſ. NE. of Bayntón. Southbury-Hill, Wiltſhire, near Everley-Warren. South-Cary, Dorſetſ. a mile W. of Wareham. South-Church, or Sea Church, Eſſex, near Prittlewell. South-Comb, Dorſetſ. near E. Lulworth. Southcot, Berkſ. near Reading. Southcot, Kent, near Eynsford. South-Downs, Suſſex, have a delightful proſpect of the ſea, and a carpet road of 13 miles, from Lewes to Brighthelmſtone. Southend, Eſſex, in Prittlewell pariſh. Being the neareſt watering place to the metropolis, it is now pretty much reſorted to, for the purpoſe of ſea-bathing, handſome accommodations for the company having been erected. It is 44 miles E. of London. Southend, Glouceſterſ. in Nibley pariſh. Southend, Kent, 2 miles N. of Chiſelhurſt. Southend, Lancaſ. near the Pile of Foudray. South-Mead, Glouceſterſ. in the pariſh of Weſtbury-on-Trin. Southerby, Cumberl. in the pariſh of Caſtle-Sowerby. Southerton, Lincolnſ. near Dunnington. Southes, Suſſex, S. of Lewes. Southfield, or Bankſide, Glouceſ. in Longborough pariſh. Southfleet, Kent, 2 miles S. of Graveſend. Southgate, Middleſex, a village on the verge of Enfield-Chace, 2 miles SE. of Eaſt Barnet. South-Hams, Devonſ. a number of villages near Torbay, noted for a ſtrong, rough cyder, reſembling wine in taſte. The ſoil, alſo, here being a reddiſh ſand, produces the beſt cabbages in England, and carrots not inferior to thoſe of Sandwich. South Harting, Suſſex. Southaven-Point, Dorſetſ. in Pool-Harbour. Southoe, Huntingdonſhire, near Great and Little Paxton. Southill, Bedfordſhire, 3 miles SW. of Biggleſwade. Southill, Cornwall, N. of St. Ives. Southlanes, Suſſex, in Eaſtbourn pariſh. Southleigh, Oxfordſ. 2 miles from Witney. Southmere, Norfolk, near Briſley. South-Minſter, Eſſex. Southold, Middleſex, in Haves pariſh. Southold, or Hole, Cornwall, near Clovelly-Harbour. Southolt, Suffolk, SE. of Eye. Southorp, Glouceſterſ. on the river Leck, 5 miles from Burford, in Oxfordſhire. Southorp, Northamptonſ. near Ulford. Southorp, Somerſetſ. between Ilminſter and Crovil. Southover, Dorſetſ. near Frampton. Southover, Suſſex, uſſex, near Lewes. South-Park, Suffolk, Hargrave pariſh. South-Park, Surry, W. of Crowhurſt. Southrey, Lincolnſ. the Witham, SW. of Horncaſtle. uthrey, Norfolk, near Holt. South-e-Caſtle, Hampſhire, near Portſmouth, ilt by Henry VIII. Southtown, Suf-lk, near Yarmouth.

SOUTHWARK, a town of Surry, which ay be conſidered as part of the metropo-, being ſeated on the oppoſite ſide of the hames, and under the juriſdiction of the d mayor, who is its bailiff, with a ward and deputy bailiff under him. uthwark is alſo one of the city wards, med Bridge Ward Without, and an al-rman is choſen to govern it. It is call-the Borough, by way of diſtinction, d is a large and populous place, parti-ating conſiderably in the commerce of ndon. The biſhop of Wincheſter had merly a palace here, with a park; when re were 18 brothels along the Bank-e, licenſed by that prelate, under cer-n regulations confirmed by parliament. he proſtitutes kept here were commonly led Winchester geeſe. It is divided in-two parts, the Borough Liberty, go-rned by the lord mayor; and the Clink, Manor of Southwark, under the juriſ-tion of the biſhop of Wincheſter, who, his ſteward, keeps a court leet and a art of record on the Bank-ſide. A Court conſcience is eſtabliſhed here, as well as London. Southwark contains 6 pa-hes, a new Romiſh chapel, many places worſhip for the Diſſenters of various de-minations; ſeveral charitable founda-ns, particularly thoſe two noble en-wments, St. Thomas's Hoſpital, and y's Hoſpital; together with the Mag-en Hoſpital; the Aſylum for Female phans; the Freemaſon's School, a late-erected building, for the ſame purpoſe; Philanthropic Reform, &c. Beſide King's Bench and Marſhalſea priſons, the county Bridewell, a new county-l, with a ſeſſion houſe adjoining, has n lately built. The court-houſe, at Margaret's Hill has been alſo rebuilt. Southwaite, Cumberl. near Keſwick. uthwate, Lancaſ. on the Dudden, W. Fourneſs Fells. Southwater, Suſſex. uthweald, Eſſex, to which Brentwood a hamlet, is ſituated on an eminence t commands an extenſive proſpect, 16 les ENE. of London. Southweek, ouceſterſ. in Tewkeſbury pariſh. South-ek, Hants, 5 miles N. of Portſmouth; commands a fine view of the harbour, k, Iſle of Wight, &c. as alſo of an ex-ſive vale on the land ſide, well planted and cultivated, bounded with hills, ſpread with woods; and of the S. Downs, covered with ſheep.

SOUTHWELL, a town in Notting-hamſhire, noted for a church, both paro-chial and collegiate, called a minſter, the middle of the weſtern part of which is of Saxon architecture. There belong to it 16 prebends, or canons, 6 vicars choral, an organiſt, 6 ſinging-men, 6 choriſters, 6 boys, who attend as probationers, a re-giſtrary, a treaſurer, an auditor, and a ver-ger. The chapter has a peculiar civil juriſdiction over 28 pariſhes, to moſt of which it has the right of preſentation, be-ſides others in Yorkſhire and Lincolnſ. It is ſituated on the Greet, a branch of the Trent, 10 miles NE. of Nottingham, and 139 NW. by N. of London. Market on Saturday.

Southwick, Hants. Southwick, Suſſex.

SOUTHWOLD, a populous ſea-port of Suffolk, ſeated on a cliff, or point of land, near a fine bay, at the mouth of the river Blythe. Here a much eſteemed ſalt is made, and it trades largely in herrings, ſprats, corn, &c. It is almoſt ſurrounded by water, eſpecially at very high tide. It is commonly called SOWLE, or SOLE, and its bay, named SOLEBAY, is remark-able for two famous ſea-fights; one in 1666, between the Engliſh fleet, of 114 men of war and frigates, and the Dutch fleet, of 103 men of war, when the latter were defeated, with the loſs of near 70 ſhips, 2 admirals, and 6000 men, while the Engliſh loſt only one ſhip. The fight of 1672, was between the combined fleets of England and France, conſiſting of 101 men of war, and the Dutch fleet of 91. The iſſue of the day was rather uncertain; the Engliſh loſt four ſhips and the Dutch three. Southwold is 20 miles S. of Yar-mouth, and 104 NE. of London. Mar-ket on Thurſday.

Southwood, Hants, between South-Sea Caſtle, and Thorney-Iſland. South-worth, Lancaſ. N. of Warrington. Southy Bank, Lincolnſ. in Lower-Hol-land.

SOUTRA-HILL, the moſt elevated hill in the mountainous ridge of Lammer-muir, in the N. part of Berwickſhire, in Scotland. In former times, it was a noted ſea-mark. In this dreary part of the country, there is ſcarce a tree or a buſh, and few houſes or villages; ſome ſucceſsful exertions, however, have been made to improve the ſouthern ſide of this mountain, near the village of Channelkirk.

SOUVIGNY, a town in the dept. of Allior, ſeated on the rivulet Queſne, 6 miles W. of Moulins, and 107 S. of Paris.

Sow, a river in Staffordſhire, which runs into the Trent at Tixall, about 3 miles E. of Stafford. Sow, a river in Warwickſ. which runs into the Avon, above Stoneleigh Abbey, about 4 miles N. of Warwick. Sowbarrow, Cumberl. near Penrith. Sowberthwate, Lancaſ. N. of Dalton. Sowcam, Nottinghamſ. N. of Mansfield. Sowe, Warwickſ. on the river Sow. NW. of Comb Abbey. Sowerby, Cumberland, near Grayſtock Caſtle. Sowerby, Lancaſ. in Amounderneſs. Sowerby, Weſtmorl. NE. of Kirby Steven. Sowerby, Yorkſ. near Thirſk. Sowerby, Yorkſ. SW. of Halifax. Sowerby Temple, Weſtmorland, near Kirkby-Thore. Sowick, Lanc. NW. of Preſton. Sowland, Yorkſ. SW. of Halifax. Sowood, Norf. NW. of Reedham. Sowport, Cumberland, near Longtown. Sowerton, Devonſ. SW. of Okehampton. Sowterfield, Cumberland, NW. of Ireby.

SOWTHAM, a well accommodated town of Warwickſhire, ſituated near Napton, in the road from Banbury to Coventry, 6 miles SE. of Warwick, and 87 NW. of London. A conſiderable market on Monday.

Sowthorp, Lincolnſ. W. of Stainfleet. Sowthorp, Lincolnſ. near Kirton, in Lindſey. Sowton, Devonſ. near Exeter. Sowton, Shropſhire, between Prees and Wem. Sowton, or Southeram, Suſſex, near Lewes.

SPA, a town of Liege, in Weſtphalia, ſeated in a romantic valley, ſurrounded by woody mountains, 17 miles SE. of Liege. It is ſituated on a ſmall river that runs into the Ourte. It contains about 300 houſes, and is famous for its mineral waters. That called the Old Spa, conſiſts of miſerable cottages, and is properly a ſuburb to the other. The houſes of the New Spa are moſtly of wood, old-faſhioned, dark, and ſmall, and yet, it is affirmed, they can make up 1200 beds for ſtrangers. The inn, called the Court of London, is very large, the beſt, indeed, in the place, and moſt frequented. The chief ſprings are called Pouhon, Saviniere, Groiſbeeck, and Geronſter, to which Dr. Lucas has lately added the Pouhon Pia, and Barriſar. The inhabitants are much employed in making toys for ſtrangers, as the town partly reſembles a fair, during the water-drinking ſeaſon. There are beautiful, healthful, and romantic rides on every ſide, with a great variety of pleaſant walks. There are public rooms for aſſemblies every night, and balls two or three times a week. The waters were firſt diſcovered in 1326.

Spade-Adam, Cumberl. near Beaucaſtle. Spadſorth, Nottinghamſhire, near Newark.

SPAIN, a conſiderable kingdom of Europe, bounded on the N. by the Bay of Biſcay; on the NE. by the Pyrenean Mountains, which ſeparate it from France; on the E. S. and SE. by the Mediterranean, and the Straits of Gibraltar; on the SW. by the Atlantic; and on the W. by Portugal and the Atlantic. It is about 700 miles in length, and 500 in breadth. It contains the provinces of Old and New Caſtile, Andaluſia, Arragon, Eſtramadura, Galicia, Leon, Catalonia, Granada, Valencia, Biſcay, the Aſturias, Murcia, and Upper Navarre; ſome of which have been ſeparate kingdoms. The air of Spain is dry and ſerene, except during the equinoctial rains, but exceſſively hot in the ſouthern provinces, in ſummer. The vaſt mountains, however, that run through Spain, are very beneficial to the inhabitants, by the refreſhing breezes that come from them in the ſouthernmoſt parts, though thoſe in the N. and NE. are in the winter extremely cold. The ſoil is very fertile; but there are large tracts of uncultivated ground. The produce of the country is fine wheat, barley, ſaffron, exquiſite honey, ſilk, ſalt petre, ſalt, barrillas, (a ſpecies of pot-aſh) and even ſugar-canes. It produces the richeſt and moſt delicious fruits that are to be found in France and Italy, oranges, lemons, prunes, citrons, almonds, raiſins, figs, dates, pomegranates, olives, &c. Their wines are deſervedly in high eſteem. Wolves are the chief beaſts of prey that infeſt Spain. The wild bulls, which are caught in Andaluſia, have ſo much ferocity, that their bull-fights were formerly the moſt magnificent ſpectacle the court of Spain could exhibit; this barbarous amuſement, however, is now, in part, exploded. Their domeſtic animals are horſes that are remarkably ſwift, mules, horned cattle, which are but few, ſheep, &c. The wool of the latter is ſuperior to any in Europe; the beſt is that of Old Caſtile. Spain abounds in minerals and metals, cornelian, agate, jacinth, loadſtones, turquoiſe-ſtones, quickſilver, copper, lead, ſulphur, alum, calamine, cryſtal, marbles of ſeveral kinds, porphyry, the fineſt jaſper; and even diamonds, emeralds, and amethyſts, are found here. Anciently it was celebrated for gold and ſilver mines, but, ſince the diſcovery of America at leaſt, no attention

FRANCE
SPAIN
&
PORTUGAL.
AFRICA
Barcelona
Valencia
Elbo R.
Citadella
Majorca
Formentera I.
C. de Palos
C. Ferret
C. Falcon
Longitude E. 2 from London 3

ttention has been paid to them. The principal rivers are the Duero, Tajo, Guadiana, Guadalquiver, Ebro, Gualdalaviar, and Segura. Spain, which, in the times of the Goths and Moors, contained between 20 and 30 millions of people, is now but thinly inhabited, to which various cauſes have contributed; as the expulſion of the moors, the emigrations to the colonies, the vaſt numbers and celibacy of the clergy, and the indolence of the natives. It is ſuppoſed to contain, at preſent, about 7 500,000, inhabitants. The greateſt part of the neceſſary artiſans are French, as the natives diſdain to ſtoop to handicraft trades. The perſons of the Spaniards in general, are tall, their complexions ſwarthy, and their countenances expreſſive. The women are ſmall and tender, and, in general, poſſeſs little of that beauty which reigns in their novels and romances. The eſtabliſhed religion of Spain is popery, and here the inquiſition once reigned in all its horrors; but, although it ſtill exiſts, it has been lately rendered, by the intervention of the royal authority, comparatively harmleſs. Spain has 44 epiſcopal ſees, and 24 univerſities. It was once the moſt free, but is now one of the moſt deſpotic kingdoms in Europe. They had once their cortes, or parliaments, which had great privileges; but though not abſolutely aboliſhed, they have little or no part in the government. They are aſſembled indeed, occaſionally, as at the acceſſion of the monarch) but merely as an appendage to the royal ſtate, without power, or any other conſequence than what reſults from their individual rank. Madrid is the capital.

SPAIN, NEW. See MEXICO.

Spaines-Hall, Eſſex, in the pariſh of Finchingfield.

SPAITLA, a town of Tunis, with Roman ruins of great extent and magnificence, SPALATRO, a ſea-port of the late Venetian Dalmatia. Here are grand and extenſive ruins of a fabric of the Emperor Dioclesian, of which the late Mr. Robert Adam publiſhed a ſplendid account, enriched with 71 folio plates. In 1784, Spalatro was nearly depopulated by the plague. It is ſeated on the Gulf of Venice, with a large, deep, and well frequented harbour, in lat. 44. 4. N. lon. 17. 31. E.

Spaldick, Huntingdonſhire.

SPALDING, a neat populous, town of Holland, in Lincolnſhire, chiefly ſurrounded by gardeners' grounds. From its neatneſs, and the canals in the ſtreets, it reſembles a Dutch town, and veſſels of 50 or 60 tons, carrying coals, corn, &c. come up here with the tide. Much hemp and flax is grown in the neighbourhood. It is ſeated on the river Welland, 20 miles N. by E. of Peterborough, and 100 N. of London. Market on Tueſday. See HOLLAND.

Spaldington, Yorkſ. N. of Howdon. Spaldwick, Huntingdonſ. NE. of Kimbolton. Spanby, Lincolnſ. N. of Fakenham.

SPANDAW, a flouriſhing and populous town in the Middle Marche of Brandenburg, ſurrounded on all ſides by moraſſes. Here is a conſiderable foundry of arms. It is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Havel and Spree, 8 miles NW. of Berlin.

Spaniſh Iſland, in Cork, Munſter, in the Bay of Baltimore.

SPANNEBURG, a town in the archduchy of Auſtria.

SPANISH TOWN. See JAGO, ST.

SPARENBURG, a town and citadel of Ravenſburg, in Weſtphalia.

Spanſe-Hill, in Clare, Munſter.

Sparger, Cornwall, W. of Penryn.

Sparham, Norfolk, S. of Repeham.

SPARNECK, a town of Culmbach, in Franconia.

Sparſholt, Berks, 5 miles from Wantage. Sparſhot, Hants, NW. of Winchester.

SPARTEL, CAPE, a promontory on the NW. point of Barbary, at the entrance of the Straits of Gibraltar. Lat. 35. 42. N. lon. 5. 55. W.

SPARTENBURG, a county of S. Carolina.

SPARTIVENTO, CAPE, a promontory on the coaſt of Naples, at the SE. extremity of Calabria Ultra. Lat. 37. 50. N. lon. 16 10. E.

Sparwnton, Yorkſ. NE. of Kirby Moorſide. Speak, Lancaſ. on the Merſey, SE. of Liverpool.

SPEAN, a conſiderable river of Inverneſſhire, which iſſues from Loch Laggan, and flowing in a weſterly direction, falls into the river Lochy, about a mile below Loch Lochy.

SPEIGHTS TOWN, a ſea-port town on the NW. coaſt of Barbadoes, Spelbrook, Hertfordſ. S. of Stortford. Speldherſt, Kent, 3 miles SW. of Tunbridge. Over the porch of its church, cut in ſtone, are the arms of the Duke of Orleans, who was taken priſoner at the battle of Agincourt, by Richard Waller of Gromebridge, at whoſe houſe the duke was kept near 25 years, during which he was a good benefactor to the church of Speldherſt.

SPELLO, a town of Spoleto.

Spelmonden, Kent, near Horſmonden.

Spelwell Mount, Northamptonſ. near Daventry. Spen, Durham, on the Darwent, oppoſite to Gibſide.

Spence River, in Down, Ulſter.

SPENCER, a town of Maſſachuſetts.

Spene, or Speenham-Land, the Spinæ of the Romans, Berks, on the Kennet, near Newbury. Spennythorn, Yorkſ. near Midham. Spernal, Warwickſ. N. of Coughton. Spetchley, 3 miles E. of Worceſter. Spetſbury, Dorſetſ. near Blandford. Speton, and its Cliff, on the ſea, NW. of Flamborough-Head. Spexhall, Suffolk, near Haleſworth.

SPEY, a great and rapid river of Scotland, which iſſues from Loch Spey, in Inverneſsſhire, divides the counties of Murray and Banff for more than 20 miles, and enters the German Ocean at Speymouth, about 8 miles N. of Gordon Caſtle.

SPEZZIA, or SPETIA, a town of Genoa, with a good harbour, ſeated on a gulph of the ſame name, 42 miles SE. of Genoa.

SPICE ISLANDS. See MOLUCCAS.

SPIEGELBERG, a town of Calenburg, in Weſtphalia, capital of a country of the ſame name, 18 miles in length, and 10 in breadth. It is ſubject to the prince of Orange, under the protection of the houſe of Hanover.

SPIELBERG, a town of Oetingen, in Suabia, inſulated in the margraviate of Anſpach.

SPIETZ, a town of Berne, ſituated on the weſt coaſt of the lake Thun, 25 miles SSE. of Berne.

SPIGNO, a town of Montferrat.

Spigurnel, Warwickſ. near Milverton.

Spike-Iſland, near Cork-Harbour, Munſter.

SPILEMBURGO, a town of Friuli.

Spillhill, or Spilſil-Court, Kent, near Staplehurſt. Spilſbury, Oxfordſhire, near Cadlington and Charlbury.

SPILSBY, a town in Lincolnſhire, ſeated on the ſide of a hill, 17 miles N. of Boſton, (to which a turnpike road leads from it) and 132 N. by E. of London. Market on Saturday.

Spindleſton, Northumberl. near Bamburgh. Sprinkhull, Derbyſ. in Scarſdale. Spinney-Abbey, Cambridgeſ. near Soham.

SPIRBACH, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine, ſeated on a ſmall river of the ſame name, which falls into the Rhine at Spire.

SPIRE, a free and imperial town in the palatinate of the Rhine, capital of a biſhopric of the ſame name. It was burnt by the French in 1689; and in 1698, the Imperial Chamber was removed to Wetzlar. In a diet held here, in 1529, the Reformers firſt obtained the name of Proteſtants. It is 12 miles SW. of Heidelberg.

SPIRE, a biſhopric in the circle of the Upper Rhine, about 50 miles in length and 30 in breadth. It is divided into two parts by the Rhine, and is a fertile country. Spire is the principal town.

SPIRITU-SANTO, a town of Braſil, in the government of Rio Janeiro, with a harbour. It is ſeated by the ſea-ſide, in a very fertile country, in lat. 20. 30. S.

SPITAL, a town of Carinthia.

Spital Gate, Glouceſ. near Cirencester. Spital, Cheſhire, near Bougnton. Spittle, Northumberland, S. of Berwick. Spittle, Northumberland, near Hexham. Spittle, Yorkſ. between Bulmer and Flaxton. Spittle, Yorkſ. on Stainmore Foreſt.

SPITHEAD, a ſpacious road for ſhipping, between Portſmouth and the Iſle of Wight, where the royal navy commonly rendezvous in time of war.

Spittle in the Street, in Lincolnſhire, between Gainſborough and Market-Raſin, 10 miles N. of Lincoln. It was part of the Roman cauſeway, leading from London, by Lincoln, to the Humber, which the country people call the High-Street, it being thrown up to a great height, and in ſome places ſeven yards broad. Here are two ſprings, one called Julian's Well, and the other Caſtiana Well. Great numbers of Roman coins have been dug up in this village, and there are great foundations all around, whence it is conjectured, that ſome Roman town ſtood by the highway.

SPITZBERGEN, or EAST GREENLAND, the moſt northern country of Europe, conſiſting of an iſland, or iſlands, ſituated between Greenland to the W. and Nova Zembla to the E. The coaſt is beſet with craggy mountains, and in the months of June, July, and Auguſt, the ſun never ſets; for the reſt of the year it is hardly ſeen at all. In the valleys are large white bears, white foxes, and ſome curious birds and plants. The inland parts are uninhabited, and the coaſts are only frequented for the purpoſe of catching whales. Lat. 76. 30. to 79. 40. N. lon. 6. to 16. E.

Spix-worth, near Norwich. Spodden, a river in Lancaſhire. Spoforth, Yorkſ. S. of Knareſborough.

SPOLETO, a city of Italy, capital of Umbria,

Umbria, or the duchy of Spoleto. It was formerly a large place, but, in 1703, ſuffered greatly by an earthquake, and is now thin of inhabitants. There are the ruins of an amphitheatre, a triumphal arch, and an aqueduct. It is ſeated in a country noted for excellent wine, 53 miles NNE. of Rome.

SPOLETO, anciently UMBRIA, a duchy of Italy, in the States of the Church, E. of the Orvietan, and the Patrimonio; about 40 miles in length, and nearly as much in breadth.

Spondon, SE. of Derby. Sponebed, or Spoonbed, Glouceſterſ. in Painſwick pariſh.

SPONHEIM, a country in the circle of Upper Rhine, between the Rhine and the Moſelle. It is divided between the elector Palatine, the duke of Deux Ponts, and the margraviate of Baden.

Spons Hoſpital, Warwickſ. near Coventry. Spooner-Row, Norfolk, a mile and a half SW. of Windham. Spoonkill, Shropſ. S. of Wenlock. Spoonley, Shropſhire, near Drayton. Sporle, Norfolk, NE. of Swaffham. Spraiton, Devonſ. near Bow.

SPRANGENBURG, a town of Heſſe Caſſel, 17 miles SE. of Caſſel.

Spraſton, Cheſhire, near Kinderton. Spratton, 2 miles from Northampton.

SPREE, a river of Germany, which riſes on the frontiers of Bohemia, croſſes Luſatia, enters the marquiſate of Brandenburg, and after paſſing by Berlin, joins the Havel at Spandaw.

SPREMONT, a town and ſmall county of Limburg, inſulated in the biſhopric of Liege, 5 miles NW. of Spa.

Spridlington, 6 miles N. of Lincoln.

SPRINGFIELD, a town of N. America, in the ſtate of Maſſachuſetts, ſeated on the E. ſide of Connecticut River, 73 miles W. of Boſton.

Springfield, in Cork, Munſter.

Springfield, Boſwel and Richards, Eſſex, near Chelmsford. Spring Head, Yorkſ. 4 miles W. of Hull. Spring Park, Glouc. 4 miles from Durſley. Springthorp, Lincolnſ. E. of Gainſborough. Sprotborough, Yorkſ. NE. of Rotherham. Sproteley, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, S. of Burton-Conſtable.

SPROTTAU, a town of Glogau, in Sileſia, ſituated at the confluence of the rivers Bober and Sprotta, 21 miles WSW. of Glogau.

Sprowſton, NE. of Norwich. Sprowton, Suffolk, near Ipſwich. Sproxton, Leiceſterſ. E. of Waltham-on-the-Would. Sproxton, Yorkſ. in Ridale, S. of Helmeſley. Sprufton, Yorkſ. E of Leeds. Spurleſton, Devonſ. near Plymſtock. Spurnhead, Yorkſ. at the mouth of the Humber, the SE. point of Holderneſs.

Spurreboy, in Limerick, Munſter.

Spurſtow, Cheſhire, NW. of Namptwich. Spurtwell, Northumberl. SW. of Hexham. Sputt, a river in Weſtmorl. Sputty, Denbighſhire. Spy Crag, Northumberl. near Lowes-Foreſt. Spy-Park, Wilts, near Chippenham.

SQUILLACE, a ſea port on the S. coaſt of Calabria Ultra, near a gulf of the ſame name. Lat. 38. 52. N.

Squince Iſland, near Glandore-Harbour, in Cork, Munſter. It produces a ſort of herbage, which has a wonderful good effect on diſeaſed horſes.

Squire Hills, Red and White, Northumberl. the former N. of Rédeſdale, and the latter near Cheviot-Hills. Sreven-Wood, Northumberl. in Herteſheved manor. Stabbers, Eſſex, in N. Ockingdon pariſh.

STABLO, or STAVELO, a town of Liege, with a manufactory of leather.

Stackhouſe, Yorkſ. near Settle.

Stack's Mountains, in Kerry, Munſter.

Stackworth, Cambridgeſ. S. of Newmarket Heath.

STADE, a town of Bremen, in Lower Saxony, formerly an Hanſeatic town, the capital of a county, and the reſidence of its counts. It is now the ſeat of the regency of the duchies of Bremen and Verden, as alſo of the chancery, chief court of juſtice, and conſiſtory, under the Elector of Hanover, to whom it is ſubject, together with its territory. In 1712, the Danes took it, after a bombardment, but in 1715, the Daniſh garriſon marched out, and was replaced by the troops of Hanover. In 1755, conſiderable ſums were aſſigned by the king of Great Britain, for the better fortifying of this town, and theſe improvements were completed with all poſſible ſkill and care. It is ſeated on the river Swinge, near its confluence with the Elbe, 22 miles W. of Hamburg.

Staden, Derbyſ. in the High Peak.

STADTHAGEN, a town of Schauenburg, Weſtphalia.

STAFARDA, in Saluzzo, Piedmont.

STAFFA, an iſland of Scotland, one of the Hebrides, a little to the W. of Mull. It is a mile long, and half a mile broad. The whole SW. end of this iſland is ſupported by ſtupendous ranges of baſaltic pillars, moſtly above 50 feet high, and ſtanding in natural colonnades. Some of theſe columns are above 60 feet thick, and are formed almoſt into the ſhape of thoſe uſed in architecture. Here is alſo a cavern, called Finma-coul, or Fingal's Cave, which extends about 250 feet under ground. Its entrance is a natural arch, more than 100 feet high. Hardly any thing can be conceived more magnificent than ſuch a ſpace, ſupported on each ſide by ranges of columns, and roofed by the bottoms of thoſe which have been broken off in order to form it. The cavern is lighted from without, ſo that its fartheſt extremity may be ſeen. Indeed, this iſland is every where ſupported by baſaltic rocks and pillars, much ſuperior in beauty and grandeur to thoſe which form the Giant's Cauſeway in Ireland.

* STAFFORD, the county town of Staffordſhire, containing two churches, and about 5000 inhabitants. It has a free-ſchool, and a fine, ſquare market-place, in which is a handſome county-hall, and under it the market-houſe. The ſtreets are large, and many of the houſes handſomely built. This town has greatly increaſed of late, both in population and wealth, by the manufacture of cloth and ſhoes. A county infirmary finiſhed here in 1772. It is ſituated in a plain, on the river Sow, near a navigable canal, which extends through ſeveral counties, 12 miles NW. of Lichfield, and 135 NW. of London. Market on Saturday.

STAFFORDSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the W. by Shropſhire and Cheſhire, on the NE. and E. by Derbyſhire, and on the SE. and S. by Warwickſhire and Worceſterſhire. It extends in length about 54 miles, and in breadth from 18 to 36. It is divided into 5 hundreds, which contain 1 city, 21 towns, 181 pariſhes, 670 villages, about 23 740 houſes, and 142,440 inhabitants. The principal rivers are the Trent, Dove, Sow, Churnet, Stour, Penk, and Manyfold. The air is reckoned pleaſant, mild, and wholeſome. The middle and ſouthern parts are level and plain, and the ſoil is good and rich; the N. are hilly and full of heaths and moors. The county, at large, contains about 780,800 acres, of which 600,000 are in a ſtate of cultivation. Staffordſhire is famous for its potteries, its inland navigations, and its foundries, blaſt furnaces, ſlitting mills, and various other branches of the iron trade. The mines of coals, copper, lead, and iron ore are rich and extenſive; thoſe of coal are ſuppoſed to occupy a ſpace of 50,000 acres. There are alſo numerous quarries of ſtone, alabaſter, and limeſtone. See CANAL, THE GRAND TRUNK.

Stafford, or Staneford, Dorſetſhire, E. of Dorcheſter, near Winterborn. Stafford Wood, Surry, in Limpoſfield pariſh.

STAGIRA, (now called LYBA NOVA, according to Dr. Brooke) a town of Macedonia, remarkable for being the birthplace of Ariſtotle, whence he is called the Stagirite. It is ſituated on the gulf of Conteſſa.

STAGNO, a ſea-port of Raguſa.

Stagno, Herts, in Paul's Walden pariſh. Stagſden, 4 miles from Bedford. Stagſhawbank, Northumb.

STAIN, a town in the Tyroleſe, and two towns in the archduchy of Auſtria, the moſt conſiderable of which is ſituated on the Danube, 32 miles WNW. of Vienna.

Stainber Hall, Yorkſ. SW. of Barnſley. Stainboro, Yorkſ. S. of Knareſborough Foreſt. Stainborough, Yorkſhire, 2 miles N. of Tankerſley. Stainbridge, Glouceſterſhire, in the pariſh of Cotes. Stainburn, Cumberl. near Workington. Stainby, Lincolnſ. S. of Grantham.

STAINDROP, a town of Durham, 13 miles NW. of Darlington, and 146 from London. Market diſuſed.

Stainer Hall, Yorkſ. near Selby.

* STAINES, a populous town of Middleſex, with ſeveral good inns. It was ſo called from its being the ancient boundary to the juriſdiction of the city of London, on the Thames. There is now above the bridge, at Colne Ditch, a ſtone ſet up for this purpoſe, called London Mark Stone, which bears the date of 1280. It is ſeated on the river Thames, over which it has an elegant ſtone bridge, of 3 elliptical arches, 17 miles W. by S. of London. Market on Friday.

Stainſby, Yorkſ. NE. of Yarum, near the Tees. Stainefield, E. of Lincoln. Stainfleet, Linc. near Gunthorp. Stainforth, Great and Little, Yorkſ. NW. of Settle. Staingrave, Yorkſhire, near Howingham. Stainham, Yorkſ. near Sheriff-Hutton. Stainington, Northumberland, near Morpeth. Stainington, Yorkſhire, SW. of Sheffield. Stainley, E. N. and W. Yorkſ. near Rippon and Boroughbridge. Stainmore, Weſtmorland, NE. of Kirby-Steven. Stainmore Croſs, or Roy Croſs, Yorkſ. N. Riding, on Stainmore-foreſt, a mountainous, ſtony tract. Stainſton, Yorkſhire, NE. of New Malton. Stainton, Cumb. SW. of Penrith. Stainton, Cumb. in Stanwix pariſh. Stainton, Linc. Stainton, Weſtm. in Haverſham pariſh. Stainton, Yorkſ. near near Brandsby. Stainton, Yorkſ. N. of Midlam. Stainton, Yorkſ. E. of Rotheram. Stainton, Great and Little, Cumb. in the pariſh of Dacre. Stainton, Great and Little, Durham, 5 miles NE. of Darlington. Stainton-in-the-Street, Durham, near Stretlam.

STAINVILLE, a town in the dept. of the Meuſe, 7 miles S. of Bar le Duc.

Stairs, Glouceſ. in Newnham pariſh. Stakes, Lanc. near Preſton.

STALBRIDGE, a town of Dorſetſhire, remarkable for a manufacture of ſtockings, and for great quantities of ſtone which are dug near it. Here is an ancient croſs, 22 feet high, ſtanding on a baſe of 8 feet. It has a large, ancient church, and is 20 miles N. of Dorcheſter, and 111 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Stalbridge Weſton, Dorſetſhire, 2 miles NW. of Thornhill. Stalesfield, Kent, 4 miles NE. of Lenham. Staley-Hall, Cheſhire, on the Tame, NE. of Stopford. Stalham, Norfolk, near Hickling.

STALIMENE. See LEMNOS.

Stallingborough, Lincolnſhire, W. of Grimſby. Stallington, Staffordſhire, near Fulford. Stalming, Lancaſhire, between Garſtang and the river Wire. Stamridge, Great and Little, Eſſex, near Rochford. Stamerham, Suſſex, S. of Horſham. Stamford, Bedfordſhire, near Southill.

*STAMFORD, a large, populous, rich, and compact town of Lincolnſhire, formerly much more conſiderable than at preſent, as at one time it contained 14 churches, which in Camden's time were reduced to 7, and at preſent to 5. It is an ancient place, and had formerly, as ſome ſay, a univerſity, or, at leaſt, two colleges, called Black Hall and Brazen Noſe. Some remains of theſe are ſtill viſible, and particularly the gate of the laſt, on which there is a brazen noſe and a ring through it. Moſt of the houſes are covered with ſlate; and here are ſome large, neat inns, which, indeed, have all the appearance of palaces. Its trade is chiefly in malt, ſea-coals, and freeſtone. The cuſtom of Borough Engliſh prevails here. It is ſeated on the river Welland, which is navigable here for barges, 26 miles NNW. of Huntingdon, and 96 N. by W. of London. Markets on Monday and Friday.

STAMFORD, a town of Kentucky.

Stamford, Northumb. in Embleton barony. Stamford, Yorkſ. near Hatfield-Chace. Stamford Bridge, Middleſex, between Little Chelſea and Walham Green. Stamford Bridge, (by ſome writers called Battle Bridge) Yorkſhire, on the Derwent, SW. of Wilton. Here King Harold gave a ſignal defeat to the forces of Harold the Norwegian, juſt before the arrival of William the Norman, in England. Stamfordham, Northumberland; though containing but one ſtreet, it has a well-endowed free-ſchool. Stamford-Hill, Middleſex, between Newington and Tottenham; is a hill, with a ſmall, but gradually increaſing village on its ſide.

STAMPALIA, an iſland of the Archipelago, about 16 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. It has very few inhabitants, and wants freſh water. It is 60 miles NNW. of Rhodes.

Stanbach, Herefordſ. near the Arrow, NW. of Pembridge. Stanborn, Eſſex, near Steple-Bumſted. Starborough, Herts, 2 miles beyond Hatfield. Stanbridge, Bedfordſhire, near Leighton-Buzzard. Stanbridge, Hants, NW. of Rumſey. Stanbridge, Yorkſhire, W. Riding. Hither the limeſtone that is dug in great plenty, by Berwick in Elmet, and burnt at Knottingley and Brotherton, is brought, at certain ſeaſons, for ſale to the W. part of this county. Stanbury, Yorkſ. SW. of Keighley.

STANCHIO, anciently COS, an iſland of the Archipelago, diſtant about 12 miles from the coaſt of Natolia, and 70 miles in circumference. It abounds with cypreſs and turpentine trees, with a great variety of medicinal and other plants. The wine produced here was famous among the ancients for a purgative quality. The capital, which is of the ſame name, is a conſiderable town, ſituated in a bay, with a harbour defended by a caſtle. Lat. 36. 45. N.

Stancliff, Derbyſ. in the High-Peak. Stancombe, Glouc. in Hinchcombe pariſh. Stand. Derbyſ. near Chatſworth. Standard Hill, Kent, S. of Newington, by Sittingbourn, on which, it is ſaid, Julius Cæſar encamped. It is the Durolerum of the Romans. Standard-Hill, Suſſex, now called the Beacon-Hill, near Battle, where William the Norman erected his ſtandard of defiance, the day before his battle with the Engliſh. Standel, Oxfordſ. in Pirton pariſh. Standen, E. and W. Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Standen, Upper and Nether, Bedfordſ. near Shitlington. Standerwick, Somerſetſ. NE. of Frome. Standford, Shropſ. 2 miles from Newport, in the road from London to Cheſter. Standiſh, Glouceſ. 4 miles NW. of Stroud, has a medicinal ſpring

ſpring, in great repute for the cure of many diſeaſes. Standiſh, Lancaſhire, N. of Wigan. Standiſh Morton, Glouceſterſhire, in the pariſh of Standiſh. Standley, near Durham.

STANDON, or STANDLOW, a town in Hertfordſhire, ſituated on the river Rib, over which it has a county bridge, and which runs through the middle of the town, 8 miles NE. of Hertford, and 27 N. of London. The Ermine ſtreet is generally ſuppoſed to paſs through this pariſh, over the Stoney hill field, from Braughing to Hertford. Market on Friday.

Standon, Staff. near Charlton. Stane, Linc. S. of the Saltfletbies. Stane, Yorkſhire, W. of Maſham-Chace. Staneland, Yorkſ. S. of Halifax, near the Calder.

STANEMORE, a dreary diſtrict of Weſtmorland, between Brough and Kirby-Steven, part of it being in Bows pariſh, in Yorkſ. Here is a fragment of Rerecroſs, ſet up as a boundary between England and Scotland, when Cumberland belonged to the latter kingdom.

Stanefgate, Eſſex, N. of Steple. Stanfield, Linc. W. of Horncaſtle, has a medicinal ſpring. Stanfield, Norfolk, near Windham. Stanfield, Norfolk, between Lytcham and Elmham. Stanfield, Yorkſ. on the Calder, W. of Halifax. Stanfield, Yorkſ. S. of Pontefract. Stanford, Bedf. near Southill. Stanford, Berks, near Farringdon. Stanford, Cheſhire, between Delamere Foreſt and Cheſter. Stanford, Kent, NW. of Weſtbythe. Stanford, Norf. near Langford and Lingford, ſo named from the ſtony ford over the river that paſſes through it. Stanford, Northumberland, W. of Dunſtaburg Caſtle. Stanford, Nott. on the river Soar, oppoſite to Loughborough. Stanford, Somerſ. Stanford, Worceſ. on the Teme, and the borders of Herefordſhire, S. of Orleton. Stanford, Biſhop's, Herefordſ. SE. of Bromyard. Stanford-Bridge, Cheſhire, over the Weever, S. of Nantwich. Stanford Bridge, Kent, SE. of Smarden. Stanford Bury, Bedfordſhire, near Stanford. Stanford Dingby, Berks, near Theal. Stanford-Hall, Northampt. near the Avon, towards Lutterworth. Stanford-le-Hope, Eſſex, between Orſet and the Thames, had formerly a ford, now a bridge over the rivulet, called by ſeamen, the Hope. Stanford Rivers, Eſſex, near Ongar. Stangartickſide, Cumb. near Harelaw. Stanger, Cumberl. on the W. ſide of Derwent Lake, in Croſthwaite pariſh. Stanger, Cumb. on the E. bank of the Cocker, 3 miles above Cockermouth. Here is a fine ſpa, but little known, and not much reſorted to.

STANHOPE, a ſmall town in Weſtdale, Durham, 20 miles SSW. of Durham, and 264 N. by W. of London. It has a ſpacious park, in which the Scots army encamped when they were beſieged, or rather ſtraitened, by Edward III. Market diſuſed.

Stanhow, Norf. E. of Snetſham. Stanidelf, Warw. in the precincts of Wincote. Stanigot, Lincolnſ. SE. of Market-Raiſin. Staninfield, Suffolk, between Bury and Lavenham. Staninghall, Lancaſ. in Amounderneſs, between the river Skippon and the Ocean. Staningtai, Norf. between Wurſted and Norwich. Staningley, Yorkſ. between Bradford and Leeds. Stank, Lancaſ. between the Leven Sands and Walney Iſland. Stari, Yorkſ. NE. of Northallerton. Stank, Yorkſ. near Leeds. Stanlake, Oxfordſ. near Stanton-Harcourt.

STANLEY LEONARD, a town in Glouceſterſhire, ſo named from the ancient priory dedicated to that ſaint, of which ſome ruins are yet remaining. It is 4 miles SW. of Glouceſter, and 104 W. by N. of London. Market on Saturday.

Stanley, Cheſhire, SW. of Frodſham. Stanley, Cheſhire, near Hooton. Stanley, Derbyſ. N. of Bolſover, has a mineral ſpring. Stanley, Lancaſ. N. of Cartmel. Stanley, Staff. S. of Cheadle, is a rough, ſtony place, though ſituated in the Moorlands. Stanley, Warwickſ. near Coventry. Stanley, Weſtm. NW. of Kendal. Stanley, Wilts, W. of Calne. Stanley, Yorkſ. near Wakefield. Stanley-Grange, Derbyſhire, near Morley. Stanley, King's, Glouceſ. 3 miles SW. of Stroud. Had formerly a palace of one of the Mercian kings. The poor people hereabouts are chiefly employed in the clothing manufactory. Stanley, North, Yorkſ. N. of Ripley. Stanley-Penteage, Glouceſterſ. by Winchcomb. Stanley-Pontlarch, Glouceſ. in Toddington pariſh. Stanley's-End, Glouceſ. in the pariſh of King's Stanley. Stanlow, Staff. E. of Knipperſley. Stanmore, Great, Middl. 10 miles NW. of London. Stanmore-Common, on a hill, affords an extenſive proſpect, and is ſo very elevated, that ſome high trees here ſerve as a landmark from the German Ocean. The ground floor of one of the houſes is ſaid to be on a level with Harrow church. Stanmore, Little, or Whitchurch, Middl. near Edgeware. Stanmore Round-Houſe, Middleſex, between Stanmore and Buſhy-Heath. Stanney, Great and Little, 3 miles from Cheſter.

ter. Stannington, Northumb. by Whalton. Stannington, Yorkſ. W. Riding, in Eccleſfield pariſh. Stannog, Hants, near Titchfield Bay. Stanpit, Kent, near Dartford. Stanſby, Derb. SE. of Cheſterfield. Stanſby, Yorkſhire, 2 miles from Stockton-upon-Tees. Stanſfield, Suff. N. of Clare. Stanſgarth, or Stainſacre, Yorkſ. S. of Whitby. Stanſgate, Eſſex, in Steple pariſh. Stanſhaw, Glouceſ. in the pariſh of Yate. Stanſhope, Staffordſ. 4 miles from Aſhburn.

STANSTED, a town of Virginia.

Stanſted, Kent, NW. of Hithe. Stanſted, Kent, 2 miles NW. of Wrotham. Stanſted, Suffolk, near Melford. Stanſted-Abbots, Herts, on the Lea, in the vale, near Eaſtwick. Stanſted-Bury, Herts, near Stanſted-Abbots. Stanſted-Foreſt and Park, Suſſex, near Racton, on the borders of Hampſhire; it is ſurrounded with woods, through which are cut the moſt agreeable viſtas imaginable; and at the W. opening, there is a fine view of the town and harbour of Portſmouth, the ſhipping at Spithead, St. Helen's, &c. &c. Stanſted Monfichet, Eſſex, near Birchanger, had its name from a caſtle fixed here anciently, on an artificial mount, ſome relics of which were, lately, if they are not ſtill viſible, about a quarter of a mile from the church. Stanſted-Street, Eſſex, near Stanſted-Monfichet. Stanted Thele, Herts, NE. of Hodſdon. Stanſwood, Hants, in the New Foreſt. Stanthorn, Cheſhire, NW. of Middlewich. Stantney, Cambridgeſhire, near Ely.

STANTON, a ſmall town in Lincolnſ. 16 miles ENE. of Lincoln, and 146 N. of London. Market on Monday.

Stanton, Derbyſ. near the Trent, S. of Burton. Stanton, Derbyſ. W. of Kegworth. Here is a very ancient chapel, the inſide of which is ſtill entire. The ceiling, which was painted, carved, and gilded, is in tolerable preſervation. It is now kept locked up, not being made uſe of. In the tower are three rooms, and over a part of the chapel is a fourth, all acceſſible by winding ſtairs of ſtone. One of theſe rooms Pope made uſe of as a ſtudy, having paſſed part of two ſummers here, in retirement, while employed in his tranſlation of Homer. At this place he was frequently viſited by Gay, who uſed to ſpend ſome time at Cockthorp, a ſeat belonging to Lord Harcourt, about 2 miles off. Stanton, Derbyſ. between Dall and the river Erwaſh. Stanton, Herefordſ. on the Arro, NW. of Pembridge. Stanton, Lancaſ. SE. of Dalton. Stanton, Northumb. NW. of Morpeth. Stanton, Nott. near Newark. Stanton, Shropſ. W. of Albrighton. Stanton, Shropſ. E. of Wem. Stanton, Shropſ. NE. of Biſhop's Caſtle. Stanton, Staffordſhire, near Wotton-under-Weever. Stanton, Wiltſhire, near Highworth. Stanton, Wilts, near Biſhop's Canings. Stanton, Worceſ. near Ridmerley, on the borders of Glouceſ. watered by two ſtreams, on which it has ſeven corn-mills. It had formerly a market and fairs, now diſuſed. Stanton, or Staunton, Glouceſterſ. 7 miles SW. of Campden, and 7 N. of Winchcomb. Stanton, or Staunton, Glouceſ. 2 miles W. of Colford, and 5 E. of Monmouth. The labouring people here are chiefly employed in the getting of iron ore, at which they earn good wages. Here is a ſtone of a prodigious ſize, ſtanding, as it were, on a point, ſo as to fill the beholder with apprehenſions of its being ready to fall. It is ſuppoſed to have been a rocking ſtone, placed here in the times of Paganiſm; but it has now loſt its motion. Stanton, All-Saints, and St. Joan's, Suffolk, NE. of Ixworth. Stanton Brudenel, Leiceſterſhire, 4 miles from Market-Boſworth. Stantonbury-Hall, Bucks, near Stony-Stratford. Stanton Chapel, Monm. on the river Hothny, NW. of Michael Church. Stanton-Drew, Somerſ. on the river Chew, which runs into the Avon, near Pensford, between Bath and Briſtol, 8 miles W. of the former. Here is a monument reſembling Stonehenge, conſiſting of a circle of ſtones 5 or 6 feet high; the diameter of the circle is 90 paces. Stanton-Fenny, Huntſ. SW. of St. Ives. Stanton Gabriel, Dorſetſhire, on the coaſt, E. of Lime. Stanton Hall, Northumberl. on the Font river, NW. of Morpeth. Stanton-Harcourt, 6 miles W. of Oxford. There is a large barrow in the fields adjacent, and near it ſome ſtones, which are 8 feet high, and 7 broad near the bottom. They are called the Devil's Coits, and are ſuppoſed to be made, by art, of ſmall ſtones cemented together, of which there are vaſt numbers in theſe fields. Stanton-Harold, with a park, Leiceſ. 2 miles N. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Stanton-in-the-Hole, Linc. NE. of Market-Raiſin. Stanton-in-the-Stones, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Stanton, King's, Devonſh. near Newton-Buſhel. Stanton-Lacy, Shropſ. on the Corve, N. of Ludlow. Stanton, Long, 8 miles from Cambridge. Stanton, Long, Shropſ. near the Corve, NW. of Prior's-Ditton. Stanton-on-the-Would, Nott. N. of Plum-tree.

tree. Stanton Prior, Somerſ. E. of Penſford. Stanton Quinton, Wilts, between Somerford and Caſtlecomb. Stanton, St. John, NE. of Oxford. Stanton-under-Barton, Leiceſ. near Bagworth. Stanton-upon-Wye, Herefordſ. N. of Mockes. Stanton Wivil, Leiceſterſhire, S. of Hallaton.

STANTZ, a town of Swiſſerland, formerly capital of the canton of Underwalden. It is ſituated near the lake of Lucerne, 8 miles SE. of Lucerne, and 42 E. of Berne. Alſo a river of Stiria, which runs into the Muhr, 2 miles ENE. of Luttenburg.

Stanville, or Park Corner, Oxfordſ. in Bix and Swincomb pariſhes. Stanwardins, Shropſ. SW. of Wem. Stanway, Eſſex, SW. of Colcheſter. Stanway, Glouc. 7 miles SW. of Campden. Stanwell, Middleſex, 2 miles NE. of Staines. Stanwick, Northamptonſ. N. of Higham-Ferrers. Stanwick, Yorkſ. 5 miles N. of Richmond. There is a ditch near it, 8 miles in length, cut between the Tees and Swale. Stanwix, Cumberland, near Carliſle, on the oppoſite ſide of the Eden. Stanyone, Northamp. SW. of Weldon. Stapeley, Cheſhire, SE. of Namptwich. Stapenhill, Derbyſ. SE. of Burton. Stapes-Hill, Dorſetſ. near Hamperſton. Staple, Kent, 3 miles SW. of Sandwich. Staple, Somerſetſ. NW. of Ilminſter. Stapledon, Devonſ. near Thornbury. Stapleford, 5 miles SE. of Cambridge. Stapleford, E. of Cheſter. Stapleford, Derbyſ. has a bridge, leading into Nottinghamſhire, on the Erwaſh. Stapleford, N. of Hertford, in the vale, near the river Beane. Stapleford, Leiceſ. 3 miles SE. of Melton-Mowbray. Stapleford, Lincolnſ. N. of Beckingham. Stapleford, near Nottingham. Stapleford, Wilts, near Staple-Langford. Stapleford, Abbots, Eſſex, near Ongar, E. of the river Rodon, or Rothing, over which it had a ford. Stapleford, Tany, or Tawny, Eſſex, N. of Stapleford-Abbots. Staplegate, Kent, near Nackington. Staplegreve, Somerſ. NW. of Taunton. Staplehurſt, Kent, 4 miles N. of Cranbrook. It ſtands in a healthy air, and fruitful ſoil. Staplehill, Devonſhire, near Truſham.

Stapleſtown, in Carlow, Leinſter.

Stapleton, Cumberl. near Beaucaſtle. Stapleton, Glouceſ. on the Frome, 3 miles NE. of Briſtol. Here is a well, called the Boiling Well, the waters of which guſh out from many places, in a perpendicular direction, like a boiling cauldron, and with ſo copious a ſtream, as to drive a mill a quarter of a mile from its ſource. Stapleton, 7 miles from Leiceſter. Stapleton, Somerſetſhire, near Martock. Stapleton, Yorkſhire, on the Tees, SW. of Darlington. Stapleton, Yorkſ. near Pontefract. Stapley Beacon, Suſſex, E. of Rotherbridge.

STARA RUSA, a town of Novogorod, in Ruſſia, ſituated to the S. of Lake Ilmen, on the river Poliſh, 56 miles S. of Novogorod.

Starberrow, Kent, SW. of Penſherſt. Starberton, Yorkſ. W. Riding, between Lanſtrethdale and Netherdale. Starburgh, Surry, E. of Crowberſt, was formerly called Pringham. Starch Green, Middleſex, between Shepherd's Buſh and Acton. Stareton, Warwickſhire, near Stonely.

STARCKENBURG, a town of Tyrol.

STARENBURG, a town of Upper Bavaria, ſituated on the Wurmſee.

STARGARD, or STAROGARD, a town of Pruſſian Pomerania, ſituated on the Fers, 20 miles S. of Dantzick.

STARGARD, OLD, a town of Mecklenburg, capital of a circle, 55 miles SE. of Guſtro.

STARGARD, NEW, a large, well-built town of Upper Saxony, capital of a duchy, and of all Ulterior Pomerania, with a noble college, good woollen manufactures, and a conſiderable trade. It is ſeated on the river Ibna, 14 miles ESE. of Stetin, (whither the court of regency, the chief tribunal, the exchequer, with other offices eccleſiaſtical and civil, have been removed) and 74 NE. of Berlin. Lat. 53. 20. N. lon. 14. 18. E.

STARKENBERG, a town and caſtle of Sponheim, Upper Rhine, one mile N. of Traerbach, and a town of Mentz, Lower Rhine.

Starſton, Norfolk, N. of Harleſton. Starton, Glouceſterſ. W. of Cheltenham.

START-POINT, a promontory of Devonſhire, in the Engliſh Channel, about 12 miles S. by W. of Dartmouth. Lat. 50. 9. N. lon. 3. 38. W.

STATEN ISLAND, an iſland of N. America, which forms the county of Richmond, in the ſtate of New York. It is about 18 miles in length, and 6 in its mean breadth, and contains upwards of 3100 inhabitants; in general the land is rough, and the hills high. Richmond, the only town of note, is principally inhabited by Dutch and French families, and is 9 miles SSW. of the city of New York.

STATEN LAND, a barren, craggy iſland, about 36 miles in length, and 15 in breadth, lying on the SE. ſide of Terra del

el Fuego, between which and this iſland re the Straits of Le Maire. Nothing can e imagined more ſavage, wild, gloomy, nd horrible, than the aſpect of ſome parts f this coaſt, according to the author of nſon's voyage, being compoſed of inceſſible rocks, without the leaſt mixure of earth or mould between them, iſing up to a prodigious height, and rminated in a vaſt number of ragged oints, which points are themſelves ſurounded on every ſide with frightful preipices, and often overhang in a moſt ſtoniſhing manner. All of them are coered with everlaſting ſnow, and are geerally ſeparated from each other by narow cleſts or chaſms, nearly perpendicuar, which extend through the main ſubance of the rocks or hills which bear hem, almoſt to their very bottoms, and ppear as if the country had been rent by arthquakes. On the N. ſide, however, according to Capt. Cook, who paſſed he Straits of Le Maire, in January 1769) re the appearances of bays or harbours, nd the land is neither deſtitute of wood or verdure. Lat. 54. 40. S. lon. 65. W.

Statfall Caſtle, Kent, on the deſcent of he hill below Limme church; it inloſed about ten acres, and its walls, though now much broken, were very hick. It is evidently of Roman original.

Statfold, Staff. W. of Tame and Tinmore.

Stathe, Somerſetſ. on the Parret, W. of Langford.

Stathes, Yorkſhire, NW. of Whitby.

Statborn, Leiceſterſhire, N. of Waltham-on-the-Would.

STATO-DE GLI-PRESIDII. See PRESIDII.

STATO-DELLA CHIESA, or STATES OF THE CHURCH. See POPE, DOMINIONS OF THE.

STAVANGER, a ſea-port of Chriſtianſand, in Norway, ſituated on a bay of the North Sea, 75 miles S. of Bergen.

STAUBBACH, a celebrated cataract near Lauterbrunnen, in Bern, Switzerland. It ruſhes down a precipice 930 feet high, with ſuch impetuoſity as to reſolve itſelf into a fine ſpray, which, when viewed in ſome particular directions, reſembles a cloud of duſt. The roaring noiſe it makes is accompanied by a tempeſt, occaſioned by the violent agitation of the air, excited by the rapidity of the fall. The brook which forms this current is named the Kapfer-Bachlein, or Rivulet of Copper.

STAVELO. See STABLO.

Stavely, Derbyſhire, SE. of Dronfield.

Stavely, Weſtmorland, NW. of Kendal.

Stavordale, Somerſetſhire.

STAVEREN, an ancient town and ſea-port in W. Frieſland, formerly very rich, powerful, and populous, but now much reduced, the harbour being choked up with ſand. It was anciently the reſidence of the kings of Staveren, or Frieſland; the firſt king, Richolde, having built a palace here about the year 400, and after he had conquered all the country as far as Utrecht, called his conqueſts the kingdom of Staveren. The inhabitants carry on ſome trade in fiſhing and in paſſage-boats, over the pools and moors of the neighbourhood. It is ſeated on the Zuyder Zee, 8 miles W. of Slooten, and 40 N. of Amſterdam.

Staverton, Devonſhire, between Broad and Little Hempſton.

Staverton, Devonſ. 5 miles from Totneſs.

Staverton, Glouceſ. 4 miles W. of Cheltenham.

Staverton, Northamp. W. of Daventry.

Staverton, Wilts, on the Avon, 2 miles from Bradford and Trowbridge.

Staughton, Surry, NW. of Guilford.

Staunton, Staff. W. of Swinerton.

Staunton, Glouceſ. N. of Winchcomb.

Stawel, Dorſetſ. a mile SE. of Nether Compton.

Stawley, Somerſetſhire, SW. of Milverton.

Staxton, Yorkſ. near Pickering Foreſt and Harford river.

Steanbridge, Glouceſterſ. in Painſwick pariſh.

Steanbridge, Glouc. a hamlet to Biſley.

Steanbridge, Glouc. in the pariſh of Stroud.

Steanford, Nottinghamſ. on the Trent, near its entrance into the county.

Stebbing, Eſſex, NE. of Dunmow.

Stedes, Berks, S. of the Kennet, almoſt oppoſite to Theal.

Stedham, Suſſex, near Wolheding.

Steel, Northumberland, E. of Billingham.

Steel, Shropſhire, S. of Whitchurch.

Steel, Bridge and Croſs, Suſſex, NW. of Rotherfield.

STEENBERGEN, a ſmall town of Dutch Brabant, 5 miles N. of Bergen-op-Zoom.

STEENKIRK, a village of Hainault, famous for a battle fought here, July 24th, 1692, between the confederates, under William III. king of England, and the French, under the Duke of Luxemburg, in which the latter were victorious. The allies, who were the aſſailants, loſt about 7000 men, killed and wounded, including the Earl of Angus, General Mackay, Sir John Lanier, Sir Robert Douglas, and other gallant officers. The French loſt about 3000 men killed, among whom were the Prince of Turenne, the Marquis de Bellefonds, Fermaçon, Tilladet, and many other officers of rank and merit. The Duke of Chartres, then in his 15th year; Louis de Bourbon, grand nephew of of the great Condé; and Arnaud, prince of Conti, were in the French army. It is ſituated on the river Sonnecque, 13 miles N. of Mons.

STEENWICK, a town of Overyſſel, which has 3 churches. It is ſituated on the river Aa, in the country of Zallant, and on the confines of Frieſland, 41 miles N. of Zutphen.

Steep, Hampſhire, N. of Petersfield. Steepholm, Somerſ. an iſland in the Briſtol Channel, under Quantock-Hills. Steeple, Dorſetſhire, in Purbeck-Iſle, 3 miles from Corfe. Steeple-Aſhton, Somerſ. Steeple-Barton, Oxfordſ. near Woodſtock. Steeple-Leaſe, Dorſetſhire, W. of Steeple.

STEGEBURG, a town of E. Gothland, ſeated on the Baltic, with a ſmall, commodious harbour, 8 miles N. of Calmar.

STEIN, a ſmall, independent town of Swiſſerland, under the protection of the canton of Zurich. It is ſituated on the N. ſide of the Rhine, with a bridge over it, at the W. extremity of Lake Zell, 13 miles W. of Conſtance. Alſo a town and fortreſs of Worms, on the E. ſide of the Rhine, 4 miles N. of Worms; a town, with a citadel, of Corinthia, on the Drave, 2 miles S. of Clagenfurt; a town of Carniola, on the Feiſtritz, 10 miles N. of Laybach, and a town of Schonberg, in Upper Saxony.

STEINAU, a town, capital of a circle, of Wohlau, in Silefia, ſituated on a ſmall river, near the W. ſide of the Oder, 10 miles WNW. of Wohlau. It contains 2 churches, and has ſome manufactures of cloth. Alſo a town of Bremen, and a town of Hanau, Muntzenburg, Upper Rhine.

STEINBACH, a town of Baden, in Suabia; a town in the archduchy of Auſtria; a town of Erzgeburg, in Upper Saxony; and a town of Naſſau Dillenburg, in Weſtphalia.

STEINBERG, a town of Lippe, in Weſtphalia; a town of Colenburg, in Lower Saxony, near Minden; and a town of Erageburg, in Upper Saxony.

STEINFURT, a town, capital of a county, to which it gives name, in Weſtphalia, 9 miles S. of Bentheim; a county and principality about 25 miles long, and from 5 to 8 broad, inſulated in the biſhopric of Munſter, partly ſubject to the biſhop, and partly to the Count of Bentheim, and a town of Munſter.

STEINHEIM, a town of Mentz, ſituated on the Main, and a town of Paderborn.

SETLEENBOSCH, a town, capital of a diſtrict, or juriſdiction, in the ſettlement of the Cape of Good Hope, formed in the year 1670. It was burnt down in 1710, but has ſince been rebuilt. The town contains about 60 houſes.

Stelling, Kent, NW. of Elham.

STENAY, a town in the department of Meuſe, ſeated on the river Meuſe, 31 miles NNW. of Verdun.

Stenbury, Iſle of Wight, near Appledurcomb.

STENDAL, a town, capital of the Old Marche of Brandenburg. It contains 4 churches, has ſome conſiderable manufactures, introduced by the French refugees, and is ſeated on the river Ucht, 28 miles WNW. of Brandenburg.

Steene, Northamptonſ. near Brackley.

STENFORT, a town of Pruſſian Pomerania, 8 miles S. of New Stettin.

STENNIS, a village in the iſland of Orkney, between Kirkwall and Stromneſs. Near this place ſome ſtones, of aſtoniſhing magnitude, and 20 feet high, have been erected, and there are many other huge maſſes of ſtone in the neighbourhood, ſimilar to the celebrated ancient monument, called Stonehenge, on Saliſbury Plain.

STENOSA, an iſland in the Grecian Archipelago, about 10 miles in circumference. It is inhabited only by a few goats, and their keepers. Lat. 37. 5. N. lon. 25. 46. E.

Stephen's, St. Cornwall, near Saltaſh. Stephen's, St. Cornwall, N. of Launceſton. Stephen's, St. Herts, near St. Alban's. Stephen's, St. or Hackington, Kent, a mile N. of Canterbury; had an image of St. Stephen, much reſorted to by pilgrims. King Edward III. on his return from France, held a tournament here. Stephen's, St. Warw. near Tamworth. Stephen's-in-Brømil, St. Cornw. NE. of Grampound. Stepheton, Hants, SW. of Baſingſtoke.

STEPHEN'S, ST. ISLANDS, two ſmall iſlands in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, diſcovered by Capt. Cartwright in 1787. They had a green, pleaſant appearance, and were covered with trees, but whether they are inhabited or not, he could not learn. Lat. 22. 8. N. lon. 138. 39. E.

Stepingley and Park, Bedf. near Ampthill. Steping, Magna and Parva, Linc. SE. of Spilſby. Stepington, Dorſetſhire, NW. of Gunfield. Stepple, Dorſetſhire, S. of Wareham. Steple, Eſſex, W. of St. Lawrence, reaching to the creek of St. Oſyth. Stepleford, Dorſetſhire, near Beminſter, and N. of Blandford Forum, on the rivulet Iwerne. Stepleton, Dorſetſ. E. of Stourminſter. Stepleton, Dorſetſ. SW. of

W. of Dorcheſter. Stepleton, Shropſ. tween Shrewſbury and Church Stretn. Stepleton Caſtle, Heref. near Preſyne, in Radnorſhire. Stepney, Mideſex, E. of London, but contiguous to , by the increaſe of buildings of late; was called in the time of the Conqueror, ibenhede, or Stiben's Heath. Its pariſh very ancient, and was of ſuch extent, d increaſed ſo much in buildings, as to oduce the pariſhes of St. Mary, at Bow; . John's, Wapping; St. Paul's, Shadll; St. Mary, Whitechapel; St. Anne, mehouſe; St. George, Ratcliff-Highay; Chriſtchurch, Spitalfields; and St. atthew, Bethnal-Green; and yet it reains one of the largeſt pariſhes in the lls of mortality, and contains the hamts of Mile-End, Old and New Towns, atcliff, and Poplar. Sterbury-Hill, Eſex, a mile W. of Saffron-Walden.

STERNBERG, a town in the New larche of Brandenburg, 24 miles SE. of uſtrin.

Stereſby, Yorkſ. SW. of Hovingham. erndale, Earl's, Derbyſ. in the High eak. Sterndale, King's, Derbyſ. in artington pariſh. Sternfield, Suffolk, ar Saxmundham. Stert Point, Soerſetſ. W. of Bridgewater-Bay.

STERTZINGEN, a town in the Tirol, ith a noted manufactory of ſwordades.

STETTIN, OLD, a handſome and well rtified ſea-port town of Upper Saxony, pital of Pruſſian Pomerania; containing pariſh churches, about 1400 houſes, and),000 inhabitants. Here is alſo a court admiralty, a chamber of commerce, a llege of phyſicians, a board of health, c. It had long a famous ſchool, which e wars of Germany never diſturbed, and s ſeveral flouriſhing manufactures, and great trade with England, Holland, rance, Spain, Denmark, Sweden, Noray, Dantzig, Lubeck, Hamburgh, &c. has alſo a dock for building of ſhips. is ſeated on the river Oder, which diides it into 4 parts, 74 miles W. of ew Stettin, and 70 N. by E. of Berlin. at. 53. 35. N. lon. 14. 8. SE.

Steton, Yorkſhire, NW. of Keighley teton, Yorkſhire, SE. of Skipton.

* STEVENAGE, a town of Hertfordſ. 2 miles N. of Hertford, and 31 N. of ondon. Market on Friday, if not diſſed.

Stevenſon, Berks, NW. of Wantage. tevenſtown, Devonſhire, near Great orrington.

STEVENSWAERT, or FORT ST. ETINNE, a fortreſs of Duch Guelderland, ſeated on the E. ſide of the river Maeſe, over which there is an important paſſage at this place, 7 miles SSW. of Ruremonde, and 30 N. of Liege. In 1702, it was beſieged by the allies, under the Duke of Marlborough, and taken after a ſhort reſiſtance. The garriſon, with two pieces of cannon, was conducted to Namur. In 1715, it was ceded to the States General, by an article in the barrier treaty.

Stewards, Eſſex, in Rumford pariſh.

STEWART'S ISLANDS, five iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by captain Hunter, in 1791. and named by him in honour of Admiral Keith Stewart. Lat. 8. 26. S. lon. 163. 18. E.

Stewart's Town, in Tyrone, Ulſter, 5 miles NNE. of Dungannon.

STEWART'S TOWN, a town of Ayrſhire, in Scotland, containing about 2800 inhabitants in the town and pariſh, among whom are about 120 weavers. Here is alſo a manufactory of bonnets, and French or Quebec caps. It is ſituated on a ſmall river which runs into the North Sea, 14 miles NNE. of Ayr.

Stenyborough, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

* STEYNING, a poor, little borough of Suſſex, with ſcarcely 200 families. It is chiefly noted for its church, which is a ſmall but curious and moſt complete Norman-built ſtructure, in its firſt plan. The middle aiſle has on each ſide 4 Norman, round arches, zigzagged, ſurmounted with as many round-headed, ſmall windows. The two ſide aiſles are much and diſproportionably lower, as was the cuſtom. The roof is of rafter, as ſtone vaulting was neither common, nor known at that time. A lofty Norman arch leads into the chancel. The tower is more modern. Steyning is ſituated in a very healthy air, on the road from Lewes, Brighthelmſtone, and Shoreham, to Petworth, Midhurſt, &c. 15 miles W. of Lewes, and 51 S. by W. of London. Market on Wedneſday, and one on the 2d Wedneſday in every month, for cattle. Fairs on June 9, Sept. 19, and Oct. 10. The Michaelmas fair is very conſiderable, for Welſh and other cattle, ſheep, horſes, hogs, wheat, ſeed, &c.; the others are pretty large.

STEYRE, a well-built town of Traun, in the archduchy of Auſtria, with noted manufactures of iron and ſteel. It is ſituated on a ſmall river, near its conflux with the Ems, 20 miles SE. of Lintz, and 44 SE. of Paſſau.

STEYREGG, a town in the archduchy of of Auſtria, ſituated on the ſide of the Danube, 36 miles ESE. of Paſſau.

Stibard, Norf. near Fakenham. Stibinton, Hunt. in the W. angle of the county, on the borders of Northamptonſ. Stichal, or Stivichal, Warw. near Coventry. Stitchbrook, Staffordſ. near Litchfield. Stickford, Lincolnſ. SE. of Bullingbrook. Stickford, Warw. by Caſtle Bromwich.

STICKHAUSEN, a town and citadel of E. Friſtland, in Weſtphalia, founded by the Hamburghers, about the year 1435, as a ſecurity againſt pirates, and afterwards more ſtrongly fortified. It is 18 miles ESE. of Emden.

Stickland, Dorſ. SW. of Blandford. Stickney, Lincolnſ. between Wildmore and the Eaſt Fen. Stid, Derbyſ. on the Dove, SW. of Derby. Stidcot, Glouceſterſ. in Titherington pariſh. Stifford Clay, Eſſex, 1 mile and a half from Graves, and E. of Aveley, on a ſtream that goes to Purfleet. Stifkey, St. John's and St. Mary's, Norfolk, E. of Wells, with Stifky Hall, 3 miles from Walſingham.

STIGLIANO, a town of Baſilicata, in Naples, famous for its baths.

STILI, a ſmall iſland of the Grecian Archipelago, ſituated in lat. 37. 25. N. and lon. 22. 36. E.

Stillingfleet, on the Ouſe, S. of York. Stillington, Lincolnſhire, S. of Grantham. Stillington, N. Riding, 7 miles from York.

Stillorgan, in Dublin, Leinſter.

* Stilton, Hunt. SW. of Yaxley, on the Roman highway, from Caſtor to Huntingdon, called Ermine-ſtreet, (ſome parts of which, in this neighbourhood, appear ſtill paved with ſtone) and 75 miles from London. It is famous for its cheeſe, ſometimes called the Engliſh Parmeſan. Stinchcomb, Glouceſter. 2 miles W. of Durſley. Stinford, Dorſet, near the Frome, 1 mile NE. of Dorcheſter.

STIPEL, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia.

Stiperden, Yorkſ. SW. of Heptonſtall. Stiperley Park, Cheſ. near Lime-park, is noted for ſheep larger than the common ſize, the fleece of which is rather hair than wool; beſides two ſheep's horns, they have two as erect as goat's, and their fleſh, though ſufficiently agreeable, has more the taſte of goat than mutton. Stiperſhill, Warw. near Poleſworth. Stiperſtone Hill, Shropſhire, NE. of Chirbury.

STIRIA, a duchy of Auſtria, N. of Carniola, and E. of Carinthia, divided into Upper and Lower. Upper Stiria is about 110 miles in length, and from 35 to 45 in breadth; Judenburg is the capital. Lower Stiria is about 80 miles in length, and 48 in breadth; Gratz is the capital. Though in general, a mountainous country, the inhabitants raiſe great quantities of fine wheat; they have alſo large breeds of cattle, with wild fowl, chamois, and other game. Here are mines of iron, which have been worked three thouſand years, and ſtill continue rich. The Stirian ſteel is held in high eſtimation. The language is rough; but the inhabitants of Cilley are moſtly Wends, and ſpeak the Wendiſh language.

STIRLING, an ancient town of Scotland, the capital of Stirlingſhire. It is ſeated on the S. ſide of the Frith of Forth, on a hill, which, riſing from the E. terminates abruptly in a deep rock. On this rock is an ancient caſtle, which was of old the reſidence of the kings of Scotland. The outſide of the palace, which is now converted into barracks, is richly and curiouſly adorned with various groteſque figures. From the caſtle is a fine view of the windings of the Forth, which are ſo numerous, that the diſtance from Stirling to Alloa is above 20 miles by water, although only four by land. The church of Stirling is a magnificent Gothic ſtructure, which ſerves for two ſeparate places of worſhip. In this town and its neighbourhood are flouriſhing manufactures of carpets, as alſo of coarſe ſhalloons and cottons; but that of tartans is on the decline. Stirling is commodiouſly ſeated, being a paſs between the N. and S. parts of Scotland, but with ſuch a difficult navigation of its river, that only ſmall veſſels can come up to the town. It is 30 miles NW. of Edinburgh.

STIRLINGSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded, on the N. and NE. by Perthſhire and Clackmannanſhire, on the E. by the Frith of Forth, and the county of Linlithgow, on the S. by Lanerkſhire, and on the W. by Dumbartonſhire. It is about 36 miles in length, 8 or 9 in its general breadth, and not more than 18 in its greateſt. The S. parts are mountainous, but the parts about the Forth are fertile and abound in coals. The principal rivers are the Forth, (which receives a great number of ſmaller ſtreams) Carron, and Avon; beſides which, the new canal from Glaigow runs through this county to the Carron mouth. The principal towns are Stirling and Falkirk.

Stirrop, Nott. W. of Bleaſby. Stirthill, Upper and Lower, Dorſet, in the pa-

riſh

ley of Shipton. Stirthill, Lower, has e ruins of a chapel, called Old St. uke's. Stirthwith, Durham, on the ees, N. of Egglestone.

STIRUM, a town of Berg, in Westralia, seated on the river Roer, 12 miles . of Dusseldorp.

Stirwood, Rutland, W. of Uppingm. Stisted-Hall, Essex, near Braintree. it, Salop, NE. of Stipperstone's-Hill. itchworth, Camb. 10 miles from Camidge. Stithian's, Cornwall, NE. of Helme, at the source of Trethege water. itnam, Yorks. N. Riding, near Bulmer. obswood, Northumberland, near Widington Castle.

STOCHEM, a town of Liege, seated the river Maese, 12 miles N. of laestricht.

Stock, Glouces. in Littleton-upon-Sern. Stock, alias Herwood Stock, Essex, tween Chelmsford and Billericay.

STOCKACH, a town of Nellingburg, in ustrian Suabia, seated on a river of the me name, 15 miles NW. of Constance.

STOCKBRIDGE, a town of Hampshire, iefly noted for wheelwrights and carraters. It has some good inns, being considerable thoroughfare, on the SW. ad from London, and is 9 miles NW. Winchester, 15 E. of Salisbury, and 67 SW. of London. Market on Thursy. Fairs on Holy Thursday, July 10th, d October 7th, for all cattle, especially eep.

STOCKBRIDGE, a town of Massachutts.

Stockbridge, Westmorl. in Barton pah. Stockbridge, Yorkshire, W. Riding, ar Bramwith-Ferry. Stockbury, Kent, miles SW. of Milton. Stock-Common, ssex, E. of Ingatestone. Stockel, Yorks. . of Wetherby. Stockel, or Stocks, ropf. near Ellesmere. Stock Hall, Esx, near Matching. Stockham, Cheshire, . of Rocksavage. Stockham, Nottingms. NE. of the Markhams.

STOCKHOLM, the capital of Sweden, a situation remarkable for its romantic enery. It is very long and irregular, ing built on 7 small, rocky islands, from te of which the city takes its name, (beween the Baltic and the Malar lake) beles which, it occupies two peninsulas. etween these several parts of the city a mmunication is formed by means of idges. A variety of contrasted and antiful views are formed by numerous cks of granite, rising boldly from the rface of the water, partly bare and cragy, and partly dotted with houses, or feathered with wood. The harbour is an inlet of the Baltic; the water, of a blackish colour, is of such depth, that ships of the largest burden can approach the quay. At the extremity of the harbour, several streets rise one above another, in the form of an amphitheatre; and the palace, a magnificent building, crowns the summit. The arsenal contains many curiosities, among which are an immense number of standards, and other military trophies, taken from the Imperialists, Poles, Russians, and Danes. Except in the suburbs, where some houses are of wood, painted red, the buildings are mostly of stone, or brick, stuccoed white, and built on piles. A Royal Academy of Sciences was instituted here in 1741: here is also a Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture. In Stockholm are manufactures of glass, china, woollen, silk, linen, &c. The inhabitants are estimated at 60,000. The court formerly resided at Upsal, but removed here in the last century.

Stockingford, Warw. near Nuneaton. Stockland, Dorsetshire, W. of Membury, and 4 miles NW. of Chadstock. It is a large parish, almost surrounded by Devonshire. Stockley, Wiltshire, S. of Calne. Stockley, English, Lucombe, and Pomeroy, Devonshire, villages near each other, between Tiverton and Crediton. Stocklinch, Magdalen and Ottersey, Somersetshire, NE. of Ilminster.

* STOCKPORT, a town of Cheshire, seated on the river Mersey, over which it has a bridge that leads into Lancashire, and connected with the late extensive, inland navigations, 7 miles SE. of Manchester, and 176 NNW. of London. Standing on uneven ground, it is generally ill-built, but is, however, a town of good entertainment. Its population fluctuates from 16 to 20,000 inhabitants, according to the state of its manufactories, which are very considerable, and include the business of cotton and printed goods, with a few silk-mills, and a share of hat-making for the London market. Market on Friday.

STOCKPORT, a town of the United States of America, situated on both sides the Susquehana river, partly in New York, and partly in Pennsylvania, 95 miles NW. of New York, and 115 N. of Philadelphia.

STOCKSEE, a town of Holstein.

STOCKSTADT, a town of Mentz.

STOCKSUND, a town of Drontheim, in Norway, 60 miles N. of Drontheim.

STOCKTON, a clean, well-built, and well-paved town of Durham, containing a handsome town hall, a spacious market-market-place, excellent inclosed shambles for butchers' meat, and about 3400 inhabitants. Here are manufactures of sail cloth, corduroys, thicksets, and other articles in cotton, and of linen damasks, in which last branch, some considerable improvements have been made here. The ships built at this place are admired for their beauty and strength; abundance of fine salmon is caught in the river, and carried by the fish machines to York, Leeds, &c. and there is a flourishing country trade, great quantities of lead, corn, butter, and bacon being exported in vessels, which load at the three quays before the town, for London, as well as other places. Stockton is a member port of Newcastle, and is seated on a point of land like an island, about 8 miles from the German Ocean, and on the river Tees, over which it has a fine stone bridge of 5 elliptical arches, 22 miles SE. by E. of Durham, and 244 N. of London. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

Stockton, Heref. NE. of Leominster. Stockton, Norf. S. of Loddon. Stockton, Shropf. near Badger. Stockton, Shropf. N. of Chirbury. Stockton, Shropf. E. of Newport. Stockton, Warwickshire, NE. of Southam. Stockton, Worcestershire, SW. of Aberley, and NW. of the river Teme. Its church is built after the Norman style of architecture, in the reign of Henry II. Stockton-on-the-Moor, Yorkshire, near the Helmesleys.

STOCKUM, a town of Osnaburg.

Stockwell, Surry, in the parish of Lambeth, SW. of London; one of the precincts of the parish of Lambeth. Stockwith, Nottingh. with a ferry over the Trent, a hamlet of Misterton. A market and fair were proclaimed here in the reign of Henry III. but both are since disused. Stockwith, East, Lincolnf. NW. of Gainsborough, and opposite Stockwith. Stockwood, Bedfordshire, in Luton parish. Stodham, Oxfordf. near Chfselhampton. Stodmarsh, Kent, near the Stour, 5 miles NE. of Canterbury. Stoford, Devonf. in Harford parish. Steford, Somersetf. near Barwick. Stogbach, Heref. SW. of Leominster. Stoke, N. of Chester. Stoke, Cheshire, NW. of Namptwich. It communicates with all the late inland navigations. Stoke, Devonf. E. of Newton-Bushel. Stoke, Devonf. N. of Exeter. Stoke, or East Stoke, Dorsetf. NW. of Wareham. Stoke, Dorsetf. near Mulbury. Stoke, Glouces. 3 miles from Bristol. Stoke, Hants, in the parish of St. Maryborn. Stoke, Hants, S. of Havant. Stoke, Herefordf. E. of Leominster, on the Lug. Stoke, Kent, NE. of Rochester, near the Isle of Grease. Stoke, Middlesex, between Littleton and Laleham. Stoke, Norfolk, SE. of Downham, with a ferry on the river Stoke, which is navigable to it from the Ouse. Stoke, Suffolk, near Nayland. Stoke, Norfolk, between Saxlingham and Norwich. Stoke, Nottinghamshire, on the Trent, by Newark. Stoke, Shropshire, between Newport and Whitchurch. Stoke, Shropshire, between Ludlow and Tenbury. Stoke, Somersetf. E. of Bridgewater. Stoke, Somersetf. near Wincaunton. Stoke, Somersetf. between Bath and Bradford. Stoke, Suffolk, on the Stour, opposite to Ipswich. Stoke, Suffolk, near Nayland. It has a church upon a hill, the tower of which is 120 feet high, and the steeple serves as a landmark to ships that pass the mouth of the Orwell, at 15 miles distance. Stoke, Suffolk, near Clare. Stoke, Surry, near Guilford. Stoke, Sussex, NW. of Chichester. Stoke, Warwickf. E. of Coventry. Stoke, Wilts, W. of Bradford. Stoke, Wilts, E. of Savernoke-Forest. Stoke-Albany, Northamp. in the precincts of Rockingham Forest. Stoke-Archer, or Stoke-Orchard, Glouces. in Bishop's Cleve parish. Stoke Ash, Suffolk, near Thwayt. Stoke-Bardolph, E. of Nottingham, by the Trent. Stoke Bavern, Northamp. between Towcester and Northampton. Stoke-Bishops, Glouces. terf. near Bristol. Stoke-Bysbops, Hants W. of Bishop's Waltham. Stoke-Brian, Heref. near the Sapys. Stoke-Bridge, Westmorl. S. of Penrith. Stoke by-Walton, Staffordf. SE. of Stone. Stoke Canon, Devonf. near Pinhoe. Stoke Castle, Shropshire, NW. of Ludlow. Stoke Christ, Hants, E. of Barton-Stoke. Stoke-Church, Devonshire, S. of Chard. Stoke-Climsland, Cornwall, 8 miles from Callington. Stoke-Dalberon, Devon. Daberron, Surry, between Cobham and Fetcham, near the river Mole. At Jefop's Well, here is a purging, mineral water. Stoke-Dale, Northamptonshire, near Oundle. Stoke Damarel, Devon. 2 miles N. of Plymouth, by a creek called Damarel. It lies along the harbour of Hamoaze, and contains the royal docks &c. to which it owes its population and extent. Stoke, Dry, Rutland, on the side of a hill, near the little river Eye, below Uppingham. Stoke, Earl, Wilts, W. of the Lavingtons. Stoke-Edith, NE. of Hereford. Stoke Fleming, Devonshire, on the coast, very near Dartmouth. Stotheford, Herefordshire, a hamlet to East Stoke, and almost opposite o it, on the river Frome. Stoke Gabriel, Devonſ. near Bury-Pomeroy. Stoke Gallard, Dorſetſhire, W. of Stourminſter. Stoke Gaylard, Dorſetſ. 3 miles N. of Sherborn. Stoke Gifford, Glouceſ. W. of Frocklechurch, on the Frome. Its pariſh is 25 miles in compaſs. Stoke, Great, Little, and Harris, are hamlets of this pariſh. Stoke-Gifford, or Rodney-Stoke, Somerſetſ. between Wells and Axbridge. Stoke Goldington, Bucks, SW. of Olney. It has beautiful views, enlivened by the Ouſe, running through rich meadows, and the ſight of Olney church. Stoke Golding, or Monſfield, Leiceſterſhire, in Sinckley pariſh.

STOKEGOMER, a town of Somerſetſ. 8 miles NW. of Taunton, and 112 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday, but not diſuſed.

Stoke Green, Berkſhire, near Windſor. Stoke Gregory, Somerſetſ. N. of Curry-Mallet. Stoke Gurcy, Somerſetſ. N. of Stowey. Stoke-Hall, Cheſhire, near Stanley. Stoke Hall, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak, near the lead mines. Stoke Hall, Eſſex, near Althorn. Stoke Hamond, Bucks, NE. of Winſlow. Stoke-Hill, NW. of Warwick. Stoke-Lacy, Heref. of Bromyard. Stokeland, Somerſ. between Shepton Mallet and Babington. Stokeland, Somerſetſ. near Stoke Gurcy. Stokeland Marſh, Somerſetſhire, between the river Pauret and the Briſtol Channel. Stoke Liberty, Eſſex, S. of Harwich, includes Thorp, Kirby, and Walton. Stoke-Line, Oxfordſhire, near Hardwick. Stoke Lodge, Glouceſterſhire, near Horſidel. Stoke Mandeville, Bucks, S. of Aylesbury. Stoke Mary, Somerſetſ. SE. of Taunton. Stoken-Church, Oxfordſ. NW. of Chipping-Wicomb. Stokenham, Devonſ. NE. of Salcomb-Haven, where the rocks form a bay. By it is a ſpacious river, which abounds with fiſh, ſeparated from the ſea by a ridge of gravel, called Long Sand. A well-frequented fair on Good Friday. Stoke, North, Hampſhire, near Thorney-Iſland. Stoke, North, Oxfordſ. S. of Wallingford. Stoke, North, Somerſetſ. between Lanſdown and Swinford Mills and Lock. Stoke, North, Suſſex, NE. of Arundel. Stoken Tinead, Devonſ. E. of Newton-Buſhel. Stoke-Orchard, Glouceſterſ. near Caln. Stoke Pero, Somerſ. S. of Porlock. Stoke, or Stoke-Poges, Bucks, 2 miles N. of Eaton. The church is a Saxon ſtructure, but the tower was built in the reign of Henry I. The church-yard was the ſcene of Mr. Gray's celebrated elegy. A little to the N. of it is Stoke-Houſe, the great hall of which is adorned with many fine ancient buſtos of the Roman emperors, brought from Rome. From the hall, there is an entrance into a noble park, with 7 great avenues, cut in the ſhape of a ſtar, from each of which there is a delightful proſpect. Stoke Priors, Worceſ. S. of Bromſgrove. Stoke Rivers, Devonſ. near Sherwell. Stoke Row, Oxfordſ. S. of North Stoke. Stokerſton, Leiceſ. near Hallaton. Stokeſey, Shropſ. near Onybury.

STOKES-BAY, a bay on the coaſt of Hampſhire, a little to the S. of Goſport.

Stokeſby, Norfolk, E. of Accle.

STOKESLEY, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, conſiſting chiefly of one well built ſtreet, about half a mile long. It is ſeated in a fruitful tract, called Allertonſhire, watered by the river Wiſk, near the ſource of the Tees, among ſeveral other ſmall ſtreams, a few miles E. of Yarum, 36 N. of York, and 230 N. by W. of London. A very good market on Saturday, and a large fair for horned cattle, horſes, and linen, on the Saturday before Trinity Sunday.

Stoke, South, Lincolnſ. near Grantham. Stoke, South, Oxfordſ. on the Thames, S. of Wallingford, has 2 ſmall ſprings, the waters of which have the colour but not the taſte of milk. Stoke, South, Somerſetſhire, near Combhay. Stoke, Stoney, or Truſter, Somerſetſ. 2 miles from Bruton. Stoke Talmage, Oxfordſ. SW. of Tame. Stoketon, Wilts, between Saliſbury and Warminſter. Stoke-under Hamden, Somerſetſhire, near Odcombe. Stoke-upon-Trent, Staff. near Newcaſtle-under-Line. Stoke-Wake, Dorſetſhire, SW. of Wolland. Stokewood, Dorſetſhire, 3 miles SE. of Yateminſter. Stokeley, Durham, in Branſpeth pariſh.

STOLBERG, a town of Thuringia, in Upper Saxony, capital of a county, about 20 miles long and 15 broad, to which it gives names. It has a handſome caſtle, the reſidence of the Count, and is ſeated in a valley, between two mountains, 37 miles E. of Halle, and 58 NW. of Leipſic. Alſo a town of Erzgeburg, in Upper Saxony, 8 miles SSW. of Chemnitz, and a town of Juliers, in Weſtphalia.

STOLHOVEN, a town of Baden, in Suabia, ſituated in a moraſs, near the Rhine, 16 miles NNE. of Straſburg.

STOLPEN, a town of Meiſſen, in Upper Saxony, 33 miles WNW. of Zittau.

STOLPEN, or STOLPE, a town of anterior Pomerania, 5 miles W. of Anclam; alſo a lake in the March of Prignitz, Upper Saxony; a town in the Ucker March of Brandenburg, 38 miles NE. of Berlin, and a town of Ulterior Pomerania, ſeated in a pleaſant valley, on a river of the ſame name, which here begins to be navigable to the Baltic, 8 miles ENE. of Coſslin, and 66 NW. of Dantzick. It contains 3 churches, and a Lutheran convent for ladies, and has a conſiderable trade.

STOLPEMUNDE, a town of Ulterior Pomerania, ſituated on the Baltic, at the mouth of the river Stolpe, 10 miles N. of Stolpe.

Stoneacre, Kent, near Othum. Stonall, Upper and Lower, Staffordſhire, near Shenſton. Stonar, Kent, oppoſite to Sandwich, near the Wantſum river, and about a mile to the right of Richbor Lough; like that, it might properly be termed a deſerted village. It was the Lapis Tituli of the Romans, and appears to have been very populous in the reign of William II. when it enjoyed ſome privileges. Some ſalt works have been lately erected here. Stondon Maſſy, Eſſex, 2 miles from Ongar, towards Kelvedon.

* STONE, a town of Staffordſhire, with commodious inns, ſeated on the river Trent, by which it communicates with all the great inland navigations, 7 miles N. of Stafford, and 140 NW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Stone, Bucks, NW. of Aylesbury. Stone, Glouceſ. 2 miles S. of Berkeley. Stone, Hants, near Redbridge. Stone, Kent; in Oxney Iſle, near the river Rother, 4 miles SE. of Tenterden. The ſea formerly came near it. Stone, Kent, 8W. of Feverſham. Stone, Kent, NE. of Dartford, at a little diſtance from it is Stone Caſtle, the erection of which is imputed to the family of Norwood. Its principal remaining part is a ſquare tower, wrapped in its own ruins. Stone, Kent, near Cranbrook. Stone, Somerſ. between Wellow and Penſford. Stone, Worceſterſhire, SE. of Kidderminſter. The N. door of the church has a Saxon arch and mouldings.

STONE, a ſmall iſland in the Frith of Forth, about 8 miles SE. of Dunfermline.

Stone Aſton, Somerſetſ. near the coal-pits, between Mendip and Midſummer-Norton. Stone Bay, Kent, between Ramſgate and the North Foreland. Stone Bridge, Middleſex, over the Brent, in the road from London to Harrow. Stonebury, Herts, in Hormead pariſh.

STONEBYRES. See CLYDE.

Stone Cliff, Kent, in Oxney Iſle, S. of Stone, on the Rother. Stone-Dale, Yorkſhire, NW. of Swale-Dale. Stone End, Kent, near Lyd, by the ſea. Stone Ferry, Yorkſ. over the Hull, N. of the town of Hull.

Stonehall, in Limerick, Munſter.

Stone-Hall, Eſſex, on the Roding, near Redbridge. Stone Hall, Northumberl. NW. of Beltingham. Stoneham, Suſſex, N. of Lewes. Stoneham-Aſpal, Suffolk, SW. of Debenham. Stoneham Earl's, Suffolk, SW. of Stoneham-Aſpol. Stoneham, N. and S. Hants, on the river Itchen, N. of Southampton. Stoneham, Parva, Suffolk, NW. of Stoneham-Aſpol.

STONEHAVEN, or STONEHIVE, a fiſhing-town of Kincardineſhire, with a good harbour ſecured by a ſtone pier. Near it is a precipitous cliff, called Fowl's Creagh, which is remarkable for the reſort of the birds called kittiwake, the young of which are eſteemed a great delicacy. To the S. of it, the rocks riſe to a conſiderable height. Here is a manufacture of canvas, and ſome trade in dried fiſh oil. This oil is obtained chiefly from the dogfiſh, great quantities of which are caught on this coaſt. Stonehaven is 14 miles S. by W. of Aberdeen.

STONEHENGE, a remarkable monument of antiquity, ſituated in Salisbury Plain. It has the river Avon and other ſtreams on the E. and a brook that runs into the Willy, on the W. which ſtream encompaſs it half round. It ſtands on the ſummit of a hill, which riſes with a very gentle aſcent. At the diſtance of about half a mile, it has a very ſtately and auguſt appearance, and advancing nearer, eſpecially up the avenue on the NE. ſide, where the remains of this wonderful ſtructure are moſt perfect, it fills the eye in an aſtoniſhing meaſure. It is encompaſſed with a circular ditch; after this is paſſed, there is a ſpace of exactly 108 feet to the work itſelf, which is alſo 108 feet in diameter. It conſiſts of ſeveral ſtones of enormous ſize, placed upon one another in a circular form: many of them are really ſtupendous, and cannot fail of filling the beholder with ſurpriſe and admiration. The exterior circle, in its perfection, conſiſted of 60 ſtones, 30 uprights, and 30 impoſts, of which only 17 uprights are left ſtanding. About 8 feet from the inſide of this outer circle is another of 40 ſmaller ſtones, without impoſts, forming, as it were, a circular portico. Of theſe 19 are left, of which 11 only are ſtanding. Beſides this outer portico, which is 300 feet in circumference, there is an inner one, which originally compoſed two-thirds of an oval. On the inſide of this oval, there is a leſſer one of 10 ſtones 19 ſtones, of a pyramidical form; theſe are 2 feet 6 inches in breadth, 1 foot and a half thick, and about 8 feet high, riſing in height as they approach the upper end of the incloſure. The ſpace within it has been called the Adytum, or Sanctum Sanctorum, where it is ſuppoſed the prieſts entered, to offer their ſacrifices on the altar at the upper end. This altar is compoſed of a kind of blue, coarſe marble, 20 inches thick, 4 feet broad, and 16 feet in length. All the ſtones added together, with which this whole temple was built, make juſt 140. One ſtone at the upper end, which is fallen down and broken in half, meaſures, according to Dr. Hales, 25 feet in length, 7 in breadth, and at a medium, 3 and a half in thickneſs. The ſtones are ſuppoſed to have been brought from the Grey Weathers, upon Marlborough Downs, but the difficulty in bringing them hither, and eſpecially in laying them one upon another, is inconceivable, as no mechanical powers now known, are ſufficient to raiſe thoſe that lie acroſs, to their preſent extraordinary ſituation. Stonehenge is 2 miles W. of Ameſbury, and 6 NNW. of Saliſbury.

Stone-Hill, Kent, in Wilmington pariſh. Stone-Holm, Kent, in Dengy-Marſh. Stonehouſe, Glouceſ. 4 miles W. of Stroud. Stonehouſe, E. and W. Devonſ. near Plymouth. The latter is W. of the paſſage at Crimble ferry. From it there is a proſpect of St. Nicholas Iſland, and the towns of Plymouth, Saltaſh, and Milbrooke. Eaſt Stonehouſe, anciently called Hipeſton, is become a large, populous place, and has the fineſt barracks in the kingdom. Stonelinch, Suſſex, near Winchelſea.

STONELY, a town of Warwickſhire, ſituated on the N. bank of the Sow, near its confluence with the Avon, 4 miles S. of Coventry, and 88 NNW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Stone-Place, Kent, near Stone, by Dartford. Stoner, Kent, by Sandwich-Haven. Stoneraiſe, Cumberl. in the pariſh of Weſtward. Stoneſby, Leic. E. of Waltham-on-the-Would. Stonesfield, Oxfordſ. near Blenheim Houſe. In 1711, a Roman pavement was diſcovered here; and in 1779, on the ſame ſpot, a few feet under ground, the areas of ſeveral large apartments were found, with teſſellated pavements, and borders of the moſt beautiful patterns; and adjoining to theſe a brick hypocauſt with funnels, and a bath with leaden pipes in the ſides, covered with plaiſter painted red, arcades and pilaſters. The brick-work appeared freſh and ſound. Stoneſtreet, Kent, a Roman way, from the Hithes to Canterbury and Stutfall Caſtle. Stone Street, Surry, the old Roman cauſeway from Holmſdale to Suſſex Downs, through Dorking church yard. Stone Wall Suffolk, near Codenham. Stoney-Fen, Cambridgeſhire, near Wiſbeach.

Stoneyford, in Antrim, Ulſter. Stoneyford, in Meath, Leinſter.

Stoney-Morton, Worceſterſ. near Inkborough. Stonihurſt, Lancaſhire, near Whaley. Stonland-Houſe, Suſſex, near Buckhurſt. Stonley, Huntingdonſ. E. of Kimbolton. Stonley, Wiltſhire, S. of Clarendon Park. Stoner, Oxfordſhire, E. of Wallingford. Stony-Stanton, Leiceſ. SE. of Hinckley. Stopeſley, Bedfordſhire, in Luton pariſh. Stopham, Suſſex, E. of Petworth. Store Point, Devonſ. E. of Exmouth. Storeton, Great and Little, Cheſhire, between the Dee and Merſey.

STORMARIA, a principality of Holſtein, bounded on the N. by Holſtein Proper, and on the S. and W. by the duchies of Lunenburg and Bremen, from which it is ſeparated by the Elbe. It is about 12 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. Hamburgh is the capital.

STORNAWAY, a growing, flouriſhing town of Scotland, capital of the Iſle of Lewis, ſituated on the E. coaſt, with a harbour, ſafe, ſpacious, and eaſy of acceſs. The Stornaway fiſhermen are famous for the vaſt herds of porpoiſes, which they kill in the lochs, ſometimes by hundreds at a time; and their general induſtry and activity, particularly in their trade of fiſhing for herrings, for which, indeed, their ſituation is very happy. They alſo ſend great quantities of oil, ſeal ſkins, and other ſkins, annually, to different markets. Lat. 58. 24. N.

STORRINGTON, a ſmall town of Suſſex, near Parham. Market on Wedneſday.

Storr's, or Storth's Hall, Yorkſhire, near Almonbury.

STORTFORD. See BISHOP'S-STORTFORD.

Storthwood, Yorkſ. SW. of Pocklington. Stotfield, Durham, SW. of Hartlepool. Stothy, or Stotby, Lincolnſ. NW. of Horncaſtle. Stotteſcomb, Devonſ. near Axmouth. Stotteſden, Shropſhire, E. of Brown-Clee-Hill. Stotton, Dorſetſ. in Upway pariſh. Stoubes, Northumberl. near the river Read, NW. of Otterburn. Stoven, Suffolk, between Haleſworth and Benacre.

STOUGHTON, a ſmall town in Suſſex, NE. of Racton. Market on Wedneſday, if not diſuſed.

Stoughton Grange, Leic. 3 miles SSE. of Leiceſter. Stoughton, Great, Huntingdonſ. S. of Kimbolton. Stoughton-Green, Huntingdonſhire, 3 miles from St. Neots. Stoughton, Little, Bedfordſhire, NW. of Buſhmead. Stoughton-Moor, Huntingdonſhire, S. of Great Stoughton. Stoulton, near Worceſter.

STOUR, a river which riſes in Somerſetſhire, from three ſources, the firſt near Wincaunton, the ſecond near Pen, and the third near More Park. The ſecond and third of theſe ſtreams, unite ſoon after their entering Dorſetſhire, in Gillingham Foreſt, where the Stour becomes a conſiderable river, and directs its courſe nearly towards the S. where it is joined by the ſtream from Wincauton, near Fiſehead. About 2 miles and a half below this junction, it receives the waters of the Lyddon; and about half a mile farther, it is joined by the Duliſh, flowing with a full ſtream to Sturminſter Newton. Here it directs its courſe to the SE. waſhing the town of Blandford, and receiving at Wimbourn Minſter the waters of the Allen. About 4 miles below its junction with the Allen, it leaves Dorſetſhire, and falls into the Engliſh Channel at Chriſt Church, in Hampſhire.

STOUR, a river which riſes in Shropſhire, and running through Staffordſhire and Worceſterſhire, falls into the Severn at Stourport, above Hartlebury Caſtle. Its courſe is about 20 miles, and it has on it, in that ſpace, upwards of 30 ſlitting-mills, forges, corn-mills, &c.

Stour, a river in Worceſterſ. which runs into the Severn, near Redſtone Paſſage.

STOUR, a river conſiſting of two ſtreams, called the Greater and Smaller Stour, both which riſe in the Weald, or woody, ſouthern part of Kent, and run NE. the greater Stour through the city of Canterbury, and the leſſer through Elham; here they fall into one channel, called the Wantſom, but are again divided into 2 ſtreams, one of which running NW. falls into the German Ocean, near Reculver, and the other running SE. enters the Straits of Dover at Sandwich. This river is famous for trout.

STOUR, a river which forms almoſt the entire boundary between Eſſex and Suffolk, waters Clare, Sudbury, Nayland, and Maningtree; and, being joined by the Orwell from Ipſwich, forms the noble harbour of Harwich.

Stour, a river in Dorſetſhire, which runs into the Avon, near Canford Lawn.

Stour, a river which riſes in Eſſex, and, running through Hertfordſhire, falls into the Lea at Hawſham. Stour, or Sour, a river in Leiceſterſhire, which paſſes by Leiceſter, Loughborough, Mountſorrel, Quarndon, Barrow, &c. and falls into the Trent at Thrumpton, in Nottinghamſ. It has lately been made navigable from Loughborough to Leiceſter. Stour, a river which riſes in Oxfordſhire, and running through Warwickſhire, falls into the Avon below Stratford.

* STOURBRIDGE, a well-built town of Worceſterſhire, noted for its conſiderable glaſs and iron works, (here being about 10 glaſs-houſes, in which are made drinking glaſſes, bottles, &c.) and has alſo a manufactory of cloth, and eſpecially fine frieze. It is 22 miles N. of Worceſter, and 124 NW. of London.

STOURBRIDGE, or STURBICH, the name of a common field, extending between Cheſterton and Cambridge, near the little brook Sture, for about half a mile ſquare, is noted for its fair, which is kept annually on September 19th, and continues a fortnight. It is ſurpaſſed by few fairs in Great Britain, or even in Europe, for traffic, though of late it is much leſſened. The booths are placed in rows, like ſtreets, by the name of which they are called, as Cheapſide, &c. and are filled with all ſorts of trades. The Duddery, an area of 80 or 100 yards ſquare, reſembles Blackwell-Hall. Large commiſſions are negociated here, for all parts of England, in cheeſe, woollen goods, wool, leather, hops, upholſterers and ironmongers' ware, &c. &c. Sometimes 50 hackney coaches from London, ply morning and night, to and from Cambridge, as well as all the towns round, and the very barns and ſtables are turned into inns, for the accommodation of the poorer people. After the wholeſale buſineſs is over, the country gentry generally flock in, laying out their money in ſtage-plays, taverns, muſic-houſes, toys, puppet-ſhows, &c. and the whole concludes with a day for the ſale of horſes. This fair is under the juriſdiction of the Univerſity of Cambridge.

Stourden, Glouceſterſ. in Winterbourn pariſh. Stourmouth, Kent, near the mouth of the Stour, 4 miles NW. of Sandwich. Stourport, Worceſ. 4 miles S. of Kidderminſter, where the navigable canal empties itſelf into the Severn. This canal was begun in 1768, and finiſhed in 1771, at the expence of 105,000l. A bridge, alſo, over the Severn, which coſt 5000l. was finiſhed here in 1775.

Stourprovoſt,

Sturprough, Dorſetſh. on the Stour, 4 miles SW. of Shaftſbury. Stourton, Warw. on the Stour, SE. of Brailer. Stourton Candal, ſee Candal Stourton. Stourton, Wilts, or Stour Head, near Kindon. Here is a ſeat, or villa, which, though not large, yet has an air of grandeur, and is well deſigned for pleaſure and convenience. From Alfred's Tower, a beautiful building in a triangular form, 156 feet high, and aſcended by 221 ſteps, in the pleaſure ground, there is one of the moſt ſtriking and beautiful proſpects in England. This tower is built on the ſpot where king Alfred erected his ſtandard, in the year 879, when he collected together his ſcattered friends, and defeated the Danes. The river Stour has its riſe near this village.

STOW-ON-THE-WOULD, (generally called in old records, STOW, ST. EDWARD) a town of Glouceſterſhire, ſeated on a hill, expoſed to the bleak winds, and deſtitute of both wood and water. It is 11 miles SSE. of Camden, 25 NE. of Glouceſter, and 77 W. by N. of London. Market on Thurſday. The fairs, on May 12th and October 24th, have long been famous for hops, cheeſe, and ſheep.

Stow, 2 miles NW. of Buckingham. Here are very magnificent gardens, adorned with temples, pavilions, obeliſks, &c. with a variety of ſtatues and buſts, ancient and modern, beſides the ſtatues of the 9 muſes, of the liberal arts and ſciences, and of the Saxon idols, that gave name to the days of the week, &c. Stow, Cornwall in the Briſtol Channel, below Hartland. Stow, Huntingdonſ. NE. of Kimbolton. Stow, Monmouthſ. Stow, Lincolnſ. 1 mile E. of Fokingham, noted for a very large fair, on a neighbouring hill, for all ſorts of goods, on October 10. Stow, between Lincoln and Gainſborough, ſuppoſed to be the ancient Sidneceſter. It was famous before Lincoln was a biſhop's ſee. The church, which is a very large fabrick, was founded by one of the biſhops of Dorcheſter, in Oxfordſhire, and rebuilt by the firſt biſhop of Lincoln. Stow, Linc. near Market-Deeping. Stow, Northampt. near Weekon-Beck, on the S. ſide of the county. Stow, Shropſ. W. of Brumpton-Brian. Stow, Staffordſh. NE. of Stafford. It is alſo called Stow Nine Churches. Stow-Bardolph, Norfolk, NE. of Downham. In the ſwamy grounds adjacent, there is great plenty of turf for firing. Stow-Bedon, Norfolk, between Watton and Harling. Stowborough, Dorſetſhire, on the Frome, a ſort of ſuburb to Wareham. Stowell, Glouceſ. on the Coln, near Northleach. Stowell, Somerſetſhire, near Milbourn-Port. Stowell, Somerſetſ. in Morlinch pariſh. Stower, Eaſtower, and Weſtower, Dorſetſhire, SW. of Shaftſbury, on oppoſite ſides of the Stour, and only parted by a bridge. Stower-Pain, Dorſetſhire, near Blandford.

STOWEY, NETHER, a town of Somerſetſhire, containing about 106 houſes. It had formerly a caſtle, of which no veſtiges now remain, except the ditch. It is 12 miles N. of Taunton, and 145 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Stowey, or Stowley, Upper and Nether, Somerſetſ. between Stoke-Gurcy and Stoke-Gomer. Stowford, Devonſhire, between the rivers Lid and Thruſhel, before they meet at Lifton. Stoughton, Surry, NW. of Guilford. Stowick, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Henbury pariſh. Stow-Langtoft, Suffolk, near Ixworth. Stow-Long, Cambridgeſ. near the Granſdens, 10 miles from Cambridge. Stow Maries, Eſſex, N. of N. Fambridge.

STOW MARKET, a large town of Suffolk, containing a ſpacious, beautiful church, with a large ſteeple and lofty ſpire, 120 feet high, and ſeveral good inns. Its cherries are thought to be the fineſt in England. It has a large manufactory of tammies, and other Norwich ſtuffs; and is ſeated in the centre of the county, between the branches of the rivers Gipping and Orwell, 12 miles and a half NNW. of Ipſwich, and 75 NNE. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Stow Qui, Cambridgeſ. SW. of Newmarket. Stowting, Kent, 3 miles and a half SW. of Eltham, had formerly a market on Tueſday. Stowton, Worceſterſ. NW. of Perſhore. Stoxfield, Northumberl. on the Tyne, SW. of Prudo Caſtle.

* STRABANE, a populous town of Tyrone, in Ulſter, ſeated on the river Mourne, near Lough Foyle, 11 miles SSW. of Londonderry, and 101 NNW. of Dublin.

Stradbrook, Suffolk, 6 miles from Harleſton.

* STRADELLA, a town of Pavia, ſeated on the river Verſa, near the Po, 9 miles ESE. of Pavia. It is defended by a citadel, and is a paſſage of great importance.

STRADBALLY, a town of Queen's County, in Leinſter, 38 miles from Dublin.

Stradbally, in Waterford, Munſter. Stradone, in Cavan, Ulſter.

Stradſet, Norfolk, NE. of Downham. Stradſhill, Suffolk, near Great and Little Bradley.

STRELITZ, a town of Mecklenburg, in Lower Saxony, giving name to a branch of the houſe of Mecklenburg. It is ſituated in a marſhy diſtrict, 50 miles W. of Stettin. Adjoining to it is a new town, founded in 1733, and in which is a palace, where the duke reſides.

Strelly, NW. of Nottingham.

STRENGNAS, a town of Sweden, in Sundermania, with a celebrated gymnaſium, or ſeminary, founded in the year 1626, by Guſtavus Adolphus. It is ſeated on the lake Maeler, 30 miles W. of Stockholm.

Strenixton, or Strixxton, Somerſetſ. W. of Stoke Gurcy. Strenſhall, Yorkſ. near Galtres-Foreſt. Strenſhall, Yorkſ. S. of Doncaſter. Strenſham, Worceſterſ. SW. of Perſhore, not far from the influx of the Avon into the Severn. It is noted as the birth-place of Mr. Samuel Butler, author of Hudibras. Stretchley, Devonſ. near the river Yalme, NW. of Modberry. Strete, Eſſex, on the Crouch, oppoſite Walfleet. Streteſton, Warw. in Monks Kirby manor. Stretford, Heref. E. of Pembridge. Stretford, Heref. near Kinnerſley. Stretball, Eſſex, NW. of Saffron Walden. Stretham, and its Mere, Cambridgeſ. SW. of Ely, at the conflux of the Cam and Quſe. Stretham, Surry, 3 miles N. of Croydon, with a noted mineral water, of a cathartic quality. Stretham, Suſſex, on the Adur, between Breeding and Henfield. Stretlam, Durham, near Marwood. Stretley, SE. of Bedford. Stretley, Berkſhire, by the Thames, S. of Moulsford. Strettenton, Suſſex, on the river Lavant, near Chicheſter. Stretton, Cheſh. NW. of Malpas. Stretton, Derb. SW. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Stretton, Derbyſhire, on the Ikenild Street, 4 miles S. of Cheſterfield. Stretton, NW. of Hereford. Stretton, between Gainſborough and Lincoln. Stretton, Rutland. Stretton, Staff. SW. of Penkridge. Stretton, Staff. N. of Burton-on-Trent. Stretton Alt, Shropſ. NE. of Church-Stretton. Stretton Baſkerville, Warw. N. of Wolvey. Stretton Chapel, Cheſhire, 4 miles N. of Northwich. Stretton, Church, Shropſ. 13 miles S. of Shrewſbury. Stretton-Grandham, Heref. at the conflux of the Loddon and Frome, near Canon Frome. Stretton, Little, Shropſhire, S. of Church Stretton. Strettons, Magna and Parva, SE. of Leiceſter. Stretton under the Foſſe, Warwickſ. near Monks Kirby. Stretton-upon-Dunſmore, Warwickſhire, E. of Stoneley. Stretton upon the Roman Foſſe Way, Warwickſhire, SW. of Shipſton. Strewood-Head, Devonſ. near Ottery. Strickland Hall, Weſtmorland, W. of Appleby. Strickland, Great and Little, Weſtmorland, S. of Strickland Hall.

STRIMON, or EMBOLI, a river of Romania, which runs into the Gulf of Conteſſa, 6 miles S. of Emboli.

Strixton, Northamptonſhire, near Eaſton Mawduit. Stroat, or Strode, Glouceſ. in Tiddenham pariſh. Strode, Dorſetſhire, W. of Netherby. Strogle Caſtle, Monmouthſhire, 5 miles W. of Cheſtow.

Strokeſtown, in Roſcommon, Connaught.

STROMA, a ſmall iſland on the coaſt of Caithneſſhire, in Scotland, 3 miles NW. of Dungſbay Head, once uſed as a place of interment by the inhabitants of ſeveral of the neighbouring iſlands. In caverns of this iſland, entire uncorrupted human bodies, that had been dead 60 years, or more, were formerly to be found.

STROMBERG, a town of Munſter; and a town in the palatinate of the Rhine.

STROMBOLO, or STRONGOLI, one of the Lipari Iſlands, anciently STRONGYLE, about 12 miles in circumference. It conſiſts of one large mountain, on which is a volcano, which riſes in a conical form, to the height of above 500 fathoms. On the eaſt ſide, it has three or four little craters ranged near each other, not at the ſummit, but on the declivity, nearly at two-thirds of its height. The common chimney is alſo on the declivity, although always in the centre of the whole baſe. It is inhabited, notwithſtanding its fires; but care is taken by its few inhabitants (who are repreſented as unſocial in their manners) to avoid the proximity of the crater, which is yet much to be feared. "I was aſſured," ſays M. De Luc, "by an Engliſhman, who, like me, had the curioſity to viſit theſe iſles, that the fine weather having invited him and his company to land at Strombolo, they aſcended a volcano, whoſe craters at that time threw out nothing; but that while they were attentively viewing them, unapprehenſive of any danger, they were ſuddenly ſaluted by ſuch a furious diſcharge, as to be obliged to retreat with precipitation, and not without one of the company being wounded by a piece of the ſcoria. Of all the volcanoes recorded in hiſtory, Strombolo ſeems to be the only one that burns without ceaſing. Etna and Veſuvius often lie quiet for many months, and even years, without the leaſt appearance of fire; but Strombolo is ever at work, and, for ages paſt, has been of the Horſe Shoe inn, ſtood one of queen Eleanor's croſſes, which was pulled down in the civil wars. Stratford, Old, Warw. near Lapworth. Stratford, St. Andrew's, Suffolk, SW. of Saxmundham. Stratford, St. Mary's, a conſiderable thoroughfare trading village of Suffolk, near Dedham, with a ſhare in the woollen manufacture.

STRATFORD, STONY, a pretty large town of Buckinghamſhire, containing 2 pariſh churches. The houſes are, for the moſt part, built of ſtone. It has a manufactory of bone lace, and is ſeated on the river Ouſe, on the Roman highway, called Watling ſtreet, 6 miles NW. of Fenny-Stratford, and 52 NW. of London. Market on Friday.

* STRATFORD-UPON-AVON, a town of Warwickſhire, ſeated on the river Avon, which is navigable up to the town by barges, and over which it has a handſome ſtone bridge, with 13 great and 6 ſmall arches, and a long cauſeway at the W. end of it, walled on both ſides. It is memorable as the birth-place of Shakeſpeare, who was buried here in 1616, and whoſe monument ſtands near the further-moſt corner of the church. It has a conſiderable trade in corn and malt, of which laſt it makes abundance, and is 8 miles SW. of Warwick, and 94 NW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

STRATFORD, a town of Connecticut, ſituated near the mouth of a river of the ſame name, (which is formed by the union of the Houſatonic and Naugatac, at Derby, which runs into Long Iſland Sound, 52 miles NE. of New York, and 12 SW. of Boſton.

Stratford Tony, Wilts, SW. of Sarum.

Stratford Water, near Buckingham.

STRATHAVON, a town, giving name to a fertile little tract of Lanerkſhire, 6 miles S. of Hamilton.

STRATHBOGIE, a town of Aberdeenſhire, 18 miles SW. of Banff, and 36 NW. of Aberdeen.

STRATHEARN, a fine vale of Perthſhire, in Scotland, ſcreened on the N. by the Grampian mountains, and on the S. by the Ochills. It contains a great number of villas. See EARN.

STRATHMORE, an extenſive valley of Incardineſhire, and one of the fineſt tracts in Scotland. It begins near Stonehaven, and extends SW. almoſt as far as Benlomond, in Stirlingſhire.

Strathmore, a river of Sutherlandſhire, that falls into Loch Hope.

STRATHNAVER, a diſtrict of Sutherlandſhire, in Scotland, which compriſes the whole NE. part of that county. It takes its name from the river Naver.

STRATHSPEY, an extenſive valley of Murrayſhire, giving name to a very ſtriking and popular ſpecies of Scotch muſic.

Strathy, a river on the N. coaſt of Sutherlandſhire, which runs into the North Sea, 3 miles SSE. of Strathy Head.

STRATTON, a town of Cornwall, chiefly noted for its orchards, gardens, garlic, and countryman's treacle. It is ſeated between 2 rivulets, which here unite and fall into the ſea, at a ſmall diſtance, 18 miles NW. of Launceſton, and 221 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Stratton, Bedfordſ. near Biggleſwade. Stratton, Dorſetſ. near Frampton, on the Roman road, N. of the river Frome. Stratton, Glouceſterſ. one mile from Cirenceſter. Stratton, Glouceſ. E. of Camden. Stratton, Norfolk, S. of Aleſham. Stratton, Staffordſ. near Wolverhampton. Stratton, Audley, Oxfordſ. N. of Biceſter. Stratton, B. and W. Hants, SW. of the Candovers. Stratton, Margarets, Wilts, near Swindon. Stratton Mary and Mille, Norfolk, SW. of the Saxlinghams. Stratton-on-the-Foſſe, Somerſetſ. near the coal pits, and Kilmerſdon. Stratton Over, Somerſetſ. on the Parret, near South Petherton. Stratton Over, Wilts, SW. of Highworth.

STRAUBING, a large town of Lower Bavaria, with broad ſtreets, and containing 2 churches, (one of which is collegiate) and 4 convents. It is defended by a caſtle, and is ſituated on the Danube, 22 miles SE. of Ratiſbon.

Stravert Peel, Northumberland, S. of Beltingham. Strawberry-Hill, Middl. near Twickenham, on the Thames, repreſents an ancient abbey, late the ſeat of Horace Walpole, Lord Orford. Strawton, Lincolnſ. S. of Grantham. Stretchley, Shropſ. SE. of Wellington. Street, Somerſetſ. E. of Glaſtonbury. Street, Somerſetſ. SW. of Glaſtonbury. Street, Somerſetſ. near Ford Abbey, Devonſhire. Street, Suſſex, SE. of Dichling. Street, Wiltſhire, near Devizes. Streethey, Staffordſhire, near Lichfield. Streethorp, Yorkſ. near Doncaſter. Street Houſes and Street Lane, Yorkſhire, near Leeds, ſo called from the Via Vicinatis paſſing through it, from the Watling Street Road to the Roman ſtation that was at Addle. Stroglethorp, Lincolnſhire, SE. of Beckingham.

STRELITZ, GREAT, a town, capital of a circle, of Oppeln, in Sileſia. It is 90 miles N. of Ratibor.

STRELITS, fordſhire. Studley, Devonſhire, NW. of Tiverton. Studley, Oxfordſhire, NE. of Wood Eaton. Studley, Warwickſhire, on the Arrow, SE. of Ipſley. Studley, Wilts, near Calne. Studley, Yorkſhire, a mile from Rippon. Stukeley, Great and Little, Huntingdon, on the Ermine Street, NW. of Huntingdonſ. It was anciently called Stivecle, or Stiff Clay, from the nature of the ſoil. Stukeley, or Stivicle, Bucks, near Monks Riſborough. Its church was built about the reign of Henry II. The ſolidity of this building, with its circular arches, and zigzag ornaments, evidently mark its great antiquity. Stukeſwold, Lincolnſhire, NW. of Tatterſhall Chace.

STULINGEN, a town, capital of a landgraviate of Suabia, ſubject to the prince of Furſtenburg.

STULWISSENBURG, a ſtrong but decayed town of Lower Hungary, 24 miles SW. of Buda.

Sturby, Yorkſhire, near Flamborough. Sturmer, Eſſex, near Haverill, in Suffolk.

STURMINSTER, or STOURMINSTER-NEWTON, a mean town in Dorſetſhire, ſeated on the river Stour, 20 miles NNE. of Dorcheſter, and 111 W. by S. of London. A ſmall market on Thurſday.

Sturminſter Marſhal, on the Stour, 5 miles E. of Sturminſter. Sturry, Kent, by the river Stour, 2 miles NE. of Canterbury. Sturſton, Derbyſ. NE. of Aſhborn. Sturſton, Norfolk, 4 miles SW. of Watton. Sturſton, Suffolk, N. of Yaxley. Sturtlow, Huntingd. in Bugden pariſh. Sturtmarſh, Kent, in Sheppey Iſle. Sturton, Lancaſhire, N. of Garſtang. Sturton, Nottſ. SW. of Gainſborough. Sturton, or Stourton, Wilts. W. of Mere, at the ſource of the Stour. Sturton and Sturton Caſtle, Staffordſhire, on the river Stour. Sturton, Yorkſ. SW. of Otley. Stourton, Yorkſ. W. of Skipton. Sturton, Great, Lincolnſhire, NW. of Horncaſtle. Stufall Caſtle, Kent, in Limme pariſh.

STUTGARD, a city of Suabia, capital of the duchy of Wirtemberg. The ſtreets are narrow in the town, and the houſes generally of wood; but, there are fine houſes, and wide, ſtraight ſtreets, in one of the ſuburbs. Here are the duke's palace; an orphan houſe, with rich cabinets of curioſities, and handſome gardens; an academy of painting, ſculpture, and architecture, eſtabliſhed in 1701; and manufactures of ſtuffs, ſilk ſtockings, and ribbons. It is ſeated on the Naſenbach, near the river Neckar, 40 miles NW. of Ulm.

Stutteſbury, Northamptonſhire, NW. of Brackley. Stutton, Lincolnſh. NE. of Louth. Stutton, Suff. near Bramham.

SUABIA, a circle of Germany, bounded on the N. by the circle of Franconia, and the palatinate of the Rhine, on the W. by the circle of the Lower Rhine and Alſace; on the S. by Swiſſerland, and the Tyroleſe; and on the E. by Bavaria. It comprehends the duchies of Wirtemberg, the margraviate of Baden, the principalities of Hoven Zollern, Oetringen, and Mindelheim; the biſhoprics of Augſburg, Conſtance, and Coire, with ſeveral abbeys and free towns. The duke of Wertemberg is director.

SUABRIA, AUSTRIAN, is compoſed of the ancient, hereditary eſtates of the houſe of Habſburg, and the remains which have fallen to Auſtria, ſince it has been elected to the empire. Theſe eſtates are compoſed of Burgau, Nellenburg, the prefectorate of Suabia, Hohenburg, the Ortenau, Briſgau, and ſome towns and convents.

SUANA. See SOANA.

SUANES, SUANI, or SUANETI, a poor and ſimple people of Aſia, who inhabit one of the four diviſions of the kingdom of Imeritia. They ſubſiſt by raiſing cattle, and by a little agriculture. Major Rennel ſuppoſes them to be the deſcendants of a people of the ſame name and country, who are mentioned by Strabo. They were, in his time, a formidable and numerous nation, governed by a king with a national council of 300 perſons. They are ſaid to have collected a conſiderable quantity of gold, by means of fleeces, which they ſunk in their torrents; a practice from which Strabo derives the fable of the Golden Fleece. It is reported, that this mode of collecting gold ſtill ſubſiſted, when the Turks were in poſſeſſion of Mingrelia, and that the product of a river, called the Zgenis ſkald, was farmed by certain Jews of Conſtantinople.

SUAQUEM, a ſmall iſland in the Red Sea, near the coaſt of Nubia, with a ſea-port of the ſame name, anciently called THEON SOTER. The iſland is ſituated in a bay, the entrance of which is narrow, and well ſecured from every wind, with five, ſix, and ſeven fathoms water. A Turkiſh baſhaw reſides here. Lat. 19. 20. N.

Stubbarton, Hampſhire, near Biſhop's Waltham.

SUBBIACO, a town in the Campagna di Roma, ſeated on the river Teverone, 30 miles E. of Rome.

SUBSTANTIVE, a noun which ſignifies town in the dept. of the Indre, 9 miles S. of Chatillon.

SUCCADANA, a town of the iſland of Borneo, capital of a kingdom of the ſame name. The chief products of the country are camphor and diamonds. Lat. 1. 8. lon. 109. 30. E.

Suckholm, Nottſ. near Wirkſop. Suckle-bridge, Somerſ. Suckley, SW. of Worceſter. Sudborn, Suff. by Orford. Sudborough. Northamp. NW. of Thrapſton. Sudbroke. NE. of Lincoln. Sudbroke, Monm. near Caldicot. Sudbroke, Surry, 2 miles from Kingſton. Sudbury, Berkſ. near Windſor. Sudbury, Derbyſ. 6 miles from Uttoxeter. Sudbury, Devonſ. near Sidmouth. Sidbury, and its Green, Middleſex, at the foot of Harrow-Hill. Sudbury, Glouceſ. in Tiddenham pariſh.

* SUDBURY, an ancient town of Suffolk, containing 3 large, handſome churches. Its other buildings are pretty good, but the ſtreets are remarkably dirty in bad weather. It was one of the firſt ſeats of the Flemings, who were brought over by Edward III. to teach the Engliſh the art of manufacturing their own wool. It became, in conſequence, very populous and opulent. Its trade is now diverted, in great part, into other channels; however, many kinds of thin ſtuffs are ſtill made here, ſuch as ſays, perpetuanas, bunting for ſhips' colours, burial crapes, &c. The river was made navigable from this place to Maningtree many years ago. It is ſeated on the N. ſide of the river Stour, by which it is almoſt ſurrounded, and over which it has a handſome bridge leading into Eſſex, 14 miles SSE. of St. Edmondſbury, and 56 NE. of London. Market on Saturday.

Sudbury Tenements, Glouceſterſhire, in Wincheomb pariſh. Sudrote Steel, Yorkſ. near Hull. Sudden, Dorſetſhire, 2 miles S. of Owre Moigne. Suddington, Glouceſterſhire, near Cirenceſter.

SUDERMANIA, or SUDERMAN LAND, a province of Sweden, S. of Upland and Weſtmanland, about 100 miles in length, and 60 in breadth. It is the moſt populous and beſt cultivated part of Sweden, having alſo a fertile ſoil, with woods, paſtures, fine arable lands, lakes well ſtocked with fiſh, and mines of divers metals. Nicoping is the capital.

SUDEROE, one of the Ferro Iſlands, in the Northern Ocean, remarkable for a dangerous whirlpool near it, which is occaſioned by a crater, 61 fathoms deep in the centre, and between 50 and 55 at the ſides. The danger at moſt times is great, eſpecially in ſtorms, when ſhips are irreſiſtibly drawn in; the rudder loſes its power, and the waves beat as high as the maſts, ſo that an eſcape is almoſt miraculous; yet, at the reflux, and in very ſtill weather, the inhabitants venture hither in boats, for the ſake of fiſhing.

Sudgrove, or Southgrove, Glouceſterſ. Sudick, Durham, N. of Monk-Wearmouth.

SUENBORG, a ſea-port town of Denmark, in the iſland of Funen, with manufactures of woollen and linen. Here is the beſt harbour in the iſland. It is 23 miles SSE. of Odenſee. Lat. 55. 9. N. lon. 10. 37. E.

Sudley, Glouceſterſhire, 1 miles S. of Winchcomb. Sudmead, near Glouceſter.

SUEZ, anciently BERENICE, a town of Egypt, ſeated at the N. end of the W. gulf of the Red ſea, called the Gulf of Suez, with a harbour. This gulf is ſeparated from the Mediterranean by an iſthmus, 120 miles over, which joins Aſia to Africa. The town is without water, which comes from the wells of Naba, (carried by Arabians) on the other ſide of the gulf, and without almoſt all the other neceſſaries of life. Fiſh is the only article of proviſions plentiful here. It is very much crowded with people, when the Turkiſh galleys arrive there. However, at other times, it is very thinly inhabited, and the harbour is too ſhallow to admit ſhips of great burden. The commerce of Suez with Cairo is carried on only by means of caravans, but ſeveral veſſels ſail annually between this port and Jidda. It is ſituated in a ſandy country, the ground around being all one bed of rock, ſlightly covered with ſand, (plants, trees, gardens, and fields being entirely unknown) 60 miles ESE. of Cairo. Lat. 30. 2. N. lon. 32. 45. E.

SUFFIELD, a town of Maſſachuſets, 8 miles S. of Springfield.

Suffield, Norf. NW. of North Walſham. Suffield, Yorkſhire, NW of Scarborough.

SUFFOLK, an Engliſh county, bounded on the W. by Cambridgeſhire, on the N. by Norfolk, on the S. by Eſſex, and on the E. by the German Ocean. It extends 58 miles from E. to W. and 28 from N. to S. It is divided into 22 hundreds, which contain 31 towns, 575 pariſhes, 1550 villages, about 34,042 houſes, and 206,000 inhabitants. The air is very clear and healthy, even near the ſea-coaſt. The ſoil is of various qualities, but the country in general level. That near the ſhore is ſandy and full of hearbs, yet abounds in rye, peaſe, turnips carrots, rots, and hemp, with numerous flocks of ſheep. Copious beds of petrified ſhells, called ſhell-marl, which are found in various parts between Woodbridge and Orford, have for many years been made uſe of for improving light ſand, and have liberally rewarded the agricultural labours in thoſe parts. High-Suffolk, or the Woodlands, which is the inland part of the county, has a rich, deep clay and marl, that yields good paſture-grounds, on which feed abundance of cattle. That part which lies on the confines of Eſſex and Cambridgeſhire, affords alſo excellent paſture; and about Bury St. Edmunds, and to the N. and NW. it is fruitful in corn, except towards Newmarket. Its principal produce is butter and cheeſe; but as the latter is only ſupplementary to the former, it has gained, almoſt proverbially, the character of the worſt in England. Grain of all ſorts, beans, and hemp, are grown in this county, and a few hops not far from Sudbury. They have an excellent breed of draught horſes: the cows are in great repute for the quantity of milk they give (they are not of a large ſize, and univerſally without horns:) the farmers are ſkilful; and on the whole, this county, with reſpect to agriculture, is one of the moſt thriving in England. The principal rivers are the Stour, the Waveney, Little Ouſe, Lark, Deben, Blythe, Alde, and Orwell, in one part of it called the Gipping. Ipſwich is the principal town, but the aſſizes are held at Bury St. Edmund's.

SUFFOLK, a county of Maſſachuſets, a county of New York and a town of Virginia.

Sufton, E. of Hereford.

SUGARLOAF-HILL, GREAT and LITTLE, two high conical mountains, in Wicklow, Leinſter. They are ſituated near Bray, between Wicklow and Dublin, about 12 miles from each of theſe ports.

SUGELMESSA, or SIGELMESSA, a town of Morocco, capital of a diſtrict about 100 miles in length. It abounds in corn, dates, and other fruits; and has mines of iron, lead, and antimony. It is 72 miles NNE. of Tafilet.

Sugnel, Great and Little, Staffordſ. NW. of Eccleſhall. Sugwas, near Hereford.

SUHLA, a town of Heaneburg, in Franconia, with manufactures of Steel, fuſtians, and ticks. It is ſituated on the river Haſel, 7 miles SE. of Smalkalden.

SUINOE, one af the Ferro or Farœr iſlands, in the N. Sea.

SUIPPE, a town in the dept. of the Marne, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, (which afterwards runs into the Aiſne) 12 miles N. of Chalons ſur Marne.

SUIR, a large river of Munſter, which riſes in Tipperary, is navigable for barges, from Clonmel to the ſea; and for veſſels of conſiderable burden, from Carrick on Suir. At Waterford it forms a deep and ſpacious harbour, and below that city it unites with the Nore, and paſſes on to the ſea, 8 miles below Waterford, forming a commodious haven, deep enough for the largeſt veſſels.

Sulbury, Bucks, E. of Winſlow. Silby, Northamptonſ. NW. of Naſeby. Salford, Northamptonſ. near Haddon. Salgrave, Northamptonſ. near Weedon, in a low, clayey ſoil; near it is Barrow Hill, on which is a tumulus, and from thence may be ſeen 9 counties, viz. Northampton, Warwick, Worceſter, Oxford, Glouceſter, Berks, Bucks, Bedford, and Hertfordſhire, and in very clear weather, part of Hampſhire and Wiltſhire. Sulham, Berkſhire, 4 miles W. of Reading. Sulhamſted Abbots, Berks, on the Kennet, oppoſite Ingleſield.

SULLANE, a river of Cork, in Munſter, which runs into the Lee, 15 miles W. of Cork.

Sullemacha, Hertfordſhire, near Elſtree.

SULLY, a town in the dept. of Saone and Loire, 7 miles ENE. of Autun; and a town in the dept. of Loiret, ſituated on the Loire, 21 miles SE. of Orleans.

SULMONA, anciently SULMO, the birth-place of the poet Ovid, a town of Abruzzo Citra, containing 11 churches, and 12 convents.

SULPHUR ISLAND, in the N. Pacific Ocean, about 5 miles long, in a NNE. and SSW. direction. A conſiderable part of it is conjectured to be ſulphur, both from its appearance to the eye, and the ſtrong ſulphuric ſmell which it emits. The ſurface exhibits various colours, and when ſeen from the WSW. it preſents an evident volcanic crater. It was diſcovered by Captain Gore, in 1797. Lat. 24. 48. N. lon. 141. 18. E.

SULTANIA, a town in Irac-Agemi, built in the 13th century, on the ruins of the ancient Tigranocerta. Many kings of Perſia made it their reſidence, and it was at one time one of the largeſt cities of Aſia. The ſtreets are now deſerted, and the inhabitants ſcarcely amount to 6000. It is 250 miles NNW. of Iſpahan.

Sulton, Suſſex, N. of Arundel Foreſt.

SULTSBACH, a town in the palatinate of Bavaria, ſubject to the duke of Newburg lewburg Sultzbach. It is 10 miles NW. f Amberg. Alſo a town in the dept. of ie Upper Rhine, 6 miles SW. of Colmar.

SULTZBURG, a town of Baden Dourich, celebrated for its wine.

SUMATRA, an iſland of Aſia, the moſt eſtern of the Sunda Iſlands, about 720 iles in length, and 180 in its greateſt readth. On the SE. it is ſeparated from iva by the Straits of Sunda. Its genel direction is nearly NW. and SE. The quator divides it into almoſt equal parts, ie one extremity being in 5. 33. N. and ie other in 5. 50. S. lat. No account id been given of this iſland, by any Engſhman, till the year 1778, when Mr. harles Miller publiſhed an account of ie manners of a particular diſtrict, in the 8th volume of the Philoſophical Tranſtions. Theſe were the Bettas, a people ho live in the interior parts, called the aſſia country. They differ from all the her inhabitants in language, manners, id cuſtoms. They eat the priſoners hom they take in war, though only in rrorem, and not as common food, and ang up their ſkulls as trophies in their ouſes. From this country, the greateſt art of the caſſia that is ſent to Europe is rocured. It abounds alſo with the camhire trees, which conſtitute the common mber in uſe; and in theſe trees the camhire is found native, in a concrete form. t is remarkable, that in this ſtate it is ld to the Chineſe, at the price of 250l. r 300l. per cwt. but theſe dexterous arſts contrive to furniſh the Europeans with , at about a quarter of that price. In 783, Mr. Marſden, who had been ſecretry to the preſident and council of Fort arlborough, publiſhed a hiſtory of Sutra, with very copious particulars of ie iſland. He repreſents it as ſurpaſſed y few in the beautiful indulgencies of ature. A chain of high mountains, in me of which are volcanoes, run through eir whole extent; their altitude, though reat, is not ſufficient to occaſion their beig covered with ſnow during any part of ie year. Between theſe ridges are exnſive plains, conſiderably elevated above ie ſurface of the maritime lands. In eſe, the air is cool; and, from this adantage, they are eſteemed the moſt eligile portion of the country, are the beſt habited, and the moſt cleared from oods, which elſewhere, in general, roughout Sumatra, cover both hills and allies with an eternal ſhade. Here too re found many large lakes, that facilite much the communication between he different parts. The heat of the air is far from being ſo intenſe as might be expected from a country occupying the middle of the torrid zone; and it is more temperate than many regions without the tropics, the thermometer, at the moſt ſultry hour, about two in the afternoon, generally fluctuating between 82 and 85 degrees. Mr. Marſden divides the inhabitants into Malays, Achaneſe, Battas, Lampoons, and Rejangs; and he takes the latter as the ſtandard of deſcription, with reſpect to the perſons, manners, and cuſtoms of the inhabitants. They are rather below the middle ſtature; their bulk in proportion; their limbs, for the moſt part ſlight, and particularly ſmall at the wriſts and ancles; and, upon the whole, they are accounted gracefully formed. Their hair is ſtrong, and of a ſhining black. The men are beardleſs; great pains being taken to render them ſo, when boys, by rubbing their chins with a kind of quick lime. Their complexion is properly yellow, wanting the red tinge that conſtitutes a copper or tawney colour. They are, in general, lighter than the Meſtees, or half-breed, of the reſt of India; thoſe of the wealthier claſs, who are not expoſed to the rays of the ſun, and particularly their women, approaching to a degree of fairneſs. Some of the inhabitants of the hilly parts are obſerved to have the ſwelled neck, or goiter; but they attempt no remedy for it, as theſe wens are conſiſtent with the higheſt health. The rites of marriage among the Sumatrans, conſiſt ſimply in joining the hands of the parties, and pronouncing them man and wife, without much ceremony, excepting the entertainment which is given upon the occaſion. But little apparent courtſhip precedes their marriages. Their manners do not admit of it; the young people of each ſex being carefully kept aſunder, and the girls being ſeldom truſted from under the wing of their mothers. The opportunities which the young people have of ſeeing and converſing with each other, are at the public feſtivals. On theſe occaſions, the perſons who are unmarried meet together, and dance and ſing in company. The men, when determined in their regards, generally employ an old woman as their agent, by whom they make known their ſentiments, and ſend preſents to the female of their choice. The parents then interfere, and the preliminaries being ſettled, a feaſt takes place. At theſe feſtivals, a goat, a buffalo, or ſeveral, according to the rank of the parties, are killed to entertain, not only the relations and invited vited guests, but all the inhabitants of the neighbouring country, who chuse to repair to them. The greater the concourse, the more is the credit of the host, who is, generally on these occasions, the father of the girl. The customs of the Sumatrans permit their having as many wives as they can purchase, or afford to maintain; but it is extremely rare, that an instance occurs of their having more than one, and that only among a few of the chiefs. The children are nursed but little, not confined by any swathing or bandages; and being suffered to roll about the floor, soon learn to walk and shift for themselves. When cradles are used, they swing suspended from the ceilings of the rooms. The Sumatrans are fond of the barbarous diversion of cock-fighting, taking great pains in rearing and feeding cocks, and never matching the same colours; but a grey against a pile, a yellow against a red, and the like. It rarely happens that both cocks survive the combat. The wild beasts of Sumatra are tigers, numerous elephants of a superior size, rhinoceroses, bears monkeys, and even cats. The tigers prove to the inhabitants, both in their journeys, and even their domestic occupations, most destructive enemies. The number of people annually slain by these rapacious tyrants of the woods, is almost incredible. Whole villages have been depopulated by them. Yet from a superstitious prejudice, it is with difficulty they are prevailed upon, by a large reward which the India Company offers, to use methods of destroying them, till they have sustained some particular injury in their own family or kindred. Their traps, of which they can make variety, are very ingeniously contrived. Sometimes they are in the nature of strong cages, with falling doors, into which the beast is enticed by a goat or dog inclosed as a bait; sometimes they manage that a large timber shall fall in a grove, across his back; sometimes he is nooosed about the loins with strong rattans; sometimes he is led to ascend a plank, nearly balanced, which turning when he is past the centre, lets him fall upon sharp stakes prepared below. Instances have occurred of a tiger being caught by one of the former modes, which had many marks in his body of the partial success of this last expedient. The size and strength of the species which prevails on this island is prodigious. They are said to break, with a stroke of their fore paw, the leg of a horse or a buffalo; and the largest prey they kill is without difficulty dragged into the woods by them. This they usually perform on the second night, being supposed, on the first, to gratify themselves with sucking the blood only. Time is by this delay afforded to prepare for their destruction; and to the methods already enumerated, beside shooting them, may be added that of placing a vessel of water, strongly impregnated with arsenic, near the carcass. The tiger having satiated itself with the flesh, is prompted to assuage his thirst with the tempting liquor at hand, and perishes in the indulgence. Their chief subsistence is most probably the monkeys with which the woods abound. They are described as alluring them to their fate, by a fascinating power, similar to what has been supposed of the snake; and, says Mr. Marsden, "I am not incredulous enough to treat the idea with contempt, having myself observed that when an alligator or crocodile, in a river, comes under an overhanging bough of a tree, the monkeys, in a state of alarm and distraction, crowd to the extremity, and chattering and trembling, approach nearer and nearer to the amphibious monster that awaits to devour them as they drop, which their fright renders almost unavoidable." These alligators likewise occasion the loss of many inhabitants, frequently destroying the people as they bathe in the river, according to their regular custom, and which the perpetual evidence of the risk attending it, cannot deter them from. A superstitious idea of their sanctity, also, preserves them from molestation, although with a hook of sufficient strength, they may be taken without much difficulty. The other animals of Sumatra are buffaloes, civet cats, a small but numerous kind of horses, goats, hogs, which run wild in the mountains, deer, few hares, but plenty of other game, bullocks, and hog-deer. This last is an animal somewhat larger than a rabbit, the head resembling that of a hog, and its shanks and feet like those of the deer. The sheep which have been hitherto carried to the island, decay and come to nothing. The bezoar-stone found on this animal has been valued at ten times its weight in gold; it is of a dark brown colour, smooth on the outside, and the coat being taken off, it appears still darker, with strings running underneath the coat; it will swim on the top of the water. If it be infused in any liquid, it makes it extremely bitter; the virtues usually attributed to this stone are cleansing the stomach, creating an appetite, and sweetening the blood. Of birds they have a greater variety than of beaſts. The coow, or Sumatran pheaſant, is a bird of incommon beauty. They have ſt rks of rodigious ſize, parrots, dunghill fowls, nd ducks, (the eggs of which are in he greateſt plenty, and form a conſidera-le article of commerce) the largeſt cocks n the world, wood-pigeons, doves, and a reat variety of ſmall birds different from urs, and diſtinguiſhed by the beauty of heir colours. Of their reptiles, they ave ſerpents, lizards, flying-lizards, and ameleons. The iſland ſwarms with inects, and their varieties are no leſs extrardinary than their numbers. The princial ſeeds ſown are rice and millet. They ave ſugar canes, beans, peas, radiſhes, ams, potatoes, pumpkins, and ſeveral inds of pot herbs unknown to Europe; nd here are found moſt of the fruits to e met in other parts of the E. Indies, in he greateſt perfection. Indigo, Braſil-ood, two ſpecies of the bread-fruit tree, he beſt pepper in the E. Indies, except hat of Cochin China, and which forms he moſt important article of commerce ere, 20 veſſels being annually loaded with this ſpice; benjamin, coffee, and otton, are likewiſe the produce of this land. Here alſo is the cabbage tree and ilk cotton tree; and the foreſt contains a reat variety of valuable ſpecies of wood, s ebony, pine, ſandal, eagle, or aloes, eek, manchineel, iron-wood, the banyanree, and the moſt precious balſams and doriferous gums. Gold, ſilver, tin, iron, opper, lead, agaric, ſapphires, ſulphur, rſenic, and ſaltpetre, are alſo produced t Sumatra. Bees' wax is a commodity f great importance here; and they have ikewiſe edible birds'-neſts. It is well watered by a great number of rivers, in which there is plenty of fiſh. The Eng-iſh and Dutch have factories on this land; the principal one of the former eing Fort Marlborough, on the SW. oaſt. Sumatra is divided into many etty kingdoms. The original natives f Sumatra are Pagans; but it is to be bſerved, that when the Sumatrans, or ny of the natives of the eaſtern iſlands, arn to read the Arabic character, and ubmit to circumciſion, they are ſaid to ecome Malays; the term Malay being nderſtood to mean Muſſulman.

SUMBI, a province of Angola, in Afri-a, lying in about 11 deg. S. lat. and but ittle known.

Sumbridge, Devonſhire, near Barnſta-
le. Summerby, Leiceſterſ. near Coldrton. Summer Court, Cornwall.

* SUMMER-HILL, a town of Meath, in Leinſter, 20 miles from Dublin.

Summerley, Suſſex, S. of Burdham.
Summers, Bedf. E. of Luton. Summer-ton, Oxf. on the Charwell, near Fritwell.
Summerton, Suffolk.

SUMNER, a county of N. Carolina.

SUNART, a diſtrict of Argyleſhire, remarkable for numerous veins of lead, which, however, are not very productive.

SUNART LOCH, an inlet of the ſea, in Argyleſhire, which ſeparates the iſland of Mull from the diſtrict of Morven.

Subbingin, Weſtmorl. S. of Croſby-Ravenſworth, at the foot of Beacon Hill.
At a little diſtance is Sunbiggin Tarn, or Lake, which abounds with eels, and in which are bred vaſt quantities of a red trout, like char. The adjoining moors abound with grouſe and moor-game.
Sunbrick, Lancaſhire, W. of Ken Sands.
Sunbury, Middleſex, on the Thames, between Hampton Court and Shepperton.

SUNBURY, a town of Georgia, in N.
America, with a ſafe and commodious harbour, 25 miles SSW. of Savannah.
Several ſmall iſlands intervening, partly obſtruct a direct view of the ocean, and interlocking with each other, render the paſſage to ſea winding, but not difficult.
It is a pleaſant, healthy town, and is the reſort of the planters from the adjacent places of Midway and Newport, during the ſickly months. Alſo a town of Pennſylvania, 92 miles NW. of Philadelphia.

SUNDA ISLANDS, in the Indian Ocean, near the Straits of Sunda. The chief of them are Borneo, Java, and Sumatra.

SUNDA, STRAITS OF, a ſtrait or paſ-age in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, between the iſlands of Sumatra and Java.

SUNDAL, a town of Drontheim, in Norway, ſituated on the Driva, 66 miles
SSW. of Drontheim.

SUNDERBUNDS, a tract of country in Hindooſtan, conſiſting of that part of the Delta of the Ganges, in the S. part of Bengal, which borders on the ſea. It is compoſed of a labyrinth of rivers and creeks, all of which are ſalt, except thoſe that immediately communicate with the principal arm of the Ganges. In extent it is about equal to the principality of Wales. "It is ſo completely enveloped in woods, and infeſted with tigers," ſays Major Rennell, "that if any attempts have ever been made to clear it (as is reported) they have hitherto miſcarried."
Here ſalt, in quantities equal to the whole conſumption of Bengal and its dependencies, is made and tranſported with equal facility; and here alſo is found an almoſt inexhauſtible ſtore of timber for boat-building. The diſtance to which the Ganges expands its various branches, at its junction with the ſea, is about 200 miles.

SUNDERBURG, a ſea-port of the Iſle of Alſen, in Denmark. It is ſeated on a ſtrait, called Sunderburg Sound, 12 miles E of Flendſburg.

SUNDEROO, a ſmall iſland and ſea-port of Hindooſtan, on the Concan coaſt, about 36 miles NNW. of Goa. It was reduced by Commodore James, in 1756.

SUNDERLAND, a large, populous, thriving, and well built ſea-port town in the county of Durham, containing a handſome church, a large and elegant chapel of eaſe, a neat and large chapel for the Methodiſts, five Diſſenters' meeting-houſes, an hoſpital for old ſeamen or their widows, another for eight poor women, a diſpenſary, and other public buildings. Its inhabitants are eſtimated at 30,000. Coal is the ſtaple commodity, of which about 280,000 chaldrons, Newcaſtle meaſure, are exported annually. This coal is brought down the Wear, from numerous pits near its banks. In one year, (1791) not leſs than 4905 veſſels cleared coaſtways, and 703 overſea; in all 5608. This town, together with that of Biſhop Wearmouth, bordering on its weſtern extremity, and to which it is immediately attached, comprehend a ſpace of about a mile and a half in length, and a quarter of a mile in breadth. The main ſtreet, and particularly the central part of it, riſing in a conſiderable aſcent, which connects the two towns, is ſpacious and tolerably handſome, but moſt of the other ſtreets, which branch off from it, are narrow and dirty. Glaſs bottles and ſalt are manufactured here, and there is an exportation of lime, grindſtones, coperas, pottery-ware, and other articles. For a long time the navigation of this port was conſiderably impeded, from the want of a ſufficient depth of water, to admit ſhips of any conſiderable burden to put to ſea with their whole lading; to remedy which, ſuch veſſels were obliged to take part of their cargo in the open road; by which the keel-men, who bring down the coals, were often expoſed, in ſudden ſtorms, to danger, by venturing out to ſea with the remainder of their lading; to obviate which inconvenience, and the danger to which the veſſels are there often expoſed, many of the largeſt ſhips belonging to this port were obliged to take in their lading at Shields. But this inconvenience is now very much remedied, by recent improvements in the harbour, and particularly the addition of a north pier, by which the ebbing tide gains greater force to ſcour the ſand which forms a bar at the entrance of the harbour; the tide now flows 16 feet, and admits veſſels of 300 and 400 tons burden. A bridge has been lately erected acroſs the river Wear, thought to be the greateſt curioſity of its kind in the world. It is not leſs remarkable for its prodigious height and extreme ſpan, than for the peculiarity of its conſtruction, being formed of ſmall ſegments of caſt iron, joined in ſuch a manner as to form a complete arch, the ſpan of which is 236 feet, and will admit of veſſels ſailing under it of 400 tons burden, by only ſtriking their top-gallant maſts. The ſeamen of this port are reckoned among the colliers, the beſt in the kingdom. Sunderland is a member of Newcaſtle, and is ſituated on the S. ſide of the river Wear, (by which, at high water, it is almoſt ſurrounded) 18 miles NE. of Durham, and 204 N. by W. of London.

SUNDERLAND, a town of Maſſachuſetts, ſituated on the E. ſide of the Connecticut, oppoſite Deerfield, and 69 miles W. of Boſton.

Sunderland, Cumberl. 4 miles NE. of Cockermouth. Sunderland, Durham, by Branſpeth Caſtle. Sunderland, Northumberland, by the ſea, N. of Dunſtaburgh Caſtle. Sunderland, High, Yorkſ. near Halifax. Sunderland Point, Lancaſhire, on the coaſt, SW. of Lancaſter. Sunderland Wick, Yorkſ. near Great and Little Driffield.

SUNDGAW, formerly a diſtrict of Germany, on the left ſide of the Rhine, but now forming the ſouthern part of the dept. of Lower Rhine.

SUNDI, a province of Africa, in Congo, which lies along the river Zaire. Its rivers render it extremely fertile, and in the mountains are mines of ſeveral metals. The capital is of the ſame name. Lat. 4. 50. S lon. 17. 55. E.

Sundon, Upper and Lower, Bedfordſ. SW. of Stretley. Sundridge, Kent, 2 miles and a half NE. of Weſtram. Sundridge, Kent, in Bromley pariſh.

SUNDSWALL, a ſea-port of Medelpadia, Sweden. Lat. 62. 47. N. lon. 17. 5. E.

Sungar, Warw. S. of Claverdon. Sunger, Wilts, near Clarendon. Sunk Iſland, Yorkſ. in the Humber, about two miles long, and one and a half broad. It is about about 10 miles NW. of Spurn Head, and 14 SE. of Hull. Sunning, Berks, on the Thames, 2 miles NE. of Reading. At the E. end of the church, Leland ſays, there ſtood a chapel, formerly much reſorted to in pilgrimage, for the cure of madneſs. According to the ſame author, 9 biſhops ſat here, till Hermanus, the laſt of them, tranſlated the ſee to Sarum. Sunning-Eye, Oxf. near Sunning. Sunning-Hill, Berks, in Windſor Foreſt, near Bagshot: its medicinal wells are efficacious in paralytic caſes. Sunning-Well, Berks, 1E. of Oxford and Baſil's Leigh.

SUPERIOR, ſo called from its magnitude, the largeſt lake of North America, and ſuppoſed to be the largeſt body of freſh water on the globe. It may be juſtly termed the Caſpian Sea of America, being, according to the French charts, not leſs than 1500 miles in circumference. There are many iſlands in this lake, two of them are very large, eſpecially Iſle Royale, which is computed to be 100 miles long, and in ſome places 40 broad. The ſurrounding coaſt is rocky and uneven. Upwards of 30 rivers enter this lake, ſome of which are of conſiderable ſize. It abounds with fiſh, particularly trout and ſturgeon; the former generally weighing from 12 to 50 pounds. Storms affect this lake as much as they do the Atlantic Ocean. It diſcharges its waters from the SE. corner, through the Straits of St. Marie, into Lake Huron.

SUPINO, a town of Moliſo, in Naples.

SUR. See SOUR.

SURAT, a ſea-port of Hindooſtan, encompaſſed on the land ſide with two brick walls, which divide it into the Inner and the Outer Town. Within the inner walls ſtand the citadel, on the ſhore of the river, divided by trenches from the town. The Europeans reſiding here, eſtimate the population of the city at a million of inhabitants, but M. Niebuhr thinks this calculation above the truth by, at leaſt, two thirds. The larger houſes are flat roofed here, as through the reſt of the Eaſt, with courts before them, but the houſes of the common people are moſtly high-roofed. Its trade is very conſiderable, it being the great ſtore-houſe of the moſt precious productions of India; and in the city are as many different profeſſions of religion as in Amſterdam; for there are Mahometans of ſeveral ſects, and many ſorts of Gentoos. Mr. Niebuhr ſays, that the Mahometans at Surat are not, by far, ſo ſtrict as they are in Arabia, or in other Turkiſh countries, nor are the diſtinctions of tribes among the Hindoos who reſide here, ſtrictly obſerved. "Theſe Hindoos," he continues, "are a ſet of induſtrious, ſober people, and of ſuch ſurpriſing honeſty, that no Europeans have ever had cauſe to repent the intruſting, even their whole fortune, to the Banians, who being born to trade, are employed here as brokers, as the Jews are in Turkey. The Hindoo women aſſiſt their huſbands in earning their bread, and keep themſelves ſo clean, that the European women, who come to India, are obliged to follow their example, or run the riſk of loſing their huſband's affections. When a child is born, a Bramin is to declare, by aſtrological rules, whether the child is come into the world in a lucky hour or not. This done, he hangs a thin ſtring over the ſhoulder of a boy, who wears this diſtinctive mark of his nation all his life time. The Bramins fix the time for the celebration of weddings; and alſo order and announce the holydays. Every Banian is obliged, every morning, after waſhing and bathing himſelf, to have a kind of ſeal impreſſed on his forehead by a Bramin; though this is the office of inferior Bramins only. I ſaw, one morning, a great number of them ſit on the river ſide, under the caſtle, where a number of girls and women reſorted to bathe, and to ſay their morning prayers. Every one of them gave the clean clothes, which they intended to wear for that day to one of theſe prieſts, and then went into the river. They afterward exchange their wet clothes for the dry ones, publicly on ſhore, but with ſuch a dexterity, that the moſt curious obſerver could ſee nothing inconſiſtent with decency. The Bramin, afterward, dipped his thumb into ſome red colour, and impreſſed it on the forehead of the women, who reciprocally marked the prieſt again, though ſlightly, leſt his face ſhould be daubed all over, by the great number of markers. Laſtly, the perſon that is ſigned, and in this manner conſecrated for the day, keeps the colour-box in one hand, ſays a ſhort prayer, gives the Bramin one or two handfuls of rice, and then, with the wet clothes in the other hand, returns home."—Beſides the Mahometans and Gentoos, there are Jews and Chriſtians of various denominations, at Surat. Perſons of diſtinction, both here and through the reſt of India, ſpeak and write the Perſian language, which has been received at the courts, and the knowledge of which is very uſeful for buſineſs. In trade, however, a corrupt Portugueſe is uſed; and this is in India, what the Lingua Franca is in the Levant. The ſurrounding country is fertile, except towards the ſea, which is ſandy and barren. Here is a fine garden, the property of the Dutch Eaſt India Company, the aſpect of which is rich and charming. Before the Engliſh Eaſt India Company obtained poſſeſſion of Bombay, the preſidency of their affairs on the coaſt of Malabar was held at Surat; and they had a factory eſtabliſhed there. Even after the preſidency was transferred to Bombay, the factory was continued. The Great Mogul had then an officer here, who was ſtyled his admiral, and who received a revenue called the tanka, of the annual value of three lacks of rupees, ariſing from the rents of adjacent lands, and the taxes levied at Surat. The tyranny of this officer towards the merchants, induced the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, in 1759, to fit out an armament, which diſpoſſeſſed the admiral of the caſtle; and, ſoon after, the poſſeſſion of this caſtle was confirmed to them by the court of Delhi. They obtained, moreover, the appointment to the poſt of admiral, and were conſtituted receivers of the tanka, ſo that the Engliſh are, at preſent, the actual ſovereigns of Surat, and engroſs nearly the whole trade of the city. They keep the nabob of Surat in a ſtate of abſolute dependence, allowing him only an income on which he may live ſuitably to his dignity. The Mahrattas, however, enjoy a third part of the amount of the cuſtoms; and one of their officers conſtantly attends here to receive this tribute. The Indians are, in part, content with their new maſters, and the merchants are no longer in danger from the avaricious extortions of the nabobs, yet they complain of the ſelfiſh ſpirit of their new maſters. It is ſituated in a large plain, on the S. bank of the Tapty, about twenty miles from its mouth, on the confines of Guzerat, and 177 N. of Bombay. Lat. 21. 10. N. lon. 72. 48. E.

Surbiton, Surry, near Kingſton, in the road to Epſom. Surfleet, Eſſex, at the mouth of the Cola, NW. of Gunfleet. Surfleet, Lincolnſhire, on Boſton Dike, near the Waſh.

Surgowny, in Armagh, Ulſter.

SURGUT, a town of Tobolſk, in Siberia, 284 miles NNE. of Tobolſk.

Suridlington, Lincolnſhire, SW. of Market-Raſin.

SURINAM, a country of S. America, in Guiana, bounded on the N. by the Atlantic Ocean, on the E. by the river Marawina, on the S. by a country of Indians, and on the W. by the river Corentyn. It is about 150 miles in length, and 60 in breadth, and abounds in fruits, fiſh, game, and ſingular animals of different kinds. The ſoil is, in general, extremely fertile, particularly in thoſe parts which are cultivated by European induſtry, producing ſugar, cotton, tobacco, indigo, cocoa, gums, wood for dying, &c. The woods are full of monkeys, and there are likewiſe tigers, with parrots, ſcorpions, ſerpents of an amazing ſize, and a great variety of inſects. The rivers abound with alligators, and in Surinam is found that wonderful fiſh, the torpedo. Beſides this, which gives name to the colony, the other principal rivers are, the Corentyn, the Copename, the Seramica, and the Marawina; of theſe, the Surinam only is navigable; the reſt, though very long and broad, are ſo ſhallow, and ſo extremely crowded with rocks and ſmall iſlands, that they are of little conſequence to Europeans; nor are their banks inhabited, except by the Indians, or natives of the country. Into all theſe rivers are diſcharged a number of very large creeks, or rivulets, the banks of which are inhabited by Europeans, and cultivated with various plantations, which exhibit the moſt delightful proſpects imaginable to thoſe who travel by water, the univerſal mode of journeying in this country, as the ſoil is, in general, ill adapted for the conſtruction of roads, and in ſome places the woods are abſolutely impenetrable. The whites, or Europeans, in Surinam, who reſide principally in Paramaribo, the chief town, are computed at about 5000, including the garriſon and the negroes, at about 75,000. In 1674, this ſettlement, which had been partly planted by the Engliſh, was ceded to the Dutch by King Charles II. in exchange for the province of New York. Lat. 4. 45. to 6. N. lon. 53. 40. to 56. 25. Weſt.

SURINAM, a river of S. America, which riſes in the government of Terra Firma, and after a winding courſe of about 150 miles, from S. to N. falls into the Atlantic Ocean, in lat. 6 25. N. and lon. 55. 40. W. This river is navigable for large veſſels more than 90 miles up the country.

SURINGIA, or SUISJU, a ſea-port of Niphon, in Japan, capital of a province of the ſame name, with a caſtle, where the emperors formerly reſided. It is 178 miles SSE. of Meaco.

Surlby, Nottinghamſhire, N. of Blythe. Surlingham, St. Mary's and St. Saviour's, SE.

SE. of Norwich. Surrendon, Kent, NW. of Aſhford.

SURRY, a county of England, bounded on the N by Middleſex and a point of Buckinghamſhire, on the E. by Kent, on the S. by Suſſex, and on the W. by Hampſhire and Berks. Its greateſt length is about 39 miles, and its breadth 26. It is divided into 13 hundreds, which contain 11 market towns (including Southwark) 140 pariſhes, 650 villages and hamlets, and about 85,000 houſes. It is a healthy, pleaſant county, and the value of eſtates in it has advanced, of late years, beyond any other part of England. The ſoil is very different in the extreme parts from that in the middle, whence it has been compared to a coarſe cloth with a fine border: for the edge of the county on all ſides has a rich ſoil, extremely fruitful in corn and graſs, particularly in Holmeſdale, and on the N. and W. parts toward the Thames; but it is far otherwiſe in the heart of the county, where are wide tracts of ſandy ground and barren heath, and in ſome places are long ridges of hills, with warrens of rabbits, and parks for deer. However, we meet here and there with ſome pleaſant ſpots interſperſed in the middle of Surry, and it is not to be doubted that a great deal of the waſte ground might, by proper management, be greatly improved. This county produces corn, box wood, walnuts, hops, and fuller's earth; and near Darking grows a wild black cherry, of which a very pleaſant wine is made, little inferior to French claret. The manufactures in ſtarch, tobacco, gunpowder, paper, vinegar, calico printing, wax bleaching, &c. are conſiderable. The principal rivers, beſide the Thames (which is the boundary of this county on the N.) are the Mole, Wey, Wandle, and Loddon. The Lent aſſizes are held at Kingſton, and the ſummer aſſizes at Guilford and Croydon alternately.

SURRY, a county of Virginia, and a town of New Hampſhire.

SURSEE, a town of Lucerne, in Switzerland, ſeated on the Lake of Sempach, 8 miles NW. of Lucerne.

SUS, a river of Africa, which riſes from Mount Atlas, in Morocco, and runs into the Atlantic, near Santa Cruz. It gives name to the province, which it bounds on the ſouth.

SUS, SOUS, or SUEZ, a diſtrict of Morocco, bounded on the W. by the ocean, on the N. by Mount Atlas, on the E. by Darah, and on the S. by Nun. It is a flat country, moſt of which produces corn, ſugar-canes, dates, indigo, alum, calamine, and red copper; and alſo abounds with cattle and camels. In the mountainous part the inhabitants are entirely free, and are governed by their own ſcheiks. The principal towns are Tarudant, Aguadir, Toma, Teceut, and Meſſa.

SUSA, anciently SEGUSIUM, an ancient and ſtrong town of Piedmont, capital of the marquiſate of Suſa. Here is a rich convent, called the Abbey of St. Juſt, and a triumphal arch erected to the honour of Auguſtus Cæſar. It has been called the key of Italy, becauſe it is the principal paſſage out of France into Italy. It is at preſent ſmall and poor, and is ſeated on the river Dora Riparia, in a valley to which it gives name, 25 miles WNW. of Turin.

SUSA, SUSTER, or SCHOUSTER, a town of Chuſiſtan, in Perſia, with ſome manufactures of ſilk ſtuffs and rich cloth. It is 150 miles W. of Iſpahan, and is ſuppoſed by ſome to be the ancient Suſa, where the kings of Perſia had a magnificent palace for their winter reſidence; alſo a town of Choraſan, in Perſia, 60 miles NNW. of Herat.

SUSA. See SOUSE.

SUSDAL, a town of Volodomir, in Ruſſia, capital of a duchy of the ſame name. It is built of wood, as are moſt towns in theſe parts, and is 90 miles NE. of Moſcow.

SUSQUEHANNAH, a river of N. America, which riſes in two branches, the eaſternmoſt in the Mohawks' country, New York; and the weſternmoſt in the N. part of Pennſylvania. Theſe branches unite at Sunbury; after which it runs in a SE. direction, paſſes by Harriſburg, croſſes the Blue Mountains, enters Maryland, and being joined by ſeveral other rivers, forms the Cheſapeak.

SUSSEX, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Surry, on the NE. and E. by Kent, on the S. by the Engliſh Channel, and on the W. by Hampſhire. It is about 75 miles in length, and 20 in its mean breadth. It is divided into 6 rapes, and theſe are ſubdivided into 61 hundreds, which contain 1 city, 20 market-towns, 312 pariſhes, and 1060 villages. The air of this county is very various: along the ſea-ſhore it is thought agueiſh; but it has a much greater effect on ſtrangers than on the natives, who are generally very healthful. In the Weald, which is a rich deep ſoil, it is apt to be foggy, yet not unwholeſome; but upon the Downs the air is extremely ſweet and healthy. The ſoil is likewiſe various; that of the Downs, and thence to the ſea, is very fertile, both in corn and graſs, the latter feeding large flocks of ſheep, whoſe wool is remarkably fine. The middle of the county abounds with meadows and rich arable ground, and the N. ſide is ſhaded with extenſive woods, that uſed to ſupply fuel for the iron works when they were in a flouriſhing ſtate. This plentiful county, therefore, ſupplies numerous commodities, the chief of which are corn, malt, cattle, wool, wood, iron, chalk, glaſs, fiſh, and fowl. It is particularly famous for its wheaters, a ſmall bird, of the ſize of a lark, not much inferior to an ortolane, which is taken on the SE. Downs in the following manner: a turf is cut up, about a foot long, and half a foot broad; in the cavity is placed a ſnare of horſe-hair, and the turf turned with the graſs downward to cover the greateſt part of the hole. Theſe birds are naturally ſo timorous, that the ſhadow of a cloud, or any thing that moves on the ground, makes them fly into theſe little pits for ſhelter, where they are taken. With reſpect to manufactures, Suſſex is not diſtinguiſhed for any but that of gunpowder at Battel, and of needles and coarſe cloths at Chicheſter. The principal rivers are the Arun, Adur, Ouſe, Rother, Rye, and Cockmere. Chicheſter is the capital.

SUSSEX, a town of New Jerſey, and a county of Virginia.

Suſted, Norf. SW. of Cromer.

SUSTEREN, a town of Juliers.

Suſton, E. of Hereford. Sutcomb, Devonſ. Sutham, Berks, between Theal and Pangbourn. Suthbury Hill, Wilts, between Everley Warren and Luggerſhall. It is the higheſt in the county, and has the traces of a vaſt fortification, ſuppoſed to have been Daniſh.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. and W. by the North Sea, on the E. by Caithneſſhire and the German Ocean, and on the S. and SW. by the Frith of Dornoch and Roſsſhire. Its greateſt extent from E. to W. is about 46 miles, and from N. to S. ſomewhat more. It is uſually divided into Strathnavern and Sutherland Proper, the former comprehending the northern, the latter the ſouthern part. Some parts of this county, ſtill called foreſts, were anciently covered with wood, but are now trackleſs deſerts, deſtitute of trees; or bleak mountains, abounding with wild roes. In theſe parts there are few inhabitants, and no villages; but to the SE. along the Frith of Dornoch, the country is populous and well cultivated. Dornoch is the county town.

SUTHERLAND POINT, the S. point of entrance into Botany Bay, ſo called from Forby Sutherland, one of Captain Cook's ſeamen, who was buried there, in 1770.

SUTRI, a town in the Patrimonio, ſeated on the river Puzzulo, 22 miles NW. of Rome.

Sutterby, Linc. SW. of Alford. Sutterleigh, Devonſ. near Chumleigh. Sutton, Bedfordſ. near Potton. Sutton, near Buckingham. Sutton, Camb. SW. of Ely. Sutton, Cheſhire, near Frodſham. Sutton, Cheſh. on the Bollin, near Macclesfield. Sutton, Cheſhire, near Traffordbridge. Sutton, Cheſhire, near Elton, has a mill on the Wheelock. Sutton, Dorſetſ. N. of Weymouth. Sutton, Eſſex, in Hornchurch manor. Sutton, Eſſex, near Stapleford Towney. Sutton, Hants, SE. of Burton Stacey. Sutton, Hants, SE. of Alresford. Sutton, Hampſhire, SE. of Burton Stacey. Sutton, Hants, S. of Odiham. Sutton, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Sutton, Kent, 5 miles NE. of Dover. Sutton, Kent, by the Darent, 2 miles SE. of Dartford. Sutton, Lanc. in Preſcot pariſh. Sutton, Leiceſ. near the Soare, SW. of Croſby. Sutton, Linc. by the ſea, SW. of Saltfleetby. Sutton, Lincolnſ. SE. of Holbeach. Sutton, Lincolnſ. near Beckingham. Sutton, Norf. near Hickling. Sutton, Northamp. by the Nen, W. of Peterborough. Sutton, or Sutton-in-Aſhfield, Nottinghamſ. near Mansfield.

SUTTON, a town of Nottinghamſhire, on the Trent, near Grieſthorp, with a market on Monday.

SUTTON, a town of Maſſachuſetts, 38 miles SW. of Boſton.

Sutton, Nottinghamſ. near Grandby. Sutton, Shropſhire, E. of Broſely. Sutton, Shropſhire, near Bromwich Park. Sutton, S. of Shrewſbury. Sutton, Staffordſh. between Forton and Norbury. Sutton, Staffordſ. in Aldridge pariſh. Sutton, Suffolk, on the Stour, SE. of Eaſt Bergholt. Sutton, Suffolk, SE. of Woodbridge. Sutton, Surry, near Carſhalton, in the road from London to Epſom. Sutton, Suſſex, near Seaford. Sutton, Wilts, NE. of Chippenham. Sutton, Yorkſ. on the Derwent, oppoſite to New Malton. Sutton, Yorkſ. 4 miles NE. of Hull. Sutton, Yorkſ. N. Riding, in Galtres Foreſt. Sutton, Yorkſ. between Boroughbridge and Bedal. Sutton-Barne, Kent, in Borden pariſh. Sutton-Baſſet, Northampt. near Harborough. Sutton-Bingham, Somerſetſ. 2 miles SW. of Yeovil. Sutton-Biſhop's, Somerſetſ. W. of Stowey. Sutton-Bonnington, Nottinghamſ. NW. of of Normanton. Sutton-Caſtle, Kent, in the pariſh of Sutton-Valence. Sutton-Chart, Kent. Sutton-Cheney, Leiceſ. S. of Boſworth.

SUTTON COLFIELD, a ſmall town of Warwickſhire, ſituated among pleaſant woods, in a barren ſoil but excellent air, near a chaſe or foreſt, as it was formerly called, 7 miles NNE. of Warwick, and 111 NW. of London. Mark. on Monday.

Sutton-Court, Middleſ. between Chiſwick and Strand Green. Sutton Court, Somerſetſ. between Stowey and Stanton Drew. Sutton Courtney, Berkſhire, on the Thames, near Abingdon. Sutton Eaſt, Kent, 4 miles SW. of Leneham. Sutton, Guilden, Cheſhire, NW. of Tarven. Sutton-Hall, Derbyſhire, near Bolſover Caſtle. Sutton-Hungrove, Yorkſ. SW. of Thirſk. Sutton, Long, Somerſetſ. between Somerton and Muchney. Sutton, Maddock or Magna, Shropſhire, SW. of Brown-Clee-Hill. Sutton, Magna and Parva, Cheſhire, W. of Stanney. Sutton, Magna, Eſſex, adjoining Rochford. Sutton, Magna and Parva, Wilts, near Warminſter. The clothiers have ſpinning houſes here. Sutton-Mallet, Somerſetſ. W. of Morlinch. Sutton-Mandeville, or Manſfield, Wilts, on the Madder, E. of Wardour Caſtle. Sutton-Park, Worceſterſ. in Tenbury pariſh. Sutton Parva, Warwickſhire, near Sutton-Colfield. Sutton-Place, Surry, in Woking pariſh, a noble manor-houſe, built of brick, with a ſtately gate-houſe and high tower. The window mouldings within the houſe, and coins of the walls, are of baked, white clay, and appear perfect as when it was firſt erected in the reign of Henry VIII. Sutton, St. Edmund's, St. James's, St. Leonard's, and St. Mary's. Lincolnſ. all in that part called Holland. Sutton Sturmy, Worceſ. near Sutton Park. Sutton Valence, Kent, 4 miles and a half SE. of Maidſtone. Sutton-under-Braylis, Glouceſ. 7 miles E. of Campden, is completely inſulated in Warwickſ. It lies in a fine, rich country, on the Stour, and is many miles diſtant from any part of the county, of which it is a member. Sutton under Whiſton Cliff, Yorkſ. NE. of Thirſk. Sutton-upon-Lound, Nottinghamſ. NW. of Retford. Sutton-upon-the-Hill, Derbyſhire, SE. of Boylſton, Sutton-Waldron, Dorſetſ. NE. of Sturminſter. Sutton-Walleys, Herefordſ. on the Lug, between Hampton Court and Hereford, where was formerly a palace of king Offa.

SUZA. See SUSA.

SUZANNE, ST. a town in the dept. of the Mayenne, with a conſiderable paper manufactory. It is 17 miles E. of Laval.

Swaby, Lincolnſ. W. of Alford. Swacliff, Oxfordſ. W. of Banbury.

Swadlinbar, in Cavan, Ulſter, 74 miles from Dublin. About half a mile from it is a celebrated ſpa.

Swadlingrote, Derbyſ. SE. of Burton-upon Trent; has coal-pits.

* SWAFFHAM, a large, genteel, well-built town of Norfolk, one of the beſt in the county, containing a very ſplendid church, a Quakers' meeting-houſe, and about 300 good houſes. It is full of inns and ſhopkeepers, and is ſeated on a hill, 15 miles SE. of Lynn, and 91 NNE. of London. Market on Saturday.

Swaffham Bulbeck, Prior St. Cyric, and Prior St. Margaret, Cambridgſ. and W. of Newmarket. Swafield, Lincolnſ. SE. of Grantham. Swafield, Norfolk, between Trunch and North Walſham. Swaily, Glouceſ. in Forthampton pariſh. Swainby, Yorkſ. between Bedall and Thirſk. Swaintborp, four miles SW. of Norwich. Swainſton, Iſle of Wight, near Newport. It is pleaſantly ſituated, and commands an extenſive view of the Channel, and of the neighbouring woods, walks, pleaſure grounds, &c. Swale, a river of Yorkſ. which riſes on the confines of Weſtmorland, and running SE. paſſes by Richmond and Thirſk, and falls into the Ure, about 4 miles below Boroughbridge. Swale, E. and W. Kent, two branches of the Medway, that run into the Thames, the former below Shelneſs, the latter, or main ſtream, at Sheerneſs. The oyſter fiſhery chiefly lies upon the coaſts of the former, from Colemanſole to the Snout Wears, and ſo to the Ride. Swale-Cliff, Kent, by the ſea 5 miles N. of Canterbury. Swaleneſs, Kent, W. of W. Swale, oppoſite to Queenborough. Swaley, on the Darwent, SW. of Derby. Swalland, Dorſetſ. near Encomb, in Purbeck Iſle. Swallow, Lincolnſ. NE. of Thongcaſter. Swallow Cliff, Wiltſhire, E. of Wardour-Caſtle. Swallowfield, Berkſ. near Okingham. Swallwell, Durh. W. of Gateſhead.

SWALLY, a ſea-port of Cambaya, in Hindooſtan, 15 miles NNW. of Surat.

Swampton, Hampſhire, between Whitchurch and Andover. Swanacote, Cornwall, between Jacobſtow and Whitſtone. Swanborough Suſſex, SW. of Lewes. Swanburn, Bucks, near Winſlow and Ayleſbury. Swanby, Yorkſ. near Wharlton-Caſtle. Swancot, Shropſ. NE. of Bridgenorth. Swanland, Yorkſ. 7 miles SSW. of Hull. Swanington, Leiceſterſ. near Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Swanington, Norfolk, S. of Caſton.

Swan-Iſland, in Down Ulſter, ſituated near Down Patrick, in Strangford Lake

Swanlow, Cheſhire, by Darnell Park. Swanmore, Hampſhire, SE. of Biſhop's Waltham. Swannage, Dorſetſhire, near Pool. Swanſcomb, Kent, 2 miles W. of Graveſend, near the remains of 3 ſmall camps and forts, ſuppoſed to be Daniſh. Here, it is ſaid, the Kentiſhmen, with boughs in their hands, like a moving wood, ſurpriſed William the Conqueror, and throwing down their boughs, threatened battle, if they had not their ancient cuſtoms and franchiſes granted to them, to which he immediately conſented. But the fact is doubted, as it is firſt mentioned by Thomas Spot, a monk, who lived two centuries after William's arrival. It is certain, however, that many peculiar cuſtoms are to be found in Kent; one of which is that of gavelkind, or the equal diſtribution of landed property among all the ſons of a family.

*SWANSEY, or ABERTAW, a large, clean, well built, and populous town of Glamorganſhire, containing an old caſtle, 2 churches, and about 400 houſes, with broad paved ſtreets. It exports great quantities of coals to Ireland and the ſouthern coaſt of England; it has alſo a great correſpondence with Briſtol and Worceſter for grocery, and other ſhop goods. Here are potteries, and conſiderable works for the ſmelting of copper and lead ore. Many ſhips have been built here, and it is reſorted to for ſea bathing. It is ſituated on a bay of the Briſtol Channel, to which it gives name, at the mouth of the river Tawy, which here forms a good harbour. 24 miles WNW. of Cowbridge, and 205 W. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

Swanſtern, Nottinghamſ. in Dunham Manor. Swanſwick, Somerſetſ. N. of Bath. Swanthorp, Hants, between Odiam and Farnham. Swanton, Norf. W. of Melton-Conſtable. Swanton Abbots, Norfolk, W. of Wurſted. Swanton-Morley, Norfolk, NE. of Eaſt Dereham. Swanwich, Dorſetſhire, in Purbeck Iſle, 2 miles from Langton, and 5 SE. of Corfe Caſtle. It contains above 1000 inhabitants, who carry on a pretty briſk trade in exporting ſtone; immenſe quantities being annually dug, for various purpoſes, in the quarries hereabouts. Veſſels of 300 tons may ride in its bay. From 1764 to 1771, 94,000 tons of ſtone were exported from hence and Purbeck. The town conſiſts of one ſtreet, about a mile in length, with ſtone buildings, built ſmall and low. Swanwick, Derbyſ. near Alfreton. Swanwick, Hants, near Titchfield. Swarby, Lincolnſ. SW. of Sleaford. Swardeſton, SW. of Norwich. Swarſord, Oxfordſhire, NE. of Chipping-Norton. Swarkſton, Derbyſ. in the road from Derby to Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, has a bridge over the Trent, ſuppoſed to be the longeſt in Europe, except that of Eſſeck in Hungary, it having 39 arches. It extends acroſs the meadows near a mile to Stanton, but is conſtructed with ſuch very low battlements, that it muſt be conſidered rather as a terror than an ornament. Swarland, Northumberland, in Felton Manor. Swarwotton, Hampſhire, N. of Alresford. Swaton, Lincolnſ. NE. of Fokingham.

Swatteragh, in Derry, Ulſter.

Swavesey, Cambridgeſ. SE. of St. Ives. Sway, Hampſhire NW. of Lemington. Swebſton, Leiceſterſ, 2 miles from Hog's Norton.

SWEDEN, a large kingdom, in the N. part of Europe; bounded on the N. by Norway and Lapland; on the E. by Ruſſia; on the S. by the Baltic and the Gulf of Finland; and on the W. by Norway, the Sound, and the Categate. It is the largeſt ſtate in Europe, next to Ruſſia, though geographers are not agreed reſpecting its ſuperficial contents. The whole kingdom is divided into five general parts; namely, Sweden Proper, Gothland, Norland, Lapland, and Finland; and each of theſe is ſubdivided into ſeveral provinces. Sweden Proper contains Upland, Sudermania, Nericia, Weſtmania, and Dalecarlia. Gothland contains Oſtrogothia, or Eaſt Gothland, Smoland, Weſtrogothia, or Weſt Gothland, the Iſles of Gothland and Œland, Wermland, Bohus, Dalia, Scania, or Schonen, Halland, and Blekingen. Norland includes Geſtrike, or Geſtrikeland, Helſingland, Medelpadia, Jemtland, Herjedalia, Angermania, and W. Bothnia. Swediſh Lapland comprites Aſela, Hiemtland, Umeo, Pitheo, Luleo, Torneo, and Kemi. Finland contains Finland Proper, Eaſt Bothnia, Tavaſteland, Nyland, Sivolax, and that part of Kymene and Carelia, which Sweden has preſerved. In the S. the longeſt day is 18 hours 30 minutes; but toward the N. there is continual day in ſummer, and continual night in winter, for ſeveral weeks ſucceſſively. In the province in which Stockholm is ſeated, the ſpring and autumn are ſcarcely to be perceived; for the winter continues nine months, and the ſummer during the remaining three. In winter the cold is exceſſive, and in ſummer the heat is almoſt inſupportable, the air being being generally ſerene all that time. Notwithſtanding this, the Swedes live to a great age, as the pure and ſharp air which they breathe, probably preſerves them from epidemical diſeaſes. Thunder is ſeldom heard in this country; it produces no venomous reptiles, and earthquakes never ſpread terror and conſternation among its inhabitants. Thoſe places that are fit for cultivation have ſcarce a foot of good earth, for below it is all gravel; for which reaſon they till the ground with a ſingle ox, and one perſon may readily manage the plough. All their rocks are quite covered with flowers in the ſummer time, and their gardens have plenty of fruits. The trees are early in bloſſoming, becauſe the ſoil is fat and ſulphureous, which contributes greatly to the vegetation of plants; but the apples, pears, cherries, apricots, melons, and grapes have not ſo good a taſte as in the more ſouthern countries. The pine and fir are the principal foreſt-trees. Their domeſtic animals are horſes, cows, hogs, goats, and ſheep. The wild beaſts are bears, wolves, foxes, wild cats, and ſquirrels. There are alſo elks and rein-deer, roes, ſables, beavers, and pole-cats. Linnæus reckons 1400 ſpecies of animals in Sweden, and about 1300 ſpecies of plants, of which 200 are uſed in medicine. They have ſeveral ſorts of fowls; as partridges, woodcocks, and falcons, in great plenty. They have rich ſilver, copper, and iron mines. They export boards, gunpowder, leather, iron, copper, tallow, ſkins, flax hemp, pitch, roſin, and maſts; and import ſalt, brandy, wine, linen cloth, ſtuffs, tobacco, ſugar, ſpice, and paper. The inhabitants are of a robuſt conſtitution, and able to ſuſtain the hardeſt labour; and they have ſeveral public ſchools and colleges, where arts and ſciences are taught. Their houſes are generally of wood, with very little art in their conſtruction. The roofs, in many places, are covered with turf, on which their goats often feed. There is ſcarcely any country in the world where the women do ſo much work; for they till the ground, thraſh the corn, and row the boats on the ſea. Sweden was formerly an elective monarchy, and afterwards the moſt limited one in Europe, till the year 1772, when the late king gained the moſt eſſential royal prerogatives, without, however, being an abſolute monarch. This prince was aſſaſſinated, March 16th, 1792, leaving his ſon, Guſtavus, heir, and his brother, the Duke of Sudermania, regent of the kingdom. The inhabitants are computed at 3,000,000. The eſtabliſhed religion is the Lutheran, and it is ſaid they will not tolerate any other in the kingdom. They have one archbiſhop, and 7 biſhops, beſides 6 ſuperintendants. The capital is Stockholm.

Sweſling, Suffolk, NW. of Sixmundham. Swell, Nether and Over, Glouceſt. W. of Stow-on-the-Would.

SWERNICK. See ZWORNICK.

Swetenham, Cheſhire, on the river Dane, near Somerford. Swift, a river in Leiceſterſhire and Warwickſhire, which runs into the Avon, above Rugby. Swilſtyate, a river in Glouceſterſhire, which runs into the Avon below Tewkeſbury.

SWILLY, a river of Donegal, in Ulſter, which empties itſelf into Lough Swilly.

Swill Court, Somerſetſ. SW. of Langport. Swillington, Yorkſ. near Leeds. Swillond, Suff. E. of Needham. Swinbridge, Devonſhire, NW. of S. Moulton. A brook runs from hence into the Taw. Swinbrook, Oxfordſhire, E. of Burford. Swinburn Caſtle, and Swinburn, Little, Northumberland, near Kirkheaton. The former is an elegant ſtone ſtructure. Swincomb, Oxfordſhire, E. of Wallingford. Swindale, Weſtmorl. in the parish of Shap. Swinderby, Lincolnſ. N. of Beckingham. Swindeſcheles, Northumb. near Alnwick. Swindon, Glouceſterſ. a mile NW. of Cheltenham. Swindon, Staffordſ. NW. of King's Swinford. It has blade mills, where ſcythes, axes, reaping hooks, &c. after being prepared by the white ſmiths, are ground to a fine edge.

SWINDON, a ſmall town of Wiltſhire, conſiſting of houſes well built with ſtone. It is ſeated on the top of a hill, near a rich vale, 10 miles NNW. of Marlborough, and 83 W. of London. Market on Monday Swindon, Yorkſ. on the Ribble, SE. of Settle. Swine, Yorkſ. near Conſtable-Burton.

SWINEFLEET, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on the Ouſe, to the E. of Snaith. Market on Thurſday.

Swinehop, Lincolnſ. between Thongcaſter and Louth. Swinerton, Lincolnſ. N. of Beckingham.

SWINEMUNDE, a new town in the iſland of Uſedom, Lower Saxony, ſituated at its northern extremity, at the mouth of the Peena. It was built in 1775, on the ruins of a fortreſs, called Swine Schanz. Lat. 54. 8. N. lon. 13 27. E.

SWINERTON, a town of Staffordſhire, ſeated in the healthieſt part of the county, being being moſt free from waters, mines, and woods, a little to the W. of Stone. Market and fair diſuſed.

Swineſhead, Huntingdonſ. W. of Kimbolton. Swineſide, Cumberl. in Caldbeck pariſh. Swineſted, Lincolnſ. NE. of the Witham. Swiney, Shropſ. S. of Oſweſtry. Swinſen, Staffordſhire, S. of Lichfield.

Swinford, in Mayo, Connaught.

Swinford, Kent, near Hythfield. Swinford, King's, Staff. N. of Stourbridge. Upon Aſhwood Heath, in this pariſh, is a large intrenchment, ſuppoſed to have been Roman. In the neighbourhood are coal-pits. Swinford, Old, Worceſterſ. a mile E. of Stourbridge. It is a large, populous pariſh. Swingfield, Kent, 3 miles SE. of Eltham. Swinhow, Northumb. NW. of Sunderland.

SWINNA, a little iſland of the Orkneys, NE. of Mainland. See ORCADES.

Swinney, Glouceſterſ. in Nibley pariſh. Swinſord, Leicet. near the Kilworths. Swineſhead, Linc. SW. of Boſton. Swinſhead, Staff. near Standon. Swinſted, Linc. Swinſton, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Swinthorp, NE. of Lincoln. Swinton, Northumberl. in Veſey barony. Swinton, Yorkſ. in the pariſh of Wath. Swinton, Yorkſ. near Maſham. Swinton, York. W. Riding, on the Kemp Bank, which paſſes through it to Mexborough. Swire, Dorſetſ. W. of Abbotſbury, and one mile from the ſea. It contains about 30 houſes.

SWISSERLAND, or SWITZERLAND, a large and populous country of Europe, bounded on the E. by the Tirol and Auſtrian Suabia; on the W. by France; on the N. by the Black Foreſt, and a part of Suabia; and on the S. by Savoy and Italy. Its greateſt extent, from E. to W. is about 180 miles, and from N. to S. 140. Here are many lakes and rivers, and ſome very fertile plains, which plentifully afford the neceſſaries of life, although the greateſt part of it may juſtly be conſidered as the moſt elevated land in Europe. Swiſſerland is divided into 13 cantons, excluſively of their allies; their names are, Lucern, Uri, Schweitz, Underwalden, Zug, Friburg, Soleure, which are Romaniſts. The Proteſtant cantons are Zurich, Bern, Baſle, and Schaffhauſen. Glarus and Appenzel contain both profeſſions of religion. The mountains of Swiſſerland are commonly called the Alps, over which there are four paſſages to go into Italy from Swiſſerland. The principal lakes are thoſe of Conſtance, Geneva, Lucern, Zurich, Neufchatel, and Bienne. The moſt conſiderable rivers are the Rhine, the Rhone, the Aar, the Rouſs, and the Inn. The principal riches of Swiſſerland conſiſt of excellent paſtures, in which they breed and fatten their cattle. As they leave out their cattle night and day on the mountains, a ſtranger might be induced to think they would be devoured by the wild beaſts, and yet it is quite otherwiſe; for, when the beaſts perceive a bear or a wolf, at a diſtance, they form themſelves into a circle, and are ready to receive the enemy with their horns. As for the goats and chamois, they feed in flocks on the mountains, and in the woods, and they place centinels on all ſides; and when any dangerous animal draws near, a ſignal is given, and they all get into a place of refuge, where the ſavage beaſts dare not come. The inhabitants are ſtrong, robuſt men, and form excellent mercenary troops, for which reaſon they are hired by ſeveral nations for the military ſervice; and even the pope has his Swiſs guards. The women are tolerably handſome, have many good qualities, and are, in general, very induſtrious. The peaſants retain their old manner of dreſs, and are content to live upon roots, herbs, milk, butter, and cheeſe; and there are ſome of the mountaineers who never have any bread. The manufactures of Swiſſerland are conſiderable in linen, ſilk, cotton, and woollen, leather, hats, gloves, paper, pottery, clocks, watches, hardware, toys, &c.; beſides which they export butter, cheeſe, cattle, ſheep, horſes, and ſome wine, conveyed by pack-horſes, as the roads are often impracticable for carriages. The imports are principally grain, hemp, flax, wine, ſalt, and ſome manufactures. The inhabitants are eſtimated at 2 000,000. See the cantons under their reſpective names, and alſo GLACIERS and SCHWEITZ.

* SWORDS, a town of Dublin, in Leinſter, 7 miles from the metropolis.

Swythamley, Staffordſ. near the Dane, NE. of Ruſhton Spencer. Swythland, N. of Leiceſter. Sybbertoft, Northamptonſ. near the ſprings of the Welland, SW. of Harborough. Syde, Glouceſterſ. NE. of Painſwick. Sydenham; ſee Sidenham. Sydiſtrond, Norfolk, by the ſea, SE. of Cromer. Sydling, St. Nicholas, Dorſetſhire, 2 miles SW. of Cerne-Abbas.

SYDNEY BAY, a bay on the S. ſide of Norfolk Iſland, in the S. Pacific Ocean, formed by Point Hunter and Point Ruſs, which are a mile and three quarters diſtant from each other. On this bay is formed a ſettlement of Engliſh convicts.

SYDNEY COVE, the town or ſettlement of convicts, begun to be erected in Port Jackſon, Jackſon, on the coaſt of New S. Wales, in 1788. The ground about it was then covered with a thick foreſt; but in 1790, ſome good buildings had been erected. The governor, lieutenant-governor, judge-advocate, and greateſt part of the civil and military officers were comfortably lodged. The governor's houſe is built of ſtone, and has a very good appearance, being 70 feet in front. The lieutenant-governor's houſe is of brick, as are alſo thoſe belonging to the judge and the commiſſary. The reſt of the houſes are built with logs, and plaſtered, and all the roofs are either covered by ſhingles, or thatched. The hoſpital is a good temporary building. The ſoldiers were in barracks, and the officers had comfortable huts, with gardens adjoining to them. The cove lies open to the NE. and is continued in a SW. direction for near 1000 yards, gradually decreaſing from the breadth of 1400 feet, till it terminates in a point, where it receives a ſmall ſtream of freſh water. It is perfectly ſecure from all winds, with anchorage extending 2000 feet up the cove, and ſoundings, in general, of four, five, ſix, and ſeven fathoms, ſo that ſhips can lie cloſe to the ſhore, for a conſiderable way on both ſides. Metals of various kinds abound in the neighbouring ſoil. Lat. 33. 50. S. lon. 151. 28. E.

SYENE, a miſerable town of Egypt, ſituated on the Eaſt ſide of the Nile, 375 miles S. of Cairo. Here are columns and pillars of granite, with other remains of the ancient town, on an eminence to the S. Among theſe is a building, ſuppoſed by ſome, to be an obſervatory of the ancient Egyptians.

Syerſham, Northamptonſ. near Whittlewood-Foreſt. Syerſton, Nottinghamſ. SE. of Southwell. Sylham, Berks, on the Kennet, SW. of Reading. Sylham, Suffolk, by the Waveney, NE. of Eye. Sylum, or Silham, Kent, in Raynham pariſh. Symondſbury, Northumberl. Symonvard, Cornwall, NW. of Camelford. Synenthwate, Yorkſ. E. of Wetherby.

SYRA, a mountainous iſland in the Grecian Archipelago, with a town of the ſame name, 12 miles S. of Andros.

SYRACUSA, an ancient and famous city of Sicily, in the Val di Noto, with a fine large harbour. It was almoſt ruined by an earthquake in 1693. It is very advantageouſly ſeated near the ſea, 72 miles S. by W. of Meſſina. Lat. 37. 5. N. lon. 15. 30. E.

Syreford, Glouceſterſ. in Whittington pariſh.

SYRIA, a province of Turkey in Aſia, bounded on the N. by Diarbeck and Natolia; on the E. by Diarbeck and the Deſerts of Arabia; which laſt alſo bound it on the S. and on the W. by the Mediterranean. It abounds in oil, corn, ſalt, and different ſorts of fruits, as well as peas, beans, and all kinds of pulſe and garden ſtuff; it affords, alſo, the ſugar-cane, indigo, ſilk, wine, the cotton and tobacco plant, with a multitude of other uſeful and agreeable productions. Syria is divided into five governments, or pachalics, Apello, Tripoli, Damaſcus, Acre, and Paleſtine.

SYRK, a town in the dept. of the Moſelle, ſeated on the river Moſelle, 14 miles SE. of Luxemburg.

Syſonby, Leiceſterſ. near Melton-Mowbray. Syſwell, Northamptonſ. NW. of Wellingborough. Syxford, Yorkſ. W. Riding, on the Nyd, in Netherdale.

SZACK, a town of Minſk, in Lithuania.

SZEBEN, a town of Hungary, ſituated on the river Tareza, 30 miles N. of Caſchau.

SZEKEL, a town of Hungary, 18 miles ESE. of Debreczyn.

TAAFE, a rapid river of Glamorganſhire, which enters the ſea at Cardiff. Upon this river, near Carphilly, is a ſtone bridge, called Pont y Pryddal, of a ſingle arch, 140 feet in the ſpan, and 34 high, planned and executed by the untaught genius of a maſon in this county.

TAAIF, a town of Hedjas, in Arabia, ſituated upon a lofty mountain, in an agreeable country, abounding in excellent raiſins, almonds, and other fruits, 60 miles SE. of Mecca.

TAAS, a city of Yemen, in Arabia, 43 miles ENE. of Mocha.

TAATA, a town of Egypt, about a mile from the river Nile, and 200 miles S. of Cairo.

TABARIA, anciently TIBERIAS, a town of Paleſtine, ſituated on the W. ſide of a lake, called, in ſcripture, the lake of Genezareth, nefareth, or Tiberias, at the foot of a high and ſharp mountain, 50 miles NNE. of Jeruſalem.

TABAGO, a mountainous iſland in the South Sea, ſix leagues S. of Panama, about four miles in length and three in breadth. Before it is a good road.

TABARCA, an iſland on the coaſt of Barbary, at the mouth of the river Zaine, which ſeparates Algiers from Tunis. Near it is a coral fiſhery. Lat. 36. 55. N. lon. 9. 18. E.

TABASCO, a town of Mexico, capital of the province to which it gives name. It is ſeated on the Iſland of Tabaſco, (which is about 36 miles long and 7 broad) in lat. 17. 40. N. lon. 93. 45. W. Alſo a river of Mexico, which runs into the Gulf of Mexico, in lat. 18. 15. N. and lon. 57. 32. W. On its banks are ſome of the largeſt cabbage and cotton trees in the world.

TABASCO, a province of Mexico, having Yucatan on the E. Chiapa on the S. Guaxaca on the W. and the Gulf of Mexico on the N. It is about 100 miles in length, but narrow, and is well ſtocked with fruit trees. The air is extremely moiſt, and there are ſhowers daily for nine months in the year, ſo that the climate is not healthy, nor is the ſoil remarkably fertile.

Tablehurſt, Suſſex, between E. Grinſted and Aſhdown Foreſt. Tableigh, Upper and Lower, Cheſhire, 2 miles from Knottesford.

TABLE MOUNTAIN, a mountain or promontory of Africa, on the W. coaſt of the ſouthern extremity, on which the caſtle and town of the Cape of Good Hope are ſituated. The bay at the foot of it is called Table-Bay.

TABOR, a town of Bechin, in Bohemia.

TABRISTAN, a province of Perſia, forming a part of Mezanderan. It lies on the ſhore of the Caſpian Sea, and is bounded by Aſtrabad on the E. and Ghilan on the W.

TACAMES, or ATACAMES, a juriſdiction of Terra Firma, in S. America, ſituated to the N. of Guaquil, and W. of the Andes. It contains 20 towns, 5 on the ſea coaſt, the others inland. Its foreſts are thick ſet with trees of a ſurpriſing bulk and loftineſs, and of an infinite variety.

Tachbroke, Biſhop's and Mallery, SE. of Warwick. Tachbury, Hampſhire, W. of Southampton Bay. Tachley, Oxfordſhire, NE. of Woodſtock. Tackley, Warwickſ. in Fokeſhill pariſh. Tacolneſton, Norfolk, E. of Attleborough.

* TADCASTER, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, noted for the great plenty of limeſtone dug up near it. It is ſituated on the river Wharfe, over which it has a large ſtone bridge, 9 miles SSW. of York, and 188 N. by W. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Taddington, Derbyſ. in Bakewell pariſh. Taddington, Glouceſ. in Stanway pariſh. Tadilſthorp, Oxf. W. of Chipping Norton. Tadilthorp, Glouceſterſ. NE. of Stow-on-the-Would. Tadington, NE. of Hereford. Tadley, Hampſhire, SW. of Silcheſter. Tadlow, Cambridgeſ. NW. of Royſton. Tadmerton, Upper and Lower, Oxfordſ. SW. of Banbury.

TADMOR. See PALMYRA.

TADOUSAC, a town of Lower Canada, ſituated at the mouth of the river Sagueney on the left ſide of the river St. Lawrence, 100 miles NE. of Quebec.

Tadwort, Surry, S. of Banſtead.

TAFALA, or TAFALLA, a town of Spain, in Navarre, with a univerſity, 18 miles S. of Pampeluna.

TAFILET, a country of Morocco, extending along the E. ſide of Mount Atlas, of which little account can be given, as Europeans are not ſuffered to paſs through it. It is a mountainous, ſandy country, but produces a little wheat and barley by the ſides of the rivers. The inhabitants manufacture ſtuffs and carpets, and live upon camels' fleſh and dates; they alſo breed horſes to ſell to foreigners; and have oſtriches and dromedaries, which laſt will travel 100 miles in a day. The Arabs live in tents, and the Beriberies, the ancient inhabitants, dwell in ſcattered habitations, with cultivated grounds adjoining. Tafilet is the capital, ſeated on the river Tafilet, 140 miles ESE. of Morocco.

Taghmon, in Wexford, Leinſter.

TAGLIACOZZA, a town of Abruzzo Ultra.

TAGOAST, a town of Sus, in Morocco, 140 miles SW. of Morocco.

TAGODAST, a town of Morocco, 60 miles NE. of Morocco.

TAGUMADERT, a town of Morocco, in the country of Darah.

TAHOOROWA, one of the ſmalleſt of the Sandwich Iſlands, lying off the SW. part of Mowee, from which it is diſtant three leagues. It is deſtitute of wood, and the ſoil ſeems to be ſandy and barrer.

TAIEF, a town of Hedjas, Arabia, 48 miles E. of Mecca.

TAILLEBOURG, a town in the dept. of Lower Charente, 6 miles N. of Saintes.

Tain, or Teau, a river in Staffordſhire, which runs into the Dove near Uttoxeter.

thr. Taiuton, Glouceſterſhire, 4 miles SE. of Newent.

TAJO, anciently called TAGUS, a river of Spain, which has its ſource in New Caſtile, on the confines of Arragon. It runs through Old Caſtile and Eſtramadura, paſſing by Toledo, Talavera, &c; when entering Portugal, it waſhes Santerin, below which it forms the harbour of Liſbon, and 10 miles ſtill lower it falls into the Atlantic Ocean. This river was formerly famous for its golden ſands.

TAJOH, a town of China, in Chiangſi, in which there are magnificent temples, and two very high towers.

TAIN, the principal town in Roſsſhire, ſeated on the Firth of Dornoch, 12 miles NNW. of Cromarty.

TAIOUAN, a city and ſea-port, capital of the iſland of Forma, on the coaſt of China. It is ſituated on the W. coaſt, with a harbour ſheltered from every wind, but the entrance of which grows narrower every day, from the ſand being driven hither by the ſea, in lat. 23. N. and lon. 120. 50. E.

TAIPING, a city in China, of the firſt rank, in Quangſi, 1175 miles SSW. of Peking.

TAIPING, a city in China, of the firſt rank, in Kiangnan. It is ſituated on the Yangtſe river, 525 miles S. of Peking.

TAITCHIN, a town of China, in Setchuen; and a town of China, in the province of Petcheli.

TAITONG, a city of China, in Changſi.

Takeley, Eſſex, near Stanſted.

TALAMONE, a ſea-port of Tuſcany.

TALAVERA, a town of New Caſtile, famous for its earthen ware. It is ſeated on the river Tajo, 35 miles W. of Toledo.

TALAVERUELA, a town of Spain, in Eſtramadura, ſeated on the river Guadiana, 9 miles from Badajox.

TALBOT, a town and county of Maryland.

Talgarth, Brecknockſhire, 10 miles E. of Brecknock. Talkin, Cumberl. in Hayton pariſh. Talk-on-the-Hill, Staffordſ. N. of Newcaſtle-under Line.

TALLAGH, a town of Waterford, Munſter, 104 miles from Dublin.

Tallagh, in Dublin, Leinſter, 3 miles SW. of the metropolis. Near it is Tallagh-Hill, a mountain which affords a beautiful proſpect of the ſurrounding country, the city, harbour, and bay of Dublin, with the peninſula of Howth, and the Iriſh Channel.

Talland, Cornwall, a mile from Weſt Looe. Talland Point, Cornwall, between Fowey and the Looes.

TALLARD, a town in the dept. of the Upper Alps, ſituated on the river Durance, 47 miles S. of Grenoble.

Tallaton, Devonſ. near St. Mary's-Ottery. Tallentire, Cumberl. in the pariſh of Bridekirk, near Cockermouth.

TALLEVENDE, a town in the dept. of the Calvados, with a manufacture of earthen ware. It contains near 3000 inhabitants, and is 2 miles SW. of Vire.

TALLOW, a town of Waterford, in Munſter, ſituated near the river Bride, which is navigable hither for boats, 32 miles WSW. of Waterford.

TABLWATER, a river of Ireland, which runs, with the Callen, into Blackwater, near Charlemont.

TALMONT, a ſea port in the dept. of Lower Charente, ſituated on the Gironde, with a harbour; and a town in the dept. of Vendee, 8 miles W. of Lucon.

Talſarne, Cardiganſ. Talvern, Cornwall, E. of Falmouth Haven. Talworth, Surry, S. of Kingſton. Talybont, Carnarvonſhire.

TAMALAMECA, a town of St. Martha, Terra Firma, ſituated on the river Magdelane, in lat. 8. 52. N. and lon. 70. 12. Weſt.

TAMAN. See PHANAGORIA.

TAMAR, by Ptolemy called TAMARA, a river of England, which riſes in the NW. part of Devonſhire, on the borders of Cornwall, runs from N. to S. and after dividing Cornwall from Devonſhire, (except a ſmall part of the latter county, which is on the W. ſide of the river) forms the noble harbour of Hamoaze.

TAMARA ISLANDS, on the coaſt of Guinea, near Sierra Leone, where there are refreſhments for ſhips, as well as gold and elephants' teeth.

TAMARA, a ſea-port on the NW. coaſt of the Iſland of Socotora, and the reſidence of the king.

TAMARACA, a diſtrict of Fernambuco, in Braſil, between 30 and 40 leagues in extent, having Parayba on the N. Fernambuco on the S. the Atlantic on the E. and unſubdued Indians on the W. It is pleaſant and fertile, producing large quantities of Braſil wood, cotton, cocoa, ſugar, melons, citrons, beſides timber for fuel, and other purpoſes. There is an iſland on the coaſt, of the ſame name, near the mouth of the river Tamarac, about 9 miles long, and 3 broad, with a commodious harbour on the S. ſide.

TAMARIL, a town of Catalonia, 2 miles NE. of Tarragona.

TAMARITE, a town of Arragon, 16 miles ESE. of Balbaſtro.

TAME, a town in Oxfordſhire, ſeated on a river of the ſame name. Here is a famous free ſchool, and a ſmall hoſpital. It is 12 miles E. of Oxford, and 45 W. by N. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Tame, a river which riſes near Winſlow, in Buckinghamſhire, and runs into the Thames at Dorcheſter, in Oxfordſhire.

Tame, a river in Staffordſ. which riſes near Dudley, and runs into the Trent, not far from Eldinghall, about 7 miles above Burton. Tamerton, Cornwall, on the Tamar, SE. of Stratton, a place of great antiquity. Tamerton Foliot, Devonſ. E. of Tamar, and N. of Plymouth. Tambourn, Staffordſhire, by the Trent, NW. of Tamworth. Tamil, Cornwall, E. of Camelford.

Tamlaghcburch, in Derry, Ulſter.

TAMING, a town of China, in the province of Petcheli.

TAMMESBRUCK, a town of Thuringia, built by king Pepin, father of Charlemagne. It is ſituated near the river Unſtrutt, one mile from Lingen Salza.

Tamſquite, Cornwall, SE. of Padſtow.

TAMWORTH, an ancient, large, well-built town of Staffordſhire, with one part, viz. the E. in Warwickſhire, formerly the royal ſeat of the Mercian kings. It has a conſiderable trade in narrow cloths, and other manufactures, and is noted for good ale. It is ſeated at the confluence of the Tame and Anker, near the grand navigable canal, 8 miles SE. of Lichfield, and 114 NW. of London. Market on Saturday.

TANARO, a river of Italy, which riſes near Tenda, paſſes by Coni, Aſti, Alexandria, &c. and falls into the Po, about 8 miles SSE. of Valenza.

Tanat, a river of Montgomeryſhire and Denbighſhire, which forms part of the northern boundary between the two counties, and runs into the Severn at the NE. point of Montgomeryſhire.

TANBOF, or TAMBOVSKOE, a government of Ruſſia, S. of the government of Vladimir. Its capital, of the ſame name, is ſeated on the river Zna, 228 miles SE. of Moſcow.

TANCOS, a town of Portugal, in Eſtramadura, ſeated on the river Tajo, at its confluence with the Zezare, 21 miles NE. of Santarem.

Tancrey Iſle, Kent, by Fordwich.

TANDA, or TANRAH, a town of Hindooſtan, in Bengal, of which ſoubah it was the capital in the laſt century. There is little remaining of this place but the rampart; and the period when it was deſerted is not certainly known. It is ſeated on the E. ſide of the river Ganges, 120 miles NW. of Dacca.

TANDAY. See SAMAR.

* TANDERAGEE, a town of Armagh, in Ulſter, in which the linen manufacture is extenſively carried on. It is ſituated within a mile of the Newry canal, 61 miles from Dublin.

Tanfield, Durham, NW. of Lumley-Caſtle. Tanfield, E. and W. Yorkſhire, E. of Maſham.

TENGERMUNDE, a town in the Old Marche, of Brandenburg, with a conſiderable trade in brewing. It is ſeated on the river Elbe, where veſſels pay a toll, near its confluence with the Tanger, 24 miles NW. of Brandenburg.

TANGIER, a ſea-port of Fez, in Africa, at the W. end of the Straits of Gibraltar. It was taken from the Moors by the Portugueſe in 1471, and given as a dower to the princeſs Catharine of Portugal, who married Charles II. of England; but that impolitic monarch did not think it worth the expence of keeping, and therefore, in 1684, cauſed the works to be blown up, and withdrew the garriſon. At preſent, there are ſome batteries facing the bay, in tolerable condition, but it is incapable of defence againſt a powerful attack. The Bay of Tangier is not very ſafe, when the wind is in the W. having been encumbered by the ruins of the mole and fortifications: the beſt anchorage for larger veſſels is at the eaſtern point, whence they may eaſily ſet out, whichever way the wind blows; and the bay is only dangerous during the winter. The Engliſh obtain from hence, fowls, vegetables, and other ſupplies, for the garriſon at Gibraltar. It is 108 miles NNW. of Fez, and 38 WSW. of Gibraltar.

Tangley, Hants, near Andover. Tangley, Oxfordſ. NW. of Burford. Tangley, Surry, in Ognerſh pariſh. Tangmere, Suſſex, E. of Chicheſter.

TANJORE, a country on the coaſt of Coromandel, included in the Carnatic, about 95 miles in length and 50 in breadth. It is watered by the river Cauvery, and is governed by a rajah, who pays, however, an annual ſubſidy of 160,000l. to the Engliſh Eaſt-India Company.

TANJORE, a city of Hindooſtan, capital of the province of the ſame name. The palace, ſituated at the end of the town, is a grand ſquare, defended by a wall, and a wet ditch abounding in crocodiles. It is ſurrounded by a double wall and large ditch, and is ſeated between ween two branches of the river Canvery, 56 miles S. by W. of Madras. Lat 10. 6. N. lon. 79. 12. E.

Tankerſley, Yorkſ. between Barneſley nd Sheffield, 2 miles E. of Wortley.

TANKIA, or TINKIA-LING, a town of Thibet, ſituated at the foot of Mount angur, which is ſaid to exhale ſuffocating umes, 232 miles WSW. of Laſſa.

TANKROW, an Engliſh factory of the ingdom of Kaen, in Africa, ſituated on he river Gambia, 30 miles E. of James ort. The chief trade is in wax. The ortugueſe have a church here.

TANNA, a conſiderable iſland in the S. acific Ocean, and one of the New Hebrides, the inhabitants of which are brave nd hoſpitable. There is a volcano in the ſland, with ſome hot ſprings, and the oil is very fertile, particularly in ſugaranes and yams. The inhabitants would ot ſuffer Captain Cook, nor his companions, to penetrate far into the iſland. at. 19. 30. S. lon. 169. 46. E.

TANNENBURG, a town of Oberland, n Pruſſia, and a town of Erzgeburg, in Upper Saxony.

Tannis, Herts, NW. of Buntingford.

TANORE, a ſea-port of Calicut, on the oaſt of Malabar. Lat. 10. 55. N.

Tanot, and Tanot Greater, rivers in Montgomeryſ. The former runs into he Vurney, or Vurnwey, below Aberhanet, and the latter runs into the greater Tanot, below Llanguedwyn. Tanridge, urry, SW. of Oxted, gives name to its undred. From hence to Croydon is a illy, barren tract, full of warrens, but he air is reckoned ſweet and wholeſome. Tanſley, Derbyſ. N. of Wirkſworth. Tanſover, Northamptonſ. NE. of Oundle. Tanworth, Warwickſ. near Umberſlade.

TAOO, the moſt ſouthern of the Friendly Iſlands, in the S Pacific Ocean. It is bout 8 leagues in circuit, and of a height ufficient to be ſeen at 12 leagues diſtance, with good anchorage on the NW. ſide. The SE. ſide riſes, with great inequalities, immediately from the ſea; ſo that he plains and meadows, of which there re ſome of great extent, lie chiefly on the NW. ſide; and being adorned with tufts f trees, intermixed with plantations, and nterſected by paths leading to every part f the iſle, they form a beautiful landcape.

TAORMINA, anciently TAURUS, a ſea-port of Sicily, containing near 2000 inhabitants. It is ſeated on a rocky hill, on the E. coaſt, 27 miles SSW. of Meſſina.

TAPIAN, a town of Samland, in Pruſſia, 16 miles E. of Koningſberg.

Tapleigh, Devonſhire, near Biddiford.

Taplow, Bucks, 1 mile from Maidenhead, ſeated on a hill overlooking the Thames, and diſtinguiſhed by its majeſtic woodlands, picturesque appearance, and handſome villas. Tapton, Derbyſ. near Cheſterfield.

TAPPAHANOCK, a town of Virginia, 43 miles NE. of Richmond.

TAPPAN, a town of New York.

TAPTEE, a river of Hindooſtan, which riſes at Maltoy, 84 miles NNW. of Nagpour, and paſſing through the Candeiſh country, falls into the Gulf of Cambay, about 12 miles below Surat.

TAR, or PAMLICO, a river of N. Carolina, which, flowing by Tarborough and Waſhington, enters Pamlico Sound, 40 miles SE. of the latter town, in lat. 35. 25. N. and lon. 76. 42. W.

Tara, in Down, Ulſter. Tarah, or Tarah-Hill, in Meath, Leinſter, 19 miles from Dublin. The conventions, or parliaments of Ireland, were held here, triennially, from the firſt to the ſixth century.

Tarannon, a river in Montgomeryſhire, which runs into the Severn, near Corſe Caſtle, about 5 miles W of Newtown.

TARANTOLA, in Abruzzo Citra. This town has given name to the ſpiders called tarantulas, whoſe bite, it has been ſaid, was only to be cured by muſic and dancing.

TARAGALLA, a town of Darah, in Africa.

TARARE, a town in the dept. of Rhone and Loire, ſeated on the river Tordive, 18 miles WNW. of Lyons.

TARASCON, a town in the dept. of the Mouths of the Rhone, ſeated on the river Rhone, oppoſite Beaucaire, with which it communicates by a bridge of boats, 10 miles N. of Arles. Its commerce conſiſts in oil, brandy, ſtarch, and ſtuffs, one ſort of coarſe ſilk, and the other of the ſame material and wool.

TARASCON, a town in the dept. of Arriege, with ſeveral manufactures of iron. It is ſeated on the river Arriege, 7 miles SE. of Foix.

TARAZONA, a town of Arragon, ſeated partly on a rock, and partly in a fertile plain, on the river Chiles, 43 miles NNW. of Saragoſſa.

TARBAT, a ſmall town in the county of Cromarty.

TARBAT, EAST, a town of Argyleſhire, ſituated on a bay called Tarbat Loch, at the northern extremity of the peninſula of Kintyre, 25 miles N. of Campbeltown.

Tarbeck,

Tarbeck, or Tardebigg, Worceſterſhire, NW. of Bromſgrove.

* TARBERT, a town of Kerry, in Munſter, 124 miles from Dublin.

TARBES, a populous town, the capital of the dept. of the Upper Pyrenees, and late the ſee of a biſhop. It conſiſts principally of one ſtreet, along the Adour, and is 42 miles SSW. of Auch.

TARBOROUGH, a flouriſhing, trading town of N. Carolina, ſeated on the river Tar, 43 miles NNW. of New Bern.

Tarent, a river in Dorſetſhire, which riſes near Stubhampton, and gives name to ſeveral villages it paſſes through, in its way to where it falls into the Stour, 3 miles SE. of Blandford, as Tarent-Gunvil, Hinton, Cranford, Kainſton, Launſton, Moulton, and Ruſhton, all of which are NE. of Blandford.

TARENTAISE, COUNTY OF, a barren tract of country in Savoy, with a diſagreeable appearance, and full of frightful precipices. It has the lordſhip of Faucigny on the N. the duchy of Aoſta on the E. the county of Maurienne on the S. and the duchy of Savoy on the W. Monſtier is the capital.

TARENTO, anciently TARENTUM, a city and ſea-port of Otranto, in Naples, containing about 18,000 inhabitants. The harbour, which was once excellent, is now choked up, and will only admit fiſhing-boats. It is ſituated on a peninſula, in a bay to which it gives name, 60 miles WNW. of Otranto, and 147 nearly E. of Naples.

TARGA, a town of Fez, ſeated on the Mediterranean, near an oyſter fiſhery. It is ſurrounded by mountains and thick foreſts, full of monkeys, and is 90 miles SE. of Tangier.

TARGOVISCO, or TERGOVISTA, a town of Turkey, capital of Walachia. The waywode has a palace here.

TARIFFA, by the Romans called JULIA TRADUCTA, a ſea-port of Seville, in Andaluſia. It is a poor place, with a few inhabitants, but is fortified with old walls and towers, and has a caſtle, in which the governor reſides. It is ſeated on an eminence, near a bay, to which it gives name, on the N. ſide of the Straits of Gibraltar, 17 miles WSW. of Gibraltar.

TARINGASONG, a town of Aſia, in Thibet, 17 miles ESE. of Laſſa.

TARKU, or TARCU, a town of Dageſtan, ſituated on the W. coaſt of the Caſpian Sea, 130 miles N. of Shamachie.

Tarleton, Glouceſterſ. E. of Minching-Hampton. Tarleton, Lancaſhire, between Heſket and Marton-Mere.

TARMA, an extenſive juriſdiction of Peru, about 30 leagues from Lima and to the N. of Atun Xauxa. The climate is temperate, and the ſoil fertile; the land is chiefly applied to the feeding of cattle. Many mines of ſilver are found here.

Tarmonbarry Bridge, in Roſcommon, Connaught, 64 miles from Dublin.

TARN, a dept. of France, NW. of the department of Herault, and N. of the depart. of the Aude; formerly a part of Languedoc. It takes its name from a river which riſes in the dept. of Lozere, and having watered Milhaud, Alby, Gaillac, Montauban, &c. falls into the Garonne, near Moiſſac, in the dept. of the Lot. Caſtles is the capital.

TARO, a town of Parma, in the country of Val-di-Taro, ſeated on the river Taro, which runs into the Po, 9 miles E. of Baſſeto.

Tarperly, Cheſhire. Tarraby, Cumberland, NW. of Carliſle.

TARRAGONA, a town of Catalonia, with a univerſity; under the Romans the capital of a diſtrict called Tarraconenſis. It was built originally by the Phœnicians, and was very conſiderable in the time of the Romans. There are ſeveral inſcriptions, coins, ruins, and other monuments of antiquity here. It is neither ſo large nor ſo populous at preſent; for though there is room for 2000 houſes within the walls, which were built by the Moors, there are not above 500, which are all built with large ſquare ſtones. Its cathedral is ſtill worthy of attention, for its vaſt dimenſions, and the elegance of its Gothic architecture. The archbiſhop is metropolitan of Catalonia, and diſputes the primacy of Spain with Toledo. It has but little trade, (the harbour being dangerous, and not much frequented) and is ſeated on the Mediterranean, at the mouth of the river Francoli, 38 miles WSW. of Barcelona, and 240 E. by N. of Madrid.

TARRY TOWN, a town of New York.

TARREGA, a town of Catalonia, ſituated on the Cervera, 30 miles N. of Tarragona.

Tarring, a ſmall town of Suſſex, 17 miles W. of Brighthelmſtone, and 57 S. of London. Tarſet-Caſtle, Northumberland, a Roman encampment near Bellingham. It is 20 yards long, and 10 broad, and defended by a deep foſſe. At each corner of the area, appear the remains of turrets or mounds.

TARSUS, a large ſea-port town of Caramania, anciently the capital of Cilicia. It is the ſee of a Jacobite biſhop, and a Neſtorian archbiſhop, and is 10 miles W. of Alexandretta.

TARTARO,

TARTARO, a river of Italy, which rifes in the Veroneſe, croſſes the Poleſe de Rovigo, and paſſes by Adria. Soon after it divides itielf into two branches, one of which runs into the Adige, and the other into the Po.

TARTARY, a country of Aſia, which, taken in its utmoſt limits, reaches from the Eaſtern Ocean to the Caſpian Sea, and from Corea, China, Hindooſtan, and Perſia, to Ruſſia and Siberia. It is generally conſidered, under three grand divisions; namely Eaſtern, Weſtern, and Independent Tartary. The different tribes which inhabit Eaſtern Tartary were formerly called Mongul Tartars, a warlike nation, who, on one hand, conquered Hindooſtan, under Jenghis Khan, and on the other, ſubdued China, in the 13th century, and reigned there for 100 years, till they were expelled in the year 1368. Chineſe Tartary is divided into two parts, Eaſtern and Weſtern. The greateſt part of this country either belongs to the emperor of China, is tributary to him, or is under his protection. The Chineſe empire has been lately extended in Tartary, by the celebrated conqueſt of the kingdom of the Eluths, made in 1759, by the arms of the emperor Kien Long. Independent Tartary includes all the country between Chineſe Tartary and the Caſpian ſea, and contains Turkeſtan, Great and Little Bukharia, Turcomania, Charaſm, Thibet, and ſome countries inhabited by the Uſbecks and Kalmucks. Weſtern Tartary includes the remainder; moſt or all of which has been conquered by the Ruſſians. For various intereſting particulars concerning them, ſee, in their reſpective places, the articles Abkas, Circaſſia, Crimea, Coſſacks, Georgia, Imeritia, Kalmucks, Kifti, Leſguis, Mingrelia, Mongul, Oſſi, Samoyedes, Turkomans, and Uſbecs. Tartar or Tatar, is, in fact, a general name, which includes a great variety of nations, but with a particular one often applied from their local ſituation.

TARTAS, a town in the department of Landes, ſeated on the river Midouſe, 12 miles NE. of Dax.

TARUDANT, a town of Sus, in Morocco, formerly the capital of a ſmall kingdom. It contains ſeveral towns, which, as well as Tarudant, are built with ſtone. It is at preſent the reſidence of a governor, and is ſituated almoſt at the extremity of the empire, 43 miles ESE. of Santacruz (a ſea-port of his) and 110 SSW. of Morocco.

Tarvar, Cornwall, N. of Mountſbay.

Tarvin, or Tervin, 4 miles E. of Cheſter, near a brook that comes from Torperley, and is the boundary of the foreſt of Delamere. Taſborough, Norfolk, W. of Saxlingham.

Taſhiny, in Longford, Leinſter.

Taſley, Shropſhire, W. of Bridgenorth, has a bridge over the Severn.

TASSAUSUDON, a city of Aſia, capital of the county of Bootan, 206 miles SW. of Laſſa, and 242 NE. of Patna.

TASSA CORTA, or TUSSA CRODA, a town on the W. coaſt of the iſland of Palma, one of the Canary iſlands. It is a loading place for veſſels, but not very conſiderable. Lat. 28. 37. N. lon. 17. 58. W.

TATE'S ISLAND, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, firſt diſcovered June 29th, 1773, by captains Bampton and Holt, of the Hormazier and Cheſterfield, veſſels employed in the ſervice of the Eaſt-India Company, and ſo named, in honour of Mr. Tate, of Bombay. The inhabitants are ſtout, well made, and woolly headed, and reſemble the people of New Guinea in ſtature and complexion. A party from the ſhips, having landed, for the ſake of procuring water, and to make obſervations on the ſoil, produce, inhabitants, &c. was at firſt received very kindly, to all appearance, but afterwards, the natives, watching their opportunity, murdered captain Hill, of the New South Wales corps, and ſome of the ſeamen, cutting their throats from ear to ear, and mangling their bodies in a ſhocking manner. It was with difficulty that the ſurvivors made a ſhift to get on board their boat, by frequently diſcharging their muſkets, at the report of which the natives always fled into the woods. Thoſe voracious cannibals were afterwards ſeen dragging the dead bodies towards large fires prepared on the occaſion, yelling and howling hideouſly at the ſame time. Lat. 9. 29. S. lon. 146. 57. E.

Tatenell, Staffordſ. W. of Burton-upon-Trent. Tatenham, Wilts. 4 miles from Marlborough. Taternal, or Tatternhoe, Bedfordſ. NW. of Dunſtable. Tatesfield, Surry, SE. of Chelſham. Tatham, E. of Lancaſter. Tathwell, Lincolnſhire, near Louth.

TATTA, or SINDE, a town of Hindooſtan Proper, capital of the province of Sindy; ſuppoſed to be built on the ſite of the ancient Patala. In the laſt century, it was very extenſive and populous, and was a place of conſiderable trade, poſſeſſing manufactures of ſilk, Carmania wool, and cotton; it was alſo celebrated for its cabinet ware. Little of theſe, however, now remain, and the limits of the city are very much circumſcribed. On the ſhores of the Indus, above the Delta, conſiderable quantities of ſaltpetre are made; and within three miles of it on the NW. are mines of iron and ſalt. The Indus, and its branches, admit of an uninterrupted navigation from Tatta to Moultan, Lahore, and Caſhmere, for veſſels of near 200 tons; and a very extenſive trade was carried on between thoſe places, in the time of Aurungzebe; but, at preſent, very little of this trade remains, owing, it is ſaid, to a bad government in Sindy, and probably to a hoſtile diſpoſition of the Seiks, the preſent poſſeſſors of Moultan and Lahore. Tatta is ſeated on a branch of the river Sinde, or Indus, called the Ritchel river, 156 miles WNW. of Amedabad, and 340 SSW. of Moultan. Lat. 24. 50. N. lon. 67. 37. E.

TATTAH, a town in Africa, ſituated on the frontiers of Darah and Morocco, in the route from Morocco to Tombuctoo. It is 150 miles SSE. of Morocco.

Tattenhall, Cheſhire, W. of Beeſton-Caſtle. Tatterford, Norfolk, N. of Rainham. Tatterſet; ſee Gateſend.

TATTERSHALL, a ſmall town of Lincolnſhire, with a beautiful and ſpacious church, and houſes moſtly built of brick. Its caſtle was famous for its ancient baſons, and, to this day, exhibits a venerable remain of ancient induſtry. The great tower, 200 feet high, is entire, but the other parts are totally deſtroyed. Tattershall is commodiouſly ſituated, although in a marſhy country, on the river Bane, which is navigable by boats to the Witham, near its confluence with the latter, 12 miles NW. of Boſton, and 127 N. of London. Market on Friday.

Tattingſton, Suffolk, SW. of Ipſwich. Tattington, or Tannington, Suff. N. of Framlingham. Tatton, Cheſhire, N. of Knottesford. Tatton, E. and W. Dorſetſh. near Abbotſbury.

TAVASTLAND, a very fertile province in the middle of Finland, about 150 miles in length and 100 in breadth. It conſiſts of fine plains, watered by a great number of rivers and lakes, which abound in fiſh, and it is plentifully ſtored with cattle and all ſorts of game. It is far, however, from being well cultivated, and the inhabitants are very poor. The northern part is rather mountainous and woody.

TAVASTUS, or KRONEBORG, a town of Finland, capital of the province of Tavaſtland. The caſtle is well fortified, and ſerves for an arſenal and royal magazine. It is ſeated on a river, which falls into Lake Wana, 44 miles NE. of Abo.

TAUBER, SEE, a lake of Berchtesgaden, in Bavaria.

TAUCAEL, TAUCHEL, or TUCHEL, a town of Pruſſian Pomerelia, ſeated on the river Verd, 44 miles SSW. of Dantzic.

TAUCHA, a town of Leipſic, in Upper Saxony.

Taud, a river in Lancaſhire, which runs into the Dowles, not far from Lathom Park. Tave, a river in Carmarthenſhire, which runs into the Severn at St. Clear, near Llaugharn.

TAVE, or TAFF, a river of Wales, which riſes in two ſtreams, in the ſouthern part of Brecknockſhire, and runs into the Briſtol Channel, oppoſite Pennarth Point, below Cardiff, in Glamorganſhire.

Taverham, Norf. by the Yare, NW. of Norwich.

TAVERNA, a town of Calabria Ultra.

TAVIRA, or TAVILA, a conſiderable town of Portugal, in Algarve, containing 2 churches, an hoſpital, 5 convents, and about 5000 inhabitants. It has a commodious harbour, protected by two forts, and is ſeated in a pleaſant, fertile country, near the mouth of the river Gilaon, 100 miles W. by N. of Cadiz.

* TAVISTOCK, an ancient, large, and well built town of Devonſhire. It was once a flouriſhing place, famous for its ſtately, mitred abbey, where books were formerly printed in the Saxon language, and a ſchool erected to teach it; it is now divided into tenements. It is a ſtannary town, has a chalybeate mineral water, and is ſituated on the river Tavy, or Tave, 32 miles W. by S. of Exeter, and 206 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Taukin, Cumberland, SE. of Brampton.

Taume, a river which riſes in Yorkſhire, and runs into the Merſey at Stopford, in Lancaſhire, oppoſite Stockport.

TAUMAGO, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Quiros, in the year 1606. He found wood, water, potatoes, cocoas, palmettos, ſugar-canes, and other plants and fruits. The inhabitants appeared to be active, robuſt, and warlike, but not ferocious. Lat. 13. S. lon. 161. E. of Ferro.

TAUNTON, a town of Maſſachuſetts, ſeated on a river of the ſame name, which runs into the ſea at Rhode Iſland, 39 miles S. of Boſton.

* TAUNTON, an ancient town of Somerſetſhire, which, in point of [illegible] buildings buildings, and reſpectability of inhabitants, may vie with many cities. It conſiſts of three principal ſtreets, or rather four, including Hemet-ſtreet, (which has lately been begun by Sir Benjamin Hemet, and will be a conſiderable addition to the town) which are wide, and very well built, beſides a number of others, and contains 2 pariſh churches, a noble and ſpacious market place, a commodious market-houſe, with a handſome town-hall over it, a well-endowed grammar-ſchool, an hoſpital, and about 2000 inhabitants. It has long been the principal ſeat of the manufacture of coarſe, woollen goods, ſuch as ſerges, corduroys, ſagathies, druggets, ſhalloons, &c. though ſomewhat decayed of late years, or tranſlated, perhaps, to the neighbouring town of Wellington. A ſilk manufacture was introduced here in 1780. Large quantities of malt liquor are alſo ſent from this town to Briſtol for exportation. The corporation are ſaid to have neither lands, houſes, nor joint ſtock; their laſt charter precluding them from any ſuch poſſeſſions. The election of members of parliament here is very ſingular; every pot-walloper, i. e. inhabitant that dreſſes his own victuals, is entitled to vote; ſo that the inmates, or lodgers, to qualify themſelves, a little before the election comes on, make a fire in the ſtreet, and there boil their victuals. It is ſeated on the river Thone, which is navigable hence to the Parret, and ſo to Bridgwater, 31 miles NE. of Exeter, and 140 W. by S. of London. Large markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

TAVORA, a town of Beira, in Portugal, 6 miles E. of Lamego. It is ſituated on or near a river of the ſame name, which runs into Douro, 5 miles NE. of Lamego.

TAUNTON-DEAN, or the VALE OF TAUNTON, in Somerſetſhire, extending about 30 miles in length, is of ſuch remarkable fertility and produce, that, to uſe the vulgar phraſe, with the ſun and ſoil alone, it needs no manure. Coals from Wales, after being brought by ſea from Swanſea to Bridgwater, are brought from the latter places by barges to Taunton, as are heavy goods and merchandiſe from Briſtol, and ſo are tranſported over all theſe parts.

TAUREAU, an iſland of France, in the dept. of Finiſterre, lying at the mouth of the river Morlaix. Lat. 48, 40. N.

TAURICA, or TAURIDA. See CRIMEA.

TAURIS, or TABRIS, a city of Perſia, capital of Aderbeitzan, the moſt conſiderable in the empire, next to Iſpahan. It carries on a prodigious trade over many parts of Aſia, in cotton, cloths, ſilks, gold and ſilver brocades, the fineſt turbans, and ſhagreen leather. It contains many large and extenſive bayars, covered with beautiful domes, and filled with vaſt quantities of merchandiſe, 3 hoſpitals, in which proviſions are given twice a day to all who come, a ſquare much larger and more ſpacious than that at Iſpahan, (and in which the Turks, when in poſſeſſion of this city, have frequently drawn up 30,000 men in order of battle) 250 moſques, 300 caravanſeras, which are ſo ſpacious, that 300 perſons, it is ſaid, may lodge in each, beſides baths, and other public buildings, equally noble and magnificent. Sir John Chardin eſtimates the inhabitants at 550,000, beſides ſtrangers. It is ſeated in a plain, ſurrounded by mountains, whence a ſtream proceeds, which runs through the city. It is 180 miles SSE. of Erivan, and 360 NNW. of Iſpahan, Lat. 38. 18. N. lon. 47. 10. E.

TAURUS, or ARARAT, a great chain of mountains in Aſia, which begin near the weſtern part of Natolia, and extend to India. In different places they have different names.

Tauton, North, Devonſhire, NW. of Barnſtaple. Tauton, South, Devonſhire, E. of Okehampton. Tavy, Mary's, Devonſhire, on the river Tavy. Tavy, Peter's, Devonſ. NE. of Taviſtock. Taw, a river of Devonſhire, which riſes near the centre of the county, about 3 miles SE. of Okehampton, flows to Barnſtaple, and then turns weſterly and joins the Towridge, at its mouth, in the Briſtol Channel. Tawſtock-Houſe, and Tawton, Biſhop's, Devonſ. on the Taw, SW. and S. of Barnſtaple. Biſhop's Tawton was the firſt biſhop's ſee in this county, from whence, after only two biſhops had reſided in it, it was removed to Crediton, and then to Exeter. Tawy, a river of Brecknockſhire and Glamorganſhire, which enters the Briſtol Channel at Swanſey. Taxball, Cheſhire, N. of Macclesfield-Foreſt.

TAY, a fine river of Scotland, the two ſources of which are near Tyndrum, in the W. part of Perthſhire. Flowing through Loch Tay, it afterwards waters Dunkeld and Perth, and, joining the river Earn, falls into the Frith of Tay.

TAY, FRITH OF, a noble eſtuary, or arm of the ſea, which divides Fifeſhire from the counties of Perth and Angus. It becomes narrow towards its mouth, and at the Ferry-Town, in Fifeſhire, called Parton-Craigs, it is not above a mile broad.

TAY, LOCH, a lake of Perthſhire, in Scotland, through which flows the majeſtic river of the ſame name. It is about 15 miles long, and in many parts above one broad. On the 12th of September, 1784, this lake was ſeen to ebb and flow ſeveral times in a quarter of an hour, when, all at once, the waters ruſhed from the E. and W. in oppoſite currents, ſo as to form a ridge, leaving the channel dry to the diſtance of almoſt a hundred yards from its uſual boundary. When the oppoſing waves met, they burſt with a claſhing noiſe, and much foam: the waters then flowed out at leaſt five yards beyond their ordinary limits. The flux and reflux continued, gradually decreaſing for about two hours. A ſimilar motion was obſerved for ſeveral days, but not to the ſame degree as on the firſt day. The banks of this lake are finely wooded; and it has a ſmall tufted iſland, on which are the ruins of a priory, built by Alexander I.

TAY, a river of Waterford, in Munſter, which runs into the Atlantic, about 7 miles WNW. from Dungarvan Bay.

TAYLI, or TALI, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Yunnan. It is the principal place where they make curious tables, and other ornaments of fine marble, naturally beautified with different colours, in the form of mountains, flowers, trees, and rivers. Tayli has under its juriſdiction, 4 cities of the ſecond rank, and 3 of the third. It is 1205 miles SW. of Peking.

Taynton, Glouceſterſ. SE. of Newent.

Taynton, Upper and Lower, Lincolnſhire, near Horncaſtle.

TÁYOAN. See TAIOUAN.

TAYTONG, or TAITONG, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Chanſi, with a very large juriſdiction, extending over 4 great cities of the ſecond rank, and 7 of the third. Lapis lazuli is obtained in great plenty here; and there is a kind of jaſper which is tranſparent, and as white as agate. Porphyry, marble, and jaſper of all colours are very plentiful, and here is alſo a great commerce in ſkins. The neighbouring mountains abound with a variety of ſimples and medicinal herbs, which the botaniſts gather with great care. Taytong is very well fortified, according to the manner of the Chineſe, and has, generally, a very ſtrong garriſon. It is ſituated in a mountainous country, expoſed to the incurſions of the Tartars, and ſurrounded, in a manner, by the great wall, which has forts from place to place. 155 miles W. of Peking.

TCHANGTCHA, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Houquang. It is ſituated on the Heng river, 742 miles S. of Peking.

TCHANGTCHEOU, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Fokien, 950 miles S. of Peking.

TCHANGTCHEOU, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Kiangnan, 525 miles SSE. of Peking.

TCHANTE, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Honan. It contains in its diſtrict, one city of the ſecond rank, and ſix of the third. It is remarkable for a fiſh found in its rivers, reſembling a crocodile, the fat of which is of ſuch a ſingular nature, that when once ſet on fire, it cannot be extinguiſhed. It is 255 miles SSW. of Peking.

TCHEKIANG, a maritime province of China, W. of the ſea, S. and SE. of the province of Kiangnan, and N. of the province of Fokien. The principal trade conſiſts in ſilk ſtuffs, which, indeed, is immenſe. Whole plains may be ſeen covered with dwarf mulberry trees, while the Chineſe purpoſely check its growth, as the leaves of the ſmaller trees procure the beſt ſilks. This province likewiſe produces the tallow tree, a ſpecies of muſhrooms, which are tranſported to all parts of the empire, excellent hams, and ſmall gold fiſh.

TCHERNIGOVSKOE, a government of Ruſſia, formerly a part of the Ukraine; bounded on the N. by Mogilevſkoe, and on the W. by Poland. Its capital, Tchernigov, is ſeated on the right ſhore of the Deſna, 344 miles SSW. of Moſcow.

Tea, a river in Buckinghamſhire, which runs into the Ouſe, near Stony Stratford.

Tean, Upper and Lower, Staffordſh. near the Tayne water, (or Tean river, which runs into the Dove, 2 miles NE. of Uttoxeter) between Cheadle and Checkley.

Teark, or Tork Dean, Glouceſterſ. N. of Northleach.

Tearn, a river in Staffordſh. and Shropſ. Tearn, near Shrewſbury.

Teath, St. Cornwall, S of Tintangel.

Tebay, Weſtmorland, on the Lon, near Ruthwaite.

TEBESTA, an ancient town of Tunis.

Tebworth, Bedfordſhire, in Chelgrave pariſh.

TEDZA, a town, capital of a province of Morocco. Lat. 34.50. N. lon. 4.55. W.

TECEUT, or TECHEIT, a town of Sus, in Morocco, with a manufacture of Morocco leather. It is 150 miles SW. of Morocco.

TECKLENBURG,

TECKLENBURG, a town and fertile county of Weſtphalia, ſubject to the king of Pruſſia.

TECOANTEPECA, a conſiderable ſea-port town of Guaxaca, in Mexico, with handſome buildings. Lat. 15. 28. N. lon. 99. 15. W.

TECORT, a town, capital of a country of Biledulgerid. Lat. 29. 35. N. lon. 7. 55. E.

TECULET, a ſea-port of Morocco.

Tedborn, St. Mary's, Devonſ. on the Fortun, W. of Exeter.

TEDBURY. See TETBURY.

Teddington, Middleſex, on the Thames, 1 mile NW. of Kingſton.

TEDELEZ, or DELLYS, a town, capital of a diſtrict of Algiers, ſituated on the Mediterranean, with a plentiful fiſhery, 45 miles E. of Algiers.

Tedford, Lincolnſ. NW. of Spilſby.

Tedington, Worceſterſ. E. of Tewkeſbury.

Tednambury, Herts, NE. of Sawbridgworth.

TEDNEST, a conſiderable town of Morocco, capital of the diſtrict of Hea, 110 miles WNW. of Morocco.

TEDSI, a town of Sus, Morocco, E. of Tarudant, and 90 miles SW. of Morocco.

Ted. St. Mary's, Lincolnſhire, in the part called Holland. Tedſton-de-la-Mer, and Tedſton-Wafers, Herefordſhire, NE. of Bromyard.

TEES, a river which riſes on the confines of Cumberland, and, in its whole courſe, dividing the county of Durham from Yorkſhire, and falls into the German Ocean, about 10 miles below Stockton.

Tees, a river of Northumberland, which runs into the German Ocean at Middleborough.

TEFESAD, a town of Algiers, ſuppoſed to have been the ancient Tipſa, noted for its mines of iron. It is 32 miles SW. of the city of Algiers.

TEFFLIS, a town of Aſia, capital of Georgia. It is called by the inhabitants Thilis-Cabar, (warm town) from the warm baths in its neighbourhood. Though its circumference does not exceed two Engliſh miles, it contains 20,000 inhabitants; Armenians, Georgians, and Tartars. All the houſes are of ſtone, with flat roofs, which ſerve, according to the cuſtom of the Eaſt, as walks for the women. They are neatly built; the rooms are wainſcotted, and the floors ſpread with carpets. The ſtreets ſeldom exceed ſeven feet in breadth; and ſome are ſo narrow as ſcarcely to allow room for a man on horſeback: they are conſequently very filthy. The Armenians have eſtabliſhed in this town all the manufactures carried on by their countrymen in Perſia: the moſt flouriſhing is that of printed linens. Here are 1 Roman Catholic, 13 Greek, and 7 Armenian churches. Teffliis is ſeated on the river Kur, at the foot of a mountain, 300 miles SSW. of Aſtracan. Lat. 41. 59. N. lon. 47. 6. E.

Tefunt, Eves, or Over, and Tefunt, Nether, Wilts, near Hindon.

TEGAN, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Houquang. In the territory of this place are a ſort of worms, which make white wax like that of bees. Lat. 31. 20. N. lon. 112. 31. E.

TEGAZA, a town of Africa, capital of a diſtrict in the county of Sahara, near which is a mine of ſalt. It is about 500 miles from the Atlantic, and 400 S. of Cape Non.

TEGERBY, a town of Fezzan, 80 miles SW. of Mourzout.

Teghmolin, in Carlow, Leinſter.

TEGLIO, a town in the country of the Griſons, capital of a government of the ſame name, in the Valteline. It contains about 300 houſes, and is 20 miles SW. of Bormio.

TEHAMA, a ſandy belt, which nearly encircles Arabia, beginning at Suez, and extending to the mouth of the Euphrates. It has been gradually produced by a receſſion of the waters of the ſea, and is ſtill extending its limits. Hiſtory notices ſeveral places as ſea-ports, which are at preſent inland. The belt is entirely barren, and preſents an unvaried picture of deſolation.

TEIGN, a river of Devonſhire, compoſed of two branches, which riſe nearly in the centre of the county, and, uniting, enter the Engliſh Channel at Teignmouth.

Teign-Canon, Devonſ. near Hemiock.

TEIGNMOUTH, a ſea-port of Devonſhire, reckoned part of the port of Exeter. It has no market, but ſends ſome veſſels to the Newfoundland fiſhery, and employs ſeveral in the coaſting-trade, eſpecially in carrying tobacco-pipe clay to Liverpool, whence are brought back coal, ſalt, earthen-wares, &c. It has a tide harbour, and is ſeated at the mouth of the river Teign, 12 miles S. of Exeter, and 280 W. by S. of London. A well-frequented fair on September 29th.

Teignton, Biſhop's, and King's, Devonſhire, on the river Teign.

TEISSE, or TEISSK, a river of Hungary, which riſes in the Carpathian mountains, and paſſing by Waradin, Tokay, and Segedin, falls into the Danube, near Titul.

TELAMONE, a town of the State del Preſidii, belonging to Naples; 10 miles N. of Orbitello.

Teleby, Lincolnſ. NE. of Market-Raiſin.

TELEN HEAD, or ST. HELEN'S HEAD, called alſo HORN HEAD, a noted promontory, in Donegal, Ulſter. Lat. 55. 10. N. lon. 8. 35. W.

Teleſcomb, Suſſex, NW. of Newhaven.

TELGEN, a town of Sudermania, ſituated on the Lake Maeler, 15 miles SW. of Stockholm.

TELLICHERRY, a ſea-port on the coaſt of Malabar, where there is an Engliſh factory, 48 miles NNW. of Calicut.

Telsford, Somerſetſhire, on the Frome, E. of Philip's Norton. Telſham, Suffolk.

TELISH, a town of Iglau, in Moravia.

Teluddy, or Tebiddy, Cornwall, on the N. coaſt, W. of St. Ann's. Teme, or Team, a river which riſes in Radnorſhire, and paſſing through Shropſhire and Worceſterſhire, runs into the Severn, 1 mile below Worceſter.

TEMENDEFUST, or METAFUST, a town of Algiers, 10 miles E. of it.

TEMESWAR, a town and important fortreſs of Hungary, capital of a bannet, and the ſee of a Greek biſhop. It was taken by Prince Eugene in 1716. It is ſeated in a moraſs, 52 miles NNE. of Belgrade.

TEMISSA, a large town of Fezzan, in Africa. Here the caravans from Tombuctou, Mourzouk, &c. which travel by Cairo to Mecca, uſually provide the ſtores of corn, dates, and dried meat, with other proviſions, requiſite during a long journey through a dreary and deſert country. It is 120 miles ENE. of Mourzouk.

Temple, Cornw. NE. of Bodmin. Temple, Dorſetſhire, in the pariſh of Broad Windſor. Temple, Hants, SE. of Alton. Temple, Hertfordſhire, S. of Sacomb. Temple, Kent, in Dartford pariſh. Temple, Leiceſterſ. W. of Boſworth. Temple-Bolſoll, Warwickſhire, near Killingworth. Temple-Brough, Yorkſ. on the Don, near Comſburgh. Temple Bruer, Lincolnſ. NW. of Sleaford. Temple-Chelſin, Herts, in Benjoy pariſh. Temple-Comb, Somerſetſ. near Milbourn Port. Temple-Dunſley, Herts, in Hitchin pariſh. Temple-Ewell, Kent, NW. of Dover, was one of the chief manſions of the knights templars.

Temple-Houſe, in Sligo, Connaught.

Temple-Hurſt, Yorkſ. NW. of Snaith.

Temple-Martin, in Kilkenny, Leinſter.

Temple-Michael, in Waterford, Munſter.

Templemore, in Tipperary, Munſter.

Temple-Newſom, Yorkſ. SE. of Leeds.

Templenue, in Kerry, Munſter. Temple-Patrick, in Antrim, Ulſter. Temple-Patrick, in Down, Ulſter.

Temple-Sowerby, Weſtmorland, near Kirkby-Thore.

Temple-thirty, in Waterford, Munſter.

Templeton, Devonſ. W. of Tiverton.

Templetown, in Wicklow, Leinſter.

TEMPLIN, a town of the Ucker Mark of Brandenburg, trading largely in timber. It is ſituated on a canal, newly made between the lakes Bodenſee and Dolgenſee, 34 miles N. of Berlin.

Tempo, in Fermanagh, Ulſter.

Tempſford, Bedfordſhire, near Great Barford, between Biggleſwade and Eaton, a little below the conflux of the Ouſe and Ivel.

TEMSENA, a province of Morocco, on the coaſt of the Atlantic, S. of Sallee. It is rich and fertile, producing excellent corn, and other proviſions of various kinds.

TENASSERIM, a town of Lower Siam, capital of a province which was formerly a kingdom. It is 220 miles SW. of Siam.

TENBURY, a town of Worceſterſhire, ſeated on the river Teme, over which it has a ſtone bridge of 6 arches, 15 miles W. by N. of Worceſter, and 130 NW. by W. of London. Market on Tueſday.

* TENBY, a neat, agreeable ſea-port town of Pembrokeſhire, with a commodious quay, a good harbour or road for ſhipping, a large fiſhery for herrings, and a conſiderable coaſting trade to Ireland and Briſtol. It is a place of ſome reſort for ſea-bathing, and is ſituated on the declivity of a hill, affording a picturesque view of it from the bay, but deficient of trees, 7 miles E. of Pembroke, and 233 W. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

TENCH'S ISLAND, a well-inhabited iſland, in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Lieutenant Ball, in 1790. It is about 2 miles in circumference: it is low, but entirely covered with trees, many of which are the cocoa-nut. The natives obſerved in the canoes that ventured to come ſomewhat near the ſhip, were remarkably ſtout and healthy-looking men; their ſkin perfectly ſmooth, and free from any diſorder. They were quite naked, and of a copper colour: their hair reſembling that of the New Hollanders. Some of their beards reached as low as the navel, and there was the appearance of much art having been uſed to form them into long ringlets, ſo that it ſeemed to be the prevailing faſhion on this iſland to keep the beard beard well combed, curled, and oiled. Two or three of the men had ſomething like a bead or bone, ſuſpended to a ſtring, which was faſtened round the neck. The largeſt of their canoes appeared to be about 28 feet long, and made out of a large tree, with a long outrigger. Lat. 1. 39. S. lon. 151. 31. E.

TENDA, a town of Piedmont, capital of a county of the ſame name, S. of the diſtrict of Coni, and N. of Nice, affording good paſturage and timber. It has a caſtle walled round, and flanked with towers, on a rock, which commands the environs, and is ſituated at the confluence of the rivers Roia and Brogna, 22 miles NE. of Nice.

Tendring Eſſex, near Debden. Tendring, Eſſex, SW. of Harwich. Tendring, Hall, Eſſex, NE. of Tendring. Tendring-Hall, Suffolk, near ſtoke, by Neyland.

TENEDOS, an iſland in the Archipelago, lying on the coaſt of Natolia, SE. of Lemnos. It is about 21 miles in circumference, and its muſcadine wine is reckoned the beſt in all the Levant. On the N. coaſt is a pretty large town, with a fine harbour.

TENERIFF, formerly called NIVARIA, one of the Canary Iſlands, the ſecond in dignity, but the firſt in point of extent, wealth, and fertility. It lies to the W. of the Grand Canary, and is about 45 miles in length, and 20 in breadth. Its form is triangular, extending itſelf into 3 capes, the neareſt about 80 leagues or more from the coaſt of Africa. It abounds in wine, different ſorts of fruits, cattle, and game. One part of this iſland is ſurrounded by inacceſſible mountains, and here is one in particular, called the Pike of Teneriff, which, according to Sir Thomas Herbert, may be ſeen 120 miles off, in a clear day. Dr. Heberden eſtimates the height at 15,396 feet above the level of the ſea. The vertex, which appears sharp, and the exact reſemblance to a cone, is flat for the extent of an acre of ground, in the centre of which is a dreadful volcano. Though it frequently breaks out into flames, and ſmoke conſtantly iſſues from it, there has been no eruption from this mountain ſince the year 1704 when the port of Garrachica was deſtroyed, and the harbour filled up by the lava. Ten parts of this iſland conſiſt of rocks, and woody and inacceſſible mountains and vineyards, and yet, from the ſmall portion of arable ground remaining, 250,000 hanackes of wheat, beſides immenſe quantities of rye and barley, are annually produced here. Nothing can be more delicately rich than the ſoil, if the Spaniards would take the trouble to cultivate it properly, communicating to grains, fruits, roots, &c. a peculiar elegance of flavour, unknown in other countries. Wine is the only conſiderable articles of foreign commerce, about 40,000 pipes being annually made here. There are two ſorts of it, the vidonia and malveſia, or malmſey. The firſt is extracted from a long grape, and is a dull, heavy wine, greatly inferior to the other, which is drawn from a large, round grape, in ſuch quantities as to be exported to all the corners of the world. The Spaniſh cuſtom of dreſſing in black continues amongſt the inhabitants. The laborious works in this iſland are chiefly performed by mules, horſes being ſcarce. Oxen are alſo much employed here, to drag their caſks along upon pieces of wood. Hawks and parrots are natives of the iſland, as alſo ſwallows, ſea-gulls, partridges, black-birds, and large flocks of canary-birds. There are alſo lizards, locuſts, and three or four ſorts of dragon flies. The air and climate are remarkably healthful, and particularly adapted to afford relief in phthiſical complaints. Lat. of the Peak, 28. 18. N. lon. 17 W.

TENERIFF, a town of St. Martha, Terra Firma, ſituated near the river Magdeleine, 100 miles S. of St. Martha.

TENESSEE. See BROAD TENESSEE.

TENES, a town and diſtrict of Algiers, ſituated on the N. coaſt near Cape Tenes, in lat. 36. 30. N.

TENEZA, a town of Morocco, 43 miles WSW. of the city of Morocco.

Tenham, Kent, near Sheppey Iſle.

Ten-Mile-Buſh, in Meath, Leinſter.

Ten-Mile-Houſe, in Wicklow, Leinſter.

Tennal-Hall, Staffordſhire, SW. of Birmingham.

TENNASSE GOVERNMENT, a country of the United States of America, bounded on the N. by Kentucky, on the E. by a part of the Apalachian mountains, (called the Iron mountain) which ſeparates it from N. Carolina, on the S. by Georgia, and on the W. by the Miſſiſſippi. It is divided into two diſtricts, and eight counties. The ſoil and climate are good. The chief towns are Naſhville, and Abingdon. This county was firſt begun to be ſettled about the year 1764; and in 1788, the number of inhabitants (chiefly emigrants from Pennſylvania and Virginia) was eſtimated at 40,000. See BROAD TENNASSEE.

TENNESTADT, a town of Thuringia.

Tenſeke, Bedfordſhire, near Ampthill.

TENTCHEOU, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Chantong. It is built on the ſea ſhore, and has a convenient harbour, and a ſtrong garriſon, with a fleet of ſhips to guard the gulf.

*TENTERDEN, a town of Kent, where the woollen manufacture was eſtabliſhed by the Flemings, in the reign of Edward III. It has a free grammar-ſchool, and is 24 miles SW. of Canterbury, and 56. E. by S. of London. Market on Friday.

TENZEGEZET, a town of Tremeſen.

TEOLACHA, an ancient town of Africa, in Biledulgerid, ſeated in a country abounding in dates, upon a river that proceeds from a hot ſpring.

TER, a river of Catalonia, which riſes in the county of Cerdagne, and runs into the Mediterranean, 20 miles E. of Gerona.

TERAMO, a town of Abruzzo Ultra.

TERASSO. See TARSUS.

TERASSON, a town in the department of Dordogne, ſeated on the river Veſere, 10 miles from Sarlet.

TERCERA, one of the Azores, or Weſtern Iſlands. It is very fertile in wheat, and contains about 20,000 inhabitants. Lat. 38. 45. N. lon. 27. 1. W.

Tercet, Northumb. NW. of Billingham.

TERCHIZ, a town of Choraſan, in Perſia.

Terela, in Down, Ulſter.

Tereſtent, Monmouthſhire, between the river Stowey and the Rompney.

TERGA, an old town of Morocco, ſeated on the river Omirabi, or Morbega, 90 miles N. of Morocco.

TERGOVISTA. See TARGOVISCO.

Terladinas, Cornwall, N. of Penzance.

Terleſcoward, Lancaſ. S. of Marton-Mere.

Terleton, Nottingh, between Nottingh. and Stanton-on-the-Would.

Terley-Caſtle, Staffordſhire, SW. of Muckleſton.

Terling, Eſſex, 4 miles W. of Witham.

TERMED, or TARMAD, a town of Tocareſtan, in Aſia, 150 miles S. of Samarcand.

TERMINI, a town on the northern coaſt of Sicily, famous for its mineral waters, and there is a fine aqueduct, with ſeveral handſome buildings. It contains about 9000 inhabitants, and is ſeated on the mouth of a river of the ſame name, in a territory abounding in corn and good wine, 18 miles SE. of Palermo.

TERMOLI or TERMINI, a town of Capitanata, in Naples, 84 miles NNE. of Naples.

TERMUYDEN, a ſmall town of Dutch Flanders, 12 miles SE. of Fluſhing.

TERMYOVA, a town of Iſtria, 18 miles NE. of Pedena.

TERNATE, an iſland of the Eaſtern Ocean, the principal of the Moluccas. It abounds in cocoa-nuts, bananas, citrons, oranges, almonds and other fruits proper to the climate. There are alſo a great number of birds of paradiſe. It is a mountainous country, and there are a great number of woods, which furniſh great plenty of game. But it is of the greateſt note for being a ſpice-iſland, which produces cloves, and is in the poſſeſſion of the Dutch. The inhabitants are Mahometans, and very indolent. It lies a little to the W. of Gilolo, and 100 miles E. of Celebes. Lat. 0. 15. N. lon. 127. 4. E.

Tere, Yorkſhire, W. of Skipton.

TERNEUSE, a town of Flanders.

TERNI, an ancient and conſiderable town of Spoleto, in Italy. The cathedral is a magnificent ſtructure, and the place contains about 12,000 inhabitants; but it was much more conſiderable formerly than it is now. The famous cataract of the river Velino is about a mile from this place, which is ſeated in an iſland formed by the river Nera, on which account it was anciently called Interamna. It is 15 miles S. by W. of Spoleto, and 40. N. of Rome.

TERNOVA, an ancient, but thinly inhabited town of Bulgaria, (formerly the reſidence of the deſpots, or princes, and now of an Eccleſiaſtic, who is called the arch biſhop of Bulgaria) 95 miles E. of Sophia, and 200 NW. of Conſtantinople. Alſo a large and commercial town of Theſſaly, ſituated on the Peneus, 5 miles WNW. of Lariſſa.

TERRACINA, an ancient town of Italy, in the Campagna di Roma. It is greatly decayed on account of its unwholeſome air. It was formerly called Anxur, was the capital of the warlike Volſci, and the principal church was originally a temple of Jupiter. It is ſeated near the ſea, on the ſide of a mountain, 46 miles SE. of Rome.

TERRA DEL FUEGO. See TIERRA DEL FUEGO.

TERRA FIRMA NEW CASTILE, or CASTILE DEL ORO, a vaſt extent of country in South America, exteading almoſt from the equator to 12. 18. N. lat. and from 16. 20. to 80 W. lon. It is divided into the following large diſtricts, which are ſubdivided into ſmaller juriſdictions. Terra Firma Proper, or Darien; Carthagena, St. Martha, Rio de la Hacha, Venezuela, Caraccas, New Granada, Paria, Popayan, Quito, and Comana. It is ſubject to Spain.

TERRA FIRMA PROPER. See DARIEN.

TERRA NUOVA, a ſea-port on the E. coaſt of Sardinia, 102 miles N. of Cagliari.

TERRIDON, LOCH, an inlet of the ſea, on the W. coaſt of Roſsſhire, indented with many creeks and bays.

TERRING, a town of Suſſex, ſeated on the Downs, near the ſea, 21 miles E. of Chicheſter, and 53 SSW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Terril's Paſs, in W. Meath, Leinſter.

Terring, Suſſex, SE. of Lewes. Terrington, Yorkſhire, S. of Hovingham. Terrington, St. Clement and St. John, Norfolk, W. of Lynn.

TERROUEN, a town in the dept. of the Straits of Calais, ſeated on the river Lis, 6 miles S. of St. Omer.

Terry Hogan, in Down, Ulſter.

Tertio Dean, Hampſ. N. of Biſhop's-Waltham.

TERUEL, a town of Arragon, ſeated in a pleaſant, fertile plain, well watered by ſtreams, and planted with gardens and fruit trees, whoſe bloſſoms perfume the air. It ſtands at the confluence of the rivers Guadalquiver and Alhambra, 75 miles S. of Saragoſſa, and 112 E. of Madrid.

Terver-Chapel, Lancaſh. on the Duddon, W. of Furneſs Fells.

TESCHEN, or TIESSIN, a town of Sileſia, capital of a principality of the ſame name. The inhabitants carry on a trade in leather, woollen ſtuffs, and wines; and manufacture a particular kind of fuſee. A treaty of peace was concluded here in 1779, between the Emperor Joſeph II. and Frederick III. king of Pruſſia. It is 87 miles SE. of Ratibor.

TESEGDELT, a town of Morocco, ſituated on a ſharp rock, ſuppoſed to be impregnable. It is 90 miles WNW. of the city of Morocco.

TESINO, a river of Italy, which riſes in Mount Gothard, and running through the Lake Maggiore, falls into the Po, at Pavira.

TESSEL. See TEXEL.

TEST, or TESE, a river which riſes in the NW. of Hants, and, watering Stockbridge and Rumſey, falls into the Bay of Southampton, at Redbridge.

Teſterton, Norfolk, S. of Fakenham. Teſtining, Merionethſhire, in N. Wales. Teſton, Kent, on the Medway. Teſt-wood, Hampſhire, NW. of Southampton.

TET, a river of France, which riſes in the Pyrenees, a little above Mount Louis, and runs into the Mediterranean, about 7 miles E. of Perpignan.

TETBURY, a populous town of Glouceſterſhire, with a conſiderable trade, and a manufactory of woollen cloth. The market, on Wedneſday, is large for corn, cattle, cheeſe, malt, yarn, wool, and proviſions. It is ſituated near the ſource of the river Avon, in a healthy air, on a riſing ground, 25 miles ENE. of Briſtol, and 99 W. of London.

Tetcote, Devonſhire, near Launceſton, where the Claw joins the Tamar. Tetherington, Glouceſterſhire, SE. of Thornbury. Tetherton, E. and W. Wiltſhire, NE. of Chippenham, and NW. of Calne.

TETICATO, a large lake of Peru, in Callao, above 200 miles in circumference.

Tetſworth, Oxfordſ. between Thame and Eaſington.

Tettenhall, Clericorum and Regis, Staff. NW. of Wolverhampton. Tetton, Cheſhire, near Sandbach and Middlewich.

TETUAN, a town of Fez, in Africa. The houſes have no windows toward the ſtreets, except little holes to look out at; for the windows are on the inſide toward the court-yard, which is ſurrounded by galleries; and in the middle is generally a fountain. They are two ſtories high, flat at the top, and the ſtreets very narrow. The dreſs of both ſexes is much alike; but nothing of the women is to be ſeen in the ſtreets, except their eyes and naked legs, which are never covered in this country. When they are at home, they viſit each other from the tops of their houſes. They wear bracelets on their arms and legs, and large ear-rings in their ears. The ſhops in the city are very ſmall, being without-doors; and the owner, when he has opened the ſhutters, jumps in, and ſits croſs-legged on a counter, the goods being diſpoſed in drawers round about him, and all the cuſtomers ſtand in the ſtreet. It is ſeated on the river Cus, 3 miles from the ſea, and has a caſtle which commands the town. Ships from Gibraltar come to victual here, when the wind is in the W. and does not permit them to make Tangiers. It is 108 miles N. by W. of Fez, and 28 SE. of Tangiers. Lat. 35. 27. N. lon. 5. 26. W.

Tetworth, Huntingd. W. of Granſden.

TEVERONE, a river of Italy, which riſes in the Appenines, 50 miles above Tivoli, glides through a plain till it comes near that town, when it is confined, for a ſhort ſpace, between two hills, covered with groves. Theſe were ſuppoſed to be the reſidence of the Sibyl Albunea, to whom a temple here was dedicated. The river moving, with augmented rapidity, as

as its channel is confined, at last rushes, at once, over a lofty precipice; the noise of its fall resounds through the hills and groves of Tivoli; a liquid cloud arises from the foaming water, which afterward divides into numberless small cascades, waters several orchards, and, having gained the plain, flows quietly on till it loses itself in the Tiber. The elegant form of the Sybil's Temple indicates its having been built when the arts were in the highest state of perfection at Rome. It is seated on a point of the mountain, fronting the grand cascade.

Teversall, Nottinghamshire, near Mansfield. Teversham, Cambridgeshire, near Fen-Ditton.

TEVIOT, a river which rises in the mountains in the SW. of Roxburghshire, and passing almost through the centre of that county, meanders beautifully through wide and fertile valleys, and unites with the Tweed, near Kelso.

TEVIOTDALE. See ROXBURGHSHIRE.

TEURART, an ancient town of Fez.

TEUZAR, an ancient and considerable town of Africa, in Biledulgerid, divided into two parts by a river. It carries on a good trade, and is seated into a country abounding in dates.

Tew-Dunse, Oxfordsh. N. of Steeple-Aston. Tew, Great and Little, Oxfordshire, E. of Chapel-on-the-Heath. Tewing, Hertfordshire, NW. of Hertingfordbury, on the river Maran, or Minerum.

*TEWKESBURY, a pretty large, beautiful, and populous town of Gloucestershire, has been long celebrated for its mustard, but, at present, its principal manufacture is that of cotton stockings. It is pleasantly seated at the confluence of the Severn and Avon, 10 miles N. of Gloucester, and 102 WNW. of London.

Tewkshill, Shropshire, NE. of North Clebury.

TEXEL, a town of the United Provinces, in N. Holland, at the mouth of the Zuyder-Zee, with a good harbour. It is seated on an island, which is separated from the continent of Holland by a narrow channel, through which most of the ships pass that are bound to Amsterdam. Lat. 53. 8. N. lon. 4. 51. E.

Tey, They, or Teise, a river in Sussex and Kent, running into the Beala. Tey, Great and Little, Essex, W. and NW. of Tey-Marks. Tey-Marks, Essex, between Coggeshall and Colchester.

TEYN, a town of Bohemia, 51 miles SW. of Prague.

Teynton, Oxfordsh. NW. of Burford. Teynton-Drew, Devonsh. NE. of Chegford, where is a considerable druidical temple.

TEZA, an ancient, and once populous, but now decayed, town of Fez, capital of the province of Cuzi. It is still, however, the residence of a governor and garrison, and the Jews carry on some trade here. There is a very large mosque here, about half a mile in circumference. It is seated on a small river, 60 miles NNE. of Fez, and 72 SE. of Tetuan.

TEZUCO, a town of Mexico, (capital of a government or district) containing about 400 inhabitants, Spaniards and Indians. It is seated on the Lake of Mexico, 15 miles from the city of that name, in lat. 20. 5. N. and lon. 100. 20. W.

TEZELA, a town of Algiers, 15 miles SW. of Oran.

TEZOUT, or TESSOT, a town of Fez, 35 miles S. of Melilla.

THABOR, a town of Bohemia, on a steep mountain of the same name, surrounded by walls, and of difficult access.

Thackerington, Northumberl. SW. of Kirk-Whelpington. Thafriston, Northumberland, in Eland manor. Thakam, Sussex, NW. of Stening. Thakthwaite, Cumberland, in the parish of Castle Sowerby.

THAME, or TAME, a town of Oxfordshire, which gives name to the hundred. It is situated on the river Thame, (which is navigable here by barges, and washes the N. part of the town) 13 miles E. of Oxford, and 45 NW. of London. A market, well furnished with live cattle, and all necessaries, on Tuesday.

THAMES, the finest river in Great Britain, which takes its source, according to Dr. Campbell, from 4 rivulets, which rise in the Cotswold Hills, and connecting together, form one stream, near Lechlade, which there becomes navigable for barges. But the chief spring, or what is called Thames-Head, rises about 4 miles SW. from Cirencester, in Gloucestershire. It has been erroneously said, that its name is Isis, till it arrives at Dorchester, 15 miles below Oxford, which, being joined by the Thame, or Tame, it assumes the name of the Thames, which, it has been observed, is formed from a combination of the words Thame and Isis. What was the origin of this vulgar error cannot now be traced, but poetical fiction has perpetuated it. "It plainly appears," says Camden, "that the river was always called Thames, or Tema, before it came near the Thame; and in several ancient charters granted to the abbey of Malmsbury, s well as that of Enſham, and in the old eeds relating to Cricklade, it is never onſidered under any other name than hat of Thames." He likewiſe ſays, that : occurs no where under the name of Iſis. ll the hiſtorians, who mention the incurons of Ethelwold into Wiltſhire, in the ear 905, or of Canute, in 1016, concur ikewiſe in the ſame opinion, by declaring, hat they paſſed over the Thames at ricklade, in Wiltſhire. It is not probale, moreover, that Thames-Head, an apellation by which the ſource has uſually een diſtinguiſhed, ſhould give riſe to a iver of the name of Iſis; which river, afer having run half its courſe, ſhould reſſume the name of Thames, the appellaion of its parent ſpring. About a mile elow the ſource of the river, is the firſt orn-mill, which is called Kemble-Mill. lere the river may properly be ſaid to orm a conſtant current; which, though ot more than nine feet wide in the ſumer, yet, in the winter, becomes ſuch a orrent, as to overflow the meadows for many miles round. But, in the ſummer, he Thames-Head is ſo dry, as to appear othing but a large dell, interſperſed with ones and weeds. From Somerford the ream winds to Cricklade, where it unites vith many other rivulets. Approaching Cemsford, it again enters its native ounty, dividing it from Berkſhire at Ingleſham. It widens conſiderably in its vay to Lechlade; and being there joined y the Lech and Coln, at the diſtance of 38 miles from London, it becomes navigable for veſſels of 90 tons. At Enſham, n its courſe NE. to Oxford, is the firſt ridge of ſtone; a handſome one of three rches. Paſſing by the ruins of Godſtow unnery, the river reaches Oxford, in vhoſe academic groves, its poetical name f Iſis has been ſo often invoked. Being here joined by the Charwell, it proceeds iE. to Abingdon, and thence to Dorcheſter, where it receives the Tame. Continuing its courſe SE. by Wallingford to Reading, and forming a boundary to the ounties of Berks, Bucks, Surry, Middlex, Eſſex, and Kent, it waſhes the towns f Henley, Marlow, Maidenhead, Windor, Eton, Egham, Staines, Laleham, Chertſey, Weybridge, Shepperton, Walton, Sunbury, Eaſt and Weſt Mouſſey, Hampton, Thames-Ditton, Kingſton, Teddington, Twickenham, Richmond, Iſleworth, Brentford, Kew, Mortlake, Barnes, Chiſwick, Hammerſmith, Putney, Fulham, Wandſworth, Batterſea, Chelſea, and Lambeth. Then, on the north bank of the river, are Weſtminſter and London; and, on the oppoſite ſide, Southwark; forming together one continued city, extending to Limehouſe and Deptford; and hence the river proceeds to Greenwich, Erith, Greenhithe, Gray's-Thurrock, Graveſend, and Leigh, into the ocean. It receives, in its courſe from Dorcheſter, the rivers Kennet, Loddon, Coln, Wey, Mole, Wandle, Lea, Roding, Darent, and Medway. Though the Thames is ſaid to be navigable 138 miles above bridge, yet there are ſo many flats, that in ſummer, the navigation weſtward would be entirely ſtopped, when the ſprings are low, were it not for a number of locks. But theſe are attended with conſiderable expence; for a barge from Lechlade to London pays for paſſing through them, 13l. 15s. 6d. and from Oxford to London 19l. 18s. This charge, however, is in ſummer only, when the water is low; and there is no lock from London Bridge to Batter's Lock; that is, for 51 miles above bridge. The plan of new cuts has been adopted, in ſome places, to ſhorten and facilitate the navigation. There is one near Lechlade, which runs nearly parellel to the old river, and contiguous to St. John's Bridge; and there is another, a mile from Abingdon, which has rendered the old ſtream, toward Culham Bridge, uſeleſs. But a much more important undertaking has lately been accompliſhed, namely, the junction of this river with the Severn. A canal had been made, by virtue of an act of parliament, in 1730, from the Severn to Wall-Bridge, near Stroud. A new canal now aſcends by Stroud, through the Vale of Chalford, to the height of 343 feet, by means of 28 locks, and thence to the entrance of a tunnel near Sapperton, a diſtance of near 8 miles. This canal is 42 feet in width at top, and 30 at the bottom. The tunnel (which is extended under Sapperton Hill and Haley-Wood, making a diſtance of 2 miles and 3 furlongs) is near 15 feet in width, and can navigate barges of 70 tons. The canal, deſcending hence 134 feet, by 14 locks, joins the Thames at Lechlade, a diſtance of above 20 miles. In the courſe of this undertaking, the canal from the Severn, at Froomlade, to Ingleſham, where it joins the Thames, is a diſtance of more than 30 miles. The expence of it exceeded the ſum of 200,000l. of which 3000l. is ſaid to have been expended in gunpowder alone, uſed for the blowing up of the rock. This new canal was completed in 1789, in leſs than ſeven years from its commencement. Several canals are made, or making, to open a communication communication between this river and other parts of the kingdom; from London to Hertford and Biggleswade; from Brentford, by Uxbridge, Rickmansworth, &c. to join the Oxford canal at Braunston; from Weybridge, by Guilford, Godalmin, Petersfield, &c. to the sea, between Gosport and Southampton; to Basingstoke, and from thence to Southampton-Water; by the Kennet, to Hungerford, from Abingdon to Lechlade; from Oxford to Coventry; from Lechlade to Stratford-upon-Avon; and from Lechlade to the Severn, below Gloucester. The tide flows up the Thames as High as Richmond, which, following the winding of the river, is 70 miles from the ocean; a greater distance than the tide is carried by any other river in Europe. The water is esteemed extremely wholesome, and fit for use in very long voyages, in which it will work itself perfectly fine.

THAMES, a river of the NE. coast of New Zealand, in the S. Pacific Ocean.

THAMES, a river of N. America, which runs into Lake St. Clair, in lat. 42. 45. N. lon. 82. 10. W.

THAMES, a river of Connecticut. It is composed of two principal branches, the Shetucket on the E. and the Norwich, or Little River, on the W. This last, about a mile before its junction with the Shetucket river at Norwich, has a remarkable romantic cataract. From Norwich, the Thames is navigable 12 miles to Long Island, which it enters about 4 miles below New London.

Thames-Ditton, Surry, between Kingston and Esher.

THAMSBRUCK, or THOMASBRUCK, a town of Thuringia, 16 miles WNW. of Erfurt.

Thandiston, alias Francion, Suffolk.

THANET, an island of Kent, formed by the two branches of the Stour, which cut off the NE. angle from the rest of the county. Its extent is about 9 miles from E. to W. and 8 from N. to S. The soil is fertile, producing much barley and other grain, of which above 20,000 quarters are sent annually to London, besides what is sold to other places; and also madder. The S. and W. parts contain rich tracts of marsh land. The husbandry of this isle, and of E. Kent, in general, has long been famous. The alga marina, or sea-weed, (what they call sea-ore) is their chief manure. This they also dry on the shore and burn, in order to make kelp of it. It contains the sea ports of Margate and Ramsgate, and 8 other parishes.

Thanington, Kent, by the Stour, a mile SW. of Canterbury.

THANNHAUSEN, a town of Suabia, capital of a lordship of the same name, situated on the river Mindel, 22 miles E. of Ulm.

Tharfield, Hertford. situated among the tops of small hills, that hang over Royston, NE. of it. Tharleby Lincolnshire, S. of Bourn. Tharsiqn, Norfolk, SE. of Windham.

THASOS, an island of the Archipelago, anciently called ÆRIA, or ÆTHRIA, and famous, even to a proverb, for its rich gold mines. It is about 12 miles in length, and 8 in breadth, produces very delicate wines and fruits, and abounds in all necessaries, and has quarries of very fine marble. It is situated at the entrance of the Gulf of Contessa, with a town of the same name, and a harbour, frequented by merchants, in lat. 40. 59. N. and lon. 24. 32. E.

Thatcham, Berkshire, 2 miles NE. of Newbury.

THAXTED, a town of Essex, chiefly noted for its regular, stately church, which was built by John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, Lionel, duke of Clarence, Lady Clare, and William de Burgh; its chancel, by Edward III. and its tower and lofty spire, by Edmund, last earl of Marche. It is seated on the Chelmer, near its source, 20 miles NW. of Chelmsford, and 43 NE. of London. Mark. on Friday.

Theale, Berkshire, on the Kennet, 4 miles W. of Reading.

THEBAID, or SAID, a large country of Upper Egypt, bordering on Nubia. It is the least fertile, and the thinnest of people of any province in Egypt, being full of deserts, and celebrated formerly for the retreat of a great number of Christians, who lived here in a solitary manner. It is now chiefly inhabited by Arabs.

Thebarton, Suffolk, SW. of Dunwich.

THEBES, the ancient name of a city of Upper Egypt, now called Luxor. It was formerly celebrated for having 100 gates, and there are now a great many magnificent remains of the ancient city.

THEBES. See THIVA.

Thecam, Northumb. NW. of Corbridge. Theddingworth, Leicest. NW. of Harborough. Theddlesthorp, and Theddlesthorp, St. Helen's and St. Andrew's, Linc. near Saltfleet. Theddlethorp, Linc. SW. of Saltfleetby. Thekeston, Yorkshire, near Bedal. Thekesford, Warw. N. of Chalcot. Theltenham, or Feltham, Suffolk, W. of Redgrave. Thelton, Norfolk, between Diss and Harleston. Thelwall, Cheshire, by the Mersey, near Warrington.

THEMAR,

THEMAR, a town of Henneburg, in Franconia, ſituated on the Werra.

Thenford, Northampt. near Aſtrop. The Moat, Kent, near Maidſtone. The Moat, Kent, near Ightham. Theobald's, Herts, by the New River, in Cheſhunt pariſh, 12 miles N. of London. Here was a magnificent ſeat and gardens, purchaſed, or rather exchanged, for the manor of Hatfield, with lord Burleigh, by king James I. who enlarged the park on the W. ſide of the village, with a wall 10 miles round, often viſited it for the pleaſure of hunting in Enfield Chaſe, Epping Foreſt, &c. and, at laſt, died here. Its great park, partly in this county, and partly in Middleſex, is now converted into farms, and the ſmall remains of its palace were demoliſhed in 1765.

THENGEN, a town which gives name to a principality of Suabia. It is ſituated on the river Hegan, bordering on the Swiſs Canton of Schaffhauſen, 22 miles NW. of Conſtance.

THENON, a town in the dept. of the Dordogne, 15 miles E. of Perigueux.

THEODOSIA. See CAFFA.

Theram, Cornwall. NE. of Helſton. Thereck, Cornw. SW. of Bodmin. Thereſby, Lincolnſhire, W. of Saltfleet-Haven. Thereſthorp, Lincolnſhire, N. of Alford. Thereſway, Lincolnſhire, SE. of Caſtor. Therleſtouch, Derbyſhire, in the Peak, near the 3 ſhire-ſtones.

THERMIA, an iſland of the Archipelago, near the Gulf of Engia, about 12 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. It is not ſo mountainous as ſome of the other iſlands and is ſo called from its abounding in hot ſprings. The ſoil is very good, when well cultivated, and produces a great deal of barley, wine, and figs, with fine ſilk, cotton, wax, and honey. Partridges are in great plenty. The principal town, of the ſame name, contains 15 or 16 churches, and ſeveral convents, and is the reſidence of a Greek biſhop. The Greek inhabitants of the iſland are computed at 16,000. Lat. 37. 31. N. lon. 24. 59. E.

Therverton, Devonſhire, NE. of Crediton. Therverton, or Thaverton, Devonſhire, N. of Exeter, and on the ſame river, a great thoroughfare.

THESALY. See JANNA.

*THETFORD, a town in Norfolk, containing ſeveral ſtreets of well-built houſes, but the ſtreets are not paved. It was formerly the metropolis of the kingdom of the Eaſt Angles; and in the 12th century, the ſee of a biſhop, and a place of great note, when it had 20 churches, of which only two now remain, 5 markets, 24 ſtreets, beſides lanes, 6 hoſpitals, and 8 monaſteries, ſeveral ruins of which are yet viſible. The town then lay wholly on the Suffolk ſide of the river, which now contains but a few houſes. It had formerly alſo a mint, which has produced a great number of Anglo Saxon and Engliſh coins, from the time of Athelſtan. The chief magiſtrate found here at the Norman conqueſt, was ſtiled a conſul; from whence ſome ſuppoſe it to have been a Roman town. The Lent aſſizes for the county are held in its Guildhall, a fine old building of black flint. The chief manufacture is in wool combing, woollen cloth, and paper. It is ſituated in a pleaſant, open country, on two navigable rivers, the Thet and Leſſer Ouſe, (the former of which runs through the town, and divides Suffolk from Norfolk, and the latter was rendered navigable to Lynn, by an act of parliament, in the reign of Charles II.) 29 miles SW. of Norwich, 30 miles SSE. of King's-Lynn, and 80 NNE. of London. Market on Saturday.

Thetford, Cambridgeſhire, SE. of Ely. Theydon, Bois, Garnon, and Mont, Eſſex, three villages in Epping Foreſt, W. of the Rodings.

THIANCOURT, a town in the dept. of the Meurthe, 15 miles SW. of Metz.

THIBERVILLE, a town in the dept. of the Eure, 9 miles E. of Liſieux.

THIBET, or GREAT THIBET, a large country of Aſia, conſidered by moſt geographers as part of Tartary, and extending from the ſource of the Indus to the borders of China, and from Hindooſtan to the deſerts of Cobio. The length from E. to W. is about 1500 miles, and the breadth unequal and not known. This country is one of the higheſt in Aſia; it being a part of that elevated tract which gives riſe not only to the rivers of India and China, but alſo to thoſe of Siberia and Tartary. It is divided into three parts, Upper, Middle, and Lower Thibet. The Upper lies toward the ſources of the Ganges and Burrampooter; the Middle is that in which Laſſa, the capital, is ſituated; and the Lower, that which borders on China. Little Thibet is ſituated between Upper Thibet and Caſhgur; and is rather a dependency of the latter than of Great Thibet. Conſidering the exceedingly rough and ſterile ſtate of the country of Thibet, and the ſeverity of its climate, from its wonderful elevation; it is aſtoniſhing, Major Rennel obſerves, to find its inhabitants in a high ſtate of civilization; their their houſes lofty and built of ſtone; and the uſeful manufactures in ſome degree of improvement. All theſe advantages they probably owe to their vicinity to the Chineſe. The Thibetians are governed by the grand lama, or delai lama, who is not only ſubmitted to by them, but is alſo the ſovereign pontiff of numberleſs tribes of Tartars, in Chineſe and independent Tartary. Princes, as well as the meaneſt of the people, are aſſiduous in paying their court to the great lama, and ſubmit to the ſame debaſing, ſervile ceremonies. He never returns any ſalute; never pulls off his hat; nor ever ſtirs from his ſeat; (a large and magnificent cuſhion, placed on a kind of altar, on which he ſits croſs-legged) he only lays his hands upon the heads of his ſuperſtitious adorers, who thereby fancy they obtain the remiſſion of all their ſins. They are perſuaded that Fo lives in him; that he knows, ſees, and underſtands all things, without aſking any queſtions, or receiving any information; and that if at any time he does ſo, it is merely for form's ſake, and in order to leave the infidel and ill-deſigning no room to complain. In a word, they believe him to be immortal, and endowed with all knowledge and virtue. Every year they come from different parts to worſhip, and make rich offerings at his ſhrine. Even the emperor of China, who is of a Tartar race, does not fail to acknowledge the lama, in his religious capacity, although, as a temporal ſovereign, the lama himſelf is, in ſome reſpects, tributary to that emperor. The opinion of the moſt orthodox Thibetians is, that when the grand lama ſeems to die, either of old age or infirmity, his ſoul, in reality, only quits a crazy habitation, to look for another younger or better; and it is diſcovered again in the body of ſome child, by certain tokens known only to the lamas or prieſts, in which order he always appears. In 1774, the grand lama was an infant, who had been diſcovered ſome time before by the tayoſhoo lama, who, in authority and ſanctity of character, is next to the grand lama, and, during his minority, acts as chief. Theſe lamas, who form the moſt numerous, as well as the moſt powerful body in the ſtate, appear to have the prieſthood entirely in their hands; and moreover, they fill up many monaſtic orders, which are held in great veneration among them. The reſidence of the grand lama is at Pateli, or Putala, a vaſt palace, on a mountain, near the banks of the Burrampooter, about 7 miles from Laſſa. Beſides the great lama, who is the head of their religion, and ſovereign of Thibet, there are other princes in the country, who have cities and many ſubjects under them; theſe wear the lama habit, and are called officers of the great lama, though they are only ſubject to him as far as they themſelves pleaſe. In many places are large pagodas, in which the lamas of diſtinction reſide. The religion of Thibet has, in ſome reſpects, a great affinity to that of the Indian Brahmins. The Thibetians have a great veneration for the cow, and highly reſpect alſo the waters of the Ganges, the ſource of which they believe to be in heaven. The Sunniaſſes, or Indian pilgrims, often viſit Thibet as a holy place; and the lama always maintains a body of 2 or 300 of them in his pay. The temporal government of Thibet, however, has not been always poſſeſſed by the great lama. At the beginning of the laſt century, Thibet was ruled by a king, and the territories ſubject to the great lama were not very large. The fort of Dellamacolla, which commands the principal paſs through the Bootan Mountains, being taken by ſtorm by captain Jones, in 1773; the fame of this exploit induced the Thibetians to ſend an embaſſy to the Bengal government, and in 1774, the Engliſh Eaſt India Company made a treaty with the lama.

Thickbroom, Staffordſhire, SE. of Lichfield, on a river that runs into the Tame. Thickley, E. and W. Durham, S. of Biſhop Auckland.

THIEL, or TIEL, a town of Guelderland, ſituated in a ſmall iſland called TIELER WEERT, on the N. ſide of the Wahal, in a marſhy country, the air of which is reckoned unwholeſome, 15 miles W. of Nimeguen.

THIERS, a town in the dept. of the Puy de Dome, famous for its ſtatuary, hardware, cutlery, paper, cards, &c. It is ſo remarkably ſeated on the ſide of a hill, that on which ever ſide it is viewed, one half of the town is never ſeen, from which circumſtance it is ſaid to derive its name, and is 22 miles E. of Clermont.

Thimbleby, Lincolnſ. NW. of Horncaſtle. Thimblethorp, Norfolk, near Repeham. Thimum, Northumb. in Hertleſheved. Thingdon, or Findon, Northamptonſhire, NW. of Higham Ferrers. Thingwall, Cheſhire, near Woodchurch, between the Dee and Merſey. Thirſk, Yorkſhire, near Northallerton.

THIONVILLE, a conſiderable town in the dept. of Moſelle, once the reſidence of the kings of Auſtraſia. It was taken by ry the Prince of Conde, in 1643, after he battle of Rocroy, and finally ceded to France by the treaty of the Pyrenees. It s advantageouſly ſeated on the river Moelle, over which it has a bridge, defended by a horn-work, 14 miles N. of Metz, nd 195 NNE. of Paris.

Thirkleby, Yorkſ. near Thirſk. Thirkley, Yorkſ. NE. of Northallerton. Thirley, Yorkſ. SW. of Helmeſley. Thirlſby, Yorkſhire, NE. of Thirſk. Thirwall-Caſtle, Northumberland, NE. of Brampon, on the Picts' Wall, where it croſſes he Tippil, near the Irthing, on the borlers of Cumberland. Here the Scots nade gaps in the wall to force their paſſige into England, from which gaps, this part of it was called Thirlwall; the Saxon ignifying the ſame as the words murus perforatus, in Latin. The caſtle which ſtands cloſe by the N. ſide of the wall, is about 20 yards long and 12 broad, with walls 9 feet thick; it has been curiouſly vaulted underneath, and on the top are 6 little turrets. The floor of one of the apartments was lately cleared, and diſcovered to be of ſingular conſtruction, conſiſting of 3 tiers of flags, laid upon ſand. The only light admitted, is through apertures as narrow as thoſe in the ſtair-caſe of ancient caſtles. The whole ſtructure, indeed, carries the appearance of a horrid, gloomy dungeon.

* THIRSK, a ſmall town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, with a ſpacious market-place. It is 20 miles NW. of York, and 220 N. by W. of London. Market on Monday.

Thirſton, E. and W. Northumb. near the river Coquet, SW. of Warkworth. Thiſſelton, Rutland, in the road from York to Stamford. Thiſtendale, Yorkſ. SW. of York-Woulds. Thiſtleton, Lancaſhire, NW. of Kirkham. Thiſtleworth; ſee Iſleworth.

THIVA, or STIBES, anciently THEBES, an ancient and celebrated town of Greece, in Livadia, with a biſhop's ſee. It was formerly very large, and yet is 3 miles in circumference, but full of ruins. The preſent walls appear very ancient, and have ſquare towers at convenient diſtances, built of hewn ſtone, with great regularity and exactneſs. The houſes are higher, and better built, than is uſual in other towns of Greece. It contains 4 or 5000 inhabitants, who are half Turks and half Chriſtians. It is now famous for a fine ſort of white clay, of which they make bowls for pipes after the Turkiſh faſhion. They are never burnt, but dry naturally, and become as hard as a ſtone. Here are two moſques, and ſeveral Greek churches. The air of the country about Thebes is thick and foggy, whence the inhabitants of ancient Bœotia were accounted dull and phlegmatic. It is ſituated on a riſing ground, between two ſmall rivers, ſuppoſed to be the Iſmenus and Dirce of the ancients. 28 miles WNW. of Athens, and 290 SW. of Conſtantinople.

Thoby, Eſſex, in Mountnaiſing pariſh.

THOISSEY, a town in the department of Ain, with a handſome college. It is ſituated in a fertile country, near the rivers Saone and Chalerone, 20 miles W. of Bourg, and 200 SE. of Paris.

Tholthorp, Rutland, NW. of Stamford.

THOMAS, ST. an iſland of Africa, lying under the equator in 8 deg. E. lon. It was diſcovered in 1460, and belongs to the Portugueſe. It is almoſt round, and is about 30 miles in circumference. The climate is hot, moiſt, and unwholeſome for Europeans, although the natural inhabitants often complete a full century. The ſoil is well-watered with freſh rivers and rivulets, and amazingly fertile, producing the fruits of every denomination of the warm climates, in the utmoſt perfection, with little labour or expence. It abounds alſo with a variety of animals, tame and wild. The rivers, as well as the ſurrounding ſea, are ſtocked with an incredible variety of fiſh, from the whale down to the ſmalleſt fiſh that ſwims. It conſiſts chiefly of hills intermixed with valleys, which in their rainy, or rather foggy ſeaſons, are conſtantly filled with a thick, fetid, ſultry fog, intolerable to Europeans. However, it agrees perfectly well with the cattle, which are larger and finer here than on the Gold Coaſt of Guinea. In a word, the iſland might equal any ſpot on the globe, did the temperature correſpond with the abundance of its trees, plants, ſhrubs, fruits; and animals, as well as the diverſity and beauty of the landſcapes.

Thomas, St. Cornwall, near Launceſton. Thomas, St. Devonſhire, SW. of Exeter. Thomas, St. Herts, 2 miles from Ickland. Thomas, St. near Stafford.

THOMAS, See TOMAR.

THOMAS, ST. a ſtately town or city of Hindooſtan, on the coaſt of Coromandel, erected by the Portugueſe, partly on the ruins, and partly in the neighbourhood of Meliapour, or Mailabour, once a powerful city. It was formerly, and is ſtill inhabited by weavers and dyers, and is noted for making the beſt coloured ſtuffs in India. The excellence of the dye is attributed to the peculiar quality of the water, ter, which ariſes out of ſprings, in white, ſandy ground, without any intermixture of clay. St. Thomas the Apoſtle was buried, it is ſaid, here; the Portugueſe pretend to ſhow his ſepulchre on the top of a neighbouring mountain, over which they have built a chapel that ſerves as a landmark to veſſels at ſea. The city had 7 gates, and was naturally very ſtrong; yet the Moors took it after a long ſiege, and are ſtill in poſſeſſion. The road is very ſafe from April to September, when the S. and SE. winds blow, but not in the other ſeaſon. It is about 3 miles S. of Madras.

THOMAS, ST. an iſland of the Weſt Indies, the principal of the Virgin iſlands, about 18 miles in circumference. It abounds with millet, manioc, potatoes, and moſt ſorts of fruits and herbage, eſpecially ſugar and tobacco. Here are excellent kids, and a great variety of wild fowl, but from the number of people, and great plenty of money here, proviſions are uſually dear. Here is a ſafe and commodious harbour, with two natural mounds upon it, calculated, as it were, for placing two batteries for the defence of its entrance. Nearly in the centre of the harbour is a ſmall fort, without ditch or outworks. About 50 or 60 paces W. of it the town begins, which conſiſts chiefly of one ſtreet, with the Daniſh factory at the end, a large building, with convenient warehouſes for the ſtowage of goods, and the reception of ſlaves, in which article they trade with the Spaniards. On the right ſide of this factory is the Brandenburg quarter, as it is called, conſiſting of two little ſtreets, full of French refugees from Europe and the other iſlands, under the protection of the Danes. Moſt of the houſes are of brick, being built and tiled in the Dutch faſhion, yet but of one ſtory, on account of the foundation, where before they dig to the depth of 3 feet, they meet with water and quickſands. The trade of this iſland, particularly in time of peace, is very conſiderable, it being the ſtaple for ſuch traffic as the French, Engliſh, Dutch, and Spaniards dare not carry on publicly in their own iſlands; and in war, the privateers commonly bring their prizes hither for ſale. In 1688, the Daniſh factory here was attacked and plundered by the French buccaneers. Lat. 18. 22. N. lon. 64. 50. W.

THOMAS, ST. a town of Cumana, in S. America, a town of Guatimala, in Mexico, a town of S. Carolina, 21 miles N. of Charles Town, and a town of the iſland of Cuba, 130 miles WSW. of the Havannah.

Thomas Street, in Roſcommon, Connaught. Thomaſtown, in Tipperary, Munſter.

*THOMASTOWN, a town of Kilkenny, in Leinſter, ſeated on a ſmall river that runs into the Nore, 8 miles SE. of Kilkenny, and 58 SW. of Dublin.

THOMOND, an ancient diſtrict of Ireland, containing the preſent county of Clare, in Munſter.

Thone, a river in Somerſetſhire, which paſſes by Taunton.

THONON, a town in the dept. of Mont Blanc, capital of Chablais, ſeated on the Lake of Geneva, 18 miles NE. of Geneva.

Thoraldby, Yorkſhire, on the Tees, S. of Stockton. Thoreſby, Lincolnſ. near Burwell. The waters deſcending from the neighbouring hills join here, and form a conſiderable ſtream, which diſcharges itſelf into the ocean at Saltfleet. Thorganby, Lincolnſhire, between Market-Raiſin and Grimſby. Thorganby, Yorkſhire, between Cawood and Pocklington. Thorington, Eſſex, NW. of St. Oyth. Thorington, Suffolk, S of Blithborough. Thorkley, Northumberl. W. of Newcaſtle. Thorley, Iſle of Wight, in Weſt Medina. Thorley Hall, Hertfordſhire, with a cauſey that leads to Biſhop's-Stortford. Thormanby, Yorkſ. SE. of Thirſk. Thormarton, Glouceſterſhire, near Cirencester. Thorn, Devonſhire, in Thornbury pariſh.

THORN, a city of Weſtern Pruſſia, formerly Hanſeatic, the chief city of Poliſh Pruſſia, ſtrongly fortified, and of very conſiderable trade, but from the river becoming wider, and conſequently ſhallower, with other misfortunes, it has declined from its flouriſhing condition. Its ſoap and gingerbread are ſtill in great requeſt, and great quantities of them are exported. In 1793, the Pruſſian troops took poſſeſſion of Thorn, from which time it has been annexed to the dominions of that king. It is ſeated on the river Viſtula, over which is a remarkable bridge, 70 miles S. of Dantzick.

Thorn, Devonſ. in Thornbury pariſh. Thorn and Park, Yorkſ. W. of Scarborough. Thornaby, Yorkſ. SE. of Stockton upon-Tees. Thornage, Norfolk, SW. of Holt. Thornalby, Yorkſhire, SW. of Midlam. Thorney Iſland, Hants, at the mouth of Chicheſter Harbour.

THORNEY ISLAND, in a bay of the Engliſh Channel, on the coaſt of Suſſex, at the mouth of the river Lavant. It is about about 4 miles in circumference, and has a village of the ſame name.

Thornborough, near Buckingh. Thornborough, Yorkſ. NE. of Maſham. Thornburn, Northumb. E. of Yarrow. Thornbury, Devonſ. near Shepwaſh. Thornbury, Glouceſterſ. NW. of Broomyard.

THORNBURY, a town of Glouceſterſhire, ſeated near the Severn, 24 miles SSW. of Glouceſter, and 121 W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Thoraby, Northamp. near Cold Aſhby. Thorncliff, Staff. NE. of Leek. Thorncomb, Devonſ. NE. of Axminſter. Thornet, Bedfordſ. near North Hill. Thornden, Kent, between Whitſtaple, Hern, and Swalecliff. Thornden, Kent, near Frendſbury. Thorndon, Suffolk, S. of Eye. Thorndon, Warw. in Nether Eatington pariſh. Thorndon, E. and W. Eſſex, between Brentwood and Horndon-on-the Hill.

THORNE, a populous and improving town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire. The marſh lands, or turf-moor fens, to the E. and NE. of this town, have been lately incloſed. The marſhes alſo have been drained, and the ground much ſunk, by a cut, 10 miles in length, from this place to Gowle, or Gowld-Hall. It is ſituated on the river Don, 31 miles S. of York, and 166 N. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Thorne, Lincolnſ. near the Dun, in Axholm-Iſle. Thorne, Somerſ. has a bridge over the Parret to Muchney-Iſland. Thorne, Somerſetſ. near Yeovil. Thorne, Coucon, Somerſ. near Taunton. Thorne, St. Margaret's, Somerſ. SW. of Wellington. Thorner, Yorkſ. W. of Brawham-moor. Thornerlet, Durham, NW. of Raenſworth. Thornes, Staff. near Shenton. Thorney, Northamp. NE. of Peterborough. Thorney, Nott. NE. of Normanton. Thorney, Suſſex, near Selſey. Thorney-Abbey, Camb. NW. of Ely, formerly called Ankeridge, from the Anchorets' monaſtery, which the Danes deſtroyed. William of Malmſbury ſays, that Bedford Level, in which this abbey is ſituated, though ſince overflowed by the ſea, was, in his time, the very picture of paradiſe, abounding with tall trees, verdant meadows, richly interſperſed with orchards, vineyards, and fine buildings. The town has a trifling market. Thorney, Canes, Staff. E. of Paget's Bromley. Thorney, Lee, Staff. N. of Marbrook. Thorney, Magna, Iſle of Wight, in Weſt Medina. Thornford, Dorſetſhire, 2 miles and a half SW. of Sherborn. Thornaſton, Northumb. near Beltingham. Thorngumbold, Yorkſhire, S. of Headon. Thornham, Kent, 2 miles and a half NE. of Maidſtone. Thornham, Lincolnſhire, NW. of Glandford-bridge. Thornham, Norfolk, SE. of St. Edmund's Chapel and Point. Thornham, Parva, Suffolk, near Eye. Thornham-Tower, Northumberland, W. of Rothbury. Thornhaugh, Northampton, near Wanſford-Bridge. Thornhill, Dorſetſhire, W. of Stourminſter. Thornhill, Staffordſhire, NE. of Paget's Bromley. Thornhill, Yorkſ. near Wakefield.

THORNHILL, a town of Dumfrieſſhire, where fairs are held, chiefly for woollen yarn, and coarſe woollen ſtuffs. It is ſituated on the river Nith, 15 miles N. by W. of Dumfries.

Thornholm, Yorkſhire, near Kilham. Thornhope, Northumb. near Kirkhaugh. Thornley, Durham, between Durham and Hartlepool. Thornthorp, Yorkſhire, S. of New Malton. Thornthwaite, Cumb. near Keſwick. Thornthwaite Foreſt and Hall, Weſtm. SW. of Roſgill. Thornthwaite, Yorkſ. W. of Ripley. Thornton, Bucks, between Stony-Stratford and Buckingham. Thornton, Cheſh. on a branch of the Gowy. Thornton, Durham, 3 miles from Stockton. Thornton, or Thornton, Dorſetſ. near Marnhull. Thornton, Lanc. in Poulton pariſh, in Amounderneſs. Thornton, Leiceſ. near Bagworth. Thornton, Linc. near Horncaſtle. Thornton, SSE. of Barrow and Barton upon Humber, had an abbey, of which the gate-houſe is ſtill perfect, as is a rich carved wooden gate, of Gothic work. Over the gate are ſeveral ſtatues and two rooms, and four hexagon towers at the angles. It appears to have been very magnificent and extenſive, and was a complete piece of ancient fortification, ſurrounded with deep ditches and high ramparts, to keep off pirates and robbers. Thornton College, on a river that runs to the Humber, was erected with ſome of the reſerved eſtate of the monaſtery. Thornton, Northumberl. W. of Alnwick. Thornton, Yorkſ. SW. of Pocklington. Thornton, Yorkſhire, near Sheriff Hutton. Thornton, Yorkſ. SE. of Thirſk. Thornton, Yorkſhire, near Malton. Thornton, Yorkſhire, SE. of Pickering. Thornton, Yorkſ. NE. of Yarum. Thornton, Yorkſ. SW. of Bradford. Thornton, Yorkſ. near Skipton, in Craven. Thornton, Biſhop, Yorkſ. N. of Ripley. Thornton, Childer, Cheſhire, E. of Neſton. Thornton, E. and W. Northumberland, W. of Morpeth. Thornton-Hough, Cheſ. between the Dee and Merſey. Thorton-in Lonſdale, Yorkſ.

W. of Langſtredale Chace. Thornton-in-the-Beans, Yorkſ. SE. of Northallerton. Thornton-in-the-Moor, Yorkſ. NW. of Thirſk. Thornton in the Street, Yorkſ. N. of Thirſk. Thornton Ruſt, Yorkſ. SE. of Aſkrig. Thornton Stewart, Yorkſh. E. of Midlam. Thornton Watlas, Yorkſ. NE. of Maſham. Thornwood, Eſſex, W. of the Lavers. Thorold's Hall, Eſſex, S. of the Rodings. Thoroton, Nott. SE. of Bingham, ſtands on the little river Snite, which runs into the Trent at Newark. Thorp, Derbyſhire, SW. of Wirkſworth. Thorp, Dorſetſ. half a mile S. of Notton. Thorp, Durham, NW. of Stockton-upon-Tees. Thorp, Eſſex, near Tendring. Thorp, Leiceſ. SE. of Hinckley. Thorp, Lincolnſhire, near Wainfleet. Thorp, Lincolnſ. W. of Tatterſhal. Thorp, Norfolk, 6 miles SW. of Yarmouth. Thorp, near Norwich. Thorp, Northamp. NE. of Thrapſton. Thorp, Northam. a mile from Oldwincle. Thorp, Nott. SE. of Gotham. Thorp, Nottingh. a hamlet of Matterſey. Thorp, Nott. by Newark. Thorp, Rutland. in Seyton pariſh. Thorp, Staff. NE. of Tamworth. Thorp, Suffolk, in Aldringham pariſh. Thorp, Suffolk, N. of Aldborough. Thorp, Suffolk, NW. of Bilderſton. Thorp, Suff. E. of Debenham. Thorpe, Surry, near Egham. Thorp, Warw. near Southam. Thorp, Yorkſhire, NE. of Kilham. Thorp, Yorkſ. SE. of Pocklington. Thorp, Yorkſ. near Howden. Thorp, Yorkſ. SE. of Barnard-Caſtle. Thorp, Yorkſhire, near Richmond. Thorp, Yorkſhire, near Rippon. Thorp, Yorkſ. NW. of Rotheram. Thorp-Abbot's, Norfolk, SW. of Harleſton. Thorp-Acre, Leiceſ. NW. of Loughborough. Thorp-Arch, Yorkſ. 9 miles from Wetherby, is a manor, bounded on the S. and W. for 4 miles and a half together, with the river Wharfe. Thorp Arnold, Leiceſ. SW. of Waltham-on-the-Would. Thorp-Baſſet, Yorkſ. NE. of New Malton. Thorp-Biſhop's, Yorkſ. E. Riding. Thorp-Black, Oxfordſ. NE. of Amerſden. Thorp-Bulmer, Durham, NW. of Hartlepool. Thorp-Conſtantine, Staffordſ. near Clifton-Camville. Thorp, Eaſt, Eſſex, between Kelvedon and Colcheſter. Thorp-Harris, Yorkſ. NW. of Rippon. Thorp-in-the Fallow, NW. of Lincoln. Thorp-Land, Norfolk, S. of Great Walſingham. Thorp, Little, Durham, near Ealington and the coaſt. Thorp-Lodge, Eſſex, SE. of Tendring. Thorp, or Long Thorp, Northampt. between Caſtor and Peterborough, a ſeat now, or late of Sir Robert Bernard. Here are ſeveral coloſſal ſtatues of great antiquity, in marble. Thorp Lubnam, Northampt. by Harborough. Thorp-Market, Norfolk, N. of North Waltham. Thorp Malſworth, Northampt. near Kettering. Thorp-on-the-Hill, Yorkſ. S. of Leeds. At a neighbouring place, called Lingwell Yate, certain clay moulds were found, in 1697, which, by the impreſſion, are ſuppoſed to have been invented for counterfeiting Roman coins. Thorp-on-the-Mount, SW. of Lincoln. Thorp Parva, Norfolk, SW. of Harleſton. Thorp Rove, Yorkſhire, NE. of Maſham. Thorp-Sachfield, Leiceſ. SW. of Melton-Mowbray. Thorp Salvin, Yorkſ. SE. of Rotheram. Thorp Stapleton, Thorp-juxta-Aquam, or Thorp Hall, Yorkſ. W. Riding. The Roman Via Vicinalis, leading from the great military road on Bramham Moor, is viſible here. Thorp Underwood, Northamp. near Rothwell. Thorp-Willoughby, Yorkſ. near Selby. Thorſet-Hall, Derbyſ. in the High Peak.

THOUARS, a conſiderable town in the dept. of the Two Sevres. The caſtle of its ancient dukes, at one end of the town, is ſeated on a rock, ſurrounded by walls 120 feet in height, which, from the whiteneſs of the ſtone, might be ſuppoſed not more than 10 years old. It is ſeated on the river Thoue (which runs into the Loire, a little below the town of St. Florent) 33 miles SSE. of Angers, and 162 SW. of Paris.

Thowerſby, Nottingh. on the Meden, W. of Tuxford. Thrandeſton, Suffolk, NW. of Eye.

THRAPSTON, a town of Northamptonſhire, ſeated on the river Nen, over which it has a handſome bridge, (and which having been made navigable by parliament, boats came up to it for the firſt time in November, 1737) in a pleaſant valley, with good water, air, and ſoil, well adapted as a retreat for one who chuſes a country life, 18 miles NE. of Northampton, and 75 NNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Thraſtonby, Yorkſhire, near Scarborough. Thraxton, Norfolk, W. of Wirton. Threapland, Cumberland, a hamlet in the pariſh of Torpenhow.

THREE CASTLE HEAD, on the coaſt of Cork, Munſter, near Mizen-Head.

THREE HILLS ISLAND, one of the New Hebrides, in the S. Pacific Ocean, S. of Mallicollo. It is about 12 miles in circumference.

Three Lords, Carmarthenſhire, in S. Wales.

THREE KINGS, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, near the N. coaſt of New Zealand, Zetland, diſcovered by Taſman. Lat. 34. 12. S. lon. 172. 12. E.

Three-Mile-Water, in Carrickfergus-Bay, in Down, Ulſter. Three-Siſters, three remarkable hills on the iſthmus between Smerewick and Ferritor's-Creek, in Kerry, Munſter.

Threlkeld, Cumberl. NE. of Keſwick. Threſhfield, Yorkſ. W. Riding, on the river Wharfe, NW. of Barden-Tower. Thriberg, Yorkſ. on the Dun, oppoſite to Rowmarſh. Thrickby, Norfolk, W. of Caſtor. Thrimby, Weſtm. in Morland pariſh. Thrin, a river in Norfolk, which runs into the ſea at or near Yarmouth. Thrinkſton, Leiceſterſ. E. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Thriſthorp, Linc. SW. of Market-Raiſin. Throcking, Herts, near Buntingford. Throckiow, or Throple, Northumb. W. of Morpeth. Throggy, a river in Monmouthſhire, which runs into the Severn at Trinity-Chapel, about four miles SW. of Chepſtow. Throgmerton, Worceſterſ. in the pariſh of Pladbury and Vale of Evetham. Throp, Dortſetſ. near Piddleton. Thropton, or Thropleton, Northumberl. W. of Rothbury. Throſſelton, Devonſ. on the Thruſhel, NE. of Lifton. Thruſton, Upper and Lower, Durham, W. of Hartlepool. Thrówley, Devonſ. on the Taw, N. of Chegford. Thrówley, Kent, 4 miles S. of Feverſham. Thrówley, Staff. near Waterfall, where the river Manifold receives the Hanſe out of the ground. Thruxton, Northumberl. W. of Rithbury. Thrumpton, Nott. at the conflux of the Trent and Soar, SW. of Nottingham. Thruſhel, a river in Devonſhire, which runs into the Tamar, oppoſite Launceſton. Thruſhington, Durham, NE. of Biſhop-Auckland. Thruſhfield, Staff. between Molecop-Hill and Talk-on-the-Hill. Thruſthorp, Lincolnſhire, N. of Alford. Thruxton, Hampſhire, near Weyhill.

THUIN, a town of Liege, ſeated on the river Sambre, 8 miles SW. of Charleroy.

THULE. See FULA.

Thule, a river of Glamorganſhire, which runs into the Lloghor, near its mouth.

THULE, SOUTHERN, a part of Sandwich Land, in the S. Atlantic Ocean, diſcovered by Capt. Cook, in 1775. It is high and mountainous, and was entirely covered with ſnow in the beginning of February, which anſwers to Auguſt in the northern hemiſphere. It lies in lat. 59. 54. S. lon. 27. 40. W. which being the moſt ſoutherly land yet diſcovered, gave occaſion for its name.

THUN, a pretty large town of Bern, in Switzerland, with a caſtle, where the avoyer reſides. This is the place where they embark on the river Aar for Bern. It contains about 1200 inhabitants, who are chiefly employed in ſpinning and carding ſilk for the manufactures at Baſil, and is ſeated at the NW. extremity of the lake of the ſame name, partly in a ſmall iſland and partly on a hill, 20 miles SE. of Bern.

THUN, a lake in Bern, Switzerland, about 12 miles long and 2 and a half broad. To judge by the ſteepneſs of the lofty mountains by which it is bounded, it muſt be very deep. The borders are richly variegated, and preſent ſeveral fine points of view, greatly heightened by many ragged rocks riſing boldly from the edge of the water. It abounds with different kinds of fiſh, and the river Aar paſſes through it.

THUNDER BAY, a bay about 9 miles broad, at the NW. corner of Lake Huron, in N. America; ſo called from the frequent thunder that is heard there.

Thunderfield, Surry, near Horley. Thunderſley, Eſſex, near Walden. Thunderſleigh, Eſſex, SW. of Rayleigh. Thundridge, Hertfordſ. 2 miles NE. of Ware, and S. of the river Rib. Thunnock, a mile N. of Gainſborough, now or late the ſeat of the Hickman family.

THUR, a river of Swiſſerland, which riſes in the S. part of the county of Toggenburg, and runs into the Rhine, about 7 miles SSW. of Schaffhauſen.

Thurcaſton, Leiceſ. S. of Mountſorrel. Here they ſhow the houſe where Biſhop Latimer was born. Thureſby, Cumberl. between Wigton and Carliſle. Thurgarton, Nottingh. S. of Southwell.

THURGAU, a very ancient landgraviate of Swiſſerland, which lies along the river Thur, bounded on the E. by the Lake of Conſtance, on the N. by Suabia and the ſame lake, on the S. by St. Gal, and on the W. by the cantons of Zurich and Schaffhauſen. It is the largeſt bailiwick in Swiſſerland, as well as the moſt pleaſant. The country is extremely populous and well cultivated, containing 6 towns, with ſeveral handſome burghs, a great number of chateaux, and more than 170 villages. About one third of the inhabitants are catholics, ſubject, in eccleſiaſtical affairs, to the biſhop of Conſtance. The territorial ſovereignty belongs to the eight ancient cantons of Zurich, Bern, Lucerne, Schweitz, Underwalden, Lug, and Glaris, who ſend a bailiff here alternately; and ſince the year 1449, the cantons of Freyburg and Soleure have alſo obtained a ſeat in its criminal court. Frauenfield is the capital.

Thurgoland, Yorkſ. SW. of Barneſley.

THURINGIA, a circle of Upper Saxony, forming the N. part of the landgraviate of the ſame name. It is about 78 miles in length, and 75 in breadth, containing 60 towns, and 674 villages. It is well watered by ſeveral rivers, and exports a great part of its natural productions, which are excellent wheat, fine timber-wood, wines, fennel, aniſe, ſaffor, horſes, horned cattle, and ſheep. The modern Thuringia lies nearly between the rivers Swale and Werra, but the ancient country extended to the Elbe, and compriſed a large ſhare of Franconia, Heſſe, &c. In the 6th century, it was ſubjected by the Franks and Saxons, who divided it into N. and S. North Thuringia was, at length, annexed to Eaſtphalia, or the eaſtern part of the county of Saxony. Since the 13th century, the margraves of Meiſſen, who afterwards became electors of Saxony, have been in poſſeſſion of the landgraviate. In the 11th century it had dukes, counts, &c.

Thurland, Lanc. a little above Hornby-Caſtle, on the ſame river. It communicates with all the late inland navigations. Thurlaſton, Warwickſhire, SE. of Dunmore-Heath. Thurlebar, Cornwall, near Stratton. Thurlepot, Cumberland, near Keſwick.

* THURLES, a town of Tipperary, in Munſter, ſeated on the river Suir, which divides it into nearly two equal parts, 70 miles SW. of Dublin.

Thurleſton, SE. of Derby. Thurleſton, Devonſhire, near Kingſbridge. Thurley, 4 miles from Bedford. Thurlmere, a river in Cumb. which runs from a lake of the ſame name, into the Derwent, near Keſwick. Thurlow, Magna and Parva. Suff. on the Stour, N. of Haveril. Thurloxton, Somerſ. NE. of Taunton. Thurliſton, Leiceſ. NE. of Hinckley. Thurmaſton, NE. of Leiceſter. Thurnby, SE. of Leiceſter. Thurnby, Weſtm. N. of Shapp. Thurne, Norfolk, E. of South Walſham. Thurnham, S. of Lancaſter. Thurning, Huntingd. near Great Gidding and Luddington. Thurning, Norfolk, NE. of Foulſham. Thurnſco, Yorkſhire, 5 miles from Doncaſter. Thurrington, Suffolk, NW. of Dunwich. Thurrock, E. and W. Eſſex, near Gray's Thurrock. Thurſby, Lincolnſ. E. of Alford. Thurſby, Yorkſ. NE. of Malham. Thurſby, Cumberland, near Aikton. Thurſford, Norfolk, between Holt and Great Walſingham. Thurſlands, Yorkſhire, W. of Barneſley. Thurſley, Surry, in Witley pariſh.

THURSO, a ſea port of Caithneſſhire, ſituated on the N. coaſt, in Dunnett Bay; it has a conſiderable trade, and a manufactory of woollen and linen cloth. There is a ſalmon fiſhery at the mouth of the river Thurſo, and the cod fiſhery alſo gives employment to many.

Thurſtanceley, Dorſetſ. near Bridport. Thurſtanton, Cheſhire, on the Dee, near Hyle-Lake. Thurſtorp, Lincolnſ. SE. of Saltfleetby, by the ſea. Thurſton, Norfolk, between Loddon and Yarmouth. Thurſton, Suff. S. of Pakenham. Thurvaſton, Upper and Lower, Derbyſ. NE. of Boyleton. Thuſſington, Leiceſ. E. of Mountſorrel. Thuſton-Mere, a river in Cumb. and Lanc. which runs into the Foſſe near Crakeford. Thuxton, Norfolk, between E. Dereham and Windham. Thwaites Cumberl. in Millom pariſh, on the river Dudden. Thwaite, Cumb. W. of Penrith. Thwaite, Norfolk, SW. of Loddon. Thwaite, Yorkſ. E. of Keighley. Thwaites, Cumb. near Grayſtock-Caſtle. Thwayt, Norfolk, between Bacoſthorp and North Walſham. Thwayt, Suffolk, on the road between Ipſwich and Norwich. Thwing, Yorkſhire, N. of Kilham.

THYATIRA. See AKISSAT.

TIAGAR, a town of Hindooſtan, in the Carnatic, 50 miles WSW. of Pondicherry.

TIAGUANCO, a town of Omaſuios, in Buenos Ayres, S. America.

TIANO, or THEANO, a town of Lavora, in Naples, 15 miles N. of Capua.

Tibberton, Glouc. 4 miles SE. of Newent. Tibberton, Shropſhire, W. of Newport. Tibberton, NE. of Worceſter. Tibenham, Norfolk, SE. of New Buckenham.

TIBER, a river in Italy, which riſes in the Apenaine mountains, in the Florentino. It paſſes into the pope's territory, waſhes Borgo de St. Sepulchro, Citta di Caſtello, Perugio, Todi, Rome, &c. 10 miles below which laſt city, it falls into the Mediterranean Sea, at Oſtia. Tivere is its modern name.

Tiberthwate, Lancaſ. N. of Fourneſs-Fells. Tiberton, Hereſ. N. of the Golden Vale. Tibſhelf, Derbyſ. NE. of Alfreton. Tibsbery, Yorkſhire, N. of Bainton. Tichburn, Hampſhire, SW. of Alreford. Tichfield, a river in Hampſhire, which runs into the Engliſh Channel, E. of Hamble. Tichfield, Hants, E. of Southampton; has a bridge over the river Alre, and a good road below, called Tichfield Bay. On the ſite of its ancient abbey is Tichfield-Houſe, (or rather ſome handſome remains of it) erected in the reign of Henry VIII. Here King Charles I. was concealed in his flight from Hampton

an Court, in 1647; it was then one of he ſeats of the Earl of Southampton, where his mother lived with a ſmall family. Tichwell, Norfolk, W. of Burnham-Market.

TICKELL, an ancient town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, 5 miles S. of Doncaſter, and 155 N. by W. of London. It gives name to an honour or diſtinct liberty of very extenſive juriſdiction, and to which many manors owe ſuit and ſervice. Market on Saturday.

Tickencote, Rutland, 2 miles and a half from Stamford, within a quarter of a mile of the great N. road. It has one of the moſt ancient Saxon churches in the kingdom, and the arch between the chancel and nave is remarkably ſo. The E. end of it is decaying. Dr. Stukeley ſtyles it the entire oratory of Prince Peada, the founder of the firſt church at Peterborough abbey. Tickenhall, Derbyſ. 6W. of Kegworth. Tickenhall, Worc. near Bewdley. Tickham, Yorkſ. near Sheriff-Hutton-Caſtle. Tickmarſh, Northamp. NE. of Thrapſton. Ticknam, Somerſetſ. near Clevedon. Tickton, Yorkſ. NE. of Beverley. Tiddenham, Glouceſterſ. near Chepſtow. Tiddington, Warw. by Stratford-upon-Avon. Tide, or Tidi, a river in Cornwall, which riſes near Leſkard, and becomes navigable at Tidiford. About two miles lower, it waſhes St. Germains, and uniting with the Lynher, they both paſs into the Tamar, below Saltaſh. Tideringion, Cheſhire, in Macclesfield Foreſt.

TIDESWELL, a town of Derbyſhire, conſiſting, in general, of meanly built houſes, but with a large, handſome church, and a free-ſchool. It is noted for a ſpring that ebbs and flows at uncertain times, twice or thrice an hour, after great rains; but in dry ſummers it entirely ceaſes. This well is reckoned one of the wonders of the Peak. It is about a yard deep, and the ſame in breadth; the water riſes and falls about three quarters of a yard, and guſhes from ſeveral cavities at once, for the ſpace of five minutes. It is ſituated on a ſmall, clear ſtream, which runs through the town, 22 miles NW. of Derby, and 158 NNW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Tidmarſh, Berks, a mile from Theale and the Thames. Tidmington, Worceſterſhire, S. of Shipſton on Stour.

TIDORE, called TADURA, or DACO, by the natives, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, one of the Moluccas, 15 miles SE. of Ternate, and W. of Gilolo. It is about 30 miles in circumference, produces flax, and abounds in ſpices, particularly cloves. The air is reckoned more wholeſome here than at Ternate, from which iſland it lies about 15 miles SE. and W. of Gilolo. The woods and rocks that ſurround it, render it a place of defence. The Dutch have ſeveral forts on the iſland, though it has a king of its own, who poſſeſſes, likewiſe, ſome territory on the iſland of Gilolo. Lat. 1. 6. N. lon. 126. 0. E.

Tidwell, Devonſhire, in Budley pariſh. Here is a pool fed by ſprings that are continually bubbling up, and ſo warm, that when all the neighbouring ſprings are frozen, theſe are not.

TIEL, a town of Dutch Guelderland.

TIENCHAN, a town of Aſia, in Corea.

Tierkelly, in Down, Ulſter, 2 miles NE. of Rathfryland, where there is a good chalybeate ſpring.

TIERRA-DEL-ESPIRITU-SANTO, the moſt weſtern and largeſt iſland of the New Hebrides, in the S. Pacific Ocean, about 60 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It was diſcovered by Quiros, and viſited by Captain Cook, in 1774. The land is exceedingly high and mountainous, and in many places the hills riſe directly from the ſea. Except the cliffs and beaches, every part is covered with wood, or laid out in plantations. Beſide the Bay of St. Philip and St. Jago, on the north ſide of it, the iſles which lie along the S. and E. coaſt, form ſeveral good bays and harbours. Lat. 16. 0. S. lon. 166. 0. E.

TIERRA-DEL-FUEGO, ſeveral iſlands at the ſouthern extremity of America, ſeparated from the main land by the Straits of Magellan. They take their name from a volcano on the largeſt of them. They are all very barren and mountainous; but from what Mr. Forſter ſays, in his Voyage to the South Sea, the climate does not appear to be, at all times, ſo rigorous and tempeſtuous as it is repreſented in Anſon's Voyage. Upon the lower grounds and iſlands, that were ſheltered by the high mountains, he found ſeveral ſorts of trees and plants, and a variety of birds. Among the trees was Winter's bark-tree, and a ſpecies of arbutus, loaded with red fruit of the ſize of ſmall cherries, which were very well taſted. In ſome places there is alſo plenty of celery. Among the birds was a ſpecies of duck, of the ſize of a gooſe, which ran along the ſea with amazing velocity, beating the water with its wings and feet. It had a grey plumage, with a yellow bill and feet, and a few white quill feathers.

At the Falkland Iſlands it is called a leggerhead-duck. Among the birds are alſo plenty of geeſe and falcons. The rocks of ſome of the iſlands are covered with large muſcle-ſhells, the fiſh of which is well flavoured. The natives of this country are ſhort in their perſons, not exceeding 5 feet 6 inches at moſt, their heads large, their faces broad, their cheek-bones prominent, and their noſes flat. They have little brown eyes; their hair is black and lank, hanging about their heads in diſorder, and beſmeared with train-oil. On the chin they have a few ſtraggling ſhort hairs. Thoſe whom Mr. Foſter ſaw, had no other clothing than a ſmall piece of ſeal-ſkin, which hung from their ſhoulders to the middle of the back, being faſtened round the neck with a ſtring: the reſt of their body was perfectly naked. Their natural colour ſeems to be an olive brown, with a kind of gloſs, reſembling that of copper: but many of them diſguiſe themſelves with ſtreaks of red paint, and ſometimes, though ſeldom, with white. Their whole character is a ſtrange compound of ſtupidity, indifference and inactivity. Their inſtruments for fiſhing are a kind of fiſh-giggs. They live chiefly on ſeal's fleſh, and like the fat, oily part moſt. There is no appearance of any ſubordination among them; and from their indifference and inactivity, they ſeem rather content than very happy.

Tiffield, Northamp. NE. of Towceſter.

TIGAON, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, near the NW. coaſt of the iſland of Borneo. Lat. 6. 10. N. lon. 128. 42. E.

Tighe, Rutland, W. of Market-Overton.

TIGRE, a province in Abyſſinia, about 200 miles in length, and 120 in breadth. It lies neareſt to the market, that is, Arabia; and as all the merchandiſe deſtined to croſs the Red Sea muſt paſs through this province, the governor has the choice of all commodities, the ſtrongeſt male, the moſt beautiful female, the pureſt gold, the largeſt teeth of ivory, &c. wherewith to make his market.

TIGRIS, a river of Aſia, which riſes in the mountains of Armenia, and paſſing by Diarbekir, Moſul, and many other cities and towns, unites with the Euphrates, when both together fall into the Perſian Gulf below Baſſora.

Tikeford, Bucks, near Newport.

TILBORG, a town of Brabant, 10 miles S. of Bois-le-Duc. It is noted for a manufacture of cloth.

Tilbrook, Bedf. NW. of Kimbolton.

Tilbury, Eſſex, near Clare-Hall and the Yeoldame. Tilbury, Wilts, near Wardour Caſtle. Tilbury, Eaſt, Eſſex, by the Thames, to the E. of Tilbury Fort. It is ſuppoſed to be the place where the emperor Claudius croſſed the Thames, in purſuit of the Britons. In this pariſh is a field, called Cave Field, in which is a horizontal paſſage to one of the ſpacious caverns in the neighbouring pariſh of Chadwell. Of theſe Camden has given a ſketch in his Britannia; and he deſcribes them as in a chalk cliff, built very artificially of ſtone, to the height of ten fathoms. Derham meaſured three of the moſt conſiderable of them, and found the depth of one of them to be 50 feet, of another 70 feet, and of a third 80 feet. Their origin is too remote for inveſtigation. Tilbury Fort, lies more weſt, oppoſite Graveſend. It is a regular fortification, planned by Sir Martin Beckman, chief engineer to Charles II. with baſtions, the largeſt of any in England. It has a double moat, the innermoſt of which is 180 feet broad, with a counterſcarp, covered way, ravelines, and tenailles. On the platform are mounted 106 cannon, from 24 to 46 pounders each, beſides ſmaller ones planted between them; the baſtions and curtines are alſo planted with guns. Here is alſo a high tower, called the Block Houſe, which is ſaid to have been built in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. On the land ſide are two redoubts of brick; and here it is able to lay the whole country under water. The foundation of this fort is laid upon piles driven down in two ranges, one above the other, which reach below the channel of the river, and the lowermoſt being pointed with iron, enters the ſolid chalk rock which extends under the Thames to the chalk hills in Kent. Tilbury, Weſt, Eſſex, on the Thames, N. of Tilbury Fort; here the four Roman proconſular ways croſſed each other. In 630, this was the ſee of biſhop Ceadda, or St. Chad, who converted the Eaſt Saxons. It is ſituated by the marſhes, which are generally ſtocked with Lincolnſhire and Leiceſterſ. wethers, which are ſent hither in autumn, and feed here till Chriſtmas; and this is what the butchers call right March mutton. In this pariſh is a celebrated ſpring of alterative water, diſcovered in 1727. Tilehurſt, Berks, W. of Reading. Tilſworth, Bedfordſ. near Chalgrave. Tily, Dorſetſhire, in Great Mintern pariſh. Tiley, Dorſetſh. near Coſmore-Common. Tilford, Surry, SE. of Farnham. Tilgate and its Foreſt, Suſſex, between Crawley and Slaughham.

Till, a river of Northumberland, which runs into the Tweed, about 2 miles NE. of Coldſtream.

TILLEMONT, or TIRLEMONT, a village of Auſtrian Brabant, anciently a conſiderable flouriſhing city, which made one fourth quarter of the aſſembly of the ſtates; but it has ſuffered greatly by the calamities of war and by fire. It is ſeated on the river Geet, 9 miles SSE. of Louvain.

Tillingham, Eſſex, S. of Bradwell, by the ſea. Tillington, Staff. between Creſwell and Stafford. Tillington, Suſſex, near Petworth.

TILLY, a town in the dept. of the Meuſe, 9 miles S. of Verdun; a town in the dept. of Calvadoes, 19 miles W. of Caen; another town in the dept. of Calvadoes, 4 miles SSE. of Caen; a town of Brabant, 6 miles W. of Gemblours; and a town in the dept. of the Eure, 6 miles SE. of Grand Andelys.

Tilmeſton, Kent, 4 miles S. of Sandwich. Tilney, and Tilney Smeth, Norfolk, in the marſh land. Tilney, Nottingh. on the Idle, N. of Redford. Tilſey, or Tildſey, Lanc. in the pariſh of Leigh. Tilſhead, Wilts, 4 miles from E. Lavington. Till-Houſe, Devonſhire, near Rock-Bear. Tilſdown, Glouceſterſhire, near Durſley.

TILSIT, a large, rich and commercial town of Pruſſian Lithuania, containing about 600 houſes and 7000 inhabitants. It conſiſts chiefly of two long ſtreets, of a proportionable breadth, and a contiguous ſuburb called the Liberty. The flat country about Tilſit, is one of the moſt fertile ſpots in the kingdom. It is ſituated on the river Memel, 50 miles NE. of Koningſberg.

Tilſop, Shropſ. SW. of Clebury. Tilſtock, Shropſ. S. of Whitchurch. Tilſton, Cheſhire, NW. of Malpas. Tiltey, Eſſex, on the Chelmer, adjoining Broxted. Tilton-on the-Hill, Leiceſterſhire E. of Billeſdon.

Timahoe, in Queen's County, Leinſter.

TIMAN, a town, capital of a territory of the ſame name, in Popayan, S. America, abounding in fruits and paſtures. It is ſeated on a ſmall river, 100 miles from Popayan. Lat. 1. 35. N. lon. 73. 55. W.

Timbercomb, Somerſ. W. of Minehead. Timberdine, near the Severn, not far from Worceſter Timberland, Linc. W. of Tatterſhal. Timble, Great and Little, Yorkſhire, SW. of Ripley.

TIMERYCOTTA, a town and fortreſs of Golconda, 64 miles SE. of Hydrabad.

TIMOAN, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, with good anchorage almoſt all round it. It is inhabited by Malays, from whom ſhips may obtain wood and water. Lat. 2. 58. N. lon. 104. 35. E.

TIMOLEAGUE a decayed town of Cork, in Munſter, ſeated on an arm of the ſea, which formerly was navigable, but now is choked up with ſand.

Timolin, in Kildare, Leinſter.

TIMOR. See MOTIR.

TIMOR, an iſland of Aſia, in the Indian Ocean, in the S. of the Moluccas, and to the E. of the Iſland of Java; about 120 miles in length; and 37 in breadth. The principal productions are ſanders, or ſandal wood, wax, and honey, which the Dutch receive in exchange for coarſe linens, &c. They have a ſettlement at Copan, a town and fortreſs at the W. end of the Iſland, erected originally by the Portugueſe, but who were driven out by their implacable enemies the Dutch, in the year 1613. On the whole, the profits ariſing from this commerce, little more than defray the expences, and the ſettlement, in all probability, is continued, merely to keep out other nations. Lat. 10. 24. S. lon. 124. E.

TIMOR LAUT, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean. Lat. 1. 15. S. lon. 131. 50. E.

TIMOU, a town of Aſia, in the country of Thibet, 225 miles ESE. of Laſſa.

TIMOURKENG, or FORTRESS OF IRON, a town of Thibet, 60 miles WNW. of Latat.

Timperly, Cheſhire, near Mobberley. Timſborow, Somerſetſhire, near Penſford. Timſbury, Hants, NW. of Rumſey. Timworth, Suffolk, N. of Bury.

TINCHEBRAY, a town in the dept. of Orne, 22 miles SSW. of Falaiſe.

Tinedale, Northumb. a valley, watered by the North Tyne, which ſeparates it from Redeſdale on the N. It was made a barony by Henry I. Several battles have been fought here, whereof memorials remain, both Britiſh and Pictiſh.

TINEHALY, a town of Wicklow, in Leinſter, 38 miles from Dublin.

Tinehinch, or Tinnehinch, in Queen's County Leinſter. Tinehinch, in Carlow, Leinſter.

TINEVELLY. See PALAMCOTTA.

TING, a city of the ſecond rank of Pecheli, in China, ſeated near the river Tam, 107 miles SSW. of Peking.

Tinglaw, Yorkſ. NW. of Wakefield. Tingraſe, Devonſ. near Newton Buſhel. Tingrave, Bedfordſ. SW. of Ampthill. Tingtweezle, or Tinchtil, Cheſhire. SE. of Micklehurſt. Tingwick, SW. of Buckingham. Tinham, E. and W. Dorſetſhire.

SW. of Corfe-Caſtle. Tinhead, Wiltſhire, NE. of Weſtbury.

TINIAN, an iſland in the Indian Ocean, and one of the Marians. It is about 12 miles in length, and 6 in breadth. The ſoil is every where dry and healthy; and, being ſomewhat ſandy, is the leſs diſpoſed to rank and over-luxuriant vegetation. The land riſes in gentle ſlopes from the ſhore to the middle of the iſland, intermixed with valleys of an eaſy deſcent and beautifully diverſified with woods and meadows. The woods conſiſt of tall and well-ſpread trees, and the lawns are covered with clean, uniform turf, producing fine trefoil, and a variety of flowers. There are at leaſt 10,000 cattle here, that are all milk white, except their ears, which are brown or black. There are alſo a vaſt number of fowls, which are eaſily caught, and the fleſh of both are exceedingly good, beſide plenty of large, fierce, wild hogs, whoſe fleſh is delicate food. In the woods are prodigious quantities of cocoa nuts, cabbage trees, as alſo guavoes, limes, ſweet and ſour oranges, water melons, and bread-fruit. It grows on all parts of the branches, is more long than round, being covered with a rough rind. It is about ſeven or eight inches long, and is fitteſt for uſe when full grown, but not quite ripe. There are alſo vegetables proper for the ſcurvy; ſuch as water-melon, dandelion, creeping purſlain, mint, ſcurvy-graſs, and ſorrel. This iſland produces alſo cotton and indigo, and would certainly be of great value if it were properly cultivated. There are now no inhabitants, but there were 30,000 who were taken away by the Spaniards to other iſlands, and particularly Guam, a little before the arrival of commodore Anſon, in 1742. The climate is extremely healthful, according to the author of Anſon's Voyage, by whom a very pleaſing deſcription is given of the iſland; but according to commodore Byron, who viſited it in 1765, it is unhealthful in the rainy ſeaſon, and its delightful lawns and meadows were, by that time, covered with trees and underwood ſo thick, that in endeavouring to force a paſſage through, they were entangled and cut, as if with whip-cord. There are no ſtreams, but the water of the wells and ſprings is extremely good. The principal inconvenience ariſes from the number of muſkitoes, and other kinds of flies; and there are likewiſe inſects called ticks, which faſten upon the limbs and bodies of men, and bury their heads under their ſkin; with large, black ants, whoſe bite is very malignant, as well as other venomous reptiles and inſects without number. But the worſt of all is, that the road is inconvenient, and, in ſome ſeaſons, there is little ſecurity for a ſhip at anchor. Lat. 15. 0. N. lon. 146. 0. E.

Tinkleton, Dorſetſhire, SW. of Bere. Tinkley, Glouceſterſhire, in Nympſfield pariſh. Tinmere, Staffordſhire, on the Tame, NW. of Tamworth.

TINMOUTH, a ſea-port of Northumberland, ſeated at the mouth of the river Tyne, 9 miles E. of Newcaſtle. It has a large and ſtately caſtle, ſeated on a very high rock, inacceſſible on the ſea-ſide and well mounted with cannon. In this caſtle was formerly a monaſtery, of which many fine arches are yet ſtanding, as is the gateway, tower, and the weſtern gate; alſo ſeveral ſpacious apartments, one of which, from its large chimney, is termed the kitchen; the eaſtern part of the church is of moſt excellent workmanſhip, with carved ornaments on the walls and windows, all which preſent, on the whole, a crowded appearance of auguſt ruins ſtrikingly noble and picturesque. There is a bar acroſs the mouth of the river, which is not above ſeven feet deep at low water. There are dangerous rocks about it, called the Black Middens; but to guide the ſhips by night, there are light houſes ſet up, and maintained by the Trinity-Houſe. Here are ſeveral ſalt-works, but the principal article of trade is coals. The place is now much reſorted to as a watering place, during the ſummer months.

TINOS, anciently TENOS, an iſland of the Archipelago, about 17 miles long, and 8 broad, to the S. of Andros. It is mountainous, but well cultivated; the fruits are excellent, particularly melons, figs, and grapes, of which laſt the inhabitants make good wine: but the principal riches of this iſland conſiſt in ſilk, of which it furniſhes to the yearly amount of about 16,000 pounds; and the ſilk ſtockings and knit gloves for the ladies, which they make of it, are remarkably neat. It was lately ſubject to the Venetians. Tinos, which contains about 500 houſes, and has a fortreſs on a rock, and St. Nicolo, are the principal towns; beſides which, there are upwards of 50 villages.

TINTA, a town of Canas y Canches, (which is ſometimes called Tinta) of Cuſco, in S. America.

TINTENIAC, a town in the dept. of Ille and Vilaine, 19 miles S. of St. Maloes.

Tintern,

Tintern, in Wexford, Leinſter.

Tintern Abbey and Little Tintern, Monmouthſhire, on each ſide of a ſtream that runs into the Wye, between Monmouth and Chepſtow. Tintinhull, Somerſetſhire, S. of Ilcheſter. Tinwell, Rutland, on the Welland, SW. of Stamford.

TINTO, a remarkable river of Seville, in Andaluſia, whoſe waters are of a yellow colour, and petrifying quality. They indurate the ſand, and if a ſtone happens to fall in and reſt upon another, they both become, in the ſpace of a year, perfectly united and conglutinated. This river withers all the plants on its banks, as well as the roots of trees, which it tinges with the ſame colour as its waters. No kind of verdure will come up where it reaches, nor will any fiſh live in its ſtream. It kills worms in cattle, when adminiſtered as a drink; but, in general, no animals will drink out of this river except goats, whoſe fleſh has, notwithſtanding, an exquiſite flavour. Theſe ſingular properties continue till other rivulets run into it and alter its nature, for when it paſſes by Niabla, it is not at all different from other rivers. It empties itſelf into the Atlantic, about 18 miles lower down, at the town of Huelva, where it is two leagues broad, and admits of large veſſels, which may come up the river as high as San Juan del Puerto, 9 miles above Huelva.

TINZEDA, a town of Darah, in Africa. Lat. 27. 30. N. lon. 6. W.

TIPERA, or TIPRA, a country E. of Bengal, and bordering on Meckley; partly independent, and partly ſubject to Aracan. The inhabitants are ſaid to be ſubject to goitres, or wens in the throat, a diſeaſe generally attributed to the water drank. A town of the ſame name, is laid down in the maps, as ſituated on the river Tipera, in lat. 24. 20. N. and lon. 92. E.

TIPPERARY, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munſter, about 52 miles in length, and from 12 to 31 in breadth; bounded on the NE. and NW. by King's County and Galway; on the E. by Queen's County and Kilkenny; on the S. by Waterford and a part of Limerick; and on the W. by Galway, Clare, and Limerick. The ſouth parts are exceedingly fertile, and well furniſhed with good buildings; but the north, though to no great extent, is inclinable to be barren, and terminates in a row of twelve mountains, the higheſt in Ireland, and called Phelem the Madina. It contains 147 pariſhes, 30,700 houſes, and about 169,000 inhabitants. The river Suir runs through all the length of it, from N. to S. beſides which, there are abundance of ſmall rivers and brooks, on which near 50 boulting mills are counted, a much greater number than is found in any other county. The principal productions are cattle, ſheep, butter, and flour. The moſt conſiderable places are Clonmel, which is the county town, Caſhel, and Carrick.

TIPPERARY, a town in the county of Tipperary, Munſter, 9 miles SSW. of Caſhel.

TIPING, a town of Corea.

TIPSA, a town of Algiers.

Tipton, Staffordſ. N. of Dudley Caſtle, on a little river, where it runs into the Tame. Tiptrey Houſe, Eſſex, SE. of the Braxteds.

TIR, a town of Choraſan, in Perſia, 21 miles NW. of Herat; and a town of Farſiſtan, in Perſia, 60 miles NE. of Schiras.

TIRANO, a town of the Griſons, in the Valteline, capital of the Upper Terzero, and reſidence of the podeſta. From the narrowneſs of the ſtreets, and number of ruinous houſes, its general appearance is deſolate. The chief trade is in wine and ſilk. It is ſituated on the river Adda, which divides it into 2 parts, 17 miles SW. of Bormio.

Tirawley, in Mayo, Connaught.

TIREE, a ſmall but fertile iſland of Scotland, one of the Hebrides, lying to the SSW. of the Iſle of Col, and noted for its marble quarry, and for a handſome breed of little horſes. The number of inhabitants, who annually make about 245 tons of kelp, is eſtimated at 2416. Here are 24 lakes, great and ſmall, which cover about 600 acres.

TIRLEMONT. See TILLEMONT.

TIRNAU, a town of Upper Hungary, containing 9 churches, and as many convents. It is ſituated on the river Tirnau, 20 miles ENE. of Preſburg.

TIROL, or UPPER AUSTRIA, a country of Germany, in the circle of Auſtria, and part of the hereditary dominions of that houſe. It is about 150 miles in length, and 120 in breadth, and contains 12 towns, and 10 villages, which have markets. There are a great many mountains in this country, and yet it produces as much corn and wine as the inhabitants have occaſion for. They have rich mines of gold, ſilver, lead, and ſeveral ſpecies of precious ſtones. The hunting of the chamois here is ſomewhat dangerous, on account of the rocks which they take to. In this country are included the county of of Tirol Proper, the biſhopric of Trent, and the biſhopric of Brixen. Here are alſo profitable ſalt-pits, and medicinal ſprings and hot baths. It is bounded on the N. by Bavaria, on the E. by Carinthia and Saltzburg, on the S. by part of the late territory of Venice, and on the W. by Swiſſerland and the country of the Griſons. Inſpruck is the capital.

TIROL, a town and citadel of Germany, which gives name to the county. It is 40 miles N. of Trent.

Tirrels-Hall, Eſſex, by Dunmow. Tiringham, Bucks, on the Ouſe, NW. of Newport. Tirthington, Northumb. in Bothall manor. Tiſeburſt, Suſſex, N. of Echingham. Tiſted, E. and W. Hants, between Alresford and Selborn. Tiſſington, Derbyſhire, N. of Aſborn.

TITAN, or LEVANT, an iſland of France, in the Mediterranean, the moſt eaſtern of the Hieres.

Titching, Surry, near Frimley and Horſill. Titcomb, Wilts, N. of Chute-Foreſt. Titbby, Nott. S. of Bingham. Titherington, Glouceſ. near Thornbury. Titherington, Wilts, E. of the Deverels. Titherley, E. and W. Hants, NW. of Rumſey. Titherley, Dorſetſ. near Chardſtock.

TITICATA, or CHUCUITO, a very large iſland in the biſhopric of Cuſco, and vice-royalty of Buenos Ayres. It lies in a muddy lake of the ſame name, which is upwards of 60 leagues in circumference, and contains ſeveral other ſmaller iſlands. Its waters are ſo nauſeous as not to be drank. This iſland was the reſidence of the firſt ynca, Mancho Capac, and is held ſacred by the Indians.

Titley, Herefordſhire, on the Arrow, NW. of Pembridge. Titley, Northumb. in the barony of Wark. Titlington, Northumb. NW. of Alnwick.

TITMANING, a town of Saltzburg, in Bavaria, ſeated on the river Saltza, 20 miles NNW. of Saltzburg. It was almoſt rendered deſolate by the plague in 1310, and was reduced to aſhes by lightning in 1571; but it has been ſince rebuilt.

Titon, Northamptonſ. near Ravenſthorp. Titſeys, Surry, N. of Limpsfield. Titſhall, Margaret and Mary, Norfolk, NE. of New Buckenham. Tittenhanger, Herts, 3 miles SE. of St. Alban's. Tittenley, Cheſhire, SE. of Combermere. Tittenſor, Staffordſ. near Swinerton. Titting, Surry, SE. of Guilford. Tittleſhall, Norfolk, between Rainham-Hall and Mileham.

TITUL, a town of Hungary.

* TIVERTON, an ancient, rich, and populous town of Devonſhire, noted for its great woollen manufactory, particularly of kerſeys, the greateſt in the county, next to that of Exeter. It was formerly called Twyford's Town, from two fords then over the Ex and Leman, where are now ſtone bridges. It has ſuffered greatly by fire, having been almoſt burnt down ſeveral times, particularly in June 1731, when 200 of the beſt houſes were deſtroyed. It is now built in a more elegant taſte, and they have a new church erected by ſubſcription. The four principal ſtreets form a commodious quadrangle, incloſing an area of gardens. The two rivers afford plenty of fiſh, and not only drive a great number of corn-mills, but alſo greatly aſſiſt in conducting the ſeveral branches of the woollen trade. It has a noble large free-ſchool, which maintains eight ſcholars at Oxford and Cambridge, and is ſituated on a little hill, or ſlope, triangularly formed by the courſes of the ſtreams above mentioned, 14 miles N. of Exeter, and 161 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday; alſo one on Monday for kerſeys.

TIVERTON, a town of the United States, in Rhode Iſland, ſituated on the river Taunton, 15 miles SE. of Providence.

Tiverton, Cheſhire, near Beeſton Caſtle. Tivinton, Cheſhire, W. of Congleton. Tiviot, or Cheviot Mountains, on the borders of England and Scotland.

TIUMEN, a town of Siberia, in the government of Tobolſkoi, chiefly inhabited by Ruſſians, Mahometans, Tartars, and Bucharians. It is ſituated at the confluence of the rivers Piſchma and Tura, 112 miles WSW. of Tobolſk.

TIVIOT. See TEVIOT.

TIVOLI, a town of Italy, in the Campagna di Roma. It is now wretchedly poor; it is, however, of greater antiquity than Rome itſelf, being the ancient Tibur, or Tobur, which Horace ſays, was founded by a Grecian colony. It was the favourite country reſidence of the ancient Romans, as Freſcati is of the moderns. Near the bottom of the eminence on which Tivoli ſtands, are the ruins of the vaſt and magnificent villa built by the Emperor Adrian. Horace is thought to have compoſed great part of his works in this favourite retreat. In the market-place are two images of oriental granite, repreſenting Iſis, an Egyptian deity. Near Tivoli is a celebrated caſcade, a Sibyl's temple, a magnificent villa belonging to the duke of Modena, and the remarkable Lake of Solfatara. Tivoli is ſeated on the river Teverone, 17 miles N. by E. of Rome, and 10 NE. of Freſcati.

TIVY, a river of Cardiganſhire, which riſes about 5 miles N. from Tregaron, and runs into the Iriſh Channel, about 3 miles below Cardigan.

Tixall, with its Heath, 2 miles E. of Stafford. Tixover, Rutland, in Ketton pariſh.

TLASCALA, a town of Mexico, formerly capital of a province of the ſame name. When the Spaniards firſt arrived here, it contained, according to Acoſta, 300,000 inhabitants, with a market-place large enough to hold 30,000 buyers and ſellers; but Gemelli, who was here in 1698, ſays, it was then become an ordinary village. It is ſituated on a river that runs into the Pacific Ocean, 62 miles SE. of Mexico, and 140 NW. of Vera Cruz. See ANGELOS.

TLASCALA, a province in the government of Mexico, bounded on the N. by Guaſteca, on the NE. and E. by the Gulf of Mexico and Guaxaca, on the S. by the Pacific Ocean, and on the W. by Mexico Proper. Its towns and villages ſwarm with Indians, and it is by far the moſt populous country of Spaniſh America, the inhabitants being exempted from all ſervices and duties to the crown, (only paying a handful of maize for each head, as an acknowledgment) in conſequence of having been originally allies to Cortez, in the conqueſt of Mexico. The climate, ſoil, and produce, reſemble thoſe of Mexico Proper.

TOBAGO, the moſt ſouthward of the iſlands in the Weſt Indies, and the moſt eaſtward except Barbadoes. It is about 32 miles long from SW. to NE. and about 9 broad. The climate is far more temperate than could be expected from its ſituation ſo near the equator; nor does it lie in the track of thoſe dreadful hurricanes which frequently deſolate the other iſlands. It is agreeably diverſified with hills and vales, and is equal in richneſs of ſoil and produce to any of the iſlands in theſe ſeas. The mould is rich and black; there is abundance of ſprings upon the iſland, and its bays and creeks are ſo diſpoſed as to be very commodious for ſhipping. Wild hogs, peccaros, reſembling ſwine, armadilloes, guanoes, Indian rabbits, and badgers are found here. Horſes, cows, aſſes, ſheep, deer, goats, and rabbits, were probably introduced by the Dutch, and have multiplied exceedingly. The ſea is ſtored with excellent fiſh, particularly turtle of every kind, and mullets of a moſt delicious taſte, with other kinds unknown in England. This valuable iſland was ceded to the Engliſh by the treaty of 1763, and to the French by that of 1783; but it was taken by the Engliſh, April 13th, 1793. Lat. 11. 10. N. lon. 60. 30. W.

TOBAGO, LITTLE, an iſland near the NE. extremity of Tobago, about 2 miles long, and a mile broad.

Tobberbunny, in Dublin, Leinſter. Tobbercorry, or Tubbercorr, in Sligo, Connaught. Tober, in Clare, Munſter. Toe-Head, a high promontory, in Cork, Munſter, a little to the W. of Caſtlehaven.

TOBOL, a river of Ruſſia, which riſes on the E. borders of the government of Upha, and runs into the Irtiſch, at Tobolſk.

TOBOLSK, a conſiderable and populous city of Ruſſia, formerly capital of Siberia, and at preſent of the government of Tobolſkoi. It is divided into the Upper Town, which is properly the city, and ſtands very high, with a fort built with ſtone, in which are the governor's court, the governor's houſe, the archbiſhop's palace, the exchange, and two of the principal churches, all built of ſtone, and the Lower Town; both taken together, of a very large circumference, but the houſes are all built with wood. It is moſtly inhabited by Mahometan Tartars and Bucharians, who drive a great trade on that river. The houſes are low; the Tartars that live round this town for ſeveral miles are all Mahometans, and their mufti is an Arabian: in general they behave very quietly, and carry on ſome commerce, but practiſe no mechanic trades. There are alſo a great number of Calmuck Tartars, who ſerve as ſlaves. All the Chineſe caravans paſs through this town, and all the furs furniſhed by Siberia, are brought here, and thence forwarded to Moſcow. The Ruſſians commonly ſend their ſtate priſoners hither. It is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Tobol and Irtiſch, 800 miles E. of Moſcow, Lat. 57. 30. N. lon. 68. 18. E.

TOBOLSKOI, a government of Ruſſia, which comprehends a conſiderable part of Siberia, extending from lon. 76. 30. to 125. 30. E. and from lat. 55. to 78. N. Tobolſk is the capital.

TOBOSO EL, a town of New Caſtile, 37 miles S. of Hueta, or Gueta.

TOCANTINS, a large river of Braſil, which riſes in about lat. 18. S. and runs into the Atlantic, in lat. 1. S. For about the laſt 100 miles before it falls into the ſea, it is called PARA.

Tobridge, Somerſetſ. W. of Taunton.

TOCAT, a conſiderable city of Caramania, the reſidence of a cadi, a waywode, wode, and an aga, who commands a thouſand janizaries, and ſome ſpahis. The houſes are handſomely built, but generally ſtand on uneven ground. The ſtreets are pretty well paved, which is an uncommon thing in theſe parts. There are ſo many ſtreams, that each houſe has a fountain. It contains about 20,000 Turkiſh families, 4000 Armenian families, who have 7 churches, and 400 families of Greeks, who have only one. Beſide the ſilk of this country, they manufacture eight or ten loads of that of Perſia, and make it into ſewing ſilk. Their chief trade is in copper veſſels, ſuch as kettles, drinking cups, lanterns, and candleſticks. They alſo prepare a great deal of yellow Turkey leather. Tocat is the centre of trade in Natolia; for here the caravans arrive from Diarbekir in 18 days, from Sinop in 6, from Burſa in 20, from Smyrna in 27, &c. Its territory abounds in fruit and excellent wine, and it is 180 miles NW. of Erzerum, and 250 E. of Conſtantinople.

TOCAYMA, a town of Terra Firma, in New Granada, ſeated on the river Para, in a country abounding in fruit and ſugar-canes. Lat. 4. 3. N. lon. 73. 50. W.

Toccotes, Yorkſhire, N. of Giſborough.

Tocholes, Lancaſhire, S. of Blackburn.

TOCKAY, a town of Hungary, in the country of Zimplin, celebrated for its wine, which, for ſtrength and flavour, is preferred to all the wines of Hungary. At ſome diſtance from it are large ſalt-works. It is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Bodrog and Teiſſe, 90 miles NE. of Buda.

Tocklington, Glouceſ. in Olveſton pariſh. Tockwith, Yorkſ. in Bolton pariſh. Todbere, Dorſetſ. N. of Stourminſter. Toddlewood, Northumberl. E. of Fetherſton Haugh. Todenham, Glouceſ. 8 miles N. of Stow-on-the-Would, and 6 from Campden.

TODI, a town of Spoleto, in Italy, containing ſeveral churches and convents.

Todgmore Bottom, Glouceſterſ. in Biſley pariſh. Todington, Glouceſterſ. NE. of Winchcombe. Tod Law, Northumb. near Elſden, is a mount on which are 3 ſtone columns, placed in a triangular form, 12 feet diſtant from each other. Each column is near 12 feet in diameter. It is ſuppoſed to have been the ſepulchral monument of ſome eminent Danes. Todmerden, Lancaſ. N. of Rochdale.

TODS, a town of Virginia.

Todwick, Yorkſ. E. of Sheffield.

TOELING HOTIEN, a town of Chineſe Tartary, 375 miles ENE. of Peking.

Toft, 5 miles from Cambridge. Toft, Cheſhire, 6 miles from Tableigh. Toft, Lincolnſ. W. of Bourn. Toft, Lincolnſ. on the Ankem, SW. of Market-Raſen. Toft, Lincolnſ. on the Dun, SW. of Burton-upon-Trent. Toft, Norfolk, SE. of Watton. Toft, Warwickſ. near Dunchurch. Toft Monachorum, Norfolk, 8 miles SW. of Yarmouth. Toft Rats, Norfolk, near Rainham Hall. Toft, Weſt, Norfolk, N. of Thetford.

TOGDA, or TODGA, a town and diſtrict of Africa, in the country of Segilmeſſa.

Tointons, Upper and Lower, Lincolnſ. SE. of Bullingbrook.

TOKENBURG, or TOGGENBURG, a county of Swifferland, depending on the abbot of St. Gal, as territorial lord, yet with a reſervation of their rights and liberties. It lies among high mountains between Zorich on the E. and Appenzel on the W. is fertile in corn and fruits, abounds in numerous herds of cattle, and is divided into the Upper and Lower.

Tokenham, Wiltſhire, SW. of Wotton-Baſſet.

TOLEDO, a conſiderable city of Spain, in New Caſtile, of which it was formerly the capital, and anciently a Roman colony. It is ſeated on a mountain near the river Tajo, and has an ancient wall built by a Gothic king, flanked with 100 towers. Its ſituation renders the ſtreets uneven; they are alſo narrow, but the houſes are fine, and there are a great number of ſuperb ſtructures, beſide 17 public ſquares, where the markets are kept. The fineſt buildings are the royal caſtle, and the cathedral; which laſt is the richeſt and moſt conſiderable in Spain. It is ſeated in the middle of the city, joining to a handſome ſtreet, with a fine ſquare before it. Several of the gates are very large, and of bronze. There is alſo a ſuperb ſteeple, extremely high, whence there is a very extenſive proſpect. The Sagrario, or principal chapel, is a real treaſury, in which are 15 large cabinets let into the wall, full of prodigious quantities of gold and ſilver veſſels, and other works. There are two mitres of ſilver, gilt, ſet all over with pearls and precious ſtones, with three collars of maſſy gold, enriched in like manner. There are two bracelets and an imperial crown, dedicated to Mary the mother of Jeſus, conſiſting of large diamonds and other jewels. The weight of gold in the crown is 15 pounds. The veſſel which contains the conſecrated water is of ſilver, gilt, as high as a man, and ſo heavy, that it requires, at leaſt, 30 men to carry it; within it is another of pure gold, old, enriched with jewels. Here are 38 religious houſes, with a great number of churches belonging to 27 pariſhes, and one hoſpitals. Without the town are the remains of an amphitheatre, and other antiquities. It has an archbiſhop's ſee, a famous univerſity, and ſeveral manufactories of ſilk and wool. The ſecret of hardening ſword blades, for which Toledo was formerly ſo famous, has been loſt, but is ſaid to be again recovered. When one of theſe underwent the operation of tempering, if it was in the leaſt notched by ſtriking with it ſeveral violent blows on an iron head-piece, it was rejected. Two centuries ago, the inhabitants were about 200,000, but now they ſcarcely amount to 30,000, and it is ſaid to be rapidly declining. Toledo is ſituated among rocks, eminences, and precipices, which preſent the image of ſterility, yet ſeveral fertile and charming ſituations are ſeen about it, impenetrable to the rays of the ſun. It is 32 miles SSW. of Madrid. Lat. 39. 50. N. lon. 3. 45. W.

TOLEN, a town in Dutch Zealand, in an iſland of the ſame name, partly formed by the E. branch of the Scheld, near Brabant, from which it is ſeparated by a canal, about 10 miles in length, and 4 in breadth. It is 5 miles NW. of Bergen op-Zoom.

TOLENTINO, a town of Ancona, famous for being the depoſitory of the body of St. Nicholas, whoſe arm is ſaid to bleed afreſh when any calamity is to befal Italy.

Toleſbury, Eſſex, near Malden. Toleſby, Yorkſhire, NW. of Stokeſley. Toleſhunt, Darcy, Major, or Beckingham, and Militis, or Knights, Eſſex, near Toleſbury.

TOLFA, a town in the Patrimonio, noted for its mines of alum and iron, with quarries of alabaſter and lapis lazuli. Here are alſo warm baths.

TOLHUYS, a town of Guelderland, ſituated on the Rhine, 6 miles WSW. of Emmerick. Here the French paſſed that river in the year 1672.

TOLLAND, a town of Connecticut, 65 miles WSW. of Boſton.

Tolland, Somerſetſ. NE. of Wivelſcomb. Tollard Royal, Wiltſhire, near Cranborn Chace. Tollaſton, Tollaton, or Terlaton, Nottingh. near Bingham. Toller Down, Dorſetſhire. Tollerdwelmt, Dorſetſ. near Beminſter. Toller Fratrum, and Toller Porcorum, Dorſetſ. NW. of Framptow. Tollerton, Yorkſhire, in Galtres Foreſt. Tollington, Lincolnſhire, W. of the Deepings.

Tollogherton, in Waterford, Munſter. Tollynadolly, in Galway, Connaught.

TOLMEZO, a town of Friuli.

TOLMINO, a town and diſtrict of Carniola.

TOLNA, a town which gives name to a county of Hungary, ſeated on the river Danube, 50 miles S. of Buda.

TOLOSA, a town of Spain, in the province of Biſcay, and capital of Guipuſcoa. It is not large, but is celebrated for its ſteel manufactures, particularly of ſword blades. It is ſeated in a pleaſant valley, between the rivers Araxis and Oria, 83 miles SW. of Fontarabia.

Tolpiddle, Dorſetſhire, near Tincleton. Tolpuddel, Dorſetſhire, S. of St. Andrew's Milborn.

TOLU, a ſea-port of Terra Firma, in the government of Carthagena. In the environs is found the celebrated balſam to which it gives name, being produced from a tree like a pine. It is 80 miles S. of Carthagena.

TOMAR, a town of Portugal, in Eſtramadura, ſeated on the river Naboan, 65 miles NNE. of Liſbon.

TOMBEC, a town of Auſtrian Brabant.

TOMBERLAINE, a ſmall iſland with a town of the ſame name, on the N. coaſt of France, lying on a ſmall gulf, between Avranches and St. Malo. This iſland, and that of St. Michael, are every day joined, at low water, to the main land.

TOMBUCTOU, a populous kingdom of Africa, in Negroland, repreſented as lying to the SE. of the deſert of Zahara, and W. of the empire of Caſhnah. The houſes in this country are built like bells, with walls of hurdles plaiſtered with clay, and covered with reeds. They are the ſame in the city of Tombuctou, except a magnificent moſque of ſtone, and the royal palace, both of which were built after the deſign of a Moor, who was baniſhed from Granada in Spain. Here are great numbers of weavers of cotton cloth; and hither the cloth, and other European merchandiſe, are brought by caravans from Tripoli, Barbary &c. and exchanged for ivory, ſlaves, ſenna, gold duſt, dates, and oſtrich feathers. The women have their faces covered, their religion being Mahometaniſm. They have great plenty of millet, wheat, barley, cattle, milk, and butter. Inſtead of money, they make uſe of ſhells and ſmall bits of gold. The king has a guard of 3000 horſemen, armed with bows and poiſoned arrows, beſides foot ſoldiers, who wear ſhields and ſwords. He generally rides on an elephant. In the proceedings of the African Aſſociation, this place is mentioned as a luxurious, opulent, and flouriſhing city; ſubject to a ſevere police, and, as ſuch, ſuch, attracting the merchants of the moſt diſtant ſtates of Africa. It is ſeated near the river Niger, in lat. 19. 59. N. lon. 0. 8. E.

TOMEBAMBA, a town of Quito, in S. America, where was a temple of the Sun, the walls of which, as the Spaniards affirm, were covered with gold. It is 120 miles S. of Quito.

Tombaggard, in Wexford, Leinſter.

Tomſon, Dorſetſhire, near Blandford.

TOMSK, a town of Siberia, in the government of Tobolſkoi, and formerly the principal city in Siberia, next to Tobolſk. It contains about 2000 houſes, which, as well as the public buildings, are principally built of wood. The inhabitants carry on a conſiderable trade, this town lying on the great road from Eniſeiſk, and all the towns in the E. and N. parts of Siberia, and all the caravans to and from China paſs annually through it, beſides a caravan or two from the country of the Calmucks. It is ſeated on the river Tom, which riſes in the government of Kolivan, and runs into the Oby, 32 miles WNW. from this town, 168 miles NNE. of Kolivan.

TONDERN, a well-built but not large town of Denmark, in Sleſwick, the inhabitants of which carry on a conſiderable trade in corn, cattle, and fine lace. It is capital of a bailiwick of the ſame name, and is ſeated on a bay of the German Ocean, 37 miles NW. of Sleſwick.

Tone, a river in Somerſetſhire, which riſes about 6 miles N. from Wivelſcombe, paſſes by Taunton, and runs into the Parrot, near Petherton Park, between Langford and Bridgwater. Toneley, Northumb. NW. of Dunſtaburgh Caſtle.

TONGATABOO. See AMSTERDAM.

Tonge, Kent, a mile and a half E. of Milton; has the ruins of a caſtle, ſaid to have been built in 450, by Hengiſt, the Saxon general, purſuant to a grant from Vortigern, of as much ground to build a ſeat or caſtle on, as he could encloſe with an ox's hide, which he therefore cut into very ſmall thongs. Several Saxon antiquities have been dug up within the walls. On the moat, a corn-mill has been erected, upwards of 200 years. Tonge, Leiceſterſ. near Stanton-Harold. Tonge, Yorkſ. SE. of Bradford. Tonge Caſtle, Shropſ. 3 miles from Shiffnal. The venerable pariſh church near it, is a much admired piece of antiquity; it has one of the largeſt bells in England, and contains many rich, elegant, and ancient monuments. Tongham, Surry, NW. of Puttenham. Tongley Hill, Shropſ. near Clun; on it is a Roman encampment, called Bury-Ditches.

TONGEREN, or TONGRES, a town of Liege, (anciently very conſiderable) ſeated on the Jeckar, 12 miles SW. of Maeſtricht.

TONGUSIANS, a people of the eaſtern part of Siberia, near the Sea of Okotſk, ſubject to the Ruſſians. They chiefly ſubſiſt by grazing and hunting of ſables, the ſkins of which are very black.

TONNAY BOUTONNE, a town in the depart. of Lower Charente, ſeated on the river Boutonne, 10 miles W. of Rochefort.

TONNAY CHARENTE, a town in the dept. of Lower Charente, ſeated on the river Charente, 3 miles E. of Rochefort.

TONNEINS, a town in the depart. of Lot and Garonne, ſeated on the river Garonne, about two miles from its junction with the Lot, 7 miles SE. of Marmande.

TONERRE, a town in the department of Yonne, celebrated for its good wines. It is ſeated on the river Armançon, 27 miles S. of Troyes, and 102 SE. of Paris.

TONNINGEN, a town of Denmark, in Sleſwick, capital of a territory of the ſame name. Its once noble caſtle was diſmantled in 1734, by the king's orders, and the fortifications were demoliſhed by the Danes and their allies, (when taken from the Swedes) in 1713 and 1714. It is ſeated on a peninſula formed by the river Eyder, near the German Ocean, with a commodious harbour, 25 miles SW. of Sleſwick.

TONQUIN, a kingdom of Aſia, bounded on the N. by China, on the E. and SE. by China and the Bay of Tonquin, on the S. by Cochin-China, and on the W. by the kingdom of Laos. It is about 350 miles in length, and 220 in its greateſt breadth, and is one of the fineſt and moſt conſiderable kingdoms of the Eaſt, as well on account of the number of inhabitants and the trade they carry on, as the excellency of the ſoil, and mild temperature of the climate. Only two winds commonly prevail here, the N. and the S.; the former blows from June, or July, to January, and the latter from January to July. The country is thick ſet with villages, and the natives in general are of a middling ſtature, and clean-limbed, with a tawny complexion. Their faces are oval and flattiſh, and their noſes and lips of a neat form. Their hair is black, long, lank, and coarſe; and they let it hang down their ſhoulders. They are at great pains to dye their teeth black. The country is ſo very populous, that many labour under extreme poverty for want of employment. The money and goods brought hither by foreign foreign ſhips, particularly the Engliſh and Dutch, put them in action; but one third at leaſt of the money muſt be advanced before-hand by the merchants; and the ſhips ſtay here till the goods are finiſhed, which is generally five or ſix months. They are ſo addicted to gaming, that, when every thing elſe is loſt, they will ſtake their wives and children. The garments of the Tonquineſe are made either of ſilk or cotton; but the poor people and ſoldiers wear only cotton of a dark tawny colour. Their houſes are ſmall and low, and the walls either of mud or hurdles daubed over with clay. They have only a ground-floor, with two or three partitions, and each room has a ſquare hole to let in the light. They have ſtools, benches, and chairs; and on the ſide of a table is a little altar, with two incenſe pots thereon, which no houſe is without. The villages conſiſt of 30 or 40 houſes, ſurrounded by trees, and in ſome places are banks to keep the water from overflowing their gardens, where they have oranges, betels, pumkins, melons, and ſallad herbs. In the rainy ſeaſon (from April to Auguſt, which is the moſt unhealthy part of the year) they paſs from one houſe to another, by wading through the water, or by help of boats. In the only city in the kingdom, called Cachao, are about 20,000 houſes, with mud walls, and covered with thatch; a few built with brick, and roofed with tiles. In each yard is a ſmall arched building, like an oven, about ſix feet high, made of brick, which ſerves to ſecure their goods, in caſe of fire. The principal ſtreets are very wide, and paved with ſmall ſtones. The king of Tonquin has three palaces in it, ſuch as they are; and near them are ſtables for his horſes and elephants. They buy all their wives, of which the great men have ſeveral; but in hard times the men will ſell both their wives and children, to buy rice to maintain themſelves. When a man dies, he is buried in his own ground, and if he was maſter of a family, they make a great feaſt. The firſt new moon in the year that happens after the middle of January, is a great feſtival, when they rejoice for 10 or 12 days together, and ſpend their time in all manner of ſports. Their common drink is a kind of tea, like Chineſe bohea: but they make themſelves merry with arrack. At their great entertainments, they give their viſitants arek, folded up in a betel leaf, daubed over with lime made into mortar. They have another great feaſt in May, or June, when their firſt harveſt is got in. Their religion, which is founded on that of China, is Pagan, and yet they own a Supreme Being; their idols have human ſhapes, but in very different forms. They have likewiſe ſome reſembling elephants and horſes, placed in ſmall, low temples, built of timber. The Chriſtian religion was eſtabliſhed here in 1626, by the Jeſuit Baldinoty; and in 1639 there were 80,000 converts, who had built 200 churches at their own charge; it was utterly proſcribed, however, in 1721, after ſeveral dreadful perſecutions, attended with the impriſonment, torture, and death, of the miſſionaries and their catechiſts. The language is ſpoken very much in the throat, and ſome of the words are pronounced through the teeth; it has a great reſemblance to the Chineſe. They have ſchools of learning, and their characters are the ſame, or like thoſe of China; and like them they write with a hair pencil. They have ſeveral mechanic arts, or trades, and export great quantities of their manufactures, at which they are very dexterous and ingenious. Their fruit-trees are ſaid to excel all the reſt of Aſia, in the flavour and beauty of their fruit; and their elephants are reckoned the largeſt and nimbleſt in the world. The commodities are gold, muſk, ſilks, calicoes, drugs of many ſorts, woods for dying, lackered wares, earthen wares, ſalt, aniſe-ſeed, and worm-ſeed. The lackered ware is ſcarcely inferior to that of Japan, which is accounted the beſt in the world. With all their merchandiſe, one would expect the people to be very rich; but they are, in general, very poor, the chief trade being carried on by the Chineſe, Engliſh, and Dutch. The natives, indeed, export no merchandize on their own bottoms, neither have they any veſſels fit for theſe rough ſeas. The goods imported, beſide ſilver, are ſalt-petre, ſulphur, Engliſh broad-cloth, pepper, ſpices, lead, and guns. Tonquin, about ſeven centuries ago, was ſubject to China, till Din, a famous robber, threw off the yoke of ſervitude, and placed the crown on his own head. This independence has been the ſource of many cruel wars and miſeries, and the families on the throne have been already changed ſix times. The iſſue of the laſt civil war was a treaty, by which it was agreed, that the chonab, or competitor of King Le, and his deſcendants, were to have the abſolute command of the armies, with the greateſt part of the revenues, while the bua, or ſovereign, was to enjoy all the honours and external ſplendor of royalty.

TONSA, a river of Romania, which runs into the Mariza, near Adrianople.

TONSBERG, a ſea-port of Aggerhuys, with a conſiderable trade in fiſh and butter. It formerly contained 9 churches, but now has only two. It is ſituated on a bay of the Baltic, 42 miles S. of Chriſtiana.

TOOBOUAI, one of the Society Iſlands, in the S. Pacific Ocean. Its greateſt extent, in any direction, excluſive of the reefs, is not above 5 or 6 miles. Small as it appears, however, there are hills in it of a conſiderable elevation, covered with herbage, except a few rocky cliffs, with patches of trees interſperſed to their ſummits. This iſland is plentifully ſtocked with hogs and fowls, and produces ſeveral kinds of fruits and roots. It was diſcovered by Captain Cook. Lat. 23. 25. S. lon. 149. 23. W.

TOOMBS, a range of rocks, 3 or 400 yards in extent, called by the Scotch, THE CLOGHAN, and ſituated in the Bay of Carrickfergus, in Down, Ulſter. They are covered at high-water; but at low-water they have the appearance of a range of cabins along the ſhore.

Toome, in Antrim, Ulſter. Toomevara, in Tipperary. Toomgraney, in Clare, Munſter.

TOONE, a river of Cork, in Munſter, which runs into the river Lee, 15 miles W. of Cork.

Tooting, Upper, Surry, in the road from Southwark to Epſom. Tooting, Lower, Surry, two miles SW. of Wandſworth. Topa, Lincolnſ. near Torkſey. Topcliff, Yorkſhire, N. Riding, ſeated on the river Swale, on a conſiderabe aſcent, to the S. of Thirſk, and 24 miles N. of York. It is about three quarters of a mile in length, and being ſeated on the great N. road, has ſeveral good inns for the accommodation of travellers. Topcliff, Yorkſ. NW. of Wakefield. Topcroft, Norf. NW. of Bungay. Topesfield, Eſſex, NW. of the Henninghams. Topesfield, Middleſex, in Hornſey pariſh. Top-Houſes, Cornw. in Leſtwithiel.

TOPSHAM, a tolerably large ſea port of Devonſhire, conſiſting of ſeveral ſtreets, and a long ſtrand. It is properly the port town of Exeter, where all the large ſhips lie, are unloaded, and take in their lading; and here the captains, ſhipwrights, &c. with the officers of the cuſtoms, reſide. It is almoſt encompaſſed by the rivers Cliſt and Ex, and is 5 miles SSE. of Exeter, and 170 SW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Topſtreet, Herts, near Wheathamſtead.

TOR, a ruinous ſea-port of Arabia Petræa, on the Red Sea, thought by ſome to be the ancient Elana. Lat. 28. 27. N.

TORBAY, a fine bay of the Engliſh Channel, on the coaſt of Devonſhire, a little to the NE. of Dartmouth, formed by two capes, called Bury-Point, and Bob's Noſe. It is about 12 miles in compaſs, and is ſafe againſt weſterly winds, but a S. or SE. wind ſometimes forces ſhips to put out to ſea.

TORBOLE, a town in the Tyrolese.

Torbryan, Devonſ. SE. of Aſhburton. Torbuck, Lancaſhire, SE. of Weſt Darby.

TORCELLO, a town of Venice, ſeated in a ſmall iſland, 3 miles N. of Venice.

TORCOLA, a ſmall iſland in the Adriatic. Lat. 43. 27 N.

TORDA, or TORENBURG, a town of Tranſylvania, famous for its ſalt works. It is 15 miles WNW. of Clauſenburg.

TORDESILLAS, a town of Leon, with a large and magnificent palace, where queen Joan, mother of Charles V. ended her melancholy days. It is ſeated on the river Douero, 18 miles SW. of Valladolid.

TORGAU, a town of Meiſſen, in Upper Saxony, with a caſtle, the ſtair-caſe of which is built in ſuch a manner, that a perſon may ride up in a chaiſe from the bottom to the top. There is a flouriſhing ſchool here, and the inhabitants maintain themſelves by brewing excellent beer, which they ſend to other places by means of the river Elbe, on which it is ſeated. It is 28 miles ENE. of Leipſick.

TORIGNA, a town in the department of the Channel, with a caſtle, near St. Lo.

Torkington, Cheſhire, between Nerbury and Goſt-Water. Torkſcatk-Port, Lancaſ. near Liverpool. Torkſey, NW. of Lincoln, near the conflux of the Eſs-Dyke into the Trent. It was once a town of great note. Torletan, Glouceſ. in the pariſh of Coats. Torleton, Glouceſterſ. in Rodmarton pariſh. Torlis, Wiltſhire, 3 miles from Holt. Tormarton, Glouceſterſ. 4 miles SE. of Chipping-Sodbury.

TORMES, a river of Spain, which riſes in Old Caſtile, croſſes the province of Leon, paſſes by Alva de Tormes, Salamanca, &c. and falls into the Douero, a few miles below Miranda-de-Douero.

Tormount, Devonſhire, N. of Torbay.

TORNA, a town, capital of a county of Hungary, 14 miles SW. of Caſchaw.

TORNEA a town of Sweden, in W. Bothnia, capital of a territory of the ſame name, with a good harbour. It is ſeated at the northern extremity of the Gulf of Bothnia, on a ſmall iſland, at the mouth of of the river Tornea. The Laplanders, Ruſſians, and Norwegians, reſort hither to barter their ſkins, and other things, for what they want. In one of the churches, which is built with timber, divine ſervice is performed in the Swediſh language, and in another, on an iſland near the town, built with ſtone, the ſervice is performed in the Finnean language, for the benefit of the burgher ſervants, and the inhabitants of the adjacent country. Tornea is ſaid to be the oldeſt town in the county, and to lie the fartheſt towards the N. It is 420 miles NNE. of Stockholm. Lat. 65. 51. N. lon. 24. 17. E.

TORNEA, a river which riſes in Lapland, croſſes the lake of Tornea, and falls into a gulf of the ſame name, at the town of Tornea.

Tor Newton, Devonſhire, in Torbryan parish.

TORNOVA, a town of Venice.

TORO, a town of Leon, ſituated on the Douro, 17 miles E. of Zamora.

Torpenhow, Cumberland, between Bothell and Brayton.

TORPERLEY, a ſmall town in Cheſhire, where the ſheriffs tourns and courts are held. Its church is chiefly remarkable for the waſte of good marble in monumental vanity. It is a great thoroughfare on the road to Cheſter, and is ſeated on a gentle deſcent, 9 miles SSE. of Cheſter. It was formerly a borough, and had a market on Tueſday, now diſuſed.

Torr, a name given to ſeveral elevations on Dartmore, in Devonſhire, and in other parts of England; ſuch as Glaſtonbury-Torr, in Somerſetſhire, and that abrupt and frightful precipice, the Main-Torr, in Derbyſhire. Torr Abbey, Deronſhire, at the bottom of Torbay.

TORRELLA-DE-MONGRI, a ſea-port in Catalonia, ſeated near the mouth of the river Ter, on the Mediterranean, 19 miles E. of Gironne.

TORREJON, a town of New Caſtile.

TORRES, a ſea-port of Spain, in Granada, 9 miles E. of Velez Malaga.

TORRES, one of the New Philippine Iſlands, in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, about 18 miles in circumference.

TORRES, a cluſter of iſlands in the Indian Ocean, near the coaſt of Siam. Lat. 11. 25. to 11. 48. N. lon. 96. 50. to 97. Eaſt.

TORRES NOVAS, a town of Portugal, in Eſtramadura, 12 miles E. of Santaren.

TORRES VEDRAS, a town of Portugal, in Eſtramadura, 21 miles NNW. of Lisbon.

TORRICELLA, a town of Principato Citra, and a town of Abruzzo Citra.

TORRICELLO, a town of Parma, ſituated on the Po, 12 miles NNW. of Parma.

TORRIGIA, a town of Genoa.

TORRINGTON, GREAT, an ancient and populous town of Devonſhire, with a manufactory in ſtuffs, and ſome export trade to Ireland. It is ſeated on the river Towridge, over which it has a ſtone bridge of 4 arches, 11 miles S. by W. of Barnſtaple, and 194 W. by S. of London. A good market for corn and fleſh on Saturday.

TORRINGTON, a town of Connecticut, 22 miles WNW. of Hartford.

Torrington, Little, Devonſhire, S. of the Towridge, oppoſite Great Torrington. Torrington Black, Devonſhire, W. of Hatherley. Torriſholm, Lancaſhire, between Lancaſter and its ſands.

TORSIL, or TORSHELLA, a town of Sudermania, ſituated on a river which runs into the Malar Lake, 46 miles W. of Stockholm.

Tortington, Suſſex, S. of Arundel.

TORTOLA, an iſland of the Weſt Indies, and the principal of the Virgin Iſlands. It is about 18 miles long from E. to W. and 7 in its greateſt breadth. It produces excellent cotton, ſugar, and rum, and, within the laſt 20 years, has received conſiderable improvements. Their fruits, of which they have no great variety, are but indifferent, apples excepted. The entrance into the harbour is at the E. end of the iſland. Tortola was firſt ſettled by a party of Dutch buccaneers; theſe, in 1666, were driven out by others, who took poſſeſſion in the name of the King of England. Protection being afforded them, Tortola was ſoon after annexed to the government of the Leeward Iſlands. Lat. 18. 30. N. lon. 63. 40. W.

Torton, Suſſex, between Torrington and Arundel.

TORTONA, a town of Milan, but ceded to the principality of Piedmont. It has a good citadel, on an eminence, gives name to a diſtrict called the Tortoneſe, and is ſituated on the Scrinia, 9 miles E. of Alexandria.

TORTOSA, a large town of Catalonia, founded long before the Chriſtian æra, and named Dordoſa, and made a municipal city by Scipio. The cathedral, the royal college of Dominicans, the convent of the Carmelites, the caſtle, which is a mile ſquare, but in a ſtate of decay, and only ſerving as a place of reſidence for a governor, are the most remarkable public buildings. In its neighbourhood are quarries, and mines of silver, iron, alabaster, jasper of divers colours, and stones with veins of gold. They have a great deal of silk and oil, and very fine potter's ware, which resembles porcelain. It is seated on the river Ebro, over which it has a large bridge of boats, about 15 miles from its mouth, and 77 miles SW. of Barcelona.

TORTUGA, or TORTUGA SALADA, an island in the W. Indies, about 36 miles in circumference, and uninhabited. The E. end is full of bare, rugged, broken rocks, which stretch a little way out to sea. Near this end is a large salt-pond, within 200 paces of the sea, where the salt begins to kern in spring. There have been 20 sail of merchantmen here at a time for salt, who come hither from May to August, and find tolerably good anchorage at the SE. part. At the W. extremity there is a small harbour, with some fresh water; this part is full of low and shrubby trees. There are some, but not many goats on it, which live on the coarse grass at the E. end; and the turtles, or tortoises, come upon the sandy bays to lay their eggs, whence this island has its name. They are of divers colours, as blackish, dark brown, light brown, dark green, light green, yellow, and speckled. This island lies near the coast of Terra Firma, 40 miles W. of the island of Margaretta. Lat. 11. 30. N. lon. 64. 50. W.

TORTUGA, an island of the West Indies, about two leagues from the NW. end of the island of St. Domingo. It is about 40 miles in circumference, and has a very safe harbour, but difficult of access. It was formerly much resorted to by the French buccanneers, who fortified themselves here, being countenanced and openly supported by the government of France. Lat. 20. 10. N. lon. 72. 48. W.

Tortworth, Surry, W. of Lalam-Ferry. Torworth, Gloucesters. S. of the Avon, and 4 miles W. of Wotton-under Edge. In this parish is a remarkable chesnut tree, said to be 1000 years old; it is 52 feet in circuit at the trunk. Torworth, Nottinghams. in Blithe parish.

TORY, an island on the coast of Donegal, in Ireland, about 3 miles long and hardly 1 broad. Lat. 55. 16. N. lon. 8. 7. W.

TOSA, a small, but strong sea-port of Catalonia, seated at the bottom of a bay, which makes a good harbour, and where vessels are sheltered from all winds, except the SW. It is 23 miles SSE. of Girona.

TOSCANELLA, a town in the Patrimonio, 9 miles WSW. of Viterbo.

Toseland, Hunting. near Great Paxton.

Tossens, Great and Little, Northumb. SW. of Rothbury. Tostock, Suff. near Wulpit. Totenham, W. of Worcester. Totham, Great and Little, Essex, N. of Malden. Tothea, a river in Cardiganshire, which runs into the Pescotter, in Rescob Forest. Tothill, Lincolns. NW. of Alford. Totley, Derbys. in Scarsdale, NW. of Chesterfield.

TOTA, or ISLAND OF PLANTAINS, an island of the Atlantic, on the coast of Africa, at the mouth of the river Sherborough.

TOTMA, a town of Russia, in the government of Vologda, 92 miles NE. of Vologda. In the environs are several salt pits.

Totmonslow, Staffords. near Draycot. Totnell, Dorsets. in Yateminster parish.

* TOTNESS, a town of Devonshire, the chief trade of which is the manufacture of serges, and other woollens; but here are more gentlemen than merchants, or tradesman of note. It has a spacious church, with a fine tower, above 90 feet high, a town-hall, and a school-house. Provisions of all sorts are cheap and plentiful here, particularly good fish and delicate trout. It is seated on the river Dart, (over which it has a fine bridge, and which is here pretty broad, it being but 7 or 8 miles from the sea, and the tide flowing 10 or 12 feet at the bridge) 27 miles SSW. of Exeter, and 196 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tuesday and Saturday.

Tottenham High Cross, a large village of Middlesex, 5 miles N. of London. It is so called from a cross, which was erected here on the place where Queen Eleanor's corpse was rested. It was formerly a column of wood, raised upon a hillock; but was taken down about 200 years ago, and the present structure erected in its stead by Dean Wood. In this parish are 3 alms-houses. Of one of them, for eight poor people; it is remarkable, that it was erected by Balthazar Zanches, a Spaniard, who was confectioner to Philip II. of Spain, with whom he came over to England, and was the first that exercised that art in this country. He became a Protestant, and died in 1602. A rivulet, called the Mosel, which rises on Muswell-Hill, Hill, near Highgate, runs through the principal ſtreet of this village. Tottenham and Park, Wilts, by Savernake-Foreſt. Tottenhoe, Bucks, by Whaddon. Totterdown, Somerſetſ. near Briſtol. Totteridge, Herts, near Barnet and Whetſtone. Totington, Lancaſ. W. of Rochdale. Totington, Suſſex, near Stening. Totton, Hants, at the bottom of Southampton-Bay. Towel, Kent, near Maidſtone.

TOUL, a regularly fortified town in the dept. of Meurthe, lately the ſee of a biſhop. It is ſeated on the river Moſelle, over which it has a ſtone bridge, 10 miles W. of Nancy, and 167 E. of Paris.

TOULOMBA, a fortreſs of Hindooſtan, in the province of Moultan, ſituated on the S. bank of the Rauvee, 50 miles ENE. of Moultan.

TOULON, a celebrated city and ſea-port of France, and the chief town of the dept. of Var. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of a biſhop, and beſides the cathedral, and other pariſhes, contained 9 convents, a ſeminary, and a college. It is divided into the Old Quarter and the New Quarter. The firſt, which is very ill-built, has nothing remarkable in it but the Rue-aux-Arbres, which is a kind of courſe, or mall, and the town-houſe; the gate of this is ſurmounted by a balcony, which is ſupported by two termini, the maſter pieces of the famous Pujet. The New Quarter, which forms, as it were, a ſecond city, contains, beſide the magnificent works conſtructed in the reign of Louis XIV. many fine houſes, among which that of the late ſeminary is, beyond compariſon, the grandeſt; and a ſpacious, oblong ſquare, lined with trees, and ſerving as a parade. The harbour, reſpecting theſe two quarters, is diſtinguiſhed likewiſe by the names of the Old Port, or the Merchant Port, and the New Port. The Merchants' Haven, along which extends a noble quay, on which ſtands the town-houſe, is protected by two moles, begun by Henry IV. The New Haven was conſtructed by Louis XIV. after the deſigns of Vauban, as were the fortifications of the city and harbours. In the front of this haven is the rope-houſe, built wholly of free-ſtone, 620 feet in length, with three arched walks, in which as many parties of rope-makers may work at the ſame time; and above is a place for the preparation of hemp. The long ſail-room, the dock yards, the baſins, cannon foundry, armoury, working houſes for blackſmiths, miners, carpenters, lockſmiths, carvers; &c. are all very extenſive, and well contrived. The gallies, transferred from Marſeilles ſome years ago, occupy at Toulon a ſecond baſin in the New Port. Many of the galley ſlaves are artiſans, and ſome are merchants. They no longer ſleep on board the gallies, but have been lately provided with accommodations on ſhore, in a vaſt building, newly erected for that purpoſe. The Old and New Harbour lie contiguous, and communicate with one another by a canal; they have alſo an outlet into the extenſive outer road, which is ſurrounded by hills, and formed by nature almoſt circular. The entrance on both ſides is defended by a fort with ſtrong batteries. In 1707, the Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene laid ſiege to this city, but without ſucceſs. In 1721, it ſuffered greatly by the plague. The inhabitants were induced to ſurrender this city in truſt to the Engliſh, in September, 1793; but the conſequences were dreadful.—Their new friends, in about three months, were driven out of the place; and the precipitation with which the evacuation was effected, cauſed a great part of the Touloneſe ſhips and property to fall into the hands of the enraged and implacable republicans. Of 31 ſhips of the line, which the Engliſh found at Toulon, 13 were left behind, 9 were burned at Toulon, and 1 at Leghorn; and 4 Lord Hood had previouſly ſent to Breſt and Rochefort with republican ſeamen, whom he was afraid to truſt. The inhabitants are computed at 800,000. Toulon is ſituated on a bay of the Mediterranean, 27 miles SE. of Aix, and 388 SE. of Paris. Lat. 43. 7. N. lon. 5. 47. E.

TOULON EN CHAROLLOIS, a town in the dept. of the Saone and Loire, ſeated on or near the Arroux river, 15 miles NE. of Bourbon Lancy.

TOULOUSE, a city in the dept. of Upper Garonne, lately the capital of Languedoc, the ſeat of a parliament, and the ſee of an archbiſhop. It is the largeſt city in France, next to Paris and Lyons, although its population bears no proportion to its extent; containing only about 60,000 inhabitants. It was anciently the capital of the Tectoſages, who made ſo many conqueſts in Aſia and Greece. It was next a Roman colony, and was ſucceſſively the capital of the Viſigoths (who deſtroyed the ſuperb amphitheatre, of which there are ſtill ſome remains, the capitol, and other Roman monuments) and that of Aquitaine. The ſtreets are moſtly broad, and the walls and houſes are built of brick. The town-houſe, a modern ſtructure, forms a perfect ſquare, 324 feet long, and 66 high. It is called the Capitolium, and the aldermen are termed Capitouls. Among other curioſities preſerved in it, are 15 large parchment folios, delicately written and illuminated, being partly annals of the city, with portraits and names of the capitouls, and partly of the memorable events and tranſactions throughout the whole kingdom, commencing from the year 1288. They were drawn up originally in Latin, but under Francis I. were altered to French. The principal front occupies an entire ſide of the grand ſquare, lately called the Place Royale. From its fine ſituation, communicating with the ocean on one ſide, and with the Mediterranean on the other, by the celebrated canal of Languedoc, which joins the Garonne a little below the town, Toulouſe might have been a very commercial city; but the taſte of the inhabitants has been principally for the ſciences and belles-lettres. Of courſe, here were two colleges, two public libraries, and three academies. The little commerce of Toulouſe conſiſts in Spaniſh wool and carpets, together with ſome ſlight ſilk and woollen ſtuffs. The bridge over the Garonne is, at leaſt, equal to thoſe of Tours and Orleans: it forms the communication between the ſuburb of St. Cyprian and the city. The quays extend along the banks of the Garonne; and it has been in contemplation to line them with new and uniform houſes. Toulouſe is 125 miles SE. of Bourdeaux, and 356 by W. of Paris.

TOURAINE, a ci devant province of France, N. of Berry and Poitou, E. of Anjou, and S. of Maine; and divided into Higher and Lower. The river Loire runs through the middle. It is about 58 miles in length, and 55 in breadth, and is watered by ſeveral rivers, very commodious for trade, and is, in general, ſo pleaſant and fertile a country, that it is called the Garden of France.

TOUR-DE-ROUSILLON, a town in the dept. of the Eaſtern Pyrenees, ſeated near the river Tet, (on a ſpot where once ſtood a city, called Ruſcino) two miles E. of Perpignan.

TOUR-DU-PIN, a town in the dept. of Iſere, ſituated on a ſmall river of the ſame name, 27 miles SE. of Lyons.

TOUR-LA-VILLE, a town in the dept. of the Channel, almoſt adjoining to Cherburg. It is celebrated for a manufacture of glaſs.

TOURNAY, a city of Flanders, generally conſidered as the moſt ancient town of Belgic Gaul, and once the capital of the Nervii. It is, at preſent, a conſiderable place, and was lately the capital of the Tournayſis. It has ſeveral fine manufactories, and is particularly famous for good ſtockings. Tournay was taken by the allies, under the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, in 1709, and ceded to the houſe of Auſtria, by the treaty of Utrecht; though the Dutch put in a garriſon, as being one of the barrier towns. It is extremely well fortified, and is ſeated on the river Scheldt, which divides it into two parts, that are united by a bridge, 14 miles S. by E. of Liſle, and 155 N. by E. of Paris.

TOURNON, a town in the dept. of Ardeche, ſeated near the river Rhone, 21 miles SSW. of Privas.

TOURNAY, a town in the dept. of the Upper Pyrenees, 9 miles SE. of Tarbes.

TOURNUS, a town in the dept. of Saone and Loire, ſeated on the river Saone, 13 miles S. of Chalons, and 302 S. by W. of Paris.

TOURS, a conſiderable city, capital of the dept. of Indre and Loire, ſeated on the Loire, and near the Cher. Over the former is one of the fineſt bridges in Europe, conſiſting of 15 elliptical arches, each 75 feet diameter; three of theſe were carried away by the breaking up of the ice in 1789. This bridge is terminated, in a line which croſſes the whole city, by a ſtreet 2400 feet long, with foot pavements on each ſide; and lined with fine buildings recently erected. Under the miniſtry of Cardinal Richelieu, 27,000 perſons were employed here in the ſilk manufacture; at preſent, the whole number of inhabitants is about 33,000. The red wines made here are much eſteemed. Tours is 127 miles SW. of Paris.

TOURS, a town in the dept. of the Puy de Dome.

TOURVILLE, a town in the dept. of the Eure, 11 miles SW. of Pont de l'Arche.

TOUSERA, a town of Africa, in Biledulgerid, ſeated in a country abounding in dates, and dependant on Tunis. Lat. 32. 30. N. lon. 10. 55. E.

Touſey, Bucks, in Tame pariſh.

Towe, a river in Carmarthenſhire, which runs into the Cowen at Clear.

*TOWCESTER, a handſome, old, populous town of Northamptonſhire, with a flouriſhing manufactory of lace and ſilk. It is ſituated on two ſtreams, into which the little river Tove, or Wedon, is divided, which encompaſſes the town, and over which it has three bridges, 99 miles S. of Northampton, and 60 NW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Tower Moor, Lincoluſhire, between Tatterſhall

Tatterſhal and Horncaſtle, a building of great antiquity, ſituated on a barren moor. It conſiſts of a ſlender, octagonal tower, now ruinous; its uſe unknown.

Townavilly, in Donegal, Ulſter.

TOWRIDGE, a river of Devonſhire, which riſes near the ſource of the Tamar, about 4 miles from Hartland Point, whence it runs in a SE. courſe to Iddleſley, where it is joined by the Oke, and paſſing by Torington, Biddeford, &c. enters the Severn at Barnſtaple-Bay, about 2 miles below Appledore, where it is joined by the Taw.

Towes, Lincolnſ. W. of Louth. Towin, Cornwall, E. of Grampound. Towin, a river in Montgomeryſhire. Town, Cornwall, W. of Padſtow. Town-Borough, Kent, near Appledore. Townley, Lanc. S. of Burnley. Town-Place, Kent, by Throwley. Townſtall, Devonſhire, near Dartmouth, has a tower 69 feet high, that is a ſea mark. Towre, Lincolnſ. N. of Tatterſhal Chace. Towthorp, Yorkſ. NE. of Wilton. Towthorp, N. of York. Towton, S. of Nottingham, has a ferry over the Trent. Towton, Yorkſ. 8 miles and a half SE. of Tadcaſter, famous for a bloody battle between the forces of the houſes of York and Lancaſter, on Palm Sunday, 1461. The Yorkiſts gained a complete victory, and 36,000 men, of whom 9 were noblemen, beſides many knights and eſquires, fell in the battle and purſuit.

TOWY, a river of South Wales, which riſes in Cardiganſhire, enters Carmarthenſhire at its NE extremity, meanders through a beautiful vale, called the Vale of Towy, neatly ſprinkled with houſes and villages on its borders, and, paſſing by Carmarthen, enters the Briſtol Channel at Towy Haven, 9 or 10 miles below that town.

Towyn, Merionethſhire.

TOWNSEND, a town of Maſſachuſetts, 36 miles NW. of Boſton.

Towynmy, a river of Montgomeryſhire, which runs into the Dowy, 5 miles NE. of Machynleth.

Trablefield, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

TRACHENBURG, a town, capital of a principality of Sileſia, 23 miles NW. of Oels.

TRACONIA, the modern name of Arcadia.

Tracton Abbey, in Cork, Munſter.

TRAFALGAR, a cape or promontory, in Andaluſia, at the entrance of the Straits of Gibraltar, 30 miles ESE. of Cadiz. Lat. 36. 11. N. lon. 6. 1. W.

Trafford Bridge, NE. of Cheſter. Trafford, Lancaſ. SW. of Manchester. It communicates with all the late inland navigations. Tragarden, Cornwall, NE. of Truro. Tragarth, a river in Brecknockſhire, which runs into the Melta, above Iſtradwelthy.

TRAJANAPOLI, a town of Romania, ſituated on the Mariza, 40 miles S. of Adrianople.

TRAJETTO, a town of Lavora, Naples.

TRAINA, a town and river of Sicily, in the Val-di-Demona.

Trahiernam-Cove, in Cork, Munſter.

*TRALEE, the ſhire town of Kerry, in Munſter. Conſiderable quantities of herrings are taken in the bay, which, however, is ſo ſhallow, that veſſels of 50 or 60 tons cannot come within a mile of the town. On the N. ſide there is a fine chalybeate ſpa. It is 144 miles SW. of Dublin.

Tralong, in Cork, Munſter. Tramore, in Waterford, Munſter.

TRA-LOS-MONTES, or TRA-OS-MONTES, a province of Portugal, lying on the other ſide of the Mountain of Marao, with reſpect to the province of Entre Douro e Minho, whence it had its name. It is bounded on the N. and E. by Spain; on the W. by Entre Douro e Minho; and on the S. by Beira, and a part of Leon. The valleys are fertile in wine, oil, and fruits, and abound in cattle, but, in general, it is wild, barren, and thinly inhabited. It contains 2 cities, 27 villas or towns, and 549 pariſhes, with about 135,800 inhabitants.

Tramuore, Cheſhire, S. of Liverpool-Haven. Tranby, Yorkſ. W. of Hull.

TRANCHIN, a town and county of Hungary, abounding in mineral ſprings.

TRANCOSO, a town of Tra-los Montes, 9 miles W. of Pinhel.

*TRANENT, a ſmall town of E. Lothian, between Haddington and Edinburgh. Its chief dependance is on its coal-works, which have been carried on for many years, even under the town, but now extended to the circumjacent country. It is remarkable for a very ancient church, ſaid to be built by the Picts, and is about 9 miles SSE. of Edinburgh.

TRANI, a town of Naples, capital of Bari, decayed ſince the harbour has been choked up with mud. It is 104 miles ENE. of Naples.

TRANQUEBAR, a town of Hindooſtan, on the coaſt of Coromandel, ſubject to the Danes, who erected a fortreſs here in 1621. They had previouſly obtained a grant of the town and a fertile territory, from the rajah of Tanjore, for an annual rent of about 720l. The territory is conſiderable, and full of populous villages.

The town is between two and three miles in circumference, and ſurrounded with a wall, and ſeveral baſtions, well provided with artillery. Within the walls are 8 Chriſtian churches, one of which is for Portugueſe Catholics, (who were in poſſeſſion of the town before the Danes) a large moſque for the Mahometans, and ſeveral pagodas for the Gentoos. It is ſeated at the mouth of one of the branches of the Couvery, 56 miles S. of Pondicherry. Lat. 11. 1. N. lon. 79. 57. E.

Tranſtown, in Cork, Munſter.

TRANSYLVANIA, a country of Europe, formerly annexed to Hungary; bounded on the N. by Hungary, Poland, and Moldavia; on the E. by Moldavia; on the S. by Walachia and the bannat of Temeſwar; and on the W. by Hungary. It is ſurrounded on all parts by high mountains, which, however, are not barren, and the air is healthier than that of Hungary. The inhabitants have a ſufficiency of corn and wine, and there are rich mines of gold, ſilver, lead, copper, quickſilver, and alum. It has undergone various revolutions, but, ſince 1722, has been rendered hereditary to the houſe of Auſtria. The inhabitants are a mixture of Romaniſts, Lutherans, Calviniſts, Socinians, Armenians, Greeks, and Mahometans; to which may be added, Jews and Cingars, who live in tents, and lead a vagabond life like gipſies. Its form is nearly oval; about 400 miles in circumference. The principality is governed in the name of the prince and nobility, by the diet, which meets at Hermanſtadt, by ſummons from the prince; the government being wholly different from that of Hungary.

TRARBACH, a town of Sponheim, circle of Upper Rhine, ſeated on the river Moſelle, 22 miles NE. of Treves. The town and fort were taken by the allies in 1704.

Tranwell, Northu. in Morpeth manor.

TRAPANI, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Mazara, with a good harbour. It is a trading place, famous for its ſalt-works, and fiſheries of tunnies and coral; it is ſituated on a peninſula, 45 miles WSW. of Palermo.

Trapeſhill, Eſſex, between Epping Foreſt and Chigwell. Trapham, Kent, near Wingham.

TRAPOLIZZA, a town in the Morea, 18 miles WSW. of Argos.

TRAPPE, LA, a once celebrated monaſtery, or regular abbey, ſituated in a deep and woody valley, near Seez, in the dept. of Orne (Normandy.) The great object of this order (St. Benedict) was, that the monks ſhould be mutual guards upon each other; and for this purpoſe, they were never ſuffered to be alone, except in their cells at bed time; they ate, they drank, worked, repoſed, and prayed all together, in order to be a check and reſtraint on each other, increaſing their auſterities by emulation of pains and ſufferings. They were likewiſe famous for keeping perpetual ſilence, unleſs when ſpoken to by their ſuperior, or in their religious conferences, or to accuſe themſelves, and never taſted meat or wine, except when ſick. They faſted continually, and were in all reſpects the moſt rigorous aſcetics in Europe.

Tratton, Suſſex, near Portſmouth, on a ſmall ſtream that runs quite through the rape of Chicheſter, to the river Arun.

TRAVANCORE, a province of Hindooſtan, extending about 90 miles along the coaſt of Malabar, and bounded on the N. by Myſore, and on the E. by the Carnatic. It is ſubject to a rajah, who is an ally of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company. Travancore, the capital, is 108 miles SSW. of Madura.

TRAVE, a river of Holſtein, which paſſes by Sedgberg, Oldeſloe, and Lubec, and falls into the Baltic at Travemunde.

TRAVERS, VALLEY OF, a juriſdiction of Neufchatel, in Switzerland, conſiſting of 6 villages, celebrated for the purity and ſalubrity of its air. The inhabitants, in general, are remarkably gay, enlightened, and induſtrious.

TRAVEMUNDE, a town of Holſtein, ſeated at the mouth of the river Trave. It is the port of Lubec, to which it belongs, and is 12 miles NNE. of that city. In 1783, 951 ſhips ſailed from this port.

TRAUNSTEIN, a town of Upper Bavaria, ſeated on the Traun, near which are ſprings of ſalt water; alſo a town in the archduchy of Auſtria.

Trautmant, a river in Cardiganſhire, which runs into the Towy, oppoſite Reicob foreſt.

TRAW, a town of the late Venetian Dalmatia, pleaſantly ſeated on the Adriatic, in a ſmall iſland, among beautiful gardens, near the main land. It abounds in fine ſardines, and other fiſh, and has a harbour formed by a bay, ſheltered by two capes, with water deep enough for the largeſt veſſels. It is 20 miles WNW. of Spalatro.

Trawbridge, Devonſ. on the river Forton, near Crediton.

TRAWTMANSDORF, a fortreſs of Tyrol, ol, 4 miles NE. of Tirol; and a town n the archduchy of Auſtria, TRAYGUERA, a town of Valencia, with a manufacture of fine earthen ware. t is 23 miles SW. of Tortoſa.

Treales, Lancaſhire, NE. of Kirkham. Trebaffel, Cornwall, NE. of Boſcaſtle. Trebe Jew, Cornwall, W. of Great Columb. Treberack, Cornwall, W. of Camelford. Trebert, Shropſhire, S. of Clun-Caſtle.

TREBIA, a river of Italy, which riſes n the territory of Genoa, and falls into he Po, about two miles W. of Placentia. Great numbers of the Romans, commanded by the conſul Sempronius, after their defeat by Hannibal, were drowned in this iver.

Trebigh, Cornwall, near St. Ives.

TREBIGNO, a town of Turkiſh Dalmatia, 10 miles NE. of Raguſa.

TREBISSACCIA, a town of Calabria Citra, 10 miles NE. of Caſſano.

TREBISOND, or TARABOSAN, a city of Turkey, in Aſia, with a Greek archbiſhop's ſee, and a harbour, ſeated at the foot of a pretty ſteep hill. The walls are almoſt ſquare and high embattled, and though they are not of the firſt ages, they probably ſtand on the foundations of the ancient incloſure, from which this city obtained the name of Trapezium. They are built with the ruins of ancient ſtructures, on which are inſcriptions not legible, becauſe they are too high. The town is not populous; for there are more woods and gardens in it than houſes, and theſe but one ſtory high. The harbour is at the eaſt end of the town, but the mole built by the Genoeſe is almoſt deſtroyed. From the Romans, this city was taken by the Scythians, or Tartars, in the time of Valerian. Under the Greek emperors, it was erected into a principality, or empire. Alexis Comnenes took poſſeſſion of it in the year 1204. In 1462, it was taken by Mahomet II. who carried David Comnenes, and all his family, priſoners to Conſtantinople, where they were moſtly put to death. An inſcription on the gate of the caſtle, indicates that the Emperor Juſtinian cauſed the edifices of the town to be repaired. It ſtands on the Black Sea, 220 miles ENE. of Erivan. Lat. 41. 0. N. lon. 40. 25. E.

TREBITZ, a town of Iglau, in Moravia.

TREBNITZ, a town of Oels, in Sileſia.

Treborough, Somerſetſ. SW. of Nettlecomb. Treborow, Devonſ. N. of Houlſworthy. Treburget, Cornwall, near Michelſtow. Trecarrol, Cornwall, SW. of Launceſton. Tredack, or Trebac, Cornw. near Leſkard. Treddington, Worceſterſ. on the Stour, N. of Shipſton. Tredeager, Monmouthſ. near Uſk. Tredegy, or Treclegy, Cornwall, near Camelford. Tredington, Glouceſterſ. 2 miles and a half SE. of Tewkeſbury. Tredonock, Monmouthſ. 3 miles from Caerleon. Here is preſerved a fair and entire monument of a Roman ſoldier of the 2d legion, which was found by the ſexton in digging a grave, upwards of 90 years ago, and which is particularly deſcribed by Dr. Gibſon, in his additions to Camden. Tredruſion, Cornwall, near Bodmin. Trecaſtle, Brecknockſhire. Tre-Evan, or Treneraven, Herefordſ. near Kyne Church. Treford, or Trayford, Suſſex, SW. of Midhurſt. Trefrew, Cornwall, near Swannacote. Trefriheiw, Carnarvonſhire.

TREFFURT, a town of Heſſe-Rhinfels, circle of Upper Rhine, ſubject to the princes of Mentz, Saxony, and Rhine, who have each their particular ſtreets and officers in it. It is ſituated on a hill near the Werra. Alſo a town of Eichfield, Lower Rhine, and TREFFURT, or TREFFORT, a town in the department of the Ain.

Trefuſis, on a point of land in Falmouth Haven, that divides King's Road from Carreck Road.

TREGANNON, a mean town of Cardiganſhire, ſeated in a plain, on the river Tyvy, 15 miles SSE. of Aberiſtwith, and 202 W. by N. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Treganyan, Cornwall, SE. of Truro. Tregarden, Cornwall, N. of Bodmin. Tregare, Monmouthſ. N. of Ragland-Caſtle. Tregarget, Cornwall, on the coaſt, NW. of Camelford. Tregenno, Cornw. S. of St. Ives. Tregernon, Cornw. SW. of Camelford. Tregonnock, Cornwall, SW. of Port Elliot.

TREGONY, a town of Cornwall, having about 150 houſes, poorly built. It has a manufacture of ſerge, and is ſeated on the river Fale, which is navigable to it by barges from Falmouth, 14 miles NNE. of Falmouth, and 245 W. by S. of London. An inconſiderable market on Saturday.

Tregoodock, Cornw. near Launceſton. Tregothuan, Cornw. 3 miles from Truro.

TREGUIER, a town in the dept. of the North Coaſt, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, which runs into the Channel, about 6 miles N. from this town, and 9 miles NE. of Lannion.

Treguit, or Trequit, Cornw. E. of Padſtow Haven. Tregull, Cornw. SE. of Leſkard. Tregunnon, Cornw. by the ſea, SE. of Truro. Trebau, Cornw. NE. of Truro. Trebarrew, or Trebarow, Cornwall, on the coaſt, S. of Tintagel.

TREILEBURG, a ſea-port of Schonen.

Treiſtick, Cornw. near Tregony. Trekeve, Cornw. N. of Leſkard. Trelank, Cornw. SW. of Launceſton. Trelaſe, Cornw. E. of Padſtow-Haven. Trelaſk, Cornw. SE. of Camelford.

TRELAWNEY, a town of the iſland of Jamaica, about 60 miles NW. of Kingſton.

Trelawney, Cornw. W. of the Looes. Treleck, near Monmouth. Treleſtick, Cornw. near Tregony. Treleſtick, Cornwall, near St. Allan and the Coppermine Downs. Trelowwith, or Trelanowth, Cornwall, SE. of Grampound. Trelowren Park, Cornw. near Helſton. Tremabe, or Tremaly, Cornw. NE. of Leſkard. Tremadart, Cornw. SW. of Leſkard. Tremanton-Park, Hants, near Sidmanton. Trèmaton, Cornwall, W. of Saltaſh, on the river Liver, that runs into the Tamar; had a caſtle, that was anciently the ſeat of the earls and other chief governors of Cornwall. It is now in ruins, and as thick tapeſtried with ivy as it was formerly with arras.

TREMBLAY, a town in the dept. of the Eure and Loire, 8 miles S. of Dreux.

Trembroſe, Cornw. SW. of Helford-Haven. Tremene, Cornwall, NW. of Launceſton.

TREMESEN, or TLEMSAM, a province of Algiers, in the Mediterranean. It is above 370 miles in length, and 125 in breadth; is dry, barren, and mountainous, except on the N. ſide, where there are plains abounding in corn, fruits, and paſtures. The capital, of the ſame name, contains ſeveral ſhafts of pillars and other fragments of Roman antiquities, and in a moſque made out of theſe old materials, appear a number of altars dedicated to the Dii Manes. It is inhabited by poor Arabs, Moors, and Jews, and is 50 miles SW. of Oran, and 200 SW. of Algiers. Lat. 34. 40. N. lon. 1. 29. W.

Trembale, Eſſex, in the pariſh of Stanſted-Monfichet.

TREMITI, three ſmall iſlands in the Adriatic, near the coaſt of Naples. They are called Capraria, Tremite, or St. Nicolo, and St. Domino. Lat. 42. 10. N.

Tremoly, Cornwall, S. of Carantock.

TREMOUILLE, a town in the dept. of Vienne, ſeated on the river Bennalle, 32 miles ESE. of Poitiers.

Tremworth, or Tremwood, Kent, was a bridge, and afterwards a ferry, from Sheppey Iſle to Hartey. Trendle. N. and S. Somerſetſ. near Taunton. Trenegas, Cornwall, near Half-Drunken-Downs. Trenegove, Cornwall, NE. of Leſtwithiel. Trenowth, Cornw. SW. of Padſtow-Haven. Trenowth, Cornwall, N. of Leſkard. Trenſhow, Devonſ. near Combe-Martin.

TREMP, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, ſituated on the river Noguera Paireſa, 20 miles N. of Balaguer.

TRENCH ISLAND, an iſland in the Atlantic, near the coaſt of S. Carolina. It is about 25 miles in circumference.

TRENT, a city of Tirol, formerly imperial; and famous for a grand council held here, which began in 1545, and ended in 1563. It contains no ſtreets exactly regular, and the houſes are in general old. Here is a large but antique palace, a cathedral, 8 pariſh churches, a college, and ſome convents. It is ſeated in a pleaſant, fertile valley, on the river Adige, 67 miles NW. of Venice.

TRENT, or the TRENTINO, a princely biſhopric of Tirol, partly under the ſovereignty of the houſe of Auſtria, although the biſhop is a prince of the empire, and alſo a ſtate of the circle of Auſtria.

TRENT, a large river in England, which riſes in Staffordſhire, iſſuing from three ſeveral ſprings between Congleton and Leek. Flowing S. through Staffordſhire, it takes a NE. direction, and enters Derbyſhire, forming, for a ſhort ſpace, its ſeparation from the counties of Leiceſter and Nottingham. It enters the latter county at its SW. extremity, where it is joined by the Erwaſh, and thence croſſes obliquely to the E. till it reaches Newark, and then turning to the northward, forms the boundary between that county and Lincolnſhire, a corner of which it croſſes, and laſtly falls into the Humber below Burton Stather. Canals are made, or making, to open a communication between this river and various parts of the kingdom; viz. from the mouth of the Idle, below Gainſborough, to Redford and Cheſterfield; a circuitous cut to Lincoln, and from thence to Tatterſhal, Horncaſtle, Sleaford, Boſton, and the ſea; from near Nottingham to Cromford and Winſter; from the mouth of the Derwent, one branch to paſs through the counties of Derby, Stafford, and Cheſter, to the Merſey, joining with another branch that goes to Coventry and Braunſton, where it meets with the canal from Brentford; other branches extend to the Thames at Lechlade, the Avon at Warwick, the Severn at Worceſter, and many others.

thers. The Trent is, of itſelf, navigable rom Burton in Staffordſhire, but has the nconvenience of being ſubject to great nd frequent floods.

Trent, Somerſetſ. between Ilcheſter and Milbourn-Port. Trentham, Staff. on the Trent, 3 miles from Newcaſtle-under-Line.

TRENTON, a town of New Jerſey, of which ſtate it is the largeſt town. It is ſeated on the E. ſide of the river Delaware, 24 miles NNE. of Philadelphia.

Trentwith, Cornwall, near Madern.

Treowen, or Traowey, SW. of Monmouth.

TREPORT, a ſea port town in the dept. of the Lower Seine, ſituated on the Engliſh Channel at the mouth of the Breſle, about 3 miles diſtant from Eu, for which town it is the harbour.

Trepton, Northumberl. in the manor of Roubirie.

TREPTOW, a town of Pruſſian Pomerania, with a manufactory of ſtockings and woollen ſtuffs. It is ſeated on the Rega, which is here made navigable, 11 miles SW. of Colberg. Alſo a town of the Anterior Pomerania, 50 miles S. of Stralſund.

Trerene, or Trereve, Cornw. near Phillack. Trerife, Cornw. SW. of Columb-Magna. Treroſe, Cornw. W. of Falmouth-Haven. Treſcot, Staff. on the river Sneſtal, SW. of Wolverhampton. Treſeck, Hereford. between Aconbury and Roſs. Treſham, Glouc. in Hawkſbury pariſh.

TRESHANISH ISLES, four ſmall but fertile iſlands on the W. coaſt of Scotland, between the Iſlands of Col and Mull.

Treſilian, Cornw. at the bottom of Trewardreth Bay. Treſmere, Cornw. by Half-Drunken-Downs. Treſmere, Cornwall, N. of Bodmin. Treſoro and Treſunger, Cornw. E. of Padſtow-Haven. Treſwithin, Cornw. E. of Phillack. Tretallock, Cornw. NE. of St. Columb. Tretermane, Cumberl. near Aſkerton-Caſtle. Trethilly, Cornw. E. of Falmouth-Haven. Trethulſe, Cornw. NE. of Truro. Trethune, Cornw. SW. of Padſtow. Tretire, Hereford. near Michael Church. Treton, York. E. of Sheffield. Tretower, Brecknock. near Brecon Woods. It is large and well built, and has a round tower or caſtle, all entire, except the roof. Trevabees, Cornw. SW. of Helford-Haven. Trevacus, Cornw. SE. of Tregony. Trevalgen, Cornw. NW. of St. Ives. Trevalgy, Cornw. on the north coaſt, SW. of Boſcaſtle. Trevaſus, Cornw. S. of Truro. Trevegay, Cornw. by Ruſhcarrock. Trevelock-Foreſt, Shropſ. S. of Oſwellry. Trevena, Cornw. near Tintagel-Caſtle. Trevenna, Cornw. W. of Padſtow-Haven. Trevera, Cornwall, near Padſtow-Haven.

TREVES, or TRIERS, a city of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, capital of an archbiſhopric of the ſame name, whoſe archbiſhop is an elector, aſſumes the title of archchancellor of the empire for the Gauls, and gives the firſt vote at the election of the emperor. The chapter conſiſts of 40 canons, including 16 capitulars and 24 domicelli. It has 3 colleges, a cathedral, 3 collegiate and 5 pariſh churches, as alſo 13 monaſteries and nunneries, with a houſe of the Teutonic Order, and another belonging to that of St. John. Treves has greatly ſuffered in the wars, and is now neither large nor populous. It is reckoned, however, one of the moſt ancient cities in Germany, having been a place of note of the Treviri, long before the Chriſtian æra, and the capital of all Gaul in the time of Conſtantine the Great. It is ſituated between 2 mountains on the river Moſelle, over which it has a ſtone bridge, in a fertile country, abounding with wine, 20 miles NE. of Luxemburg.

TREVES, or TRIERS, an electorate of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, bounded on the N. by the electorate of Cologne; on the E. by the eſtates of the Elector Palatine and of Naſſau; on the S. by France; and on the W. by Luxemburg and Lorrain. It is about 80 miles in length, but the breadth is uncertain. It is full of mountains and foreſts; but, near the rivers Rhine and Moſelle, the ſoil is fruitful, and the country populous.

TREVES, a town in the dept. of the Gard.

Trevithin, Monmouthſhire, W. of Uſk. Trevethock, Cornwall, NE. of Helſton.

TREVI, a town of Spoleto; and a town in Campagna-di-Roma.

TREVICO, a town of Principato Ultra.

Trevigo, Cornwall, near Leſtwithiel. Trevill, Cornwall, at the Land's End. Trevillock, Cornw. by Grampound. Trevillet, Cornwall, SE. of Tintagel-Caſtle. Trevine, Cornw. W. of Truro.

TREVINO, a town of Alava, in Spain.

TREVISANO, a marquiſate of Italy, in Venice, about 24 miles in length, and nearly as much in breadth. The ſoil is exceedingly fertile, and appears like a continued garden; and they export cattle, ſilk, and woollen cloth. Treviſo is the principal town.

TREVISO, or TREVIGIO, a city of Italy, capital of the Treviſano, containing 17 churches and 19 convents. It had formerly merly a univerſity, which was tranſferred to Padua. It contains a great number of handſome buildings, being the reſidence of many noble families; and is ſituated at the conflux of the rivers Sile and Piavefella, 20 miles NNW. of Venice.

Trevithic, Cornwall, near Tregony. Trevona, Cornwall, SW. of Tregony. Trevour, Cornwall, between Great Columb and Padſtow-Haven. Trevouth, Cornwall, near Great Columb.

TREVOUX, a ſmall town in the department of Ain. The moſt remarkable buildings here are the late mint; the late parliament houſe; the governor's houſe; an hoſpital, founded by Mademoiſelle de Montpenſier; and the printing office. The latter is celebrated for the Literary Journals, compoſed by the Jeſuits of the college of Louis le Grand, entitled "Memoires des Trevoux," and for the "Dictionnaire Univerſel," which is equally eſteemed, although that of the French Academy is preferable, with reſpect to the greateſt part of the objects that are common to them. Trevoux is ſeated on the river Soane, 11 miles N. of Lyons, and 188 S. by E. of Paris.

Trewardinock, Cornw. near Tregony.

TREWARDRETH-BAY, in Cornwall, on the Engliſh Channel, about 3 miles W. of Fowey-Haven.

Trewargon, Cornw. N. of the Loos. Trewath, Cornwall, NW. of Leſtwithiel. Trewen, Cornwall, NW. of Launceſton. Trewen, Herefordſ. 5 miles from Abergavenny. Trewerveneth, Cornw. near Penzance. Trewiadle, Cornw. NW. of Camelford. Trewine, Cornw. E. of Falmouth-Haven. Trewinck, Cornwall, between Great Columb and Padſtow. Trewhet, Upper and Lower, Northumb. SW. of Alnwick. Trewnard, Cornw. near St. Earth. Trewolf, Cornw. SW. of Penzance. Trewolthal, Cornwall, W. of Helford-Haven. Treworgan, Cornw. NE. of Truro. Treworgans, Cornwall, between Penzance and the Land's End. Treworgy, Cornw. 3 miles from Kilguth. Treworgy, Cornwall, N. of Leſkard. Trewſbury, Glouceſterſhire, in the pariſh of Coats, not far from the Ackman Street way. Here is an old encampment attributed to the Romans. Trewullock, Cornwall, E. of Great Columb.

TREYSA, a town of Heſſe, circle of Upper Rhine, ſeated on a hill near the river Schwalm, 17 miles ENE. of Marpurg.

TREZZO, a town of the Milaneſe, ſituated on the Adda, 17 miles NE. of Milan.

Triago, Herefordſ. E. of Kynechurch.

TRIBSERS, a town of Swediſh Pomerania, reckoned a paſs to Mecklenburg. It is ſituated on or near the river Trebel, 22 miles SW. of Stralſund.

TRIBSTADT, a town of Deux Ponts, circle of Upper Rhine, 18 miles NW. of Landau.

TRICARICO, a town of Baſilicata, in Naples.

TRICOLORE, a town of Hindooſtan, in the Carnatic, 38 miles W. of Pondichery.

TRIERS. See TREVES.

TRIEST, a ſea-port town of Carniola, ſituated on the ſide of a hill, extending to the Adriatic, about which the vineyards form a ſemicircle. The ſtreets are narrow; but there is a large ſquare, where they keep the annual fair. The harbour conſiſts of an inner and outer, and has been conſiderably improved and fortified by the Empreſs Maria Thereſa, who alſo declared this place a free port; with an exception of the articles of iron, ſteel, copper, quickſilver, ſalt, gunpowder, mirrors, and cryſtal. The inhabitants have a good trade in ſalt, oil, almonds, iron, &c. brought from Laubach; and they make good wines. It is 8 miles NNE. of Cabo-d'Iſtria. Lat. 45. 56. N. lon. 14. 4. E.

TRIFELS CASTLE, a citadel of Deux-Ponts, circle of Upper Rhine, where, according to ſome authors, Richard I. king of England, was kept a priſoner. It is one mile SE. of Anweiler.

Trill, Devonſ. near Exminſter.

Trillic, in Tyrone, Ulſter.

*TRIM, the ſhire town of Meath, in Leinſter, ſeated on the river Boyne, 22 miles NW. of Dublin.

Trimdon, Durham, W. of Hartlepool. Trimwenton, Cornw. N. of Penzance. Trimingham, Norfolk, near N. and S. Reppis. Trimley, St. Martin's and St. Mary's, Suffolk, near Orwell and Woodbridge Havens. Trimpley, Worceſterſ. in Kidderminſter pariſh.

TRINCOMALE, a ſea-port town of Ceylon, on the E. ſide, with a harbour, reckoned the beſt and fineſt in the Eaſt Indies. It is ſituated in a bay capable of containing a thouſand veſſels, where they may winter, careen, and refit, with entire ſafety. The citadel, built by the Dutch, has four baſtions, well ſupplied with artillery; it is ſituated on a peninſula, and commands the harbour. It was taken from the Dutch by the Engliſh, in January 1782; retaken by the French in Auguſt following; and reſtored to the Dutch by the peace of 1783. It has been again taken by the Engliſh ſince the commencement of the preſent war. Trinco-male

nale is 70 miles NE. of Candy. Lat. 8. 5. N. lon. 81. 52. E.

Trincow, Cornwall, near Padſtow.

* TRING, a pretty little town of Hertordſhire, ſituated on the borders of Buckughamſhire, near the Braunſton canal, 22 miles W. of Hertford, and 31 WNW. of London. At little Tring, in this paiſh, riſes one of the heads or branches of he Thames, which, leaving the county t Puttenham, runs by Ayleſbury to Thame. A good market on Friday, eſecially for corn, of which here are large ranaries.

Tringford, Herts, between Long Marton and Tring.

TRINIDAD, an iſland in the Weſt Indies, of a quadrangular form, ſeparated rom Paria, in Terra Firma, by a ſtrait bout 8 miles over. The ſoil is fruitful, roducing ſugar, cotton, Indian corn, fine obacco, caſſava, and other roots, and, in eneral, all that is found in N. and S. merica. Here are ſeveral ſorts of anials, with plenty of wild hogs, fiſh, fowl, nd fruits. The northern part of it, acording to Sir Walter Raleigh, (who pent ſome time in examining the iſland, n the year 1593) is high land, but the ir is ſaid to be unhealthy, being often coered with thick fogs. It is upwards of 0 miles in length, and from 6 to 30 in breadth; and was diſcovered by Columbus in 1498. All the interior parts are overed with intricate and impenetrable oreſts. The Engliſh have lately taken this ſland, and ſtill continue in poſſeſſion of it.

TRINIDAD, a town of Guatimala, in Mexico, ſituated on the South Sea, 100 miles SE. of Guatimala. It is a very important place, becauſe there is no other harbour on this coaſt.

TRINIDAD, a town of Terra Firma, in New Granada, ſeated on the river Magdlena, 30 miles NW. of Santa Fé. Alſo a town of Moxes, in Buenos Ayres; a town of the iſland of Cuba, 140 miles SE. of Havannah; a town of Veragua, in Mexico, 18 miles SE. of La Conception; and a town of Nicaragua, in Mexico, ituated on the E. coaſt of the lake of Nicaragua, in lat. 11. 42. N. and lon. 88. 10. W.

Trinity, Cornw. near Polrudden-Hill, W. of Trewardreth-Bay. Trinity-Chapel, Derbyſ. near Alfreton. Trinity-Chapel, Devonſ. on the coaſt, by Dartmouth. Trinity-Chapel, Monmouthſ. oppoſite to Auſt-Ferry, over the Severn.

TRINITY, or TRINITE LA, a thriving ſea-port town of the iſland of Martinico, much frequented by ſhipping, the cargoes of which are ſure to meet with a quick ſale. During the hurricane ſeaſon, ſhips have a ſafe ſtation in this port. Lat. 14. 53. N. lon. 61. 8. W. Alſo a town in the dept. of the Morbihan, and a town of Piedmont.

Trinity-Pariſh, in Waterford, Munſter.

TRINO, a town of Italy, in Montferrat, ſituated in a country that produces great quantities of corn, rice, and excellent cheeſe, 8 miles W. of Caſſal.

TRINCOMALE, a town of Hindooſtan, in the Carnatic, about 45 miles SSW. of Arcot, and 52 WNW. of Pondicherry. Near this place, in 1768, the troops of Hyder Ally were totally defeated by the Engliſh, under Colonel Smith, with the loſs of the greateſt part of their artillery.

Trip, Somerſetſ. in Old Cleeve pariſh, by Clatworthy. Tripall, or Trippall, a river in Northumb. which runs into the S. Tyne, at Bellifter Caſtle, 7 miles W. of Hexham. Triplow, Cambridgeſhire near Fulmer.

TRIPOLI, a city of Africa, in Barbary, capital of a territory of the ſame name. It is pretty large, and has a harbour, the moſt commodious of any along this whole coaſt, except Alexandria. The houſes are low and mean, and the ſtreets narrow, dirty and irregular. It was formerly very flouriſhing, and has now ſome trade in linen cloth, manufactured here, ſtuffs, ſaffron, corn, oil, wood, dates, oſtrich feathers, ſkins, aſhes, which they ſell to the Europeans to make glaſs and ſoap) and particularly Chriſtian ſlaves, whom they take at ſea. At the W. end is a ſtrong caſtle, fortified after the modern manner, and furniſhed with ſome large cannon. In the year 1685, Tripoli was bombarded by a French ſquadron, under Marſhal d'Etrees, and the government compelled to ſue for peace. It is ſeated on the Mediterranean, in a barren, ſandy ſoil, which, though deſtitute of rivers, ſprings, wells, or any other water, but what is ſupplied by ciſterns or reſervoirs of rain water, produces palm-trees, delicious dates, and the lotus, a plant which ſupplies them with both meat and drink. 275 miles SE. by S. of Tunis. Lat. 32. 34. N. lon. 13. 12. E.

TRIPOLI, a country of Barbary, on the Mediterranean, E. of Tunis and Biledulgerid; and W. of Barca. It is about 600 miles from E. to W. but the breadth is various, from 120 to 250 miles. Some parts of it are pretty fruitful; but that toward Egypt is a ſandy deſert. It had the title of a kingdom but is now a ſort of regency, at the head of which is a dey, or bey, who is not merely a titular vaſſal to the Porte, but really under ſubjection and tribute. They have about 7 or 8 corſairs, only one of which can properly be ſtiled a ſhip; the reſt are ſmall gallies, poorly manned and equipped, but take, however, a great number of ſhips. Here are a number of villages, very poor, and thinly inhabited; but few cities or towns of conſequence.

title

TRIPOLI, or TARABOLUS, a town of Syria, on the Mediterranean. It has no harbour but a ſimple road, the bottom of which is rocky, and ſoon wears out the cables of veſſels, which are, moreover, frequently expoſed to the violence of the NW. winds. The inhabitants are near 60,000, conſiſting of Turks, ſchiſmatic Greeks, Latins, and Jews. All the houſes have fountains belonging to them, with orchards, where the nopal grows ſpontaneouſly. The commerce is wholly in the hands of the French, who have a conſul here, and three commercial houſes within the town. They export coarſe ſilks, ſponges fiſhed in the road, exchanging them for cloth, cochineal, ſugar, or Weſt-India coffee. The baſhaw farms the government from the Porte, on a leaſe of one year only, at 750 purſes, or about 39,000l. per annum. In the territory about it, are a great number of mulberry-trees, and other fruits. It is ſituated near the mouth of a ſmall river, called Kadiſha, at the foot of Mount Lebanon, which overlooks and ſurrounds it on the E. S. and partly on the NW. 130 miles S. of Scandaroon, and 72 NW. of Damaſcus.

Trippils, Eſſex, near Woodford-Wells. Trippleton, Herefordſ. NE. of Brampton-Brian.

TRIST, a ſmall uninhabited iſland of Mexico, on the S. coaſt of the Bay of Campeachy, and W. of Port Royal Iſland, from which it is ſeparated by a narrow channel. It is about 18 miles in circumference.

Triſull, Staffordſ. on the Sneſtal Water, by Wolverhampton. Triſwell, Nottingh. SE. of Retford.

TRITCHINOPOLY, a ſtrong town of Hindooſtan, in the Carnatic, garriſoned by Engliſh troops. It is 67 miles SSW. of Tranquebar.

Tritball, Cornwall, N. of Helſton. Tritlington, Northumberland, N. of Morpeth.

TRIVENTO, a town of Moliſo, Naples.

TROGEN, a town of Appenzel, with a manufacture of cloth, and a mineral ſpring.

Troham, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Biſley. It is remarkable for quarries of good tiles.

TROJA, a town of Capitanata, Naples.

TROIS-RIVIERES, a town of Upper Canada, ſo called from three rivers, which ſtreams unite about a quarter of a mile below the town, and afterwards fall into the great river St. Lawrence. Under the French government it was the mart or emporium for furs and other Indian commodities. It is not very populous, though the inhabitants are wealthy, and the houſes large, and richly furniſhed. The country round it is pleaſant and fertile. It is ſeated on the river St. Lawrence, 55 miles SW. of Quebec.

Trokenbole, Cambridgeſhire, W. of Wiſbeach.

TROKI, a town of Lithuania, capital of a palatinate of the ſame name. It was formerly the reſidence of the great dukes, who afterwards removed to Wilna. It is ſituated among lakes, 16 miles W. of Wilna.

TRON, ST. a town of Liege, anciently named Sarcinium, or Sarciae, but named Tron, from a famous Benedictine abbey, built here about the year 657, by St. Trudon, a rich lord of the country.

Trone, Berks, in Wantage pariſh.

TROPEA, a town of Calabria Ultra, ſeated on a high rock, near the ſea.

TROPPAU, a city of Sileſia, the ſeat of the regency for the Auſtrian part; 40 miles N. by E. of Olmutz.

TROPPAU, a principality of Sileſia, containing 11 cities or towns; it is divided between the houſe of Auſtria and the king of Pruſia.

TROPEZ, ST. a ſea-port in the dept. of Var, ſeated in a bay of the ſame name, on the Mediterranean, 12 miles SSW. of Frejus.

Troſton, Suffolk, S. of Fakenham. Troſtrey, Monmouthſ. N. of Uſk. Trothy, a river in Monmouthſ. which runs into the Wye, below Monmouth. Trottiſcliff, Kent, 2 miles NE. of Wrotham. Trotton, Suſſex, near Petworth and Midhurſt. Troweryn, a river in Merionethſhire. Troughwhern, Northumberland, SW. of Elleſdon. Troutbeck, a river in Cumberland, that runs into the Ithing, below Horſehead. Troutbeck, Weſtmorland, near Bowneſs, on the river Troutbeck, which runs into the Eden, 3 miles below Appleby.

TROWBRIDGE, a town of Wiltſhire, with a conſiderable manufacture of broad cloth, for the moſt part of the fine ſorts, mixed mixed with Spanish wool. It is seated on the river Were, (over which it has a stone bridge) 10 miles SE. of Bath, and 98 W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Trowell, W. of Nottingham. Trowryn, a river of N. Wales, which rises from a lake in Merionethshire, and runs into the Dee. Trowse-Newton-Hall, 2 miles NE. of Norwich.

TROY, or ILIUM, an ancient and famous city of Asia, near the Archipelago, at the foot of the Mount Ida, and opposite the isle of Tenedos. It is well known in story, or at least in poetic fiction, for its ten years siege.

TROYES, a city in the dept. of Aube, before the revolution, the capital of Champagne, and the see of a bishop. It contained 14 churches, 4 abbies, 10 convents, a college, and an hospital. As the stone in its neighbourhood is too tender to be employed in building, almost all the houses are of wood; which, nevertheless, produce an effect pleasing to the eye. Among the objects of curiosity are St. Stephen's, the principal church, the public library of the late Cordeliers; and the castle in which the ancient counts of Champagne resided. Its commerce, once very flourishing, and still considerable, consists in linens, dimities, fustians, flax, hemp, wax-chandlery, candles, and wine. It is seated on the river Seine, 30 miles NNE. of Sens, and 90 ESE. of Paris.

Troy House, and Michel, S. and SW. of Monmouth.

Trull, Somersetsh. SW. of Taunton.

Truly, Sussex, E. of Stening. Trumpington, 2 miles from Cambridge. Here are still the ruins of the mill commemorated by Chaucer, in the Miller's Tale.

Trunch, Norfolk, NE. of N. Walsham.

* TRURO, a town in Cornwall, with regular streets, a large market-house, and spacious, old church, not inferior to any in the county for its Gothic architecture. It has the benefit of the coinage of tin, and the lord warden of the stannaries holds his parliament here. Its chief business is in shipping tin and copper ore, found in abundance in the neighbourhood. Truro is seated at the head of the river Fale, with a large, commodious wharf or quay, for vessels of about 100 tons burden, 11 miles N. of Falmouth, and 257 W. by S. of London. Well frequented markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

Trusham, Devonshire, N. of Chudleigh.

Trusley, Derbyshire, E. of Boylston.

TRUXILLO, a considerable town of Spain, in Estramadura, 117 miles SW. of Madrid.

TRUXILLO, a town of Venezuela, in Terra-Firma. Lat. 7. 20. N. lon. 69. 15. W.

TRUXILLO, a rich and trading town of Peru, in the audience of Lima, and valley of Chimo. In its pleasant, well-cultivated, and fertile territory, are above 50,000 tributary Americans. It is seated on a small river, near the S. Sea, 6 miles S. of Guanchaco, its port or habour, and 300 miles NNW. of Lima. Lat. 8. 1. S.

TRUXILLO, a town of Honduras, seated on a gulf of the same name, with a good harbour. It is built between two rivers, and surrounded by thick groves, but, at present, is much decayed. Lat. 15. 20. N. lon. 88. 5. W.

Truxton without, Hants, SW. of Weyhill. Tryley, Monmouthsh. N. of Abergavenny.

TSCHUTSKI, a country situated on the NE. extremity of Asia, near the NW. coast of America, being bounded by the great river Anadir on the S. The attention of the natives, like that of the wandering Koriacs, is confined chiefly to their fleet, with which their country abounds. They are a hardy race of people, and are formidable neighbours to the Koriacs of both nations, who often experience their depredations. The Russians have long endeavoured to bring them under their dominion; and though they have lost a great number of men, in their different expeditions to accomplish this purpose, they have never yet been able to effect it.

TSHETSHEN. See KISTI.

* TUAM, in the county of Galway, in Connaught, was once a city, but is now reduced to a small village. It is 20 miles NNE. of Galway, and 93 W. of Dublin.

TUBAON, a town on the N. coast of Java. Lat. 6. 0. S. lon. 111. 51. E.

Tubberdonny, or Tubberidony, in Galway, Connaught. Tubberhany, in Tipperary, Munster. Tubbermore, in Derry, Ulster. Tubbermurry, in Limerick, Munster. Tubberpadder, in Galway, Connaught. Tubberpound, in King's County, Leinster. Tubberseanavan, in Sligo, Connaught. Tubbervrackin, in Galway, Connaught.

TUBINGEN, a town of Suabia, the second in Wirtemburg, with an university, a seminary for the study of the law, and a college for the nobility. In the town-house is a very curious clock. Here the ancient Palatines of Tubingen, whose origin is unknown, had their plalz, or palatium, which stood on the spot of the present castle. It is seated on the river Neckar, between two hills, 18 miles SW. of Stutgard.

TUCUMAN,

TUCUMAN, or TACMA, a large province of S. America, W. of Paraguay, E. of the Andes, which ſeparate it from Chili, and N. of Cordova, in the vice-royalty of Buenos Ayres. The air is hot, and the earth ſandy, and almoſt without ſtones; it is, however, very well watered, producing great plenty of cotton, wax, honey; paſtel for dyeing, and a variety of fruits, with roots, Indian wheat, &c. Vaſt numbers of cattle are bred here, and the ſheep are very large and ſtrong, (being uſed for carriage by the natives) but with fine wool. They have plenty of deer and other game, with lions and tigers in their woods. The original natives, who live in ſmall villages cloſe to one another, are ſomewhat civilized by the Spaniards, being covered with cotton and woollen manufactures.

TUCUYO, a town of Terra Firma, in Venezuela, in a valley of the ſame name. A river runs through the middle of the town and valley; the air is good, and the ſoil abounds in ſugar-canes, cotton, and the neceſſaries of life. Lat 7. 31. N. lon. 67. 40. W.

Tuddenham, Suffolk, near Ipſwich. Tuddenham, Suffolk, SW. of Lackford. Tuddenham, E. W. and N. Norfolk, E. of Dereham. Tuddey, S. of Durham. Tuddiford, Hants, between Lymington and Chriſtchurch.

TUDDINGTON, a ſmall town of Bedfordſhire, with a ſmall market on Thurſday, almoſt diſuſed. It is 5 miles NW. of Dunſtable, and 37 NW. of London.

Tuddington, Glouceſ. between Winchcomb and Campden. Tuddington, or Teddington, Middleſex, on the Thames, adjoining Hampton, a mile NW. of Kingſton.

TUDELA, a town of Spain, in Navarre, ſeated on the river Ebro, 45 miles NW. of Saragoſſa, and 146 NNE. of Madrid. Alſo a town of Leon, 5 miles E. of Valladolid, and a town of New Grenada, in S. America.

Tudeley, Kent, 2 miles SE. of Tunbridge. Tudſham, or Tulſham Hall, Kent, near Weſt Farley. Tudworth, North, Wiltſhire, 6 miles NE. of Ambreſbury. Tudworth, South, Hants, by North Tudworth. Tudy, St. Cornwall, SE. of Padſtow-Haven. Tue, St. Cornwall, SE. of Tregony.

TVERSKOE, a government of Ruſſia, bounded on the N. by Novogrodſkoe, and on the E. by Jaroſlav and Vladomir. It was once an independent ſovereignty, called the Duchy of Tver, and afterwards compriſed in the government of Novogorod. The number of inhabitants in this diſtrict has of late increaſed very much. The country produces plenty of grain, hemp, flax, and vegetables. Its foreſts yield oak, birch, alder, &c. and here are vaſt numbers of wild and tame quadrupeds, with a variety of birds, eagles, falcons, cranes, &c. Beſide the fiſhes common to moſt lakes and rivers, there is a fiſh which is peculiar to the waters of theſe northern regions. It is called the ſterlet, the acipenſer ruthenus, of Linnæus, and is a ſpecies of ſturgeon, highly eſteemed for the flavour and delicacy of its fleſh, and for its roe, of which the fineſt caviare is made.

TVER, a conſiderable commercial town of Ruſſia, capital of the government of the ſame name, and ſeated at the confluence of the Tverza and the Volga, along which are conveyed all the goods and merchandiſe ſent by water from Siberia, and the ſouthern provinces toward Peterſburgh. It is divided into the old and new town: the former, ſituated on the oppoſite ſide of the Volga, conſiſts almoſt entirely of wooden cottages: the latter having been deſtroyed by a dreadful conflagration in 1763, has been much improved in being re-built. The empreſs ordered a regular and beautiful plan of a new town to be made; enjoining all the houſes to be conſtructed according to this model. At her own expence, ſhe raiſed the governor's houſe, the epiſcopal palace, the courts of juſtice, the exchange, the priſon, and ſome other public edifices; and to every perſon who engaged to build a houſe of brick, ſhe offered a loan of 300l. for a year, without intereſt. The money which ſhe advanced on this occaſion, amounted to 60,000l. and ſhe has ſince remitted one-third of this ſum. The ſtreets, which are broad and long, iſſue in ſtraight lines from an octagon in the centre. The houſes are of brick ſtuccoed white, and make a magnificent appearance. The plan, when completed, was to compriſe two octagons, with ſeveral ſtreets leading from them, and interſecting each other at right angles. Here is an eccleſiaſtical ſeminary, which admits 600 ſtudents. In 1776, the empreſs founded a ſchool for the inſtruction of 200 burghers' children; and, in 1779, an academy was alſo opened in this town, for the education of the young nobility of the province, at the public charge. It admits 120 ſtudents, who are inſtructed in foreign languages, arithmetic, geography, fortification, tactics, natural philoſophy, muſic, riding, dancing, &c. Tver is 99 miles NNW. of Moſcow.

Tueſley, Surry, in Godalmin pariſh. Tuffield, Oxfordſ. near Nettlebed, through which the Grimſditch runs to Colnbrook. Tuffley Court, by Glouceſter. Tuftes, Eſſex, near Little Baddow and Malden. Tufton, Kent, in Rainham pariſh. Tufton, Suſſex, in Nordiham pariſh. Tugby, Leiceſterſ. N. of Hallaton.

TUGELOO, a town of Georgia, in N. America.

TUGELOO, a river of Georgia, in N. America, one of the branches of the Savanna, which runs into the Keowee, 28 miles NW. of Peterſburg.

Tugford, Shropſ. NW. of Brown-Clee-Hill. Tuggel, or Tugball, Northumberl. in Veſey barony.

TUGGURT, or TOCAORT, a town of Africa, in the country of Algiers, 240 miles SSE. of Algiers.

TULA, a city of Ruſſia, capital of a government, and containing, according to Buſching, 144 churches and convents. It has ſome manufactures of fire arms and leather, and is ſituated on the Upha, 112 miles S. of Moſcow.

Tullaghnaneeve; ſee Saintfield. Tullabane, in Leitrim, Connaught. Tullamore, in Antrim, Ulſter. Tullamore, in Down, Ulſter.

* TULLAMORE, a town of King's County, in Leinſter, ſituated on the river Clodagh or Tullamore, which divides the town nearly into two equal parts, near the grand canal, 46 miles WNW. of Dublin.

Tullanſtown, in Louth, Leinſter.

TULLES, a town in the dept. of Correze, before the revolution, the capital of Lower Limoſin, and ſee of a biſhop. The cathedral is famous for its ſteeple, which is very high and curious. It is ſituated in a country full of mountains and precipices, at the confluence of the rivers Carteze and Solane, 37 miles SE. of Limoges.

TULLOW, a town of Carlow, in Leinſter, 8 miles ESE. of Carlow, and 38 SSW. of Dublin.

TULLYCLEA, a river of Fermanagh, in Ulſter, which runs into Lough Earne, 4 miles N. from Enneſkillen.

Tully, in Kildare, Leinſter. Tullycarbet, in Monaghan, Ulſter. Tullyo donald, in Donegal, Ulſter. Tullyvalley, in Armagh, Ulſter.

TULN, a town of Auſtria, near the Wienarwald, or Wood of Vienna. It is ſeated on or near the river Tuln, 15 miles WNW. of Vienna.

Tulraban, in Mayo, Connaught. Tulſk, in Roſcommon, Connaught.

TUMANSKOI, an Iſland of Ruſſia, in the Frozen Ocean, about 360 miles in circumference. It is of a triangular form, and lies N. of the iſle of Kirlach, from which it is ſeparated by a narrow channel. Lat. 71. 50. to 73. N. lon. 11. 19.

Tumbey, Linc. near Tatterſhal Chace.

TUMBEZ, a town of Piura, in Peru, conſiſting of about 70 houſes, built of cane, and thatched. It is ſituated near a river of the ſame name, which empties itſelf into the bay of Guaquil, almoſt oppoſite to the iſland of St. Clare. Lat. 3. 13. S.

TUMEL, a rapid river of Perthſhire, which, after forming many beautiful cataracts, ſpreads into a lake, called Loch Tumel, and afterwards falls into the Garry.

Tummer, Somerſetſ. near Milbourn-Port, 3 miles from Sherborn.

* TUNBRIDGE, a town of Kent, conſiſting of houſes moſtly ill-built, and the ſtreets but indifferently paved. Here is a famous free-ſchool, founded by a native of the town, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Tunbridge is ſeated on the river Tun, one of the five little ſtreams of the Medway, over each of which is a ſtone bridge, 14 miles SSW. of Maidſtone, and 30 SE. by S. of London. Market on Friday.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, a town of Kent, 5 miles S. of Tunbridge, but in the ſame pariſh. It is much reſorted to in ſummer, on account of its chalybeate waters. It is ſeated at the bottom of three hills, called Mount Sinai, Mount Ephraim, and Mount Pleaſant, on which are ſcattered houſes, orchards, and gardens; and as the country here is naturally wild, the effect of the whole is romantic and picturesque. Here are the buildings requiſite for the accommodation of the viſitants, with a plentiful market, and ſhops noted for their elegant turnery ware. About a mile and a half from the Wells, are ſtupendous rocks, in ſome parts 75 feet high, the mean height being 40; they have the appearance of the hulks of large men of war, ranged cloſe together. Surpriſing cliffs and chaſms are interſperſed, with narrow, gloomy paſſages that lead through the midſt of them. The water is a great deobſtruent and bracer, operates by urine and perſpiration, and is efficacious in cold, chronical diſtempers, weak nerves, and bad digeſtion.

Tunford, Hertfordſ. SE. of Wormley. Tunford, or Toniford, Kent, near Thenington.

TUNGEBADRA,

TUNGBHADRA, a river of Hindoostan, which runs into the Kistnah, 7 miles E. of Rachore, in the country of Golconda.

TUNJA, a town that gives name to a district of Terra Firma, in New Granada, 30 miles SW. of Truxillo.

TUNIS, a city of Barbary (called by Diodorus Siculus, Leucon Tuneta, that is, White Tunis, perhaps from the chalky cliffs that lie round it, when viewed from the sea), and capital of a kingdom of the same name. It is in the form of an oblong square, and is rather more than 3 miles in circumference, including the suburbs. Here are five gates, and the number of houses, according to Dr. Shaw, is about 12,000. The bey's palace, where the divan assemble, the great mosque, with an exchange, a custom house, and an arsenal, are the only buildings of note. Here are 9 colleges, for students, and 86 petty schools, with doctors of the Mahometan law, partly maintained by the public. The janizaries are quartered in barracks. The harbour, which has a very narrow entrance, is defended by a castle, which is its chief defence, and the fortress of Goletta, situated on the side of a canal, but not carefully supported. In the city they have no water, but what is obtained at a mile's distance. Here are English, French, Dutch, and other European consuls, who are treated with civility and respect, the Tunisians having little of the insolent haughtiness of the Algerines, and being, by far, the most civilized nation of Barbary. Tunis has long been famous for the manufacture of linen and woollen goods, for the sale of which, there is a piazza of vast extent, near the centre of the city, which is said formerly to have contained not less than 3000 shops. The inhabitants, indeed, are more intent on trade than plundering and cruising. It is situated on a rising ground, on the W. bank of a lake, among lakes and marshes, which, however, do not render it unhealthy, (which is, by Dr. Shaw, attributed to the number of mastick and myrtle trees, rosemary, and other gummy, aromatic plants, with which they heat their ovens and baths) in lat. 36. 42. N. and lon. 10. 16. E.

TUNIS, a country of Africa, usually dignified with the title of kingdom, bounded on the N. and E. by the Mediterranean, and the kingdom of Tripoli; on the S. by several tribes of the Arabs; and on the W. by the kingdom of Algiers, and the country of Esab; extending about 200 miles from N. to S. and 120 from E. to W. This country was formerly subject to the emperor of Morocco, and afterwards, for a space of time, became a powerful and independent kingdom. In the year 1538, it was overrun by Barbaroſſa, and notwithstanding the endeavours of Charles V. and his successors, was made a province of the Ottoman empire, under Selim II. by Sinan, bashaw of the Levant. At present, the whole kingdom is divided into two circuits, the summer and the winter, which the bey makes in person, through his dominions, at those two seasons. It is now, therefore, considered as a republic, under the protection of the Turks; and a bashaw still resides here, although, in power and influence, he is a mere cypher. The beyship is hereditary, and independent both of the Porte and the divan, but is seldom filled up, when vacant, without violence and bloodshed. The air, in general, is healthy, but the soil in the eastern parts is but indifferent, for want of water. Toward the middle, the mountains and valleys abound in fruits; but the northern part of the bey's summer circuit is by far the most fertile, pleasant, and populous, and hath the greatest number of cities, villages, and dowars. The environs of Tunis, the capital city, are very dry, upon which account corn is generally dear. However, there are plenty of citrons, lemons, oranges, dates, grapes, and other fruits. There are also olive-trees, roses, and odoriferous plants. In the woods and mountains are lions, wild beeves, ostriches, monkeys, camelcons, roe-bucks, hares, pheasants, partridges, and other sorts of birds and beasts. The most remarkable rivers are the Guadilcarbar, Magrida, Mageada, and Caps. The Tunisians, in general, trade in horses, olives, oil, soap, and ostriches eggs and feathers; and they export to France, in particular, corn, oil, beans, lentils, wax, hides, and Morocco skins; receiving, in exchange, Spanish wool, Languedoc cloths, vermilion, sugar, pepper, cloves, wine, brandy, paper, hardware, iron, and steel. The Italian trade is wholly carried on by the Jews. The Turks and Moors export to the Levant woollen stuffs, lead, gold-dust, and chequins, and a vast number of bales of caps; and bring, in return, silks, calicoes, iron, alum, and vermilion. They send much the same kind of commodities into Egypt. They import, in exchange from thence, linen, cotton, rice, flax, and coffee. The number of French ships freighted at Tunis, by Turks, Moors, and Jews, Jews, amounts yearly to about 150 to the Levant, and 50 for France and Italy; as for thoſe of the Engliſh, their number is uncertain.

Tunley and Daneway, Glouceſ. hamets to Biſley. Tunſtall, Devonſhire, near Torbay. Tunſtall, Durham, near Stranton. Tunſtall, Kent, near Sittingbourn, miles S. of Milton. Tunſtall, Lancaſ. of Kirby Lonſdale. Tunſtall, Norf. N. of Yarmouth. Tunſtall, Staff. in Sugenthall manor. Tunſtall, Staff. N. of Wolverhampton. Tunſtall, Suffolk, NE. of Woodbridge. Tunſtall, Yorkſ. NE. of Headon. Tunſtall, Yorkſ. S. of Richmond. Tunſted, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Tunwell, Herts, near Thundridge.

Tunyquin, in Roſcommon, Connaught.

Tupham, Linc. near Horncaſtle. Tupendens, or Tubbenden, Kent, in the pariſhes of Orpington and Farnborow.

Tupton, Derbyſhire, near Cheſterfield.

TURA, a river of Ruſſia, which riſes in the province of Ekaterinburg, and empties itſelf into the Tobol, oppoſite Turhanſkoi, in the government of Tobolſk.

TURA, a ſmall iſland in the Grecian Archipelago. Lat. 39. 34. N. lon. 24. 1. E.

Turburſey, Cambridgeſhire, N. of Ely.

TURCKHEIM, a town in the department of Upper Rhine, 3 miles W. of Colmar; a town of Mindelheim, in Suabia; and a town of Worms, Upper Rhine, ſituated on the Rhine, 4 miles N. of Worms.

TURCOIN, a town in the department of the North, 6 miles NNE. of Liſle. It is remarkable for an unfortunate conflict, May 18, 1794, (in which the Britiſh, Austrian, Hanoverian, and other allied forces under the Duke of York, General Clairayt, &c. were compelled to retreat with great loſs) and which decided the fate of the Netherlands. The Britiſh troops alone loſt upwards of 1000 men, and 43 pieces of cannon.

TURCOMANIA, that part of Armenia that belongs to the Turks.

TURENNE, a town in the department of Correze, 15 miles SSW. of Tulle.

TURENBURG, a town in Samland, in Ruſſia, 16 miles WNW. of Koningſberg.

Turfield, Bucks, near Wycomb. Turfield, Glouceſ. E. of Chipping Sodbury. Turforn, or Twiford, Shropſhire, SE. of Oſweſtry. Turges, Hants, W. of Everſey. Turgh, a river of Montgomeryſ. which riſes on the W. ſide of the county, and running eaſtward till it reaches the foot of Mount Golway, turns to the N. and after receiving the Wurway, falls into the Tanat. Turgbe, a river in Carmarthenſhire, which runs into the Cothey, below Capel Lapyment.

TURIN, anciently called TAURINI, a city of Italy, the capital of Piedmont, and reſidence of its ſovereign, the king of Sardinia, with a univerſity. It is charmingly ſeated on a vaſt plain, at the confluence of the rivers Doria and Po. It is one of the handſomeſt places in Italy, but the air is thick and moiſt in autumn and winter, on account of the thick fogs. The approaches to it are magnificent, and the environs beautiful. Moſt of the ſtreets are well-built, uniform, clean, ſtraight, and terminating on ſome agreeable object. No inhabitant can rebuild or repair his houſe but on a uniform plan, laid down by government, for the improvement of the city. The Strada-di-Po, the fineſt and largeſt in the city, leads to the royal palace, and is adorned with piazzas that are at once beautiful and convenient. The royal palace conſiſts of two magnificent ſtructures, in a ſimple but noble ſtyle of architecture, joined together by a gallery, in which are ſeveral pictures, ſtatues, and antiquities of great value. The furniture is rich and elegant, and the floors are curiouſly inlaid with various kinds of wood, and kept always in a ſtate of ſhining brightneſs. The fortifications of Turin are regular, and kept in excellent repair. The citadel is a regular pentagon, conſiſting of 5 ſtrong baſtions, and is reputed one of the ſtrongeſt in Europe. There are fine walks on the ramparts, which require two hours to paſs round them. There are alſo very fine gardens on the ſide of the river Po; and the houſe called La Charité is remarkable, as there is room for 3000 poor people. The college of the academy is very large and well built, and has a great number of ancient inſcriptions. The chief trade of the city and country is in thrown ſilk, which is ſent to England and Lyons: ſome of it they manufacture into excellent ſtockings, and ſilk for furniture. Turin is the ſee of an archbiſhop, and contains 110 churches or chapels, ſeveral hoſpitals, and about 65,000 inhabitants. The French beſieged this city, in 1706, for upwards of three months, but were totally defeated, and compelled to raiſe the ſiege by Prince Eugene and the Duke of Savoy. Lat. 45. 5. N. lon. 7. 45. E.

Turk Dean, Glouceſterſhire, 3 miles N. of Northleach.

TURK ISLANDS, a cluſter of ſmall iſlands, intermingled with the Bahamas.

The largeſt is ſituated in lat. 21. 26. N. and lon. 70. 52. W.

TURKESTAN, or TURAN, a country of Aſia, bounded on the N. by deſerts, on the E. by Kalmuc Tartary, on the S. by Bukharia, and on the W. by Charaſm, near 900 miles in length, and not much leſs in breadth. It is divided between two Tartar khans, or chiefs; one of whom, reſiding at Taſchkant, poſſeſſes the eaſtern part; the other, who poſſeſſes the weſtern part, reſides at Turkeſtan or Taraz, (ſituated on a ſmall river that runs into the Sir, in lat. 44. 45. N. and lon. 69. 15. E.) The latter is generally called the khan of the Karakalpacks. In a large ſenſe, Turkeſtan includes all the country between Ruſſia, Bukharia, the Caſpian Sea, and Chineſe Tartary, extending not leſs than 700 miles from E. to W. and 350 from N. to S.

TURKEY, a very large empire, extending over part of Europe, Aſia, and Africa. Turkey in Europe contains Beſſarabia, Moldavia, Walachia, Bulgaria, Servia, Boſnia, Romania, Macedonia, Janna, Livadia, Epirus, Albania, part of Dalmatia, the Morea, and the iſlands of the Archipelago. Turkey in Aſia contains the countries of Irak-Arabia, Diarbeck, Curdiſtan, Turcomania, part of Circaſſia, Natolia, and Syria, with Paleſtine. In Africa, the Turks have ſtill a precarious ſovereignty over Egypt and part of Nubia. Conſtantinople is the capital of all Turkey. In general the Turks are moderate in eating, and lovers of reſt and idleneſs; and by their haughtineſs, deſpiſe manufactures, improvements, and traffic. Polygamy is allowed among them; but their wives are no more than four in number. They are charitable towards ſtrangers, let their religion be what it will, and no nation ſuffers adverſity with greater patience than they. The grand ſignior is abſolute maſter of the goods and lives of his ſubjects: he aſſumes the titles of God upon Earth, the Shadow of God, the Brother of the Sun and Moon, the Diſpoſer of Crowns, &c. The grand vizier is the chief in power next the emperor, with a ſalary of about 600,000 dollars a year, excluſive of preſents and other perquiſites. Here, however, it may be obſerved, that though the grand ſignior has ſuch prodigious power, he ſeldom extends it to thoſe that live a private life, for theſe may remain as quiet as in any other part of the world. The Turks were originally a Scythian, or Tartar nation, dwelling betwixt the Black and Caſpian Seas, and became firſt known in the 7th century, when Herodius, emperor of the eaſt, took them into his ſervice; after which the Arabian and Saracen caliphs had particular bodies of them for guards, and filled their armies with them. Having gradually got the power into their own hands, ſeveral governors of this nation revolted from the caliphs. In the year 1214, Schah Soliman, prince of Nera, a town on the Caſpian Sea, paſſed Mount Caucaſus with an army of 50,000 men, making himſelf maſter of ſeveral countries and places in Leſſer Aſia. His grandſon, Othman, in the year 1300, at the city of Karahiſar, aſſumed the title of emperor of the Othmans, and called his people after his own name. Excluſive of many other towns, in 1326, he took Pruſa, in Bithynia, now called Burſa, which his ſon and ſucceſſor, Orchan, made the ſeat of his empire. Orchan ſent his 2 ſons, Solyman and Amurath, on an expedition into Europe; the former of whom reduced the city of Gallipoli, and the latter took Tyrilos. Amurath, ſucceeding his father in 1360, conquered Anlyra, Adrianople, and Philippopolis. In 1362, he inſtituted the janizaries, overran Servia, and fell upon Macedonia and Albania. His ſon and ſucceſſor, Bajazet, was ſucceſsful both in Europe and Aſia, defeating the Chriſtians near Nicopolis; but in 1401, he himſelf was routed and taken priſoner by Tamerlane. His ſon Amurath, diſtinguiſhed himſelf by ſeveral important enterpriſes, and particularly in the year 1434, gained a ſignal victory over the Hungarians near Varna. Mahomet II. the greateſt, or perhaps moſt fortunate, of all the emperors, in the year 1456, made himſelf maſter of Conſtantinople, reducing the whole Grecian empire under his dominion. He ſubdued 12 kingdoms, and took 200 towns. Bajazet II. Selim I. and Solyman I. enlarged the Turkiſh empire, in Europe, Aſia, and Africa; but the ſucceeding emperors have not been ſo fortunate. In the ſucceſſion to the empire, no regard is paid to age or birth-right, the Turks thinking it ſufficient, if, in their elections, they keep to the Ottoman family. Women, however, are excluded from the throne. The number of the janizaries, who are all infantry, and the flower of the Turkiſh forces, is generally 40,000. The navy is laid up at Conſtantinople, near the arſenal, and conſiſts of about 40 men of war, excluſive of auxiliary and hired ſhips, and galleys of 2, 3, and 4 benches of oars. The Engliſh trade here has for ſome years been greatly on the decline. In the iſlands, the merchants are generally French. The Turks believe believe in one God, and that his great prophet is Mahomet.

TURK MOUNTAIN, in Kerry, Munster. It is ſituated near Killarney Lake, and affords one of the moſt beautiful natural proſpects in the world.

TURKY, a town of Georgia, in S. America.

Turlamore, in Clare, Munſter.

Turlby, Lincolnſhire, NE. of Alford.

Turley and Haw, Glouceſterſhire. on the N. bank of the Severn, 4 miles SW. of Tewkeſbury.

Turloughmore, in Galway, Connaught.

Turnaſton, Herefordſ. S. of the Golden Vale. Turbridge, Yorkſ. E. of Snaith.

Turnditch Chapel, Derbyſ. in Duffield pariſh. Turner's Hall, Herts, near the rivers Verlam and Flamſted. Turner's Hill, Herts, between Waltham Croſs and Cheſhunt Waſh. Turner's Hill, Suſſex. Turner's Piddle, or Tower's Piddle, Dorſetſ. on the river Piddle, 2 miles E. of Affpiddle. Turnham, or Thurnham, Kent, 2 miles and a half W. of Maidſtone. Turnham-Green, Middleſex, between Hammerſmith and Brentford, in the pariſh of Chiſwick.

TURNHOUT, a town in the duchy of Brabant, capital of a quarter, which comprehends 15 villages. It is 18 miles SSE. of Breda.

TURO, a town of Bari.

TUROE, a ſmall iſland of Denmark, in the Little Belt, SW. of Funen.

TURREFF, a town of Aberdeenſhire, containing about 700 inhabitants. It is ſituated on the river Devron, on the borders of Banffſhire, 26 miles NNW. of Aberdeen.

Turnhurſt, Staff. E. of Talk-on-the-Hill. Turnwood, Dorſetſ. W. of Blandford. Turnworth. Dorſetſhire, 2 miles N. of Winterborne Stickland. Turnworth, plants, between Odiam and Baſingſtoke. Turpington, three miles from Cambridge. Turrington, E. and W. Lincolnſhire, S. of Market-Raiſin.

TURSI, a town of Baſilicata, in Naples.

Turſdale, S. of Durham. Turvey, Bedfordſhire, SW. of Stevington, and 5 miles NW. of Bedford. It has a bridge over the Ouſe.

TURTLE ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean. Lat. 19. 50. S. lon. 145. 50. E.

TURTLE RIVER, a river in Georgia, N. America, which runs into the Atlantic, in lat. 31. 12. N. and lon. 81. 40. W.

Turvil-Court, Bucks, 5 miles from Henley-on-Thames. Turweſton, or Tinweſton, Bucks, on the Ouſe, NW. of Buckingham. Turwick, Suſſex, SW. of Midhurſt.

Tuſcan Paſs, between the counties of Down and Armagh, Ulſter.

TUSCANY, a ſovereign ſtate of Italy, ſituated between the Mediterranean, the pope's territories, the Modeneſe, and the ſtate of Lucca. It is about 115 miles in length, and 80 in breadth, excluſive of ſome parts diſtributed in the territories of Modena, Lucca, and Genoa. It is watered by ſeveral rivers, of which the Arno is the chief. There are ſeveral mountains, in which are found mines of divers ſorts, ſuch as iron, alum, and vitriol. They have alſo quarries of marble, alabaſter, and porphyry, beſides hot-baths and mineral waters. Many parts of it are fruitful in corn and wine, and produce plenty of citrons, oranges, lemons, pomegranates, olives, and other fruits. The inhabitants apply themſelves to trade, and have eſtabliſhed divers manufactories, particularly of ſilks, ſtuffs, fine earthen-ware, and gilt leather. This duchy is divided into three parts; namely, the Florentino, the Piſano, and the Sienneſe, to which ſome add the iſlands. Florence is the capital, which ſee.

Tuſmore, Oxfordſhire, NE. of Fritwell. Tuſtons, Suſſex, E. of Rotherbridge.

TUTACORIN, a town in the Carnatic, oppoſite the Iſland of Ceylon, where the Dutch have a factory. It is 60 miles NE. of Cape Comorin.

TUTBURY, or STUTESBURY, a town of Staffordſhire, affording a proſpect from a hill in its neighbourhood, which once had a very large caſtle, with a little monaſtery, now a good old houſe, walled all round, except on the ſide of the hill, where it is ſo ſteep that it needs no fortification; yet there it is encloſed with a ſtrong pale, as far as Nottingham, to the E. beſide other extenſive views on the NW. N. S. and SE. to Uttoxeter, Rowceſter, Aſhburn, Derby, Burton, Aſhby-de-la-Zouch, &c. It is ſituated in a valley, on the Dove, a little before it falls into the Trent, 15 miles E. of Stafford, and 134 NW. of London.

Tuthill, Norfolk, near Thetford. Tuthill, or Toothill, Yorkſ. between Brighouſe and Huthersfield. Tutnell, Warw. near Tarbick. Tuttington, Norfolk, between Aleſham and North Walſham. Tuttle-Street, Middleſex, between Forty Hill and Waltham Croſs.

* TUXFORD, a ſmall town of Nottinghamſhire, chiefly noted for a good free-ſchool, which is endowed with 50l. a year for a maſter and uſher, 20l. a year for the boarding and teaching 4 miniſter's ſons, or decayed gentlemen's, and 20 more for teaching the poor boys of the town. It is ſeated in a clayey ſoil, in the ſtage-road to York, between Newark and Bawtree, 13 miles N. by W. of Newark, and 137 N. by W. of London. Market on Monday.

TUY, a town of Spain, in Galicia, ſeated on a mountain, near the N. ſide of the river Minho, in a country affording the richeſt proſpects of gardens, orchards, vineyards, and corn-fields. It is well fortified, as being a frontier town towards Portugal, and is 50 miles S. of Compoſtella, and 254 N. by W. of Madrid.

TUZLA, a town of Caramania, ſituated at the weſtern extremity of a lake, to which it gives name, (about 36 miles in length, and 4 in breadth) 28 miles N. of Cogni.

Twade, Kent, N. of Milton, near the iſle of Sheppey.

TWEED, a river of Scotland, which riſes in the S. part of Peebleſhire, at Tweedſmuir, about 6 miles N. from Moffat, croſſes that county, as alſo the N. parts of Selkirkſhire and Roxburghſhire, during which it paſſes by or near to Peebles, Galaſhiels, Melroſs, Kelſo, and Coldſtream, from near which place it forms the boundary between Berwickſhire and Northumberland, and falls into the German Ocean at Berwick.

TWEEDALE. See PEEBLESSHIRE.

Tweedmouth, Northumb. near Berwick, with which it communicates by a bridge.

TWEEDSMUIR, a tract of rugged, heathy mountains, in the S. part of Peebleſhire.

Twemlow, Cheſhire, on the Dane, SE. of Northwich. Twenge, Northumb. on the Woulds. Twenge, or Thwing, Yorkſ. W. of Burlington. Tweſleton, Yorkſ. NW. of Ingleton. Twickbere, Devonſ. near Merland. Twickenham, a very pleaſant village of Middleſex, ſeated on the Thames, with ſeveral fine houſes and handſome villas. The church, an elegant Doric building, is remarkable for being the burial-place of the celebrated Mr. Pope, and his parents, to the memory of whom reſpectively, a monument is erected, by Warburton, and by Pope himſelf. The celebrated villa of Pope is now that of Welbore Ellis, lord Mendip. In Pope's life-time, the houſe was humble and confined: the centre building only was his reſidence. Sir W. Stanhope, who purchaſed it on his death, added the two wings, and enlarged the gardens. Lord Mendip ſtuccoed the front of the houſe, and adorned it in an elegant ſtyle. The lawn has been alſo enlarged. Towards the margin of the river, propped with uncommon care, ſtand the two weeping willows, planted by Pope himſelf. Theſe trees, one of which is one of the fineſt of its kind, and conſidered as a vegetable curioſity, are as flouriſhing as ever. Slips of it are annually tranſmitted to different parts; and in 1789, the empreſs of Ruſſia had ſome planted in her own garden at Peterſburgh. The once celebrated grotto is almoſt brought to ruin, from the dilapidations of time, and the pious theſts of viſitors. It no longer forms a "camera obſcura;" the "thin alabaſter lamp" no longer "irradiates the centre of it," and even the "perpetual rill that echoed through the cavern, day and night," is no longer in exiſtence. Some gunpowder and oil-mills are on the Crane, a branch of the river Colne, which flows into the Thames, at Iſleworth. It is 11 miles WSW. of London. Twicrofs, Leiceſterſ. SE. of Hog's Norton. Twidall, Kent, near Gillingham. Twidnock, Cornwall, in Lalant pariſh. Twiford, Berks, between Maidenhead and Reading, near the conflux of the Thames and the Loddon, over which laſt it has a mill and 4 bridges. Twiford, Bucks, NE. of Beceſter. Twiford, Derbyſhire, in Barrow pariſh. Twiford, Dorſetſ. S. of Shaftſbury. Twiford, Hants, 2 miles from Wincheſter. Twiford, Leiceſ. NE. of Billſdon. Twiford, Norfolk, near Fouliham. Twiford Bridge, Kent, near Nettleſted. Twiford, E. and W. Middleſex, near Wemley Green and the Brent, between Haliſden Green and Perivale. Twigworth, near Glouceſter. Twineham, Suſſex, E. of Shermanbury. Twinſtead, Eſſex, E. of Caſtle Heningham. Twining, Glouceſ. 3 miles N. of Tewkeſbury. In this pariſh, on the top of a little head of land, which ſtands on a great eminence above the meadows next the Severn, is a camp, conſiſting of ſeveral acres of ground, and fortified all round with double entrenchments. It ſurveys the river for a conſiderable length, and commands a great extent of country. From ſome Roman coins found here, it is ſuppoſed to have been a Roman camp. Twitching, or Tuchyn, Devonſ. NE. of South Moulton. Twitham, Kent, near Wingham. Twiverton, Somerſ. 2 miles SW. of Bath. Twiwell, Northamptonſ. between Thrapſton and Kettering. Twizell Caſtle, Northumberland, near Grindon, S. of Norham, and near the junction of the rivers Till and Tweed. The river Till, which runs

uns beneath it, is croſſed by a handſome tone bridge of one arch, which is ninety eet and a half in ſpan, and 46 high.

Two-Mile-Bridge, in Waterford, Munter. Two-Mile-Water, in Wicklow, einſter. Two-Pot-Houſe, in Cork, Munter.

Two Waters, Herts, between King's angley and Berkhamſted. Twy, a river n Cardiganſhire, which runs into the riſh Channel, near the town of Cardigan.

TYBEE ISLAND, at the mouth of the iver Savannah, in Georgia.

Tyd, St. Giles, Camb. N. of Wiſbeach. Tyd, St. Mary's, Linc. on the bank of he Nyne, SE. of Gedney. Tye Corbet, Eſſex, NW. of North Ockenden. Tyes, uſſex, between Slaugham and Balcomb.

TYGER, a river of S. Carolina, which uns into the Salada, about 5 miles NW. f Columbia; and both together form he Cangaree.

TYKOKZIN, a town of Bielſk, in Poland.

Tyld Hall, Eſſex, between Lachingdon nd Althorn. Tylemouth, Northumb. S. f Norham, where the Till falls into the Tweed. On the S. ſide is a chapel, here is a ſtone boat, of as fine a ſhape s one made of wood; it is 10 feet long, ithin three feet and a half diameter, 18 nches deep, and four and a half thick. n this, according to a vulgar tradition, t. Cuthbert ſailed down the Tweed, rom Melroſs. Tylen, Yorkſ. N. of Donaſter. Tylywin, now called Whitland, Carmarthenſhire, 5 miles W. of St. Clere, here was the palace of Hoel Dha, the irſt ſovereign of all Wales. Here he onvened all his clergy, to frame a ſyſtem f laws, in 942.

Tynagh, in Galway, Connaught. Tyan, in Armagh, Ulſter.

TYNE, the principal river of Northumerland, formed of a ſouth branch, which iſes S. of Aldſtone, in Cumberland, and north one from the hills on the borders of Scotland. Theſe uniting a little above Hexham, form a large river, which flowing to Newcaſtle, enters the German Ocean at Tinmouth.

TYNE, a rapid river which riſes in the S. part of Haddingtonſhire, waters the town of Haddington, and enters the German Ocean to the W. of Dunbar.

Tyng, or Tring, a river in Devonſhire, which runs into the Engliſh Channel at Teignmouth.

TYNMOUTH. See TINMOUTH.

Tyone, in Tipperary, Munſter. Tyrawly, a barony in Mayo, Connaught.

TYRCONNEL, the ancient name of Donegal, in Ulſter.

TYRE. See SOUR, or SUR.

Tyringham, Buckinghamſhire, a pariſh near Newport Pagnel.

TYRONE, a county of Ireland, in the province of Ulſter, about 44 miles in its greateſt length, and from 18 to 33 in breadth; bounded on the N. and NE. by Londonderry, on the Eaſt by Armagh and Lough Neagh, on the S. and SW. by Fermanagh and Monaghan, and on the W. by Donegal. It contains 33 pariſhes, and about 28,700 inhabitants. The ſoil varies exceedingly; in ſome parts it is rich and fertile, in others rough and mountainous, but in general cultivated. Near Dungannon are ſome collieries. The aſſize town is Omagh. The bleach-greens in it are principally ſituated in the neighbourhood of Dungannon, Cookſtown, and Stewartſtown. The linen manufactory is eſtimated at 257,444l. yearly.

Tyſoe, Warwickſhire, at the ſkirt of Edgehill; had a market.

TYSTED, a town of Alburg, in N. Jutland, ſituated on a river which runs into the Lymford Gulph, 40 miles W. Alburg.

TZARITZYN, a town of Ruſſia, in Saratof, ſituated on the river Volga, 180 miles S. of Saratof.

VAAS, a town in the dept. of the Sarte, 21 miles S. of Le Mans.

VAAST, ST. a town in the dept. of he Channel, with a ſmall harbour, and ome ſalt-works. It is 14 miles ESE. of Cherburg.

VABRES, a town in the dept. of Aveiron, before the revolution, the ſee of a biſhop. It has ſome manufactures of ſerges, dimities, and cottons, and is ſeated at the junction of two ſmall rivers, which ſoon after run into the Tarn, 30 miles SSE. of Rodez.

VACARICA, a town of Beira.

VACCA, LA, a ſmall iſland in the Mediterranean, near the S. coaſt of the iſland of Sardinia, and about 3 miles S. from the iſland of Antipeo.

VACH, one of the ſmaller Lepari iſlands in the Mediterranean.

Vach, Bucks, near Amerſham.

VACHA, a town of Upper Heſſe, circle of Upper Rhine, ſituated on the Werra, 20 miles NE. of Fulda.

VACHE, or COW ISLAND, an iſland in the Weſt Indies, of a triangular form, about 24 miles in circumference. It is about 12 miles diſtant from the S. coaſt of the iſland of St. Domingo. Lon. 74. 13. W.

VACHELUCE, one of the Lepari iſlands in the Mediterranean, about 3 miles S. of Stromboli.

VACKALEER, a town of Hindooſtan, in the Myſore country, 27 miles ENE. of Bangalore.

Vacherry, Surry, in Cranley pariſh.

VADA, a ſea-port of Tuſcany, 16 miles SSE. of Leghorn.

VADO, a ſea port of Genoa, 3 miles S. of Savona.

VADSTEIN. See WADSTENA.

VAENA, a town of Cordova, in Spain.

VAIGAR, an iſland of Ruſſia, in the Frozen Ocean, about 24 miles in length, and 8 broad. It is ſituated on the N. ſide of the Straits of Vaigatſkoi, in lat. 75. 30. N. and lon. 52. 15. E.

VAIINGEN, a town of Wirtemburg, ſituated on the Enz, 11 miles NW. of Stutgard.

VAISEAUX, a ſmall iſland on the coaſt of Louiſiana, between the mouths of the Miſſiſſippi and the Mobile, with a harbour.

VAISON, a town of France, in the Venaiſſin, ſeated on the Oneze, near the ruins of ancient Vaiſon, (which was one of the largeſt cities of the Gauls) 15 miles NE. of Orange.

VAL. See LAVELD.

VALDAIA, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Novogorod. It contains ſeveral new brick buildings; and even the wooden houſes are more decorated than the generality of the Ruſſian cottages. It is ſituated upon an agreeable ſlope, on a lake of the ſame name, 72 miles SE. of Novogorod.

VALDAIA HILLS, hills of Ruſſia, in Novogorod, which, though of no conſiderable elevation, are the higheſt in this part of the country.

VALDAIA, LAKE OF, in Novogorod, is about 20 miles in circumference, and is the largeſt in the country round the town of Valdaia. In the middle of it is an iſland, containing a convent.

VAL-DI-DEMONA, a province in Sicily, lying to the NE. part of the iſland, about 100 miles long, and 20 broad. It means the Valley of Demons, and is ſo called, becauſe Mount Etna, which is placed therein, throws out flames continually, which occaſioned ſuperſtitious people to believe that it was a chimney of hell. Meſſina is the capital.

VAL-DI-MAZARA, the weſterly diviſion of Sicily, ſo called from a town of the ſame name. This province contains Palermo, the capital of the whole iſland.

VAL-DI-NOTO, a diviſion of Sicily, ſo named from the capital town, Noto, which is 14 miles SW. of Syracuſe, and was built after the deſtruction of Noto Antico, by an earthquake, in the year 1693. It is ſituated to the SE. of the iſland, between Val-di-Demona and the ſea.

VAL OMBROSA, a celebrated Benedictine monaſtery of Tuſcany, in the Appenine mountains, 15 miles E. of Florence.

VALCKENBURG, a town of Holland, 3 miles NW. of Leyden.

VALCKOWAR, a town of Selavonia.

VALDIVIA. See BALDIVIA.

VALE OF WHITE HORSE, a fertile tract in Berkſhire, extending from Faringdon to Abingdon, ſo called from the repreſentation of a horſe, cut on the ſide of a hill, and occupying nearly an acre. The chalky ſoil which is hereby denuded, is a bright white, and is ſo ſtrong a contraſt to the ſurrounding green turf of the hill, that the figure may be ſometimes ſeen to the diſtance of 12 miles. About Midſummer every year, the people of the next pariſh go and weed it, in order to keep the horſe in ſhape and colour.

Vale Royal, Cheſhire, on the Weever, E. of Delamere Foreſt.

VALEDIA, a ſea-port of Fez, 27 miles SSW. of Mazagan. Its harbour is a very natural, ſpacious baſon, ſurrounded by rocks, and capable of containing about 1000 veſſels; but the entrance, which is entirely open to the W. is difficult and dangerous.

VALENCA, a town of Douro, on the S. ſide of the Minho, oppoſite Tuy, in Spain; and a town of Beira, ſituated near the Douro.

VALENCA D'ALCANTARA, a town of Spain, in Eſtramadura, ſurrounded by walls after the antique manner, and built upon a rock, 20 miles SSW. of Alcantara.

Valence, Eſſex, near Dagenham.

VALENCE, a city in the department of Drome, before the revolution, the ſee of a biſhop, and capital of a diſtrict, called the Valentinois. Valence is ſeated n the river Rhone, 30 miles N. by E. of Viviers, and 335 S. by E. of Paris.

VALENCE, a town in the dept. of Lot nd Garonne, ſituated on the river Garonne, 12 miles SSE. of Agen.

VALENCEY, a ſmall town in the dept. f Indre, ſeated on the river Nabon, 21 niles N. of Chateauroux.

VALENCIA, a province of Spain, formerly a kingdom; bounded on the E. and E. by the Mediterranean, on the N. by Catalonia and Arragon, and on the W. nd SW. by new Caſtile and Murcia. It s about 220 miles in length, and 54 in ts mean breadth, and is one of the moſt opulous, fertile, and pleaſant countries n Spain; it is watered by 35 rivers, all f which run towards the E. In the ountains are mines of gold, ſilver, iron, lum, and ſinopica, or blood ſtone: there re alſo quarries of marble, jaſper, &c.

VALENCIA, a city of Spain, capital of he province of the ſame name. It is a large place, containing about 12,000 houſes within the walls, beſides thoſe in the ſuburbs, and in the pleaſure gardens round about it, which amount to much the ſame number. It has a univerſity, founded in 1470, and conſiſting of ſeveral colleges. It was taken from the Moors in the 13th century, who were all expelled. The ſtreets, which are narrow, crooked, and unpaved, are impaſſable after rain. The cathedral, which has a ſteeple 130 feet high, the palace of the viceroy, that of Ciuta, the monaſtery of St. Jerome, the exchange, and the arſenal, are all fine ſtructures. It has ſeveral manufactories of cloth and ſilk, and there are ſeveral remains of antiquity. It is pleaſantly ſeated on the river Guadalaviar, 20 miles from the ſea, and 170 ESE. of Madrid. Lat. 39. 28. N. lon. 0. 10. W.

VALENCIA, NEW, a town of Caraccas, in Terra Firma, 6 miles W. of the town of Caraccas.

VALENCIENNES, a city of Hainault, in France, in the dept. of the North, founded by the emperor Valentinian. It contains about 20,000 inhabitants, and it is a very important place: the citadel, and the other fortifications, are the work of Vauban. Theſe were conſtructed by order of Louis XIV. who took the town by ſtorm, in 1677, after 17 days open trenches; and it was confirmed to him by the treaty of Nimeguen, in 1678. In 1793, it ſurrendered to the allied army, commanded by the Duke of York, after a ſevere ſiege. The grand ſquare is handſome; but the ſtreets are in general narrow, dark, and crooked. Beſide lace, this place is noted for manufactures of woollen ſtuffs, fine linens, and cambrics. It is ſituated on the river Scheldt, which divides it into two parts, 17 miles NE of Cambray, and 120 NE. by N. of Paris.

VALENTIA, an iſland which forms a fine harbour on the SW. coaſt of Kerry, in Munſter. It is about 5 miles long, half a mile broad, and of a ſufficient depth for veſſels to ſail through at any time of the tide.

VALENTINE, a town in the dept of Upper Garonne. It is the uſual road into Spain, and is 2 miles SW. of St. Gaudens.

VALENZA, a town of Milan.

VALETTA, a city of Malta, and the capital of that iſland, built in 1566, by the grand maſter, Frederick John de Valetta. It has the happieſt ſituation imaginable, and is wonderfully ſtrong, both by nature and art. Its walls are of large ſquare ſtones, dug out of the rock, and planted with a great number of batteries. It is ſeated upon a peninſula, between two of the fineſt ports in the world, which are defended by almoſt impregnable fortifications. That on the SE. ſide of the city is the largeſt; it runs about two miles into the heart of the iſland, and is ſo very deep, and ſurrounded by ſuch high grounds and fortifications, that the largeſt ſhips of war may ride here in the moſt ſtormy weather almoſt without a cable. This beautiful baſin is divided into five diſtinct harbours, all equally ſafe, each capable of containing a vaſt number of ſhipping. The mouth of the harbour is ſcarcely a quarter of a mile broad, and is commanded, on each ſide, by batteries that would tear the ſtrongeſt ſhip to pieces before ſhe could enter. Beſides this, it is fronted by a quadruple battery, one above the other, the largeſt of which is level with the water's edge. The harbour on the N. ſide, though only uſed for fiſhing, and as a place of quarantine, is likewiſe well defended: and in an iſland in the centre of it is a caſtle and a lazaret. The fortifications of Malta are indeed a very ſtupendous work. All the boaſted catacombs of Rome and Naples are trifles, compared to the immenſe excavations that have been made in this little iſland. The ditches, of a vaſt ſize, are all cut out of the ſolid rock, and extend many miles. The Turks beſieged this city in 1656, but, after many dreadful aſſaults, were compelled to raise the ſiege, with the loſs of 30,000 men. The inhabitants of Valetta are about 2000.

VALETTE, a town in the dept. of Charente, 10 miles S. of Angouleme.

VALLADOLID, a city of Leon, capital of a principality of the ſame name, with a univerſity. It is embelliſhed with handſome buildings, large public ſquares, and fountains, and contains 11,000 houſes with fine long and broad ſtreets. The market-place, called E. Campo, is 700 paces in circumference, ſurrounded by a great number of convents. There is another ſquare in the middle of the city, ſurrounded by handſome brick houſes, having under them piazzas, within which are ſhops. All the houſes are of the ſame height, being four ſtories; and there are balconies at every window of iron, gilt. The town-houſe takes up the entire ſide of a ſquare. The houſe of the inquiſition is an odd ſort of a ſtructure, for there are no windows, but a few holes to let in the light. An academy of the belles lettres was eſtabliſhed here in 1752. It is ſeated near the Douero, 52 miles SW. of Burgos, and 95 N. by W. of Madrid.

VALLADOLID. See MECHOACAN.

VALLADOLID, or COMAYAGUA, a town of Honduras, in Mexico, on the confines of Nicaragua. It is the ſee of a biſhop, who takes the title of biſhop of Honduras. Lat. 14. 30. N. lon. 87. 20. W.

VALLADOLID, a town of Mexico, in Yucatan, 75 miles E. of Merida.

VALLAIS, a county of Swiſſerland, called in the middle ages, Valeſia, extending from E. to W. about 100 miles, and from N. to S. about 22. It is divided into Upper and Lower Vallais, and is bounded on the N. by the Canton of Bern, and the Lake of Geneva; on the E. by Valmaggia, and Locarno; on the S. by Milan, Piedmont, and Savoy; and on the W. by France and Piedmont. The Upper Vallais is ſovereign of the Lower Vallais, and contains ſeven independent dixains, or commonwealths; namely, Sion, Goms, Brieg, Viſp, Leuk, Raren, and Siders. Of theſe, Sion is ariſtocratical, and the others democratical. They are called dixains, becauſe the Upper Vallais being divided into ſeven, and the Lower into three diſtricts, each diviſion is a dixain, or tenth of the whole. The Lower Vallais is divided into bailiwicks. The Vallais contains about 100,000 inhabitants, who profeſs the Romiſh religion. The biſhop of Sion was formerly abſolute ſovereign over the greateſt part of the Vallais; but his authority is now limited. He has the ſole power of pardoning criminals, and ſigns all the warrants for executions. The money is coined in his name, and with the arms of the republic. In his acts he ſigns himſelf Biſhop of Sion, prince of the German empire, and count and præfect of the Vallais; and the ſeven dixains form, conjointly with the biſhop, the republic of the Vallais, all the affairs of which are tranſacted in a diet, which conſiſts of nine voices, and meets twice every year in the Majoria houſe, at Sion. At this diet the biſhop preſides. The republic is an ally of the thirteen cantons; having formed a perpetual alliance with Bern in 1475, and with the whole Helvetic body in 1529. The inhabitants of the Upper Vallais are very much ſubject to goiters, or wens, that grow from the throat, and often increaſe to an enormous ſize. Idiotcy alſo remarkably abounds among them. A country entirely incloſed within high Alps, and conſiſting of plains, elevated valleys, and lofty mountains, muſt neceſſarily exhibit a great variety of ſituations, climates, and productions. Accordingly, the Vallais preſents to the curious traveller, a quick ſucceſſion of proſpects, as beautiful as they are diverſified: vineyards, rich paſture grounds, covered with cattle, corn, flax, fruit trees, and foreſts, occaſionally bordered by naked rocks, the ſummits of which are covered by everlaſting ſnow. The ſtriking contraſt between the paſtoral and the ſublime, the cultivated and the wild, naturally affects the mind of an obſerver with the moſt pleaſing emotions. The productions of the Vallais vary alſo, according to the great diverſity of climates, by which this country is peculiarly diſtinguiſhed. It has more than ſufficient wine and corn for interior conſumption; and a conſiderable quantity of both are yearly exported; the ſoil in the midland and lower diſtricts being exceedingly rich and fertile. In the plains, where the heat is collected, and confined between the mountains, the harveſt is generally finiſhed in July; whereas, in the more elevated parts, barley is the only grain that can be cultivated with ſucceſs; and the crop is ſeldom cut before November. About Sion, the fig, the melon, and all the other fruits of Italy, come to perfection. "In conſequence of this ſingular variety of climates," ſays Mr. Coxe, "I taſted, in the ſame day, ſtrawberries, cherries, plums, pears, and grapes, each of them the natural growth of the country." There are no manufactures of any conſequence in the Vallais. The people are accounted both ignorant and indolent; ſo that they may be conſidered, in regard to knowledge and improvements, as much behind the Swiſs, who are certainly an enlightened nation.

The

: peaſants, having few wants, ſeldom :avour to meliorate their lands, where ſoil is bad; nor to draw the moſt ad-tage from thoſe that are fertile.

'ALLEMONT, a town in the depart-it of Lower Seine, 16 miles N. by W. Caudebec.

'ALLENGIN, a town, capital of a nty of Neuchatel, in Switſerland. It ituated near the lake of Neuchatel, 5 es NNW. of the town of that name, 25 NW. of Bern.

'ALLERS, a town in the department Indre and Loire, noted for mineral wa-s. It is 12 miles WSW. of Tours.

'ALLERY, ST. a town in the depart-nt of Somme, and at the mouth of the er Somme, with conſiderable trade, al-ugh it has no harbour. It is 10 miles N. of Abbeville.

VALLERY-IN-CAUX, ST. a town in depart. of Lower Seine, with a har-ur, 15 miles SSW. of Dieppe.

VALLIER, ST. a town in the dept. of r; and a town in the dept. of Drome.

Vallopit, Devonſ. in E. Allington pariſh.

VALNA, a town of Andaluſia.

VALOGNE, a town in the department the Channel, noted for cloth and lea-er. It is 8 miles from the ſea, and 158 '. by N. of Paris.

VALONA, a town of Turkey in Europe, Upper Albania, with a harbour.

VALPARAISO, a town of Leon.

VALPARAISO, a large and populous wn of Chili, with a well-frequented rbour. It is the port of St. Jago, to hich circumſtance it owes its increaſe d preſent proſperity, having drawn ther all the commerce formerly carried in that city. It is inconveniently ſi-ated at the foot of a mountain, great rt of the houſes being built on its accli-ty, or in its fiſſures, 75 miles NW. of t. Jago.

VALREAS, a town in the department Drome, 18 miles NNE. of Orange.

VALS, a town in the dept. af Ardeche, markable for its mineral ſprings. It is 2 miles SW. of Privas.

VALTELINE, called by the inhabitants ALLE-TELINA, a fine fertile valley of wiſſerland, ſubject to the Griſons. It xtends about 50 miles in length, and om 8 to 20 in breadth, and is bounded n the N. by the Griſons, on the E, by ormio and the Breſſan, on the S, by Mi-an and the Bergamaſco, and on the W. y Milan and Chiavenna. It is entirely ncloſed between two chains of high nountains, and is watered through its vhole extent by the Adda. The Valte-lines export wine, ſilk, planks, cheeſe, butter, and cattle. They have no manufactures. The number of the inhabitants, who are Romaniſts, is computed at 62,000. Here is no city, but ſome conſiderable towns, and many thriving villages. The whole country is divided into 3 terzeros, or diſtricts; Sopra, Mezzo, and Sotto; or Upper, Middle, and Lower. The reſpective capitals are Tirano, Sondrio, and Morbegno.

VALVERDE, a town of Lima, in Peru.

VALVERDE, a town of New Caſtile; a town of Seville, Andaluſia; and a town of Leon.

VAN, a populous well garriſoned town of Turkey, in Curdiſtan, near the frontiers of Perſia. It is likewiſe a begler-beglic, under which there are nine ſangiacates, or particular governments. The Lake of Van, on which it is ſeated, is 40 leagues in circumference. It is ſeated on a mountain, 150 miles E. of Diarbekir.

VAN CAMPENS, a town of New Jerſey, 32 miles NW. of Morriſtown.

Vandal, a river of Surry, running into the Thames at Windſor.

VANDALIA, a duchy of Pomerania, ſubject to Pruſſia. Stolpen is the capital.

VANDALIA, a country of Mecklenburg, in Lower Saxony. It contains ſeveral ſmall lakes, and the principal town is Guſtrow.

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND, the SE. extremity of New Holland, diſcovered by Taſman, in 1642. Lat. 40. 30. S. lon. 148. E.

Vanerlen, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

Vange, Eſſex, S. of Newenden.

VANNES, a trading and populous town in the department of Morbihan, with two ſuburbs, one of which is larger than the town itſelf. The principal commerce is in wheat and rye for Spain: and alſo in bar-iron, pilchards, ſea-eels, and other fiſh. It is ſeated advantageouſly for trade, at the union of 2 ſmall rivers, which form a harbour in the lake or arm of the ſea, called Morbihan, 56 miles SW. of Rennes, and 255 W. by S. of Paris.

VAR, a department of France, bounded on the N. by the department of the Lower Alps, on the E. by the county of Nice, and on the W. by the department of the mouths of the Rhone. It takes its name from a river which has its ſource in the county of Nice, and falls into the Mediterranean, 3 miles W. of Nice.

VARAMBON, a town in the department of Ain, ſeated on the river Ain, 14 miles NNW. of Bourg.

VARENDORF, a town of Weſtphalia.

VARENNES,

VARENNES, a town in the department of Allier, 14 miles SSE. of Moulins.

VARENNES, a ſmall town in the department of Meuſe, and late province of Barrois. Here Louis XVI. his queen, ſiſter, and children, were arreſted, in their flight from the Tuilleries, in 1791, and conducted back to Paris. It is 13 miles N. of Clermont.

VARNA, a conſiderable town of Bulgaria, and capital of the territory of Drobugia, with an archbiſhop's ſee, and a harbour near the mouth of the river Varna, on the Black Sea, 22 miles N. of Meſembar, and 145 NW. of Conſtantinople.

VARZEY, a town in the dept. of the Yonne, 32 miles S. of Auxerre.

VASSERBURG, a town of Munich, in Bavaria, ſeated on the river Inn, 28 miles E. of Munich.

VASSI, a town in the department of Upper Marne, 10 miles NW. of Joinville, and 115 E. of Paris.

Vaſtern, Great and Little, Wilts, near Luggerſhall.

VATAN, a town in the department of Indre, ſeated in a fine plain, 8 miles from Iſſoudun.

VAUCOLEURS, a town in the department of Meuſe, watered by the river Meuſe, 10 miles W. of Toul, and 150 E. of Paris.

VAUCLUSE, the name of one of the fineſt ſprings in Europe whither the celebrated Petrarch often retired to indulge his love-ſick melancholy. Here the river Sorgues takes its riſe, and after watering the little territory of Avignon, falls into the Rhone, near the city of Avignon. It is 12 miles W. of Apt, and 15 E. of Avignon.

VAUD, PAYS DE, a pleaſant country of Switzerland, in the canton of Bern. It extends along the Lake of Geneva, riſing gradually from the edge of that lake, and is richly laid out in vineyards, corn-fields, and luxuriant meadows, and chequered with continued hamlets, villages, and towns. Lauſanne is the capital.

VAUDABLES, a town in the depart. of Puy-de-Dome, 5 miles from Iſſoire, and 240 from Paris.

VAUDEMONT, a town in the department of Meurthe, ſeated in a very fertile country for corn, 15 miles SE. of Toul, and 18 W. of Nanci.

VAUDOIS, THE VALLEYS OF, lie in Piedmont, in Italy, N. of the marquiſate of Saluzzo, the chief town in which is Lucerna. The inhabitants are called Vaudois, and alſo Waldenſes, from Peter Waldo, the name of a merchant at Lyons, who oppoſed the doctrines of the church of Rome, in 1160. Being baniſhed from France, he came here with his diſciples. The Vaudois underwent the moſt dreadful perſecutions in the laſt century, and particularly in 1655, 1656, 1696.

VAUDREVANGE, a decayed town in the department of Meurthe, formerly conſiderable, but ruined by the wars in Lorrain. It is ſeated on the river Sane, 3 miles N. of Sar-Louis.

Vaudy-Abbey, Lincolnſ. at Grimſthorp.

Vauxhall, a village of Surry, and precinct of the pariſh of Lambeth, ſeated on the Thames, and celebrated for its gardens, which are laid out in a grand taſte, with fine pavilions, ſhady groves, delightful walks, &c.

Ubarrow, Weſtmorland, SW. of Kendal. Ubbeſton, Suffolk, near Yexford.

UBEDA, a town of Jaen, in Andalucia, 3 miles E. of Jaen.

UBERLINGEN, a free and imperial city of Suabia, containing a collegiate church, a houſe of the order of St. John, an imperial hoſpital, 3 convents, and 2 other churches. The inhabitants export corn to Switzerland. Near the town is a mineral ſpring. It is ſeated on a rock, in a bay of the lake of Conſtance, which takes its name from it, eight miles N. of Conſtance.

UBES, ST. or SETUVAL, anciently CÆDOBRIGA, a fortified town of Portugal, in Eſtramadura, with a good harbour, and about 10,000 inhabitants. It is noted for ſalt, conſiderable quantities of which are purchaſed by ſhips of the northern nations; and on the coaſt is a fine fiſhery. It contains 4 churches, 3 hoſpitals, 10 convents, and an Academia Problematica. Near it are quarries of jaſper, of ſeveral colours, of which they make pillars and images, which take a very fine poliſh. It is ſeated near the mouth of the river Sandao, 22 miles SSE. of Liſbon.

Ubley, or Upton, Somerſetſhire, SW. of Stanton-Drew.

UBY, or PULO UBY, an iſland in the Indian Ocean, at the entrance of the Bay of Siam, about 20 miles in circumference. It yields good water and plenty of wood; and lies at the S. extremity of Cambodia, about 10 miles W. of Pulo Condor.

Ucketby, Yorkſhire, E. of Richmond.

UCKERMUND, a town of Anterior Pomerania, with good fiſheries, paſtures, and woods, in the ſurrounding country. It was ſacked by the Ruſſians, in 1713. It is ſeated at the mouth of the river Ucker, near its entrance into the Friſche Haff, 9 miles iles NW. of Old Stetin, and 15 SE. f Anclam.

Uckfield, Suſſex, 8 miles from Lewes.

Uckington, Glouceſterſhire, in Elmſton ariſh. Uckington, Shropſhire, NW. of Vrekin Hill. Uday, St. Cornwall.

UDDEVALLA, a ſea-port of Bahus, in V. Gothland, containing about 9000 inabitants, who export iron, planks, and errings. It has a ſtrong fort and conenient harbour, and is 50 miles NNW. f Gotheborg.

UDSKOI, a town of Siberia, in Irkutſk, ated on the E. ſide of the Lake Baikul, n the road from Tobolſk to China, 1100 iles ENE. of Irkutſk, and 2140 ESE. of Tobolſk.

Udimere, Suſſex, NW. of Winchelſea.

UDINA, or UDENE, a town of Friuli, ontaining about 16,000 inhabitants. It 10 miles N. of Aquileia.

VECHTA, a town of Munſter, in Weſtbalia, 60 miles NE. of Munſter.

VECHT, a river of the United Provinces, and the eaſtern branch of the Rhine, ſeparating from it, in the province f Utrecht. It falls into the Zuyder Zee, t Muyden.

VECHT, a river of Germany, which has ts ſource near Munſter. It croſſes the ounties of Stenford and Bentheim, and ntering Overyſſel, paſſes by Haſſelt and Swartſluys, ſoon after diſcharging itſelf nto the Zuyder-Zee, under the name of Swart-Water, that is Black Water.

Veepe, St. Cornw. 2 miles from Fowey.

VEERE, VERE, or TERVERE, a town f the United provinces, in Zealand, ſituted on the northern coaſt of the Iſle of Walcheren, with a good harbour, 3 miles NE. of Middleburg.

VEGLIA, an iſland in the Gulf of Venice on the coaſt of Dalmatia, and to the E. of Cherſo, with a good harbour. It is he moſt pleaſant and populous iſland on his coaſt, abounds in wine and ſilk, and has ſome ſmall horſes in high eſteem. The only town is of the ſame name, and is ſeated near the ſea, on a hill, 17 miles N. of Arba, and 110 SE. of Venice.

VEIRAS, a town of Alentejo.

VELAY, a ci-devant province of France, full of high mountains, the tops of which are covered with ſnow the greater part of the year, but abounds in cattle. It now forms the department of Upper Loire.

VELDENTZ, a town, capital of a county in the palatinate of the Rhine, celebrated for its excellent Moſelle wine. It is ſeated on the E. ſide of the river Moſelle, 17 miles ENE. of Triers.

Valenryd, a river in Merionethſhire, which runs into the Iriſh Channel, at Traeth Richa.

VELETRI, a very ancient town of Italy, in the Campagna-di-Roma, conſiderable in the time of the firſt Roman kings. It was taken by Ancus Martius, retaken by the Volſci under Corolianus, and finally retaken ſome time after, and peopled with a Roman colony. Here are large ſquares, adorned with fine fountains. It is ſituated on the great road to Naples, 12 miles from the ſea, and 18 SE. of Rome.

VELEZ-DE-GOMORA. See GOMERA.

VELEZ-EL-RUBIO, a town of Granada, in Spain; in the time of the Moors, a ſtrong place, and furniſhed with a garriſon. It is ſituated near the Guadalentin, 14 miles S. of Hueſca.

VELEZ MALAGA, a town of Granada, trading principally in raiſins. It is ſeated in a large plain, near the coaſt, 13 miles E. of Malaga.

VELEZ, a town of New Caſtile.

VELHO. See MONTE-MOR-O-VELHO.

VELICHI. See DELICHI.

VELEZAR, a river of Spain, formed by the union of the little rivers Burcia and Sil, on the confines of Leon, which after receiving ſeveral other ſmall ſtreams, runs into the Minho, a little above the town of Orenſe.

VELIKA, a river of Croatia, which runs into the Save, near the town of Velika.

VELIKA, or CRALIOVA VELIKA, a town of Sclavonia, ſituated on an iſland formed by a ſmall river of the ſame name, 52 miles E. of Carlſtadt, and 156 S. of Vienne.

VELECOI USTIUG. See USTIUG.

VELINO, a river of Spoleto, in Italy, which runs into the Nera, about 4 miles from Terni.

VELORE, a town of Hindooſtan, in the Carnatic, ſituated on 3 hills, 14 miles W. of Arcot, and 70 NW. of Pondicherry.

VELTHAUSEN, a town of Bentheim, in Weſtphalia.

Velvetſtown, in Cork, Munſter.

Ven, Somerſetſhire, W. of Taunton.

VENA, or MONTI-DELLA-VENA, are mountains of Carniola, on the confines of Iſtria, to the S. of the Lake Czernic.

VENAFRO, a town of Lavora, in Naples.

VENAISSIN, ſo named from Venaſque, the Vendaſca of the ancients, a ſmall territory of France, on the Rhone, S of the department of the Drome; about 36 miles in length, and 21 in breadth. The country is pleaſant, the ſoil fertile, the climate mild, and the air pure. The productions are corn, olives, ſilk, ſaffron, and excellent wine.

wine. It depended on the popes, ſince the time of Philip the Bold, king of France, who in the year 1273, transferred it to pope Gregory X. as a fief of the Holy See. It was governed under the popes by officers called rectores, but now forms an integral part of the French republic. Carpentras is the capital.

VENANT, ST. a town in the department of the Straits of Calais, ſituated on the Lys, 6 miles NNW. of Bethune, and 22 NW. of Arras.

VENASCA, or BENASCA, a town of Arragon, ſeated on the river Eſſora, in a valley of the ſame name, on the frontiers of France, 46 miles NNE. of Balbaſtro.

VENASQUE, a town of France, in the county of the Venaiſſin, of which it was formerly the capital. It is ſituated on the river Naſque, 14 miles ENE. of Avignon.

VENCE, an ancient town in the department of Var, 8 miles from the Mediterranean, 6 NE. of Graſſe, and 10 W. of Nice.

VENDEE, a department of France, W. of the department of the Two Sevres, and N. of the department of the Lower Charente; a part of the ci devant Poitou. It is ſo called from a ſmall river of the ſame name which riſes about 8 miles NNE. from Fontenay-le-Comte, and runs into the Sevre Niortoiſe, about a mile E. from Marans. Fontenay-le-Compte is the capital.

VENDEN, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Riga, ſituated on the Aa, 36 miles NE. of Riga.

VENDOME, a conſiderable town in the department of Loir and Cher, ſeated on the river Loir, 30 miles NE. of Tours, and 95 SW. of Paris. Before the revolution, it gave name to a country in Beauce.

VENERIE, LA, a ſmall town of Piedmont, 3 miles NNW. of Turin. It has manufactures of wool and ſilk, but is cheifly noted for a magnificent palace built by Emanuel II. duke of Savoy, for a hunting ſeat. The adjacent country abounds with game.

VENEZUELA, a pretty populous province of Terra Firma, in S. America, lying on a gulf of the ſame name, about 50 miles in length. It is bounded on the N. by the Gulf of Mexico, on the S. by New Granada, on the W. by the province of St. Martha aad Popayan, and on the E. by that of Cumana. Near the ſea-coaſt are high mountains, the tops of which are barren; but the valleys are fertile, producing plenty of corn, rich paſturage, ſugar, tobacco, cotton, ſarſaparilla, and fruits. There are alſo plantations of cocoa-nuts; gold is found in the ſands of the rivers, and the country abounds in game and wild beaſts. They often have two crops of corn in a year. Venezuela is the capital.

VENEZUELA, or CORO, a town of Terra Firma, in S. America, ſituated on a bay or gulf of the ſame name, on the Gulf of Mexico, and which communicates with the Lake Maracaibo, by a narrow ſtrait, in lat. 10. 35. N. lon. 68. 50. W.

VENICE, a city of Italy, one of the moſt celebrated in the world, and lately capital of a republic of the ſame name, in the Dogado, with a univerſity. It ſtands on 72 little iſlands, though ſome reckon only 60, in the Gulf of Venice. The approach to the city is marked by rows of ſtakes, or pales, on each ſide, which direct veſſels of a certain burden to avoid the ſhallows; it makes a very grand appearance at a diſtance, as ſeeming to float on the ſea; or rather, with its ſtately buildings and ſteeples, riſing, as it were, out of it. The marſhy lake on which Venice ſtands, about 5 miles from the main land, is a kind of ſmall inner gulf, ſeparated from the large one by ſome iſlands, at a few miles diſtance, and which, on the appearance of an enemy's fleet can be cut away. Theſe iſlands, in a great meaſure, break the force of the Adriatic ſtorms, before they reach the Laguna, or Lake; yet, in very high winds, the navigation of the lake is dangerous to gondolas, and ſometimes the gondoleers (as their watermen are called) do not truſt themſelves even in the canals within the city. This is not ſo great an inconvenience to the inhabitants as might be imagined; for moſt of the houſes have a door opening upon a canal, and another communicating with the ſtreet; by means of which, and of the bridges, a perſon may go to almoſt any part of the city, by land, as well as by water. From its inſular ſituation Venice is ſtrong without fortifications; and the fiſh, which are caught at the very doors of the houſes, may be reputed a good preſervative againſt famine. The number of the inhabitants is computed to be about 150 000. The houſes are built on piles. The ſtreets, in general, are narrow; and ſo are the canals, except the Grand Canal, which is very broad, and has a ſerpentine courſe through the middle of the city. It is ſaid, that there are 500 bridges in Venice, though ſome ſay only 450, great and ſmall, and the greater part of them built of ſtone; but what paſs for ſuch are only ſingle narrow arches thrown over the canals.

als. The higheſt and longeſt is the Rialto, which, in the middle of the city, roſſes the great canal, at its narroweſt part, where it is only 40 paces broad. It conſiſts alſo of one ſingle arch, but a very noble one, 24 feet high; the foundation, which takes up 90 feet, reſts on 12,000 ſtrong piles; and it is every where incruſted with marble. The beauty of it is impaired by two rows of booths, or ſhops, which divide its upper ſurface into three narrow ſtreets. At each end is an aſcent of 56 ſteps. The view from the Rialto is equally lively and magnificent; the Grand Canal, covered by boats and gondolas (which ſtrike the eye, however, with a mournful appearance, being all either lined with black ſerge, or painted black) and flanked on each ſide by magnificent palaces, churches, and ſpires. But this fine proſpect is almoſt the only one in Venice; for, except the Grand Canal, and the Canal Regio, all the others are narrow. Some of them have no quays, and the water literally waſhes the houſes. In rowing along theſe wretched canals, there is ſcarcely one agreeable object to cheer the ſight, and the ſtench, which, at certain ſeaſons, exhales from the water, is quite offenſive. The only place where a perſon can walk with eaſe and ſafety is in the Piazzi-di-St.-Marco; a kind of irregular quadrangle, formed by a number of buildings, all ſingular in their kind; namely, the Ducal Palace; the churches of St. Mark and St. Geminiano; the Old and New Procuraties, a fine range of buildings, in which are the Muſeum, the Public Library, and nine large apartments belonging to the procurators of St. Mark. All theſe buildings are of marble. The patriarchal church of St. Mark, though one of the richeſt and moſt expenſive in the world, does not ſtrike the eye very much at firſt. The architecture is of a mixed kind, moſtly Gothic; yet many of the pillars are the Grecian orders. The outſide is incruſted with marble: the inſide, ceiling, and floor, are all of the fineſt marble, as are the numerous pillars; and the whole is crowned by five domes; but all this labour and expence have been directed by a very moderate ſhare of taſte. The front, which looks to the palace, has five braſs gates, with hiſtorical baſ-reliefs; over the principal gate are placed the four famous bronze horſes, ſaid to be the workmanſhip of Lycippus; they were given to the emperor Nero by Tiridates, king of Armenia: the fiery ſpirit of their countenances, and their animated attitudes, are perfectly agreeable to their original deſtination, of being harneſſed to the chariot of the ſun. Nero placed them on the triumphal arch conſecrated to him: they were removed to Conſtantinople, placed in the Hyppodrome, by Conſtantine, and remained there till the taking of Conſtantinople by the French and Venetians, in the beginning of the 13th century, when they were conveyed to Venice. The treaſury of St. Mark is very rich in jewels and relics. The ducal palace is an immenſe building, partly Gothic and partly modern, and moſtly of marble. Beſides the apartments of the doge, there are halls and chambers for the ſenate, and all the different councils and tribunals. The principal entrance is by a ſpacious ſtair, called the Giant's Stair, on account of two coloſſal ſtatues, in white marble, of Mars and Neptune, placed at the top. Under the portico are the gaping mouths of lions, to receive anonymous letters, informations of treaſonable practices, and accuſations of magiſtrates for abuſes in office. From the palace is a covered bridge of communication to a ſtate priſon, on the other ſide of the canal: priſoners paſs to and from the courts over this bridge, which is named Ponte del Soſpiri, the Bridge of Sighs. The apartments of the ducal palace, as well as the churches and convents, are ornamented by Titian, Paul Veroneſe, Tintoret, Palma, the Baſſans, &c. with paintings which far ſurpaſs thoſe of Rome itſelf. Within the palace is a little arſenal, which communicates with the hall of the great council. Here a great number of muſkets are kept, ready charged, with which the nobles may arm themſelves on any ſudden inſurrection. The lower gallery, or piazza, under the palace is called the Broglio. In this the noble Venetians walk and converſe: it is only here, and at council, that they have opportunities of meeting together; for they ſeldom viſit openly, or in a family way, at each others houſes; and ſecret meetings would give umbrage to the ſtate inquiſitors; they chuſe, therefore, to tranſact their buſineſs on this public walk. People of inferior rank ſeldom remain on the Broglio, for any length of time, when the nobility are there. There is an opening from St. Mark's Place to the ſea, on which ſtand two lofty pillars of granite. Criminals, condemned to ſuffer death privately, are executed between theſe two pillars. The arſenal of Venice is a fortification of between two and three miles in compaſs: it is at once a dock-yard, and a vaſt repoſitory for naval and military ſtores. Here the Venetians build their their ſhips, caſt their cannon, make their cables, ſails, anchors, &c. The Venetians have a flouriſhing trade in ſilk manufactures, bone-lace, all ſorts of glaſſes and mirrors, which make their principal employments. The ſons are generally of the ſame buſineſs as the father. The handſome ſtructure, called Il Fontica-di-Tedeſchi, containing 500 rooms, is that where the German merchants lay their commodities. There are two academies of paintings, to which belong very ſkilful maſters. Proviſions are in great plenty at Venice, but the ſpring water being very indifferent, almoſt every houſe has a ciſtern, into which the rain water is conveyed from the roof, and clarified by being filtered through ſand. Venice contains 70 pariſh churches, beſides others; 54 convents of monks; 26 nunneries; 17 rich hoſpitals; 18 oratories; 40 religious fraternities, with their chapels; 53 ſquares, &c. It is 70 miles E. by N. of Mantua, and 140 E. of Milan. Lat. 45. 26. N. lon. 12. 10. E.

VENICE, a republic of Italy, which comprehends the following provinces; the Dogado, Paduano, Vicentino, Veroneſe, Breſciano, Bergamo, Cremaſco, Polefino-di-Rovigo, Trevifana, Feltrino, Belluneſe, Cadorino, and great part of Friuli and Iſtria. To theſe may be added a part of Dalmatia, the iſlands of Corfu, Zante, Cephalonia, Paxu, Antipaxu, and ſome others. In the 4th century, when Attila, king of Huns, called the Scourge of God, ravaged the N. part of Italy, many of the inhabitants abandoned their country, and retired into the iſlands of the Adriatic Sea. As theſe iſlands are near each other, they found means to join them together, by driving piles on the ſide of the canals, and on which they built houſes, and thus the ſuperb city of Venice had its beginning. The government of the republic of Venice is ariſtocratic, for none can have any ſhare in it but the nobles. The doge is elected by a plurality of voices, and keeps his dignity for life, and they make uſe of gold and ſilver balls, which are put in a veſſel, and ſerve for ballotting. Thoſe who draw nine golden balls firſt, elect 40 counſellors, who draw 12 others. Theſe elect 25 other counſellors, who draw 9 golden balls. The 9 elect 40 counſellors, who draw 11. Thoſe that have the 11, chuſe 41 counſellors, who proceed to the election, till 25 votes, or more, fall upon the ſame perſon, who is then declared doge. After this election, they place the ducal cap upon his head, upon which he takes poſſeſſion of the doge's palace. He never uncovers his head to any perſon, becauſe he does not wear the cap in his own name, but in that of the republic. When there are any pompous formalities, a nobleman carries the ſword, which is an emblem of the ſupreme authority; but it is not before the doge, but before the ſenate, to ſhow that the power is lodged in them. The office of the doge is to marry the Adriatic Sea, in the name of the republic, which he does, by dropping a gold ring into it annually; to preſide in all aſſemblies of the ſtate; to have an eye over all the members of the magiſtracy; and to nominate to all the benefices annexed to the church of St. Mark. On the other hand, he is to determine nothing without the conſent of the council; he is not to open any letter addreſſed to the republic, or that comes from the republic; he is not to receive any preſent; he is not to leave the city without permiſſion of the ſtates; he is not to chuſe an aſſiſtant; and he is never to reſign his dignity. In ſhort, he is a priſoner in the city, and out of it he is no more than a private perſon. There are five councils, the firſt of which is compoſed of the doge and ſix counſellors, called the Signiora. The ſecond is the Conſiglio Grand, or Grand Council, in which all the nobles, who are ſaid to be near 2000, have a voice. The third is the Conſiglio-del-Pregadi, which conſiſts of about 250 of the nobility. The fourth is the Conſiglio-Proprio, whoſe members are called Savii Grandi, or the Grand Sages, which join to the Signiora, and conſiſt of 28 aſſeſſors. This gives audience to the ambaſſadors. The fifth and laſt is Il Collegio-delli-dieci, and compoſed of 10 counſellors, who take notice of all criminal matters; and the doge himſelf, when accuſed, is obliged to appear before them. There is no appeal from this council, and it is a dreadful misfortune to be cited before it. The Venetians are Romaniſts, but they tolerate the Greeks and Mahometans. The Proteſtants are not allowed the public exerciſe of their religion; but they are not otherwiſe moleſted. The head of the clergy is the patriarch of Venice, who muſt be a noble Venetian, and is elected by the ſenate. This patriarch, in conſequence of the policy of the ſenate, has ſcarce any power over the prieſts and monks, who are greatly corrupted. There is another patriarch belonging to Venice, whoſe authority extends over Friuli, Iſtria, and moſt of the biſhops on the main land.

nd. The tribunal of the inquiſition at enice is compoſed of the pope's nuncio, e patriarch of Venice, and the father-quiſitor; but as theſe had need of a bri-e, they have added three counſellors to e number, without whoſe conſent they n determine nothing. Their famous rnival begins with the year, and conti-ues till Lent; all which time is employ-l in ſports and diverſions. Then liber-niſm reigns through the city, and thou-nds of foreigners frequent it from all rts of Europe. They all appear in aſks, which no one dares venture to ke off, and in this diſguiſe they imitate e ſports of the ancient Bacchanals; and e nearer Aſh-Wedneſday approaches, e more mad they are. The princi-l ſpot of the maſquerade is St. Mark's lace, where there are ſometimes above 5,000 people; and it ſwarms with har-quins, jeſters, mountebanks, rope-ancers, and puppet-ſhows. Even the rieſts and monks enjoy the diverſion of e carnival; but when the diverſions of e carnival are over, nothing is heard om the clergy, (who are generally ac-ounted ignorant) but ſermons on repent-nce. Whatever degree of licentiouſneſs ay prevail among the Venetians, jea-ouſy, poiſon, and the ſtiletto, have been ong baniſhed from their gallantry. The oorer people of Venice diſplay ſome qua-ties very rarely to be found in that ſphere f life, being remarkably ſober, obliging o ſtrangers, and gentle in their intercourſe ith each other. The Venetians, in ge-eral, are tall and well made; they have a uddy brown colour, with dark eyes. The omen are of an eaſy addreſs, and have no verſion to cultivate an acquaintance with hoſe ſtrangers who are preſented to them y their relations, or have been properly ecommended. The number of inhabit-nts in the city is eſtimated at 160,000, f the whole ſtate at 2,500,000, and of the nnual revenue of the republic at 8,200,000 ucats. By a late remarkable revolution, he ſovereignty of this celebrated republic, hich has now continued upwards of 1300 ears, in abſolute freedom and independ-nce, is entirely, and for ever ſubverted. The French, without the ſhow of military nterpriſe, ſuddenly made themſelves ma-ters of the city, while their troops were iffuſing themſelves all over the Venetian erritory. Soon after, Dalmatia was taken oſſeſſion of by the emperor, and it is now nnexed to his dominions, together with he city of Venice, and part of the late Venetian eſtates in Italy, by the treaty of Udina. The other part has become an acceſſion to the new Ciſalpine Republic.

VENICE, GULF OF, a ſea between Greece and Italy, extending from lat. 40. to 45. 55. N. It is the ancient Adriaticum Mare, and is ſtill called the Adriatic.

VENLO, a town of Ruremonde, in Guelderland, formerly in alliance with the Hanſeatic towns. The inhabitants are moſtly Romaniſts. In 1702, this town, with Fort St. Michael on the other ſide of the Maeſe, was taken by the army of the allies, under the Duke of Marlborough. It is ſeated on the E. ſide of the river Maeſe, 12 miles NNE. of Ruremonde, and 25 NW. of Duſſeldorf.

VENOSA, a town of Baſilicata, in Naples, containing 7 churches, and 7 convents. It is 9 miles NNW. of Acerenga.

Vent, a river in Cumberland, which runs into the S. Tyne, at Alſton Moor.

VENTA-DE-CRUZ, a ſea port town of Terra Firma, ſituated on the Iſthmus of Darien, 20 miles N. of Panama. Here the Spaniards embark their merchandiſe, on the river Chagre, which they ſend from Panama to Porto Bello.

VENTRY, in Kerry, Munſter, in the harbour, on the N. ſide of Dingle Bay, from which it is divided by a narrow iſthmus.

VER DU GARD, a town in the dept. of the Gard, 6 miles SE. of Uzes.

VERA, a ſea-port of Spain, in Granada, 32 miles SW. of Carthagena.

VERA CRUZ, a ſea-port of Tlaſcala, in Mexico, with a ſecure harbour, defended by a fort upon a rock of a neighbouring iſland, on the coaſt of the Gulf of Mexico. This is occaſionally one of the moſt conſiderable places in Spaniſh America for trade, it being the natural centre of the American treaſure, and the magazine of all the merchandize ſent from Mexico, as well as of that tranſported hither from Europe. It alſo receives a prodigious quantity of Eaſt-India goods overland from Acapulco, brought from the Phillippine Iſles. Upon the annual arrival of the fleta here from Old Spain, a fair is opened, which laſts many weeks, when this place may be ſaid to become, of a ſudden, immenſely rich. At this period, ſuch crowds of Spaniards arrive from all parts of America, that they erect tents for them while the fair laſts. It is ſurrounded by a wall, and the air is ſo unhealthy here, from the bogs around it, and the barrenneſs of the ſoil, that when the fair is over, there are few inhabitants; except except mulattoes and blacks. It is 180 miles ESE. of Mexico. Lat. 19. 12. N. lon. 97. 25. W.

VERA CRUZ, OLD, a ſea-port of Tlaſcala, in Mexico, 15 miles NNW. of Vera Cruz. Here Ferdinando Cortez landed with 500 Spaniards, when he undertook the conqueſt of Mexico.

VERAGUA, a province of Mexico, ſo called from a river of the ſame name. It is bounded on the E. by Darien, on the W. by Coſta Rica; on the N. by the Atlantic, and on the S. by the Pacific Ocean. It is a mountainous and barren country, expoſed to the incurſions of the Indians. A good deal of gold and ſilver is obtained here. Conception is the capital.

VERA PAZ, a province of Mexico, bounded on the N. by Yucatan and Chiapa, on the E. by the bay and province of Honduras, on the S. by Guatimala, and on the W. by Soconuſco. It is about 120 miles in length, and 70 in breadth, and abounds with mountains and thick foreſts of cedar, &c. in which are many wild beaſts, and yet there are many fertile valleys, which feed a great number of horſes and mules. The country is ſubject to earthquakes, thunder, and 9 months rain. The principal commodities are drugs, cocoa, cotton, wool, and honey. The capital, of the ſame name, but inconſiderable, is ſituated in lat. 15. 10. N. lon. 90. 54. W. beſides which there are many towns and villages of the native Americans.

VERBERIE, a town in the department of Oiſe, ſeated on the river Oiſe, 10 miles NE. of Senlis.

Verby, Yorkſhire, N. of Giſborough.

VERCELI, a town of Piedmont, capital of a conſiderable lordſhip. The inhabitants are about 20,000. Here are two cathedral churches, 12 others, 2 abbies, 19 convents of both ſexes, 2 priories, 2 provoſtſhips, 3 poor-houſes, and 5 hoſpitals. It is 10 miles NNW. of Caſal, and 40 NE. of Turin.

VERD, CAPE, a promontory on the W. coaſt of Africa, 45 miles NW. of the mouth of the river Gambia. Lat. 14. 45. N. lon. 17. 28. W.

VERD, CAPE DE, iſlands ſeated on the Atlantic Ocean, about 400 miles W. of Cape Verd, and between the 14th and 18th degrees of N. latitude. They are ſo called from the cape of that name, or, according to ſome authors, from a green plant which grows in the ſea near them, reſembling water-creſſes, and bearing a fruit ſomething like a gooſeberry. This plant, called ſargoſſo, is ſometimes found ſo thick, as to impede veſſels in their courſe. The principal are 10 in number, lying in a ſemi circle; their names are St. Antonio, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, St. Nicholas, the Iſle of Sal, Bona-Viſta, Mayo, St. Jago, Fuego, and Bravo; the others, 4 or more, are only uninhabited rocks. They are, in general, mountainous, and the ſoil is often ſtony and barren; nevertheleſs the lower hills are covered with a beautiful verdure, as well as the extenſive valleys between them, but with little water, in general, except what is found in ponds and wells. Both the ground and air are ſo extremely hot, that one can hardly ſtand in places expoſed to the ſun. It is reckoned dangerous alſo to paſs the night in the open air, for the great heat is often ſucceeded by a ſudden cold, which is ſaid to prove mortal to ſuch as are expoſed to it. Many parts produce rice, maize, bananas, lemons, oranges, citrons, pomegranates, figs, and melons; grapes alſo are gathered twice a year. The inhabitants, about 100,000 in number, catch and ſalt a great number of turtles, which they ſend to America; they alſo manufacture leather and ſalt, and procure from Africa, ſlaves, ſugar, rice, cotton ſtuffs, ambergris, civet, ivory, saltpetre, and gold. The uninhabited iſlands are all ſtocked with cows, goats, hogs, aſſes, mules, &c. under their particular lords. Theſe iſlands are ſaid to have been known to the ancients under the name of Gorgades, but were not viſited by the moderns till the year 1499, when they were diſcovered by Antonio Nolli, a Genoeſe, in the ſervice of the Infant Don Henry, of Portugal; at that time they were almoſt uninhabited. Two of them, St. Jago and St. Philip, depend immediately on the king, and are the only ones that are fortified. The governor exercises a deſpotic military power. Few whites are now to be ſeen; the influence of the climate has entirely changed the ancient Portugueſe to negroes.

VERDEN, a duchy of Lower Saxony, having Bremen on the N. and W. and Lunenburg on the E. and S. It extends both in length and breadth about 24 miles. It conſiſts chiefly of heaths and high dry lands and foreſts, but there is good marſh land on the rivers Weſer and Aller. In 1712, the Danes wreſted this duchy from Sweden, and, in 1715, ceded it to the king of Great Britain, as elector of Hanover; which ceſſion, in 1718, was confirmed by the Swedes. This duchy has the he ſame regency with that of Bremen. The inhabitants are Lutherans.

VERDEN, the capital of the duchy of he ſame name, in Lower Saxony, containing 4 churches, and a Latin ſchool. t is ſeated on the Aller, 40 miles NW. f Hanover.

VERDUN, a town in the department of Meuſe, noted for fine ſweetmeats. It is ſeated on the river Maeſe, which runs hrough the middle, 33 miles NNW. of Toul, and 150 E. of Paris.

VERDUN, a town in the department of Upper Garonne, ſeated on the river Garonne, 18 miles NNW. of Toulouſe.

Vere, a river in Hertfordſhire, which runs into the Coln, about 2 miles SE. rom St. Alban's; alſo a county on the . ſide of the iſland of Jamaica. Veres, r Verſe Wotton, Dorſetſ. W. of Bridport.

VERMAND, a town in the department f Aiſne, 6 miles W. of St. Quintin. Before the revolution, it was capital of a erritory called the Vermandois.

VERMANTON, a town in the dept. of Yonne, 10 miles SE. of Auxerre.

Vermiſter, Dorſetſhire, NE. of Sturminſter.

VERMONT, one of the United States of N. America, bounded on the N. by Canada; on the E. by the river Connecticut, which divides it from New Hampſhire; on the S. by Maſſachuſſets; and on the W. by New York. It is about 155 miles long, and 60 broad, and is divided into ſeven counties. A chain of high mountains, running N. and S. divides this ſtate nearly in the centre, between the river Connecticut and Lake Champlain. The height of land is generally from 20 to 30 miles from the river, and about the ſame diſtance from the New-York line. The natural growth upon this mountain is hemlock, pine, ſpruce, and other evergreens: hence it has always a green appearance, and on this account, has obtained the deſcriptive name of Vermont, from the French Verd Mont, Green Mountain. On ſome high parts of this mountain, ſnow lies till May, and ſometimes till June. The country is generally hilly, but not rocky. It is finely watered; the ſoil is very fertile, and there is not a better climate in the world. The inhabitants have very lately been eſtimated at 100,000. The bulk of them are emigrants from Connecticut and Maſſachuſetts. The principal town is Bennington, but the aſſembly generally hold their ſeſſions at Windſor.

VERNEUIL, a town in the dept. of Eure, ſeated on the river Aure, 22 miles SSW. of Evreux, and 65 W. of Paris.

VERNEUIL, a town in the department of Allier, 15 miles S. of Moulins.

VERNON, a town in the department of Eure, ſeated on the river Seine, 27 miles SSE. of Rouen, and 42 NW. of Paris.

Vernon, Cheſhire, SW. of Sandbach.

VEROLI, a town in the Campagna-di-Roma, containing 8 churches, and 3 convents. It is 8 miles S. of Alatri.

VERONA, a city of Italy, in the late territory of Venice, and capital of the Veroneſe, fortified in the ancient manner, and defended by three caſtles. The inhabitants amount to near 50,000. The ſtreets are moſtly narrow, crooked, and dirty, and the houſes are mean; but there is a large, handſome ſquare, called the Piazza-d'Armi, and a pretty long, good ſtreet, called the Corſo; and its outlets are more delightful than the city is within. The biſhop and governor have ſuperb palaces, but the moſt magnificent is that of Count Maffei. The town-houſe and the opera-houſe are fine buildings; but the moſt celebrated ſtructure here is the ancient amphitheatre built by the Romans, in which are 44 rows of benches, of white marble, ſtill entire (which will hold, according to Count Maffei, 22,184 ſpectators) on which the people ſat. But very little, however, of this valuable piece of antiquity appears ancient, having been carefully repaired from time to time at the city's expence. The outward walls of the upper ſtory are wanting. In the Academy of the Phil-Harmonics, is a large collection of ancient inſcriptions and monuments, in the Hetrurian, Punic, Egytian, Greek, and Latin languages, either found or brought here for a great many years paſt. It is ſeated on the river Adige, on which they tranſport very good linen, woollen, ſtuffs, olives, oil, wine, ſewing-ſilk, and medicinal plants, growing on Mount Balbo, &c. to Venice, and over which it has 4 ſtone bridges, the principal of which is 348 feet long; 62 miles W. of Venice, and 18 NNE. of Mantua.

VERONESE, a territory of Italy, lately in Venice, about 47 miles in length, and 25 in breadth. It is one of the moſt fertile countries in Italy, abounding in corn, wine, fruits, and cattle. The Venetians became maſters of the city and territory, in 1409.

VERNOIS, a town and river of Ruſſia, in the government of Rezzan.

VERREZ, a town of Aoſta, Piedmont.

Verrian, Cornwall, 3 miles from Tregony, and N. of Gwyndrith Bay.

VERSAILLES, a town in the dept. of Seine and Oiſe, 12 miles SW. of Paris. In the reign of Louis XIII. it was only a ſmall village. This prince built here a hunting ſeat in 1630, which Baſſompierre calls "the paltry chateau of Verſailles." Although the ſituation was low, and very unfavourable, Louis XIV. built a magnificent palace here, which was the uſual reſidence of the kings of France, till the 6th of October, 1789, when the late unhappy Louis XVI. and his family were removed from it to the Tuilleries. The buildings and the gardens are adorned with a vaſt number of ſtatues, canals, fountains, &c. and the water-works are much admired. The great gallery is thought to be as curious a piece of workmanſhip of that kind, as any in the world: and the chapel is no leſs admired for its fine architecture and ornaments. The gardens, with the park, are 5 miles in circumference, and ſurrounded by walls. There are three fine avenues to Verſailles, one of which is the common road to Paris, the other comes from Seaux, and the third from St. Cloud.

VERSAILLES, a town of Kentucky, 10 miles SE. of Frankfort.

VERTUS, a town in the department of Marne, 17 miles SW. of Chalons, and 78 E. of Paris.

VERUE, or VERRUA, a town of Aſti, Piedmont, ſeated on a hill, near the river Po. It was taken by the French in 1705, after a ſiege of ſix months, when it was reduced to a heap of ruins. It was afterwards reſtored to the duke of Savoy.

VERVIERS, a town of Franchemont, in Liege. The inhabitants carry on a very conſiderable traffic in cloth, which they export to Germany, Italy, Turkey, &c.

VERVINS, a town in the department of Aiſne, noted in hiſtory for a treaty of peace concluded here, in 1598, between Henry IV. king of France, and Philip II. king of Spain. It is 110 miles NNE. of Paris.

VERULAM, the veſtiges of a Roman oppidum, or town, in Hertfordſhire, on the Verlam river, oppoſite St. Alban's. In the time of Nero it was a municipium, the inhabitants of which enjoyed the privileges of Roman citizens. By Tacitus it was called Verulamium, and by Ptolemy Urolamium. After the departure of the Romans, it was entirely ruined in the wars between the Britons and Saxons; and nothing remains of it but the ruins of walls, teſſelated pavements, and Roman coins, which are ſtill ſometimes dug up. On the NE. corner is a piece of the wall, 3 yards and a half thick, compoſed of flints, and layers of Roman bricks. The ſite of it has long ago been converted into corn-fields.

Verwood, Dorſetſhire, near Wimborn-Abbas.

VESLE, two rivers of France, the former of which runs into the Aiſne, near Veilly; and the latter runs into the Saone, oppoſite Varenne le Grand.

VESELIZE, a town in the department of Meurthe, ſeated on the river Breuer, 15 miles SE. of Toul, and 168 SSE. of Paris.

VESLY. See VEILLY.

VESOUL, a town in the department of Upper Saone, 22 miles N. of Beſançon, and 200 SE. of Paris.

VESPRIN, a town which gives name to a county of Hungary, 32 miles SSE. of Raab.

VESUVIUS, a celebrated Volcano of Italy, in Naples. The firſt eruption of this volcano was in the year 79 of the Chriſtian era, under Titus. It was accompanied by an earthquake, which overturned ſeveral cities, particularly Pompeii and Herculaneum. This eruption proved fatal to Pliny, the naturaliſt. "Great quantities of aſhes and ſulphureous ſmoke," ſays Dion Caſſius, "were carried not only to Rome, but alſo beyond the Mediterranean into Africa, and even to Egypt. Birds were ſuffocated in the air, and fell down upon the ground; and fiſhes periſhed in the neighbouring waters, which were made hot, and infected by it." Sir William Hamilton mentions, that the eruption in 1767 was the 27th from the time of Titus, ſince which there have been 9 others; thoſe of 1779 and 1794 being the moſt violent and alarming. In this laſt, 5000 acres of rich vineyards were deſtroyed, and moſt of the houſes in the town of Torre-del-Greco buried, or rendered uninhabitable. Veſuvius is 6 miles E. of Naples.

VEVAY, a town and bailiwick of Bern, in Switzerland, with a manufacture of hats, and a large trade in cheeſe. Here General Ludlow retired on the reſtoration, and died in 1693. It is ſeated near the head of the Lake of Geneva, 10 miles SSE. of Lauſanne.

VEUDRE, a town in the department of Allier, ſeated on the river Allier, 17 miles NNW. of Moulins.

VEZELAY, a town in the department of of Yonne, ſeated on a mountain, 20 miles S. of Auxerre, and 117 S. by E. of Paris.

UFA, one of the 41 governments of Ruſſia, formerly included in the government of Orenburgh. It is divided into the two provinces of Ufa and Orenburgh.

UFA, a town of Ruſſia, capital of a government of the ſame name. It is ſeated a few miles below the mouth of the river Ufa, 632 miles ESE. of Moſcow.

Ufcolomb, Devonſ. on the river Columb, 10 miles from Braduinch. Ufcot, Wilts, NW. of Marlborough. Uffay-Park, Cumberland, SE. of Ravenglaſs. Uffer-ton, Durham, W. of Sunderland. Uffing-ton, Lincolnſhire, near Stamford. Uf-fington, or Offington, Berks, near Wan-tage. Uffington, Shropſhire, NE. of Shrewſbury. Ufford, Northamp. near Stamford. Ufford, Suffolk, NE. of Woodbridge. Uffton, Warw. between Itchington and Offchurch. Ugbear, Devonſhire, W. of the Avon, and SW. of Brent. Ugboro, Cornw. near the Tamar, 3 miles from Modbury. Ugbrook, Devonſhire, 2 miles from Chudleigh. Near it is a cave that runs a great way under ground.

UGENTO, a town of Otranto, in Naples.

Ugford, Wilts, near Wilton. Uggeſ-comb, Dorſetſ. near Portiſham. Ugham, Northumb. near the Lyn, NE. of Morpeth. Ughterſhaw, Yorkſ. N. of Lang-ſtredale Chace. Ugleberb, Yorkſ. S. of Whitby. Ugley, Eſſex, N. of Stanted-Mountfichet, and E. of the Stort.

UGONGA, a town of Piedmont.

Ugſhall, Suffolk, W. of Eaſton-Neſs. Ugthorp, Yorkſ. near Moulgrave-Caſtle.

VIADANA, a town of Mantua.

VIANA, a town of Spain, in Navarre; and a town of Galicia.

VIANA, a ſea-port of Portugal, in Entre-Minho-e-Douro, containing two churches, ſeven convents, an hoſpital, and about 7000 inhabitants. It is ſeated at the mouth of the river Lima, 36 miles N. of Oporto.

VIANDEN, a town of Luxemburg, capital of a county of the ſame name, which comprehends 40 villages and hamlets.

VIANEN, a town of S. Holland, on the river Lech, 7 miles S. of Utrecht.

VIATKA, a town of Ruſſia, capital of a government of the ſame name, ſeated on the river Viatka, 440 miles ENE. of Moſcow.

VIATKA, a government of the Ruſſian empire, which was formerly a province of Caſan. The capital is of the ſame name.

VIC, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, 12 miles NE. of Nanci, and 197 E. of Paris.

VIC BIGORRE, a ſmall town in the dept. of the Upper Pyrenees, ſituated on the river Adour, 12 miles N. of Tarbes.

VIC, a town of Catalonia, formerly more conſiderable than at preſent; however, it ſtill contains handſome buildings. It is 30 miles NNE. of Barcelona.

VICEGRAD, a town of Hungary, on the Danube, 9 miles SSE. of Gran.

VICENTINO, a territory of Italy, lately ſubject to the Venetians, about 40 miles in length, and from 10 to 24 in breadth; bounded on the N. by the Tyroleſe; on the E. by the Trevilan and the Paduan; on the S. by the Paduan; and on the W. by the Veroneſe and Tyroleſe. It is a pleaſant and fertile country, abounding in game, and is called the garden and fleſh-market of Venice. The wine is excellent, and the butter and cheeſe very good. Here are alſo great numbers of mulberry-trees, which ſerve to nouriſh ſilk-worms; and there are mines of ſilver and iron, and quarries of ſtone, almoſt as fine as marble.

VICENZA, a city of Italy, capital of the Vicentino, with a biſhop's ſee. It is adorned with ſeveral regular, ſtately palaces, and other elegant edifices, (particularly the council-houſe, the grandeur of which is heightened by 2 very lofty columns) and it has a fine ſquare, with piazzas under the houſes. There are ſeveral other ſquares, and 57 churches, parochial and conventual, with ſeveral good hoſpitals. The great altar of the Dominican church is an auguſt piece of Palladio's architecture. There is an academy for the improvement of the Italian language, whoſe members meet in the Olympic theatre, a maſter-piece of workmanſhip by the ſame ſkilful architect. The ſeats are diſpoſed in the manner of the ancient amphitheatre, and the perſpective is ſurpriſingly beautiful. It is ſeated in a fertile plain, between 2 hills, at the union of 2 ſmall rivers, the Bachiglione and Rerone, 35 miles W. of Venice.

VIC-FEZENSAC, a town in the dept. of Gers, 15 miles NNW. of Auch.

VICHI, a town in the dept. of Allier, famous for the mineral waters near it. It is ſeated on the river Allier, 3 miles SW. of Cuſſet, and 180 S. by E. of Paris.

VIC-LE-COMPTE, a town in the dept. of Puy-de-Dome, with mineral ſprings about a mile from it. It is 12 miles SSE. of Clermont.

VICO, a town of Capitanata; a town of Lavora; and a town of Principato Citra; all in Naples: alſo a town of the iſland of Corſica, 15 miles SW. of Corte. In it is the cathedral of the biſhop of Sagona.

VICO-DI-PANTANO, a town of Lavora, in Naples, 12 miles SW. of Capua.

VICOVARO, a town of Italy, in the Sabina, 20 miles ENE. of Rome.

VIDDIN, a town of Bulgaria, ſeated on the river Danube, 104 miles ESE. of Belgrade.

VIDOURLE, a river in the dept. of the Gard, which runs into the lake of Thau, near Aigues Mortes.

VIE, a river in the department of La Vendee, which runs into the Atlantic, near St. Gilles; and a river in the department of the Calvadoes, which runs into the Dive, 8 miles NW. of Crevecœur.

VIELMUR, a town in the dept. of the Tarn, 9 miles W. of Caſtres.

VIELSK, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Vologda, ſituated on the Vaga, 156 miles ENE. of Vologda.

VIENNA, the capital of the circle of Auſtria, in Germany, and of the whole German empire, where the emperor reſides. The city itſelf is not large, and contains about 60,000 inhabitants, being limited by a very ſtrong fortification; but the ſuburbs and town together are ſaid to contain above 300,000. The ſtreets, in general, are narrow, and in part crooked, and the houſes built high. Some of the public buildings are magnificent; but they appear externally to no great advantage, on account of the narrowneſs of the ſtreets. The chief of them are the Imperial Palace, the Library, and the Muſeum: the palaces of the princes Lichtenſtein, Eugene, &c. No houſes without the walls are allowed to be built nearer the glacis than 600 yards; ſo that there is a circular field of that breadth all round the town, which has a beautiful and ſalutary effect. The ſuburbs are not near ſo populous, in proportion to their ſize, as the town; as many houſes in the former have extenſive gardens belonging to them, and many families, who live during the winter within the fortifications, ſpend the ſummer in the ſuburbs. The ſecond floor of all burghers' houſes, is allotted for the reception of officers of the imperial court, and the owners can only purchaſe an exemption, by paying a ſum of money for the erection of barracks. Vienna contains 50 churches or chapels, and 21 convents. The cathedral is built of free-ſtone, is 114 yards long, and 48 broad, and the ſteeple is 447 feet high. Here is a monument in honour of Prince Eugene of Savoy. Inſtead of a weathercock, there is a black ſpread eagle, over which is a gilded croſs. Joining to this church is the archbiſhop's palace, the front of which is very fine. Beſides the univerſity, containing a great number of ſtudents, there is the academy of Lower Auſtria; and the archiducal library, which is open every morning 3 or 4 hours to the public, contains 5 or 6000 volumes, printed in the 15th century, with a well-furniſhed and valuable collection of prints and uſeful modern books. The academy of painting is remarkable for the fine pictures it produces. The imperial cabinet is very rich in medals, and ſtill more ſo in natural hiſtory. Proviſions are brought here in great plenty and variety; and wild hogs, ſtags, with cart-loads of hares, pheaſants, and partridges, may be ſeen in the game market. Here is a ſort of a harbour on the Danube, where there are magazines of naval ſtores; and ſhips have been fitted out to ſerve on that river againſt the Turks. The manufactures of this city are numerous, and the trade extenſive. Vienna has been twice ineffectually beſieged by the Turks, in 1529, and 1683. At the latter period, the ſiege was raiſed by John Sobieſki, king of Poland, who totally defeated the Turkiſh army before this place. Vienna is ſeated at the place where the river Vien falls into the Danube, near the ſite of the ancient Vindebona. Lat. 48. 13. N. lon. 16. 28. E.

VIENNA, a town of Kentucky, 134 miles WSW. of Frankfort; and a town of Maryland, ſituated on the river Nanticoke, 85 miles S. of Philadelphia.

VIENNE, a city in the dept. of Iſere, ſeated on the E. bank of the Rhone, over which it had formerly a ſtone bridge, built in the year 1265, now deſtroyed, or of which only ſome piers remain, that render the navigation dangerous, 15 miles S. of Lyons. Its commerce conſiſts in wines, ſilk, and ſword blades, which laſt are highly eſteemed. Near Vienne, on the banks of the Rhone, are produced the excellent wines of Côte Rotie; and the famous hermitage wines. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of an archbiſhop, and capital of a territory called the Viennois. It was anciently a Roman colony, but in the 5th century it was taken by the Burgundians, whoſe kings made it their place of reſidence. In the 9th century, it was the capital of the kingdom of Provence.

VIENNE, a department of France, joining

ng on the W. to that of the Two Sevres, nd on the E. to the department of the ndre. Before the revolution, it was part f Poitou. It takes its name from a river vhich rifes in the department of Correze, bout 3 miles E. from Tarnac, paſſes by r near to Tarnac, Aimoutter, St. Leonard, Limoges, Aix, St. German, Iſle ourdain, Chinon, &c. and falls into the oire, in the department of the Indre and oire, about 5 miles above Saumur.

VIENNE, Upper, a dept. of France, ompoſed of the ci-devant Limouſin. imoges is the capital.

VIERRADEN, a town of Uckermark, Brandenburg.

VIERZON, a town in the dept. of Cher, amous for its forges. It is ſeated at the onfluence of the Cher and Yevre, 17 miles NW. of Bourges, and 100 S. of Paris.

VIESTI, a town of Capitanata, Naples.

VIGAN, a town in the dept. of Gard, 10 miles NW. of Niſmes.

VIGEVANO, a town of Piedmont.

VIGNAMONT, a town of Liege.

VIGO, a town of Spain, in Galicia, with a good harbour, ſeated on the Atlantic ocean, 12 miles NNW. of Tay, and 160 WNW. of Madrid. Here, in 1702, he Engliſh and Dutch fleets, having roken the boom laid acroſs the mouth of he harbour, defeated a ſquadron of French nen of war, with 13 Spaniſh galleons unler their convoy. The Engliſh took 4 galleons and 5 men of war, and the Dutch galleons and 1 man of war. Fourteen nen of war and 4 galleons were deſtroyd, and a great deal of ſilver was taken. n 1719, it was again taken by the Engliſh, who relinquiſhed it, after raiſing conributions.

VIHIERS, a town in the dept. of Maine nd Loire, whoſe inhabitants have a great rade in cattle. It is 20 miles S. of Angers, and 162 SW. of Paris.

VILAINE, a river of France, which riſes n the dept. of Maine, waters Vitré, Rennes, Redon, &c. and enters the Bay of Biſcay below Roche Bernard.

VILLA BOHIM, a town of Alentejo.

VILLACH, a town of Carinthia, ſituated near the Baths of Toplitz, 18 miles f Clagenfurt.

VILLA-DE-CONDA, a ſea port of Douo, 14 miles N. of Oporto.

VILLA-DU-HORTA, the principal own of the Iſland of Fyal, one of the Azores. It is ſeated on the weſtern coaſt, nd has a harbour, the beſt in the iſland, eing land-locked on every ſide except the E. and NE. and defended by ſeveral forts. Lat. 38. 32. N. lon. 28. 36. W.

VILLA-DE MOSE, a town of Mexico, in Tabaſco, ſeated on a river of the ſame name, which is navigable by boats to Tabaſco, 30 miles from the ſea.

VILLA-DEL-REY, a town of Galicia; and a town of Eſtramadura, both in Spain.

VILLA-FLOR, a town of Tra-los-Montes.

VILLA-FRANCA, the capital of St. Michael, one of the Azores, the moſt ancient town in the whole iſland, and ſo called from its being at firſt a free port. Before its harbour lies an iſlamd, about a mile in circumference, and towards the ſea the town is defended by a fort and ſome other works. It conſiſts of 1813 hearths, and contains 2 pariſh churches, and 2 convents. Lat. 37. 50. N. lon. 25. 35. W

VILLA-FRANCA, three towns in Old Caſtile, the firſt 10 miles E. of Burgos; the ſecond, 30 miles W. of Burgos; and the third, ſituated on the Tormes, 50 miles NW. of Toledo. Alſo a town of Leon, 50 miles WSW. of Leon; a town of Italy, in the Veroneſe, with a ſilk manufactory; a town in the principality of Piedmont, a town of Piedmont, in the duchy of Aoſta; and a ſea port town of Nice, with two caſtles and a harbour ſheltered by lofty hills, 8 miles E. of Nice. It was taken by the French in 1792.

VILLA-FRANCA-DE-PANADES, a town of Catalonia, ſituated near the ſea, 20 miles SW. of Barcelona.

VILLA-FRANCA-DE-XIRA, a town of Portugueſe Eſtramadura, ſituated on the N. bank of the Tagus, 15 miles NE. of Liſbon.

VILLA-HERMOSA, a town of Valencia; a town of New Caſtile; and a town of Tobaſco, in Mexico.

VILLA-NOVA, a town of Douro, ſeated on the river Douro, oppoſite Oporto.

VILLA-NOVA, a town of Chieri; a town of Vercelli; and a town of Aoſta; all in Piedmont.

VILLAPANDA, a town of Leon.

VILLA-REAL, a town of Portugal, in Tra-los-Montes, capital of Comarca.

VILLA-REAL, a town of Valencia.

VILLA-RICA, a ſea port of Mexico; a town of Paraguay, Buenos Ayres; and a town of Minas Geraes, in Braſil.

VILLA-VICIOSA, a town of Alentejo, with a palace and park, in which the dukes of Braganza formerly reſided. It ſuſtained a famous ſiege againſt the Spaniards, in the year 1667. A battle alſo was fought near it, much about the ſame time, the ſucceſs of which greatly contributed to fix the crown of Portugal on the head of the Duke of Braganza. In the ſuburb is an ancient temple, originally built to the honour of Proſerpine, as appears from the inſcriptions. The ſoil about this town is extremely fertile, and there are quarries of beautiful green marble. It is 16 miles SW. of Elvas, and 88 SSE. of Liſbon.

VILLA-VICIOSA, a ſea port of Aſturias, 30 miles NE. of Oviedo.

VILLE-DIEU, a town in the department of the Channel, 12 miles NNE. of Avranches.

VILLE-FRANCHE, a town in the dept. of Rhone and Loire, ſurrounded with walls and ditches. It is 18 miles N. of Lyons, and 233 S. by E. of Paris.

VILLE-FRANCHE, a town of France, in the dept of the Eaſtern Pyrenees, 22 miles ENE. of Puycerda, and 27 WSW. of Perpignan. In one of the mountains which ſurround this place, is a curious cavern.

VILLE-FRANCHE, a town in the dept. of Aveiron, ſeated on the river Aveiron, 24 miles W. of Rhodes, and 260 S. of Paris. It carries on a great trade in linen cloth.

VILLE-JUIF, a town about 4 miles S. of Paris, on the great road to Lyons.

VILLEMUR, a town in the dept. of Upper Garonne, ſeated on the river Tarne, 16 miles N. of Toulouſe.

VILLENA, a town of Murcia, near a moraſs, from which they manufacture ſalt.

VILLENEUVE, a town in the dept. of Lot and Garonne, ſeated on the river Lot, 17 miles N. of Agen.

VILLENEUVE, a town in the dept. of Gard, ſeated on the river Rhone, oppoſite Avignon.

VILLENEUVE-DE-BERG, a town in the dept. of Ardeche, 12 miles NNW. of Viviers.

VILLERS-COTERETS, a town in the department of Aiſne, 11 miles SW. of Soiſſons.

VILLINGEN, a town of Auſtrian Suabia, in the Briſgaw, ſituated between the ſources of the river Danube and Neckar, 28 miles E. by S. of Friburg.

VILMANSTRAND, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Viborg.

VILVORDE, a town of Brabant, ſeated on the river Senne, 6 miles N. of Bruſſels.

VINCENT, CAPE, a promontory of Portugal, 25 miles W. of Lagos. Lat. 37. 2. N. lon. 9. 0. W.

VINCENT, ST. an iſland of the W. Indies, about 40 miles in length, and 10 in breadth. It is one of the Caribbee Iſlands, and inhabited by a race of people, of whom Dr. Robertſon gives this account: "There is a great diſtinction in character between the Caribbees and the inhabitants of the larger iſlands. The former appear manifeſtly to be a ſeparate race. Their language is totally different from that of their neighbours in the large iſlands. They themſelves have a tradition that their anceſtors came originally from ſome part of the continent, and having conquered and exterminated the ancient inhabitants, took poſſeſſion of their lands and of their women. Hence they call themſelves Banaree, which ſignifies a man come from beyond ſea. Accordingly, the Caribbees ſtill uſe two diſtinct languages, one peculiar to the men, and the other to the women. The language of the men has nothing common with that ſpoken in the large iſlands. The dialect of the women conſiderably reſembles it. This ſtrongly confirms the tradition which I have mentioned. The Caribbees themſelves imagine that they were a colony from the Galibis, a powerful nation of Guiana, in S. America. But as their fierce manners approach nearer to thoſe of the people in the northern continent, than to thoſe of the natives of S. America; and as their language has likewiſe ſome affinity to that ſpoken in Florida, their origin ſhould be deduced rather from the former than the latter. In their wars, they ſtill preſerve their ancient practice of deſtroying all the males, and preſerving the women, either for ſervitude, or for breeding." This iſland was only inhabited by native Caribs, till towards the latter end of the laſt century, when a ſhip from Guinea, with a large cargo of ſlaves was either wrecked or run aſhore on the coaſt; great numbers of the negroes eſcaped into the woods and mountains, whom the Indians ſuffered to remain. Theſe Africans ſoon became very numerous, partly by the acceſſion of runaway ſlaves from Barbadoes, and partly by the children they had by the Indian women. After this the country became the theatre of ſavage hoſtilities between the negroes and the Caribbees, in which the former were generally victorious, or at leaſt proved ſo in the end; their numbers in 1763 being computed at 2000, whereas of the red or native Caribs, there were not left more than 100 families. St. Vincent's was long conſidered as a neutral iſland, land, by the two countries of England nd France; but, at the peace of 1763, he French agreed that the right to it ould be veſted in the Engliſh; who, in ne ſequel, at the inſtance of ſome rapa- ious planters, engaged in a war againſt ne Caribbees, who inhabited the wind- ard ſide of the iſland, and who were bliged to conſent to a peace, by which ey ceded a very large tract of valuable nd to the crown. The conſequence of is was, that retaining their reſentment gainſt the Engliſh, they aided the French the reduction of the iſland, in 1779, ho, however, reſtored it by the peace 1783. The country is generally moun- inous and rugged: the valleys are, owever, extremely fruitful. It contains out 84,000 acres; every where well wa- red, of which 23,605 acres are poſſeſſed y Britiſh ſubjects: and as much more as lately held by the Caribs. All the ſt of the country has not been yet eared, but retains its native woods. The il is a black mould upon a ſtrong loam, ie moſt proper for the raiſing of ſugars: nd indigo thrives here remarkably well. he number of inhabitants appears, by ie laſt official returns, to be 1450 whites, nd 11,853 negroes. The governor's ſa- ry is 2000l. ſterling; one half of which raiſed within the iſland, and the other alf is paid out of the exchequer of Great ritain. Lat. 13. 0. N. lon. 61. 0. W.

VINCENT, ST. a town of Beira; and a a-port of Aſturia, 9 miles WSW. of antillana.

VINCENT, ST. a town of Braſil, in the overnment of St. Paul, ſituated on the a-coaſt, 150 miles SSW. of St. Sebaſtian.

VINCENT, ST. one of the Cape de erd Iſlands, about 30 miles in circum- rence; in general lofty, except towards ie NW. where it is low and ſandy. In is part is a commodious bay or harbour, out a league and a half broad at the outh, ſurrounded with high mountains, retching to the middle of the iſland, and curely ſheltered from the weſterly and rth-weſt winds. Hence it is juſtly ac- ounted the beſt harbour in all the Cape erd iſlands; yet it is difficult of acceſs, y reaſon of the impetuous winds that ow off the mountains, along the coaſt, ith ſo much fury, as greatly to endanger ipping before they can arrive at this ace of ſecurity. Beſides this harbour, here ſhips frequently wood and water, nd where wild goats may be obtained, or the iſland is uninhabited) there are veral other bays on the S. ſide, at which ips may anchor; and of theſe the Portugueſe generally make choice, for the purpoſe of loading their hides. St Vincent has alſo good freſh water, which does not fail to ſpring up, on digging a little way into the ſoil of the valley; but the hills afford not a ſingle drop. It is ſaid, alſo, that more turtle is caught near this iſland, than round all the reſt, and that it abounds with ſaltpetre.

VINCENT'S ROCKS, ST. Glouceſterſhire, E. of the Avon, and a mile and a half NNW. of Briſtol. They are very ſteep and rugged precipices, which continue their courſe about 3 miles, and ſeem to have been almoſt miraculouſly cleft aſunder, to admit a paſſage for the river Frome. The Avon flows between them, and the tide riſes here 42 feet. At the bottom of theſe rocks, near the water-ſide, riſes a medicinal hot ſpring, the taſte of which is ſoft, milky, and grateful to the ſtomach. It is ſucceſsfully preſcribed in inflammations, hectic coughs, immoderate fluxes, and ſcrophulous and cancerous caſes.

Vine, Hants, near Baſingſtoke. Vineyard, near Glouceſter. Vineyard, Glouceſterſhire, near Tewkeſbury. Vineyard-Floſy, Somerſetſ. SW. of Taunton.

VINGORIA, a Dutch ſettlement on the coaſt of Concan, 22 miles NNW. of Goa.

Vinniton, Devonſhire, NW. of Honiton.

VINTIMIGLIA, a town of Genoa, with a ſmall harbour, ſituated on the Mediterranean, 8 miles NE. of Monaco, and 70 SW. of Genoa.

Vintners, Kent, in Boxley pariſh.

VIRE, a town in the dept. of Calvados, with manufactures of coarſe woollen cloths. It is ſeated on the river Vire, 27 miles SW. of Caen.

VIRGIN ISLANDS, certain iſlands and keys in the W. Indies, ſituated in about lat. 18. 30. N. to the E. of Porto Rico, and extending about 20 leagues in length and upwards of 12 in breadth. They were called Las Virgines by the Spaniards, the firſt diſcoverers, in honour of the 11,000 Virgins of the Legend. Though every way dangerous to navigators, there is a baſon in the midſt of them, 6 or 7 leagues in length, and 3 or 4 in breadth, in which ſhips may ſecurely anchor, land-locked from all winds. They are about 30 in number, moſtly deſert, barren, and are poſſeſſed by the Engliſh and Danes. The Spaniards, however, claim thoſe near Porto Rico. In the firſt diviſion of thoſe poſſeſſed by the Engliſh, is Tortola, the principal, to which belong Joſt Van Dyke's and Little Van Dykes, and Guana Iſle, with beef and Thatch Iſlands. In the ſecond diviſion is Virgin Gorda, or Great Virgin. called alſo Spaniſh Town, having two good harbours; to this iſland belong the following: Anageda, or, Drowned Iſland, Nicker, Prickly Pear, and Moſkito Iſlands, the Cunmanoes, Scrub and Dog Iſlands, the Fallen City, (two rocky iſlets, cloſe together, at a diſtance reſembling ruins) the Round Rock, Ginger, Cooper's, Salt Iſland, Peter's Iſland, and the Dead Cheſt. To the Danes belong St. Thomas's Iſland, on which Braſs, Little Sina, Buck Iſland, Great and Little St. James, and Bird Iſland are dependant; with St. John, to which belong Lavango, Cam, and Witch Iſlands; and they have alſo the Iſland of St. Croix.

VIRGINIA, one of the United States of North America, bounded on the S. by North Carolina; on the W. by Kentucky; on the NW. by the Ohio; on the N. by Pennſylvania and Maryland; and on the E. by Maryland, the Cheſapeak, and the Atlantic. It is about 300 miles from E. to W. and 180 from N. to S. The principal rivers are James, York, Rappahannoc, Potomac, Roanoke, and Kanhaway, Great and Little, all which are full of convenient and ſafe harbours. There are alſo many ſmall rivers, ſome of which are capable of receiving the largeſt merchant ſhips. In general, the land is tolerably good, and capable of producing corn, pulſe, cotton, flax, and hemp; and, in the marſh lands, rice has been lately cultivated. The lands towards the mouth of the rivers, are generally low, and at preſent well ſtocked with many ſorts of trees, from 30 to 70 feet high. The land higher up the rivers is generally level, and well watered with ſprings; but there are here and there ſome ſmall hills. That near the ſea is generally ſandy and without ſtones, for which reaſon they ſeldom ſhoe their horſes. The richeſt lands lie near the branches of the rivers, and abound with various ſorts of timber, ſurpriſingly large. At the heads of the rivers are mountains, valleys, hills, and plains, with different trees; and indeed not many years ago, the whole country ſeemed to be one continued wood, with plantations here and there, where the roots of the trees had been grubbed up. The principal produce of Virginia is tobacco, wheat, and Indian corn, but the culture of tobacco has much declined of late, in favour of that of wheat. Virginia is divided into 82 counties, and has but few towns of conſequence; the principal are Williamſburg, Norfolk, Alexandria, and Richmond. The number of inhabitants, in 1790, amounted to 747,610. The Virginians now manufacture about three fourths of their clothing, and they have alſo manufactures of iron and lead; but agriculture is the principal employment.

* VIRGINIA, a town of Cavan, in Ulſter, ſeated on Lough Ramor, in which are ſeveral iſlands, 40 miles from Dublin.

Virginſtow, Devonſhire, SE. of Luffencote.

VIRTON, a ſmall town of Luxemburg.

VISAGAPATAM, a town of Hindooſtan, in the circar of Cicacole, 50 miles SW. of Cicacole.

VISET, a town of Liege.

VISEU, anciently VISONTIUM, a town of Beira.

VISHNEI-VOLOTCHOK, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Tver. It is one of the imperial villages enfranchiſed by the late empreſs, and is remarkable for its canal, which connects the Tvertza and the Myſta. The inhabitants, raiſed from the ſituation of ſlaves to that of freemen, ſeem to have ſhaken off their former indolence, and to be awakened to a ſenſe of their commercial advantages. The town is divided into regular ſtreets. All the buildings are of wood, except the court of juſtice erected at the charge of the empreſs, and a few brick houſes. It is ſeated on the river Zna, 60 miles NNW. of Tver. Lat. 57. 23. N. lon. 35. 0. E.

VISIAPOUR, a conſiderable city of Hindooſtan, the capital of a county of the ſame name. It is now ſubject to the Poonah Mahrattas. It is 130 miles SE. of Poonah, and 234 SE. of Bombay. Lat. 17. 26. N. lon. 75. 19. E.

VISSOGOROD, a town of Maſovia.

UIST, N. and S, two iſlands of the Hebrides, on the W. coaſt of Scotland. They are each about 20 miles in length, and of conſiderable breadth. Kelp is the ſtaple commodity of theſe iſlands; and they export annually, between them, 800 cows and young oxen. Here is abundance of game and aquatic birds.

VISTULA, the largeſt river of Poland. It riſes in Mount Crapach, on the N. part of Hungary, paſſes by Cracow, Sandomirz, Warſaw, Thorn, Culm, &c. and falls into the Baltic below Dantzic.

VITERBO, a town of Italy, capital of the Patrimonio. It contains only 15,000 inhabitants, although the number of churches, convents, and hoſpitals is 60. Near it is a ſpring, ſo hot, that it will boil

boil an egg, and even fiſh. It is 20 miles S. of Orvieto, and 35 N. by W. of Rome.

VITRE, a town in the dept. of Ille and Vilaine, trading in linen-cloth, knit ſtockings, and gloves. It is ſeated on the river Vilaine, 20 miles E. of Rennes.

VITRI-LE-BRULE, a village in the dept. of Marne, 3 miles NE. of Vitri-le-François. It was formerly a conſiderable town, but was taken, (and, as its name imports, burnt) by Thibaut, count of Chartres, when many of the inhabitants were burned, and great part of the town deſtroyed. It was alſo burnt, together with 30 villages, in the year 1422, by the Engliſh and Burgundians.

VITRA-LE-FRANÇOIS, a populous town in the depart. of Marne, trading in corn, It is well built, though the houſes are of wood, and there is a fine ſquare. It is ſeated on the river Marne, 15 miles SSE. of Charlons, and 100 E. of Paris.

VITTEAUX, a town in the department of Côte-d'Or, ſeated among mountains, where there are quarries of marble. It is 21 miles W. of Dijon, and 9 SE. of Semur.

VITTORIA, a town of Biſcay, in the province of Alava. It contains 5 pariſhes, 4 convents, 3 hoſpitals, a college, and a ſquare. The large ſtreets are bordered with trees, as a defence againſt the heat of the ſun. The merchants here deal in wool and wines, and particularly in ſword blades and other cutlery, which they make in large quantities. It is ſeated in a pleaſant plain, fertile in corn and grapes, 32 miles SSE. of Bilboa.

VITTORIOSA, or CITTA VITTORIOSA, or IL BORGO, a fortified town of the iſland of Malta, ſituated on a narrow neck of land to the left of Valetta. On each ſide a broad, natural canal, or ſtream, runs up into the land, and ſurrounding the town, forms a fine harbour. One of theſe canals or harbours is called Portico della Renella, and the other Porto delle Gallere. The ſtrong caſtle of St. Angelo ſtands on a high rock, at the extremity, towards the ſea, and has a communication with the town by a bridge. The palace of the inquiſition, and the arſenal, are reckoned among the principal buildings of this place. Formerly the grand maſter reſided here. The number of inhabitants amounts to about 3000.

VIVERO, a town of Spain, in Galicia, near the river Vivero, or Landrova, whoſe mouth forms a good harbour on the Atlantic. It is 12 miles E. of Cape Ortegal.

VIVIERS, a town in the department of Ardeche, ſeated among rocks, on one of which the cathedral is built, near the river Rhone, 20 miles N. of Orange.

UKRAINE, a large country of Europe, lying on the borders of Turkey in Europe, Poland, Ruſſia, and Little Tartary. Its name properly ſignifies a frontier. But the whole of the Ukraine, on both ſides of the Dnieper, now belongs to Ruſſia, and forms a part of the government of Ekaterinoſlav. The principal town is Kiof. See COSSACKS.

ULADISLAW. See INOLADISLAW.

ULCAMI, or ULCUMA, a country of Guinea, N. of Adra, and W. of Benin.

Ulceſter, Derbyſhire, on the Dove, near Burton-upon-Trent. Ulkhorn, Suſſex, by Uckfield. Ulcomb, Kent, SW. of Lenham. Uldale, Cumberl. on the Elen, near Ireby. Ulceſter, Northumberland, in the lordſhip of Woller.

ULEA, or Ulaborg, a ſea-port of E. Bothnia, 320 miles N. of Abo.

Ulley, a populous village of Glouceſterſhire, with a manufacture of fine broad cloth, 2 miles E. of Durſley.

ULIETEA, one of the Society Iſles, in the S. Pacific Ocean. Lat. 16. 45. S. lon. 151. 26. W.

Ullapool, Roſsſhire, ſeated on the N. ſide of Loch Broom. Ullenhall, Warw. S. of Umberſlade. Ulleſkelf, Yorkſ. S. of Tadcaſter. Ullington, Glouceſ. in Pebworth pariſh. Ullock, Cumberl. 4 miles SW. of Cockermouth. Ullſby, or Ullſley, Cumberl. S. of Penrith, near Ullſwater.

ULLSWATER, a lake, partly in Weſtmorland and partly in Cumberland, 10 miles N. of Ambleſide, and 14 SW. of Penrith. It is about 8 miles long, is of a ſufficient depth for breeding char, and abounds with a variety of other fiſh. Trout, of upwards of 30 pounds weight, are ſaid to have been taken in it. The navigators of this lake find much amuſement by diſcharging guns, or ſmall cannon, in certain ſtations. The report is reverberated from rock to rock, promontory, cavern, and hill, with every variety of ſound; now dying away upon the ear, and again returning like peals of thunder, and thus re-echoed, is heard ſeven times diſtinctly.

ULM, an imperial city of Suabia, and chief of that order in the circle where the archieves of the free towns in Suabia and Franconia are depoſited. The inhabitants are Proteſtants. There is a good college in this city; and in the cathedral, which is a very lofty ſtructure, are 63 copper-veſſels full of water, ready for the extinguiſhing of fire. It is large and well fortified, and the town-houſe is a hand-

ſome

ſome edifice. There is a handſome bridge over the Danube, which greatly favours the trade of the inhabitants in linen, fuſtians, hardware, and wool. The elector of Bavaria became maſter of it in 1702, by a ſtratagem; but after the battle of Blenheim, the Bavarians ſurrendered it by capitulation. It is ſeated on the Danube, where it receives the river Iller, 47 miles SSE. of Stutgard, and 275 W. of Vienna. Lat. 48. 25. N. lon. 10. 12. E.

ULMEN, a town of Treves.

Ulpha, or Ouffa, Cumberland, in Millom pariſh, on the river Dudden. Ulſeby, Lincolnſhire, N. of Spilſby. Ulſeby, Lincolnſhire, between Great Limbergh and Barton-on-the-Humber.

ULSTER, a province of Ireland; bounded on the E. by the Iriſh Sea, on the N. by the Northern Ocean, on the W. by the Weſtern Ocean, on the S. by the province of Leinſter, and on the SW. by that of Connaught, being about 116 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. The principal rivers are, the Banne, the Loughfoyle, the Swilly, the Mewry Water, and the Maine. It abounds with large lakes, the ſoil in general, is fruitful in corn and graſs; and there are plenty of horſes, ſheep, and beeves. The waters are deep, and yield plenty of fiſh, particularly ſalmon. The ſouthern parts of this province are rich, fertile, and well cultivated; but the northern are hilly and mountainous. It includes within itſelf, by far the greateſt part of the linen manufactory; and contains the counties of Donegal, Derry, Antrim, Tyrone, Fermanagh, Cavan, Armagh, Monaghan, and Down.

ULSTER, a river in the circle of the Upper Rhine, which runs into the Werra, near Vacha, in the principality of Heſſe.

Ulſthorp, Leiceſterſhire, N. of Lutterworth. Ulting, Eſſex, near Malden.

ULTZEN, or VELTZEN, a town of Lunenburg, containing 3 churches, 3 hoſpitals, and about 330 houſes. The principal articles of trade are wool, brandy, and meal. It was formerly Hanſeatic, and is ſituated on the Ilmenau, 20 miles SSE. of Lunenburg.

ULVERSTONE, called by the country people OUSTON, a pretty good thriving town of Lancaſhire, in the hundred of Furneſs, with regular, well paved ſtreets. This town is the port of Furneſs, ſitting out about 70 ſhips for the coaſting trade. The principal inns are kept by the guides, who regularly paſs to and from Lancaſter, three times a week. It is ſeated at the bottom of immenſe hills, between the branches of the Duddon, near its mouth, 18 miles NNW. of Lancaſter, and 267 NNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Ulveſcroſs-Abbey, Leiceſterſ. in Charnwood-Foreſt, was founded in a ſequeſtered and romantic ſpot by Robert Blanchmains, Earl of Leiceſter, in the reign of Henry II. It is now converted into a farm-houſe.

UMAGO, a ſea-port of Iſtria, lately ſubject to Venice.

Umberſley, or Umberſlade, Warwickſhire, near Stratford upon-Avon.

UMBRIA. See SPOLETO.

UMBRIATICO, a town of Calabria Citra.

UMEA, a ſea-port of W. Bothnia.

UNALASHKA, one of the Fox Iſlands, in the Northern Archipelago.

Underbarrow, Weſtm. SW. of Kendal. Underditch, Wilts, a hundred between Ambreſbury and Sarum. Underley, Weſtmorland, on the Lune, by Kirby-Loſdale.

UNDERSWEN, a town of Bern, Swiſſerland ſituated between the Lakes of Brientz and Thun, near the famous cavern of St. Pat. It is 25 miles SE. of Bern.

Underton, Shropſhire, SW. of Bridgnorth.

UNDERWALDEN, a canton of Swiſſerland, and the ſixth in rank. It is bounded on the N. by the canton of Lucerne, and by the lake of the four cantons; on the E. by the Canton of Uri; on the S. by the canton of Bern; and on the W. by the cantons of Bern and Lucern. It takes its name from a large foreſt of oaks, which is nearly in the middle of the country, and runs from N. to S. It is about 25 miles in length, and 17 in breadth, and is divided into two parts, that above the foreſt and that below it; for this reaſon there are two councils, two juſtices, and two land ammanies. It has no towns nor bailiwicks; and the chief advantage of the inhabitants ariſes from cattle, and the fiſh taken in five ſmall lakes. The people are of the Romiſh church; and the grand council is compoſed of 58 members. Sarnen is the principal place of the Upper Vale; and Stantz of the Lower, and of the whole canton. The Underwalders, in conjunction with the ſtates of Uric and Schweitz, ſhook off the Auſtrian yoke, in 1308; of all the people of Swiſſerland, they are the moſt honoured and loved by the other cantons, for their courage and love of liberty, joined to a ſtrict concord, and amiable ſimplicity of manners.

Underton, Shropſhire, SW. of Bridgnorth. Underwood, Derbyſhire, NE. of Aſhborn. Underwood, Devonſhire.

UNGWAR,

UNGWAR, a town of Hungary, 46 miles NNE. of Caichau.

UNITED PROVINCES OF THE NETHERLANDS, a republic of Europe, conſiſting of ſeven provinces, and extending from N. to S. not more than 150 miles, and 100 in breadth from E. to W. They are bounded on the W. and N. by the German Ocean, and on the S. and E. by Brabant and Germany. Theſe provinces rank in the following order: 1. Gueldereland, ſubdivided into the diſtricts of Nimeguen, Zutphen, and Arnheim; 2. Holland, ſubdivided into N. Holland, S. Holland, and W. Frieſland; 3. Zealand, ſubdivided into the part near the E. Scheldt, and the part near the W. Scheldt; 4 Utrecht; 5. Frieſland; 6. Overyſſel; and 7. Groningen. Beſides theſe provinces, are the lands of the generality, (including Dutch Brabant, Flanders, and Limburg) in which are the town of Bois-le-Duc, Breda, Bergen-op-Zoom, Maeſtricht, Venlo, Stuys, Huliſt, &c. This republic (which is likewiſe called by the general name of Holland) affords a ſtriking proof, that unwearied and perſevering induſtry is capable of conquering almoſt every diſadvantage of climate and ſituation. The air and water in this country are nearly equally bad; the ſoil produces naturally ſcarce any thing but turf; and the poſſeſſion of this very ſoil is diſputed by the ocean, which riſing conſiderably above the level of the land, is prevented from overflowing it, only by ſtrong and expenſive dikes. Yet the labours of the patient Dutchman have rendered this ſmall and ſeemingly inſignificant territory one of the richeſt ſpots in Europe, with reſpect to population and property. In other countries, poſſeſſed of a variety of natural productions, it is not ſurpriſing to find manufactures employed in augmenting the riches of the ſoil; but to ſee, in a country like Holland, large woollen manufactures, where there are ſcarce any flocks; numberleſs artiſts employed in metals, where there is not a mine; thouſands of ſaw-mills, where there is ſcarce a foreſt; an immenſe quantity of corn, exported from a country where there is not agriculture ſufficient to ſupport one half of its inhabitants, is what muſt ſtrike every attentive obſerver with admiration. Among the moſt valuable natural productions of the United Netherlands may be reckoned their excellent cattle; and large quantities of madder are exported, chiefly cultivated in Zealand. The moſt conſiderable revenue ariſes from the fiſheries; but theſe are not ſo conſiderable as formerly. The number of veſſels employed in the herring fiſhery, in particular, is reduced from upwards of 2000 to leſs than 200; and yet it maintains, even now, no leſs than 20,000 people. About 100 veſſels are employed in the Greenland fiſhery, and 140 in the cod fiſhery near the Dogger Bank, and near the coaſt of Holland. The Dutch were formerly in poſſeſſion of the coaſting trade and freight of almoſt all other trading nations. They were alſo the bankers for all Europe. But theſe advantages did not continue to be ſo lucrative, when the other European nations began to open their eyes ſo far as to employ their own ſhipping in their trade, and to eſtabliſh banks of their own. Notwithſtanding theſe deductions, the Dutch trade is ſtill immenſe; in conſequence of their vaſt opulence, they ſtill regulate the exchange for all Europe, and their country is, as it were, the univerſal warehouſe of the commodities of every quarter of the globe. Among the monopolies of their E. India Company, the ſpice trade has long been the moſt valuable: it comprehends the articles of cloves, mace, nutmeg, and cinnamon. The Java coffee is the beſt next to that of Mecca; and other great branches of this trade are rice, cotton, pepper, &c. articles of great importance, but not in the excluſive poſſeſſion of the Dutch. They are the only European nation hitherto permitted to trade directly to Japan; but this trade is alſo on the decline. Their W. India Company trades not only to the W. Indies, but to the coaſt of Guinea for ſlaves; and, diſtinct from this, they have two companies, which trade to Surinam and Berbice. The foreign poſſeſſions of the Dutch, in Aſia, previouſly to the commencement of the preſent war, were the coaſts of the Iſland of Java, the capital of which is Batavia the ſeat of the governor general of all their Eaſt-India ſettlements; ſome ſettlements on the coaſts of Sumatra, Malabar, and Coromandel; the greateſt part of the Moluccas or Spice-Iſlands; ſettlements, or factories, in the Iſland of Celebes, at Surat and Petro, and in the Gulf of Perſia; with Colombo, Trincomale, &c. on the Iſland of Ceylon. In Africa they had the Cape of Good Hope, with Georga-de-la-Mina, and other fortreſſes and factories in Guinea. In the W. Indies they had the Iſlands of St. Euſtatia, Saba, and Curaçon; and in S. America, the colonies of Iſſequibo, Demerary, Surinam, and Berbice, in the country of Guinea. In Holland, the inland trade is greatly facilitated by the numerous canals, which croſs the country in every every direction. The number of manufactures eſtabliſhed in the United Provinces is aſtoniſhing. Saardam, a village in N. Holland, contains for inſtance, about 900 windmills, partly corn-mills, partly ſaw and paper-mills, and mills for the making of white lead, &c. In former times, the Dutch were the excluſive poſſeſſors of ſeveral ingenious manufactures and arts; as the refining of camphor and borax, the cutting and poliſhing of diamonds, the refining of ſugar, &c. but at preſent theſe myſteries, few of them excepted, are in the hands of many other nations, to whoſe commercial ignorance and want of induſtry the Dutch were once indebted for immenſe profits, which have decreaſed with the cauſes; among the reſt, the woollen manufactory has prodigiouſly decreaſed. In a word, the Dutch trade is no longer in its ancient flouriſhing ſtate, to which, even if the frugality and induſtry of the nation had not been diminiſhed by too great riches, the rivalſhip of other nations and the commercial knowledge of the age, would never permit it to riſe again. All ſects are tolerated in Holland; but, till lately, none but Calviniſts could hold employments of truſt or profit. Since the great confederation of Utrecht, in 1579, (See NETHERLANDS) the Seven United Provinces have been conſidered as one political body, united for the preſervation of the whole. In 1581, the Hague was appointed the place of meeting for the States General, an aſſembly inveſted with ſupreme power of the confederation, and compoſed of deputies choſen out of the provincial ſtates. This power related to the making war and peace, levying taxes, &c. in their joint capacity; but as to internal government, each province was independent not only of the other provinces, but even of the ſupreme power of the republic. In the preſent diſputes on the French revolution, the Dutch, at firſt, appeared hoſtile to the new republic, but never heartily co-operated with the allies. The ſtadtholder was probably influenced by the courts of Pruſſia and England, but a party more powerful than his own were his enemies, and, on the invaſion of Holland by the French, in the beginning of 1795, he thought proper, with his family, to take refuge in England. Since then, their form of government has been modelled upon that of France, and they now form a republic one and indiviſible.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, a republic of N. America, conſiſting originally of thirteen provinces ſubject to Great Britain, but which, on the 4th of July, 1776, by their repreſentatives in congreſs aſſembled, made a ſolemn declaration of independence, and were afterwards acknowledged free and independent ſtates by the treaty of Paris, in 1783. They are, at preſent, 15 in number, viz. Maſſachuſetts, New Hampſhire, Rhode Iſland, Connecticut, New York, New Jerſey, Pennſylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, N. and S. Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky and Vermont. Beſides theſe, there are the diſtricts of Maine, the Tenaſſee government, and territory NW. of the Ohio, which, in proceſs of time, will, it is probable, become ſtates; the two firſt, perhaps, within a ſhort ſpace: the latter is, at preſent, inhabited by different tribes of Indians. Only eleven of theſe ſtates acceded, at firſt, to the new federal conſtitution, but they were afterward joined by N. Carolina and Rhode Iſland; and Kentucky and Vermont have ſince been added to them. See AMERICA.

UNNA, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia, containing a Lutheran pariſh church, a hoſpital church, which both the Calviniſts and Lutherans uſe for their worſhip, a nunnery, a chapel and a Lutheran ſchool. So early as the year 1032, this place was a conſiderable village, and with its very extenſive and profitable territory (ſtill poſſeſſed by the town) belonged to the archbiſhop of Cologne. In 1250 it was firſt environed with walls, and endowed with the immunities of a town. Unna was formerly Hanſeatic, and at preſent ranks as the ſecond town in the county. It is ſituated in a fine plain, on a rivulet named the Kottlebecke, 8 miles E. of Dortmund, and 23 S. of Munſter.

UNNA, a river which riſes in Boſnia, on the borders of Croatia, 28 miles S. of Bihacs, and runs into the Save, about 16 miles NW. of Gradiſca.

UNST, the moſt remote of the ſmaller Shetland Iſlands, about 8 miles long and 4 broad. In compariſon with the other Shetland iſles, it is reckoned level, yet its ſurface is diverſified by ſeveral extenſive and moderately high hills. The ſhores of its numerous bays, creeks, and harbours, are low, ſhelving, and ſandy, but the lands are conſiderably high and rocky. The higheſt of the headlands riſes to the height of 60 or 70 fathoms. Unſt abounds in iron-ſtone and lime-ſtone, affords large veins of jaſpar, beautifully variegated with black and green ſpots; and great plenty of white ſpar is thrown upon the ſea beach. Black oats, bear, potatoes, cabbages, artichokes of a delicate taſte, with various garden roots, greens, and moſt of the garden flowers owers that grow in the north of Scot-nd, are common in this iſland. There i little or no ſown graſs; but the mea-ows are rich in red and white clover;

nd in the ſeaſons of vegetation, are ena-elled with a beautiful profuſion of wild owers. The paſture-grounds in the ommons are generally covered with a ort, tender, flowering heath. The whole umber of cows and oxen (which laſt eigh from 300 to 500 lb.) in the iſland not fewer than 2000; of theſe, about 150 are milch cows. The number of orſes, well known by the name of ſheles, is about 1000. The ſheep amount about 6600. Fiſhing is an important anch of buſineſs among the iſlanders, ) tons being taken on an average year-
. Rats, mice, frogs, toads, and adders, e unknown here. The number of houſes i the iſland is about 800, and of inhaitants about 1688.

Unſted, Surry, S. of Godalmin. Un- n, Derbyſ. in Scarſdale.

UNTERSEEN. See UNDERSWEN.

Unthank, Cumberl. NE. of Kirk-Oſ-ald, in Dacre pariſh. Unthank, Duram, on the Wear, oppoſite to Stanhope. nthank, SW. of Durham. Uny, Corn-all, near Lalant, N. of Market-Jew.
ny, Cornwall, near Redruth.

UNZA, a province of Ruſſia, the largeſt iviſion of the government of Koſtroma.

VOERDEN, a town of Paderborn; and town of Oſnaburgh.

VOGHERA, a town of Pavia.

VOGLABRUCK, a town in the archichy of Auſtria, ſituated on the river Voel, 27 miles SSE. of Paſſau.

VOID, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, ) miles W. of Toul.

VOIGTLAND, a territory of Upper axony, moſtly ſubject to the elector.
ogt was anciently a title in the empire, hich was diſcontinued towards the mid-e of the 14th century. The learned are ot agreed as to what the name and dig-ty imported.

VOLANO, a ſea-port in the Ferrareſe, uated at the ſouthern mouth of the Po,
3 miles E. of Ferrara.

VOLCANELLO, a ſmall volcanic iſland, tween Lipari and Volcano.

VOLCANO, one of the Lipari Iſlands, the Mediterranean, lying to the S. of e Iſland of Lipari. It is about 12 miles circumference, and is a volcano, in the rm of a broken cone, but now emits oke only. Volcano, as well as all the ſt of theſe iſlands, is ſuppoſed to have en produced by an eruption from ſubrranean fire. The production of this iſland, in particular, happened in the early time of the Roman republic, and is recorded by Euſebius, Pliny, and others.

VOLGA, the largeſt river in Europe, which has its ſource in two ſmall lakes, in the government of Tver, in Ruſſia. It begins to be navigable a few miles above that town. It is conſiderably augmented here by the junction of the Tverza, which is a broader, deeper, and more rapid river.
By means of the Tverza, a communication is made between the Volga and the Neva, or, in other words, between the Caſpian and the Baltic. This great river waters ſome of the fineſt provinces in the Ruſſian empire, paſſes by Yaroſlaf, Koſtroma, Niſhnei-Novogorod, Caſan, Sim-birſk, and Saratoff, entering the Caſpian Sea, by ſeveral mouths below Aſtracan.

VOLHINIA, a palatinate of Poland,
W. of that of Kiov, about 180 miles in length, and from 80 to 120 in breadth.
It conſiſts chiefly of well-watered plains, producing a great ſurplus of corn. Roſe-mary, aſparagus, &c. grow wild in the woods, and can hardly be diſtinguiſhed from thoſe cultivated in the gardens.
Lucko is the capital.

VOLKENMARCK, in Carinthia.

VOLLENHOVEN, a town and diſtrict of Overyſſel, near the Zuyder Zee.

VOLO, a ſea-port of Janna, or Theſſaly,
38 miles SE. of Lariſſa.

VOLODIMIR, or VLADIMIR, a government of the Ruſſian empire, formerly a province of Moſcow. The ſoil is extremely fertile, and in the foreſts are innumerable ſwarms of bees.

VOLODIMIR, or VLADIMIR, a town of Ruſſia, capital of the government of the ſame name, and ſeated on the river Kliaſma. It was once the metropolis of the empire, and is 100 miles E. by N. of Moſcow.

VOLOGODSKOI, formerly the largeſt of all the Ruſſian European governments, as it contained the provinces of Vologda, Archangel, and Veliki Uſtiug. It is now divided into the two provinces of Vologda and Veliki-Uſtiug, and is bounded on the N. by the government of Archangel, and on the E. by the government of Toboſk; rather more than 600 miles in length, and about 240 in breadth. It is a marſhy country, full of foreſts, lakes, and rivers, and noted for its fine wool.

VOLOGDA, a city of Ruſſia, in the province of the ſame name, containing about 1700 houſes and ſeveral churches. The inhabitants trade in hemp, matting, leather, and tallow. It is the ſee of an archbiſhop, and is ſeated on the river Sachona, near near the lake Kubenſkoe, 320 miles nearly S. of Archangel, and 308 E. of Peterſburgh.

VOLPIANO, a town in the principality of Piedmont, 8 miles and a half NNE. of Turin.

VOLSK, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Saratov, ſituated on the Volga, 76 miles NE. of Saratov.

VOLTA, or RIO VOLTA, a river of Guinea, which runs into the Atlantic, about 24 miles E. of Acra.

VOLTERRA, a town of Tuſcany, containing 25 churches, chapels, or oratories, and 20 religious houſes. It is a lonely, mean place, and entire villages in the neighbourhood lie in ruins. It is noted for its medicinal waters, and is ſeated on a mountain, 32 miles SE. of Piſa.

VOLTURNO, a river of Naples, which falls into the Gulf of Gaieta.

VOLTURARA, a town of Capitanata; alſo a town of Principato Ultra.

VOLVIC, a town in the dept. of Puy-de-Dome, 2 miles SW. of Riom. Here are immenſe quarries, formed by a current of prodigious lavas, which furniſh materials for buildings, and for the ſculptor.

VOORN, an iſland of S. Holland, between the mouths of the river Maeſe. Brill is the capital. This iſland, with that of Goree and Overflackee, which are near it, make the territory called Voomland, which was anciently part of Zealand.

VOORN, an iſland and fort between the rivers Waal and Meuſe, 9 miles NNE. of Bois-le-Duc.

VORONETZ, a government of Ruſſia, the capital of which, of the ſame name, is ſeated on the river Voronetz, near its junction with the Don, 256 miles S. of Moſcow.

VOSGES, a department of France, including the S. part of Lorrain, which was lately a province of the ſame name. It is ſo called, from a large chain of mountains, covered with wood, that ſeparate this department from the departments of Upper Saone and Upper Rhine. Epinal is the capital.

Votherfield, Hants, S. of Alton.

VOUILLE, a village in the department of Vienne, 10 miles NW. of Poitiers. Here Clovis gained, in 507, a battle againſt Alaric, king of Viſigoths, (whom he ſlew with his own hand) which extended the dominions of the Franks from the Loire to the Pyrenees.

Vowelſcomb, Devonſ. NE. of Modbury. Upberry, Bedfordſ. in Pullox-Hill pariſh. Upberry, Kent, a manor of Gillingham. Upburn-Denicot, Bucks, near Beaconsfield. Upcerne, Dorſetſ. a mile and a half NW. of Cerne-Abbas. Upchurch, Kent, 3 miles and a half NW. of Milton, and 5 from Chatham. Upcote, Devonſ. in Cheriton pariſh. Upball, Eſſex, near Great Ilford. Upball, Herts, between Puckeridge and Albery. Upbam, Hants, NW. of Biſhop's-Waltham. Up Hatherley, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Shurdington. Upheaven, Wiltſhire, 10 miles S. by W. of Marlborough. Uphill, Somerſ. near the paſſage to Wales, across the Briſtol Channel. Upholland, Linc.

UPLAND, a province of Sweden, bounded on the N. and W. by Weſtmania and Geſtricia; on the NE. by the Baltic; and on the S. by the Malar Lake. It is about 70 miles in length, and 55 in its greateſt breadth, is very populous, and fertile in corn, and has mines of iron and lead. Stockholm is the capital.

Upleadon, Glouceſterſ. on the Leden, 3 miles E. of Newent. Upleatham, Yorkſ. N. of Giſborough. Up Lyme, or Nether Lyme, Dorſetſhire, near Lyme Regis. Up Loman, Devonſ. NE. of Tiverton. Upminſter, Eſſex, 15 miles E. by N. of London. Upnor-Caſtle, Kent, near Frendſbury, almoſt oppoſite Chatham-Dock, was built by Queen Elizabeth, for defence of the Medway. Its platform carries 37 guns, that command two reaches of the river, and defend all the ſhips that ride between them and Rocheſter bridge. Upper Ottery; ſee Mount Ottery. Up Park, Suſſex, in Harting pariſh. Upperleigh, Glouceſ. in Weſtbury pariſh.

*UPPINGHAM, a well-built town of Rutland, with a good free-ſchool, and an hoſpital. It is 6 miles S. of Oakham, and 90 N. by W. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Uppington, Shropſ. NW. of Wrekin-Hill. Uprightly, Cumberl. near Carliſle.

UPSALA, a town of Sweden, in Upland, anciently the reſidence of the ſovereigns, and where the Heathen prieſts, in the times of paganiſm, offered the greateſt ſacrifices. It contains, excluſive of the ſtudents, about 3000 inhabitants. The ground-plot is extremely regular. It is divided into two almoſt equal parts by the ſmall river Sala; and the ſtreets are drawn at right angles from a central kind of ſquare. A few of the houſes are built of brick, and ſtuccoed; but the generality are conſtructed of trunks, ſmoothed into the ſhape of planks, and painted red. The roofs are covered in with turf; and each houſe has its ſmall court-yard, or garden. Upſala was formerly the metropolis of Sweden, and the royal reſidence. The ar-

cient

ient palace was a magnificent building, ntil great part of it was conſumed by fire n 1702. The cathedral, which is a large Gothic ſtructure of brick, has been ſeveal times greatly damaged by fire, and as ften repaired. The univerſity is the moſt ncient in Sweden, and is the firſt ſemiary in the North for academical educaion. Its library contains many valuable ooks, and near a thouſand manuſcripts. Among theſe is the Codex Argenteus, uppoſed to be Uphila's Gothic tranſlaion of the Four Evangeliſts; but it ſeems ather to be written in the language of he ancient Franks. The Royal Society ere is likewiſe the oldeſt literary academy n the North. Here is a botanical garen, of which the celebrated Linné was uperintendant. The Swediſh geograhers compute their longitude from Upal. Upſala is 35 miles NNW. of Stockolm.

Upſall and Caſtle, Yorkſ. N. of Thirſk. Upſetlington, Northumb. near Berwick. Upſhire, Eſſex, near Waltham-Abbey. Upſidling, Dorſetſ. W. of Cerne-Abbey. Upſtreet, Kent, in Chiſlet pariſh, W. of Thanet Iſle.

UPTON, a neat, well-built town of Worceſterſhire, noted for giving name to a hundred. From the number of Roman coins that are often dug up here, it is believed to have been formerly a ſtation of the Roman ſoldiers. It has a new church, built in 1758, and is ſeated on the river Severn, over which it has a ſtone bridge, with a harbour for barges, 10 miles S. of Worceſter, and 111 WNW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Upton, Berks, between Abingdon and Caſt Iſley. Upton, Bucks, near Datchet, and Eaton. Upton, N. of Cheſter, between the Dee and Merſey. Upton, Cheſhire, near Overchurch and Woodchurch. Upton, Dorſetſ. near Oſminton. Upton, Dorſetſ. near Bridport. Upton, Dorſetſ. 2 miles from Hamworthy. Upton, Eſſex, a Weſt-Ham pariſh. Upton, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Hawkeſbury. Upton, Glouceſ. a Tetbury pariſh. Upton, Glouceſ. near Badminton. Upton, Hants, N. of Andover. Upton, Herefordſ. NE. of Roſs. Upton, Huntingd. SE. of the Giddings. Upton, Leiceſterſ. in Sibſton pariſh, SW. of Boſworth. Upton, Lincolnſ. SE. of Gainſborough. Upton, Norfolk, N. of Eccle. Upton, Northamptonſ. NW. of Peterborough. Upton, W. of Northampton. Upton, Nottingh. in Headon pariſh. Upton, Nottingh. E. of Southwell. Upton, E. of Shrewſbury. Upton, Somerſetſ. E. of Dulverton. Upton, Warwickſ. near Ratley. Upton, Warwickſ. E. of Alcetter. Upton, Yorkſ. NE. of Barneſley. Upton-Biſhops, Herefordſhire, NE. of Roſs. Upton-Chenay, Glouceſterſ. near Bitton. Upton-Creſſet, or Little, Shropſ. SW. of Bridgnorth. Upton-Dring, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, NW. of Hornſey. Upton-Grey, Hants, SW. of Odiham. Upton-Helion, Devonſ. N. of Crediton. Upton, Higher, Devonſhire, in Columpton pariſh. Upton, St. Leonard's, 3 miles SE. of Glouceſter. Upton Level, Wilts, SE. of Hareſbury. Upton Noble, Somerſetſ. between Frome and Bruton. Upton-Pine, Devonſ. N. of Exeter. Upton Scudamore, Wilts, N. of Warminſter. Upton Smodeſbury, NE. of Worceſter. Upton Warin, Worceſterſhire, between Droitwich and Bromſgrove. Upware, Cambridgeſ. W. of Soham. Upway, near Dorcheſter. Upwell, Cambridgeſhire, near Wiſbeach. Upwood, Huntingdonſ. W. of Ramſey.

URABA, a province of Terra Firma, on a gulf of the ſame name, in the government of Carthagena, E. of the province of Darien.

URAL, a river of the Ruſſian empire, in Aſia, which riſes in Mount Caucaſus, and watering Uralſk, in the province of Orenburg, falls into the Caſpian Sea, by three mouths, below Gurief.

URALIAN COSSACS, a people that inhabit the Ruſſian province of Orenburg, in Aſia, on the S. ſide of the river Ural. Theſe Coſſacs are deſcended from thoſe of the Don; they profeſs the Greek religion; but there are a kind of diſſenters from the eſtabliſhed religion, whom the Ruſſians called Roſkolniki, or Separatiſts, and who ſtyle themſelves Staroverſki, or Old Believers: they conſider the ſervice of the eſtabliſhed church as profane and ſacrilegious, and have their own prieſts and ceremonies. The Uralian Coſſacs are all enthuſiaſts for the ancient ritual, and ſeem to prize their beards more than their lives. The river Yaik, however, is now called Ural; the Yaik Coſſacs are denominated Uralian Coſſacs; and the town of Yaitſk, Uralſk. The Uralian Coſſacs enjoy the right of fiſhing on the coaſt of the Caſpian Sea, for 47 miles on each ſide of the river Ural. Their principal fiſhery is for ſturgeons and beluga, whoſe roe ſupplies large quantities of caviare; and the fiſh, which are chiefly ſalted and dried, afford a conſiderable article of conſumption in the Ruſſian empire. In conſequence of theſe fiſheries, theſe Coſſacs are very rich.

URALSK, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Caucaſus, ſeated on the river Ural, Ural, about 200 miles NE. of Astracan. Till the year 1734, it was called Yaitsk. See the preceding article.

Uranienburgh, was formerly a magnificent castle of Denmark, in the little island of Hueu, in the middle of the Sound. It was built for Tycho Brahe, who called it Uranienburgh, or the Castle of the Heavens, and who here made his observations; but is is now in ruins.

Urbania, a town of Urbino.

Urbania, a city of Italy, capital of the duchy of Urbino, containing a ducal palace, a university, a seminary, some of the most eminent in Italy, a noble college, &c. It was built by Duke Frederick, who furnished it with many ancient statues of marble and bronze, excellent paintings, and a library of curious and rare books. The library was conveyed to Rome, by Pope Alexander VII. The Jesuits are well built, and great quantities of fine earthen ware are made here. It is situated on a hill, at the union of the two rivers, near the head of the Foglio, 18 miles S. of Rimini, and 160 NE. of Rome.

Urbino, a duchy of Italy, in the pope's territory, bounded on the N. by Romagna, on the NE. by the Adriatic, on the SE. by Ancona, on the S. by the Perugino, and on the W. by Tuscany and Romagna. It is about 55 miles in length, and 45 in breadth. Here is great plenty of fish and game; but the air is not reckoned wholesome, nor is the soil fertile. One of the chief productions is silk. Urbino was formerly governed by its own dukes, of whom the last, Francis Maria, of Rovere, dying in the year 1631, without male issue, the pope took possession of his territory. The duke had, by will, in 1626, confirmed the pope's claims, and already, in effect, made over the country. Poggio Imperiale, and other allodial estates in this country, belong, however, by female inheritance, to the duke of Tuscany. Urbino is the capital.

Urchfont, Wilts, NE. of East Lavington.

Urchingfield, SW. of Hereford.

Urcote, Glouces. S. of Thornbury.

Ure. See Yowre.

Urgantz, a town of Asia, in the country of Charasm, on a river which runs into the Lake of Aral. It was formerly a very considerable place, having been four miles in circumference; but it is now greatly reduced. Lat. 42. 55. N. long. 59. 30. E.

Urgel, a town of Catalonia, seated on the river Segra, 60 miles W. of Perpignan, and 78 N. by W. of Barcelona.

Urgut, the most southern canton of Switzerland, and the fourth in rank. It is bounded on the N. by the canton of Schweitz, and the Lake of the Four Cantons; on the E. by the Grisons, and the canton of Glarus; on the S. by the bailiwicks of Italy; and on the W. by the canton of Underwalden and part of Bern. It is about 60 miles in length, and 24 in breadth. Altorff is the capital. The people are Roman Catholics, and were formerly free, under the jurisdiction of the empire. Albert I. however, aiming at their entire subjection, placed a governor over them, whose name was Gesler, who, among other irritating procedures, set up a hat on a pole, at Altorff, with orders that the same homage to it should be paid to it as to his own person. William Tell openly refused to comply with this mark of slavery, and soon after, viz. in 1308, effected a union between the three cantons of Uri, Schweitz, and Underwalden, for shaking off the Austrian yoke, which, in 1315, was accomplished in a perpetual alliance.

Uri, Lake of, in Switzerland. See Waldstetten, Lake of.

Urling ford, in Kilcandy, Ireland.

Urmston, Lancashire, SW. of Manchester.

Urpeth, Durham, 3 miles W. of Lamley-Castle.

Ursulary, a town of Bohemia.

Ursuick, Lancas. S. of Ulverston.

Usbec Tartary, or Great Tartary, a country of Western Tartary, S. of the country of the Kalmucs. The Tartars are divided into several tribes, governed by their respective khans; the formerly they were under one sovereign, and were accounted the most powerful of all the Tartarian nations. Their principal khans pride themselves in being descended from Tamerlane, whose birthplace was the ancient city of Samarcand. The Usbecs, in their persons, are said to have fairer complexions and better features than the Kalmucs. Their religious profession is Mahometanism; but they differ, in general, very little from the people of the northern provinces of Hindoostan. That country is supplied here with the most valuable dried fruits, and other eatables.

Usbrit, Great and Little, Kent, near the Ouse, SE. of Bordenbridge.

Usedom, an island of Pomerania, situated at the mouth of the river Oder, in the Baltic, 30 miles in length, and 12 miles in breadth. It is subject to Prussia, and has a town of the same name, situated on the SW. coast.

Usedom,

USERCHE, a town in the department of Correze, 16 miles NNW. of Tulle, and 217 S. of Paris.

USHANT, an iſland of France, on the coaſt of Finiſterre, about 12 miles from the continent. It is 10 miles in circumference, and contains ſeveral hamlets, a caſtle, a ſmall port, and about 700 inhabitants.

*USK, a town of Monmouthſhire, ſeated on the river Uſk. It is a large place, with well-built ſtone houſes, 141 miles W. of London. Market on Monday.

USK, a river of S. Wales, which riſes on the W. ſide of Brecknockſhire, and watering the towns of Brecon, Crickhowel, Abergavenny, Uſk, and Caerleon, enters the Briſtol Channel below Newport.

Uſk, in Kildare, Leinſter.

Uſkelf, Yorkſ. near the river Wharfe, NE. of Sheiborn. Uſſett, Yorkſ. by the Ouſe, NW. of Burton-upon-Trent.

USNEACH, a mountain in Weſt Meath, Leinſter, on which fires were kindled by the Druids, in honour of Beal, or the Sun. It was the grand Bealtinne of the northern parts of Leinſter, where the ſtates aſſembled, and held judgment on criminals, when ſuch as were accounted worthy of death, were burnt between two fires of Beal. This ſeems to have given riſe to the account of the Druids offering up human victims as ſacrifices. Children, alſo, and cattle, were made to paſs between theſe fires by way of purification.

USSEL, a town in the dept. of Correze, 30 miles NE. of Tulle.

Uſſelby, Linc. NW. of Market-Raiſin. Uſſhaw, W. of Durham.

USTIANO, a town in the Mantuan.

Uſtings, Bucks, between Winſlow and Ayleſbury.

USTIUG, or VELIKOI USTIUG, a town of Vologda.

Uſton, Berks, on the Kennet, between Silſam and Aldermaſton. Uſway, a river in Northumberland, which runs into the Cocket, below Whitſide. Uſworth, Durham, W. of Hilton-Caſtle. Utkinton, Cheſhire, a mile from Torperley.

UTRECHT, a large and celebrated city of the United Provinces, capital of a province of the ſame name. It is of a ſquare form, and about 3 miles in circumference, without its four ſuburbs, which are conſiderable. The ſteeple of the cathedral is very lofty, and the handſomeſt in the United Provinces. There is a great number of churches and hoſpitals. The ſtudents of the univerſity, which is very famous, wear their ordinary dreſs, and board in private houſes in the town, as there are ſcarcely any endowed colleges in Holland. All the avenues to this city are handſome, and the environs are full of gardens, walks, and groves, which, added to the purity of the air, render Utrecht one of the moſt agreeable places for reſidence in theſe parts, and accordingly a great many opulent families reſort hither. In July, 1672, the French made themſelves maſters of it, when Louis XIV. entered the city in ſtate, accompanied by the Duke of Orleans and the Duke of Monmouth; but, on the 13th of November, the Duke of Luxemburg, who had been appointed governor, abandoned the city and the whole province, after having compelled them to pay 450,000 livres. This town is famous for the treaty of union, ſigned in 1579, between the Seven Provinces, which laid the foundation of the republic; as likewiſe for the treaty of peace, concluded here, in 1713, between the allies and France. It is ſeated on the ancient channel of the Rhine, 18 miles SSE. of Amſterdam, and 27 NE. of Rotterdam. Lat. 52. 7. N. lon. 5. 8. E.

UTRECHT, one of the Dutch United Provinces, ſurrounded on all ſides by Holland and Guelderland, excepting one ſmall ſtrip of land to the northward, and bordering on the Zuyder Zee. The air is very healthy here; nor are there any inundations to fear, as in other provinces; the ſoil is moſtly rich meadow, though, in many parts, full of turf grounds, and the country is pleaſant. The length of it is not above 30 miles, and the breadth is no more than 20, although it contains 70 towns and villages. The number of Calviniſt miniſters is 79, who hold a ſynod once a year at Utrecht. The Roman Catholics have above 30 churches. There are but few Lutherans, Remonſtrants, and Anabaptiſts.

Utterby, Lincolnſhire, 3 miles from Louth.

*UTTOXETER, a large town of Staffordſhire, with a bridge over the river Dove, that leads into Derbyſhire. Here are a great number of iron forges, and its market is the greateſt in this part of England, for corn, cattle, hogs, ſheep, butter, and cheeſe. By the late inland navigations, it communicates with all the midland counties. It is ſeated among excellent paſtures for breeding and fattening cattle, 13 miles NE. of Strafford, and 136 NW. of London. Market on Wedneſday, Fairs on May 6th, and July 31ſt.

UTZNACH, a town of Zurich, which belongs; however, to the cantons of Glarus and Schweitz, who appoint a bailiff alternately.

Yurnwey, a river of Montgomeryſhire, which runs into the Severn near Melverly.

*UXBRIDGE, a town of Middleſex, which, though it is a hamlet to Great Hillingdon, is governed independently by two bailiffs, two conſtables, and four headboroughs. The Coln runs through it, in two ſtreams, and over the main ſtream is a ſtone bridge, that leads into Buckinghamſhire. Near it is a navigable canal, which communicates with the Thames at Brentford. A treaty was carried on here between Charles I. and the parliament, in 1645; but it was broken off. The houſe in which the plenipotentiaries met, at the lower end of the town, is ſtill called the Treaty-Houſe. Near this town are the remains of a camp, ſuppoſed to be Britiſh. Uxbridge is 15 miles W. by N. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Uxenden, Middleſex, E. of Harrow-on-the-Hill. Uxmore, Oxfordſhire, NW. of Henley-upon-Thames.

UZEDA, a town of New Caſtile, 30 miles N. of Madrid.

UZEL, a town in the depart. of the North Coaſt, with a conſiderable trade. It is 17 miles S. of St. Brieux.

UZES, a town in the dept. of Gard, ſeated in a country abounding in corn, oil, ſilk, cattle, and good wine, 12 miles N. of Niſmes.

WAADBRIDGE, or WADEBRIDGE. See WADEBRIDGE.

WAAG, or VAG, a river of Hungary, which riſes in the Carpathian mountains, paſſes by Leopoldſtadt, and falls into the Danube, oppoſite the iſland of Schut.

WAAL, or WAHAL, a river of the United Provinces, one of the outlets of the Rhine, which branches off from that river at Schencken Schans. It runs from E. to W. through Guelderland, paſſes by Nimeguen, Tiel, Bommel, and Gorcum; and joining the Maeſe, paſſes by Dort, and falls into the German Ocean below Briel. After both rivers have formed one ſtream, (near Gorcum) it is ſometimes called Merwe, and ſometimes Meuſe.

Wablington, or Warblington, Hampſ. E. of Havant. Wabridge and its Foreſt, Huntingd. NE. of Spaldwick. Waburn and its Hall, Yorkſhire, N. Riding, NW. of Conſtable Burton. Wachinny and Park, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina.

WACHTENDONCK, a town in the duchy of Guelderland, ſituated in a marſhy country, on the river Niers, whoſe waters fill the ditches, 7 miles NE. of Venlo.

Wackerfield, Durham, NE. of Staindrop. Wackton, Herefordſhire, NW. of Bromyard. Wadborough, Worceſterſhire, 3 miles NW. of Perſhore, where the abbots of that monaſtery had formerly a park.

WADDELL, a town of N. Carolina, 30 miles W. of Exeter.

Waddenhoe, Northamptonſ. on the Nen, SW. of Oundle. Waddeſdon, Bucks, near Winchington, has 3 diſtinct rectaries, of which, each miniſter or rector officiates in turn, and ſhares the revenue. In this pariſh is Eythorp, the elegant ſeat of the Earl of Cheſterfield. Waddeſley, Yorkſ. NE. of Sheffield; has a bridge over the Dun, and a forge for making iron. Waddiker-Hall, Lancaſ. N. of Garſtang. Waddingham, St. Mary's and St. Peter's, Lincolnſ. near Kirton in-Lindſey. Waddington, 3 miles S. of Lincoln. Waddington, Yorkſ. on the Ribble, near Bowland-Foreſt; has a noble hoſpital, erected and endowed for 10 widows and a chaplain. Waddon, Dorſetſ. in Bradpole pariſh, a little to the S. of Outſtrancis. Waddon, E. and W. Dorſetſhire, near Abbotſbury. Near them is Friar Waddon, another hamlet, where is a chapel, now uſed as a dairy. Wade, Hants, by Havant.

WADEBRIDGE. See WAREBRIDGE.

Wadefaſt, Cornwall, NE. of North Petherin. Wadeburſt, Suſſex, SW. of Lamberhurſt-Common. Wadels, a river in Radnorſ. but which runs into the Lug, near Combe, in Herefordſ. about 3 miles E. of Preſteign. Wadelton, Shropſ. on the Onny, NW. of Ludlow. Wadenhall, Kent, near Stelling and Petham. Wade's Mill, Herts, on the Rib, 2 miles N. of Ware. Wadley, Berks, near Farringdon. Wadne, Surry, in Croydon pariſh. Wadſhelf, Derbyſ. SW. of Cheſterfield.

WADSTENA, a town of E. Gothland, on the Lake Wetter, 20 miles SW. of Linkioping.

Wadſworth, Yorkſ. NW. of Halifax. Wadworth, Yorkſ. SW. of Doncaſter.

WAES, a territory in Flanders, extending from Ghent to Yſendick, along the river Scheldt. There are fine meadows, and good paſtures, with plenty of corn and flax, beſide horſes that are in high eſteem. St. Nicholas and Rupelmond are the principal places.

Wagen, Yorkſhire, N. of Hull.

WAGENINGEN, a town of Guelderland, on the Lech, 7 miles W. of Arnheim.

WAGRIA, a territory in the NE. part of Holſtein, between the Baltic and the Trave. It is about 20 miles in length and 15 in breadth.

WAIGATZ, ſtraits between Nova Zembla and the continent of Ruſſia.

Waight Court, Iſle of Wight, in Weſt Medina.

WAINFLEET, a town of Lincolnſhire, ſeated on a creek near the ſea, with ſeveral trading veſſels belonging to it, and an excellent free-ſchool. It is 14 miles NNE. of Boſton, and 130 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

Waitby, Weſtmorl. near Kirby-Steven. Waitwith, Yorkſhire, near Richmond. Wakebridge-Hall, Derbyſ. NE. of Wirkſworth.

* WAKEFIELD, a large, well-built town, in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on the river Calder, which has been made navigable hither from Caſtleforth, and from hence to Eland and Halifax. The principal trade is in white cloths and ſtammies. It conſiſts chiefly of three ſpacious ſtreets, and is 28 miles SW. of York, and 184 NNW. of London. Markets on Thurſday and Friday; the latter for woollen cloth.

Wakeburſt and its Park, Suſſex, E. of Worth-Foreſt. Wakering, Magna and Parva, Eſſex, near Shobury. Wakerton, or Wakely, Herts, SW. of Buntingford, and half a mile S. of Berkſden. Wakerley, Northamp. by the river Welland, N. of Rockingham Foreſt. Wake's, or Elton's Tower, Somerſ. in Briſtol Channel, near Clevedon. Waketon, Great and Little, Norfolk, near Long Stratton, between Schole and Norwich. Waktbwaite, Cumberland, N. of Keſwick.

WALACHIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by Moldavia and Tranſylvania; on the E. by Beſſarabia and the river Danube; on the S. by Bulgaria; and on the W. by Tranſylvania, the bannat of Temeſwar, and the Danube. It is 280 miles in length, and 150 in its greateſt breadth. It abounds in excellent horſes and cattle, and there are mines of ſeveral kinds. The ſoil is very fertile; and there are good paſtures, with wine, oil, and all manner of European fruits. The inhabitants, who are chiefly of the Greek church, are wretchedly ignorant; and the higheſt attainments of the eccleſiaſtics seldom go beyond reading and ſinging well, and knowing the ceremonies of the church. Walachia is governed by a prince, often elected by the people, and ſtyled waywode, deipot, or hoſpodar. He is a vaſſal of the Ottoman Porte; his yearly tribute generally amounting to about 60,000 ducats.

Walberton, Suſſex, SW. of Arundel. Walberry, Eſſex, near Hallingbury. Walbottle, Northumb. in Thraſterton manor. Walbridge, Somerſetſ. over the Frome, leads into Wilts.

WALCHEREN, an iſland of the United Provinces, the principal of Zealand. It is ſeparated from the iſlands of N. and S. Beveland by the E. Scheldt, and from Dutch Flanders by the W. Scheldt; being ſurrounded on the other ſides by the German Ocean. It is about 13 miles in length and 8 in breadth, and, lying very low, is ſubject to inundations, but is pretty fruitful, and has good arable and paſture lands. The capital of this iſland, and of the whole province, is Middleburg.

Walcot, a village in Lincolnſhire, on the borders of the fens, within one mile of Folkingham. It has a chalybeate ſpring, formerly much frequented. Walcot, Worceſ. 2 miles NE. of Perſhore. Walcote, Leiceſterſ. E. of Lutterworth. Walcote, Lincolnſ. SW. of Tatterſhal. Walcote, Lincolnſ. near the Trent, N. of Burton. Walcote, Norf. near Happiſburgh. Walcote, Norfolk, near Diſs and Burſton, Walcote, Oxfordſ. near Charlbury. Walcote, Shropſ. near Chirbury. Walcote, Shropſhire, SE. of Biſhop's-Caſtle. Walcote, Shropſ. W. of Wellington. Walcote, Somerſetſ. at the entrance of Bath from Wilts. Walcote, Warwickſhire, in Haſelar. Walcote, Warwickſ. a hamlet of Granborough.

WALCOURT, a town of Namur, ſeated on the river Heure, between the Maeſe and Sambre, 9 miles S. of Charleroy. In 1689, Mareſchal d'Humieres, deſirous of celebrating the feaſt of St. Louis by a victory, attacked the allies, under Prince Waldeck and the Earl of Marlborough, near this place; but after a fight of about two hours, was obliged to retire with great loſs.

WALDBURG, a caſtle, which gives name to a county of Suabia, ſituated between the Iler and the Danube, about 35 miles SSW. of Ulm.

WALDECK, a town in the circle of Upper Rhine, capital of a county of the ſame name, N. of Heſſe, and E. of the duchy of Weſtphalia. It is 18 miles WSW. of Caſſel.

WALDECK, a county in the circle of Upper Rhine, S. of the biſhopric of Paderborn, about 24 miles in length and 20 in breadth. The country abounds in cattle and grain, though it is ſomewhat mountainous and woody; and there are mines of iron, copper, quickſilver, and ſalt. It contains 13 towns and a market village, and is ſuppoſed to bring in above 100,000 rix dollars to the prince.

WALDEN, SAFFRON, a town in Eſſex, ſeated among fields of ſaffron, which is here cultivated, though not ſo much of late as formerly. Dr. Stukely, deſcribing this town, ſays, it is the moſt beautiful ſituation he ever met with. It is 27 miles NW. by N. of Chelmſford, and 42 N. by E. of London. Market on Saturday.

Walden, Yorkſ. W. of North Cave. Walden, King's and St. Paul's, Herts, near Hitchin.

WALDENBURG, the name of ſeveral towns in Germany.

Waldern, Suſſex, W. of Warbleton. Waldershare, Kent, 4 miles and a half S. of Sandwich. Walderswick, Suffolk, near Southwold. Walderton, Suſſex, near the Meridens. Waldingfield, Magna and Parva, Suffolk, between Sudbury and Billiton. Waldinwells, Yorkſ. SE. of Rotcheram. Waldish, Dorſetſ. near Bridport. Waldlech, Dorſetſ. a mile N. of Baunton.

WALDKIRCH, a town in Auſtrian Suabia, in the Brisgau.

Waldridge, Durham, SW. of Lumley-Caſtle. Waldridge, Bucks, in Dynton a pariſh. Waldringfield, Suffolk, on the Deben, S. of Woodbridge.

WALDSHUT, a town of Auſtrian Suabia, one of the four Foreſt Towns, 19 miles W. of Schaffhauſen, and 26 E. of Baſil.

WALDSTÆTTER SEE, or LAKE OF THE FOUR CANTONS, one of the fineſt lakes in Swiſſerland, with reſpect both to its extent, being 20 miles in length, as to the ſublimity and variety of the ſcenery it exhibits. It conſiſts of three principal branches, called the Lakes of Lucern, Schweitz, and Uri. The upper branch, or Lake of Lucern, is in the form of a croſs, and is bounded towards the town by cultivated hills ſloping gradually from the water, contraſted on the oppoſite ſide by a maſs of barren and craggy rocks. Mount Pilate, one of the higheſt mountains in Swiſſerland, riſes boldly from this lake. Towards the E. of this branch, the lake contracts into a narrow freak, ſcarcely a mile across. Soon after, it again widens, and we enter the ſecond branch, or Lake of Schweitz; with the canton of Underwalden on one ſide, and that of Schweitz on the other. Here the mountains are more lofty, and infinitely varied; ſome covered to the very ſummits with the moſt lively verdure, others perpendicular and craggy; here forming amphitheatres of wood; there jutting into the water in bold promontories. Near Brunnen is the third branch, or Lake of Uri, which takes a SE. direction; the ſcenery the moſt ſublime imaginable. It is a deep and narrow lake, about 9 miles long, bordered on both ſides by rocks uncommonly wild and romantic, and, for the moſt part, perpendicular, with foreſts of beech and pine growing down their ſides to the very edge of the water.

WALES, a principality in the W. of the iſland of Great Britain, comprehending 12 counties; namely, Angleſey, Carnarvonſhire, Denbighſhire, Flintſhire, Merionethſhire, and Montgomeryſhire, in North Wales; Brecknockſhire, Cardiganſhire, Carmarthenſhire, Glamorganſhire, Pembrokeſhire, and Radnorſhire, in South Wales. This country is, for the moſt part, mountainous, but its produce ſufficient for the maintenance of the inhabitants. It is the country to which the ancient Britons fled, when this iſland was invaded by the victorious Saxons. They are now called Welſh, and continue to preſerve their ancient language. The weſtern part is bounded by St. George's Channel and the Iriſh Sea; the ſouthern by the Briſtol Channel; the northern by the Iriſh Sea; and the eaſtern by the counties of Cheſter, Salop, Hereford, and Monmouth. It contains 751 pariſhes, and 58 market towns. The air is clear and ſharp, the cattle ſmall, and proviſions, in general, good and cheap. Wales is particularly remarkable for goats, which naturally delight in hilly countries; for fuel, they uſe wood, coal, and turf. It is watered by many rivers, the principal of which are noted in the different counties. Wales was long governed by independent kings, till their laſt prince, Llewellyn, being vanquiſhed and ſlain, in 1283, Edward I. reduced the whole country under the Engliſh dominion. He alſo inveſted the principality in his ſecond ſon, Edward, who afterwards becoming heir of the Engliſh monarchy, the eldeſt ſon of the kings of England have ever ſince been created Prince of Wales. In the reign of Henry VIII. the government and juriſprudence of Wales were modelled according to the Engliſh form, and the inhabitants admitted to the enjoyment of all the Engliſh rights and liberties, particularly that of ſending members to parliament, a knight for every ſhire, and a burgeſs for every ſhire-town, except Merioneth.

WALES, NEW NORTH, a country of N. America, W. of Hudſon's Bay.

WALES, NEW SOUTH, a country of N. America, extending 150 leagues along the SW. coaſt of Hudſon's Bay, and ſubject to Great Britain. See HUDSON'S BAY and LABRADOR.

WALES, NEW SOUTH, the eaſtern coaſt of New Holland, extending from lat. 43. 49. to 10. 37. S. being the NE. and SE. extremities of that vaſt iſland. This coaſt was firſt explored by Captain Cook, in 1770; and a deſign was formed, in conſequence of his recommendation, to ſettle a colony of convicts at Botany Bay, in lat. 4. 80. S. Capt. Arthur Phillips being appointed governor of the intended ſettlement, as well as commodore on the voyage, ſailed from Portſmouth, 1787, on board the Sirius frigate, accompanied by the Supply tender, three ſtoreſhips, and ſix tranſports, which had on board a detachment of marines, and 778 convicts, of which 220 were women. He arrived at Botany Bay on the 18th of January, 1788; but finding this bay very ineligible, in many reſpects, for a colony, on farther exploring the coaſt, he fixed upon Port Jackſon, about three leagues and a half N. of Cape Banks; and here the ſettlement was begun, to which he gave the name of Sydney Cove. With reſpect to the country, a vaſt chain of lofty mountains runs nearly in a N. and S. direction, farther than the eye can reach, about 60 miles inland. The general face of the country is pleaſing, diverſified with gentle riſings and ſmall winding valleys, covered, for the moſt part, with large ſpreading trees, affording a ſucceſſion of leaves in all ſeaſons. A variety of flowering ſhrubs, almoſt entirely new to a European, and of exquiſite fragrance, abound in thoſe places which are free from trees; and, among theſe, a tall ſhrub, bearing an elegant flower, which ſmells like Engliſh May, is peculiarly delightful, and perfumes the air to a great diſtance. The trees, according to Capt. Tench and others, are of ſo bad a grain, that they can ſcarcely be uſed for any purpoſe. This, however, has been aſcribed, in Governor Phillips's voyage, to their being uſed in an unſeaſoned ſtate. They yield vaſt quantities of red gum, which was found a cure for the dyſentry. It is of an acrid quality, and therefore requires to be given along with opiates. The tree which yields it is of a very conſiderable ſize, and grows to a great height before it puts out any branches. The gum itſelf is uſually compared to ſanguis draconis, but differs from it in being ſoluble in water, which the ſanguis draconis is not. It may be extracted from the wood by tapping, as taken out of the veins when dry. There is likewiſe a yellow gum, which has the ſame medicinal qualities, but in an inferior degree. It is properly a reſin, being entirely inſoluble in water. It greatly reſembles gambage, but has not the property of ſtaining, and is produced by a low, ſmall plant, with long graſſy leaves. The ſtem is ſtrong and light, and is uſed by the natives for making their ſpears. The reſin is generally dug up from the ſoil under the tree, not collected from it, and may perhaps be the ſame which Taſman calls gum lac of the ground. It has been tried by Dr. Blane, phyſician to St. Thomas's Hoſpital, in London, who found it very efficacious in the cure of old fluxes. Many of the plants of this country have been imported into Britain, and are now flouriſhing in perfection, not only in the royal botanical garden at Kew, but in many private collections. Of the few eſculent plants, are a kind of bean reſembling the coccos of the W. Indies, a ſort of parſley and purſlain; two ſorts of yam, the cabbage-tree, and a palm-tree, whoſe nuts are very good food for hogs; with a ſpecies of cherry-tree, a wild fig, and another tree, whoſe fruit is not unlike a pine apple in appearance. With reſpect to the climate of this country, it appears not to be diſagreeable: the heat has never been exceſſive in ſummer, nor is the cold intolerable in winter. Storms of thunder and lightning are frequent; but theſe are common to all warm countries. The quadrupeds hitherto diſcovered are principally of the opoſſum kind, of which the moſt remarkable is the kanguroo. There is alſo a ſpecies of dogs very different from thoſe known in Europe. They are extremely fierce, and cannot be brought to the ſame degree of familiarity with thoſe we are acquainted with. Some of them have been brought to England, but ſtill retain their native ferocity. Theſe dogs, which are the only domeſtic animal they have, reſemble the fox-dog of England. In their language, theſe animals are called dingo; but all other quadrupeds, without exception, they name kanguroo. There are many beautiful birds, of various kinds; among which, the principal are a black ſwan, its wings edged with white, its bill tinged with red; and the oſtrich, or caſſowary, which frequently reaches the height of ſeven feet, or more. Beſides theſe, there are various kinds of ſea and water fowl, ſoland geeſe, pelicans of an enormous ſize, gulls, ſhags, &c. with pigeons, quails, herons, cranes, hawks, eagles, bats, and many other land birds. Several kinds of ſerpents, both harmleſs and noxious, large ſpiders, centipedes, ſcolopendras, and lizards, have likewiſe been met with; together with a few inſects, the principal of which are the moſquito and three or four ſpecies of ants, ſome as green as a leaf, which build their neſts upon trees in a very ſingular manner. They bend down ſeveral of the leaves, each of which is as broad as a man's hand, and glue the points of them together, ſo as to form a purſe; the viſcus, uſed for this purpoſe, is an animal juice, which nature has enabled them to elaborate. Their ſting is ſcarcely leſs painful than that of a bee. There are likewiſe many fiſhes, which are not known in Europe; and on the ſhoals and reefs are incredible numbers of the fineſt green turtles, gigantic cockles, lobſters, oyſters, and crabs of various kinds. Some very large ſharks have been ſeen in Port Jackſon, and two ſmaller ſpecies, one named the Port Jackſon ſhark, the other Watts's ſhark. The latter, notwithſtanding its diminutive ſize (the mouth ſcarcely exceeding an inch in breadth) is exceſſively voracious. One of them having been taken in, and flung down upon the deck, lay there quiet for two hours; after which, Mr. Watts's dog happening to paſs by, the fiſh ſprung upon it with all the ferocity imaginable, and ſeized it by the leg in ſuch a manner, that the animal could not diſengage itſelf without aſſiſtance. The inhabitants of New S. Wales go entirely naked; and though pleaſed at firſt with ſome ornaments that were given them, they ſoon threw them away as uſeleſs. It does not appear, however, that they are inſenſible of the benefits of clothing, or of ſome of the conveniences of which their new neighbours are in poſſeſſion. Some of them, whom the coloniſts partly clothed, ſeemed to be pleaſed with the comfortable warmth they derived from it; and they all expreſs a great deſire for the iron tools which they ſee their neighbours make uſe of. Their colour is rather a deep chocolate than a full black; but the filth with which their ſkins are uniformly covered, prevents its true colour from appearing. At ſome of their interviews with the coloniſts, ſeveral droll inſtances happened of their miſtaking the negroes amongſt the coloniſts for their own countrymen. Notwithſtanding their diſregard for European finery, they are fond of adorning, or rather deforming their bodies with ſcars, which have an uncommon, or rather hideous appearance. Sometimes the fleſh is raiſed ſeveral inches from the ſkin, and appears as if filled with wind; and all theſe ſeem to be reckoned marks of honour among them. Some of them perforate the cartilage of the noſe, and thruſt through it a bone as thick as a man's finger, and five or ſix inches long. This hideous kind of ornament, humorouſly called by the ſailors their ſpritſail yard, ſo effectually ſtops up both noſtrils, that they are forced to keep their mouths wide open for breath, and ſnuffle ſo when they ſpeak, that they are ſcarcely intelligible even to one another. Their hair is generally ſo much clotted with the red gum already mentioned, that they reſemble a mop. They paint themſelves with various colours, and ornament themſelves with beads and ſhells, but make no uſe of the beautiful feathers procured from the birds of the country. Moſt of the men want one of the fore teeth in the upper-jaw, which alſo appears to be a badge of honour among them. It is very common among the women to cut off two joints of the little finger; which, conſidering the clumſineſs of the amputating inſtruments they poſſeſs, muſt be a very painful operation. The New Hollanders appear extremely deficient in the uſeful arts. Of the cultivation of the ground they have no notion, nor can they be prevailed upon to eat bread or dreſſed meat. Hence they depend entirely for ſubſiſtence on the fruits and roots they can gather, and the fiſh they catch. They frequently ſet fire to the graſs, in order to drive out the opoſſums, and other animals, from their retreats; and they have been obſerved to ſet decoys for quails. They ſometimes contrive to kill the kanguroo, and even birds of various kinds. As all theſe reſources, however, muſt be at beſt precarious, it is no wonder that they are frequently diſtreſſed for proviſions. Thus, in ſummer, they would eat neither the ſhark nor the ſting-ray; but, in winter, any thing was acceptable. A young whale being driven on ſhore, was quickly cut in pieces and carried off. They broiled it only long enough to ſcorch the outſide; and in this raw ſtate they eat all their fiſh. They broil alſo the fern root, and another, the ſpecies of which is unknown. They bake their

heir proviſions, moreover, by the help of ot ſtones, like the inhabitants of the ſlands in the Southern Ocean. Their hief ſubſiſtence, however, is fiſh; and when theſe happened to be ſcarce, they were wont to watch the firſt opportunity when the coloniſts hauled the ſeine, and often ſeized the whole, though a part had formerly been offered or given them. They ſometimes ſtrike the fiſh from the anoes with their ſpears, ſometimes catch hem with hooks, and alſo make uſe of nets, which are generally made of the ibres of the flax plants, with very little preparation, and are ſtrong and heavy; he lines of which they are compoſed being twiſted like whipcord. Some of them, however, appear to be made of the fur of an animal, and others of cotton. The neſhes of their nets are made of very large loops artificially inſerted into each other, but without any knots. Their hooks are made of the inſide of a ſhell very much reſembling mother-of-pearl. Their canoes are nothing more than large pieces of bark tied up at both ends with vines; and conſidering the ſlight texture of theſe veſſels, we cannot but admire the dexterity with which they are managed, and the boldneſs with which they venture out to ſea in them. They generally carry fire along with them in theſe canoes to dreſs their fiſh when caught. When fiſhing with the hook, if the fiſh appears too ſtrong to be drawn aſhore by the line, the canoe is paddled to the ſhore; and while one man gently draws the fiſh along, another ſtands ready to ſtrike it with a ſpear, in which he generally ſucceeds. There is no good reaſon for ſuppoſing them to be cannibals; and they never eat animal ſubſtances but raw, or next to it. Some of their vegetables are poiſonous when raw, but deprived of this property when boiled. A convict unhappily experienced this by eating them in an unprepared ſtate; in conſequence of which he died in 24 hours. If bread be given to them, they chew and ſpit it out again, ſeldom chuſing to ſwallow it. They like ſalt beef and pork rather better; but they could never be brought to taſte ſpirits a ſecond time. Their huts are formed in a very rude and barbarous manner. They conſiſt only of pieces of bark laid out together in the form of an oven, open at one end, and very low, though long enough for a man to lie at full length. They alſo take ſhelter in the caverns with which the rocks abound, and in the trunks of large trees, which they excavate by means of fire. The cuſtom of going naked does not inure them ſo to the climate as to make them inſenſible of the injuries of the weather. The coloniſts had repeated opportunities of obſerving this, by ſeeing them ſhivering with cold in the winter time, or huddling together in heaps in their huts, or in caverns, till a fire could be kindled to warm them. It ſeems probable, however, that ſome knowledge of the arts will ſoon be introduced among them, as ſome have been ſeen attentively conſidering the utenſils and conveniences of the Europeans, with a view ſeemingly of making ſimilar improvements of their own. It has alſo been obſerved, that in ſome things they poſſeſs a very great power of imitation. They can imitate the ſongs and language of the Europeans almoſt inſtantaneouſly, much better than the latter can imitate theirs by long practice. Their talent for imitation is diſcernible alſo in their ſculptures, repreſenting men and other animals, every where met with on the rocks; which, though rude, are very ſurpriſing for people who have not the knowledge even of conſtructing habitations in the leaſt degree comfortable for themſelves, or even clothes to preſerve them from the cold. In their perſons, they are active, vigorous, and ſtout, though generally lean. They have a quick and piercing ſight, and their ſenſe of ſmelling is very acute. One of them having touched a piece of pork, held out his finger for his companion to ſmell, with ſtrong marks of diſguſt. The only kind of food they eagerly accept of is fiſh. Few of the women, comparatively ſpeaking, have been ſeen; and ſuch of the females as have been ſeen, have ſoft and pleaſing voices; and ſeem to be very chaſte; and notwithſtanding their barbariſm, ſeem not to be entirely deſtitute of modeſty. The men generally diſplay great perſonal courage on the appearance of any danger. No encounters between parties of the natives themſelves have been obſerved, though, from ſome circumſtances, it appears that wars are carried on among them. They have more than once been ſeen aſſembled, as if bent on ſome expedition. An officer, one day, met 14 of them marching along in a regular Indian file through the woods, each man having a ſpear in one hand, and a ſtone in the other. A chief appeared at their head, who was diſtinguiſhed from the reſt by being painted. They paſſed on peaceably, though greatly ſuperior in numbers to the Engliſh. On another occaſion, they offered no hoſtilities when aſſembled to the number of 200 or 300, and meeting the governor attended only by a ſmall small party. With all their courage, however, they are much afraid of a musket, and almost equally so of a red coat, which they know to be the martial dress of the Europeans. The mischief which they have hitherto done has been exercised only on some of the straggling convicts, most of whom, probably, have been the aggressors. Though they allow their beards to grow to a considerable length, it does not appear that they consider them as any ornament, but rather the contrary. Some young gentlemen belonging to the Sirius, one day met an old man in the woods with a beard of considerable length, which they let him know they could rid him of, stroaking their chins, and thus intimating the smoothness of them. At length he consented: and one of them taking a pen-knife from his pocket, and making the best substitute for lather he could, performed the operation with such success, that he seemed highly delighted. In a few days he paddled along side of the Sirius, pointing to his beard; but he could not by any means be prevailed upon to enter the ship. On this a barber went down to him, who again freed him from his beard, at which he expressed the utmost satisfaction. They certainly burn their dead; which, perhaps, has given rise to the story of their being cannibals. Governor Phillips observing the ground to be raised in several places, caused one of these tumuli to be opened, in which were found a jaw-bone half consumed, and some ashes. From the manner in which the ashes are deposited, it appears that the body has been laid at length, raised from the ground a little space, and consumed in that posture, being afterward lightly covered with mould. They are so honest among themselves, that they leave their spears, and other implements on the open beach, in perfect security of their remaining untouched. They are very expert at throwing their javelins, and will hit a mark with great certainty at a considerable distance. To produce fire, they take two pieces of dry, soft wood; one a stick about nine inches long, the other flat. The stick they shape into an obtuse point at one end; and pressing it upon the other, turn it out nimbly, by holding it between both their hands, as we do a chocolate-mill; often shifting their hands up, and then moving them down upon it, to increase the pressure as much as possible. By this method, they get fire in less than two minutes, and from the smallest spark they increase it with great speed and dexterity. These people are more numerous than was at first imagined; though still the number of inhabitants must be accounted few in comparison to the extent of the country; and there is great reason to believe that the interior parts are uninhabited; as from their great use of fish, it seems necessary for them to live principally on the coasts. The jurisdiction of the governor of New South Wales extends from 43. 49. to 10. 37. S. lat. From the sea-coast it extends westward as far as lon. 135. E. and thence proceeding in an easterly direction, includes all the islands in the Pacific Ocean, within the above mentioned latitudes. See BOTANY BAY, HOLLAND NEW, PORT JACKSON, and SYDNEY COVE.

Walesby, Lincolns. near Market Raisin. Walesby, Nott. SW. of Tuxford. Walston, Cumberl. where the river Cumbeck crosses the Picts Wall, near Lancroft. Walfield, Cheshire, near Congleton. Walfleet, or Woolfleet, a bank in Essex, noted for oysters. It is situated at the mouth of the river Crouch, towards Foulness Hr. Walford, Glouces. W. of Preston upon-Stour. Walford, Herefords. S. of Ross. Walford, Heref. N. of Brompton Bryan. Walford, Shropf. W. of Albrighton. Walgrave, Northamp. between Northampton and Kettering. Walgrave, Berks, in the parish of Bray. Walgrave, Yorks. near Scarborough. Walham, or Wadham Green, Middlesex, between Little Chelsea and Fulham, has several genteel houses. Walham, Nottinghamshire, SE. of Blith. Walham Mead, near Gloucester. Walhampton, Hants, near Lymington.

WALKENRIED, a town of Klettenburg, Upper Saxony, 44 miles NNW. of Erfurt.

Walker, Northumb. on the Tyne, NE. of Newcastle. Walkeringham, Nott. SE. of Misterton. Walkern, Hertfords. E. of Stevenage, on the river Beane. Walkham, or Waycomb, Somersets. near Wells. Walkhampton, Devonshire, SE. of Tavistock. Walkhamsted, Surry, near Godstone. Walkingham, Yorks. SW. of Boroughbridge. Walkington, Yorkshire, near Beverley. Wall, Northumb. N. of Hexham. Wall, Staffords. S. of Lichfield, has the remains of walls encompassing 2 acres of ground, called Castle Crofts, wherein have been found two ancient pavements of Roman bricks. A tradition has prevailed here, from time immemorial, that by this field there was a city, but demolished before the conquest; which is judged the more probable from the several Roman coins found here, and from the plain appearance of the military way called called Watling street, from hence to Penkridge. Wall and Marsh, Kent, near Romney. Wall Grange, Staff. on the Churnet, between Cheadle and Leek. Wallaud, Gloucestershire, near Bristol. Wallborough, Hants, near W. Woodbay.

WALLENBURG, a town of Basle, Swisserland, 15 miles NNE. of Soleure.

Wallenden, Devonshire, near Meth.

WALLENSTADT, a town of Swisserland, incorporated into the bailiwick of Sargans, but enjoying many distinct privileges. It derives its importance from the passage of the merchandise transported from Germany through the Grisons, to Italy. It is seated at the E. end of a lake of the same name, 15 miles NW. of Coira.

WALLENSTADT, a lake of Swisserland, about 9 miles in length, and two in breadth. It is bounded by high mountains, except to the E. and W. the scenery of which is uncommonly wild and picturesque. On the side of the canton of Glarus, the mountains which form its borders are cultivated; enriched with wood or fine meadows; and studded with churches, cottages, and small villages; the Alps of Glarus rising behind, their tops covered with snow. On the other side, for the most part, the rocks are grotesque, craggy, inaccessible, and perpendicular; but here and there a few cultivated necks of land are formed at the edge of the lake, and at the bottom of these rocks, exhibiting a beautiful contrast to the barrenness above and round them. Numberless waterfalls, occasioned by the melting of the snows, fall down the sides of the mountains from a considerable height, and with an almost inconceivable variety. This lake is exceedingly clear, deep, and cold.

Wallerscot, Cheshire, near Vale Royal. Walley, Nottinghamshire, near Holbeck Woodhouse. Walliborn, Shropshire, NE. of Minsterley.

*WALLINGFORD, a town in Berkshire, seated on the Thames, over which is a stately stone bridge, above 300 yards long, with 19 arches and 4 draw bridges. The principal trade is making of malt. It is a place of antiquity, having been surrounded by a wall a mile and a half in circumference. It made a good figure in the times of the Danes and Saxons, and had a strong castle, now demolished, which was often besieged in the barons wars. It has a free school, and a handsome market-house, in which the magistrates keep the sessions; and is 14 miles NNW. of Reading, and 46 W. of London. Markets on Tuesday and Friday.

Wallington, Herts. a mile NE. of Bigrave. Wallington, Norfolk, near Downham. Wallington, Northumberland, E. of Kirk Whelpington. Wallington, Surry, in Carshalton parish. Wallingwells, Nottinghamshire, NW. of Worksop.

WALLKILL, a river of N. America, in New York. See DROWNED LANDS.

WALLOONS, a name formerly given to the inhabitants of a considerable part of the Netherlands.

Wallop, Upper, Middle, and Lower, Hants, on the river Wallop, near Stockbridge. Wallop, Upper and Lower, Shropshire, near Caste Castle. Wallopoint, Devonshire, NE. of Kingsbridge.

WALLOT, or WALLESDA ISLES, Essex, in the river Orouch, W. of Foulness Isle. The water here is brackish; on which account the inhabitants fetch what they use from the other side of the creek. It is 5 miles long and 1 broad, and is secured from the sea by a wall of earth.

Wall-End, Northumberl. 8 miles from Newcastle upon-Tyne. Wall-Town, Northumb. near Thirlewall Castle, near the Picts-Wall, which, a little to the W. of it, is in the greatest perfection: it is 3 yards high, and has 16 regular courses, and at one part are 16 of the facing stones entire. Wall Town, Northumberl. on the Picts Wall, N. of Ovingham. Walmer, Kent, S. of Deal, separated from its coast by a narrow channel. Walmer, Glouces. in Westbury parish. Walmesley, Lancashire, NW. of Bury.

WALMIRSTADT, a town of Magdeburg, Lower Saxony, situated on the Ohra, 10 miles N. of Magdeburg.

WALNEY, an island on the N. part of Lancashire. It is 9 miles in length, but hardly 1 in breadth; abounds with seagulls, and serves as a bulwark to the hundred of Furness, against the waves of the Irish sea. It has 2 or 3 small villages and a chapel.

WALPO, a town and county of Sclavonia, on the river Walpo, 20 miles NNW. of Esseck.

Walpole, Suffolk, near the river Blithe, S. of Halesworth. Walpole St. Andrew's and St. Peter's, Norfolk, in the marshland between the Ouse and the Nyn.

WALSALL, a town of Staffordshire, with manufactories of nails, bridle bits, stirrups, spurs, bellows, &c. A canal has been lately cut from hence to the collieries at Bradley. It is 16 miles S. of Stafford, and 116 NW. of London. Market on Tuesday.

Walsham in the Willows, Suffolk, between Buddesdale and Wiggin.

WALSHAM,

WALSHAM, NORTH, a handſome town in Norfolk, with a plentiful market on Thurſday. It is 10 miles N. of Norwich, and 123 NNE. of London. South Walſham is much nearer to Norwich, and NE. of it.

Walſhcroft, Lincolnſhire, gives name to a hundred N. of Market-Raiſin.

Walſhtown, in Cork, Munſter.

WALSINGHAM, a town in Norfolk, famous formerly for a monaſtery, which had a ſhrine of the Virgin Mary, almoſt as much frequented as Thomas à Becket's, at Canterbury. Eraſmus, who viſited it in his time, deſcribes the chapel as 'bright and ſhining all over, by the reflection of the tapers on heaps of jewels, gold, and ſilver.' It is 25 miles NW. of Norwich, and 116 NNE. of London. Old Walſingham lies to the NE. of it. Market on Friday.

Walſoken, or Popenhoe, Norfolk, in the marſh-land, SW. of the Walpoles. Walſworth, Hants, NE. of Fareham. Walſworth, Herts, NE. of Hitchin.

WALTENBUCH, a town of Wirtemburg, Suabia, 8 miles S. of Stutgard.

Walterſton, Dorſetſhire, near Piddleton. Walterſton, Heref. NE. of Trewin. Waltham, Kent, 3 miles E. of Wye. Waltham, Kent, near Hinkſell. Waltham, Lincolnſhire, S. of Grimſby.

WALTHAM-ABBEY, a town of Eſſex, with manufactures of printed linens, pins, and gunpowder. It is ſeated on the river Lea, which here forms ſeveral iſlands, 12 miles N. by E. of London. Market on Thurſday.

* WALTHAM, or BISHOP'S-WALTHAM, a ſmall town of Hampſhire, 8 miles S. of Wincheſter, and 65 SW. of London. Market on Friday.

WALTHAM-ON-THE-WOULD, a town in Leiceſterſhire, with a ſmall market on Thurſday. It is 16 miles NNE. of Leiceſter, and 113 N. by W. of London.

Waltham, Magna and Parva, Eſſex, NW. of Chelmsford. Waltham, North, Hampſhire, SE. of Overton.

*WALTHAM, WEST, or WALTHAM-CROSS, a town, partly in Middleſex and partly in Hertfordſhire, ſeparated by the river Lea from Waltham-Abbey. A ſmall market on Tueſday.

Waltham, White, Berks, 3 miles from Maidenhead. Walthamſtow, Eſſex, on the river Lea, contiguous to Layton, and 5 miles NE. by E. of London.

WALTON, a town of Virginia, 60 miles SW. of Richmond.

Walton, a village in Surry, ſeated on the Thames, over which it has a handſome bridge, 3 miles W. of Kingſton. Walton, Bucks, near Beaconſfield. Walton, Camb. NW. of Royſton. Walton, Cumb. near Stapleton and Beweaſtle. Walton, Derbyſ. near Alfreton. Walton, Derbyſ. W. of Cheſterfield. Walton, N. of Dorcheſter. Walton, Eſſex, under Naze Point, S. of Harwich, is one of the 3 Sokens. Great numbers of copperas ſtones are found on the ſhore; and here are ſeveral copperas houſes, where it is made. Walton, Glouc. near Tewkeſbury, where is a mineral water of the ſame property as Cheltenham Spa. Walton, Glouceſ. in Deerhurſt pariſh. Walton, Herts, NE. of Datchworth. Walton, Huntingd. near the Saltreys. Walton, Lanc. on the Derwent, a mile from Preſton. Walton, Lanc. near Weſt Derby. Walton, Leic. near the Swift, E. of Lutterworth. Walton, Northampt. NW. of Peterborough. Walton, Shropſ. N. of Chirbury. Walton, NE. of Shrewſbury. Walton, Shropſ. near Bridgenorth. Walton, Somerſ. near the Briſtol Channel, between Portſhead and Clevendon. Walton, Somerſ. SW. of Glaſtonbury. Walton, Staffs near Baſwick. Walton, S. of, near Stone, has a bridge over the Trent. Walton, Staff. near Chebſey. Walton, Suff. on the Orwell, SE. of Ipſwich, has the ruins of a priory, once a cell to the monks at Rocheſter. It has the remains of a caſtle, the foundation of which is 187 feet long and 9 feet thick, where great numbers of Roman bricks are found. Its ancient market has been long diſuſed, but the croſs ſtill remains. Walton, Yorkſ. near Wetherby. Walton Cardiffe, Glouceſ. a mile SE. of Tewkeſbury. Walton-D'Eyeville, Warw. near Wellesbourn. Walton, E. and Walton Prior's, or W. Norfolk, N. of the marſh-land. Walton, Grange, Staff. SW. of Gnoſtall. Walton-Hall, Derbyſ. E. of Whichnor. Walton-Head, Yorkſ. W. Riding, near Kirby-Overblow. Walton-Hill, and Place, Surry, E. of Leatherhead Downs. Walton-Lee, Surry, near Chertſey. Walton, Manduit, Warwickſ. N. of Walton D'Eyeville. Walton, Nether and Upper, Cheſhire, on the Merſey, near Warrington. Walton-on-the-Would, Leiceſterſhire, near Loughborough. Walwarn, a river in Cheſhire, which runs into the Lee, about Copenhall. Walwick, Cheſters, Northumberl. near the Grange, on the banks of the Tyne. Here was formerly a Roman ſtation, the vallum of which forms an oblong ſquare, in length about 170 paces, and in width 130. Within this ſpace are crowded the ruins of ſtone buildings, which ch appear to have ſtood in lineal di-ions, forming ſtreets. On the ſouth, hout the vallum and foſſe, many ruins buildings appear. Walwick Grange, thumb. SE. of Simondſburn, on the ls' Wall, where have been found a nan altar and inſcriptions. Here the l is in tolerably good preſervation, the proſpect filled with the moſt eeable ſubjects. Walworth, Surry, been Newington Butts (in the pariſh which it is) and Camberwell. It is ady a conſiderable village, and is very idly increaſing in buildings. Walrth, Durham, near Heighington. Wamlge, Shropſhire, NE. of Wellington.

mbrook, Dorſetſ. 2 miles N. of Chard-
k. Wamden and its Heath, Bucks, ween Woburn and Newport-Pagnel.
mmingore, Suſſex, NW. of Lewes.
mpul, a river in Cumberland, which s into the Eden mouth below Kirk-de. Wampul, Cumb. in Aketon pa-
i. Wamſon, Northumb. on the Tyne,
. of Tinmouth Caſtle. Wamborough, ry, between Guilford and Alderſhot.
mborough, Wilts, 2 miles E. of Swinn. Wandle, a river of Surry, which s near Carſhalton, and falls into the ames at Wandſworth. Wandleſbury, mb. near Gogmagog Hills. Wandſ-rth, a large village of Surry, ſeated on river Wandle, near its confluence with Thames. The art of dying cloth has n practiſed at this place for more than entury; and there are ſtill two dyers e, one for ſcarlet. There are alſo ſe-ral manufactories; namely, for bolting th, the printing of calicoes and kerſyres, and the whitening and preſſing of ffs. Here are likewiſe oil, iron, and ite-lead mills, vinegar works, and ex-ſive diſtilleries. It is 5 miles SW. by
. of London. Wangford, Yorkſ. E.
Bainton Would. Wangay, Eſſex, near irking.

WANGEN, a free town of Suabia, ding in paper and hardware.

WANGEN, a town in the department of wer Rhine, 12 miles W. of Straſburg.
Wangford, Suffolk, on the river Wang,
W. of Southwold. Wanlip, Leiceſ. on e river Soar, S. of Mountſorrel. Wan-kbead, a village in the N. part of Dum-eſſhire, ſituated near the lead mines, th a conſiderable number of ſmeltinguſes. Wanſbeck, a river in Northumb. anſdike, or Woden's Dyke, a ditch that ns from near Bath, over the Downs, to reat Bedwin; and from E. to W. over ilſbury Plain, for many miles together;
ſt up as a boundary, by the W. Saxons, againſt the incurſions of the Britons. It is a ſtrong earthen rampart, with a broad ditch on the S. ſide.

WANSFORTH, or WALNESFORD-
BRIGGS, oppoſite to Stibbinton in Hun-tingdonſhire. It has a fine bridge over the Nen, and a fine wharf on its banks.
Few of our inland readers are, perhaps, unacquainted with the ſtory of a man who was carried down the ſtream at this place, by the ſudden riſe of the river, as he ſlept upon a haycock; yet the editor has never met with one who could inform him of the name of the hero of the tale. This, he finds, was no other than the famous Barnaby Harrington, better known by the title of Drunken Barnaby, who has given us an account of the adventure, in one part of his entertaining journey. As the book is ſeldom to be met with, we ſhall tranſcribe his own account of the accident for the gratification of ſome of our more curious readers:

Veni Wansforth-Briggs, immanem
Vide amnem, alnum, anum;
Amnem latum, anum lautam,
Comptam, cultam, caſtam, cautam;
Portas, hortos ſpecioſos,
Portus, ſaltus ſpacioſos.
Inde prato per amæni,
Dormiens temulente fæni;
Rivers ſurgit & me capit,
Et in flumen alté rapit
Quorſum? clamant; Nuper erro
A Wansforth-Briggs in Anglo-terra.

Thence to Wansforth-Briggs—a river
And a wife, will live for ever;
River broad, an old wife jolly,
Comely, ſeemly, free from folly;
Gates and gardens neatly ſpecious,
Ports and parks and paſtures ſpacious.
On a hay cock ſleeping ſoundly,
The river roſe, and took me roundly
Down the current; people cried;
Sleeping, down the ſtream I hied;
Where away, quoth they, from Greenland?
No; from Wansforth-Briggs, in England.

Barnabæ Itinerarium, Part III.

This adventurer flouriſhed in the beginning of the 17th century.

Wanſley, Nott. NE. of Codnor Caſtle, in Derbyſhire. Wanſley, Dorſetſ. a mile and a half NW. of Beminſter. Wanſted, Eſſex, on the ſkirts of Epping-Foreſt, 6 miles NE. of London. Wanſted, Hants, NE. of Titchfield. Wanſtraw, Somerſetſhire, 5 miles S. of Frome. Wanſwell, Glouceſterſhire, between Berkley and Slimbridge.

WANTAGE,

* WANTAGE, a town of Berkshire, seated on a branch of the river Ock, 12 miles S. by W. of Oxford, and 60 W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Wantesdon, Suffolk, S. of Tunstall. Wantsum, an arm of the river Stour, in Kent. Wapenbury, Warw. SW. of Dunmore Heath. Wapingthor, Sussex, NW. of Stening. Wapley, Gloucef. 3 miles SW. of Chipping Sodbury. Wapley, Yorks. between Gisborough and Moulgrave Castle. Wappenham, Northamptonshire near Towcester. Wapsburn, Sussex, near Fletching.

WARADIN GROS, a town, capital of a county of Hungary, 66 miles N. of Temesvar.

WARADIN. See PETERWARADIN.

WARANGOLE, (the Arankill of Ferishta) a town of Golconda, formerly the capital. The site of it is still evident from the old ramparts, which are amazingly extensive. A modern fortress is constructed within it. It is 45 miles NNE. of Hydrabad.

WARBERG, a sea-port of Sweden, in Halland, with a safe harbour, on the N. sea, but only deep enough for small vessels. A very ancient castle stands at the harbour's mouth, on a rock, surrounded with water. It has a considerable trade, and is 34 miles S. of Gottenburg.

Warbleton, Sussex, 6 miles N. of Arundel. Warbness, Essex, near Harwich.

WARBORG, a town of Paderborn, in Westphalia, formerly imperial, and one of the Hanse Towns. It contains two churches, two convents, and two castles, and is 16 miles SSE. of Paderborn.

Warborn, Hants, in the New Forest. Warborow, Oxf. near Dorchester. Warboys, with its Wood and Fen, Huntingd. between Rainsey and Somersham. Warbrick, Lancas. in Amounderness. Warburton, Cheshire, on the Mersey, W. of Altringham. Warcop, Westmorl. on the Eden, near the Roman Maiden Way, SE. of Appleby. Ward, Hants, SW. of Rumsey. Wardal, Cumberland, in Seabrain parish, between Egremont and Ambleside.

WARDE, a decayed town of Jutland, 16 miles NNW. of Ripen, seated near the mouth of a river of the same name, which is no longer navigable for ships of burden.

WARDEIN GROS, a town of Hungary, situated on the river Koros, 66 miles N. of Temesvar. Near it is an excellent cold bath.

Warden, Bedfordshire, near Southill. It had once a Cistertian monastery, which, with a very little alteration, is now a farm-house, with grounds of about 1[illegible] acres. Warden, Kent, in Sheppey Isle, [illegible] miles and a half N. of Feversham.

WARDENBURG, a town of Oldenburg, in Westphalia.

Wardendale, or Stonehill, Kent, in W[illegible]mington parish. Warder, or Wardour Castle, Wilts, a magnificent Gothic fr[illegible]ture, 2 miles NE. of Snaffsbury, abo[illegible] 1000 yards from the road. The entra[illegible] to it is wild and picturesque. About [illegible] mile from it, a new mansion, on a [illegible] magnificent plan, standing beautifu[illegible] under a woody hill, with a large pie[illegible] water before it, has been many years [illegible] erecting. Wardale, Cumberland, in [illegible] parish of Plumland, and near the bea[illegible] of Moothay. Watch and ward were k[illegible] here in former times, to guard against [illegible] inroads of the Scots.

WARDHUYS, a sea-port of Da[illegible] Lapland, seated on the Island of Wa[illegible]hoe, near the continent. It has a [illegible] fort, where the governor resides, and [illegible] street of cottages inhabited by fishermen. It is 100 miles SSE. of the North Cap[illegible] Lat. 70. 23. N.

Wardington, Oxfordf. NE. of Banbu[illegible] Wardley, Rutlandshire, W. of Uppin[illegible]ham. Wardley, Yorks. SW. of Hu[illegible] Wardon, or Wardrew, Northumb. on [illegible] river Irthing, NW. of Thirlwall-Ca[illegible] It has a famous spa, the waters of w[illegible] have been analyzed, and their virtues a[illegible]tained, with conveniencies for a few v[illegible]tors. The situation is retired, but [illegible] romantic, having few objects, either [illegible] elevate or entertain.

* WARE, a town in Hertfordshire, se[illegible]ed on the river Lea, by which 5000 qu[illegible]ters of malt and corn are frequently [illegible] in a week to London, by barges, wh[illegible] return with coals, 21 miles N. of Lon[illegible] In the year 1408, this town was desty[illegible] by a great inundation, and sluices [illegible] wears being made in the river to pre[illegible] it from future floods, Camden [illegible] that it hence derived its name. It [illegible] been of increasing note, ever since [illegible] reign of King John, when the high ro[illegible] to the N. was laid through it. Mark[illegible] on Tuesday.

Ware, Devonshire, near Bi[illegible] Ware, Upper and Lower, Somersh[illegible] SW. of Axbridge.

WAREBRIDGE, WAADBRIDGE, [illegible] WADEBRIDGE, a town in Cornwa[illegible] chiefly noted for its bridge over the riv[illegible] Camel, which is much the largest in [illegible] country, having about 20 arches, [illegible] which are built upon wool-packs, beſe of the quickſands. It is 5 miles

W. of Bodmin, and 242 W. by S. of ndon. Market on Saturday.

WAREHAM, a very ancient town of rſetſhire, once Britiſh, built very regu-
, and forming almoſt a long ſquare.
e ſtreets generally interſect each other right angles, eſpecially the 4 principal s, which take their names from the dinal points. It was formery a large ce, with 8 churches, which are now re-ced to 3, as its once noted harbour is ked up. Brithric, the laſt king of W. Saxons, was interred here. The abitants, who are about 1100, trade in acco-pipe clay, ſtockings, iron, and ls. It contains, within the walls, out 230 houſes, and is ſituated on a ng ground, in a healthy air, near the uth of the Frome, where it empties it-f into Pool Harbour, 9 miles WSW.
Pool, and 114 W. by S. of London.
arket on Saturday.

Wareborn, Kent, 5 miles and a half S.
Aſhford. Wareley, Devonſ. between aviſtock and Plymouth. Wareley-Hall, orceſ. NE. of Hales Owen, in Shropſ.
Warelow, Derbyſ. in the High Peak, near idefwal. Wareſley Park, Huntingdonſ.
ar Granſden. Warton, Nottinghamſ. the river Snite, S. of Bingham. War- ld, E. and W. Berks, between Sunningll and Billingbear. Wargrave, Berks, miles S. of Henley. It has a ferry over e Thames, and had formerly a market.
Wareham, All Saints, and Magdalen, orfolk, near Wells. Wareham Bridge, orkſhire, on the river Ware, 5 miles om Stockton. Warham-Mary, Norf. ear Lynn.

WARING, a town of Virginia, 15 miles
SE. of Port Royal.

Waring's Ford, in Down, Ulſter, on a ranch of the river Lagan. Waring's oint, in Down, Ulſter, about a mile
W. of Roſtrevor. It is the entrance to the river Newry, or Narrow-Water, here coals that come down the canal are ipped off. Two ferry-boats here mainain a communication between this coun-and that of Louth; and near it a ſaltork has been erected.

WARINGSTOWN, a town of Down, in ſtler, where the linen manufacture is arried on to great advantage.

WARKA, a town of Maſovia, 10 miles of Czerſk.

Wark, or Werk-Caſtle, Northumb. by he Tweed, near Simonſburn. A ſmall art of the ruins yet remain, which form a rude pillar. Green Head, or High Green, Colliery, is in this manor. Wark- leigh, Devonſ. SW. of South Moulton.
Warkton, Northamp. NE. of Kettering.
Warkworth, Northamptonſhire, near Ban-bury.

WARKWORTH, a borough town of Northumberland, ſeated on the river Coquet, with a very conſiderable ſalmonfiſhery, near a quarry, of much-eſteemed ſtone, and about 3 quarters of a mile from the ſea, 5 miles SE. of Alnwick. The great tower of its old caſtle is a fine piece of architecture, and has moſt extenſive and diverſified views.

Wargleton, Cornwall, E. of Bodmin.
Warley, Yorkſ. 3 miles W. of Halifax.
Warley, Great and Little, Eſſex, near Burntwood. Warley Wigorn, Worceſ. in Hales Owen parish, ſurrounded by Staffordſhire, between Birmingham and Dudley. Warlingham, Surry, 5 miles S. of Croydon. Warmedon, NE. of Worceſter.

WARMELAND. See WERMELAND.

Warmfield, Yorkſ. NE. of Wakefield.
Warmingcamp, Suſſex, between Argmering and Burpham. Warmineham, Cheſhire, on the Wheedle, S. of Middle-wich. Warmingfield, Surry, W. of Aw-fold, on the borders of Suſſex. Warming- hurſt, Suſſex N. of Waſhington. Warm- ington, Northamp. NE. of Oundle, near the river Nen. Warmington, Warwickſ.
a mile NE. of Edgehill.

WARMINSTER, a populous town in Wiltſhire, with a pretty large trade in corn, malt, and cheeſe, and a manufacture of wool, and cloth, ſo that it is become of more conſequence than moſt of the borough towns in this county, although it ſends no members to parliament. It has ſome good inns, and is ſeated on the river Deveril, 22 miles
NNW. of Saliſbury, and 97 W. by S. of London. A good corn market on Saturday. Fairs on April 11th, Auguſt 10th, and September 12th.

Warmley, Warwickſhire, near Sutton-Colfield. Warmſandale, Derbyſhire, in the High-Peak. Warmſworth, Yorkſ. near Duncaſter. Warmwell, Dorſetſhire,
SE. of Dorcheſter, near Winfrith. Warne, a river of Northumberland, which runs into the German Ocean, about 4 miles S. from Holy Iſland. Warnborough, N. and S. Hampſhire, SE. of Baſingſtoke.
Warnell, Cumberland, between Irby and Inglewood-Foreſt.

WARNEMUNDE, a town of Mecklenburg, in Lower Saxony. It is ſituated at

at the mouth of the river Warne, where veſſels bound to Roſtock pay a toll, which formerly amounted to 80,000 rix-dollars, now to about 6000, 9 miles N. of Roſtock.

WARNETON, a town of Flanders, ſituated on the Lyſs, 5 miles S. of Ypres. It was ceded, with its territory, in 1715, to the States General, as a barrier town.

Warnford, Hants, NE. of Biſhop's-Waltham. Warnford, Northumb. W. of Sunderland. Warngoch-Chapel, Monm. NE. of Abergavenny. Warnham, Suſſex, NW. of Horſham.

WARNITZ, a town of Beſſarabia, near Bender.

Warpſtow, Corn. near Treneglos. Warren, a river in Shropſ. which runs into the Onney, a little below Hardwick. Warren, Somerſ. near Langport. Warren, Somerſ. between Biſhop's Chew and Chedder.

WARREN, a town of N. America, in Rhode Iſland.

Warrenſtown, in Meath, Leinſter.

Warrenton, NE. of Worceſter. Warrington, Bucks, in Oulney pariſh. Warrington, Cornwall, near Launceſton.

*WARRINGTON, a large, neat, populous, and rich, though ancient built town of Lancaſhire, with large manufactories of ſail-cloth, ſacking, huckabacks, pins, &c. Glaſs-houſes and copper-ſmelting furnaces are likewiſe eſtabliſhed here; and the cotton trade is now gaining ground. Large quantities of potatoes are annually exported. It is ſeated on the Merſey, over which it has a fine ſtone bridge, the laſt on this river, leading into Cheſhire, on the great road from London to Carliſle, 18 miles E. of Liverpool, and 183 NNW. of London. A conſiderable market on Wedneſday for fleſh, corn, cattle, potatoes, and all ſorts of fiſh. Alſo a particular market once a week for huckabacks.

WARSAW, a large city of Poland, the capital of that country, and of the province of Maſovia. It is ſurrounded by a moat and double wall, and conſiſts of the Old and New Town; and two ſuburbs, Kraka and Praga. The general diets, provincial aſſembly, and court of judicature, were held here. This city and its ſuburbs occupy a vaſt extent of ground, and are ſuppoſed to contain between 60 and 70,000 inhabitants, among whom are a great number of foreigners. The whole has a melancholy appearance, exhibiting the ſtrong contraſt of wealth and poverty, luxury and diſtreſs, which pervades every part of this unhappy country. The ſtreets are ſpacious, but ill paved; the churches and public buildings are large and magnificent; the palaces of the nobility are numerous and ſplendid; but the greateſt part of the houſes, particularly in the ſuburbs, are mean and ill-conſtructed wooden hovels. In its laſt ſiege by the Ruſſians, in 1794, it is computed that 30,000 Poles periſhed either by the ſword, or in the flames; the ſuburb of Praga having been ſet on fire, and nearly the whole of it reduced to aſhes by the mercileſs Ruſſians, ten hours after all reſiſtance had ceaſed. It is now ſubject to Pruſſia, and is ſituated on the Viſtula, which is about as broad here as the Thames at Weſtminſter, but very ſhallow in ſummer. Lat. 52. 14. N. lon. 21. 6. E.

Warſborough, Yorkſ. W. Riding, a mile from Stainborough. Warſdale, Cumb. N. of Eſkdale. Warſlow, Staffordſ. between Sheen and Butterton. Warſop, Notting. between Worklop and Mansfield.

WARTA, a town of Poland, in the palatinate of Siradia, ſituated on a river of the ſame name, which runs into the Oder. Alſo a town of Neiſſe, in Sileſia.

WARTENBURG, a town of Ermeland, in Pruſſia; a town in the archdoctry of Auſtria; a town and lordſhip, ſurrounded by the principality of Oels, in Sileſia; a caſtle and imperial county, the lands of which lie in detached parts in the circle of Upper Rhine; the caſtle is 6 miles NE. of Lautern; a town of Boleſlaw, in Bohemia; and a town of Bavaria, ſituated on the Strong, 24 miles NE. of Munich.

Warter Priory, Yorkſhire, NE. of Pocklington. Warthel, NE. of York. Warley-Hall, Staffordſhire, near Birmingham. Wartling, Suſſex, near Hurſt Monceux. Wartnaby, Leiceſterſhire, SE. of Dalby on the Would. Warton, near the Weever, SE. of Cheſter. Warton, Cumberl. N. of Ireby. Warton, Hereſ. near Leominſter. Warton, Lancaſ. in Kirkham pariſh, near the mouth of the Ribble, on a lake called Ware, and at the foot of a hill called Warton Cragg. Though obſcure, it is an agreeable little town, with a neat church, and a good grammar ſchool and library. Warton, Lancaſ. near the influx of the Decker, into the Ken ſands. Warton, Lincolnſhire, NE. of Gainſborough. Warton, Northumb. W. of Rothbury. Warton, Yorkſ. near Wilton and Yarkwould. Wartrew, Lancaſhire, near Liverpool. Warwick, Cumberland, NE. of Carliſle, and a little N. of Wetherall. It has a ſtone bridge over the Eden.

*WARWICK, called by the Britons CAER GUARVIC, and CAER LEGI, a fine,

, large, neat, and ancient town of War-kſhire, the capital of the county. Here caſtle, formerly the ſeat of the earls of arwick, which ſtands on a rock, 40 feet her than the river, but even with the n on the N. ſide. From its terrace, re is a proſpect of a beautiful country ond the Avon, conſiſting of rich mea-s, tall groves, ſpacious parks, &c. arwick has, at preſent, only 2 pariſh urches, though it formerly had 6, and many monaſteries. The houſes are in ieral well built, and the ſtreets, which ſpacious and regular, all meet in the ıtre of the town. At each end of the ncipal one is an ancient gate. It is ɔrned with a good free-ſchool and a m-houſe of free-ſtone, ſupported by lars, in which the aſſizes and quarter ſions are held; has a good trade in malt, d is ſituated upon a rocky eminence, ır the river Avon, with a deſcent from :very way, which always keeps it clean, miles SSW. of Coventry, and 93 NW. of London. Within a mile of it, the Avon, is Guy's, or as ſome call it, ibb's Cliff, (a pretty retired cell, among oves and ſprings) where Guy Earl of arwick, of fabulous, or at leaſt obſcure ſtory, is ſaid to have lived a hermit, af-r his military exploits abroad. Markets Wedneſday and Saturday.

WARWICK, a town of Virginia, 6 iles S. of Richmond; another town of irginia, 65 miles ESE. of Richmond; d a town in Rhode Iſland, 7 miles S. of rovidence.

WARWICKSHIRE, a county of Eng-nd, bounded at its northern extremity r a point of Derbyſhire, on the NW. by affordſhire, on the NE. by Leiceſter-ire, on the W. by Worceſterſhire, on e E. by Northamptonſhire, and on the S. Glouceſterſhire and Oxfordſhire. Its tent from N. to S. is about 47 miles, id about 35 from E. to W. where wideſt. is the moſt central county in the king-m, and ſomewhat of an oval form, is ivided into 4 hundreds and 1 liberty, and ntains 1 city, 13 market towns, 158 pa-ſhes, 330 villages, about 24,000 houſes, d 180,000 inhabitants. The air is mild, leaſant, and healthy, and the more ſo, nce the woodlands have been thinned by e great conſumption of wood in the iron orks; the woodlands being now con-rted to tillage and paſture. The north-n part of the county, called the Wood-nds, is divided from the S. called the ldon, by the river Avon; but the ſoil f both is rich. This county produces rn, malt, wood, wool, cheeſe, coal, and lime-ſtone. Mr. Wedge, in his view of the agriculture of this county, eſtimates the whole at 618,000 acres, of which only about 154,530 are conſtantly under a ſucceſſive round of tillage or graſs-ſeeds. The remaining 469,470 acres he ſuppoſes to conſiſt of gardens, about 4000 acres; of meadows, 82,000 acres; of paſture and feeding land, 150,000 acres; of woods, canals, rivers, &c. 50,000 acres; of open field-land, 57,000 acres; and of waſte-lands and roads, 126,470 acres. The principal rivers are the Avon, Tame, and Arrow. The canals that paſs through this county are, one from the Wedneſbury and Dudley coal and lime works, to Birmingham, and from thence to Fazeley and Fradley Heath, to join the Staffordſhire Grand Trunk, extending from Fazeley to Atherſtone, Bedworth, and Coventry; one reaching from that at Longford to Braunſton and Oxford; one from Birmingham to Worceſter; one branching out of the Worceſter, one way to Dudley, &c. and the other to Stratford-upon-Avon; and one from Birmingham to Warwick. Warwick is the county town.

WASA, a ſea-port town of Sweden, in Finland, ſituated on the E. coaſt of the Gulf of Bothnia, 150 miles N. of Abo.

Waſdale, Yorkſ. near Kirby in Cleveland. Waſdale, Cumberland, at the foot of Copland Fells, 2 miles N. of Eſkdale. Waſh, a river in Rutland, which runs into the Welland, above Stamford.

WASH-A-CUM-MOW, or CLEAR WATER LAKE, in N. America, in lat. 56 N. and lon. 108. 20. W. It is about 30 miles in length, and from 5 to 10 in breadth.

Waſhborn, Great, Glouceſterſ. 7 miles NNE. of Tewkeſbury. Waſhbrook, a river in Yorkſhire, which runs into the Wharfe, near Otley. Waſhbrook, Glouceſ. a hamlet in the pariſh of Winſton. Waſhbrook, Suffolk, 3 miles W. of Ipſwich. Waſhenburg, near Lincoln, S. of the Witham.

WASHES, a large but ſhallow eſtuary, of Lincolnſhire and Norfolk, which is under water when the tide is in, and paſſable by travellers when the tide is out, though not without ſome danger to ſtrangers who are unacquainted with the quick-ſands. King John loſt his baggage here in going to Lincolnſhire. Particular parts of this inlet, which runs into the land, have particular names, ſuch as Foſs-dyke Waſh, below Spalding; Croſs Key's Waſh, below Wiſbeach, at the mouth of the Nen, &c. this laſt is the immediate boundary between the two counties.

Waſhfield,

Waſtfield, Devonſhire, near Tiverton. Waſtford. Devonſ. in Wemworthy parith, on a brook that runs into the Taw. Waſtford, Yorkſ. E. of Knaresborough, on the ſame river. Waſhingley, Huntingdonſ. near Stilton. Waſhington, Derbyſhire, in Scarſdale, W. of Altreton. Waſhington, Durham, on the Wear, W. of Sunderland, and 8 miles N. of Durham. Waſhington, Suſſex, NW. of Stening.

WASHINGTON, the name of ſeveral counties in the United States of N. America; namely, in Rhode Iſland; in New York, of which Salem is the capital; in the SW. corner of Pennſylvania, its capital of the ſame name, 20 miles SSW. of Pittsburg, is conſiderable for a variety of manufactures; in Maryland; in Virginia; in N. Carolina; in S. Carolina; in the diſtrict of Charleſton; and in Georgia, the capital of which is Golphinton; alſo a town in Kentucky, ſituated on the Ohio, 66 miles ENE. of Frankfort.

WASHINGTON, a town of N. Carolina, formerly called Bath; it is ſeated on the N. ſide of the river Tar, with a good harbour, 20 miles NW. of Newbern.

WASHINGTON, a town of N. America, in Georgia, and county of Wilkes. Near it is a medicinal ſpring, which riſes from a hollow tree, the inſide of which is covered with a coat of nitre, an inch thick; and the leaves around the ſpring are incruſted with a ſubſtance as white as ſnow. The waters have been found beneficial in rheumatic caſes, and are ſaid to be ſo in all diſorders ariſing from humours in the blood. It is 13 miles SW. of Peterſburgh.

WASHINGTON, a city of N. America, now building for the metropolis of the United States. It is ſeated at the junction of the rivers Potomac and the Eaſtern Branch, extending about 4 miles up each, including a tract of territory ſcarcely to be exceeded, in point of convenience, ſalubrity, and beauty, by any in the world. This territory, which is called Columbia, lies partly in the ſtate of Virginia, and partly in that of Maryland, and was ceded by thoſe two ſtates to the United States of America, and by them eſtabliſhed to be the ſeat of government, after the year 1800. The plan combines not only convenience, regularity, elegance of proſpect, and a free circulation of air, but every thing grand and beautiful that can be introduced into a city. It is divided into ſquares or grand diviſions, by ſtreets running due N. and S. and E. and W. which form the ground work of the plan. However, from the capitol, the preſident's houſe, and ſome of the important parts in the city, run diagonal ſtreets, from one material object to another, which not only produce a variety of fine proſpects, but remove the inſipid tameneſs which renders ſome other great cities unpleaſing. They were deviſed to connect the ſeparate and moſt diſtant objects with the principal, and to preſerve through the whole a reciprocity of ſight. Theſe great leading ſtreets are all 160 feet wide, including a pavement of 10 feet, and a gravel walk of 30 feet planted with trees on each ſide, which will leave 80 feet of paved ſtreet for carriages. The reſt of the ſtreets are, in general, 110 feet wide, with a few only 90 feet, except North, South, and Eaſt Capitol Streets, which are 160 feet. The diagonal ſtreets are named after the reſpective ſtates compoſing the Union, while thoſe running N. and S. are, from the capitol eaſtward, named, Eaſt Firſt Street, Eaſt Second Street, &c. and thoſe W. of it are, in the ſame manner, called Weſt Firſt Street, Weſt Second Street, &c. Thoſe running E. and W. are from the capitol northward named, North A Street, North B Street, &c. and thoſe S. of it are called S. A Street, South B Street, &c. The ſquares, or diviſions of the city, amount to 1150. The rectangular ſquares generally contain from 3 to 6 acres, and are divided into lots of from 40 to 80 feet in front, and their depth, from about 110 to 300 feet, according to the ſize of the ſquare. The irregular diviſions produced by the diagonal ſtreets are ſome of them ſmall, but generally in valuable ſituations. Their acute points are all to be cut off at 40 feet, ſo that no houſe in the city will have an acute corner. All the houſes muſt be of brick or ſtone. The area for the capitol (or houſe for the legiſlative bodies) is ſituated upon the moſt beautiful eminence in the city, about a mile from the Eaſtern Branch, and not much more from the Potomac, commanding a full view of the city, as well as a conſiderable extent of the country around. The preſident's houſe will ſtand upon a riſing ground, not far from the banks of the Potomac, affording a fine water proſpect, with a commanding view of the capitol, and ſome other material parts of the city. Due S. from the preſident's houſe, and due W. from the capitol, run two great pleaſure parks, or malls, which interſect and terminate upon the banks of the Potomac, and are to be ornamented at the ſides by a variety of elegant buildings, houſes for foreign miniſters, &c. Interſperſed through the city, where the moſt material ſtreets cross ross each other, are a variety of open areas, formed in various regular figures, which in great cities are extremely useful and ornamental. Fifteen of the best of these areas are to be appropriated to the different states composing the Union; not only to bear their respective names, but as proper places for them to erect statues, obelisks or columns, to the memory of their favourite eminent men. Upon a small eminence, where a line due W. from the capitol, and due S. from the president's house, would intersect, is to be erected an equestrian statue of General Washington, late president of the United States. At the junction of the rivers, a fort is to be erected, to include an arsenal and magazines. Places are marked out for other public buildings, as a marine hospital, with its gardens; a general exchange, and its public walks; a city hall, churches, colleges, market-houses, theatres, &c. The president of the United States, in locating the seat of the city, prevailed upon the proprietors of the soil to cede a certain portion of the lots in every situation, to be sold by his direction, and the proceeds to be solely applied to the public buildings, and other works of public utility within the city. This grant will produce about 15,000 lots, and will be sufficient not only to erect the public buildings, but to dig a canal, conduct water through the city, and to pave and light the streets, which will save a heavy tax that arises in other cities, and consequently render the lots considerably more valuable. The Eastern Branch of the Potomac is one of the safest and most commodious harbours in America, being sufficiently deep for the largest ships, for about [illegible] miles above its junction with the Potomac, while the channel lies close along the edge of the city, and is abundantly capacious. This river contains 30 and 35 feet to near the upper end of the city, where it is 18 and 20 feet deep. The city, being situated upon the great post road, exactly equidistant from the northern and southern extremities of the Union, and nearly so from the Atlantic Ocean to the river Ohio, upon the best navigation, and in the midst of the richest commercial territory in America, commanding the most extensive internal resources, is by far the most eligible situation for the residence of congress; and it is now pressing forward, by the public-spirited enterprise, not only of the people of the United States, but also of foreigners. The inland navigation of the Potomac is so far advanced, that craft loaded with produce, now come down that river and its several branches; from upward of 180 miles to the great falls, which are within 14 miles of the city. The canals at the great and little falls, with their locks, are now completed; the navigation is entirely opened between the water and the head branches of the Potomac, which will produce a communication by water between the city of Washington and the interior parts of Virginia and Maryland, by means of the Potomac, the Shannandoah, the South Branch, Opequan, Cape Capon, Patterson's Creek, Conoochegue, and Monacy, for upward of 800 miles, through one of the most healthy, pleasant, and fertile regions in America, producing in vast abundance, tobacco of superior quality, hemp, Indian corn, wheat, and other small grain, with fruit and vegetables peculiar to America, in vast abundance. The lands upon the Potomac, above the city of Washington, all around it, and for 60 miles below, are high and dry, abounding with innumerable springs of excellent water, and well covered with large timber of various kinds. A few miles below the city, upon the banks of the Potomac, are inexhaustible mountains of excellent free-stone, of the white and red Portland kinds, of which the public edifices in the city are now building. Above the city also, upon the banks of the river, are immense quantities of excellent coal, lime-stone, and marble, with blue slate of the best quality. The Tyber, which is the principal stream that passes through the city, is to be collected in a grand reservoir, beside the capitol, whence it will be carried in pipes to different parts of the city; while its surplus water will fall down in beautiful cascades through the public gardens west of the capitol, into a canal. The plan of this city was formed by Major l'Enfant. Most of the streets were marked out, and the squares divided into lots, in 1792, since which time, some thousands of workmen have been constantly employed. It is 100 miles SW. of Philadelphia. Lat. 38. 53. N. lon. 77. 15. W.

WASSAB, or WARSHABS, a country of Africa, on the Gold Coast. The soil is barren, but abounds in gold.

WASSAW, or WASHAW, GREAT and LITTLE, (this last lies to the SW. of Great Washaw) islands on the E. coast of Georgia, in N. America. The former is about 16 miles in circumference. Lat. 32. 51. N.

Wasing, Berkshire, near Aldermaston. Wasperton, Warw. on the Avon, a little below Barford. Wassal Hill, Worcesters.

a mile and a half from the Severn. It is noted for the remains of a Roman ſtation.

Weſtland, Yorkſhire, in Holderneſs, near Hornſey.

WASSENBURG, a town of Juliers, ſituated on the Ruhr, 9 miles ESE. of Ruremonde.

WASSERBURG, a town of Upper Bavaria, trading in ſalt; and a town and lordſhip of Suabia, ſituated on a point of land, which projects into the lake of Conſtance, 1 mile N. of Buchorn.

WASSIGNY, a town in the dept. of the Aiſne, 16 miles NW. of Vervins.

Waſt, Glouc. a hamlet in Hawkeſbury.

Waſtal-Foot, and Waſtal-Head, Weſtmorl. in the Borbeck, S. of Raſgill and Shap. It has a ſpa-water like that at Harrowgate. Waſts, the name of ſeveral places in Northumberland, eſpecially in Readſdale, and N. Tinedale, and the adjacent mountains.

WASUNGEN, a town of Henneburg, in Franconia, ſituated on the Werra, 4 miles SW. of Schmalkalden.

WATCHET, an ancient town of Somerſetſhire, on the Briſtol Channel, with a harbour, and a few ſmall coaſting veſſels, which ſupply the glaſs-houſes at Briſtol with the aſhes of ſea-weed, of which abundance is burnt here for that purpoſe. The inhabitants fetch vaſt heaps of pebble from the coaſt, and burn it into lime for building; no cement being more durable for maſonry that is to lie under water, where it grows as hard as marble. They alſo export lime-ſtone and alabaſter, great quantities of which fall down the cliffs, by the waſhing of the ſea, and gather great plenty of the lichen marinus, or ſea-liverwort, on the rocky coaſt and cliffs, at low water, which they ſend to diſtant parts of the country. It contains about 140 houſes, and is 14 miles NNW. of Bridgewater, and 153 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

Watchfield, Berks, near Shrivenham.

WATERBURG, a town of Connecticut, 20 miles WSW. of Hartford.

WATEREE, a river in S. Carolina, which runs into the Cangaree, about 5 miles N. of Amelia.

WATEEHOO, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, about 6 miles long and 4 broad, diſcovered by Captain Cook in 1777; it is a beautiful ſpot, with a ſurface compoſed of hills and plains, and covered with verdure. The ſoil, in ſome parts, is light and ſandy; but, farther up the country, a reddiſh caſt was ſeen on the riſing grounds, where the iſlanders build their houſes, 2 or 3 of which were perceived by glaſſes to be long and ſpacious. The manners of the people of this iſland, their general habits of life, method of treating ſtrangers, language, religious ceremonies, &c. greatly reſemble thoſe that prevail at Otaheite. The language ſpoken here was uſually well underſtood by Omai, and by two New Zealanders. Lat. 20. 1. S. lon. 15. 15. W.

Water-Lath, Cumberl. S. of Keſwick.

Water, Cumberl. near Langholm.

Water-Beach, Camb. W. of Newmarket, and 6 miles from Cambridge.

Watercumb, Dorſetſ. a mile N. of Wormwell.

Water-Crook, Weſtmorl. has its name from a remarkable curve of the Ken, a little below Kendal. Near it, on the ſame ſide of the river, are the banks and ditches of an old fort, ſuppoſed to have been Roman, from the coins, broken altars, and other antiquities that have been found here, at different times.

Waterden, Norf. NE. of Houghton-Hall.

Water Eaton, Oxf. on the Charwell, SW. of Iſlip.

Waterfall, Staff. S. of Grindon, where the river Hampſe, or Hans, after a courſe of 7 or 8 miles from its ſpring, falls into the ground, and does not reappear till it enters the river Manifold, about half a mile off.

Waterford, N. of Hertford.

* WATERFORD, a city and ſea-port of Munſter, in Ireland, capital of a county of the ſame name, and containing about 35,000 inhabitants. The ſtreets are narrow, and the air is not very healthy; but it has an excellent harbour, ſituated extremely well for trade, and ſhips of great burden may ride at the quay. It ſtands on the Suir, which is a broad, deep, and rapid river, 5 miles above its junction with the Nore and Barrow. The white glaſs and other manufactures, are in a flouriſhing ſtate. Upwards of 70 ſail of ſhipping are employed in the Newfoundland trade. For many weeks together, upwards of 3000 hogs are killed weekly; and of butter, there have been exported from 60 to 70,000 caſks per annum; beſides which, the commerce in beef, corn, linen, &c. with England and other countries, is very conſiderable. The quay is above half a mile in length, and of a conſiderable breadth. Packet boats ſail now regularly between this port and Milford-Haven. It is 8 miles N. of St. George's Channel, and 75 S. by W. of Dublin. Lat. 52. 18. N. lon. 7. 8. W.

WATERFORD, a county of Ireland, about 40 miles in length, and from 8 to 24 in breadth; bounded on the S. by St. George's Channel; on the W. by Cork and a part of Tipperary; on the N. by the he river Suir, which ſeparates it from Tipperary and Kilkenny; and on the E. by Waterford Haven, which parts it from Wexford. It contains 34 pariſhes, about 18,796 houſes, and 110,000 inhabitants; and though in general mountainous, with here and there frightful rocks and precipices, is a fine country, fertile, pleaſant, and rich. Among the mountains are 4 conſiderable loughs or lakes, in which are found trout and char. On the ſummits of moſt of them (which are in ſome parts 720 yards above the level of the ſea) are large heaps of ſtones of great ſize, ſuppoſed to be the ruins of ſome buildings, but without the intervention of mortar or cement.

Waterfriſton, Yorkſ. W. Riding, on the Are, N. of Pontefract. Watergall, Warwickſ. near Itchington.

Watergraſs-Hill, in Cork, Munſter.

Waterhead, Devonſhire, a creek near Dartmouth. Waterleigh, Glouceſterſhire, in Nibley pariſh. Waterman's Manor, Eſſex, near Matching. Water Oakley, Berks, near Bray. Water Orton, Warwickſhire, on the Tame, over which it has a ſtone bridge, in the road from Sutton to Coleſhill, in Aſton pariſh. Waterparry, Oxfordſ. NE. of Whatley.

WATERSAY, one of the Weſtern Iſlands of Scotland, one mile S. of St. Uiſt. It is about 3 miles long and 1 broad.

Waterſham, Yorkſhire, W. Riding, on the Wharfe, SW. of Wetherby. Waterſtock, Oxfordſ. NE. of Whatley-Bridge, over the Thames. Waterſupton, Shropſ. near the Teme, SW. of Newport. Waterton-Hall, Yorkſ. SE. of Wakefield. Water-Yate, Northumberland, NW. of Simondburn. Watford, Dorſetſ. a mile and a half from Bridport, in Netherby pariſh. Watford, Northamptonſhire, W. of Daventry. Watford, Somerſetſhire, NE. of Taunton.

*WATFORD, a town of Hertfordſhire, conſiſting chiefly of one long ſtreet, which in the winter is extremely dirty, from the water of two ſtreams at the entrance of the town, which is often ſo ſwelled by floods as to be impaſſable. Near it the Watling-ſtreet croſſes its river to St. Alban's. It had anciently a ford at the S. end of the town, and is ſeated on the river Coln, 7 miles S. by W. of St. Alban's, and 14 NW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Wath, Lincolnſhire, N. of Ludburgh. Wath, Yorkſ. near Rippon. Wath-upon-Don, Yorkſ. N. of Rotherham. In a neighbouring wood are plain marks of the Roman way called Ikenild Street. Wathermillock, Cumberland, in Grayſtock pariſh. Wathinpool, Cumberland, in Aikton pariſh. Watborp, Northamptonſ. near Stamford-Baron, a neglected ſeat of the Earl of Exeter, about a mile W. of Burleigh Houſe. Watland, Weſtmorland, on the Ken, near Kendal. Watlas, Yorkſ. N. of Maſham. Watlesborough, SW. of Shrewſbury. Watlesfield, Whattisfield, or Watchfield, Suffolk, SW. of Botteſdale.

WATLING-STREET, one of the Pretorian, or Conſular highways, made by the Romans, for the march of their armies, of large ſtakes and leſſer wood between them, to keep up the earth and ſtones, called by the Saxons wattles. It began at Dover, ran to St. Alban's, Dunſtable, Towceſter, Atherſton, and Shrewſbury, and ended at Cardigan in Wales. It is yet very firm, in ſome counties, for ſeveral miles, eſpecially in Shropſhire, Staffordſhire, and Warwickſhire; and is called by the inhabitants, in different parts, by the names of Street-Way, High-Dike, High-Ridge, Forty-foot-Way, and Ridge-Way.

Watling-Street, Shropſhire, near Wellington, on the Roman way of that name. Watlington, Norfolk, near Sechy. Watlington, Suſſex, N. of Battel.

WATLINGTON, a town in Oxfordſhire, which, with the 4 hamlets that belong to it, contains about 260 houſes. It is ſeated on a ſmall brook, among the Chiltern Hills, 24 miles SE. of Oxford, and 46 NNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Watringbury, Kent, 2 miles S. of Weſt Malling.

WATSON, a town of Virginia, 35 miles SW. of Richmond.

Watſtanwell, Derbyſhire, W. of Alfreton. Wattal, Nottinghamſ. near Greyſley-Caſtle.

WATTEN, a town in the department of the North, ſeated on the river Aa, 5 miles N. of St. Omer's.

Watteſham, Suffolk, NE. of Bildeſton. Wattle-Bridge, in Fermanagh, Ulſter. Wattleſbury, 7 miles W. of Shrewſbury.

WATTON, a town of Norfolk, ſituated on the edge of that open part of the country which is called Filand, 18 miles SSW. of Norwich, and 90 NNE. of London. It is a great thoroughfare from Lynn, Downham, Thetford, Diſs, &c. Great quantities of butter are ſent hence to Downham bridge; from whence the factors ſend it to London by water. Market on Wedneſday.

Watton-Abbey, Yorkſ. E. Riding, near Baynton. Watton-Wood-Hall, or at Stone, 4 miles N. of Hertford.

WATTS, a town of Georgia, in N. America, ſituated in lat. 34. 22. N. and lon. 86. 25. W.

Wavendon, Bucks, near Newport. Waveney, a river of Suffolk, which, for a ſpace, ſeparates this county from Norfolk; it runs by Scole, Bellingford, Harleſton, Bungay, Beccles, and St. Olave's Marſhes, and meeting the Yare and Bure, near Burgh Caſtle, they join and empty themſelves into the ocean, at Yarmouth fort. It is navigable from Bungay. Waver, a river in Cumberland, which runs into the Wampull, below Rabycoat.

WAVEREN, a town of Brabant, ſituated on the Dyle, 12 miles S. of Louvain. It is much decayed by war and accidental fires.

Waverley Abbey, Surry, SE. of Farnham, near the river Wey, was the firſt Chriſtian abbey in England, of which, at preſent, only part of the S. aiſle remains, with the abbey walls, which are chiefly of rag-ſtones, and 10 feet high. Part of the refectory, dormitory, and cloyſters, are alſo ſtanding. Its large, handſome chapel is converted to a ſtable. Waverton, SE. of Cheſter. Waverton, Cumberland, in Brumfield pariſh. Waverton, Warwickſ. NE. of Pokeſworth. Wawbottle, Northumb. on the Picts Wall, NW. of Newcaſtle. Warburthwaite, Cumberland, near Ravenglaſs.

WATERLAND, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean. Lat. 14. 45. S. lon. 144. 10. W.

Wawen's-Moor, Warwickſhire, NE. of Coughton. Waxham, Norfolk, E. of Hickling. Waxham, Yorkſ. on the coaſt of Holderneſs. Waybergthwaite, Cumberland, near Bootle, Wayborn, Norfolk, E. of Clay. From this place to Cromer, the ſhore is ſo flat, that in ſome places the tide ebbs out near 2 miles. Waybred, Suffolk, near the Waveney, SW. of Harleſton in Norfolk. Wayford, Somerſetſ. SW. of Crewkern. Wayland-Wood, Norfolk, on the left hand, between Watton and Merton; is commonly called Wailing-Wood, from a tradition of its being the place where the two children, celebrated in the pathetic old ballad of the Babes in the Wood, were murdered by their uncle. Wayleigh, Cheſhire, SE. of Stopford. Waymer Caſtle, Herts, near Biſhop's-Stortford. Waynards, Heref. NW. of Pembridge.

WAYNE, a county of N. Carolina.

WAYNSBOROUGH, a town of Georgia, in N. America, 20 miles SW. of Auguſta.

Wayneſhope, Northumb. in Thornton manor, and Tynedale ward. Waysbury, Bucks, a mile W. of Staines. Wayton, Devonſ. on the river Dart, W. of Torbay. Waytown, Dorſetſ. a mile S. of Netherbury. Weald of Suſſex and Kent, a woody tract on the S. parts of them, extending from Winchelſea to the top of Riverhill towards Tunbridge; a perfect garden in the ſummer, but unpleaſant and ſwampy in the winter. Weald Harrow, Middleſex, at the foot of the hill, towards Bushy-Heath. Weald, North, Eſſex, near Epping, contiguous to Bovinger. Weald, South, Eſſex, W. of Brentwood. Weapham, Suſſex, SW. of Loxwood. Wearham, Norfolk, NW. of Stoke. The remains of its Benedictine priory, which are of free-ſtone, and ſuppoſed to have been the chapel, are converted to a farm-houſe.

WEAR, a river in the county of Durham, which riſes in the W. part, and takes its courſe along a fine well-wooded valley, called Weardale, (abounding with lead, iron, and coals) by Stanhope, Walſingham, Auckland, Binchester, Brancpeth, and Durham city, to the German Ocean, below Sunderland.

Wearmouth, Biſhop, Durham, to the SW. of Sunderland. It has a manufactory of ſail-cloth. Wearmouth, Durham, at the N. mouth of the Wear, oppoſite Sunderland. It is alſo called Monk-Wearmouth, becauſe, before the diſſolution, it belonged to the monks. Weary End, Herefordſ. SW. of Roſs. Weary Hall, Cumberl. near Egremont. Weaſam, Lanc. in Amounderneſs. Weaver, Devonſhire, near Columpton. Wechdew, Northamp. SE. of Towceſter. Weddington, Warwickſ. E. of the Anker, a mile above Caldecote. Weddinghall, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Wedgnock, Warwickſ. S. of Kenilworth. Its ſpacious park is the oldeſt in England, next to that at Woodſtock. Wedgwood, or Watwood, Staffordſ. NW. of Eccleſhall. Wednore, Somerſetſ. 5 miles S. of Axbridge. Wednesbury, Weedsbury, or Wedgebury, Staffordſhire, on the Tame, near Darlaſton, and 8 miles NW. of Birmingham. It has manufactures of all ſorts of heavy tools, as hammers, axes, &c. with nails and horſe ſhoes, made of a ſort of iron ore, called blood-metal. It is ſituated in the midſt of coal-mines, which produce an excellent ſort of pit-coal, preferred by ſome before Newcaſtle-coal. Wednesfield, Staffordſhire, between Bloxwich and Wolverhampton. Weedon, Bucks, 2 miles from Aylesbury. Weedon-Beck, Northamptonſ. SE. of Daventry, near the ſource of the Nen. Weedon-Pinckney, St. Leys, and Wyſton, Northamptonſ.

forthamptonſ. W. and SW. of Towceſter. Week, Hants, NE. of Andover. Week, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Week, Somerſetſ. NW. of Milborn Port. Week, Somerſetſ. SE. of Stanton-Drew. Week Lawrence, Somerſetſhire, NW. of Churchill. Weekly, Northamptonſhire, NE. of Rothwell. Week, St. Mary's, Cornwall, SW. of Stratton. Weeping Croſs, SE. of Stafford.

WEERT, a town of Liege, 10 miles W. of Ruremond. The allies took it in 1702, when they deſtroyed the caſtle.

Weethly, Warwickſ. SW. of Aulceſter. Weeton, Lancaſhire, NW. of Kirkham, in Amounderneſs. Weeton, Yorkſhire, E. of Otley. Weetwood Bank, Northumberland, a mile NE. of Wooller. Weever, Cheſhire, S. of Vale-Royal.

WEEVER, a river which riſes in the N. part of Shropſ. runs by Namptwich croſs Cheſhire, and receiving the Dane at Northwich, enters the eſtuary of the Merſey. It is navigable to ſome miles above Northwich.

Weford, Staffordſhire, S. of Lichfield. It communicates with all the late inland navigations.

WEIBSTADT, a town of Spire, circle of Upper Rhine, 20 miles SE. of Heidelburg.

WEICHTERBACH, a town of Iſenburg, in the circle of Upper Rhine. It is ſituated on the Kinzig, 23 miles E. of Frankfort on the Maine.

WEIDEN, a town of Sulſbach, in Bavaria, 17 miles NE. of Sulſbach.

Weighton, Yorkſhire, 7 miles W. of Wetherby.

WEIGHTON-MARKET, a ſmall town in the E. Riding of Yorkſhire, 18 miles ESE. of York. Market on Wedneſday.

WEIL, (called alſo WEILERSTADT, STADTWEIL, or WEIL-DIE-STADT) an imperial town of Wirtemburg.

WEILBURG, a town, capital of a county in the circle of Upper Rhine, belonging to the houſe of Naſſau Weilburg. In the prince's palace are very elegant apartments, and near it are fine gardens, a large menagerie, a chapel, &c. All the roads near the town lie in a direct line, and are planted on both ſides with rows of trees. It is ſituated on an eminence, on or near the Lahn, over which it has a bridge of ſtone, 29 miles N. of Mentz.

WEILHEIM, a town of Wirtemburg; and a town of Bavaria.

WEIMAR, a town, capital of a principality in Thuringia, on both ſides of the river Ilm, with a palace, where the duke reſides. This palace contains, among other things, a ſpacious hall, a valuable library, and a gallery of paintings. It is 46 miles SSW. of Leipſic.

WEINGARTIN, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine; and a princely abbey, in the town of Altorf, in Suabia.

WEINHEIM, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine, in the Bergſtraſſe, famous for its wine. It is 8 miles NE. of Manheim.

WEINSBERG, a town of Wirtemburg, in Suabia, ſituated in a valley, famous for wine, 5 miles NE. of Heilbronn.

WEISELMUNDE, a fortreſs of Weſt Pruſſia, on the Viſtula, below Dantzick.

WEISSEMBURG. See WISSEMBURG.

WEISSEMBURG, an imperial town of Franconia, 48 miles W. of Ratiſbon.

WEISSEMBURG, a town of Erzgeburg, in Upper Saxony.

WEISSEMBURG, or ALBA JULIA, KARLSBURG, or FEJERVAR, a conſiderable town, with a univerſity, capital of a diſtrict of Tranſylvania. It is the ſee of a biſhop, and is ſituated on the river Maros, 14 miles NE. of Belgrade.

WEISSEMBURG, STULWEISSEMBURG, or SZEKES FEJERVAR, a royal free town of Hungary, ſituated in a marſhy ground, on the river Sarwitz, 24 miles W. of Buda. It was formerly the place of coronation of their kings, and generally of their interment. At preſent, the town is extremely decayed, and its beſt houſes are gone to ruin.

WEISSENFELS, a town of Thuringia, 18 miles WSW. of Leipſic. The prince of Saxe Weiſſenfels, a branch of the houſe of Saxony, ordinarily reſides in a citadel above the town, called Auguſtuſberg.

WEISSENSEE, a town of Upper Saxony, ſituated in the centre of Thuringia, between what formerly conſtituted 2 inland lakes, but which have both been drained and converted into arable and meadow ground. It is 14 miles N. of Erfurt.

WELAU, a town of Smaland, in Pruſſia, 22 miles ENE. of Koningſberg. It is chiefly remarkable for the treaty concluded here with Poland, Sept. 19, 1657, when the elector, Frederick William, was inveſted with the ſovereinty of Ducal Pruſſia.

Welbeck Abbey, Nottingh. a mile and a half S. of Worksop. Near it is a park, finely wooded, and well ſtored with deer. Welbery, Herts, W. of Hitchin. Welbey, Leicel. N. of Melton-Mowbray. Welborn, Lincolnſ. NE. of Beckingham. Welborn, Norfolk, SE. of Eaſt Dereham. Welborn, Yorkſ. SW. of New Malton. Welborn, Yorkſ. near Kirby-Moreſide. Welbury, Yorkſ. N. Riding, between Northallerton and Yarum. Welby, Lincolnſhire, NE. of Grantham. Welcomb, or Woolacomb, Devonſhire, S. of Hartland Point. Welcomb, Warwickſ. in a valley, by Stratford-upon-Avon. Weld, Eſſex, near Harlow. Weld, Hants, W. of Alton. Weld, Herts, S. of Shenley. Weld, Oxfordſhire, near Bampton. Weldon, Northumberl. SE. of Rothbury.

WELDON, GREAT, a town in Northamptonſhire, with a handſome market-houſe, and a ſeſſions-houſe over it, built of the beſt ſtone. In a corn-field not far from it, was diſcovered, in 1738, a Roman pavement 96 feet long, and 10 broad, within a kind of gallery, 100 Roman feet long in front, ſided by ſeveral rooms, about 30 feet ſquare, in which were ſimilar pavements. The whole ſtructure was a double ſquare, meaſuring 100 feet by 50. On the ſame ſpot were diſcovered a great number of coins of the Lower Empire. A wall has been built round the pavement, and a wooden roof placed over it. It is ſituated in Rockingham-Foreſt, on or near the river Willy, 28 miles NE. of Northampton, and 84 NNW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Weldon, Little, Northampt. near Great Weldon. Wele-Hall, Yorkſ. on the Ouſe, N. of Selby. Welford, Berks, N. of Newbury. Welford, Glouceſterſ. a hamlet in Kempsford pariſh. Welford, Glouceſ. 4 miles S. of Stratford-upon Avon. Welham, Leiceſterſhire, on a river that runs into the Welland, NE. of Harborough. Welham, Yorkſ. a mile S. of New Malton. Well, Kent, the water between Sheppey Iſle and the main land. Well, Kent, near Northfleet. Well, Lincolnſ. S. of Alford. Well, Yorkſ. W. of Maſham. Welland, Devonſhire, NE. of Collumpton, on the ſame river. Welland, Worceſterſhire, SW. of Upton.

WELLAND, a river which riſes in Northamptonſhire, ſeparates that county from Leiceſterſhire, Rutland, and Lincolnſhire, and paſſes by Market-Harborough, Market-Deeping, Spalding, &c. below which laſt place it enters the Waſh. It is navigable by locks from Stamford.

Well-Court, Kent, near Cuckſtone. Well-Court, Kent, near Littlebourn. Well-End, Bucks, NE. of Great Marlow. Welleſbourn, Haſtings and Mountfort, S. of Warwick. Welley, Nottinghamſ. SW. of Tuxford. Well-Hall, or Place, Kent, near Eltham. Welling, Kent, at the foot of Shooter's-Hill, in the Dartford road.

*WELLINGBOROUGH, a large, ancient, populous, and well-inhabited town of Northamptonſhire, very pleaſantly ſeated on a rivulet that empties itſelf into the Nen, near the town, and over which it has an elegant new bridge. 12 miles NE. of Northampton, and 68 N. by W. of London. It has a great trade in corn, and a manufacture of lace; as alſo a very conſiderable one of ſhoes, there being not leſs than 1000 ſhoemakers conſtantly employed here, of whom about 50 are principal manufacturers. It had the name of Wellingborough Forum, from its market (granted by king John at the petition of the monks of Crowland, who were then in poſſeſſion of the manor) and from the many wells or ſprings in and about the town, ſome of which are medicinal, particularly the noted one, called Red Wells. Henrietta Maria, wife to Charles I. lay many weeks here to drink them. A dreadful fire, in July 1738, conſumed about 800 dwelling-houſes, out-houſes, &c. compriſing the greateſt part of the town, in 6 hours time, ſo that very few had time to ſave their effects; but it is ſince re-built in a more handſome manner, of a kind of red ſtone, the foundation of which is chiefly on a red-ſtone rock. Market on Wedneſday.

Wellingham, Norf. S. of Rainham-Hall. Wellingham, Suſſex, N. of Lewes, on the ſame river. Wellingbore, Linc. near Welborn. Wellington, Heref. E. of Webley. Wellington, Suſſex, 2 miles N. of Lewes.

*WELLINGTON, a ſmall town of Shropſhire, the inhabitants of which are chiefly employed in digging for coal, lime, and iron-ſtone. Here is no particular manufactory, but there are two furnaces, worked by a ſteam-engine, one of the largeſt in England. Its church has been lately rebuilt, and is ſupported on caſt-iron-pillars, which gives a lightneſs to the building, and has a very good effect. It is ſeated near Wrekin Hill, 12 miles E. of Shrewſbury, and 152 NW. of London. A pretty good market on Thurſday.

WELLINGTON, a town of Somerſetſhire, with a manufactory of ſerges, druggets, &c. and a conſiderable pottery. It is ſeated on the river Tone, 7 miles SW. of Taunton, on the road to Exeter, and 147 W. by S. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Wellome, or Welbam, Nottingh. near E. Redford. Wellop, Kent, near Hith. Wellop, a river in Northumb. which runs into the Were, near St. John's Chapel. Wellop, Weſtm. on the Eden, NW. of Appleby. Wellow, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Wellow, Somerſ. NW. of Philips-ips-Norton. Wellow, Somerſetſ. 5 miles ſ. of Bath. Wellow, E. and W. Hants, ıear Rumſey.

Wells, in Wexford, Leinſter. Wells, in Carlow, Leinſter.

* WELLS, a fiſhing town on the N. oaſt of Norfolk, exporting malt and corn o Holland, and importing the Dutch ıottery. It has a good harbour, and a leep channel, and is ſituated between Clay and Burnham, 121 miles NNE. of London. Market diſuſed.

* WELLS, a city of Somerſetſhire, ſeated at the foot of a hill, has its name rom the wells and ſprings that are about t. Though but a ſmall city, the ſtreets ıre broad, and it is well inhabited. The cathedral, beſide which there is only one pariſh church, is a ſtately pile, and the market-houſe is a neat ſtructure, ſupported by pillars. Here are conſiderable manufactories of knit worſted ſtockings and bone-lace. The number of houſes is about 700, and the inhabitants are about 4500. When the ſee is vacant, the biſhop is choſen by an equal number of delegates appointed by each of the churches of Bath and Wells, and he is inſtalled at both places. Beſides the biſhop and dean, there belong to this church 27 prebendaries and 19 minor canons, with a number of ſpiritual court men, proctors, and other officers. It is 16 miles S. of Briſtol, and 120 SSW. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

WELLS, a town of Auſtria.

* WELSHPOOL, or POOL, a corporation town of Montgomeryſhire, ſeated on the river Severn, which begins to be navigable about three quarters of a mile from the town, in a rich vale, 19 miles S. by W. of Shrewſbury, 7 N. of Montgomery, and 169 NW. of London. It is the principal trading town in the county, being the great market for flannels, and the houſes are in general well built. The aſſizes for the county are held in the town-hall. The caſtle, called Powis-Caſtle, is built of a reddiſh ſtone, on an eminence, and was formerly of great ſtrength, beauty, and extent. The market, which is conſiderable for cattle and proviſions, is on Monday. Fairs on the ſecond Monday in March, the Monday before Eaſter, June 5th, the firſt Monday after June 27th, September 12th, and December 16th.

Well Street, Kent, near Weſtram. Welney, Cambridgeſ. in the Fens, between Littleport and Upwell. Welowbridge-Park and Wells, Staffordſhire, N. of Blore-Heath. Welſborough, Leiceſ. W. of Boſworth. Welton, Lincolnſ. NE. of Spilſby. Welton, N. of Lincoln. Welton, Lincolnſ. W. of Louth. Welton, Northampt. near Daventry. Welton, Northumberland, NW. of Newcaſtle, and S. of the Picts Wall. Near it is Welton-Tower, ſituated on a riſing ground. Welton, Somerſetſhire, near Midſummer-Norton. Welton, Yorkſhire, near the Humber, W. of Hull. Welton, Yorkſhire, E. of Beverley. Welverton, or Welweſton, Durham, N. of Stockton. Welwick, Yorkſhire, NE. of Spurnhead.

* Welwyn, Hertfordſhire, on the river Mimram, 4 miles N. of Hatfield, and 25 N. by W. of London, in the road to Bedford. Of this place the celebrated Dr. Young was many years rector; and here was the ſcene of his melancholy but pleaſing effuſions, called "The Night Thoughts."

WEM, a town in Shropſhire, ſeated on the river Roddon, near its ſource, 9 miles N. of Shrewſbury, and 164 NW. of London. It is a ſmall, but ancient place, with a free-ſchool liberally endowed, and a large market on Thurſday for cattle and proviſions.

Wembury, Devonſhire, a mile and a half NE. of Plymouth, near the fall of the river Yalm into the ſea. Wendon, Somerſetſhire, NW. of Bridgewater. Wemley Hill and Green, Middleſex, S. of Harrow. Wemworthy, Devonſhire, SW. of Chimleigh. Wendeen, Cornwall, on the Cober, W. of Penryn. Wenderton, Kent, near Wingham, in a fine ſituation for air and proſpect. Wendeſley, Derbyſ. W. of the Derwent, and N. of Wirkſworth. Wendlebury, Oxfordſhire, SW. of Biceſter, was, according to ſome, the ancient city of Alceſter. Wendon, Lowth, Great, and Little, Eſſex, SW. of Walden.

* WENDOVER, a poor, dirty town in Buckinghamſhire, ſituated at the entrance of the Vale of Ayleſbury, with pleaſant hills on each ſide, 7 miles SE. of Ayleſbury, and 35 W. by N. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Wendy, Cambridgeſ. near Shengay and Wimple. Wenford Eagle, Dorſetſ. between Weymouth and Bridport. Near this place, in a ground called Ferndron, on the road to Bridport, a barrow was opened ſome years ago; in which was found a place like an oven, curiouſly clayed, and in it a fair urn, full of firm bones, and black aſhes, and the oven was as hot as a baker's. In digging further, 18 urns more were found, but not in ovens. Weng. Bucks, near Newport-Pagnel.

WERG, a town of Stiria.

Wenham, Great and Little, or Welnetham, as it is called in old records, Suffolk, on the river Breton, near Bury. Wenhaſton, Suſſex, SE. of Haleſworth. Wennington, Huntingdonſhire, SE. of Saltrey-Granges. Wenling, Norfolk, W. of Eaſt Dereham. It had formerly an abbey.

WENLOCK, GREAT, or MUCH, an ancient town in Shropſhire, noted for lime-ſtone and tobacco-pipe clay. The remains of its abbey church, built in the year 1080, conſiſting of the S. tranſept, the S. aile, and 3 maſſive, round, Saxon arches, with the cloiſter, now converted into a farm-houſe, ſhow it to have been very magnificent. It is 12 miles SE. of Shrewſbury, and 147 NW. of London. Market on Monday.

Wenlock, Little, Shropſ. E. of Wrekin-Hill. Wenne, Cornwall, SE. of Columb.

WENNER, the largeſt lake of Sweden, in W. Gothland, to the NW. of the Lake Wetter, being about 80 miles in length, and from 20 to 30 in breadth. Four and twenty rivers empty themſelves into this lake, but it diſcharges itſelf into the ſea by only one large river or outlet, called the Gotha Elbe. It is ſtored with great plenty of fiſh, and contains ſeveral iſlands.

WENNERSBURG, a town of W. Gothland, in Sweden, ſituated at the SW. extremity of the Wenner lake, 15 miles E. of Uddevalla. It is the ſtaple for all the iron ſent from the province of Wermeland to Gotheburg.

Wennington, Eſſex, adjoining Rainham, and oppoſite to Erith, on the Kentiſh ſhore. Wennington, NE. of Lancaſter, on the river Wenning. Wenſley, Yorkſhire, N. Riding, near Midlam. Wenſley-Dale, in Richmondſhire, near Swaledale foreſt, is extenſive, has the river Ure running through it, affords romantic proſpects, abounds with game, paſture, and cattle, yields a variety of minerals, lime-ſtone, lead, coal, &c. and is decorated with ſome ancient, venerable ruins and cataracts. In this vale Henry Jenkins was born in the year 1500, and died in 1670.

WENSYSSEL, a town of N. Jutland, capital of a ſmall peninſula or prefecture, (which makes the N. part of Jutland) of the ſame name. It is ſeated on the river Ryda, 18 miles NW. of Aalborg.

Went, a river in Yorkſ. which runs into the Don, oppoſite Marſhland. Wentbeck; ſee Wanſbeck. Wentbridge, Yorkſ. has a bridge over the Went, between Doncaſter and Tadcaſter. Wentnor, Shropſhire, near Church and Little-Stretton. Weſton, Rutland, near Cotteſmore. Weſtun, a river in Norfolk, which runs into the Yare below Norwich. Wentworth, Cambridgeſhire, SW. of Ely. Wentworth, Yorkſ. 3 miles NW. of Rotheram, contains 2 or 300 houſes. Near it is Wentworth Houſe, the magnificent ſeat of Earl Fitzwilliam, built in imitation of Earl Tilney's at Wanſted, and ſituated in a delightful park, about 8 miles in compaſs, beautified with fiſh-ponds, and innumerable plantations of old fir trees, and other large timber. The ſtables are ſuperior in ſize and grandeur to any in the kingdom.

WEOBLY, a town in Herefordſhire, chiefly noted for fine ale. It is ſituated in a fruitful country, 8 miles NW. of Hereford. A little market on Thurſday.

Wepham, Suſſex, near Burpham.

WERBEN, a town in the Old Marche, Brandenburgh, ſituated at the confluence of the Havel and Elbe, 33 miles NNW. of Brandenburgh. Alſo a town of Ulterior Pomerania, 4 miles SSE. of Colbatch.

WERD, a town of Carinthia, ſituated on a lake of the ſame name, 8 miles W. of Clagenfurt.

Werden, Lancaſhire, S. of Preſton.

WERDEN, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia, ſituated on the Roer, 11 miles NNE. of Duſſeldorp. In it is a princely abbey, with a revenue of above 20,000 rix-dollars, over which the king of Pruſſia, as count of Mark, has the right of advocacy.

WERDENBURG, a fortified town of Glarus, in Switzerland, capital of a bailiwick. It is ſituated near the weſtern bank of the Rhine, 25 miles ENE. of Glarus.

Werdley, Lancaſhire, SE. of Bolton. Were, Devonſhire, in Topſham pariſh, ſo called from the wears in its river. Were, Somerſetſhire, SW. of Axbridge. Werebam, Cheſhire, on the Weever, 2 miles W. of Northwich. Weremouth, Northumberland, in the lordſhip of Bothal. Werington, Northamptonſhire, has a mill on the Cardyke, N. of Peterborough.

WERLE, a town in the duchy of Weſtphalia, 13 miles WSW. of Lippſtadt.

WERMELAND, a province of Sweden, in W. Gothland, bounded on the N. by Dalecarlia; on the E. by Weſtmania and Nericia, on the S. by the Lake Wenner and the province of Dalia, and on the W. by Norway; about 200 miles in length, and 130 in breadth. It is a fertile and pleaſant province; diverſified by mountains, rocks, hills, and dales, clothed with foreſts of birch, poplar, mountain-aſh, pine, and fir; and abounding with lakes, which are are extremely beautiful. They are from 5 to 40 miles in circumference; ſome ſo narrow as to appear like broad rivers; others of a circular ſhape; their ſhores, in ſome parts, ſteep and rocky; in others gently ſloping, but always feathered with hanging wood to the margin of the water; the roads delightfully winding through the dark foreſts which overhang the impending precipices, and overſhadow the water. Numerous rivulets flow from theſe lakes, and form, ſometimes, ſmall picturesque cataracts. The chief occupation of the inhabitants is mining, ſmelting, &c. together with fiſhing, and a little agriculure. Their trade conſiſts moſtly in maſts, planks, timber, the bark of birch trees, &c. In the chief river Dara, or Stor Elbe, is a profitable ſalmon fiſhery.

WERNBURG, a town of Neuſtadt, in Upper Saxony.

WERNECK, a town of Wurzburg, in Franconia, ſituated on the Weren, 17 miles N. of Wurzburg.

WERN, a town of Munſter, in Weſtphalia.

WERNIGERODE, a town, capital of a county of Upper Saxony, S. of the principality of Halberſtadt, and N. and W. of that of Blankenburg; about 12 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. Though it has counts of its own, it is a fief of the king of Pruſſia, as margrave of Brandenburgh, and is, in ſome meaſure, under his ſovereignty.

WERNITZ, a river of Suabia, which riſes in the marquiſate of Anſpach, in the S. of Franconia, a little to the N. of Elwang, in N. Suabia, and about 5 miles S. from Rotenburg, and paſſing by or near Dinkelſpuhl, Waſſer-Truding, Oeting, Wemdin, &c. falls into the Danube at Donawert.

WERRA, a river of Upper Saxony, which paſſes by Eisfeldt, Hildburghauſen, Meinungen, Creutzberg, Trefurt, Allendorf, &c. and empties itſelf into the Fulda at Munden.

Werray, a river in Cardiganſ. which runs into the Iriſh Channel, near Arth, about 7 miles S. of Aberyſtwith. Werrington, Devonſ. on the borders of Cornw. a delightful ſpot, long in the poſſeſſion of the Morrices. The river Tamar runs through its park. Werrow, Hants, in the Iſle of Wight.

WERTHEIM, a town of Franconia, capital of a county of the ſame name, about 20 miles in length, and nearly as much in breadth; ſituated between the electorate of Mentz and the biſhoprick of Wurzburg, and divided among ſeveral princes. It is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Turbur and Maine, 22 miles W. of Wurzburg.

WERTHEIM, a town of Mentz, 23 miles E. of Frankfort on the Maine.

WERWICK, a town of Flanders, ſituated on the Lys, 3 miles SW. of Menin.

Werwin, Cheſhire, NW. of Delamere-Foreſt.

WESEL, a town of Cleves, formerly imperial, ſituated near the confluence of the Rhine and the Lippe, 17 miles ESE. of Cleves.

WESEL, a town of Treves, 20 miles S. of Coblentz.

WESENBURG, a town of Mecklenburg.

WESEP, a town of S. Holland, ſituated on the Vecht, 4 miles SE. of Amſterdam. The principal buſineſs of the inhabitants is to carry freſh water from hence out of the Vecht to Amſterdam, for brewing and other uſes. for which traffic they have a particular kind of barges.

WESER, a conſiderable river of Germany, which riſes in Franconia, being then called the Werra, and receives the Fulda at Munden, in the duchy of Brunſwick. Then it obtains the name of Weſer, waters Hamelen, Minden, and Hove; when it joins the Aller, and after paſſing by Bremen and Carleſburg, or Carlſtadt, falls into the German Ocean.

Weſcot, Surry, SW. of Darking. Weſſel, Northumb. on the Tyll, near Tynmouth. Weſſenham, St. Peter's and All Saints, Norfolk, SW. of Rainham-Hall. Weſſenton, Glouceſterſ. near Campden. Weſſington, Northumb. NE. of Heddon-on-the Wall. Weſt-Acre, Norfolk, on the river Nar, W. of Caſtle-Acre. Weſtal, Glouceſ. in Cheltenham pariſh. Weſt-Almer, Dorſetſhire, a mile from Charborough. Weſt-Bere, Kent, near the Stour, 3 miles NE. of Canterbury. Weſtborn, Suſſex, near Racton. Weſtborn Green, Middl. near Paddington, in the road to Harrow.

WESTBOROUGH, a town of Maſſachuſetts, 33 miles W. of Boſton.

Weſtborough, Lincolnſhire, NW. of Grantham. Weſtbroke, Dorſetſ. in Upway pariſh, near Ridgehill. Weſtbrook, Berks, SW. of Newbury. Weſtbrook, Kent, near Oſpring. Weſtbrookley, Hertf. SE. of Berkhamſtead. Weſtbury, Bucks, W. of Buckingham, on the ſame river. Weſtbury, Glouceſterſ. 2 miles NE. of Newnham. Peacockſbrook, which riſes in Yartleton-hill, runs through its pariſh into the Severn. Weſtbury, Hants, W. of of Eaſt and Weſt Mean. Weſtbury, Kent, near Watringbury. Weſtbury, Kent, near Orlaſton. Weſtbury, Shropſhire, between Shrewſbury and Welſhpool. Weſtbury, Somerſetſhire, NW. of Wells.

WESTBURY, a pretty good town of Wiltſhire, with a manufacture of coarſe broad cloth. It is ſituated on a little river which Hollinſhead calls Were, 26 miles WNW. of Saliſbury, and 101 W. of London. A good market for corn on Friday.

Weſtbury, Yorkſ. near Sheffield. Weſtbury on-Trin, Glouceſ. 2 miles NW. of Briſtol, with the river Trin running through the pariſh, and the Avon for its W. boundary. It has a large church, and had anciently a college like a caſtle, with a high wall and turrets, and a large tower on it, with battlements. In this pariſh is Penpark-hole, a prodigious chaſm, with a vaſt quantity of water at particular ſeaſons; it is near 70 feet deep, 80 long, and 53 wide, and the bottom of the hole from the roof, is about 100 feet perpendicular. The deſcent for the firſt 50 feet is by a narrow funnel, widening into the large cavern; and there is a ſhorter funnel on the E. ſide, leading only to irregular paſſages. Weſtby, Lancaſ. in Amounderneſs, W. of Kirkham. Weſtby, Lincolnſ. near Baſingthorp. Weſt Chickerill, Dorſetſ. near the Channel, on the river Fleet, W. of Radipole, and SW. of Upway. Weſt Cliff, Kent, N. of Dover. Weſtcomb, Kent, near Greenwich. Weſtcomb, Somerſetſ. near Batcomb. Weſt Coppice, near Shrewſbury, on the Severn. Weſtcot, Bucks, in Waddeſdon pariſh. Weſtcot, Devonſhire, S. of Ilfracomb. Weſtcot, Glouceſterſ. 4 miles SE. of Stow-on-the-Would. Weſtcot, Surry, in Darking pariſh. Weſtcot, Warwickſ. near Ratley. Weſtcot, Wiltſhire, near Swindon. Weſtcourt, Hants, NE. of Alton. Weſtcourt, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Weſt-Court, Kent, near Detling. Weſt Court, Kent, near Gillingham. Weſt-Court, Kent, near Sibbert's Wood. Weſt Court, Kent, near Upchurch. Weſt-Court, Oxfordſ. near Benſington. Weſtdown, Devonſhire, between Weſtcot and Ilfracomb. Weſtead, Surry, in Compton pariſh. Weſt-End, Middl. between Kilburn and Hampſtead. Weſt-End, Middl. near Greenford. Weſt-End, Surry, near Eſher. Weſt-End, Surry, near Cobham. Weſt-End, Yorkſ. in Eaſtington pariſh. Weſtenhanger, Kent, near Stanford.

WESTERAS, or WESTERAHS, a trading town of Sweden, capital of Weſtmania, the ſee of a biſhop, and the reſidence of a governor. It is a large, ſtraggling town, compoſed of wooden houſes, and contains the ruins of an ancient palace, formerly inhabited by the kings of Sweden. Here is a weighing-houſe for metals, from whence a vaſt quantity of iron, copper, and braſs, dug in the neighbouring mines, are exported acroſs the Lake Maeler to Stockholm. The cathedral, a ſpacious and magnificent ſtructure, built of brick, is celebrated for its tower, eſteemed the higheſt in the kingdom. Weſterahs is ſituated on the N. ſide of the Maeler lake, 36 miles WSW. of Upſal, and 48 WNW of Stockholm.

WESTERBURG, a town and lordſhip in the Weſterwalde, circle of Upper Rhine, ſubject to the counts of Linange.

Weſterby, Leiceſ. near Fleckney. Weſter Compton, Somerſetſ. a mile from Shepton-Mallet. Weſterdale, Yorkſhire, near Cleveland. Weſterfield, Suffolk, near Ipſwich.

WESTERHAM, a town of Kent, ſeated on the river Darent, which riſes from nine ſprings near this town, 5 miles W. of Sevenoke, 14 NW. of Tunbridge, and 22 SSE. of London. Here Gen. Wolf was born, and lies interred in the church. Market on Saturday.

WESTERN ISLANDS. See AZORES and HEBRIDES.

Weſterland, Devonſ. in Marſdon pariſh. Weſterleigh, Glouceſ. 3 miles SW. of Chipping-Sodbury.

WESTERN TERRITORY, a vaſt country in North America, comprehending all that part of the United States which lies NW. of the river Ohio, extending to the Lakes on the N. and the Miſſiſſippi on the W. It contains about 11,000 ſquare miles, equal to 263,040,000 acres; from which, if we deduct 43,040,000 for water, there will remain, 220,000,000 of acres, belonging to the federal government, to be ſold for the diſcharge of the national debt. This country, which is intended to be divided into ſeveral new ſtates, is affirmed to be the moſt healthy, pleaſant, commodious, and fertile ſpot on the American continent, that is yet known to Europeans.

Weſterton, Durham, near Biſhop-Auckland. Weſterton, Suſſex, NW. of Chicheſter. Weſterton, Yorkſ. N. of Wakefield.

WESTERWALD, a diſtrict in the N. part of Wetteraw, or Wetteravia.

WESTERWICK, a ſea port of Smoland, in Sweden, with a manufacture of cloth, and a briſk trade in ſhip-timber and naval ſtores. It has a good harbour and a commodious quay, and is ſituated in a bay of the the Baltic called Sparefund, with a cuſtom-houſe, where all outward and homeward bound ſhips are ſearched, 68 miles S. of Calmar.

Weſt Farbon, Kent, near Harrietſham. Weſtfield, Eſſex, near Coggeſhall.

WESTFIELD, a river of Maſſachuſetts, which runs into the Connecticut, about 4 miles S. from Springfield.

Weſtfield, Norfolk, near E. Dereham. Weſtfield, Somerſetſhire, near Wellington. Weſtfield, Suſſex, 5 miles N. of Haſtings. Weſtfield, Suſſex, 6 miles W. of Winchelſea. Weſtgate, Kent, in Thanet-Iſle. Weſtgreen, Middleſex, near Tottenham-High-Croſs.

WESTHAM, a town of Virginia, 4 miles NW. of Richmond.

Weſthaddon, Northamptonſ. 6 miles NE. of Daventry. Weſt-Hall, Cheſhire, at High Leigh. Weſt-Hall, Cumberl. near Aſkerton-Caſtle. Weſt-Hall, Dorſetſhire, near Folke. Weſt Hall, Eſſex, near Packleſham. Weſt-Hall, Lancaſ. near Dalton. Weſt Hall, Staffordſhire, near Eccleſhall. Weſt-Hall Suffolk, near Haleſworth. Weſt Hall, Yorkſ. E. of Skipton, near the river Wharfe. Weſt-Ham, Suſſex, between Pevenſey-Marſh and the ſea, 12 miles W. of Haſtings. Weſt Halks, Kent, near Kingſnorth. Weſtholme, Dorſetſ. near Stoke, near the S. ſide of the river Frome. Weſthope, Shropſhire, W. of Diddleſbury. Weſthorp, Suffolk, S. of Botteſdale. Weſthorp, Nottingh. in Southwell pariſh. Weſthouſes, Cumberland, in Kirkbride pariſh. Weſthouſes, Yorkſhire, N. of Skale Park. Weſtington, Glouceſ. in Camden pariſh. Weſtland, Rutland, near Coteſmore. Weſtleton, Suffolk, between Yoxford and Dunwich. Weſtley, Devonſ. near Biddeford. Weſtley, Shropſ. between Longdon and Condover. Weſtley, Suffolk, W. of Bury. Weſtley, Waterleſs, 10 miles E. of Cambridge. Weſtmancot, Worceſterſ. a hamlet to Bredon.

WESTMANIA, or WESTMANNLAND, a province of Sweden Proper, between Sudermania, Geſtricia, Nericia, Upland, and Wermeland; being about 110 miles in length, and 80 where broadeſt. It abounds in copper and iron mines, and the trade in theſe metals is the moſt conſiderable in all Sweden. The S. part of the province chiefly conſiſts of arable and meadow lands, and the northern parts abound in mine-works and fine woods. Weſtmannland is well watered with rivers and lakes, which yield a vaſt plenty of fiſh, and the ſoil is generally fertile.

Weſtmarden Hill, a ſmall village in Suſſex, which was totally conſumed by fire in 1777. Weſtmark, Hants, by Petersfield. Weſtmeſter, Weſtmorl. in the barony of Kendal. Weſt Mill, Herts, a mile from Ware. Weſt-Mill Bury, Herts, on the river Rib, 2 miles N. of Braughing.

WEST MEATH. See MEATH, WEST.

WESTMINSTER, a city of Middleſex, the reſidence of the monarchs of Great Britain, the ſeat of the parliament, and of the high courts of juſtice, and, conſtituting, with London and Southwark, with which it is ſo united as to appear one city, the metropolis of the Britiſh empire. In early times, this great and noble part of the metropolis, was a little, mean, unhealthy place, (with nothing in it worthy of notice, but its minſter or abbey, built where formerly ſtood a temple of Apollo, till thrown down by an earthquake in the time of Antoninus Pius) and ſituated to the W. of St. Paul's, or London, in a marſhy iſland called Thorney, ſurrounded on one ſide by the Thames, and on the others by a branch of the river, called Longditch. For the convenience of this minſter or monaſtery, a few houſes were, probably, firſt erected, which, at length, grew into a ſmall town, called in ancient books, the town of Weſtminſter. It was, for many ages, a place entirely diſtinct from London, and there was a large ſpace between them. The road which led from London to it was called the Strand; which was firſt paved as far as the Savoy, in the year 1585. Weſtminſter owed its moſt diſtinguiſhed privileges to Henry VIII. who, in the 37th year of his reign, erected it into an honour, and on the diſſolution of its famous abbey, in the year 1541, he converted it into a biſhopric, appointing the county of Middleſex (Fulham excepted) for the dioceſe. It had, however, but one prelate, for Edward VI. tranſlated the ſee to Norwich. Upon this occaſion Weſtminſter became a city, for the making of which, according to lord chief-juſtice Coke, nothing more is required than the appellation of a biſhop's ſee. The abbey, dedicated to St. Peter, is now a collegiate church, the dean of which is always the biſhop of Rocheſter. See LONDON.

Weſtmiſton, Suſſex, near Chiltington. Weſtmoor, Somerſ. near Barrington.

WESTMORLAND, in old records written WESTMERLAND, a county of England, bounded on the NW. and N. by Cumberland; on the E. and SE. by Yorkſhire; and on the S. and SW. by Lancaſhire. Its extent from NE. to S. is 40 miles, and its breadth about 24.

It

It is generally divided into the baronies of Kendal and Weſtmorland, as alſo into 4 wards, which contain 11 market towns, 32 pariſhes, 220 villages, and about 70,000 houſes. The air is clear, ſharp, and ſalubrious, the natives being ſeldom troubled with diſeaſes, and generally living to a good old age. The ſoil is various; that on the mountains is very barren, while the Lowlands, called the Barony, or Bottom of Weſtmorland, a large, open, champaign country, about 20 miles long, and 14 broad, are fertile, producing good corn and graſs, eſpecially in the meadows near the rivers. In the hilly parts, on the weſtern borders it is generally believed there are vaſt quantities of copper ore and veins of gold; ſome mines of copper are worked, but moſt of the ore lies ſo deep, that it will not anſwer the expence. This country yields the fineſt ſlate, and abundance of excellent hams are cured here. The mountainous diſtricts, here called Fells, which compoſe a large part of the county, are far from being unprofitable; they feed large flocks of ſheep, produce plenty of grouſe, or moor game, and abound with rivulets, which water the valleys beneath. The principal rivers are the Eden, Lone, and Ken, which carry their name to the ſea; with the ſmaller ſtreams of Lowther, Tees, Emont, Belo, and Rootha. It has alſo ſeveral fine lakes, the principal of which is Winander-Mere, the bottom of which is one continued rock. In the foreſt of Martindale, to the S. of Ulls Water, the breed of red deer ſtill exiſts in a wild ſtate. The Earl of Thanet is hereditary ſheriff. Appleby is the county-town, but Kendal is the moſt conſiderable one, for ſize, trade, and population.

WESTMORLAND, a county of Virginia, and a county of Pennſylvania.

Weſtnath, Cornwall, N. of the Looes.

Weſtning, Bedfordſ. S. of Ampthill.

WESTON, a town of Maſſachuſetts, 19 miles W. of Boſton.

Weſton, Berks, NE. of Hungerford. Weſton, Cheſ. near Rock-Savage. Weſton, Cheſ. E. of Namptwich. Weſton, Dorſetſ. in Corſcomb pariſh. Weſton, Glouceſ. adjoining Campden. Weſton, Hampſhire, SE. of Baſingſtoke. Weſton, Hampſhire, near Micheldever. Weſton, Hampſhire, SE. of Southampton. Weſton, Hereſ. near Roſs. Weſton, Hertf. near Baldock. Weſton, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Weſton, Linc. SW. of Whaplode. Weſton, Norf. SW. of Attlebridge. Weſton, Northamp. near Coiby. Weſton, Northamp. near Weldon. Weſton, Nott. between Tuxford and Carleton. Weſton, Shropſ. near Bridgnorth. Weſton, Shropſ. S. of Prees. Weſton, Shropſ. SW. of Wem. Weſton, Shropſ. between Stow and Walford. Weſton, Somerſetſ. near Bath. Weſton, Somerſ. near Portbury. Weſton, Somerſetſ. SE. of Bridgewater. Weſton, Staff. NW. of Swinerton. Weſton, Suff. near Barningham. Weſton, Suffolk, S. of Beccles. Weſton, Surry, in Albury pariſh, near Boxhill. Weſton, Wilts, near Saliſbury. Weſton, Yorkſ. S. of New Malton. Weſton, Yorkſhire, NW. of Otley. Weſton-Bampfield, Somerſetſ. near Queen-Camel. Weſton-Begger, N. of Hereford. Weſton-Birt, Glouceſ. 3 miles SW. of Tetbury. Weſton Chapel, Shropſ. S. of Brown-Clee-Hill. Weſton-Colvil, Camb. E. of Gogmagog-Hills, 11 miles from Cambridge. Weſton Coyney, Staffordſ. near Careſwell. Here are brine-pits, with ſalt (which is made by a mineral that the water paſſes through) reckoned as good for all uſes as any in England. Weſton-Flavel, near Northampton. Weſton-Green, Surry, in the pariſh of Thames Ditton. Weſton-in-Arden, Warw. near Bulkington. Weſton-in-the-Thiſtles, Warw. near Cherſton. Weſton-Jones, Staff. near Norbury. Weſton, King's, Glouceſ. in Henbury pariſh, between the Avon and the Severn. It commands a fine view of ſeveral counties, as well as of the city of Briſtol, the ſhipping in the Severn, King's Road, &c. Weſton Lawrence, Glouceſ. N. of King's Weſton. Weſton, North, Oxfordſ. 3 miles from Tame. Weſton, Old, Huntingd. E. of Brington. Weſton-on the Green, Oxfordſhire, near Biceſter. Weſton, Patrick's, Hants, SW. of Odiham. Weſton, South, Oxfordſ. E. of Eſſington. Weſton-Subedge, Glouc. a mile W. of Campden. Weſton ſubter Wetheley, Warwickſ. S. of Wetheley-Wood. Weſton-ſuper Mare, Somerſetſhire, near the Severn, between the Flat-holms and Steep-holms. Weſton, Glouceſ. in Marſhfield pariſh, was formerly a diſtinct pariſh, called St. Pancras. Weſton-Turvill, Bucks, near Aylesbury. Weſton-under-Liſcard, Staff. near Blimhill. Weſton-under-Peniard, Hereford. NE. of Roſs. Weſton-under-Wood, Bucks, near Oulney. Weſton under-Wood, NW. of Derby. Weſton upon Avon, Glouceſ. four miles W. of Stratford-upon-Avon. Weſton upon Trent, SE. of Derby. Weſton-upon-Trent, Staff. N. of Ingeſtre. Weſton-Worth, Dorſetſ. a mile SW. of Worth, in Purbeck-Iſle. Weſton Zoyland, Somerſ. Weſtover, Hants, in the New Foreſt. Weſtover, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina.

W. Medina. Weſtport, Wilts, near Malmſbury. Weſtparley, Dorſetſhire, 6 miles SE. of Winborne.

WESTPHALIA, named originally from the people inhabiting between the Weſer and the Rhine, who were called Weſtphalians (the ancient Saxons, in general, being divided into Weſtphalians, Angrians, and Eaſtphalians) one of the circles of Germany, bounded on the E. and S. by the circles of Lower Saxony and Upper and Lower Rhine; on the W. by the United Provinces; and on the N. by the German Ocean, and circle of Lower Saxony. The air is cold, but the ſoil produces paſtures and ſome corn, though here are a great many marſhes. The horſes are large, and the hogs are in high eſteem, eſpecially the hams, known by the name of Weſtphalia hams. The principal rivers are the Weſer, the Embs, the Lippe, and the Roer. It contains the ſovereign biſhoprics of Oſnaburgh, Munſter, and Paderborn, the abbeys of Corvey, Herbido, Eſſen, and Verden, the principality of Minden, the counties of Ravenſburg, Tecklenburg, Ritburg, Lippe, Spiegelberg, Schawenburg, Hoye, Diepholt, Delmenhorſt, Oldenburg, Embden, or Eaſt Frieſland, Bentheim, and Mark; the cities of Cologne and Aix-la-Chapelle; the town of Dortmund; and the duchies of Juliers, Berg, and Cleves, with ſome ſmaller ſtates and ſignories. The diets of the circle are uſually appointed at Cologne, but the archives are kept at Duſſeldorf.

WESTPHALIA, THE DUCHY OF, in the circle of Lower Rhine, S. of Munſter and Lippe, and E. of Berg and Mark; it is about 40 miles in length, and near 30 in breadth, and is pretty much a mountainous country, full of wood, but moderately fertile, producing corn, cattle, game, and fiſh, with plenty of iron ore, lead, calamy, copper, and ſilver, with ſalt-ſprings, &c. It is divided into 3 parts, called the Hellwegge, the Hoarſtrank, and the Suderland, or Sourland. The firſt of theſe is low; the ſecond ſtands ſomewhat higher between the other two; and the third conſiſts of hills and vales. The principal rivers are the Ruhr, the Lenne, the Dimel, and the Lippe. It is ſubject to the archbiſhops and electors of Cologne, who governed it by marſhals till the year 1442, but, at preſent, it is under the direction of an electoral bailiff. Brilon is the capital.

WESTPOINT, a town of Virginia, ſituated on the York river, 25 miles E. of Richmond.

*WESTPORT, a ſea-port of Mayo, in Connaught, ſeated on a ſmall river, whoſe mouth here forms a fine bay within Clew bay, 8 miles W. of Caſtlebar.

WESTRA, one of the Orkney iſlands, containing about 1300 inhabitants. It is about 8 miles long, and from one to three broad, and is ſituated 9 miles NNE. from the iſland of Pomona. There are two ſloops, of 70 or 80 tons burden, belonging to this iſland, chiefly employed in carrying kelp to market; and there is a good harbour, for ſmall veſſels, on the NW. coaſt.

WESTRAM. See WESTERHAM.

Weſtrip, Glouceſ. near Tetbury.

WESTROGOTHIA. See GOTHLAND.

Weſtrop, Northamptonſhire; ſee Aſtrop. Weſtrop, Wilts. near Highworth. Weſt Tinebam; ſee Tinham. Weſt Ward and its Foreſt, Cumb. SW. of Carliſle. Weſtwell, Kent, 3 miles N. of Aſhford. Weſtwell, Oxf. near Burford. Weſtwick, near Cambridge. Weſtwick, Durham, SE. of Barnard-Caſtle. Weſtwick, Hertfordſhire, near Hemſtead. Weſtwick, Norf. near Lynn. Weſtwood, Dorſetſhire, in Purbeck-Iſle. Weſtwood, Worc. near Droitwich. Weſtwood, Linc. in Axholm Iſle. Weſtwood, Northumberl. on the Till, E. of Wooler. Weſtwood, Surry, NW. of Guilford. Weſtwood, Wilts, near Bradford. Weten Hall, Cheſ. near Torperley. Weterſlades, Northumb. NW. of Tinmouth. Wethele, Warw. W. of Arrow; has a chapel dependent on the church of Kinwarton. Wetheral, Cumb. near Carliſle, formerly a monaſtery, the gate of which, with a fine elliptic arch, ſtill remains. Near it are three remarkable cells, communicating with each other by means of a gallery in front. They are cut out of the ſolid rock, about 40 feet above the level of the river which waſhes the bottom of the rock, and are very difficult of acceſs. The only way to come at them is by a narrow and difficult paſs; from whence there is a perpendicular aſcent of about ſeven feet, which could only be ſurmounted by means of a ladder, which the perſon aſcending might draw up after him.

WETERAVIA, or WETTERAW, a country of Germany, ſituated between Heſſe and the river Maine, and ſo named from the river Wetter, which riſes in the county of Solms, and runs into the river Nidda at Aſſenheim. The northern part is called Weſterwald.

*WETHERBY, a ſmall, trading town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on the river Wharfe, 4 miles NW. of Tadcaſter; Tadcaſter, 14 S. by W. of York, and 180 N. by W. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Wetherden, Suff. E. of Wulpit. Wetheringſet, Suff. near Mendleſham. Wetherley, Leiceſ. SW. of Boſworth. Wetherſdale, Suffolk, SE. of Harleſton.

WETHERSFIELD, a town in the ſtate of Connecticut, 4 miles S. of Hartford. It is noted for raiſing onions.

Wethersfield, Eſſex, E. of Thaxted. Wethibill, Somerſ. S. of Dunſter. Wethiton, NE. of Shrewſbury. Weting, All-Saints and St. Mary, Norfolk, between Thetford and Methwould, near Brandon Ferry. In its fields is a fine, green way, called Walſingham Way, being the road which the pilgrims paſſed, when they went to viſit our lady of Walſingham. Here is an ancient fortification, ſuppoſed to be Daniſh, of a ſemicircular form, with a double rampart and ditch; its area conſiſts of about 12 acres, in which are a great number of pits, regularly contiguous to each other, ſo deep and numerous as to be capable of receiving and concealing a ſmall army. Here are alſo the venerable remains of a ſquare caſtle of flint, moated.

WETTER, a lake of Sweden, in E. Gothland, to the SE. of Lake Wenner. It is about 65 miles in length, and from 10 to 16 in breadth. It is much higher than either the Baltic or the North Sea, and is deep and clear, but very boiſterous in winter. Its outlet is by the river Motala.

WETTER, a town of Mark, in Weſtphalia, and a town of Heſſe, 6 miles NW. of Marburg, in the circle of Upper Rhine.

WETTING, a town of Magdeburg, in Lower Saxony, ſituated on the Saale, 34 miles S. of Magdeburg. In the neighbourhood are ſome coal mines.

WETTINGEN, a town of Baden County, in Switzerland, ſituated on the river Limmat, over which it has a celebrated wooden bridge (executed by the ſame architect who built the bridge over the Rhine, at Schaffhauſen,) one mile S. of Baden.

Wettleton, Shropſ. on the river Onny, NW. of Ludlow. Wetton, Staff. near Grindon. In its pariſh is Eaton Hill, where copper ore is dug. Wetwang, Yorkſ. E. Riding, between Wilton and Kilham. Wetwood, Northumb. in Veſey barony. Wetwood, Yorkſhire, near Leeds.

WETZLAR, an imperial town in the circle of Upper Rhine. Here are held the meetings of the imperial chamber, which were removed hither from Spire, in the year 1693. It is ſituated on the river Lahn, 45 miles E. of Coblentz.

Wevelsfield, Suſſex, 12 miles S. of Eaſt Grinſtead. Wever, a river in Cheſhire, which runs into the Dee, about 7 miles N. of Cheſter. Wever, a river in Devonſhire, which runs into the Columb, below Bradninch. Wevenham, Cheſ. on the river Wever, W. of Northwich. Weverthorp, Yorkſhire, NW. of Kilham. Wevery, a river in Brecknockſh. which runs into the Wye, near Bealth. Weverſley, Middleſex, between Harmondſworth and Cowley. Wexcomb, Wilts, SE. of Savernake Foreſt.

WEXFORD, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munſter, about 39 miles in length, and 20 in breadth, bounded on the N. by Wicklow; on the E. by St. George's Channel; on the S. by the Atlantic Ocean; and on the W. by Carlow, Waterford, and Kilkenny. Though not mountainous, it contains a large proportion of coarſe, cold land, and ſtiff clay; yet many parts, however, are fertile in corn and graſs. The principal rivers are the Barrow and the Slaney. It contains 109 pariſhes.

* WEXFORD, a ſea-port of Ireland, capital of a county of the ſame name. Adjoining it is the barony of Forth, the inhabitants of which, deſcendants of an ancient Britiſh colony, retain their native language, manners, and many ſingular cuſtoms, till this day. Wexford was once reckoned the chief city in Ireland, being the firſt colony of the Engliſh, and is ſtill a large, handſome town, with a beautiful and commodious harbour, but not deep enough for large veſſels. Much woollen cloth is manufactured in the town and neighbourhood. The inhabitants are about 9000. It is ſeated at the mouth of the river Slaney, 63 miles S. of Dublin. Lat. 52. 18. N. lon. 6. 29. W.

Wexham, Bucks, between Beaconsfield and Colebrook.

WEXIO, a ſea-port of Sweden, in Smoland, ſeated on the Helga Lake, which contains a group of woody iſlands, 50 miles W. of Calmar. This town, though a biſhop's ſee, is exceedingly ſmall; the houſes are moſtly of wood.

Wey, a river of Dorſetſhire, which runs into the ſea at Weymouth. Wey, a river of Surry, which riſes in Hampſhire, waters Guilford, and enters the Thames at Weybridge. It has been made navigable to Guilford and Godalmin, and a canal has been lately cut from it to Baſingſtoke in Hampſhire.

WEYBRIDGE, a village of Surry, ſituated ted at the conflux of the rivers Wey and Thames, 9 miles SW. Kingſton, and 0 SW. of London.

Weybill, Hants, 3 miles W. of Andover. Its fair on October 10th, is reckoned the largeſt in England for ſtore ſheep, ſuſſex and Kentiſh hops, Wilts, Somerſet, nd Glouceſter cheeſe, leather, &c.

* WEYMOUTH, a clean, agreeable, mproved, and well-frequented ſea-port, own of Dorſetſhire, ſeated at the mouth f the Wey, and incorporated with Melomb-Regis, with which it communicates y means of a drawbridge. Its port is inured by the ſands, from which circumtance its trade, which was once very conſiderable, it is now much reduced; it ſends owever, ſome ſhips to Portugal and Newfoundland. There is, likewiſe, a reat reſort of company hither, for the urpoſe of ſea-bathing, for which it is exellently fitted by its remarkably fine each, and the ſoftneſs of its air. Here s a cuſtom houſe, and a good quay. A ew plain and ſtriped cottons are made ere. Markets on Wedneſday and Friay. See MELCOMB-REGIS.

WEYMOUTH, a town of Maſſachuſetts, 5 miles S. of Boſton.

Whaberley, Warw. in Stoneley pariſh. Whaddon, and its Chace, near the Ouſe, NE. of Buckingham. Whaddon, Camb. 8 miles NE. of Royſton, 10 miles from Cambridge. Whaddon, 4 miles S. of Glouceſter. Whaddon, Wilts, near Melkham. Whaddon, Wilts, near Alderbury. Whalay, Derbyſhire, near Bolſover-Caſtle. Whale, Weſtmorland, in Lowther pariſh. Whaleſborough, Cornwall, near Stratton. Whaley, Lancaſ. near Preſton; has a bridge over the Ribble. Whalton, Northumberland. near Ogle-Caſtle. Whalton, Long, Leiceſterſ. NW. of Loughborough. Whaplade Drove, Lincolnſ. in Holland, among the fens. Wharby, Northumberl. on the river Alow, NW. of Hexham. Wharfe, a river of Yorkſhire, which riſes among the hills, in the W. part of the county, and runs, with a ſwift, impetuous current, moſtly to the SE. till it falls into the Ouſe, near Tadcaſter, about 7 miles below York. Wharlſon, Durham near the Tees, SE. of Barnard-Caſtle. Wharlon, Yorkſ. N. Riding, SW. of Stokeſley. Wharmby-Hall, Yorkſ. SE. of Halifax. Wharnford, Staffordſhire, N. of Leek. near the river Dane. Wharram-on-the-Street and Wharram-Piercy, Yorkſhire, SE. of New Malton. Wharrington, Durham, SW. of Wearmouth. Wharton, Hall, Weſtmorl. S. of Kirby-Steven, near the river Eden, now moſtly in ruins. Whaſton, Yorkſhire, 3 miles from Richmond. Whatcet, Warwickſ. W. of Tyſoe. Whatcroft, Cheſhire, SE. of Northwich.

Whateley*, Oxfordſ. near Water-Perry, has a bridge over the Thames.

Whatfield, Suff. N. of Hadley. Whatley, Eſſex, near Raleigh. Whatley, Somerſ. by the ſtream called Whatley Water, which falls into the river Frome, 2 miles NW. of Frome. Whatley, Warwickſhire, NW. of Atherſton.

WHATOGA, a town of N. America, in the Tennaſſee government, 40 miles S. of Knoxville.

Whatton, Nottinghamſhire, on the river Snite, SE. of Bingham, Wheatcroft, Derbyſhire, in Scarſdale. Wheathampton, Wilts, on the edge of Saliſbury-Plain, towards Calne. Wheathampſtead, Herts, N. of St. Alban's, on the river Lea. It is pleaſantly ſeated on high ground. The church is of the cathedral faſhion, and ſeems the oldeſt in the county. In it are the remains of the Popiſh image, called the Rood, which is turned into the clerk's deſk. Wheathill, Somerſetſ. 5 miles from Bruton and Somerton. Wheatley, Yorkſ. on the Don, 2 miles N. of Doncaſter. Wheatley-Hill, Durham, between Durham and Hedlam. Wheatley, N. and S. Nottingh. near Claerborough. Wheaton-Aſton, Shropſhire, SE. of Wenlock, on a river that runs into the Severn. Wheeler, a river in Denbighſhire, which runs into the Cluyd, below Potuary, about 3 miles N. of Denbigh. Wheeloch, Cheſ. on the river Wheeloch, near Sandbach. This river, after a courſe of about 12 miles from Mowcap Hill, runs into the Dan, by Crookſtone, a little above the former village. Whelbech, S. of Shrewſbury. Wheldrake, SE. of York. Whelers, Eſſex, near Bentley. Wheler-Street, Surry, NW. of Godalmin. Whelham-Green, Herts, near Colney-Hatch. Whelp-Caſtle, ruins near Kirby-Thore, in Weſtmorland. Whelpington, Weſt, Northumberland, near Kirk-Whelpington. Whelthan, Magna, and Parva, Suffolk, SE. of Bury. Whenby, Yorkſ. S. of Hovingham. Whepſtead, Suffolk, S. of Bury. The ſpire of its church was blown down by the great wind at the death of Oliver Cromwell. Wherſted, Suffolk, near Ipſwich. Wherwell, Hants, on the river Teſte, near Andover. Wheſton, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Wheſton, Middleſex, between Friarn-Barnet and E. Barnet. Whetacre, All Saints and St. Peter's, Norfolk, W. of Layſtoff. Whetacre, Upper, and Lower, Warwickſhire, N. of Bourn, and NE.

of

of Colefhill. Whetſtone, or Whitſtenton, SE. of Worceſter. Wheſtone, near the Soare, SW. of Leiceſter. Whettal, Shropſhire, SE. of Elleſmere. Whettle, Shropſ. E. of Brown-Clee-Hill. Wheyle, Hereford. NE. of Leominſter. Whichbury, Wilts, S. of Saliſbury. Whichcot-Chapel. Shropſ. N. of Ludlow. Whichnor, Staffordſ. NE. of Lichfield, near the conflux of the rivers Blythe and Trent; remarkable for the tenure by which it is held ſimilar to that of Dunmow, in Eſſex, with this addition, that the party, being a freeman, was to have, beſides the flitch of bacon, half a quarter of wheat and a cheeſe; if a villane, only half a quarter of rye. The prize, however, does not appear to have been often claimed. Which-wood-Foreſt, Oxfordſhire, between Charlbury and Burford. Whickleſwith, Lancaſhire, on the Irwell, SW. of Manchester.

WHIDAH, a kingdom of Guinea, on the Slave Coaſt, extending about 10 miles along the ſea, and 7 miles within land. It is a remarkably populous country, well furniſhed with large villages; and there are ſo many ſmall ones, that they are not above a muſket ſhot diſtance from each other. One ſingle village frequently contains as many inhabitants as ſeveral entire kingdoms on the coaſt of Guinea. This ſmall kingdom is divided into 26 provinces. The houſes are ſmall, round at the top, and encompaſſed with mud walls, or hedges. The trees are tall, ſtraight, and diſpoſed in regular order, preſenting to the eye fine long groves and avenues, clear of bruſh-wood and weeds. All the Europeans, who have been here, ſpeak of the country with rapture, and extol it as a perfect paradiſe. A perpetual ſpring and autumn ſucceed each other. The fields are always verdant, and being planted with beans, potatoes, fruits, and roots, and covered with a multitude of houſes, form one of the fineſt proſpects in the world. The natives ſow again the very next day after they have reaped, and yet the ground is not worn out; the next crop putting forth with the ſame vigour as the former, as if nature here were inexhauſtible. The women brew the beer, dreſs the victuals, and ſell all ſorts of commodities at the market. Thoſe that are rich employ their wives and ſlaves in tilling the land, and they carry on a conſiderable trade with the product, as well as in ſlaves. The natives exceed all other negroes in civilization, induſtry, and vigilance, and employ themſelves in ſeveral kinds of manufactures. They ſpin cotton yarn, weave fine cotton cloth, make calabaſſes, wooden veſſels, plates, diſhes &c. and do ſmith's work in greater perfection than any other people on the coaſt. The rite of circumciſion is uſed here, but they are not able to tell whence it is derived. Their principal idols are ſnakes, and particularly the ſoliche, a ſnake with a large, round, beautiful head, a ſhort pointed tongue, reſembling a dart, and a ſharp, ſhort tail; it is adorned with beautiful colours, on a light, grey ground. It is ſlow and ſolemn in its pace, except when it ſeizes on its prey, when it is quick and rapid. They have a mortal antipathy to venomous ſerpents, attacking them wherever they find them. They are amazingly tame and familiar, the natives and Europeans handling and playing with them, without dread or apprehenſion of danger. When the Engliſh firſt ſettled in Whidah, a ſailor, juſt arrived, found a ſnake in the magazine belonging to the factory, and killing it, without ſcruple, threw it on the bank. The negroes, who ſoon diſcovered the ſacrilege, and had it confirmed by the acknowledgment of the Engliſh, aſſembled all the inhabitants of the province, and maſſacred the factors to a man; conſuming their bodies and goods in the fire they had ſet to their warehouſe. They have oxen, cows, goats, ſheep, hogs, turkeys, ducks, and hens, which laſt are extremely plentiful. There are many elephants, buffaloes, tigers, ſeveral kinds of deer, and a ſort of hares. The fruits are citrons, lemons, oranges, bonanas, tamarinds, &c. and they have vaſt numbers of palm-trees, from which they obtain wine. The king of Whidah, who is only their chief, reſides at Sabi, or Xabier, which is the principal province of the kingdom, as the city of the ſame name is capital of the whole. The villages or ſmall ſtates are, ſome the king's, others the viceroy's, and others are built and peopled by particular lords, and become hereditary in their families. Their trade conſiſts of elephants' teeth, wax, honey, and the perſons of men. The Engliſh factory is about 200 miles NE. of Cape Coaſt Caſtle, within land.

Whidbeck, Cumberl. S. of Ravenglaſs.

Whiddy-Iſland, in Cork, Munſter, lies oppoſite to Bantry, and is a pleaſant ſpot, of a triangular form, having a good deer-park, plenty of rabbits, and excellent ſoil, and ſome good orchards.

Whiteby, Linc. S. of Market-Raiſin. Whickham, Durham, SW. of Newcaſtle-upon-Tyne. Whildon, Suſſex, NE. of Brighthelmſtone.

Whillan's

Whillan's-Rocks, in Down, Ulſter, on Croſs-Iſland, between the mouths of Larne and Glenarm Bays.

Whilton, Northamp. 3 miles from Daventry. Whimple, Devonſ. near St. Mary's-Ottery. Whinborough, Norfolk, S. of Eaſt Dereham. Whinfell, Weſtmorl. near Grayrigg, in the pariſh of Kendal. Whinfield-Hall and Park, Weſtm. between Orton and Kendal. Whippingham, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Whipſnade, Deronſ. near Market-Street. Whiſby, SW. of Lincoln. Whiſton, Northamptonſ. near Bryndon. Whiſton, Staff. W. of Penkridge. Whiſton, Staff. between Cheadle and Waterfall. Whiſton, near Worceſter. Whiſton, Yorkſ. near Rotherham. Whitbach, Shropſhire, near Biſhop's-Caſtle. Whitbeck, Cumberl. a mile W. of Whitcham. Whitborn-Leſard, Durham, S. of Shields. Whitborn Palace, Heref. on the Teme, W. of Worceſter. Whitby, NW. of Cheſter.

* WHITBY, a well-built town, in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, commodiouſly ſeated near the mouth of the river Eſk, 46 miles NE. by E. of York, and 243 N. of London. It is a conſiderable ſea-port, building many ſhips for the coal-trade, and employing many others in the export of coals, canvas, butter, tallow, hams, bacon, and fiſh. It is a tide-haven, almoſt dry at low water, neither has it any river communication with the inland country. It is much frequented by colliers, and has at leaſt 100 veſſels belonging to it, of 100 tons, or more, burden. Several ſhips are ſent thence to the Greenland fiſhery. On December 24, 1787, at midnight, an alarming event took place here. By the ſhrinking of ſome of the high ground, or cliff, near the ſea, an eſplanade, 300 yards long and 80 in breadth, on which a regular ſtreet had been built, ſince the year 1761, was overturned and overwhelmed. The buildings (to the number of 130, containing above a thouſand inhabitants) were eighty feet above the margin of the ſea, founded on a ſtrong, new-built quay. One hundred and ninety-ſix families became deſtitute of houſe, fire, or food; but the doors of the humane were thrown open, and every comfort adminiſtered. One perſon, whoſe rental amounted to 100l. annually, could no more find the place where his property ſtood. In the neighbourhood are large alum works. Market on Saturday.

Whitcham, or Whittingham, Cumberl. near Millum-under-Blackcomb. Whitcheſter, Northumb. Whitchford, Warw. near Long Compton. Whitchurch, Bucks, near Wing. Whitchurch, Devonſ. SE. of Taviſtock. Whitchurch, Dorſetſ. W. of Bridport. It has a large and ancient church, in which are ſome very antique monuments. Whitchurch, Dorſetſhire, E. of Middleton. Whitchurch, Durham, NE. of Biſhop Auckland. Whitchurch, Hereford. between Monmouth and Roſs. Whitchurch; ſee Stanmore Little. Whitchurch, Oxfordſ. near Maple-Durham.

* WHITCHURCH, a town of Hampſhire, conſiſting principally of one ſtreet, lately much enlarged and beautified. It contains about 300 houſes, among which are two well-accommodated inns, with a manufacture of ſhalloons, ſerges, &c. and an excluſive one of paper, for the ſole uſe of the bank of England, long veſted in the family of Porthall. The ſituation is low. It is 24 miles NE. of Saliſbury, and 58 W. by S. of London. Market on Friday.

* WHITCHURCH, a large, pleaſant, and populous town of Shropſhire, with a free grammar-ſchool. In its church, among other monuments of the Talbots, is one of Sir John, the firſt earl of Shrewſbury of that name. He was ſo valiant, and his name ſtruck ſo much terror in France, that he was ſtyled the Engliſh Achilles; neither durſt any man of that age encounter him ſingle-handed. It is ſituated near a large meer, from the colour of its water called Blackmeer, 20 miles N. of Shrewſbury, and 164 NW. of London. Market on Friday.

Whitchurch, Somerſ. between Penſford and Briſtol. Whitchurch, Warw. on the Sour, near Alderminſter. Whitchurch, Wilts, SE. of Clarendon-Park. Whitchurch, Wilts, near Malmſbury. Whitchurch, Yorkſ. 3 miles from Leeds.

Whitchurch, in Waterford, Munſter. Whitchurch, in Cork, Munſter.

Whitcliff, Dorſetſ. near Swanwich-Bay. Whitecloſe, Cumberland, S. of Gilſland. Whitcomb, Dorſetſ. 2 miles S. of Stafford. Whitcomb, Somerſetſ. SW. of Ilcheſter. Whitcot, Shropſ. S. of Norbury. Whitcot, Evan and Kiſſet, Shropſ. near Clun-Caſtle. Whitdown, Somerſetſhire. Whitebarns, Hertfordſ. near Furneaux-Pelham. Whitebread-Hill, Middleſ. in Tottenham pariſh. White-Caſtle, Monm. between Michael-Church and Monmouth. White Chapel, Devonſ. near Rawſton and Nymer. Whiteden, Suſſex, near Buckhurſt. Whitedown, Surry, near the hills that run from Dorking to Guilford, whence they carry chalk into the heart of Suſſex. White End, Glouc. near Aſhelworth. White- field Caſtle, Northumberland, near Little Chefters, at the junction of two rivers, one of which is the Allen. White-Gate, Chef. S. of Vale Royal. Whiteball, Camb. near Wiſbeach. White-Hart Foreſt; ſee Blakemore.

* WHITEHAVEN, a large, populous, rich, and improving town of Cumberland, with a good artificial harbour, defended by a long pier. It has its name from the white cliffs near it, both to the N. and S. which ſhelter the harbour from tempeſts. It contains about 16 000 inhabitants, and employs near 300 ſhips. Ship-building, and the accompanying manufactures of ropes, ſail-cloth, &c. are carried on here very extenſively, and there are alſo copperas works, which yield conſiderable profit; but the working of the coal-mines forms the principal buſineſs of the place. Theſe are ſunk to the depth of 130 fathoms, and carried to a vaſt diſtance under the ſea, where veſſels of large burthen ride at anchor. From theſe, a great part of Ireland, and other places, are ſupplied with coal, from which the proprietor, Lord Lonſdale, derives a revenue of about 16,000l. a year. A good deal of buſineſs is alſo done in the foreign and coaſting trade from this port. In the year 1566, it had but ſix houſes, and one fiſhing-boat; and, in 1582, it had only 12 ſmall veſſels. Whitehaven is ſeated chiefly in a valley, between two ſteep hills, 13 miles SW. of Cockermouth, and 305 NW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Whitebaugh, Staffordſ. SE. of Leek. Whiteball, Cumb. in the Holm. White-Hill, Surry, near Godſtone.

WHITEHORN, a town of Wigtonſhire, in Scotland, containing about 1890 inhabitants, of which number 756 live in the town, and the remainder in the country part of the pariſh. This is a place of great antiquity, having been a Roman ſtation, the capital of a Britiſh people called Novantes, and the firſt biſhop's ſee (or ſaid to have been ſo) in Scotland. It is 8 miles S. of Wigton.

WHITEHORN, a ſmall iſland of Scotland, near the SE. coaſt of the county of Wigton. Lat. 54. N.

White-Horſe-Hill, Berks. White-Horſe-Hill, Wilts. White Houſe, Durham, 8 miles from Darlington. Whitekirk, a village in Haddingtonſhire, 4 miles SE. of N. Berwick. White Ladies, Shropſ. near Tong-Caſtle, where are ſome conſiderable ruins of an extenſive monaſtery, ſuppoſed, from the arches in the church walls, to have been Saxon. Near it is the oak where Charles II. was ſecreted after his defeat at Worceſter. White-Lady-Aſton, SE. of Worceſter. Whiteleaf-Croſs, Bucks, near Wendover, in the pariſh of Monks Riſborough. It is 100 feet high, from 50 to 20 broad, and the beam 70 feet, cut in a chalk hill, on a large baſe. It is aſcribed to ſome victory obtained by the Saxons, over the Danes, in the beginning of the 10th century. Whiteley, Northumberland, W. of Wark-worth.

WHITE-MOUNTAINS, the higheſt part of a ridge of mountains in the ſtate of New Hampſhire, in N. America. They extend NE. and SW. to a length not yet aſcertained. The height of theſe mountains, above the adjacent meadow, is reckoned, from obſervations made in 1784, to be 5500 feet; and the meadow is 3500 feet above the level of the ſea. The ſnow and ice cover them nine or ten months in the year, during which time they exhibit that bright appearance from which they are denominated the White Mountains. From their ſummit, in clear weather, is a grand view, extending 60 or 70 miles in every direction. Although they are 70 miles within land, they are ſeen many leagues off at ſea, and appear like an exceedingly bright cloud in the horizon. Their higheſt ſummit is in about lat. 44. deg. N.

Whitenorth, Dorſetſ. two leagues from Weymouth. Whiteparish, Wilts, NE. of Downton. Whiterigg, Cumberland, in Torpenhow pariſh.

WHITE SEA, a bay of the Frozen Ocean, in the N. part of Ruſſia, on the E. ſide of which ſtands the city of Archangel.

Whiteſide, Yorkſ. on the Swale, W. of Richmond. White-Smith, Suſſex. Whitewater, a river in the Iſle of Man, which runs into the ſea at Douglas.

WHITE WATER, a river in the county of Forfar, which runs into the Eſk.

Whiteway, Eaſt, Dorſetſhire, in Purbeck Iſle, NW. of Bradel.

WHITFIELD, a town of N. Carolina, 40 miles W. of Newburn.

Whitfield, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Whitfield, Dorſetſhire, in Whitechurch pariſh. Whitfield, Glouceſterſ. in Deerhurſt pariſh. Whitfield, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Whitfield, Northampt. NE. of Brackley. Whitfield, Northumb. NE. of Kirkhaugh. Whitfield, Oxf. near Tetſworth. Whitfield-Hall, Northumberland, in Allendale, by the river Allen. Whitford, Worceſterſhire, near Bromſgrove. Whitgift, Yorkſhire, near Marſhland.

darſhland. Whitgrove, N. of Stafford. Whitherſt, Kent, near Marden. Whiing Furſh, Devonſ. in Aleſbear paiſh. Whitkirk, Yorkſhire, near Leeds. Whitland, or Forge, Carmarthenſ. 5 miles V. of St. Clere. Here is a conſiderable ron-work. Whitlaton, Cumberland, near Alſton Moor. Whitlaw, or Whitlath, Northumberland, near Tinmouth. Whitlebury, Northampt. in Whittlewood Foreſt, about 9 miles long, from the river Ouſe, on the SW. to the NW. end of Wapenham Wood, and 3 broad, of which the firſt duke of Grafton, who has n elegant houſe here, called Wakefield Lodge, was appointed hereditary ranger, n the year 1685. Whittle in the Woods, nd Whittle Welſh, Lanc. near Chorley. Whitley, Berks, S. of Reading. Whitley, Warw. near Coventry, a little above the onflux of the Shirburn and Sow; it is ow reduced to only the manor houſe, with an old chapel, and a mill. Whitley, Warw. near Henley in Arden. Whitley, Wilts, in Melkſham pariſh. Whitley, Worceſ. near the Severn, 5 miles from Bewdley. Whitley, Yorkſ. E. of Pontefract. Whitley and its Park, Surry, SW. of Godalmin. Whitley Bach, Somerſetſ. ear Benager. Whitley Caſtle, Cumb. at he conflux of the Alon and Tyne. Here re the remains of a large town, with evident traces of old fortifications, and other narks of antiquity. Whitley Caſtle, Northumberland, NW. of Alſton Moor. Whitley Hall, Yorkſ. near Almondbury. Whitley Houſe, Wilts, N. of Caln. Whitley Sheals, Northumberland, E. of Alſton Moor. Whitley, Upper and Lower, Cheſhire, 4 miles from Northwich. Whitmarſh, Warw. near the river Leame, 6 miles NW. of Southam. Whitminſter, Glouceſterſ. 5 miles W. of Painſwick. Whitmore, Staff. on the river Sow, SW. of Newcaſtle-under-Line. Whitmore, Warw. a woody, mooriſh tract between Coventry and Nuneaton. Whitney, Heref. on the Wye, SE. of Michael Church. Whitridge, Cumb. in Boulneſs pariſh, near Solway Frith. Whitridge Lees, Cumb. in Aketon pariſh. Whitſand, Norfolk, near Swaffham. Whitſand-Bay, Cornwall, at the Land's End. Whitſbury, Hants, NW. of Fordingbridge.

WHITSUN-ISLAND, one of the New Hebrides, in the S. Pacific Ocean, about 30 miles long and 8 broad. It was diſcovered by Capt. Wallis on Whitſunday, 1767. Lat. 15. 44. S. lon. 168. 25. E.

Whitſtable, Kent, near the ſea, 5 miles N. of Canterbury. Whitſtanton, Somerſetſ. SW. of Chard. Whitſton, Cornw. near Strtaton. Whitſton, Devonſ. W. of Exeter. Whitſton, Monmouthſ. NE. of Newport Haven. Whittecham, Cumb. SE. of Ravenglaſs. Whittle, Northumberland, SW. of Alnwick. Whittonditch, Wilts, NE. of Marlborough. Whittenſton, Northumberl. SE. of Chollerton. Whittenſton, Staffordſ. in Kinfare pariſh. Whittingham, Lancaſ. in Amounderneſs. Whittingham, Northumberl. W. of Alnwick, lies in a rich, well-cultivated valley, about 4 miles wide. Near it is a Roman mount, called Caſtle-Hill, and the ancient houſe called Callaley. Whittingham-Hall, Suffolk, W. of Haleſworth. Whittington, Derbyſhire, N. of Cheſterfield. Whittington, Glouceſterſ. 5 miles SE. of Cheltenham, near the ſource of the Coln. Whittington, Lanc. S. of Kirby Lonſdale. Whittington, Shropſ. NE. of Oſweſtry. Whittington, Staff. near Lichfield. Whittington, near Worceſter. Whittington Grange, NE. of Leiceſter. Whittinſlaw, Shropſhire, SE. of Acton Scot. Whittle, Derbyſhire, in the High Peak. Whittle, Lancaſhire, near Chorley. Here is a quarry of millſtones, and a lead mine is worked with ſucceſs.

WHITLESBY MERE, a large lake of Huntingdonſhire, well ſupplied with tench, pike, perch, and eels. It is formed by a branch of the Nen, SE. of Peterborough. The country about it is unhealthy by reaſon of fens; but affords abundance of turf for firing, and ſome rich paſture.

Whittleſey, St. Andrew's and St. Mary's, Camb. in the Great Bedford Level, 27 miles N. by E. of Cambridge. Whitleſey Dyke, runs between them. It is a large village, with two churches, neatly built of hewn ſtone, though ſtanding in a fenny country. Whitton, Durham, NW. of Stockton. Whitton, Northumb. SW. of Alnwick. Whitton, Shropſ. SE. of Ludlow. Whitton, Suffolk, near Ipſwich. Whitton, Whitton Dean, and Whitton Place, Middleſex, near Twickenham. Whitton and Whitton Neſs, Lincolnſhire, on the Humber, NE. of Burton Stather. Whitwain, Northumb. in Langley Manor. Whitweb, Middl. near Waltham Croſs. Whitwell, Derbyſ. in Scarſdale. Whitwell, 2 miles from Durham. Whitwell, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Whitwell, Norfolk, S. of Repeham. Whitwell, Rutland, E. of the Vale of Catmoſe. Whitwell, Weſtm. near Great and Little Aſhby. Whitwell, Yorkſ. E. of Sheriff-Hutton. Whitwick, Leiceſ. E. of Aſhby-de-la-Zouch. Whitworth, Durham, S.

of Brandſpeth Caſtle. Whixall, Shropſ. W. of Prees. Whixley, Yorkſ. NE. of Knaresborough. Whor-End, Glouceſ. in Nibley pariſh. Whorleton and its Moor, Northumberl. N. of the Picts' Wall and Newburn. Whornes-Place. Kent, SW. of Rocheſter. Wibberſon, Bedfordſhire, NE. of Wilden. Wibden, Glouceſ. in Tiddenham pariſh. Wiberton, or Wilberton, Lincolnſh. near Boſton. Wiborne, Cumb. on the road between Keſwick and Ambleſide. Wibſey, Yorkſ. near Bradford. Wibtoft, Warw. in the pariſh of Cleybrook, in Leiceſterſhire, ſituated at the meeting of the Watling Street and Foſſe roads, where, according to tradition, was once a flouriſhing city of the Romans, called Cleycheſter. Wiburnbury, Cheſh. SE. of Namptwich.

WIBURG, or VIBORGKOI, a government of Ruſſia, being the province lately called Ruſſian Finland, which was compriſed in Carelia. It has Finland on the N. and W. and the Lake Ladoga and the government of Olonetz on the E. Beſides paſtures, the country produces rye, oats, and barley, but not ſufficient for the inhabitants. It formerly belonged to the Swedes, and was ceded to the Ruſſians, partly by the peace of Nyſtadt in 1721, and partly by the treaty of Abo, in 1743. This province retains moſt of its ancient privileges, with ſome occaſional modifications, which have been neceſſarily introduced under the new government. In the governor's court, buſineſs is tranſacted, in the Swediſh, German, and Ruſſian tongues. The peaſants talk only the Finniſh dialect; but the inhabitants of the towns underſtand Swediſh alſo, and many of them German. Lutheraniſm is the eſtabliſhed religion; but the Greek worſhip has lately been introduced by the Ruſſians.

WIBURG, or VIBORG, a well-fortified ſea-port town of Ruſſia, formerly the capital of Carelia, and now of the government of Wiburg. A few houſes are conſtructed with brick: but the greateſt part of wood. They ſell planks, tar, tallow, &c. chiefly to the Engliſh, and import wine, ſpices, and ſalt from France and Holland. The inhabitants are about 9000. It is ſeated on the N. ſide of the Gulf of Finland, 67 miles NNW. of Peterſburgh.

WIBURG, a city of Denmark, capital of N. Jutland, the ſeat of the provincial court, which is held here every month, and the reſidence of a governor. It is one of the moſt ancient towns in the kingdom, about 2 miles in circumference, and contains, at preſent, 3 pariſh churches, though prior to the reformation, it had 12 churches, and 6 convents. It is ſeated on a lake, called Aſmid, near the centre of the province, 95 miles N. of Slefwick, and 110 NNW. of Copenhagen.

Wicham, 16 miles from Cambridge. Wichampford, Worceſterſhire, SW. of Eveſham. Wichampton, Dorſetſhire, near Morechurch. Wichenden, 5 miles from Worceſter. Wichford, Cambridgeſhire, W. of Ely. Wichling, Kent, 2 miles N. of Lenham.

WICK, a ſea port and royal burgh of Caithneſsſhire, containing about 1000 inhabitants. It is ſituated at the mouth of a river of the ſame name, 13 miles S. of Deaſbay Head. The coaſt of this pariſh conſiſts principally of high rocks, underneath which are many creeks and coves, extending up a conſiderable way, with hideous caverns, where fiſhing-boats, however, can harbour, and which abound with a vaſt variety of fiſh.

Wick, Cornwall, NE. of Boſcaſle. Wick, Eſſex, SW. of Witham. Wick, Glouceſterſ. SW. of Marſhfield. Wick, Somerſetſ. near Bruton. Wick, Somerſ. near Wells. Wick, Surry, W. of Guilford. Wick, Worceſterſhire, near Perſhore. Wickanford, Worceſ. between Eveſham and Willerſley, in Glouceſterſhire. Wick Cocket, Eſſex, near St. Oſyth. Wick Warys, Worceſ. near Perſhore. Wicke, Shropſ. SE. of Wellington. Wickleford, or Wickford, and More-Hall, Warw. S. of Alceſter. Wicken, Camb. near Burwell. Wickenfield, Bucks, near Stony Stratford. Wickeridge, Glouceſterſ. near Aſhelworth. Wickerſlack, Weſtmorl. near Shap. Wickford, Eſſex, on the Crouch, SE. of Ramſden. Wickham, Berks, near Welford. Wickham, Eſſex, NW. of Malden. Wickham, Hants, on the Beer, near Biſhop's Waltham. Wickham, Herts, near Little Hadham. Wickham, Kent, a mile E. of Fordwich. Wickham, Kent, in the pariſhes of Cuckeſton and Stroud. Wickham, Linc. near the Waſh, NW. of Quaplod. Wickham, Lincolnſ. SW. of Louth. Wickham, Northumberland, 8 miles from Newcaſtle. Wickham, Oxf. near Bloxham. Wickham, Suſſex, in Clayton pariſh, 8 miles from Lewes. Wickham, Yorkſhire, NE. of New Malton. Wickham and Abbey, Yorkſ. near Pickering Foreſt. Wickham, or Child's Wickham, Glouceſ. ſix miles W. of Campden. Wickham Bonant, or Bonhunt, Eſſex, N. of Rickling. Wickham Brook, Suffolk, E. of Great and Little Bradley. Wickham, Eaſt, Kent, N. of Bexley.

WICKHAM MARKET, a town of Suffolk, with ſeveral good inns (being a thoroughfare on the road from Woodbridge to Yarmouth) and ſome tokens of a market on Saturday, which it once had. It is ſeated on the river Deben, 4 miles N. of Woodbridge, and 82 NE. of London.

Wickham, St. Paul, Eſſex, near Wickham Bonant. Wickham Skeyth, Suffolk, SW. of Eye. Wickham, Weſt, 10 miles, SE. of Cambridge. Wickham, Weſt Kent, adjoining to Hayes. Wickhampton, Norfolk, W. of Tunſtal. Wickhouſe Middl. near Oſterley. Wickhouſe, Middl. near Hackney. Wickins, Kent, in Charing pariſh. Wickins, Northamptonſhire, SW. of Stony Stratford. Wickle-wood, Norfolk, near Windham. Wickley, Northamptonſhire, near Boughton.

WICKLOW, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinſter; bounded on the N. by the county of Dublin, on the E. by the Iriſh Channel, on the S. by Wexford and a part of Carlow, and on the W. by Kildare and Carlow. It is about 30 miles in its greateſt length, and from 15 to 26 in breadth. It contains 58 pariſhes, about 11,550 houſes, and 58,000 inhabitants. Much of it is mountainous and woody, with a mixture of rocks and bogs, yet affording beautiful and romantic views: the valleys, however, are fertile and well cultivated. In the hills rich veins of copper and other minerals are found, and lately conſiderable quantities of gold have been diſcovered.

*WICKLOW, the capital of a county of the ſame name, in Ireland; ſeated on the ſea ſide, with a narrow harbour, at the mouth of the river Leitrim, 24 miles SE. of Dublin. It is remarkable for having the beſt ale in the kingdom, which, with other proviſions ſent to Dublin, form the principal part of its trade. About a mile and a half to the SE. is Wicklow-Head, on which there are two light-houſes.

Wicknor, Norfolk, near Wollerton. Wick Riſington, Glouceſterſhire, S. of Bow-on-the-Would. Wickſtreet, Glouceſterſhire, on Painſwick pariſh. Wick's Head, and Odbury, Glouceſterſhire, near Wickware.

WICKWARE, a very ancient corporate town of Glouceſterſhire. It has a well-endowed ſchool-houſe, and is ſituated on two little ſtreams, over one of which it has a handſome ſtone bridge, 17 miles NE. of Briſtol, and 111 W. of London. Market on Monday.

Wickwick, Glouceſterſ. a hamlet in the pariſh of Frampton Cotterel. Wickwick, Glouceſterſ. SW. of Chipping Sodbury. Wickliff, Yorkſ. SE. of Barnard Caſtle. Wicoler, Lanc. near Coln. Widboro' Hill, Herts, N. of Hodſon. Widdington, Eſſex, near Debden. Widdington, a mile SE. of Worceſter. Widdan Friars, SW. of Dorcheſter. Widdop Head, Yorkſhire, near Burnley, in Lancaſhire. Widdrington, Northumberl. between Warkworth and Newbiggin. Widebay, Berks, S. of Hungerford.

WIDEHOPE, or WITHOP, Cumberl. in Lorton pariſh, an extenſive, mountainous, and woody tract, with ſeveral ſmall hamlets, ſcattered about in different parts of it. It extends 4 miles from Cockermouth, nearly in a direct line towards Keſwick. The lofty Skiddaw, and the beautiful Vale of Baſſingthwaite, on one ſide, and its lake with the diſtant hills of Borrowdale on the other, falling off to the horizon, form, from the heights of Withop, a moſt grand and beautiful proſpect.

Widemouth, Cornwall, W. of Stratton. Widerton, or Wierton Houſe, Kent, near Boughton Monchelſea, or Quarry. Widford, S. of Cambridge. Widford, Eſſex, W. of Chelmsford. Widford, Glouceſ. 2 miles E. of Burford, in Oxfordſhire, a pariſh entirely ſurrounded by Oxfordſhire. The river Windruſh is of pretty conſiderable breadth here, and is famous for fine trout and cray-fiſh. Widford, Herts, on the little river Aſh, a mile N. of Hoddeſdon. Widhill, Wilts, SE. of Cricklade. Widial, Herts, near Buntingford. Widkirk, Yorkſhire, E. of Leeds. Widleigh, Hants, between Southwick and Havant. Widmer Pole, Nott. between Stanton and Willoughby. Widmore, Kent, near Bromley. Widneſs, Lancaſ. near Weſt Darby. Widon, Northumb. SW. of Haltwiſtle. Widrington, Northamptonſhire, between Peterborough and Crowland. Widworthy, Devonſ. E. of Honiton.

WIED, a county of Weſtphalia, to the N. of Treves. It is divided into the Lower County, called New Wied, and the Upper County, or Wied Runkel.

WIED or OLD WIED, a town of Weſtphalia, in the county of New Wied, 9 miles N. of Coblentz.

Wierſdale and Foreſt, a wild, ſolitary tract, SE. of Lancaſter.

WIELICSKA, a village of Cracow, in Poland, now comprized within the Auſtrian kingdom of Lodomeira. It is celebrated for its ſalt mines, which lie 8 miles SE. of Cracow. In theſe inexhauſtible mines are ſeveral ſmall chapels excavated, in the ſalt, in which maſs is ſaid on certain days of the year. One of theſe chapels is above 30 feet long, and 25 broad: an altar, a crucifix, with various ornaments and ſtatues, are all carved out of the ſalt. The immenſe ſize of the different excavations or chambers, with the ſpacious paſſages or galleries, the chapels above-mentioned, and a few ſheds built for the horſes, which are foddered below, have given riſe to the exaggerated accounts of travellers, that theſe mines contain ſeveral villages, inhabited by colonies of miners, who never ſee the light. There is certainly room for ſuch purpoſes, the mines being of ſtupendous extent and depth, and dry as a room, without the leaſt damp or moiſture. There is, however, one ſmall ſpring of freſh water, which runs through the mine; but the miners have no ſubterranean dwellings, and do not remain below more than 8 hours at a time, when they are relieved by others. Theſe mines have been worked above 600 years. Before the partition of Poland, in 1772, they furniſhed a conſiderable part of the revenue of the king of Poland, who drew from them an average profit of about 3,500,000 Poliſh florins, or 97,722l. 4s. 6d. ſterling.

WIELUN, a town of Poland, in Siradia.

* WIGAN, a large and well-built town of Lancaſhire, with manufactures of cotton, rugs, blankets, linen, and with pit-coal and iron works. That elegant ſpecies of coal, called Cannel, is found in plenty and great perfection in its neighbourhood. Wigan is pleaſantly ſituated on a ſmall ſtream called Douglas, which is made navigable to the Ribble, and is joined by a canal from Lancaſter, 30 miles S. of Lancaſter, and 196 NNW. of London. Markets on Monday and Friday.

Wiganby, Cumb. in Aketon pariſh. Wigborough, Great and Little, W. and NW. of Merſey Iſland. Wigden, Somerſetſ. N. of Yeovil. Wigeſthorp, Northamptonſ. NE. of Thrapſton. Wiggenholt, Suſſex, on the river Arun, oppoſite to Hardham. Wiggeſley, Nott. E. of Tuxford. Wiggey, Surry, NE. of Ryegate. Wiggin, Huntingd. N. of St. Ives. Wiggin Moor, Huntingd. NE. of Ramſey. Wigginton, Herts, on a hill, between North-Church and Tring. Wiggington, Oxf. near Hook Norton. Wiggington, Staff. N. of Tamworth. Wigginſhall, Warw. SE. of Sutton Cofield. Wigginthorp, Yorkſ. N. Riding, near Bulmer Foreſt. Wigginton, NW. of York. Wiggleſworth, Yorkſ. near the river Ribble, S. of Settle. Wiggold, Glouceſterſhire, a hamlet, NE. of Cirenceſter. Wigkil, Yorkſ. on the Wharfe, E. of Wetherby.

WIGHT, an iſland on the S. coaſt of Hampſhire, from which it is ſeparated by a channel, two or three hours ſail from Portſmouth, though only about a mile over from Hurſt Caſtle. It was called by the Britons, Guith, and by the Romans Vectis, or Vecta. It is about 21 miles in length, and 13 in breadth, containing 5 towns, 30 pariſhes, and about 22,000 inhabitants. It is nearly divided into equal parts by the river Mede or Medina, which riſes near the ſouth coaſt, and falls into the Channel near Cowes. Across the iſland from E. to W. runs a ridge of hills, forming a tract of fine downs, with a chalky or marly ſoil, which feed a great number of fine fleeced ſheep. Rabbits, hares, partridges, wild and tame fowl, &c. are alſo very plentiful here. In the N. parts the land is chiefly paſture; in the S. chiefly arable, producing, it is thought, as much corn in one year as is equal to the conſumption of eight. The variety of proſpects which this iſland affords, its mild air, and the neat manner in which the fields are laid out, render it a very delightful ſpot. It is devoted almoſt ſolely to huſbandry, having no manufactory but that of ſalt, and it is a great reſource of the London market for malted barley. Among its exports are a pure white tobacco-pipe clay, and a fine white cryſtalline ſand, uſed in the manufacture of glaſs. The ſea is continually encroaching on it on the S. parts, and abandoning it on the NE. ſides. Newport is the principal town.

Wightfield, Glouceſ. in Deerhurſt pariſh. Wightlingham, SE. of Norwich. Wightmere, Staffordſ. N. of Burton-upon-Trent. Wighton, Norfolk, S. of Wells. Wight Weſel, Yorkſ. NW. of Sheffield. Wightwick, Staff. near Wolverhampton. Wigleſdon Moor, Durham, near Darlington. Wigteſte, Wilts, near Everley Warren. Wigmere, Kent, NE. of Eltham. Wigmore, Herefordſhire, near the Lug. Wigmore, SW. of Shrewſbury. Wignell, or Wigenhall, Norfolk, in the Marſhland. Wignell, St. Mary's, St. Peter's, St. Magdalen, and St. Margaret's, are four pariſhes on the W. ſide of the Ouſe, SW. of Lynn. Wigſell, Kent, near Hawkhurſt. Wigſton, Great and Little, S. of Leiceſter. Wigtoft, Lincolnſhire, E. of Dunnington.

WIGTON, a neat town in Cumberland, ſeated among the moors, 12 miles SW. of Carliſle, and 304 NNW. of London. rket on Tueſday.

WIGTON, a ſea-port of Scotland, the inty town of Wigtonſhire, containing ut 1320 inhabitants in the town and iſh. Here are ſome manufactures of id and flannel. It is ſituated on a ge bay, to which it gives name, 22 les W. of Dumfries.

WIGTONSHIRE, a county of Scotland, netimes called UPPER, or WEST GALWAY. It is bounded on the N. by rſhire, on the E. by Kirkcudbrightre, and on the S. and W. by the Iriſh a. Its greateſt extent, in any direction, es not exceed 27 miles. The N. part, lled the moors, is naked and mountains. Great numbers of ſheep and black ttle are raiſed here; and they have a all breed of horſes peculiar to this diſt, called galloways, which are very ong and gentle. It is well watered ith lakes and ſtreams, and has ſeveral mmodious creeks and harbours.

Wigwall, Derbyſ. near Wirkſworth. Vikam, Lincolnſ. E. of market Raiſin. Vike, Shropſ. NE. of Great Wenlock. Vike, Shropſ. near Sheffnal. Wike, Suſſex, ear Chicheſter. Wike, Yorkſ. NE. of lalifax. Wike, Yorkſ. S. of Harwood-aſtle. Wikeham, Leiceſ. NE. of Walham-on-the-Would. Wiken, Norfolk, ear Garboldiſham. Wiken, Warw. a amlet to Coughton. Wiken Aſh, Norf. E. of Lynn. Wikenby, Lincolnſ. S. of Market Raiſin. Wikerſley, Yorkſ. near Rotherham. Wikerſley, or Wikeley, Yorkſ. ear Rippon. Wikey, Shropſ. S. of Bageley. Wikin, Leiceſ. near Hinkley. Wiam, Northumb. W. of Newcaſtle. Wilaſton, Northamp. SW. of Rockingham-Forelt. Wilbees, Suſſex, near Arlington. Wilberfoſſe, Yorkſ. W. of Pocklington. Wilberry, Wilts, between Newton-Tony ind Ambreſbury. Wilbraham, Great and Little, 7 miles NE. of Cambridge. Wilbrighton, Staff. near Moreton. Wilburton, Camb. SW. of Ely. Wilburton, or Wilberton; ſee Wiberton. Wilburton-Rode, Linc. between Wiberton and the ſea. Wilbury-Hill, Herts, between Baldock and Icleford, in Hitchen pariſh, where is a camp of about 7 acres. Half the vallum is defaced. It is ſuppoſed to have been a Roman amphitheatre, as Roman coins have been ſometimes found here, and the Icknild-ſtreet way paſſes over this hill. Wilby, Northampt. SW. of Wellingborough. Wilby, Suffolk, near Stradbrook. Wilby-Hall, Norfolk, near New Buckenham. Wilcherwode, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle. Wilcot, Oxf. on the Akeman-ſtreet road, S. of Charlburg. Here are veſtiges of a Roman officina, for making bricks, tiles, and ſtucco. It was lately a ſpreading tumulus, conſiſting of fragments of Roman bricks and cement, and probably concealed pocauſtic ducts and other ſubterraneous works. Wilcot, Shropſ. near Shrawarden caſtle. Wilcot, Wilts, E. of Alcannings. Wilden, 4 miles NE. of Bedford. Wilderſley, Shropſ. W. of Longnor. Wilderneſs, Kent, near Sevenoaks. Wilderton, Kent, near Throwley.

WILDESHAUSEN, a town, capital of a diſtrict in the duchy of Brunſwick, Lower Saxony, containing about 218 houſes. It is ſituated on the Hunte, 20 miles SSW. of Bremen. In the bailiwick, which formerly belonged to the archbiſhopric and duchy of Bremen, are 30 villages.

Wildſtoke, Dorſetſ. in Whitchurch pariſh. Wildſworth, Linc. on the Trent, W. of Kirton, in Lindſey. Wilford, Northampt. by the Avon, NW. of Naſeby. Wilford, a hamlet of Clifton, by Nottingham. Wilgate, or Wolgate-Green, Kent, in Throwley pariſh.

WILKES, a county of N. America, in Georgia.

WILKESBOROUGH, a town of Pennſylvania, ſituated on the river Suſquehana, 84 miles NNW. of Philadelphia.

WILKOMIERS, a town of Wilna, in Lithuania, ſituated on the river Swienta, near its union with the Wilna, 44 miles NNW. of Wilna.

Wilkeſby, or Wilſby, Lincolnſhire, near Bullingbrook. Willaſton, or Wollaſton, Cheſhire, between Hooton and the Dee. Willaſton, Cheſhire, near Namptwich. Willaſton, Magna, Shropſhire, near Wigmore. Willen, or Willey, Warw. NE. of Newnham Paidox. Willenhall, Staff. near Walſall and Woolverhampton. Willerby, Yorkſ. on the river Harford, S. of Scarborough. Willerſby, Yorkſ. NW. of Hull. Willerſey, Glouceſterſ. 3 miles W. of Campdan. Willerſley, Heref. SW. of Weobley. Willeſborough, Kent, a mile and a half SE. of Aſhford, near the river Stour. Willesford, Linc. near Ancaſter.

WILLIAM, FORT. See CALCUTTA.

WILLIAM, FORT, in Inverneſsſhire, of a triangular form, with two baſtions, is ſituated on Loch Eil, where it bends toward the W. 45 miles N. of Inverary.

WILLIAMSBURG, a town of Virginia, formerly capital of that ſtate, ſituated between two creeks; one of which falls into James, and the other into York River, 50 miles ESE. of Richmond. The diſtance of each landing place is about a mile from the town, which, with the diſadvantage of not being able to bring up large veſſels, and want of enterpriſe in the inhabitants, have occaſioned its decay. Here is a college deſigned for the education of the Indians, but which, on account of their averſion to learning, never anſwered the purpoſe. Lat 37. 10. N. lon. 76. 50. W. Alſo a county of S. Carolina, and a county of Virginia.

WILLIAMSPORT, a town of Maryland, 5 miles SW. of Hagar's Town.

WILLIAMSTADT, a ſea-port of S. Holland, ſituated in an iſland upon a part of the Meſe, called Buttervliet, 12 miles SSW. of Dort. It is one of the keys of Holland, being defended by 7 baſtions, and a double foſſe. It was beſieged by the French in the ſpring of 1793, but meeting with a vigorous reſiſtance from the garriſon, aſſiſted by the Engliſh with gun-boats, they were compelled to retire with loſs.

Williamſcot, Oxfordſ. N. of Banbury. Williamſtone, Northumb. near Kirkhaugh. Williamſtborp, Derbyſ. SE. of Cheſterfield. Williamſtrip, Glouceſterſhire, near Coln St. Alwins. William's or William's Wick, Northumberl. near Beltingham. Willine, Bucks, SW. of Newport. Willingdale, Doe and Spain, Eſſex, near the Rodings. Willingford, Staffordſhire, NE. of Lichfield. Willingham, Camb. E. of St. Ivas. Willingham, Camb. E. of Gogmagog-Hills. Willingham, Linc. SE. of Gainſborough. Willingham, on the river Witham, E. of Lincoln. Willingham, Suff. S. of Beccles. Willingham, N. and S. Linc. E. and SE. of Market-Raiſin. Willingſworth, Staff. in Sedgley pariſh. Willington, near the Ouſe, SE. of Bedford. Willington, or Wilmington, Camb. in the Iſle of Ely. Willington, Cheſhire, near High Leigh. Willington Derbyſ. N. of Burton-upon-Trent. Willington, Durham, SW. of Brandſpeth-Caſtle. Willington, Durham, 2 miles SE of Biſhop's-Auckland. Willington, or Willyton, Lincolnſhire, S. of Kirton in Liudſey. Willington, Northumberland, W. of Tinmouth. Willington, Suſſex, N. of Cuckmere-Haven. Willington, Warwickſhire, near Shipton-upon-Stour. Willion, Herts, S. of Baldock.

WILLIS, a town of New Jerſey, 33 milles SE. of Burlington.

Williſham, Suffolk, between Needham and Bildeſton.

WILLIS' ISLAND, near the NW. coaſt of S. Georgia, in the S. Pacific Ocean. Lat. 54. S. long. 38. 20. W.

WILLISA, a town of Lucern, in Switſerland, capital of a bailiwick. It is ſeated among high mountains, on the river Wiger, 15 miles NNW. of Lucern.

Williton, Somerſetſhire, S. of Watchet. Willoford, Cumberland, where the Pict's Wall croſſes the river Irthing. Willoughby, Lincolnſhire, near Alford. Willoughby, Nottinghamſhire, N. of Newark.

WILLOUGHBY, a town of Warwickſhire, ſeated on a canal, near the conflux of the rivers Leame and Avon, E. of Lemington Haſtings, 14 miles, SE. of Coventry, and 77 NW. of London. This town has lately aſſumed a commercial appearance, from the number of new buildings riſing on the banks of the canal, and the magazines of coal and lime-ſtone laid up here for ſale. Market on Tueſday.

Willoughby-on-the-Would, Notting. on the S. borders of the county, near the Foſſe-way. It is ſuppoſed to have been formerly a Roman ſtation. Willoughby, Scots, or Water, Lincolnſ. N. of Fokingham. Willoughby, Silk, Lincolnſ. S. of Sleaford. Willoughby Waterleſs, Leiceſterſhire, near Countiſthorp. Willowbeck, a ſtream in Yorkſhire, which runs into the Swale at Cundal. Willowbridge, Staffordſ. formerly a faſhionable reſort, on account of its wells, when it had a houſe for bathing, &c. Willſden, Middleſex, between Paddington and Harrow on the Hill. Willy, or Willeley, Shropſ. near Bridgenorth. Willy, Surry, in Chaldon pariſh. Willy, a river of Wilts, which riſes near Warminſter, is joined by the Nadder at Wilton, and runs into the Upper Avon, a little below Saliſbury. Willy, Wilts, on the river Willybourn, near Heyteſbury. Wilmerſton, Somerſetſhire, between Lath and Farnborough.

WILMINGTON, a town of N. America, the largeſt in Delaware, ſituated on Chriſtiana creek, 1 mile and a half W. of the river Delaware, and 22 miles SW. of Philadelphia.

WILMINGTON, a town in the State of New York, 53 miles N. of New York.

WILMINGTON, a town of N. Carolina, ſituated on the E. branch of Cape Fear river, 34 miles faom the Atlantic Ocean, and 76 SSW. of New Bern.

Wilmington, Kent, a mile SW. of Dartford. Wilmington, Kent, near Sellindge. Wilmington, Kent, near Boſton Aluph. Wilmington, Shropſ. W. of Stiperſtone's-Hill. Wilmington, Suſſex, near Eaſtbourn. Wilminſton, Devonſ. in Taviſtock pariſh.

WILNA, a very large city, late capital of Lithuania, in a palatinate of the ſame name, containing a univerſity, and upwards of 40 churches, moſt of which are popiſh; but among them are one Lutheran and one Calviniſt, a Jewiſh ſynagogue, a Tartarian church, and a Greek church. The houſes are moſtly built of wood, and it has ſuffered frequently by fire. It is ſeated in a mountainous country, on ſeveral little eminences, at the confluence of the rivers Vilia and Wilna, 215 miles NE. of Warſaw.

Wilnall, Staffordſhire, near Wolverhampton. Wilne, Magna and Parva, Derbyſhire, in Sawley pariſh. Wilnicote, Warwickſhire, a hamlet of Tamworth. Wilſbury, near Monmouth. Wilsford, Lincolnſhire, near Ancaſter. Wilsford, Wilts, E. of Devizes. Wilsford, Wilts, near Stonehenge. Wilſhamſted, SE. of Bedford.

WILSHOVEN, a town of Lower Bavaria.

Wilſick, Yorkſhire, NW. of Tickhill. Wilſley, Derbyſ. near Aſhby-de-la-Zouch.

WILSNACH, a town of Prignitz, in Brandenburg, 56 miles WNW. of Berlin.

WILSON, a town of S. Carolina, 15 miles SW. of Queenborough.

Wilſted Hall, Yorkſhire, in Holderneſs, near Burſtwick. Wilſtern, Herts, a hamlet of Tring. Wilſthorp, Yorkſhire, S. of Burlington. Wilſthorp, W. of York. Wilſton, Leiceſterſhire, N. of Bredon on the Hill. Wilthorp, Lincolnſ. between Stamford and Bourn.

WILTON, anciently called ELLANDUNE, the county town of Wiltſhire, ſeated at the conflux of the Willy and Nadder, 5 miles NNW. of Saliſbury, and 85 W. by S. of London. It had formerly, according to Leland, 12 churches, though now it has only one. Here are manufactories of tapeſtry, carpets, and thin woollen ſtuffs. It glories in Wilton-houſe, a villa of the Earl of Pembroke, ſo elegant and magnificent for its building and furniture, that its deſcription forms, at preſent, one of the principal objects in a hiſtory of the arts and belles lettres. The buildings were deſigned by Holbein and Inigo Jones, on a plan worthy of ancient Rome. It is celebrated for the family portraits by Vandyke, and a moſt valuable collection of pictures, antique ſtatues, buſts, &c. among which are the whole collection of the cardinals Richelieu and Mazarine, and the greateſt part of the Earl of Arundel's. Market on Wedneſday.

Wilton, Herefordſ. a mile W. of Roſs, had an ancient caſtle on a hill, now partly converted into a tenement. Wilton, Norfolk, near Hockwold. Wilton, Somerſetſ. near Taunton. Wilton, Wilts, S. of Great Bedwin. Wilton, Yorkſhire, near Pickering. Wilton, Yorkſhire, NW. of Giſborough. Wilton Biſhops, Yorkſhire, N. of Pocklington.

WILTOUN, a town of S. Carolina, 21 miles WSW. of Dorcheſter.

WILTSHIRE, a county of England, ſo called from the town of Wilton, once its capital. It is bounded on the E. by Berkſhire and Hampſhire, on the W. by Somerſet and Glouceſter, on the S. by Dorſet and part of Hants, and on the NW. and N. by Glouceſterſhire. Its length from N. to S. is near 54 miles; its greateſt breadth from E. to W. 34. The air is healthy, and though ſomething ſharp on the hills in winter, it is mild during that ſeaſon in the vales. The land in the northern part is generally hilly and woody, but very fertile; here being made that kind of cheeſe which is much eſteemed, and known as North Wiltſhire. In the ſouthern it is rich and fertile. In the middle it chiefly conſiſts of downs, that afford the beſt paſture for ſheep; and in the valleys, which divide the downs, are abundance of corn-fields and rich meadows. In ſome places is found knot-graſs, near 20 feet in length, with which hogs are fed, eſpecially about Market Lavington. Its chief commodities are ſheep, wool, wood, and ſtone; of this laſt there are excellent quarries at Chilmark, where ſome ſtones are 20 yards in length and 4 in thickneſs, without a flaw. The chief manufactures are conſiderable; few towns being without one, moſt generally in the clothing-trade. The principal rivers in Wiltſhire are the Upper and Lower Avon, the Nadder, Willy, Bourne, Kennet, Adder, Duril, Were, Calve, Rey, and Willybourne. This county contains one city, 24 market-towns, and 304 pariſhes, and is divided into 29 hundreds, and 950 villages.

Wilverton, SE. of Worceſter. Wily, Wiltſhire, W. of Stapleford. Wimbiſh, Eſſex, SE. of Walden. Wimbledon, Surry, on a fine heath, about a mile each way, 7 miles SW. of London. On the common, near the village, is a round camp, made by the Danes; as alſo a well, the water of which is never known to freeze. At Wimbledon are ſome copper-mills, a manufactory for printing calicoes, and another of japan ware. Wimbledon, Yorkſhire, near Helmeſley. Wimboldeſ- ley,

ley, Cheſhire, S. of Middlewich. Wimbotſham, Norfolk, N. of Downham. Wimerling, Hants, between Fareham and Portſmouth. Wimingſwold, or Womenſwold, Kent, near Nonington. Wimley, or Wimondley, Magna and Parva, Herts, SW. of Baldock. This manor, ever ſince the conqueſt, has been held by the tenure of grand ſerjeanty, viz. to preſent, as cup-bearer, the firſt cup the ſovereign drinks at the coronation. It is to be of ſilver, gilt, and it is returned as a fee of office. Wimmerley, Lancaſhire, 3 miles from Garſtang. Wimmington, Bedfordſhire, N. of Harold.

WIMONDHAM, or WINDHAM, a town of Norfolk, noted for making ſpoons, ſpindles, foſſets, and other wooden wares. It is 9 miles SW. of Norwich, and 100 NE. by N. of London. Market on Friday.

WIMPFEN, an imperial town of Suabia, ſituated on the river Neckar, near its union with the Jaxt, 8 miles N. of Heilbron.

Wimple, Devonſ. Wimple-Hall, Cambridgeſ. 5 miles from Royſton. Wimpſton, Warkwickſ. in Whitchurch manor. Wimſlow, Cheſhire, NW. of Macclesfield. Wimſton, Hants, NW. of Southampton. Wimſwold, Leiceſterſ. NE. of Loughborough.

* WIMBORN MINSTER, a town of Dorſetſhire, with a noble church, built as a cathedral, formerly collegiate, and the only one in the county in which cathedral ſervice is performed. The eaſtern tower, and part of the church, are Saxon. It is ſeated between the rivers Stour and Allen, 6 miles N. of Poole, and 102 SW. of London. Market on Friday.

Winborn Abbas, Allhallows, All Saints, and St. Giles, Dorſetſhire.

WINCANTON, a town in Somerſetſhire, 24 miles S. of Bath, and 108 W. by S. of London. A conſiderable market for corn, cheeſe, fleſh, &c. on Wedneſday.

Winceby, Lincolnſhire, 3 miles SE. of Horncaſtle. Winch, E. and W. Norfolk, near Lynn. Wincham, Cheſhire, near Northwich. Wincham, Somerſetſ. W. of Crewkern.

WINCHCOMB, a poor town in Glouceſterſhire, ſituated on a ſmall ſtream that runs into the Avon, 16 miles NE. of Glouceſter, and 93 WNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

WINCHELSEA, a town in Suſſex, one of the Cinque Ports, 2 miles SSW. of Rye, and 67 SW. of London. It was built in the reign of Edward I. when a more ancient town of the ſame name, which had 18 pariſh churches, and was diſtant about 3 miles, was ſwallowed up by the ſea in a terrible tempeſt. The new town being ſacked by the French and Spaniards, and deſerted by the ſea, ſoon fell into decay, and is now dwindled to an inconſiderable place, having but about 70 houſes. Three of the gates are ſtill ſtanding, but much decayed; as alſo many other ruinous materials of ancient ſtructures. Upon the level left by the ſea, are the ruins of a caſtle built by Henry VIII.; it is circular, and faced with ſquare ſtones, with one large round tower ſerving as a keep. Market diſuſed.

WINCHENDON, a town of Maſſachuſetts, 48 miles NW. of Boſton.

*WINCHESTER, a very ancient city of Hampſhire, called by the Britons, Caer Gwent, and by Ptolemy and Antoninus, Venta Belgarum. It is about one mile and a half in circumference round the walls, through which there are 6 gates, and ſuburbs leading to every one of them: it is a town of little trade or manufacture. It contained formerly 32 pariſh churches, but at preſent only ſix, beſide the cathedral, which is a large and beautiful ſtructure. In it were interred 13 Saxon kings or queens, whoſe bones were collected by Biſhop Fox, and put into 6 little gilded coffins, in a wall on the S. ſide of the choir. Theſe, however, in the civil wars, were diſperſed and tumbled out of the cheſts, and reſtored, without diſtinction, after the reſtoration. On a fine eminence, overlooking the city and adjacent country, is the ſhell of a palace, built by Sir Chriſtopher Wren for king Charles II. It was never finiſhed, but in the late wars was fitted up for the reception of priſoners of war, and is now converted into barracks. Near this place is St. Mary's College, founded by William of Wickham, for a warden, 70 ſcholars, 10 fellows, 3 chaplains, 3 clerks, a ſchoolmaſter, uſher, organiſt, and 16 choriſters; the ſcholars are educated for New College, Oxford. The epiſcopal ſee is ſo rich, that when Edward III. would have preferred its biſhop, Edenden, to the ſee of Canterbury, he refuſed it, ſaying, that though Canterbury was the higher rack, Wincheſter was the better manger. A county infirmary has been eſtabliſhed here, ſupported by voluntary contribution. In the road to Southampton, is the hoſpital of St. Croſs, founded by a biſhop of this ſee, for a maſter, nine poor brethren, and four out-penſioners. All travellers, who call at this hoſpital, have a right to demand ſome bread and beer, which is always brought

to o them. The maſter is generally a dig-itary of the church, the appointment be-ng very lucrative. Wincheſter conſiſts f about 500 houſes, has one pretty broad treet, but the reſt are moſtly narrow; the ouſes are indifferently built, and its wall f flint is greatly decayed. It is ſeated on he river Itching, 16 miles E. of Saliſ-ury, and 68 SW. of London. Markets n Wedneſday and Saturday.

WINCHESTER, a town of New Hamp-hire; a town of Connecticut, 22 miles NW. of Hartford; and a town of Vir-ginia, 86 miles WNW. of Waſhington.

Winchefter, Old, Northumb. 7 miles W. of Newcaſtle. Winchet-Hill, Kent, in Goudhurſt pariſh. Winchfield, Hants, NE. of Odiam. Winchington, Upper and Lower, Bucks, W. of Ayleſbury. Winch-more-Hill, Middleſex, near Edmonton. Winckley, Devonſ. 2 miles from Tawton. Winckton, Hampſhire, near Chriſtchurch. Winke Bank, Yorkſ. W. Riding, N. of the Don, oppoſite Templeborough. Win-cot, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Clifford Cham-bers. Wincot, Glouceſ. in Queinton pa-riſh. Windall, Norfolk, near Gillingham.

WINDAW, a ſea-port town of Cour-land, ſituated at the mouth of the river Wetaw, on the Baltic, 70 miles NW. of Mittaw.

Windegap, in Waterford, Munſter.

Winder, Lancaſhire, by the Ken Sands.

WINDERMERE-WATER, or WINAN-DER-MERE, the moſt extenſive lake in England, lying between Weſtmorland and Lancaſhire, and exhibiting a very great variety of beautiful proſpects. It is about 15 miles in length from N. to S. but in no part broader than a mile. Oppoſite Ecclefrig-Crag, it is 222 feet deep. It is famous for its fine char, and abounds alſo with trout, perch, pike, and eels. This lake is frequently interſected by promon-tories, which render its ſhores very wind-ing, and it is ſpotted with iſlands. Among theſe, the Holme, or Great Iſland, on an oblong tract of about 30 acres, with a good houſe on it, croſſes the lake in an oblique line, ſurrounded by a number of inferior iſles, finely formed and wooded. They make together a kind of Archipe-lago. In navigating it upward, from the Great Iſland, the extremity appears ſin-gularly grand, its parts neat and pictu-reſque; and the view of the ſurrounding ſcenery, from Cove to Kirkſton, is aſto-niſhingly ſublime and beautiful.

Winderton, Warwickſhire, in the pariſh of Brailes. Winderwath, Weſtmorland, on the Eden, NW. of Appleby. Wind-gate, SE. of Durham. Windgates, North-umberland, SE. of Newbiggin.

WINDHAM. See WIMONDHAM.

WINDHAM, a county in the State of Vermont, and a town of Connecticut, in N. America, ſituated on the river Thames, 63 miles SW. of Boſton.

WINDISCH GRATZ, a town of Stiria.

WINDISCH, a village of Berne, in Swiſ-ſerland, 3 miles W. of Baden. In it are the ruins of the ancient city of VINDO-NISSA, which the Romans made a place of arms to ſtop the irruptions of the Ger-mans.

Windleſham, Surry, near Bagſhot. Windleſton, Durham, near Biſhop-Auck-land. Windley, 4 miles from Derby. Windmill, Kent, near Appledore. Wind-mill-Hill, Berkſhire, near Hinton. Wind-ridge, Durham, SE. of Biſhop-Aukland. Windridge, Herts, SW. of St. Alban's. Windruſh, a river in Oxfordſhire, which runs into the Thames above Langworth, about 5 miles SSE. of Witney.

WINDSHEIM, an imperial town of Franconia, 28 miles SW. of Wurzburg.

WINDSOR, a town of N. America, in the State of Vermont, 92 miles NW. of Boſton; alſo a town of Connecticut, ſitu-ated on the W. ſide of the Connecticut river, 3 miles N. of Harford, and oppo-ſite the town of E. Windſor; and a town of Acadia, in Nova Scotia, 25 miles NW. of Halifax.

Windſor, Cornwall, SW. of Columb.

*WINDSOR, NEW, a town of Berk-ſhire, ſituated on the ſide of a hill, near the Thames. It conſiſts of ſeveral ſtreets, and is well paved and lighted. The town-hall is a brick ſtructure, with ar-cades of Portland ſtone, erected in 1686. Windſor is celebrated for its magnificent caſtle, built originally by William the Conqueror, re-built by Edward III. and enlarged by ſucceeding monarchs. It is ſeated on a hill, which riſes on a gentle aſcent. On the N. ſide of the caſtle is a fine terrace, made by Queen Elizabeth, and enlarged by Charles II. who carried it round the E. and S. ſides. It is faced with a rampart of free-ſtone, and is juſtly allowed to be the nobleſt walk in Europe with reſpect to ſtrength, grandeur, and its beautiful proſpects. The palaces in France and Italy have nothing to be com-pared with it: the terrace next the ſea, in the outer court of the ſeraglio at Conſtantinople comes the neareſt to it. From the Round Tower, which is much more elevated than the reſt, is an extenſive view to London, and into the counties of Berks, Middleſex, Eſſex, Herts, Bucks, Oxford, Wilts, Hants, Surry, Suſſex, Kent, and Bedford. The royal apartment

ments are adorned with many valuable paintings, particularly with the celebrated cartoons of Raphael, which were formerly at Hampton Court. Here is the royal college of St. George, conſiſting of a dean, 12 canons, 7 minor canons, and 18 alms or poor knights. St. George's Chapel, erected by Edward III. in 1377, in honour of the order of the garter, is a beautiful ſtructure, in the pureſt ſtyle of Gothic architecture. Oppoſite to the SE. ſide of the caſtle, is a neat, modern-built manſion, called the Queen's Lodge, which is the royal reſidence in ſummer; and below this, is the Lower Lodge, for the accommodation of the younger branches of the royal family. Adjoining the Queen's Lodge is the Little Park, which extends round the N. and E. ſides of the caſtle, and forms a beautiful lawn, about 3 miles in circumference. But on the S. ſide of the town is a much larger park, called the Great Park, which is ſaid to be 20 miles in circumference. Windſor is 22 miles S. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

WINDSOR, NEW, a town of N. America, in the State of New York, 47 miles N. of New York.

WINDSOR FOREST, an extenſive foreſt in the E. part of Berkſhire, about 50 miles in circumference. It contains ſeveral villages, of which Wokingham, or Okingham, near the centre of the foreſt, is the principal; and though the ſoil is generally barren and uncultivated, it is finely diverſified by hills and dales, woods, lawns, and delightful villas.

Windſor, Old, Berks, on the Thames, to the SE. of New Windſor, is a ſmall village, with a church, near a mineral ſpring, called St. Peter's Well. Wineſford, Somerſetſ. SW. of Carhampton. Wineſtow, SW. of Monmouth. Winfarthing, Norfolk, S. of New Buckenham. Winfield, or Winford-cum-Felton, Somerſetſ. W. of Penſford. Winfield, Wilts, SW. of Trowbridge. Winford-Eagle, Dorſetſ. a mile SE. of Little Toller. Winforton Court, Herefordſ. on the Wye, near Witney, 3 miles from Hay. Winfrith, Dorſetſ. W. of Wareham. Wing, Bucks, near Aſcot. Wing, Rutland, 3 miles from Okeham. Wingall, Lincolnſ. near Kirton in Lindſey. Wingate, Staff. between Leek and Flaſh. Wingerworth, Derbyſhire, 2 miles SW. of Cheſterfield. Wingfield, N. and S. Derbyſ. near Alfreton. Wingfield, Kent, in Wrotham pariſh. Wingfield, Suffolk, N. of Stradbrook. Near it are the ruins of a noble old caſtle, moated round. The W. end is now a farm-houſe. The church, built of various coloured flints and ſtones, makes a very beautiful, as well as uncommon appearance; and the chancel is of a rich ſtyle of architecture. It contains ſeveral fine monuments of the De la Pole family. It formerly had a college, which ſtood on the S. ſide of the church; the weſt ſide of its quadrangle is converted into a farm-houſe.

* Wingham, Kent, by the Stour, 3 miles SE. of Fordwich. Wingham-Barton, Kent, near Sandwich. Wingrave, Bucks, NE. of Aylesbury. Wingsby, Lincolnſhire, near Horncaſtle. Winhall, Hampſhire, N. of Wincheſter. Winingham, Cheſhire, on the Pever, near Northwich. Winington, Shropſhire, NW. of Cauſe Caſtle. In this pariſh was born, in 1483, Thomas Parr, who lived to the age of 152 years. Winington, Staffordſ. near Aſhley. Winkborn, Nottingh. N. of Southwell. Winkfield, Berks, 2 miles from Sunningwell. Winkfield, Eaſt, in the foreſt, 5 miles from Windſor. Winkley, Yorkſhire, W. of Rippon. Winlaton, Northumberland, near Newcaſtle. Wimmelay, Lancaſ. near Garſtang. Winmore-in-Elmet, Yorkſhire, 4 miles NNE. of Leeds. Winnelrow, Northumberland, NE. of Kirkhaugh. Winneſley, Herefordſ. NE. of Weobly.

WINNICZA, a town of Bracław, in Poland.

Winninge, a river of Lancaſhire, which runs into the Lune, about 6 miles NE. of Lancaſter. Winnington, Cheſh. near Northwich, has a ſtone bridge over the Weever. Winnow, Cornw. near the river Fowey, 5 miles from Launceſton. Winrush, Glouceſterſhire, near North Leche.

WINNIPEG, a lake of N. America, about 240 miles in length, and from 50 to 100 in breadth, though in ſome places hardly 5. Lat. 52. 10. N. lon. 98. 30. W.

WINNIPEG, LITTLE, a lake of N. America, about 80 miles long, and 15 wide. Lat. 52. 10. N. lon. 100. 15. W.

WINNSBOROUGH, a town of S. Carolina, 30 miles N. of Columbia. Lat. 34. 28. N. lon. 81. 15. W.

Winſbury, Shropſ. near Chirbury.

WINSCHOTTEN, a town of Groningen.

Winſcale, Cumberland, between Whitehaven and Cockermouth. Winſcomb, Somerſetſhire, NW. of Axbridge. Winſcot, Devonſhire, by Torrington.

WINSEN, a town of Lunenburg Zell ſituated on the river Aller, 6 miles below Zell; alſo another town of Lunenburg urg Zell, ſituated on an iſland formed y the river Lubé, 12 miles SE. of Hamurg.

Winſgell, Cumberl. SE. of Kirk-Oſrald. Winſham, Somerſetſhire, SE. of Chard. Winſhill, Derbyſ. by the Trent, Burton pariſh. Winſlade, Hants, 2 miles from Baſingſtoke. Winſley, Shropſ. of Cauſe Caſtle. Winſley, Wilts, near Bradford.

WINSLOW, a town in Buckinghamſhire, 7 miles NW. of Aileſbury, and 50 WNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Winſtanley, Lancaſhire, SW. of Wigan. Winſted, Yorkſhire, near Patrington.

WINSTER, a little, mineral town of Derbyſhire, with innumerable cottages ſcattered on the ſide of a hill. Here is no market, but a meeting for the ſale of proviſions on Saturday. It is ſituated near rich mines of lead, 7 miles NW. of Derby, and 144 NW. of London.

Winſter, a river of Lancaſhire, which runs into the Ken at its mouth; and a river of Norfolk, which runs into the Mere, about 12 miles WNW. of Norwich. Winſter, Weſtmorl. near Crook. Winſton, Devonſ. near Modbury. Winſton, Durham, 4 miles below Barnard Caſtle, towards Darlington. Winſton, Glouceſterſ. 6 miles NE. of Cirenceſter. Winſton, Glouceſ. in Bibury pariſh. Winſton, Norfolk, near the Gillinghams. Winſton, Suſſex, S. of Debenham. Winſley, Cheſh. of Sandbach. Winterborn, Berks, in Chevely pariſh. Winterborn, Yorkſhire, NE. of Settle. Winterborn, or Wherry, a river in Dorſetſhire. Winterborn Abbas, Aſhton, Monkton, Came, Clenſton, Farringdon, Herringſton, Howton, Kingſton, Maurward, Muſton, Quarelſton, St. Martin, Stapleton, Strickland, Thomſon, Whitchurch, and Zelſton, all in Dorſetſhire. The firſt of theſe, Winterton Abbas, is about 5 miles SW. of Dorcheſter. About half a mile W. in the road from Dorcheſter to Bridport, is a piece of antiquity, Stonehenge in miniature, being 9 rude ſtones, of unequal dimenſions, placed erect, in a circular form, from 3 to 7 feet high, at about 6 feet diſtance from each other. The diameter of their area is 28 feet. Near this monument the river Winterborn riſes, by the country people called the Wherry. Winterborn, Cherborough, Danſey, Earls, Gunner, and Stoke, Wilts. Winterborn, Glouceſterſhire, near Pucklechurch.

WINTERBURG, a town in the duchy of Weſtphalia, 37 miles S. of Paderborn; a town of Prachatitz, in Bohemia; and a town of Sponheim, in the circle of Upper Rhine.

Winterdine, Worceſ. near Bewdley. Wintering, Yorkſhire, SW. of Arkendale. Winteringham, Huntingdonſhire, SE. of Eyneſbury. Winteringham, Lincolnſ. in the N. angle, near the Humber. Winterſhill, Hants, near Biſhop's-Waltham. Winterſlow, Dantly, E. and W. Wilts, N. of Clarendon Park.

WINTERTHUR, a town of Zurich, noted for a manufacture of beautiful earthen-ware, particularly white; together with painted ſtones. It is 15 miles NE. of the city of Zurich.

Winterton Baſſet, Wiltſhire, NW. of Marlborough.

WINTERTONNESS, a cape of Norfolk, on which is a light-houſe, 5 miles NNW. of Yarmouth. The town of Winterton, near it, which is ſituated in a ſoil reckoned the fatteſt in England, and the eaſieſt to be ploughed, declined on the advance of Yarmouth. Market diſuſed.

Winthorp, Lincolnſhire, on the coaſt, NNE. of Wainfleet. Winthorp, Nottinghamſhire, on the Trent, NNE. of Newark. Wintney-Hartley, Hants, near Hartley-Row. Winton, Hants, 3 miles from Chriſtchurch. Winton, Hants, near Ringwood. Winton, Suſſex, N. of Cuckmere Haven. Winton, Weſtmorl. in the pariſh of Kirby-Steven.

WINTON, a county of S. Carolina.

Wintrig, Northumberland, NW. of Widdrington-Caſtle. Wintrington, Lincolnſhire, near Wintringham. Winwick, Huntingdonſ. near the Giddings. Winwick, Lancaſhire, N. of Warrington, was formerly the favourite manſion of Oſwald. Its rectory is one of the richeſt benefices in England, being rated at 2000*l.* a year. Winwick, Northamptonſ. E. of Thrapſton. Winwick, Northamptonſhire, a mile SW. of Cold Aſhby. Winyard, Durham, near Butterwick. Wippedfleet, Kent, in Thanet Iſle. Wiral, or Wirehal, Cheſh. is a tip of land between the Dee and the Merſey, from Cheſter to the ſea. It is about 16 miles long, and 8 broad, and was once a foreſt.

WIPPER, a river of Weſtphalia, which riſes in the county of Mark, paſſes by Wipperfurt, Elberfeld, Solengen, &c. and runs into the Rhine, between Cologne and Zons.

WIPPERFURT, a town of Berg, in Weſtphalia, 27 miles SE. of Duſſeldorf.

WIRKSWORTH, a large, well-frequented town in Derbyſhire, ſituated among hills, which abound with lead ore, and with furnaces for ſmelting it; which is generally generally done by large wood fires. Millſtones and grindſtones, as well as leadſtones, are alſo dug hereabouts. Here is a barmoot court, conſiſting of a maſter and 24 jurors, to determine diſputes among the miners. It is 8 miles N. by W. of Derby, and 135 NNW. of London. The market, which is the greateſt for lead in England, is on Tueſday.

Wirley, Magna and Parva, Staff. near Watling Street, and the ſource of Walſal Water. Wirswall, Cheſh. E. of Malpas.

WIRTEMBURG. See WURTEMBURG.

Wirtwood, Dorſetſhire, SE. of Horton.

Wirwin, on the Merſey, N. of Cheſter.

WISBADEN, a town of Naſſau Saarbruck Uſingen, circle of Upper Rhine, 5 miles NW. of Mentz. It is much noted for the Heidenische Maur, or Heathen Wall, which runs through the town, a work of the Romans.

* WISBEACH, a well-built town of Cambridgeſhire, of the beſt trade in the Iſle of Ely, ſending annually to London, in barges, about 50,000 quarters of oats; 1000 tons of ſeed-oil, preſſed from mills in its neighbourhood; 8000 firkins of butter, &c. and bringing back various commodities for the ſupply of the county. It is ſituated among the fens, on a river navigable for barges, 17 miles SW. of Lynn, 20 N. of Ely, and 89 N. by E. of London. Market on Saturday.

WISBY, a town of Sweden, ſituated on the W. coaſt of the Iſland of Gothland, 88 miles SSE. of Stockholm. It was formerly one of the Hanſe Towns, and a very ancient ſtaple, frequented by Normans, Greeks, Engliſh, French, and other nations. Its maritime laws were famous, and adopted in all the ports of the Baltic. It has a ſafe and commodious harbour, but not very large. Lat. 57. 38. N. lon. 18. 18. E.

WISCASSET, a town of Maſſachuſetts.

WISCHBACH, or FISCHBACH, a town of Stiria.

Wiſcomb, Devonſhire, in the parish of South Leigh. Wiſedale, Yorkſhire, E. of Kirby-Lonſdale.

Wiſham, Lincolnſhire, NW. of Louth. Wiſhanger, Glouceſ. in Miſerden pariſh. Wiſhaw, or Wiſhall, 6 miles N. of Nottingham. Wiſhaw, Warw. N. of Curdworth. Wiſhby, SW. of Lincoln. Wiſherborn, Hampſhire, NW. of Baſingſtoke. Wiſhford, Great and Little, Wilts, NW. of Saliſbury. Wiſk, or Wirſk, a river in Yorkſhire, which runs into the Swale, below Kirkby.

WISLITZA, a town of Sandomirz, in Poland.

Wiſley, Surry, near Byfleet.

WISLOCH, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine, 14 miles E. of Spire.

WISMAR, a large, well-fortified town of Mecklenburg, defended by a citadel. Beſides 6 churches, it has a ſeparate conſiſtory, with a grammar-ſchool, under 8 maſters, and is the ſeat of a court of juſtice, erected in the year 1673, both for its particular diſtrict, and for Swediſh anterior Pomerania. It has a good harbour on the Baltic, and is 33 miles E. of Lubec.

Wiſpington, Lincolnſ. near Horncaſtle.

WISSEMBURG, or KORN WEISSEMBURG, a town in the department of the Lower Rhine, ſituated on the Lauter, 12 miles SSW. of Landau. It was formerly imperial, and was ceded to France by the treaty of Ryſwick. Strong lines of defence are fixed from this town to the Rhine, E. of Lauterburgh. In 1793, the French were driven from them by the Pruſſians, but ſoon after they obliged the Pruſſians to abandon them.

Wiſſenden, Rutland, 2 miles and a half W. of Market Overton. Wiſſet, Suffex, near Halſeworth. Wiſſingſett, Norf. SE. of Rainham-Hall. Wiſtanton, Cheſhire, NE. of Namptwich Wiſtanton, Shropſ. on the Onny, E. of Biſhop's Caſtle. Wiſterton, near Hereford.

WISTON, a ſmall corporate town of Pembrokeſhire, 10 miles N. of Pembroke, and 235 WNW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Wiſton, Norfolk near Clay. Wiſton, or Wigſton, Nottinghamſhire, in Chaworth pariſh. Wiſton, Suff. on the Stour, near Neyland. Wiſton, Suſſex, NW. of Stening. Wiſtow, Huntingdonſ. SW. of Ramſey. Wiſtow, Leiceſ. near Market Harborough. Wiſtow, Yorkſ. near Selby. Wiſwell, Lanc. near Whaley. Witchingham, St. Faith's and St. Mary's, Norfolk, SE. of Repeham. Witchley, Heath, Rutland, between Ketton and Tinewell. Witlwood, a foreſt in Oxfordſ. between Burford and Charlbury. Witcomb, Someſetſ. SE. of the Avon, oppoſite to Bath. Witcomb, Somerſetſ. N. of Eaſt and Weſt Harptree. Witcomb, Somerſetſhire, near Martock. Witcomb, 6 miles SE. of Glouceſter.

WITEPSKI, or VITEPSK, a town of Polotſk, in Lithuania, ſeated on the river Duna, 56 miles ESE. of Polotſk.

WITGENSTEIN, a county in the circle of the Upper Rhine, ſituated between the principalities of Heſſe Darmſtadt, Naſſau, Dillenburgh, and the duchy of Weſtphalia; but 18 miles long, and 12 broad. The principal rivers are the Lahn and the he Eder. It is united to the county of ayn.

* WITHAM, a neat-built, pleaſant own in Eſſex, with ſeveral conſiderable nns, it being a great thoroughfare to Harwich, and to the fartheſt parts of Eſex and Suffolk. It is 8 miles NE. of Chelmsford, and 37 NE. of London. Market on Tueſday.

WITHAM, a river of Lincolnſhire, which riſes in the S. part of Lincolnſhire, n the borders of Leiceſterſhire, paſſes by Grantham to Lincoln, where it becomes navigable, and turning SE. proceeds to Tatterſhall, and enters the German Ocean bout 5 miles below Boſton, which is alled The Waſhes. It is a ſhallow ſtream, ut famous for its pike. From Lincoln t has a communication with the Trent, y means of a navigable canal, called Foſsdike, cut by king Henry I. which is ill of material uſe in conveying away the orn, wool, and other commodities of the ountry.

Witham, Berks, on the Thames, 8 miles W. of Oxford, Witham, Hants, N. f Andover. Witham, N. and S. Lincolnire, near the ſource of the river Witham. Witham-on-the Hill, Lincolnſhire, SW. f Bourne. Withcall, Lincolnſhire, SW. f Louth. Withcock, Leiceſterſhire, near aund Abbey. Witheſhaw, Cheſhire, NE. of Altringham. Witheridge, Deonſh. E. of Chimleigh. Witherington, or Vodrington, Northumb. an ancient caſtle ear the ſhore. Witheringſey, Yorkſhire, . Riding, in the S. bailiwick of Hornſey. Witherne, Linconſ. NW. of Alford. Withersfield, Suffolk, NW. of Haverill. Witherſtake, Weſtmorland, ear Brigſter Park, and Levins Bridge. Witherſpan, Eſſex, near High Ongar. Witherſtone, Dorſetſhire, near Beminſter. Witherwick, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, S. of Hornſey. Withfelds, Eſſex, near Great Ilford. Withiall, Cornwall, NW. of Lodmin. It has many barrows, or hills f burial. Withial, Herts, N. of Bungford. Withibrook, Warwickſ. in the arith of Monk's Kirby. Withicomb, Devonſhire, NW. of Aſhburton. Withiomb, Somerſetſhire, near Carhampton. Withicomb Rawley, Devonſhire, between Powderham Caſtle and the ſea. Withiord, Magna and Parva, NE. of Shrewſury. Withiam, Suſſex, near Buckurſt. Withill, Cumberl. NE. of Scaley. Withington, NE. of Hereford. Withington, Glouceſterſhire, on the Coln, miles SE. of Cheltenham. Withington, Upper and Lower, Cheſhire, near the Covers. Withington, Staffordſhire, W. of Uttoxeter. Withipool, Somerſ. SW. of Dunſter. Withorn, Lincolnſhire, near Thoreſby. Withy Bridge, Glouceſterſh. in Bodington pariſh. Withy Hill, Somerſetſhire, SW. of Williton. Witley, Surry, SW. of Godalmin. The town is privileged, as an ancient demeſne, for ſerving on juries. Near it is Hinhead Hill, from which there is a noble proſpect every way; and alſo Gracewood Hill, from which there is a view over the vale of Surry and Suſſex, into Kent. Witley, Great and Little, Worceſterſhire, at the foot of Woodberry-Hill.

WITLICH, a town of Treves.

Witneſham, Suffolk, near Ipſwich.

* WITNEY, a long, ſtraggling town in Oxfordſhire, conſiſting of two ſtreets, about a mile long, and containing, with its hamlets, 570 houſes, and 4200 inhabitants. It is noted for its manufacture of the fineſt white blankets, with rugs, and other thick woollens, called bearſkins and kerſeys; alſo for its trade in carding, ſpinning, &c. It is 8 miles NNW. of Oxford, and 64 WNW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Witon, Worceſterſ. in Wick pariſh.

WITSENHAUSEN, a town of Heſſe Rhinfels, circle of Upper Rhine.

WITTEMBERG, a town in the electorate of Saxony, with a famous univerſity, in which Martin Luther, who lies buried in the chapel belonging to the caſtle, was profeſſor. It is not large, but has a conſiſtory, or court of juſtice, and is the place where the general aſſemblies of the circle are held. The old caſtle, or citadel, was formerly the electoral reſidence. It is ſeated on the river Elbe, over which it has a ferry, 55 miles NNW. of Dreſden.

WITTENBURG, a town of Lavenburg, ſituated on the Elbe, 8 miles W. of Lauenburg, a town in the duchy of Mecklenburg, 17 miles W. of Schwerin.

Wittenham, Little, Berks, near Benſington. Wittenham, Long, Berks, W. of Dorcheſter.

WITTENSTEIN, a town of Livonia.

Wittering, Northamptonſ. near Thornhaugh. Wittering, E. and W. Suſſex, in the peninſula of Selſey. Wittlesford Bridge, 7 miles S. of Cambridge, in the road from London to Newmarket.

WITTLICH, a town of Treves, ſituated on the river Harle, 25 miles NE. of Embden.

WITTMUND, a town of Embden county, in E. Frieſland.

Witton, Cheſh. by Northwich. Witton, Durham, near Nevil's Croſs. Witton, Durham, 3 miles W. of Biſhop Auckland.

Witton,

Witton, Heref. near Llanwerdine. Witton, Huntingdonſ. near Houghton. Witton, Norfolk, E. of North Waltham. Witton, E. of Norwich. Witton, Worceſ. NE. of Bromſgrove.

WITTON, a town of New Hampſhire, 30 miles E. of Cheſterfield.

Witton-Caſtle, Northumberland, near Newcaſtle. Witton-cum-Preeze, Lancaſhire, near Blackburn. Witton, E. and W. Yorkſ. 2 miles from Midlam. Witton, Tong, Nether, and Shields, Northumberl. NW. of Morpeth. Witton, Upper and Lower, Warwickſ. N. of Birmingham. Wittiſham, Kent, in Oxney Iſle. Witty-Green, Oxfordſhire, near Ramſden.

WIVELSCOMB, a town in Somerſetſhire, with a conſiderable and flouriſhing manufactory, eſtabliſhed for more than 2 centuries, of blanketings and knap-coatings, kerſeys, and other coarſe cloths, with ſhrouds, ermine, and baize. It is ſeated on the river Tone, 11 miles W. of Taunton, and 155 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Wivelſfield, Suſſex, N. of Dichling. Wivenhoe, or Vennoe, Eſſex, 3 miles from Colcheſter, of which it is the harbour, and has a cuſtom-houſe. Wiverby, Leiceſterſ. SW. of Waltham-on-the-Would. Wiverſby, Berks, near Sunning. Wiverton, Nottingh. on the Snite, near Llangarr. Wiveſford, Wilts, near the Deverels. Wiveſtone, Suffolk, NW. of Mendleſham. Wivill, Oxfordſ. W. of Henley-on-Thames. Wixo, Suff. W. of Stoke, by Clare. Wixe, a river in Cumb. which runs into the Waver, in the Holm.

WLADISLAW, or INOWROSLAW, a town of Poland, capital of a palatinate. It is ſituated on the Viſtula, 84 miles NW. of Warſaw.

WLODSIMIERZ, a town of Volhynia, the ſee of a Greek biſhop, united to the ſee of Rome. It is ſituated on the river Bog, 124 miles SE. of Warſaw.

WOAHOO, one of the Sandwich Iſlands, lying to the NW. of Morotoi, at the diſtance of about 7 leagues. From the appearance of the NE. and NW. parts, it is the fineſt iſland of the group. Scarcely any thing can exceed the verdure of the hills, the variety of wood and lawn, and rich, cultivated valleys, which the whole face of the country diſplays. It contains about 60,000 inhabitants. Lieutenant Hergeſt, commander of the Dædalus ſtoreſhip, who had been ſent from England, in 1791, to New South Wales, and thence to the S. Pacific Ocean, with a ſupply of proviſions for the ſloop Diſcovery, Vancouver, then on a voyage of diſcovery, was here ſurpriſed and killed by the natives, together with Mr. Gooch, the aſtronomer. Lat. 21. 43. N. lon. 157. 51. W.

WOBURN, a town in Bedfordſhire, formerly famous for its abbey, ſituated at a little diſtance from the town, and founded in the year 1145, by Hugh de Bolebec, a lord of great property in that neighbourhood. Its laſt abbot was hanged at Woburn, in the year 1547. It is now a country ſeat of the duke of Bedford, it having a large, pleaſant park, well wooded, but deficient in water. The great ſtables, which are part of the ancient cloyſters, ſtill preſerve their pillars and vaulted roof. Woburn was burnt down, June 19th, 1724, but has ſince been neatly re-built. It has a free-ſchool, a neat market-place, and a charity-ſchool, founded by a duke of Bedford. Near it is found great plenty of fuller's earth; and here is a manufacture of jockey-caps. It is 12 miles S. by W. of Bedford, and 42 NNW. of London. Its market on Friday, is chiefly for freſh butter and cheeſe.

WOBURN, a town of Maſſachuſetts, 15 miles NW. of Boſton.

Woburn, Shropſhire, near Bridgenorth. Wodell, Yorkſhire, W. Riding, between Wharnſide Hill and the N. Riding. Wodneſborough, Kent, near Sandwich. Near it is a remarkable eminence, ſuppoſed to have been raiſed by the Saxons, as a pedeſtal for their idol Woden, which ſtood upon it. Wodmanſt, Suſſex, SE. of Stening.

WODNANY, a town of Prachatitz, Bohemia, 58 miles S. of Prague.

WOERDEN, a town of S. Holland, ſituated on the Rhine, 8 miles S. by W. of Utrecht.

Wogham, Suſſex, N. of Lewes. Wognel, E. and W. Devonſhire, near Aſhburton. Wokey, or Okey, Somerſetſ. S. of Mendip-Hills, within 2 miles of Wells. On the N. ſide of it is a dark, diſmal cavern, called Wokey Hole, about 900 yards in length, which contains ſeveral curious pieces of nature's workmanſhip; a kitchen, a hall, a dancing-room, a cellar, &c. where are admirable reſemblances, in the natural rock, of a man's head, a tomb-ſtone, a dog, the ſtatue of a woman in white ſtone, called the Old Witch, a ſtone table, &c. Here are two ciſterns always full of water, that trickles from the top of the rock, but never running over; a huge ſtone, called the great gun, becauſe when lifted up and let fall to the ground, it makes a noiſe like a cannon.

e breadth is in ſome places ſix fa-ms, in others not above one or two.
e roof, in the higheſt part, is about ht fathoms from the floor, but in ſome ces ſo low, that a man muſt creep, to s through.

WOKING, a town of Surry, between ilford and Weybridge, 24 miles SW.
W. of London. Market on Tueſday.

WOKINGHAM. See OKINGHAM.

Wolaſton, Staffordſhire, E. of Penkridge.

WOLAW, a town, capital of a principa-of Sileſia, with a woollen manufacy.

Wolbeding, Suſſex, near Midhurſt. Wolorw, or Wadborow Park, Worceſ. W.
Perſhore. Wolcomb, Dorſetſhire, near :rborn. Wolcomb Matravers, Dorſetſ. mile N. of Melbury Bubb. Wolcot, nerſetſ. near Bath. Woldham, Kent,
the Medway, 2 miles and a half SW.
Rocheſter. Woldingham, Surry, E. of arlingham. Wolfardiſworth, Devonſ.
ar Hartland. Wolfe Newton, Monouthſhire, N. of Stregle Caſtle.

WOLFENBÜTTLE, a conſiderable town
Brunſwick, capital of a principality of
: ſame name, which conſtitutes a part of : duchy of Brunſwick. In the chateau,
: reſidence of the dukes, is a library, ntaining 120,000 volumes of printed oks and manuſcripts; alſo a cabinet of rioſities relating to natural hiſtory. In : principality are 18 towns, 886 villages, d 17 fees and convents. It is well-built d fortified, 24 miles E. of Holdeſheim.

WOLFERSDIKE, a ſmall iſland of the nited Provinces, in Zealand, between : iſlands of N. and S. Beveland.

Wolferlaw, Hereford. N. of Bromyard.

WOLFSBERG, a town of Carinthia.

Wolford, Magna and Parva, NW. of ong Compton.

WOLFGAST, a ſea-port town of Swe-ſh Pomerania, with a harbour near the altic. It is 30 miles SSE. of Stralſund.

Wolgate Green, Kent, in Throwley
riſh.

WOLKENSTEIN, a town of Erzgeirg, in Upper Saxony.

WOLKOWYSK, a town of Novogro-ck, in Lithuania.

Wolland, Dorſetſ. a mile SW. of Ibber-
n. Wollaſcomb, Upper and Nether, Denſ. S. of Ilfracomb. Wollaton and 'ollaton Hall, the ſeat of Lord Middleton, ar Nottingham. Wollavington, Somerſ.
tween Sedgmore and Huntſpill. Wol-vington, Suſſex, near Petworth.

WOLLER, a town in Northumberland, uch reſorted to, in the ſummer months, r invalids, to drink goat's whey and milk. It is 14 miles S. of Berwick. Market on Thurſday.

Wolterſhill, Worceſterſ. S. of Perſhore. Wolterton, or Wolterton, Norfolk, N. of Aylſham. Wolleſworthy, Devonſ. N. of Crediton. Wolley, Derbyſ. in Scarſdale, NW. of Alfreton. Wolley, Devonſ. in Upcot pariſh. Wolley, Somerſetſhire, near Bath. Wolley, Yorkſ. NW. of Barnesley.

WOLLIN, a ſea-port of Pruſſian Pomerania, at the mouth of the Oder, capital of an iſland of the ſame name. It is 10 miles S. of Cammin.

Wolmagam, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina.

WOLMAR, or VOLMAR, a town in the government of Riga.

Wolmarſton, Somerſetſ. near N. Petherton. Wolmer-Foreſt, Hants. Wolmer-Green, Herts, by Datchworth. Wolmiſtom, Somerſ. in Crewkern pariſh. Wolpham-cote, or Ovencote, Warw. near Willoughby. Wolſeley, Staffordſ. near Rugeley.

WOLSINGHAM, a town in the county of Durham, in a country abounding in coal and lead mines. It is 16 miles SW. of Durham. Market diſuſed.

Wolſington, Northumberland, near Ogle Caſtle. Wolſtanton, Staffordſ. NE. of Newcaſtle-under-Line. Wolſtanwood, Cheſhire, near the Copenhalls. Wolſtenholm, Lanc. NE. of Bury. Wolſton, Berks, near Offington. Wolſton, Hants, near Southampton. Wolſton, Shropſhire, near Knocking. Wolſton, Shropſ. E. of Biſhop's-Caſtle. Wolſton, Great and Little, Bucks, by Stony Stratford. Wolſtrop, Glouceſterſ. near Quedgley. Wollerton, Norfolk, near Aylſham. Wolthorp, Northamptonſ. near Stamford. Wolton, Kent, near Weſtwel. Wolvercote, N. of Oxford.

*WOLVERHAMPTON, a large and populous town in Staffordſhire, chiefly noted for its iron manufactory, conſiſting of locks, hinges, buckles, corkſcrews, and of late years japanned ware. The ſtreets are, for the moſt part, broad and paved. It communicates with the navigation of all the inland counties, and is 13 miles S. of Stafford, and 124 NW. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Wolverley, Worceſ. on the Stour, near Kidderminſter, and the canal which joins the Severn near Stourport. Wolverſhill, Warw. in Bulkington pariſh. Wolverſton, Suffolk, near Ipſwich. Wolverton, or Wolverington, Bucks, near Stony-Stratford. Wolverton, Iſle of Wight, in W. Medina. Wolverton, Kent, near Folkſtone. Wolverton, or Wulverton, Norfolk, on the coaſt, SW. of Snetſham. Wolverton, near Warwick. Wolves, Weſt, Suſſex, N. of Stening. Wolverton, NW. of Dorcheſter.

WOLVEY, a town of Warwickſhire, ſituated near Hinckley, N. by E. of Shilton. Market on Wedneſday.

Womborn, Staffordſ. SW. of Sedgley. Wombwell, Yorkſhire, SE. of Barneſley. Wombwell-Hall, or Wimble, Kent, in the pariſh of Northfleet. Womeſleigh, Dorſetſ. a hamlet in Wotton-Fitzpain. Womerſwold, Kent, near Canterbury. Womerſley, Yorkſhire, near Pontefract. Wonder, Bedfordſ. near Woburn. Wondy, Monmouthſ. near Caldicote. Wonſton, Hants, near Micheldever. Woocot, or Woodcot, Surry, 2 miles S. of Wimbledon. Wood, Devonſ. E. of Modbury. Wood, Devonſ. near Columbton. Wood, Devonſ. near Woodleigh. Wood, Baſtwick, Norfolk, NW. of S. Waltham. Woodberry. Dorſetſ. near Bere Regis. Woodborough, between Nottingham and Southwell. Woodborough, Wilts, E. of Biſhop's Cannings.

WOODBRIDGE, a town in Suffolk, ſeated on the river Deben, with very ſafe and deep water, but the bar is difficult and uncertain. A conſiderable corn trade is carried on here, and it is famous for refining ſalt. It is ſituated about 6 miles from the ſea, 7 NNE. of Ipſwich, and 76 NE. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

Woodburn, E. and W. Northumberl. on the Read, SE. of Corſenſide. Woodbury, Devonſ. 9 miles SE. of Exeter. Woodcheſter, Glouc. S. of Stroud, 2 miles from Minchinghampton: here is a manufacture of ſilk, and of fine broad cloth. Woodchurch, Cheſhire, between the Dee and Merley, 3 miles from Liverpool. Woodchurch, Kent, 3 miles E. of Tenterden. Woodcock-Hill, Middl. in the pariſh of Harrow. Woodcot, Hants, between Woodhay and Overton. Woodcot, Hants, near Whitchurch. Woodcot, Nott. in Skegby pariſh. Woodcot, Oxf. near Henley-upon-Thames. Woodcot, near Shrewſbury. Woodcot, Shropſ. near Shefnal. Woodcot, Worceſ. in Bromſgrove pariſh. Woodcote, Surry, near Wimbledon. Woodcote, Upper and Lower, Warw. SE. of Coventry. Woodcots, Dorſetſ. 2 miles from Sixpenny Henley. Woodcroft, Northamp. between Peterborough and Stamford. Woodcroft-Hall, Durham, on the Wear, SE. of Stanhope. Woode, alias Woodchurch, Kent, in Thanet Iſle, 5 miles N. of Sandwich. Wood-Eaton, on the Cherwell, 3 miles N. of Oxford. Wooden, Northumb. on the coaſt, S. of Aylmouth. Wood-End, Bedf. SE. of Tuddington. Wood-End, Glouc. in Twining pariſh. Wood-End, in Dimmock pariſh. Wood-End, Glouceſ. in the pariſh of Hill. Wood End, Herts, near Ardley-Bury. Wood End, Herts, near Flamſted and Bury. Wood-End, Northamptonſ. NW. of Towceſter. Wood End, Staff. in Needwood-Foreſt. Wood End, Staff. near Shenſton. Wood-End, Staff. near Walſall. Woodenton, Wilts, W. of Uphaven. Wooderlix, Glouceſ. in Nibley pariſh. Woodfield, Kent, near Yalding.

Woodford, in Galway, Connaught.

Woodford, Cheſhire, between Preſtbury and Stopford. Woodford, Dorſetſ. on the river Frome, between Frampton and Bindon. Woodford, Glouceſ. in Berkley pariſh. Woodford, Northamp. a mile SW. of Thrapſton. Woodford, Northamp. near Biſield. Woodford, Somerſetſ. by Wells. Woodford, Eſſex, in Epping Foreſt, 8 or 9 miles NE. of London. Woodford, Great and Little, Wilts, 4 miles from Sarum. Woodford-Strangeways, Dorſetſhire, E. of Dorcheſter. Woodgreen, Herts, a mile W. of Cheſhunt. Woodgreen, Middleſex, near Tottenham-High-Croſs. Woodgreve, Kent, in Oxney Iſle. Wood-Hall, Cumb. near Cockermouth. Woodhall, Eſſex, in Arkſden. Woodhall, Herts, N. of Hatfield. Woodhall, Middl. NW. of Pinner. Wood-Hall, Yorkſhire, near Biſhop-ſale-Chace. Wood-Hall, Yorkſ. W. of Wetherby. Woodham, Surry, near Chertſey. Woodham-Ferris, Eſſex, E. of the Huningfields. Woodham-Mortimer and Water, or Walter, Eſſex, adjoining Hafeleigh. Wood Hatch, Surry, near Ryegate. Woodhay, Cheſhire, SW. of Namptwich. Woodhay, Eaſt. Hants, on the borders of Berks, towards Neubury. Woodhay, Weſt, Berks, SE. of Hungerford. Woodhead, Cheſhire, at the ſource of the Merſey. Woodhead, Rutland, near Brig-Caſterton. Woodhide, Dorſetſ. in Purbeck Iſle, between Dunſtay and Afflington. Woodhorne, Northumb. near the coaſt, N. of Newbiggin. Woodhouſe, or Woodborrow, Nott. S. of Sherwood Foreſt. Wood Houſe, Derbyſ. near Stubley. Wood-Houſe, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Wood-Houſe, or Heath-Houſe, Hants, near Peterſfield. Wood Houſe, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Wood-Houſe, Leiceſ. near Loughborough. Wood-Houſe, Northumb. SE. of Harbottle-Caſtle. Wood-Houſe, Northumb. S. of Alnwick. Wood-Houſe, Shropſ. E. of Oſweſtry. Wood-Houſe, Staff. NE. of Stone. Wood-Houſe, Staff. S. of Pattiall. Wood-Houſe, Staff. near Wombern. Wood-Houſe, Weſtmorl. near the Ken, 4 or 5 miles below Kendal. Wood-Houſes, Cheſhire, SW. of Frodſham. Wood-Houſes, Shropſ. E. of Wellington. Wood-Houſes, Shropſ. NE. of Whitchurch. Wood-Houſes, Staff. N. of Needwood-Foreſt.

eſt. Wood-Houſes, Staff. near Yoxall. Wood-Hurſt, Huntingd. near Somerſham. Wood-Land, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Wood-Land, Devonſhire, near Aſhburton. Wood-Land, Devonſ. on the Yalme, a little above Yalmeton. Wood-Land, Devonſ. ear Torrington Parva. Wood-Land, Dorſetſ. S. of Cranborn. In this manor, o the W. of Ringwood, under an aſh tree, he Duke of Monmouth was taken after he battle of Sedgmore. The tree is inſcribed with the names of ſeveral who have iſited the ſpot. Wood-Land, Glouceſ. in Almondſbury pariſh. Wood-Land, Kent, W. of Wrotham. Wood Land, Warw. n the borders of Worceſterſhire and Staffordſhire. Wood-Land, Wilts, NE. of Marlborough. Wood-Land, Wilts, near Mere. Wood-Land, Chapel, Lancaſ. in Tournefs-Fells. Wood-Land, E. and W. Somerſ. and Wilts, near Frome. Wood-Land Houſe, Kent, N. of Blackheath. Woodlaw, S. of Warwick. Woodley, Devonſ. between Brent and Kingſbridge. Woodley, near Oxford. Woodmancote, Hants, near the Candovers. Woodmancote, Glouceſ. in Durſley pariſh. Woodmancote, Glouceſ. in Cleve pariſh. Woodmanſtone, Surry, near Banſted, 2 miles from Carſhalton. Woodmercote, Glouceſterſ. in N. Ceracy pariſh. Wood Newton, Northamptonſ. near Fotheringay-Park. Woodoaks, Herts, in Rickmanſworth pariſh. Wood-Plumpton, Lanc. in Amounderneſs. Woodredon, Eſſex, near Waltham-Abbey. Woodriſing, Norfolk, NE. of Skoulton. Wood Row, Wilts, near Melkſham. Wood's-Corner, Suſſex, SW. of Brighthling. Woodſetton, Staffordſ. between Sedgley and Tipton. Woodſetton, Staff. SW. of Eccleſhall. Woodſetts, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Woodſham, Bucks, W. of Ayleſbury. Woodſide, Cumb. in the pariſh of Weſtward. Woodſide, Durham, near Ryton. Woodſide, Herts S. of Hatfield. Woodſide, Lanc. near W. Darby. Woodſide, Surry, NE. of Croydon. Woodſide-Green, Kent, N. of Lenham. Woodſom-Hall, Yorkſ. near Almondbury. Woodſpring, Somerſetſ. on the Briſtol Channel, oppoſite to the Flat-holms. Wood Stanway, Glouceſterſ. in Stanway pariſh.

WOODSTOCK, a town of Oxfordſhire, with a manufacture of ſteel chains for watches, and excellent gloves. The palace and park here were, for many ages, the reſidence of the kings of England; but in 1705, the honour and manor were ſettled, by parliament, on John, the firſt duke of Marlborough; to perpetuate the memory of his victories over the French, and particularly that at Blenheim. A fine palace was alſo erected here, at the public charge, called Blenheim Houſe, with apartments, galleries, offices, gardens, &c. in a very grand and ſumptuous ſtyle. It is 8 miles NNW. of Oxford. Market on Tueſday.

Woodſtone, Huntingdonſ. near Peterborough. Woodſtreet, Dorſetſ. a mile from Bindon. Wood-Thorp. Derbyſhire, S. of Cheſterfield. Wood Thorp, Lincolnſ. NW. of Alford. Wood Thorp. Nott. S. of Sherwood-Foreſt. Woodton, 7 miles from Norwich. Woodton, Staff. near Eccleſhall.

Wood-Walton, Huntingdonſ. SE. of Coningtón. Woodyates, or Weſt-Woodyates, Dorſetſhire, near Stalbridge. Woolaſton, Northampt. 3 miles S. of Wellingborough. Wool, Dorſetſ. on the river Frome, W. of Wareham. Woolcomb Bingham, Dorſetſ NE. of Bridport. Woollaſton, Glouceſ. 4 miles NE. of Chepſtow, in Monmouthſ. Wolley, Huntingd. N. of Spaldwick. Woolmington, Dorſetſ. near Chardſtock. Woolpery, Devonſhire, near Biddiford.

WOOLPIT. See WULPIT.

Woolſthorp, Linc. SW. of Grantham, famous for having given birth to the great Sir Iſaac Newton. Woolſtone, Glouceſ. 4 miles W. of Tewkeſbury. Woolſtone, Lanc. near Warrington. Woolſton-Hall, Eſſex, near Chigwell. Woolthorp, SE. of Hereford. Woolverſton, Suffolk, on the Orwell.

WOOLWICH, a town in Kent, ſeated on the river Thames, noted for its large docks and yards, being, in point of ſeniority, the mother dock of the royal navy; as alſo for its magazines of great guns, mortars, warlike ſtores, warren, elaboratory, &c. A royal academy alſo is eſtabliſhed here, for the inſtructing and qualifying of candidates for the office of military engineer. Theſe are called Cadets, and are under the direction of a governor, lieutenant-governor, and maſters in each branch of literature and military ſcience. For ſome years paſt, two or three hulks have been moored off this town, for the reception of convicts, to the number ſometimes of 400. It is 10 miles E. of London. Market on Friday.

Woolaſton Shropſ. N. of Alfretton. Wooton, Heref. W. of Weobly. Wooton-Abbas, Dorſetſ. on the borders of Devonſ. Wooton Glanville, Dorſetſ. 3 miles SW. of Pulham. Wopſerden, Northumberl. in the barony of Wark. Worbarrow, or Worthbarrow Bay, Dorſetſhire, in Purbeck Iſle, near Belkington.

WORCESTER, a town of Maſſachuſetts, the ſhire town of a county of the e name. It is the largeſt inland town New England, and is 34 miles W. of ton.

WORCESTER, a city of Worceſterre, capital of that county, ſeated on the r Severn, over which is a beautiful e-bridge, erected in 1770. The prinl manufactures are of horſe-hair cloth, ad cloth, gloves, and elegant china e. Here are 9 pariſh churches, 3 mmar-ſchools, 7 hoſpitals, an infirmaa water-houſe, and a well-contrived y. On September 3d, 1651, King rles II. at the head of a Scotch army, defeated in and near this city, and vanquiſhed were almoſt all either killed aken priſoners, and ſold to the Ameriplantations. It is 118 miles WNW. of don. Markets on Monday, Wedneſ, and Friday; and a conſiderable hop ket on Saturday. Fairs on the eve of n Sunday, the Saturday after Eaſter, guſt 15th, and September 19th.

Worceſter-Park, Surry, between Malnd Nonſuch.

WORCESTERSHIRE, a county of Engl, bounded on the N. and NW. by opſhire and Staffordſhire, on the E. by rwickſhire, on the W. by Herefordre, and on the S. and SE. by Glouceſhire; extending about 30 miles from to S. and 20 from E. to W. It is ded into 7 hundreds, containing 1 city, narket-towns, and 152 pariſhes. The is very healthful, and the ſoil in the s and meadows very fertile; particu the rich vale of Eveſham. The hills e generally an eaſy aſcent (except the vern-Hills, in the SW. part of the nty) and feed large flocks of ſheep. other hills are the Licky, near Bromſre, toward the N. and the Bredons, toward the S. A number of rivers rivulets water the fine meadows, and them a richneſs that is imparted to butter and cheeſe. Here is plenty of s of moſt ſorts, eſpecially pears, which in many places found growing in the ges. The chief commodities are coal, which this county abounds; corn, , wool, cloth, cheeſe, ſalt, cider, and y, the latter in great reputation. The cipal rivers are the Severn, Avon, d or Teme, Stour, and Arrow.

WORCUM, a town of W. Frieſland, d on the Zuyder-Zee, 18 miles SSW. ewardin. The harbour is blocked with ſand, but the inhabitants carry on nſiderable trade by means of their ls.

Wordeſield, Worceſ, in Great Malvern pariſh. Word-Foreſt, in the W. part of Suſſex.

WORDINGBERG, a ſea-port of Denmark, ſituated on the S. coaſt of Zealand, oppoſite the Iſland of Falſter.

Wordſall, Lanc. on the Irwell, SW. of Mancheſter. Wordſley, Staff. N. of Stourbridge. Wordwell, Suffolk, N. of Culford. Wore, Shropſ. on the Topoſa hill, in Muckleſton pariſh. Worgret, Dorſet. a mile SW. of Wareham. Woringtan, Devonſ. NW. of Liſton. Work, Lincolnſ. near Burnham, in the Iſle of Axholm.

*WORKINGTON, a ſea-port of Cumberland, ſeated on the S. ſide of the river Derwent, near its mouth. The harbour will admit veſſels of conſiderable burden, and large quantities of coals are conſtantly exported to Ireland. the number of ſhipping employed here is about 100. A little up the river, there are extenſive iron works and a fine ſalmon fiſhery. Workington is 7 miles W. of Cockermouth, and 307 NW. of London.

Workſborn, a river in Northumberland.

*WORKSOP, a town in Nottinghamſhire, near the canal, from Cheſterfield to the Trent. It is 24 miles N. of Nottingham, and 146 N. by W. of London. The market, which is noted for plenty of malt and licorice, is on Wedneſday.

Worlaby, Linc. on the river Ankam, N. of Glandford-Bridge. World's-End, Berks, S. of Eaſt Iſley. World's-End, Herefordſ. NW. Marcley-Hill. Worle, Somerſ. near Weſton-ſuper-Mare. Worleſton Cheſhire, near Namptwich. Worlingham, Suffolk, near Beccles. Worlington, Suffolk, near Mildenhall. Worlington, E. and W. Devonſ. on the Dart, between King's Hemet and Witheridge. Worlingworth, Suffolk, S. of Stradbrook, Wormbridge, Herefordſ. near Devereux. Wormegay, Norfolk, near Swaffham. Wormeſley, and its Grange, Herefordſ. SE. of Weobly. Wormhill, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Wormingford, Eſſex on the Stour, E. of Halſted. Wormington, Glouc. 5 miles N. of Winchcombe. Wormington-Grange, Glouc. in Didbrook pariſh. Worminſter, Somerſ. near Wells. Wormleighton, Bedf. SE. of Potton. Wormleighton, Warw. NE. of Fenny Compton. Wormley, Herts, contiguous to Cheſhunt, and a mile S. of Broxburn. Wormley, Oxf. near Stokenchurch. Wormmal, Bucks, between the Chiltern Hills and Aylesbury.

WORMS, a biſhopric in the circle of Upper Rhine, ſurrounded by the lower palatinate, about 10 miles in length along the Rhine. The biſhop is a ſovereign prince rince of the empire. The city is free and mperial, and the magiſtrates are Lutheran. t is ſeated near the weſtern banks of the hine, 20 miles NW. of Heidelburg.

Wormſell, Kent, near Boughton-Malerb. Wormwood Common, Middl. beween Paddington and Aſton Wells. Vorndon, Northumberl. near Mouſewell. Vorpleſdon, Surry, on the banks of New iver, E. of Henley Park. Worrall, Yorkſ. NW. of Sheffield. Worſall, Yorkſ. n the Tees, W. of Yarum. Worſborough, Yorkſ. 3 miles S. of Barneſley. Worſham, ſſex, W. of Haſtings. Worſley, Lancaſ. ar Chatmoſſe and Wigan, where begins e Duke of Bridgewater's Canal; ſee anal. Worſley's Tower, Iſle of Wight, W. Medina.

WORSTED, a town in Norfolk, remarkable for the invention, or firſt twiſting, of that ſort of woollen yarn or thread, hich from hence is called worſted. Here alſo a manufacture of worſted ſtuffs, d of knit and wove ſtockings. It is miles N. by E. of Norwich, and 120 NE. of London. Market on Saturday. Worſthorn, Lancaſ. in Whalley pariſh. orſton, Lanc. NE. of Clithero. Worſton, of Stafford. Worth, Devonſ. in Waſhton pariſh. Worth, Dorſetſ. SE. of ambourn. Worth, or Worde, Kent, a le S. of Sandwich. Worth, Suſſex, in orth Foreſt, E. of Iſield. Worth, E. W. Dorſetſhire, S. of Corfe-Caſtle. rth-Francis, Dorſetſ. on the river Birt, Netherby pariſh. Worth-Maltravers, rſetſ. 2 miles SW. of Langton, in rbeck Iſle. Wortham, Suffolk, near ddeſdale. Wortham, E. and W. Hants, r Alton. Worth-Caſtle, Hants, W. Portſmouth. Worthen, Shropſ. near on Pigot. Worthing, Norfolk, near o and Swanton. Worthington, Lanc. r the Dowles, N. of Wigan. Worthon, Leiceſ. near Stanton-Harold. rthy Downs, Hants, near Winchester. rting, Suſſex, W. of New Shoreham. rtley, Devonſ. between Rowborough S. Moulton. Wortley. Glouc. in the ſh of Wotton-under Edge. Wortley, kſ. near Wentworth, on the banks of Don. Wortley, Yorkſ. in the pariſh Leeds. Worthiham, Devonſ. N. of on. Worton, Middl. in Iſleworth pa-

Worton, Wilts, near the Devizes. ton, Lower and Upper, Oxfordſ. near dington. Wortwell, Norfolk, near leſton. Worvil, Shropſ. NE. of Bridgeh. Woſaken, Cheſhire, in Malpas pa-

Wotton, SW. of Bedford. Wotton, s, near Abingdon. Wotton, Cornw. . of Saltaſh. Wotton, near Glouceſter. Wotton, Hants, W. of Baſingſtoke. Wotton, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Wotton, Kent, 3 miles NE. of Elham. Wotton, Lincolnſ. NE. of Glandford-Bridge. Wotton, Norfolk, near Saxlingham. Wotton, S. of Northampton. Wotton, Woodton, or Watton at Stone, Herts, W. of Sawcomb. Wotton, Oxf. near Tame. Wotton, Shropſ. E. of Oſweſtry. Wotton, Somerſ. near Pilton. Wotton, Suſſex, E. of Dichling. Wotton, Suff. near Pevenſey Marſh. Wotton-Abbots; ſee Wotton-Abbas.

WOTTON BASSET, a town in Wiltſhire, 30 miles N. by W. of Saliſbury, and 89 W. of London. Market on Friday.

Wotton-Courtney, Somerſ. 4 miles from Minehead. Wotton Fitzpain, Dorſetſhire, near Lyme. Wotton Glanfield, Dorſetſ. near the Vale of White-Hart. Wotton, Great and Little, Lanc. SE. of Liverpool. Wotton, Lower and Upper, Surry, 5 miles from Darking, near the bottom of White Down. Wotton, N. and S. Norfolk, N. of Lynn. Wotton, N. Dorſetſhire, S. of Sherborn. Wotton, N. Somerſetſh. NE. of Glaſtonbury, by Sedgmoor. Wotton-Rivers, Wilts, near Savernake-Foreſt. Wotton's-End, Glouceſterſ. in Weſterleigh pariſh. Wotton, South, Somerſetſhire, S. of Glaſtonbury.

WOTTON-UNDER-EDGE, a town in Glouceſterſhire, ſeated under the hills, with a conſiderable woollen manufacture. It is 18 miles S. of Glouceſter, and 108 WNW. of London. Market on Friday.

Wotton-under-Weaver-Hill, Staff. Wotton Underwood, Bucks, near Bernwood-Foreſt. Woughton, Bucks, near Stoby-Stratford. Would-Newton, Linc. W. of Ludburgh. Would-Newton, Yorkſ. N. of Kilham. Woulfworth, Glouceſ. E. of Wotton-under-Edge. Wrabneſs, Eſſex, W. of Harwich.

WRAGBY, a town of Lincolnſhire, 8 miles NE. of Lincoln. Market on Thurſday.

Wragby, Yorkſ. SW. of Pontefract. Wrampingham, Norfolk, NW. of Windham. Wrangle, Linc. S. of Wainfleet.

WRATH, CAPE, a vaſt promontory of Sutherlandſhire, which forms the NW. point of Britain. It is juſtly the dread of mariners; for againſt its rugged and lofty cliffs the rapid tide burſts with incredible fury. Lat. 58. 35. N. lon. 4. 44. W.

Wratting Great, and Little, Suffolk, N. of Haverill. Wratting-Tallow, Suffolk, W. of Little Wratting. Watting, Weſt, Camb. 7 miles from Newmarket. Wrawby, Linc. near Glandford-Bridge. Wraxball, Upper and Lower, Dorſetſ. between Cerne-Abbey and Beminſter. Wraxhall, Somersetf. near Bristol. Wraxhall, North, Wilts, between Marshfield and Chippenham. Wraxhall, South, Wilts, N. of Bradford. Wray, Lanc. in Amounderness. Wraysbury, Bucks, on the Thames, opposite Egham. An island in the river, and in this parish, is still called Charter Island; for in this island, it is said, the Great Charter was signed by King John, although his consent was extorted in Runny Mead. Wraysholm-Tower, Lancas. S. of Cartmel, by the Ken Sands. Wrechwick Green, Oxf. near Amersden. Wrecklesham, Surry, near Farnham. Wrekin-Hill, Shrops. E. of Shrewsbury; the highest ground in the county, well adorned. Wrekton, Yorks. W. of Pickering. Wrenbury, Cheshire, on the Weaver, SW. of Namptwich. Wreningham, Great and Little, with Nelonde, Norfolk, near Windham. Wrentham, Suffolk, S. of Hensted. Wrenthorp, Yorkshire, near Wakefield. Wrenthall, Shropshire, near Penderbach. Wrentage, Somersetf. near N. Curry. Wressall, or Wreshill, Yorks. on the Derwent, NW. of Howden. Wrest-House, Bedf. near Silsoe. Wrestlingworth, Bedf. SE. of Potton. Wretham, or Wrotham, East or Great, North or West, and Thorp or Little, Norfolk, hamlets, SW. of Shropham. Wreton, Chesh. N. of Kinderton. Wretton, Norfolk, W. of Stoke.

*WREXHAM, a town in Denbighshire, the most populous one in the county, and indeed in all N. Wales. Wrexham is of Saxon origin, and retains the language and appearance of an English town. It has an ancient Gothic church, whose lofty steeple, for curious architecture, is reckoned one of the finest in England. Here is a considerable manufacture of Welsh flannels, and a large cannon foundry. It is seated on a river, which falls into the Dee, in a country affording plenty of lead, 11 miles SSW. of Chester, and 188 NW. of London. Markets on Monday and Thursday. Fairs on March 23d, Holy Thursday, June 6th, and September 19th.

Wribbenhall, Worcef. a hamlet to Kidderminster. Wrigglaton, Somers. between Philip's-Norton and Rodstoke. Wrightbold, Linc. S. of Dunnington. Wrightington, Lanc. NW. of Wigan. Wrineford, or Wrinehill, Staff. 4 miles W. of Newcastle-under-Line. Wringworthy, Devonshire, in Mary-Tavey parish.

WRINTON, a town in Somersetshire, seated among the Mendip Hills, 9 miles NNW. of Wells, and 125 W. of London. Market on Tuesday.

Writtle, Essex, a mile from Chelmsford. Wrockerdine, Shrops. near Wellington.

WROTHAM, a town in Kent, 11 miles NW. by W. of Maidstone, and 24 SE. by E. of London. Market on Tuesday.

Wrotham-Park, Middl. near Barnet. Wrottesley, Staff. NW. of Wolverhampton. Wroughton, Wilts, S. of Swindon.

WROXETER, a town of Shropshire, on the Severn, 5 miles SE. of Shrewsbury. It was known to the Romans; is said to have been built by the Britons, was 3 miles in circumference, and is supposed to have suffered much by the Saxons. Traces of a bridge over the river are yet discernible, when the water is low; as also of a wall 3 yards broad; and a deep trench, outside, with which the town was formerly environed.

Wroxhall, Warwicks. a mile SW. of Honiley, near Old Stratford. Wroxham, Norfolk, on the Bure, NE. of Rackheath. Wroxton, Oxf. a mile NW. of Banbury. Wrungey, or Wormgey, Norfolk, near Shouldham. Wrynose Hill, a mountain of Cumb. remarkable for its 3 shire stones, distant about a foot from each other, viz. one is in this county, one in Lancas. and the third in Westmorl. Wulfall, Wilts, near Great Bedwin. Wulfencott, or Ovencote, Warwicks. near Willoughby. Wullerton, Shrops. SE. of Prees. Wulley, Durham, NW. of Branspeth-Castle.

WULPIT, or WOOLPIT, a town in Suffolk, situated in the road between Bury and Ipswich, 8 miles E. of the former, and 79 NE. of London. Market on Thursday. A horse fair, which lasts for a week, from September 16th.

Wulscot, Derbys. NW. of Wirksworth. Wulsthorp, Nottingh. in Lowdham parish. Wulston, Cornwall, in St. Ives parish. Wulston, Durham, N. of Stockton. Wulston, or Wolston, Warwicks. SE. of Coventry. Wulstey Castle, Cumberl. W. of Abbey-Holm. Wulvescote, or Wolscote, Warwicks. near Granborough. Wurney, a river in Montgomeryshire. Wurspur, Yorkshire, S. of Burton-Grange.

WURTEMBURG, or WIRTEMBURG, a sovereign duchy of Germany, in Suabia, S. of the palatinate of the Rhine, and the territories of Spire, Hohenloe, and Hall. It is about 65 miles in length, and as much in breadth, and the river Neckar runs almost through the middle of it, from S. to N. Though it abounds with mountains and woods, yet it is one of the most populous and fertile countries in Germany, producing plenty of pasture, corn, fruit, excellent wine, timber, and silk. There are also mines and salt-springs, with with plenty of fish and game. The duchy contains 68 cities and large towns, 1200 market-towns, villages, and hamlets, and about 48,000 inhabitants. The castle of Wurtemburg, which gives name to the duchy, lies 4 miles E. of Stutgard, the capital.

WURTZBURG, a city of Franconia, capital of a bishopric of the same name, and the residence of the bishop. It was anciently the residence of certain dukes of Thuringia. It contains an episcopal palace, a cathedral, several collegiate and parish churches, abbeys, and convents, a university, and an hospital, in which are generally 400 poor men and women. It is seated on the river Maine, 40 miles N. by W. of Bamberg. Lat. 49. 40. N. Lon. 10. 33. E.

WURTZBURG, a bishopric of Franconia, about 76 miles in length, and 58 in breadth, divided into 50 bailiwicks. The soil is very fertile, and produces more corn and wine than the inhabitants can consume. The territories of the bishop comprehend above 400 towns and villages, of which he is sovereign, being one of the greatest ecclesiastic princes of the empire.

Wyberson, Bedf. in the parish of Eatonsocon. Wych, Dorset. 3 miles N. of Corfe, or Pool, Bay. Wych, Dorsetshire, near the harbour of Bridport.

WYCK, part of the city of Maestricht, on the E. side of the Meuse.

WYCK TE-DUERSTEDE, a town of Utrecht, 13 miles SE. of that city.

WYCOMB, CHIPPING, or HIGH WYCOMB, a town of Buckinghamshire, seated on the river Wyck, on which, as well as on the Loddon, are many corn and paper-mills, 12 miles SSE. of Aylesbury, and 31 NNW. of London. A large corn-market on Friday.

Wycomb, West, a village of Bucks, two miles W. of Chipping Wycomb.

WYE, a town in Kent, seated on the river Stour, 10 miles SSW. of Canterbury, and 56 ESE. of London. Market on Thursday.

WYE, a river of S. Wales, which issuing out of Plynlimmon-Hill, very near the source of the Severn, crosses the NW. corner of Radnorshire, giving name to the town of Ryadergowy, or the Fall of the Wye, where it is precipitated in a cataract. Then flowing between this county and Brecknockshire, it crosses Herefordshire, and dividing the counties of Gloucester and Monmouth, falls into the Severn below Chepstow. This river is navigable almost to the Hay, and a canal is made to form a communication between it and the Severn, from Hereford to Gloucester. The romantic beauties of the Wye, which flows in a deep bed, between lofty rocks clothed with hanging woods, and here and there crowned by ruined castles, have frequently employed the descriptive powers of the pen and pencil, and still attract the curiosity of travellers.

Wye, a river in Derbyshire, which rises in the NW. part of the county, above Buxton, and flowing SE. falls into the Derwent below Bakewell. Wye-Down, Kent, is part of a ridge of hills, beginning at Chatham and ending at the sea, between Folkestone and Hythe. Wyerton, Kent, near Maidstone. Wyham, Lincolns. near Ludburgh. Wyke, Dorset. a mile from Gillingham. Wyke, Dorset. in Halstock parish. Wyke-Regis, Dorset. near Melcomb, and the ferry to Portland Isle. Wyke, Essex, near Beckingham. Wykes, Suffolk, near Ipswich. Wykin, Warwicks. NE. of Coventry.

WYL, or WEYL, a town of St. Gall, in Switzerland, capital of a bailiwick. It is 16 miles SSW. of Constance.

Wyley, Essex, SE. of Wivenhoe. Wymondham, Leicest. S. of Waltham-on-the-Would.

WYMONDHAM. See WINDHAM.

WYNANDERMERE. See WINDERMERE.

WYNENDALE, a town of the late Austrian Flanders, where General Webb, in the year 1708, as he was conveying a great supply of provisions to the allied army before Lisle, was attacked by 24,000 French, but though he had only 8000 men, he defeated the enemy, and arrived safe at Lisle.

Wynniton, Cornwall, SE. of Mount's-Bay. Wynster and Wyre, rivers in Lancashire.

WYRE, a river of Luxemburg.

Wyredale, Lancas. a lonely village near Wyredale-Forest, at the source of the Wyre. Wyre Forest, Worcest. near Bewdley. Wyre-Hill, or Hall, Middlesex near Edmonton. Wythington, Glouces. near Dowdeswell. Wython, Yorkshire, N. of Headon, in Holderness. Wyerton, Norfolk, SW. of Clay.

XABEA, a ſea-port of Valencia, in Spain, 38 miles NNE. of Alicant.

XACCA, or SIACCA, a ſea-port of Sicily, in the valley of Mazara, ſeated on the SW. coaſt, 20 miles SE. of Mazara, and 41 miles SSW. of Palermo.

XAGUA, a large bay on the S. coaſt of the iſland of Cuba, one of the fineſt ports in America. It is 15 miles in circumference, and is ſurrounded with mountains, which break off the force of the winds. Lon. 81. 20. W.

XALAPA, a town of Tlaſcala, in Mexico, containing about 2000 inhabitants, is ſaid to give name to the purgative root, called jalap, or xalap, and is 63 miles E. of Puebla de los Angelos.

XALISCO, a town of Mexico, capital of a province of the ſame name. It is 9 miles NW. of Compoſtella Nuova.

XALISCO, a province of Mexico, in the audience of Guadalajara, W. of Mechoacan and Guadalajara Proper, and N. and E. of the S. Pacific Ocean, about 150 miles in length, and the ſame in breadth. It abounds with Indian wheat and ſilver mines, but has very few cattle of any ſort.

XALON, a river of Spain, in Old Caſtile, which riſes near Medina Celi, and runs into the Ebro, about 2 leagues above Saragoſſa.

XATIVA, formerly a flouriſhing town of Spain, in Valencia, but ſiding with Charles III. in 1707, Philip V. ordered it to be demoliſhed, and a new town to be built, called St. Felipe. It is 29 miles S. of Valencia.

XAVIER, ISLAND OF. See AGRIGNAN.

XAVIER, a town of Spain, in Navarre, about 3 miles E. of Sanguesa. It was the native place of the celebrated miſſionary of that name.

XENIL, a river of Spain, which riſes in Grenada, and runs into the Guadalquiver, about a league below Ecija.

XERES-DE-BADAJOZ, a town of Spain, in Eſtramadura, 10 miles S. of Badajox.

XERES-DE-LA-FRONTERA, a town of Seville, Andaluſia, famous for its excellent wines, corruptly called ſherry. It is ſeated near the river Guadaleta, 15 miles NNE. of Cadiz.

XERAS, DE-LA-FRONTERA, a town of Mexico, in the province of Zacatecas.

XERES-DE-GUADIANA, a town of Andaluſia, ſeated near the river Guadiana, a little to the N. of St. Lucar.

XERES, NOVA, a town of Venezuela, in Terra Firma.

XERIL, a conſiderable river of Spain, which riſes in Grenada, and empties itſelf into the Guadalquiver, about 6 miles below Ecija.

XERUMENHA, a town of Alentejo, 36 miles E. of Evora.

XICOCO, an iſland of Japan, about 90 miles in length, and near as many in breadth, near the SW. extremity of Niphon, from which it is ſeparated by a ſtrait full of ſmall iſlands, and to the NE. of Ximo. It has ſeveral convenient harbours, and there are many towns within the iſland.

XICONA, a town of Valencia, 13 miles N. of Alicant.

XILOCA, a river of Spain, which riſes about 7 miles NE. from Albaracin, in Arragon, and at Calatajud, changes its name to Xalon.

XIMENES, a town of Leon, in Spain, 10 miles S. of Aſtorga.

XIMO, an iſland of Japan, ſuppoſed to be upwards of 300 miles in circumference, excluſive of the bays and creeks. It has a conſiderable number of cities and towns, with ſome good harbours, and is reckoned the ſecond iſland in point of ſize and eminence. It is ſituated to the SW. of Niphon, from which it is divided by a narrow channel.

XIVRY-LE-FRANC, a town in the department of the Moſelle, 9 miles S. of Longwy.

XUCAR, a river in Spain, which riſes in New Caſtile, and paſſing by Cuenca, Alarcon, &c. in Valencia, runs into the Mediterranean, about 24 miles S. of the city of Valencia.

XUDNOGROD, a town of Croatia.

a town of China, of the ſecond ) rank, in the province of Petcheli, 55 miles SW. of Peking.
', a town of China, of the ſecond rank,
he province of Setchuen, on the bor-
: of Thibet, 840 miles SW. of Peking.
'abington, Hants, NE. of Winchester.
'ADKIN, a river in N. Carolina, which s into the Great Pedee, about 9 miles
'. of Salem.
'afford, Yorkſhire, near Northallerton.
'AIK, a river of Ruſſia. See URAL.
'AIK COSSACS. See URALIAN COS-CS.
'AITSK. See URALSK.
'AKUTSK, a town of Ruſſia, in the gonment of Irkutſk, capital of a province which it gives name. It contains be:en 5 and 600 houſes, and is defended a wooden fort. It is ſituated on the er Lena, 960 miles NE. of Irkutſk, Yaldham, Kent, in Wrotham pariſh.
lding, Kent, 4 miles S. of Weſt Mal-g, has a ſtone bridge over the Medway.
YALE, a town, capital of a diſtrict in e Iſland of Ceylon, 56 miles SSE. of ndi.
YALEPUL, a town in the iſland of eylon, ſituated near the E. coaſt, 96
iles SE. of Candi.
YALME, a river in Devonſhire, which ns into the Engliſh Channel at Yalouth, about 7 miles SE. of Plymouth.
Yalmeton, or Yampton, Devonſ. on the ver Yalme, SE. of Plymouth. Ethel-ald, one of the Saxon kings, had his ief palace here.
Yanesborough Caſtle, Wilts, on the Villybourn, SE. of Heytesbury, has the aces of an oval camp, ſuppoſed to be aniſh, as the Roman camps are generally quare and ſingle trenched. It is 362 aces long, and has three extremes.
Yaneton, or Heanton, Devonſ. NW. of arnſtaple.
YANGLI, a town of China, of the ſeond rank, in the province of Quangſi, bout 1157 miles SSW. of Peking.
YANGTCHEOU, a city of China, of the rſt rank, in the province of Kiangnan.
t is extremely populous, chiefly by the le and diſtribution of ſalt, that is made n the adjoining ſea coaſts, carries on a reat trade in all manner of Chineſe vorks, and is ſituated on the Great or Royal Canal, which extends from the Takiang northwards to the river Hoang-o, or the Yellow River, 485 miles SSE. f Peking.

YANGTSE, a river of China, which riſes, however, in the mountains of Thibet, where it is called Kincha; it paſſes through the Chineſe province of Setchuen, and enters the province of Houquang, where it changes its name to Yangtſe, after which it croſſes the province of Kiangnan, and empties itſelf into the ſea, about 120 miles E. from Nanking. This river changes its name in almoſt every province through which it paſſes.

Yanwath, Weſtmorland, S. of Penrith, near the conflux of the Loder and Eimot. Near it is Mayborough Caſtle, a curious monument of antiquity, conſiſting of immenſe ſtones leading to an area 88 yards in diameter.

YAONGAN, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Yunnan. It contains only two towns, but has a conſiderable territory. The adjoining foreſts produce abundance of muſk. Near the city is a well of ſalt water, from which they make very white ſalt. It is 1175 miles SW. of Peking.

Yanworth, Gloceſterſhire, a hamlet to Haſleton. Yapton, Suſſex, SW. of Arundel. Yarborough Caſtle, Wilts. Yarburgh, Lincolnſh. 2 miles W. of Thornton, gives name to a hundred, and has the ruins of a Roman camp. Yarcomb, Devonſhire, W. of Chard, is properly Yarticomb, from the river Yarty, which riſes under the Black Down Hills. Yarcomb, Somerſetſhire, near Whitſtanton. Yardbury, Devonſhire, near Honiton. Yardley, Herts, SW. of Buntingford. Yardley, Norfolk, NE. of Loddon. Yardley, Somerſetſhire, near Wokey. Yardley, Staff. near Talk-on-the-Hill. Yardley, Worceſ. in the NE. part, adjoining King's Norton. Yardley Chace and Haſtings, Northamptonſhire, near Caſtle-Aſhby. Yardley-Gobbins, Northamp. NW. of Stony-Stratford. Yardop, Northumberl. NW. of Harehaugh. Yardſwick, Cheſh. W. of Sandbach.

YARE, a river of Norfolk, which riſes near the NW. part of the county, and paſſes by Norwich, whence it is navigable to Yarmouth, below which it falls into the German Ocean. It is noted for plenty of ruffs.

Yareſthorp, Yorkſhire, W. of New Malton. Yarkhill, Herefordſhire, between Stretton and Hereford. Yarlet, N. of Stafford. Yarlington, Somerſetſhire, W. of Wincanton.

*YARMOUTH, GREAT, a conſiderable ſea-sea-port of Norfolk, seated on the river Yare, by means of which, it has the export and import trade of Norwich, and various places in Norfolk and Suffolk, 22 miles E. of Norwich, and 123 NE. of London. Its harbour will not admit ships of large burden; but it is extremely convenient for business, the vessels lying in the river, along a very extensive and commodious quay, planted with trees. Its foreign trade is chiefly to the Baltic, Holland, Portugal, and the Mediterranean. It also sends ships to the Greenland fishery. The home fishing is carried on at two seasons, that for mackarel in May and June, and that for Herrings in October and November. Of these last, 50,000 barrels are generally taken and cured in one year; about 150 vessels of forty or fifty tons burden, being annually employed in the fishery. The herrings are chiefly cured here by salting, and then drying them in wood smoke; when, under the name of red herrings, they are either consumed at home, or exported to Spain, Italy, and other southern countries. Yarmouth is much frequented in the season as a place for sea-bathing. The town consists of about 1500 houses, and there are a few pretty wide streets, and a spacious market-place; but they are chiefly very narrow, are called rows, and are just wide enough for their little carriages to pass through. These carriages are a kind of sledge, or very small cart, drawn by one horse, and calculated entirely for these narrow streets. A lofty steeple here serves as a landmark for those at sea; but which ever way it is viewed, it appears crooked. Off the mouth of the harbour is a bar, which prevents the entry of ships of large burden; and the roads, E. of the town, within the dangerous sands and banks of the Offing, are much frequented, though noted for frequent shipwrecks. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

YARMOUTH, a borough of the Isle of Wight, in Hampshire, seated on the north-western part of the island, on the sea-shore, 8 miles NNW. of Newport, and 99 SW. of London. Market on Friday.

YARKAN. See IREEKEN.

Yarnelbomb, Devons. SE. of Biddeford. Yarnfield, Staff. SW. of Stone. Yarnton, 3 miles from Oxford, in the road to Woodstock. Yarton-Hall, Warw. near Birmingham.

YAROSLAF, a government of Russia, W. of the government of Kostrom. Its capital, of the same name, which is noted for the manufacture of Russia leather, is seated at the confluence of the river Volga, with the Kotorosl, 140 miles NNE. of Moscow.

Yarpoll, Heref. near Croft-Castle. Yarraw, Jarrow, or Gurwi, Durham, on the Tyne, 5 miles E. of Newcastle. Yarrow-Haugh, Northumberl. N. of the Tyne, E. of Emmot-Haugh. Yarty, Devons. near Membury.

* YARUM, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkshire, seated on the river Tees, over which is a handsome stone bridge, and which is navigable for small craft to the sea. It is 4 miles SW. of Stockton, and 38 N. by W. of York. Market on Thursday.

Yarwell-Lodge, Northamp. E. of King's Cliff. Yarwich, Northumb. near Hexham. Yason, Herefords. S. of Weobly. Yate, Glouc. a mile W. of Chipping Sodbury. Yateley, Hants, near Blackwater. Yateminster, Dorsets. 3 miles NW. of Stokewood, near the river Ivel. Yatesbury, Wilts, NE. of Calne. Yatleton Hill, Gloucesters. S. of Newent. Yattingdon, Berks. between E. Ilsley and Theal. Yatton, Heref. N. of Ross. Yatton, Heref. on the Lug, SE. of Wigmore Castle. Yatton, Somers. SW. of Bristol. Yaverland, Isle of Wight, in E. Medina. Yaxham, Norfolk, S. of E. Dereham.

YAXLEY, a town in Huntingdonshire, where barracks have been lately erected upon a large scale. It is 14 miles N. by W. of Huntingdon, and 78 N. by W. of London. Market on Tuesday.

Yaxley, Suffolk, NW. of Eye. Yeadon, Yorks. W. Riding, in Gisley parish. Yealdam, Great and Little, Essex, N. of Castle-Heningham. Yeanworth, Gloucesters. W. of Northleach. Yearnwood, Upper and Lower, Shrops. on the Severn, NE. of Cleburry. Yeasthorp, Yorks. near New Malton. Yedding Green, Middlesex, NE. of Hayes. Yedingham, Yorkshire, on the Harford River, SE. of Pickering. Yedrafton and Yelderskey, between Ashborn and Derby. Yeldon, Bedfors. near Shelton. Yelford, Oxfords. between Bampton and Witney.

YELL, one of the Shetland Islands, N. of that called Mainland. It is 20 miles long and about 7 broad, and has several good harbours. The inhabitants live comfortably, having plenty of fuel, and catching immense quantities of small fish.

Yelling, Hunting. near the Papworths. Yellington, Northumb. near Skirnwood. Yelsted, Kent, near Stockbury. Yelvertoft, Northamptonshire, N. of Daventry. Yelverton, Norfolk, between Norwich and London.

YEMEN, a division of Arabia, surrounded rounded by the Red Sea, and the provinces of Hadramaut, Nejed, and Hedjas. It is parcelled out among different sovereigns, some of them considerable princes, as the iman, who resides at Sana, and possesses the most interesting part of this tract of country. Others are called sheiks, if chiefs of large villages; and hakins, if of small ones; who are however, perfectly independent. Coffee is almost the only article exported.

Yendon, a river in Staffordshire.

YENISEI, a large river of Siberia, which rises near Chinese Tartary, and running from N. to S. enters the Frozen Ocean, E. of the bay of Obey.

YENISEISK, a town of Siberia, in the government of Tobolsk, and province of Tomsk. It is seated on the Yenisei, and contains three churches, a monastery, a nunnery, and an exchange, and pays an annual tribute of skins to the crown. Lat. 57. 46. N. lon. 92. 35. E.

Yenlade, or Ewenlode, a river in Staff.

Yenston, Somersetsh. between the Cadburies and Stalbridge.

YENTCHEOW, a city of China, of the first rank, in the province of Tchekiang.

Yeo, Devonshire in Allington parish.

Yeoverin, Northumb. in Glendale.

Yeoverin-Hill, Northumberl. W. of Wooler. It is a steep and lofty mountain, one of the NW. Cheviots; on its summit and sides there appear several works of remote antiquity, imputed to the Druids. It is thought to have been a sacred mount used in fire worship.

*YEOVIL, a town in Somersetshire, with a considerable market on Friday for corn, cheese, hemp, flax, and provisions, and a manufacture of leather gloves. It is seated on the river Ivel, 4 miles S. of Ilchester, and 123 W. by S. of London.

Yerdesley, Chesh. NE. of Macclesfield.

Yerely, Yorksh. between Pickering-Forest and the sea.

Yeresley, Yorksh. SW. of Hovingham.

YESD, a town of Persia, in Irac-Agemi, on the road from Kerman to Ispahan. It has a silk manufactory, and the inhabitants make the finest carpets in the world. It is 200 miles E. of Ispahan.

Yesington, Northumb. in the lordship of Wooler.

Yesley, or Isley, SE. of Oxford.

Yetminster, Dorsets. W. of the Vale of White-Hart.

Yeveley, Derbysh. in Shirley parish.

Yeveney, Middlesex. W. of Stanwell.

Yockleton, SW. of Shrewsbury.

Yokesete, Yorksh. on the Humber, SE. of Howden.

Yokenthwaite, Yorksh. W. Riding, on the Wherfe, near Langstrethdale-Chace.

Yoke's-Court, Kent, in Frinsted parish.

Yolands, Kent, near Godmersham.

Yolgrave, Derbysh. in the High Peak.

Yondover, Dorsets. near Beminster.

YONNE, a department of France, N. of the dept. of Nievre. It is so called from the river that rises in the dept. of Nievre, passes by Chateau-Chinon, Auxerre, Seus, &c. below which last it falls into the Seine. Auxerre is the capital.

*YORK, an ancient city of Yorkshire, of which it is the capital. It has also been considered as the capital of the North, and, in point of rank, as the second city in the kingdom; but it is now surpassed in wealth and populousness by many of the more modern trading towns. The minster is reckoned the most elegant and magnificent Gothic structure in the kingdom, Lincoln, perhaps, excepted. From its top is seen a vast extent of country, particularly the open Wolds to the E. stretching almost to the sea. It is divided by the river Ouse into two parts, which are united by a stately stone bridge of five arches. The castle, built by William the Conqueror, is now a county prison for debtors and felons. Among the charitable foundations is an asylum for lunatics, by much the finest and pleasantest in England. The river Ouse is navigable to this city for vessels of 70 tons burden, although it is 60 miles from the sea. The title of lord was first annexed to the office of mayor by Richard II. The city has jurisdiction over 36 villages and hamlets, W. of the Ouse, called the Liberty of Dinsty. Its members claim a seat in the House of Commons, next to the citizens of London, upon what is called the privy councellor's bench. York is 197 miles N. by W. of London. Markets on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

YORKSHIRE, the largest county in England, bounded on the N. by Westmorland, and the bishopric of Durham; on the E. by the German Ocean; on the S. by Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, and Derbyshire; on the SW. by a small part of Cheshire; on the W. by Lancashire; and on the NW. by Westmorland. It extends 90 miles from N. to S. and 115 from E. to W. This county is divided into three Ridings; the N. Riding containing 18 wapentakes; the E. 7; and the W. 12. It contains one city, 60 market-towns, 563 parishes, and 2330 villages. The air and soil of this extensive county vary extremely; the E. Riding, on account of its neighbourhood to the German Ocean, is more inclined to humidity than the other ridings; but this inconvenience inconvenience decreaſes in proportion as the country recedes from the ſea. However, where the air is moſt indifferent, the ſoil is moſt fruitful: for on the hilly parts of this riding, eſpecially in what is called the York Wolds, the ſoil is generally barren, dry, and ſandy; great numbers of lean ſheep are therefore ſold hence, and ſent into other countries to be fattened for the market. The W. Riding enjoys a ſharp, but healthy air, and the land, on the weſtern ſide, is hilly, ſtony, and not very fruitful; but the intermediate valleys conſiſt of much good meadow ground, and alſo paſture for the largeſt cattle. Much flax is grown here and large plantations of licorice, about Pontefract. On the ſide next the river Ouſe, the ſoil is rich, producing wheat and barley; and, in its worſt parts, very good oats. Its other commodities are iron, coal, jet, alum, horſes, and goats. Here the clothing manufactures principally flouriſh. The N. Riding, in general, exceeds the other two in the ſalubrity and coldneſs of the air. The worſt parts breed lean cattle; but on the ſides of the hills, in the valleys, and plains, it produces good corn, and rich paſtures for large cattle: in the diſtrict of Pickering, which forms the NE. corner of Yorkſhire, and conſiſts of a very extenſive, ſecluded, and fertile vale, is a foſſil marl, produced by a petrifying ſpring, very beneficial for improving land. Rape and potatoes are grown here in great quantities. Richmondſhire, on the NW. of this riding, was formerly a county of itſelf; here many lead-mines are worked to great advantage. In Yorkſhire, likewiſe, are the diſtricts of Cleveland, Holderneſs, and Cravan. The principal rivers of Yorkſhire are the Northern Ouſe, and thoſe which fall into it, as the Don, the Derwent, the Calder, the Aire, the Wharfe, the Nyde, and the Youre, all which terminate in the Humber, which falls into the German Ocean, between Yorkſhire, and Lincolnſhire. Here are likewiſe the Tees and the Hull.

YORK, NEW, one of the United States of America, bounded on the SE. by the Atlantic Ocean; on the E. by Connecticut, Maſſachuſetts, and Vermont; on the N. by the 45th deg. of lat. which divides it from Canada; on the NW. by the river St. Lawrence and the Lakes Ontario and Erie; and on the SW. and S. of Pennſylvania and New Jerſey. It is about 350 miles long, and 300 broad, and is divided into 13 counties. New York, in general, is interſected by ridges of mountains, running in a NE. and SW. direction. Beyond the Allegany Mountains, however, the country is pretty level, of a fine rich ſoil, covered in its natural ſtate, with various kinds of trees. Eaſt of their mountains it is broken into hills, with rich intervening valleys. The hills are thickly clothed with timber, and, when cleared, afford fine paſture. The valleys, when cultivated, produce wheat, hemp, flax, peas, graſs, oats, and Indian corn. Of the commodities produced from culture, wheat is the ſtaple, of which immenſe quantities are raiſed and exported. The beſt lands in this province, which lie along the Mohawks River, and W. of the Allegany Mountains, are yet in a ſtate of nature, or are juſt beginning to be ſettled. This ſtate abounds with ſeveral fine rivers and lakes. The number of inhabitants, in 1771, was 148,124 whites, and 19,883 blacks; total 168,007. The capital is of the ſame name.

YORK, NEW, a city of N. America, capital of the ſtate of the ſame name. It is ſituated at the SW. point of an iſland, at the confluence of Hudſon and Eaſt Rivers, and is about four miles in circumference. The ſituation is both healthy and pleaſant. Surrounded on all ſides by water, it is refreſhed by cool breezes in ſummer, and the air in winter is more temperate than in other places under the ſame parallel. York Iſland is fifteen miles in length, and hardly one in breadth. It is joined to the main by a bridge, called King's bridge. The channels between Long and Staton Iſlands, and between Long and York Iſlands, are ſo narrow as to occaſion an unuſual rapidity of the tides, which is increaſed by the confluence of the waters of Hudſon and Eaſt Rivers. This rapidity, in general, prevents the obſtruction of the channel by ice. There is no baſin or bay for the reception of ſhips, but the road where they lie in Eaſt River is defended from the violence of the ſea by the iſlands which interlock with each other, ſo that, except that of Rhode-Iſland, the harbour of New York, which admits ſhips of any burden, is the beſt of the United States. A few houſes here are built after the old Dutch manner, but the Engliſh taſte has prevailed almoſt a century. In time of peace, more commercial buſineſs is done here than in any other port in the United States. The number of inhabitants, in 1786, was 23,614. Lat. 40. 43. N. lon. 74. 5. W.

YORK FORT, in Hudſon's Bay, the principal eſtabliſhment of the company of that that name; this place has upwards of one hundred men at it, who ſend home annually, from itſelf and four ſubordinate ſettlements, about 20,000 ſkins.

YORK TOWN, a ſmall town of Virginia, ſituated on the S. ſide of York River, 13 miles E. of Williamſburgh.

York Wolds, a heap of hills in the middle of the E. Riding of Yorkſhire. Yorkton, Shropſ. NE. of Albrighton.

YORK, formerly TORENTO, a town of Canada, ſituated on the NW. coaſt of Lake Ontario, in lat. 43. 25. N. and lon. 79. 20. W. Alſo a town of Pennſylvania, 72 miles W. of Philadelphia; a town in the diſtrict of Maine, 50 miles NNE. of Boſton; and a county of Virginia.

YOTCHEOU, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Houquang, ſituated on the Tongting Lake, and on the Yangtſe river, 675 miles S. of Peking.

YOUGHALL, a conſiderable town of Ireland, in the county of Cork. It has a very commodious harbour, and a fine, well-defended quay. It is ſeated at the mouth of the river Blackwater, 25 miles N. by E. of Cork.

Youle, a village in the E. Riding of Yorkſhire, 12 miles below York, at the conflux of the Don and Humber. Here is a remarkable dike, called Youle Dike, about 10 miles long. Here are a ſort of perſons called Triers, becauſe, with a long piece of iron, they ſearch into the ſoft, boggy ground for ſubterraneous trees, which they ſometimes meet with of the fir kind. They often meet with trees large enough to furniſh timber for building, and the ſmaller trees they ſplit into laths, or cut into chips or ſplinters.

Youlſton, Devonſ. in Sherwell pariſh. Young's Manor, Kent, by Chilham.

YOURE, a river in Yorkſhire, which riſes in the Cotter mountain, in the NW. extremity of the county, and paſſes by the towns of Aſkrig, Middleham, Maſham, Rippon, and Boroughbridge, below which laſt, being joined by the Swale, both theſe rivers conſtitute what is called the Ouſe. On this river is the magnificent cataract, called Ayſgard-Force, the water falling nearly half a mile upon a ſurface of ſtone, worn into infinite irregular cavities, and incloſed by bold and ſhrubby cliffs. According to Dr. Pococke, who viſited Egypt, it exceeds the cataract of the Nile.

Yoxford, Suff. between Saxmundham and Haleſworth. Yoxhall, Staff. 4 miles N. of Lichfield, had formerly a market.

YPRES, a town of Flanders, with a conſiderable manufactory in linen, of an excellent fabric, and every year, in Lent, there is a well-frequented fair. In 1242, the number of inhabitants, for the moſt part weavers, amounted to 200,000. By the ſeverity of the Duke of Alva, the principal manufacturers were driven to England, from which time, that branch of trade has declined. The chatelany of Ypres contained about 30 villages, and ſent deputies to the ſtates of Flanders By the treaty of Utrecht, it became a Dutch barrier town, and though taken by the French in 1744, was reſtored at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. It is ſeated on the river Ypre, 15 miles NNW. of Liſle, and 138 N. of Paris.

YRIEX, ST. a town in the dept. of Upper Vienne, 20 miles S. of Limoges.

YSENDICK, a town of Dutch Flanders, 8 miles E. of Sluys.

YSSEL. See ISSEL.

YSSELBURG, a town of Cleves.

YSSENGEAUX, a town in the dept. of Upper Loire, 10 miles NE. of Le Puy.

YSTAD, a ſea-port of Schonen, Sweden, from whence a packet ſails to Stralſund.

YTHAN. See EITHAN.

YUCATAN. See JUCATAN.

YVERDUN, a town of Berne, Switzerland, in the county of Vaud, capital of a bailiwick of the ſame name, 15 miles in length, and containing 25 pariſhes. In the Theodoſian table, it is called Caſtrum Ebredunenſe, and the Romans maintained here a præfectus barcariorum. It is ſeated at the head of the lake of the ſame name, 34 miles SSW. of Bern.

YVERDUN, LAKE OF. See NEUCHATEL.

YVETOT, a town in the dept. of Lower Seine, 5 miles NNE. of Caudebec.

YVICA. See IVIEA.

YUMA, or LONG ISLAND, one of the Bahama Iſlands, 50 miles in length, and of unequal breadth.

YUMETOS, a cluſtre of ſmall iſlands among the Bahamas, about 20 miles W. or SW. of Yuma.

YUN-NAN, a province of China, S. of Setchuen and Thibet. It contains 21 cities of the firſt rank, and 55 in the ſecond and third, and is well-watered with rivers and lakes, which render it very fruitful. Gold is very often found in the ſands of the rivers, and probably there are mines of the ſame metal in the mountains of the eaſtern part. There are alſo copper-mines, ſeveral ſorts of precious ſtones, beſide muſk, benjamin, lapis lazuli, and very very fine marble, ſome of which is painted of divers colours. They have alſo excellent horſes, which are ſtrong and vigorous, but low; as alſo very ſmall deer, which are kept for their amuſement.

YUNNAN, a city of China, of the firſt rank, capital of a province of the ſame name. It is 1158 miles SSW. of Peking.

YUNNING, a city of China, of the firſt rank, in the province of Honan. It is 480 miles S. of Peking.

ZABERN, a town of Spire, 21 miles SSW. of Manheim.

ZABOLA, a town of Tranſylvania.

ZABURN. See SAVERNE.

ZACATECAS, a province of Mexico, having new Biſcay on the N. and Guaſteca on the E. The capital, of the ſame name, is 240 miles NNW. of Mexico.

ZACATULAN, or SACATULA, a town of Mechoacan, in N. America, ſituated at the mouth of a river of the ſame name, on the Pacific Ocean, 130 miles S. of Mechoacan.

Zael-Monachorum, Devonſhire, 8E. of Okehampton.

ZAFRA, a town in Spaniſh Eſtramadura.

ZAGARA, a famous mountain of Livadia, near the ancient Thebes. It was formerly called Helicon, and is almoſt always covered with ſnow.

ZAGATULLA, a town of Mechoacan, Mexico, 130 miles S. of the city of Mechoacan.

ZAGORIA, or DAEVELTO, a town of Bulgaria, the ſee of a Greek archbiſhop. It is ſituated near the Black Sea, 58 miles NE. of Adrianople.

ZAGRAB, a town in Auſtrian Croatia.

ZAHARA, a town of Andaluſia.

ZAHARA, or THE DESERT, a vaſt country of Africa, ſtretching from near the Atlantic Ocean on the W. to Barca and Nubia on the E. and from Biledulgerid on the N. to Nigritia and the river Senegal on the S. It comprehends a ſpace of about 600 miles from N. to S. and 1800 from W. to E. The inhabitants are a mixture of wandering nations proceeding from Arabs, Moors, Portugueſe refugees, &c. ſubject to a number of petty princes. The commodities are camels, horned cattle, horſes, dates, the fat and feathers of oſtriches, and the gum Senegal.

ZAIRE, a large river of Africa, which paſſes through the kingdom of Congo, and falls into the Atlantic Ocean, between the 6th and 7th deg. of S. lat.

ZAMORA, a town of Leon, on the Douro.

ZAMORA, a town of Guadalajara, Mexico; and a town of Quito, S. America, 180 miles SSW. of Quito.

ZAMORA, a town of Algarve.

ZAMOSKI, a town of Belez, Poland.

ZANA, or SANA, a decayed town of Truxillo, in Peru, capital of a juriſdiction which extends about 25 leagues along the coaſt. It is ſituated in a charming valley, fertile in fruit and corn, and adorned with the moſt beautiful flowers, about 60 miles N. of Truxillo.

ZANFARA, a town of Negroland, capital of a country, 170 miles ENE. of Wangara.

ZANGUEBAR, a country of Africa, little known, ſituated on the eaſtern coaſt, between lat. 2. 0. N. and 18. 0. S. in which the Portugueſe have various ſettlements. The inhabitants are partly of the Romiſh faith, and Mahometans, but moſtly Pagans. The Bedouin Arabs breed cattle, and live on the fleſh and milk, while the Zanges, or negroes, feed on wild beaſts and fowl, which ſwarm all over theſe parts. Throughout the whole country, are mines of gold, eaſily got, by the help of which the indolent natives purchaſe neceſſaries from other parts; but, on this very account, they are extremely jealous of letting ſtrangers penetrate into the inland country. The principal territories are Melinda, Mongala, Moſambique, Jubo, and ſome others. The Portugueſe trade with the natives for ſlaves, ivory, gold, oſtrich-feathers, furs, wax, and drugs.

ZANHAGA, a diſtrict of Zahara, in Africa, bordering on the Atlantic.

ZANTE, an iſland of the Mediterranean, near the coaſt of the Morea, 17 miles SE. of the iſland of Cephalonia. It is about 12 miles in length, and 6 in breadth; its principal riches conſiſt in currants, with which it abounds. Here are alſo fine peaches, weighing eight or ten en ounces, cucumbers, figs, and oil. The houſes are low, on account of the frequent earthquakes, for ſcarce a year paſſes without one; but they do no great damage. The grapes are called currants, becauſe they were chiefly cultivated about Corinth. This iſland lately belonged to the Venetians, and in it there are about 40 villages, but no other large towns than Zante, which is ſeated on the eaſtern ſide of the iſland, and has a good harbour. The Engliſh and Dutch have each a factory and conſul here. Lat. 37. 53. N. lon. 21. 3. E.

ZANZIBAR, an iſland of the eaſtern coaſt of Africa, near the coaſt of Zanguebar. Lat. 6. 0. S.

ZARA, a city of the late Venetian Dalmatia, capital of a county of the ſame name, with a ſafe, capacious harbour. It is ſeated on a ſmall peninſula, joined to the continent by an iſthmus only 25 paces in breadth. On the ſide of the citadel the fortifications are conſidered as almoſt impregnable, being defended by very deep ditches hewn out of the rock. Near the church, which the Greeks call St. Helia, are two handſome fluted columns, of the Corinthian order, ſuppoſed to have been part of an ancient temple of Juno. The circumference of the walls extends two miles, and the number of the inhabitants is about 6000. In the caſtle the provedditor, or governor of Dalmatia, reſided. Lat. 44. 22. N.

ZARNATA, a town in the Morea, 10 miles SW. of Miſitta.

ZARNAW, a town of Sandomirz, Poland.

ZASLAW, a town of Volhinia.

ZATMAR, a town of Hungary, 56 miles NNW. of Coloſvar.

ZATOR, a town of Cracovia.

ZBOROW, a town of Poland, in Galicia, 68 miles E. of Lemburg.

ZEALAND, an iſland of Denmark, in the Baltic, almoſt of a round form, and about 700 miles in circumference. It is bounded on the N. by the Schaggerack; on the E. principally by the Sound; on the S. by the Baltic; and on the W. by the Great Belt. The coaſt is much interſected by large bays; and within the country are ſeveral lakes, which, together with the rivers, abound in fiſh. In moſt parts is plenty of wood, except towards the centre of the iſland, where turf is generally uſed for fuel. It is the largeſt of the iſles of Denmark, and exceedingly fertile; producing grain of all ſorts, and in great plenty; and abounding with excellent paſture. It is particularly famous for its breed of horſes. Copenhagen is the capital.

ZEALAND, one of the Seven United Provinces of the Netherlands, ſeparated by the ſea on the N. from the iſles of S. Holland; by the Scheldt on the E. from Brabant; by the Hont from Flanders; and on the W. it is bounded by the German Ocean. It comprehends 8 iſlands, 3 of which are pretty large. Their names are Walcheren, Schowen, S. Beveland, N. Beveland, Tolen, Doveland, Wolferdike, and St. Philip. There are likewiſe 6 or 7 others, of little importance. The inhabitants defend themſelves from the encroachments of the ſea by their dikes, which, at the bottom, are generally 25 German ells in breadth, and are ſo wide at top, that two carriages may paſs abreaſt. In high tides and ſtormy weather, the waves, however, often force a paſſage, and even flow over them. The inhabitants, in general, are extremely wealthy, being maintained by their plentiful fiſheries, and trade with foreign nations. The ſoil is fruitful in theſe iſlands, but the air unhealthy for ſtrangers, though not for the natives. The river Scheldt, having paſſed by Antwerp, divides it into two, and holds, as it were, the iſles of Zealand between its arms. One of theſe runs eaſtward, and the other weſtward, which laſt the fiſhermen call Stont, or Hont.

ZEALAND, NEW, in the South Pacific Ocean, was firſt diſcovered by Taſman, in 1642. He traverſed the eaſtern coaſt from lat. 34. 0. to 43. 0. S. and entered a ſtrait; but being attacked by the natives, ſoon after he came to an anchor, in the place to which he gave the name of Murderer's Bay, he did not go on ſhore. He called the country Staten Land, in honour of the States-General, though it has been generally diſtinguiſhed in our maps and charts by the name of New Zealand. From the time of Taſman, the whole country, except that part of the coaſt which was ſeen by him, remained altogether unknown, till the year 1770, when it was circumnavigated by Captain Cook, who found it to conſiſt of two large iſlands, ſeparated by the ſtrait above mentioned, which is 4 or 5 leagues broad, and to which he gave his own name. Theſe iſlands lie between lat. 34. 0. and 48. 0. S. and lon. 166. 0. and 180. 0. E. Along the coaſt many ſmall iſlands are formed, and it is indented by deep bays, affording excellent ſhelter for ſhipping, and abundant ſupplies of wood and and water. There are alſo ſeveral rivers capable of receiving large veſſels, in which the ſpring-tide riſes near ten feet perpendicularly. Of the two iſlands, the ſouthernmoſt is for the moſt part mountainous and barren. As far inland as the eye can reach, nothing appears but mountains of ſtupendous height, conſiſting of rocks that are totally naked, except where they are covered with ſnow; but the land bordering on the ſea-coaſt is clothed thick with wood, almoſt down to the water's edge. The northernmoſt iſland has a much better appearance: it is, indeed, not only hilly, but mountainous; yet even the hills and mountains are covered with wood, and every valley has a rivulet of excellent water. The ſoil of theſe valleys, and the plains, of which there are many overgrown with wood, is, in general light, but fertile; and it is ſuppoſed, that every kind of European grain, plants, and fruits, would flouriſh here with the utmoſt luxuriance. The winters are milder than in England, and the ſummers not hotter, though more equally warm. There are foreſts of vaſt extent, full of the ſtraighteſt and largeſt timber, fit for buildings of any kind. The trees are chiefly of two ſorts; one as large as an oak, diſtinguiſhed by a ſcarlet flower, the wood of which is hard and heavy; another remarkably tall and ſtraight, of which, probably, very fine maſts might be made. Among other trees, is a ſpecies of philadelphus, which grows on the eminences that jut out into the ſea, the leaves of which may be uſed as tea, and might be an excellent ſubſtitute for that oriental plant. Wild celery, and a kind of creſſes, grow plentifully in almoſt every cove. Yams, ſweet potatoes, and cocoas, are alſo raiſed by cultivation. Captain Cook, in 1773, planted ſeveral ſpots of ground with European garden-ſeeds; and, in 1777, in ſeveral of theſe ſpots, although totally neglected, and overrun by weeds, were found cabbages, onions, leeks, purſlain, radiſhes, muſtard, &c. and a few fine potatoes, greatly improved by change of ſoil. The only quadrupeds are dogs and rats; the former are domeſtic, and for food; and the latter, though not numerous, ſeem alſo to be eaten. The birds, like the vegetable productions, are almoſt entirely peculiar to the country; and though it is difficult to follow them in the woods, on account of the underwood and climbing plants, yet a perſon, by remaining in one place, may ſhoot as many in a day as will ſerve for ſix or eight others. Captain Cook introduced European poultry, and, on his laſt viſit, had the ſatisfaction to find them increaſed, both in a wild and domeſtic ſtate, beyond all danger of being exterminated. Their creeks ſwarm with fiſh, which are not only wholeſome, but equally delicious with thoſe of Europe. Captain Cook ſeldom came to an anchor, but his men caught enough, with hook and line only, to ſupply the whole ſhip's crew, and when they fiſhed with nets, every meſs in the ſhip ſalted as much as ſupplied them when at ſea ſome time after. The rocks are furniſhed with great quantities of excellent muſcles, one ſort of which meaſures above a foot in length, and with great variety of other ſhell-fiſh. The men are ſtout and fleſhy; but none of them corpulent, like the indolent and luxurious inhabitants of Otaheite and the Society Iſles; and they are alſo exceedingly vigorous and active. The women, in general, are ſmaller than the men, poſſeſſing few peculiar graces of form or perſon; and chiefly diſtinguiſhed by the ſoftneſs of their voices. The bodies of both ſexes are marked with black ſtains, called amoco, which is the ſame as tattowing at Otaheite. Their dreſs is alſo the ſame; it conſiſts of an oblong garment, about five feet long and four broad. They bring two corners of this garment over their ſhoulders, and faſten it on the breaſt with the other parts, which covers the body, and about the belly it is again tied with a girdle of mat. They ornament their heads with feathers, pearl ſhells, bones, &c. The women, ſometimes, wear necklaces of ſhark's teeth, or bunches of long beads, made of bones or ſhells. Their houſes are miſerable lodging-places, and their only furniture is a few ſmall baſkets, in which they put their fiſhing-hooks and other trifles. Their food conſiſts chiefly of fiſh, with which, inſtead of bread, they eat the root of a kind of fern, which they ſcorch over the fire, and then beat with a ſtick till the bark, or dry outſide, falls off. Beſide their dogs, they alſo contrive to kill birds; and in moſt part of the northern iſlands, they have ſweet potatoes, cocoas, and yams; but, in the ſouthern, nothing is raiſed by cultivation. Their cookery conſiſts wholly in roaſting and baking, which latter is performed in the ſame manner as at Otaheite. The women eat in common with the men, and but little ſubordination, or diſtinction of rank, is obſerved among them. From Cape Kidnappers, in lat. 39. 45. S. for upwards of 80 leagues to the northward, the people acknowledge one ſovereign, called Teratu, and under him ſeveral ſubordinate chiefs, who probably adminiſter juſtice, and to whom great reſpect is paid; but whether his authority be hereditary or delegated, is uncertain. This part of the coaſt is much the moſt populous; tillage, weaving, and the other arts of peace, being here beſt known, and moſt practiſed. The canoes are more decorated, the plantations more numerous, and the clothes and carving finer, than any where elſe. In other parts, they are ſcattered along the coaſt, in ſingle families, or in larger tribes, and each in a ſtate of perpetual hoſtility with all the reſt. From their ſcanty ſtock of vegetables, if their fiſhing ſhould fail, they have no reſource againſt abſolute famine. Upon the whole, there is little room to doubt that theſe people are cannibals.

ZEBID, a city of Yemen, Arabia.

ZEGZEG, a kingdom of Africa, ſituated to the W. of Zanfara.

ZEILA. See ADEL.

ZEITON, a town of Theſſaly, 50 miles SE. of Lariſſa.

ZEITZ, a town of Naumburg, Upper Saxony, with a college.

ZELL, a town of Lower Saxony, and capital of a duchy of the ſame name, which devolved to the houſe of Hanover, by marriage with the heireſs, the male line failing, in 1705. It is ſurrounded by ditches and ramparts, on which are planted cheſnut and lime-trees, and is a ſmall town, with a few artificers and manufacturers, particularly in gold and ſilver. The houſes are old and of a mean appearance; but the high courts of appeal for all the territories of the electoral houſe of Brunſwick Lunenburg are held here. Here alſo is the provincial houſe for the affairs of the principality. The other public edifices are the Guildhall, the Riding-houſe, the Mews, and the Armory. The caſtle, which is ſituated near the town, and is walled and moated in, was formerly the reſidence of the dukes, and was repaired by order of the King of Great Britain, for the reſidence of his unfortunate ſiſter, the Queen of Denmark, who died here. It is ſeated on the river Aller, 10 miles S. of Lunenburg.

ZELL, a town of Salzburg, Bavaria, ſeated on the Zeller See; and a town of Hammerſbach, Suabia.

ZEMBLA, NOVA, a large iſland, lying in the Northern Ocean, to the N. of Ruſſia, from which it is ſeparated by the Strait of Waigate, about 500 miles in length, and from 100 to 200 in breadth. It was firſt diſcovered by the Engliſh in 1553. Its inhabitants are chiefly wild beaſts, particularly white foxes, bears, elks, reindeer, and rabbits; yet a few human beings have been ſeen here at times. The country produces nothing but moſs, and a few arctic plants. Sea-cows abound on the coaſt, and ſea-fowl flock there to lay their eggs. In 1596, a Dutch veſſel was caſt away on the coaſt, and the ſhip's company were obliged to winter here; they did not ſee the ſun from the 4th of November, to the beginning of February, and had great difficulty to keep themſelves from being frozen to death. Lat. 71. to 78. N. lon. 53. 45. W. to 72. 49. E.

Zennen, Cornwall, near St. Burien's.

ZENTA, a town of Hungary, on the river Theiſſe, where Prince Eugene, in 1697, obtained a ſignal victory over the Turks, commanded by the emperor, Muſtapha II. in perſon. Twenty thouſand Turks were killed, 10,000 wounded, and 3000 taken priſoners. It is 52 miles N. of Belgrade.

ZERBST, a town of Anhalt Zerbſt, Upper Saxony, with a caſtle, where the princes commonly reſide, and a college. It is famous for brewing good beer; and here are manufactures of gold and ſilver. It is 44 miles SSW. of Potſdam.

ZEREA, a town of Farſiſtan, Perſia, 18 miles NNE. of Schiras.

ZIA, an iſland of the Archipelago, anciently called Ceos and Hydruſſa, SW. of Andros, and 12 miles E. of Cape Colonni. It is 15 miles in length, and 8 in breadth; is well cultivated, and abounds in moſt of the neceſſaries of life. They have here a ſort of oak, whoſe fruit, called velani, is the beſt trading commodity of the iſland, being exported for the uſe of dyers and tanners. The principal town, of the ſame name, reſembles an amphitheatre, and contains about 2500 houſes, all flat at the top. Moſt of the inhabitants are Greeks, and have a biſhop.

ZIRIC-ZEE, a town of the United Provinces, in Zealand, and capital of the Iſle of Schowen. It was the ancient reſidence of the counts of Zealand, and formerly a place of conſiderable conſequence. The harbour is now filled up with ſand; it is, however, large and populous, and is 18 miles SSW. of Briel.

ZITTAU, a town of Luſatia, ſubject to the elector of Saxony. The principal buſineſs of the inhabitants is brewing beer; but there are above 100 clothiers, and in the neighbouring villages above 1000 weavers. The merchants of Zittau trade with thoſe of Prague and Leipſick, and extend their commerce as far as Holland. Here is a library, the fineſt in all Luſatia, which is open twice a week; and at a ſmall diſtance from it, is the orphan-houſe. It is ſeated on the river Neiſs, 17 miles S. of Gorlitz.

ZNAIM, a town of Moravia, 58 miles SW. of Olmutz.

ZOARA, an iſland of Barbary, with a good harbour, 60 miles NNW. of Tripoli.

ZOBLITZ, a town of Erzgeburg, Upper Saxony.

ZOFFINGEN, a town of Berne, Switſerland, the principal place of a bailiwick, 24 miles NNW. of Lucerne.

ZOLLERN, a caſtle of Suabia, which gives name to the principality of Hohen-Zollern, which is 87 miles in length, and 17 in breadth, and is a very fertile country. The prince is hereditary chamberlain of the empire. It is 10 miles S. of Tubingen.

ZOLNOK, a town of Hungary, on the Theiſſe, 48 miles SW. of Debreczin.

ZONS, a town of Cologne.

ZOQUES, a diſtrict of Mexico, in Chiapa, bordering on Tabaſco. It produces plenty of ſilk and cochineal.

ZORNDORFF, a village in the New Marche, Brandenburg, near Cuſtrin.

ZOUT PAN, a curious ſalt lake in the country of the Hottentots, ſituated a few miles N. of Point Padron. It is a plain, much above the level of the ſea, and between three and four miles in circumference. At ſome ſeaſons of the year, it is formed into an entire maſs of fine white ſalt, with a hard cruſt, exactly reſembling ice, which, at a diſtance, has a very ſtriking appearance.

ZUEELA, a town of Africa, in Fezzan, ſituated in a fertile diſtrict, in which the remnants of ancient buildings, fountains, ciſterns, and vaulted caves, exhibit ſuch veſtiges of ancient ſplendour, as will probably attract, and highly reward, the attention of future travellers. It is 60 miles E. of Mourzouk.

ZUG, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of a canton of the ſame name, ſeated on a beautiful lake, in a fertile valley. It contains two churches, a convent, a town-houſe, arſenal, corn magazine, college, hoſpital, &c. Oſwald, a Saxon king of Northumberland, in the 7th century, is the tutelar ſaint of this place. Zug is 12 miles NNE. of Lucern.

ZUG, one of the cantons of Swiſſerland, bounded on the E. and N. by Zurich; on the W. by Lucern; and on the S. by Schweitz; about 10 miles long, and nearly as much in breadth. The government reſides in a council, which meets annully in the town of Zug, where every male of 16 years of age is poſſeſſed of a vote, and where all public poſts are conferred. The inhabitants are Romaniſts.

ZUG, a lake of Swiſſerland, 8 miles long and 2 wide, named from the town on its coaſt.

ZULLICHAW, a town in the New Marche, Brandenburg, with a woollen manufacture. It is 37 miles SE. of Frankfort on the Oder.

ZULPHA, a town of Perſia, a ſort of ſuburb to Iſpahan. It contains about 4000 houſes, and is peopled with a colony of Armenians, who were brought into Perſia by Shah Abbas, from an ancient town on the Aras. It is an archbiſhop's ſee, and contains ſeveral churches and monaſteries.

ZULPICH, a town of Cologne.

ZURICH, a city of Swiſſerland, capital of a canton of the ſame name, ſituated at the northern extremity of the lake of Zurich. It is one of the beſt-built cities in this country, but the ſtreets are narrow, and the houſes high. Zurich was the firſt town in Swiſſerland that ſeparated from the church of Rome, being induced thereto by the arguments of Zuinglius. Among the charitable foundations in this town are an orphan-houſe; an hoſpital for incurables; that for the ſick of all nations, which uſually contains between 6 and 700 patients; and the Allmoſen-Amt, or foundation for the poor, which puts out children as apprentices, and diſtributes money, clothes, and books to poor perſons, not of the town only, but of the canton, to the amount of upward of 3000l. a year. The arſenal is well ſupplied with cannon, arms, and ammunition, and contains a reſerve of muſkets for 30,000 men. They have manufactures of muſlins, cottons, linens, ſilk handkerchiefs, &c. The inhabitants, in 1780, amounted to 10,559. It is 40 miles SE. of Baſle. Lat. 47. 20. N. lon. 8. 30. E.

ZURICH, one of the thirteen cantons of Swiſſerland, about 50 miles in length and 30 in breadth. It is bounded on the N. by Schaffhauſen and a part of Suabia; on the S. by Schweitz and Zug; on the E. by Thurgaw and the county of Tockenburg; and on the W. by the county of Baden. The civil war between the magiſtrates and people of Zurich, in 1335, nearly reduced that city to ruins; but the former being baniſhed, the citizens, in 1337, eſtabliſhed a new form of government. The exiles, after ſeveral fruitleſs attempts, were readmitted; but, engaging in a conſpiracy againſt gainſt the citizens, were diſcovered and ut to death. In conſequence of this ie nobles in the neighbourhood took up rms, and Zurich, for protection, formed n alliance with Lucern, Uri, Schweitz, nd Underwalden, and was admitted a ember of their confederacy in 1351. The four cantons yielded the pre-emi-ence to Zurich, a privilege it ſtill enjoys, eing the firſt canton in rank, and the noſt conſiderable in extent, both of terri-ory and power, next to that of Bern. This canton abounds in corn, wine, and excellent paſture; but as there is not a ufficient ſupply of corn for interior con-umption, the deficiency is chiefly ſup-plied from Suabia. There is alſo a gra-nary maintained at the public expence, where, in ſeaſons of ſcarcity, corn is ſold conſiderably cheaper than at the market-price. In 1784, it contained 174,572 inhabitants, including thoſe in the capital. The people are divided into thirteen tribes; and the legiſlative authority is veſted in a council of 200, or rather of 212 members drawn from theſe tribes. This council compriſes the ſenate, or lit-tle council (compoſed of 50 members) which has a juriſdiction in all civil and criminal cauſes.

ZURICH, a lake of Swiſſerland, in the canton of the ſame name, near 10 leagues in length and one in breadth. It is of an oblong form, and the borders are ſtudded thickly with villages and towns. The adjacent country is finely cultivated and well peopled; and the S. part of the lake appears bounded by the ſtupendous high mountains of Schweitz and Glarus; the ſcenery is picturesque, lively, and diver-ſified.

ZURITA, a town of New Caſtile.

ZUTPHEN, a conſiderable town of the United Provinces, capital of a county of the ſame name. It was taken by the French, in 1672, under Philip, duke of Orleans, only brother of Louis XIV. and abandoned by them in 1674, after having previouſly deſtroyed the fortifications. It is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Berkel and Yſſel, 9 miles S. by E. of De-venter, and 55 E. by S. of Amſterdam. Lat. 52. 10. N. lon. 6. 22. E.

ZUTPHEN, a county of the United Provinces, ſeparated by the Yſſel from Guelderland. Otho I. of Naſſau, acquired this country in the 11th century, by mar-rying the heireſs of Gerlach, Count of Zutphen; ſince which time it has ever been annexed to Guelderland.

ZUYDER-ZEE, a great bay of the Ger-man Ocean, which extends from S. to N. in the United Provinces, between Friel-land, Overyſſel, Guelderland, and North Holland. It is ſo called from its ſitua-tion toward the S.

Zwallock, or Swallock, Cornwall, SW. of Camelford.

ZWAMMERDAM, a town of Holland, on the Rhine, 10 miles ESE. of Leyden.

ZWICKAU, a town of Erzgeburg, Up-per Saxony, ſeated on the river Mul-daw.

ZWINGENBURG, a town of Heſſe-Darmſtadt, circle of Upper Rhine, 20 miles N. of Manheim.

ZWOLL, a town of the United Pro-vinces, in Overyſſel, and in the diſtrict of Zallant. It is large and rich, and a canal begins near this place, which extends to the river Yſſel. Here was formerly an Auguſtine convent, in which Thomas à Kempis, otherwiſe called Hamerken, liv-ed 71 years, and died in 1471, at the age of 91. It was formerly an imperial and Hanſeatic town, and is ſeated on the river Aa, between the Yſſel and the Vecht, 15 miles N. of Deventer.

ZWORNICK, or SWERNICK, a town of Boſnia.

ZYTOMIERK, a town of Volhinia, 70 miles NNW. of Kiof.

THE END.

DIRECTIONS TO THE BINDER.

The Map of the World to front the title; the other may be diſtributed before their reſpective deſcriptions.

Printed by Swan and Son, 76, Fleet Street, and E. Blackader, Took's Court, Chancery Lane.